

Idaho to resume clean air checks

By STEVEN CHRISTENSEN
United Press International

BOISE — Attorney General David Leroy approved Idaho's air quality control plan Monday.

That cleared the way for reinstatement of the pollution monitoring program — abandoned by the Legislature in 1981.

Leroy said he would now file formal documents with state and local officials to certify the plan. The action "puts Idaho back in the air quality control business effective Tuesday," he said.

Approval by the attorney general was necessary to release $190,000 in general funds appropriated by lawmakers earlier this year when they decided to reinstate the local monitoring program. The funds were expected to qualify Idaho for another $470,000 in matching federal monies.

Meanwhile, Lee Stokes, director of the state Division of Environment, said Monday work will begin immediately to hire about 15 people to staff the Air Quality Bureau.

He said the agency would be headed by Ken Brooks, currently in charge of the Idaho pollution monitoring system for the Federal Environmental Protection Agency. But Brooks will not be able to start his new job until Oct. 1, Stokes said.

"We're looking at a two-month transition period to really get things going," Stokes said. The director said the delay will occur because funds to set up and operate the office could not be released until Leroy and federal EPA officials signed off on the control plan.

EPA Administrator Anne Gorsuch approved Idaho's program in mid-July.

The first duty of the bureau will be to review half a dozen applications from Idaho companies to emit pollutants, Stokes said.

He said the EPA has already studied the permit applications — which deal with "relatively minor" pollutants — and believes they should be granted. But the federal agency lacks the authority to issue discharge documents, he said.

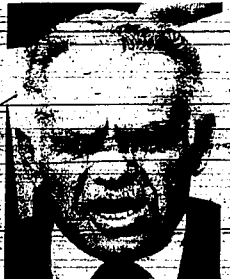

Pending permit applications include requests from Cogen Inc. to emit nitrogen oxides and particulates from a steam boiler; from a contractor to build a coal-fired boiler at Cogen's plant; and from Sunshine Mining Co. to emit particulates at an industrial waste incinerator in Kellogg, said Division of Environment Air Permit Coordinator Mark Mossarik.

Stokes said the one-year discontinuance of Idaho's air quality program caused no major trouble, but did pose a few headaches.

"The biggest problem was that there was an absolute moratorium on new (pollution) sources in five non-attainment areas — Boise, Kellogg, Lewiston, Pocatello and Soda Springs," he said.

The moratorium related to a ban on new sources of specified pollutants in each area, the director said. The prohibition regarded new sources of carbon monoxide emissions in Boise; sulfur dioxide and particulates in Pocatello, Kellogg and Soda Springs; and particulates in Lewiston.

President warns Israelis Lebanon violence must end

YITZHAK SHAMIR States single condition

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan sternly warned Israel's foreign minister Monday the "escalating violence" in Lebanon must end.

Reagan also rejected a charge from Leonid Brezhnev that Israel has been acting on behalf of U.S. interests.

A grim-looking Reagan met for 20 minutes with foreign minister Yitzhak Shamir in the White House Cabinet room. Aides said the president stressed the need for a "complete end" of hostilities by all sides and an "early diplomatic settlement" as an essential first step to ending the crisis in Lebanon.

Shamir told reporters Israel also seeks a diplomatic solution, but will maintain a cease-fire "on one condition: that it be an absolute and mutual cease-fire and not a one-sided cease-fire."

He insisted Israel has set no deadline for negotiations, but said a solution hinges on the exodus of all PLO from Lebanon. The PLO fighters from Lebanon: "Our position is it cannot last forever," he declared.

Responding to a question, he said: "I will not speak for the president, but all of us are impatient."

At the State Department later, after nearly three hours with Secretary of State Shultz, Shamir repeated: "It is very essential to let them (the PLO) know that the only choice they are facing is if they are going to leave Lebanon by negotiations or by other ways."

Aboard Air Force One en route to Iowa later in the day, Reagan responded to a letter from Brezhnev, which had been forwarded to his Camp David weekend retreat Sunday. In the letter, Brezhnev urged Reagan to act promptly to "end the Israeli and Palestinian forces traded artillery and heavy machine-gun fire Monday as 200 Israeli tanks gathered at a key crossing point straddling the Beirut-Beirut's latest cease-fire to the breaking point.

The fresh fighting around Beirut airport was limited to front-line positions and had not yet spread into a full-scale conflict that would mean a formal end to Beirut's ninth cease-fire, in effect since late Sunday.

Israeli radio reported that Prime Minister Menachem Begin will call his Cabinet into special session later this week to decide whether to abide by a U.N. Security Council call to station U.N. observers in west Beirut.

Both the Lebanese government and the Palestine Liberation Organization have accepted the plan.

The radio said the Cabinet meeting may take place Thursday, after a full report on Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir's talks in the United States is received.

In Beirut, both the Israelis and the Palestinians took advantage of the relative lull to bring in fresh weapons and maneuver for position. Reporters touring "Palestinian positions" said some Israeli units had closed to within 30 yards.

Those may be Idaho tomatoes — not potatoes — in that bowl of soup some future day

In the soup

Tomatoes could become new crop in Idaho

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Landing in the soup could be good news for Idaho.

The University of Idaho is doing research in cooperation with Campbell's Soup Co. that could lead to the company purchasing some of its vegetables from farms in southern Idaho.

And where Campbell's vegetables are grown, processing plants will sometimes follow, according to a company spokesman.

But the announcement of this work is only an appetizer. The state has not landed the soup company yet.

Campbell's probably will study the area for two or three years before deciding if Treasure Valley farms will be suitable for raising their crops, says Bill Simpson, the university researcher working with the company.

"We feel we have a lot to offer, and that we compare favorably with their better production areas," he says.

Simpson is raising tomatoes — both Campbell's and University of Idaho varieties — at the university's research center at Parma. He is searching for a tomato with a "skin" thick enough to withstand machine harvesting, and one that produces good yields and a good quality crop under Treasure Valley growing conditions.

Simpson also is testing Campbell's carrots, and he expects to test several other vegetables for the company.

Potentially, Campbell's could raise 10,000 acres of tomatoes in the Treasure Valley-area around Boise, Simpson says.

The Camden, N.J., soup-maker uses more tomatoes than any other vegetable in its 57 varieties of soup, says company spokesman Scott Rombach. The company buys commodities through contracts with farmers.

"We have no corporate farms," he said.

Usually, commodities are produced within overnight trucking distance of a company processing facility, Rombach says. Currently, the closest Campbell's facility is in Sacramento, more than 500 miles from Boise.

Phil Batt, Idaho's lieutenant governor and Republican candidate for governor, said last week that "this could be the most important economic news of the decade."

It could give farmers another crop-raising option, plus it could provide new jobs if the company builds a processing plant in the state, Batt said.

This kind of economic development is a textbook example of the kind Idaho communities should pursue, says Karl Tueller, the deputy administrator of the state Division of Economic and Community Affairs.

The division is holding seminars throughout the state to discuss local efforts that can spur economic development. The first was held in Twin Falls about a week ago. The message at these seminars is that the fastest and easiest way for a local economy to expand is to branch out from the existing economic base.

In an agricultural community, that means trying to lure food processors to the area, Tueller said.

Farmers remain skeptical of Reagan's open granary door

By DAVID BARTEL
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

DES MOINES, Iowa — President Reagan sought to reassure the nation's farmers Monday that the door to a bigging U.S. granary will remain wide open to Soviet buyers for at least one more year.

"Indications are that we will sell a record volume of grain to the Soviet Union this year," Reagan told about 10,000 persons attending the National Corn Growers Association convention here.

The president added that "large quantities of grain also could be sold next year if the Soviets accept his offer of a one-year extension of the existing grain agreement."

The Soviets have not yet responded to that offer Friday, but Reagan made clear that the welcome mat is out for cash-carrying Soviet grain buyers.

"The granary door is open, and the exchange will be cash on the barrelhead," he said.

For corn growers pinched between rising production costs and depressed farm prices, that was good news that was greeted with polite applause.

However, the president's decision to seek only a one-year extension rather than to negotiate a new agreement calling for expanded grain sales disappointed many of the corn growers here.

"We're not 100 percent happy, but we're willing to go along," said

Gerald Paulsen of Stockton, Iowa. "We realize he's got a problem but we've got a problem too."

Meanwhile, the president of another farm group, Devon Woodland of the National Farmers Organization, issued a press release denouncing the "extension as a political move that will give farmers false hopes when there is nothing of real substance in the extension."

Woodland's words reflected some of the troubles in the farm belt that Reagan apparently hoped to defuse with his speech extolling the virtues of farmers and blaming low grain prices (a large part on President Carter).

However, Reagan appeared to stop short of a broader promise sought by many farm leaders who want to make certain that the government won't let foreign policy issues interfere with the grain trade.

Agricultural leaders and farm-state Republican members of Congress had hoped that Reagan would promise to honor all Soviet contracts to purchase U.S. grain, particularly shipments over the limits set by the grain agreement, which will expire Sept. 30 unless the Soviets agree to it.

Such a promise would assure the Soviets that they will never again face a cut-off of their U.S. grain shipments like the one imposed by Carter in 1980.

While promising that the granary door was open, Reagan gave no new, specific assurances to farmers or the Soviets that it would remain open under all circumstances.

Instead, the president said, "The extension would have the certainty of a contract." As Nebraska Gov. Charles Thone said, there must be no question about our respect for contracts. We must restore confidence in U.S. reliability as a supplier."

Those words made it appear that the Soviets would be assured shipment of only the 5.2 million metric tons covered under any extension of the existing grain agreement.

At the same time, Reagan denied a line from the advance text of his speech that specifically ruled out any new embargo. The line struck from the speech said: "This administration does not have, nor will we have, a grain embargo on the Soviet Union."

White House officials could not immediately clarify the president's position on grain contracts or explain why the line was deleted from his speech.

Despite the confusion, the president's speech clearly was aimed at boosting farmers' flagging spirits and at soothing the fears of farm-state Republicans who must face reelection this fall.

He restated his policy, announced last March, ruling out the use of a grain embargo to hold down rising food prices. Reagan also promised again that he would never single out agriculture as an instrument of foreign policy.

Baldrige says deficit may exceed predictions

DONALD REGAN Likes lower rates

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said Monday the federal deficit is likely to be considerably higher than the administration's current projection.

Appearing on ABC's "Good Morning America," Baldrige said the deficit for the current 1982 fiscal year will be closer to estimates of the Congressional Budget Office ($110 billion to $112 billion) than the administration's latest figure of $109 billion.

Baldrige said the deficit for fiscal 1983, which starts in October, is likely to be $20 billion to $30 billion above the $115 billion level projected by the administration in its mid-year budget report last week.

That would put it close to CBO's estimate of deficits around $150 billion for the next three years. However, Baldrige said he believes CBO's 1983 figure is too pessimistic.

"I think the CBO estimate for just this year is probably as close as you can get," Baldrige said. "I think they're too pessimistic for next year."

Baldrige has become the second senior official to publicly express lack of confidence in the administration's own deficit figures.

Large deficits force the government to borrow money otherwise available for business and consumer loans, thereby helping to keep interest rates relatively high and slowing economic recovery. Interest rates have, however, come down somewhat.

"We are very encouraged by this drop now of 1 and a half percent over a two-week period in the prime rates.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan told the Senate Finance Committee. "The latest prime rate cuts to 15 percent by several major banks on Monday came after the Federal Reserve on Friday lowered its discount rate, the interest it charges banks to borrow from it, from 11.5 to 11 percent."

Rep. Jim Jones, D-Okla., chairman of the House Budget Committee, also interviewed on the ABC program, said he believes the nation will "rock along as we are now with no particular recovery and it could deteriorate even further."

Wall Street economist David Jones, appearing on the same program, said,

"We'll see another six months of recessionary-type economic activity at least. It may move well into 1983 before we see any hope of recovery, so the plan the administration has given us... is grossly optimistic."

While Baldrige said the administration's mid-year report has been "unfairly accused of trying to be a prediction of all time," he also disagreed with its projection of economic growth.

"The report assumes a growth rate in the last half of the year of about 4.5 percent. That's possible if interest rates come down dramatically," he said.

"It looks like they're coming down, but not that steeply," Baldrige said. "So the growth rate will probably be less for the last part of this year than the report said."

He said the growth rate could reach 4.5 percent at the end of the year, but not for the whole last six months. "I suppose somewhere around 3 percent to 3.5 percent at the present interest rates is in the ballpark."

Feds merge weak S&Ls

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government regulators reached across state lines Monday to merge or consolidate savings and loan associations with nearly $12 billion in hopes of revitalizing the industry.

The action affected 11 different associations, and was the largest set of consolidations forced by government regulators at any one time. This was the 23rd such urgent repair mission so far this year — the same total as all of last year.

In putting together some of the latest mergers, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation had to spend more than $21 million in cash to make good loan losses, as well as accept more than $50 million in promissory notes, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board announced.

Report says he's threat to self, Jodie Foster

Hospital wants Hinckley confined

JOHN HINCKLEY JR. Hearing next Monday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Doctors say presidential assassin John W. Hinckley Jr. should remain in a mental hospital because he is a danger to himself and others — particularly actress Jodie Foster.

A report by St. Elizabeths Hospital was submitted Monday to U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker, who presided at Hinckley's trial.

The Washington Post reported in today's editions that the doctors found Hinckley suffers from "major depression and personality disorders, primarily schizotypal personality disorder. The illness is characterized by bizarre fantasies and social isolation."

The doctors also found Hinckley shows characteristics of other disorders including narcissism, commonly described as a grandiose sense of self-importance and a constant desire for admiration.

The doctors at St. Elizabeths, in finding Hinckley was still dangerous, said in their report he posed a particular threat to Miss Foster, whom he has been infatuated with for years.

The psychiatric report, sealed from public view by Parker's order, will be judged at a release hearing scheduled for next Monday.

Hinckley was found innocent by reason of insanity June 21 of shooting President Reagan, White House press secretary James Brady, a Secret Service man and a District of Columbia policeman in March 1981.

The verdict by a seven-woman, five-man jury in Parker's courtroom sparked cries of outrage in some quarters and immediate steps in Congress to change the insanity plea.

Hinckley was ordered confined to St. Elizabeths, where he underwent a battery of tests and interviews by medical experts to determine his mental status. His family and his lawyer said, at the time of the verdict they would not seek his immediate release. Hinckley indicated later in a newspaper interview, however, that he wanted to leave the institution.

Under the law, St. Elizabeths was required to file a report with Parker within 90 days — by Monday.

The release hearing set for next Monday could reverse strategy by both the defense, which had argued Hinckley's insanity at his trial, and the government attorneys, who had argued his sanity. Now that the government wants Hinckley to remain in custody, it will be required to prove he is insane. The defense, if it chooses to seek his release, would have to argue he is sane enough to be returned to society.

If Hinckley is found not to be dangerous to himself or society, he could be released. If not, he has the option to seek a hearing every six months.

Provision of Senate tax measure could slash into elders' benefits

By JEROME CAHILL, New York Daily News

WASHINGTON — A little noticed provision of the Senate-passed tax bill could subtract $1 million from the retirement benefits of 10 million private pensioners covered by private pension plans to 10 percent federal tax withholding on their retirement benefits.

Opponents called attention to the provision withholding section Monday as lobbyists stepped up a campaign to derail the catchall measure, which would raise $8 billion in revenue over three years, Senate House conferees open work on the bill today.

Under present law, workers upon retirement decide how much money will be withheld from their benefit payments, and this choice stays in effect until benefits cease, or a new withholding plan is set up. Most retirees have chosen not to have their benefits reduced by withholding.

A new section of the Senate bill changes all that. It provides that the private retirement payments be subject to the 10 percent withholding unless the retiree files a government form specifically electing not to be withheld.

And the bill requires the retiree to fill out a new government form every year. Otherwise, the 10 percent withholding becomes effective the following Jan. 1.

Paul Jackson, an actuary who does work for a number of private pension plans, said in an interview that the withholding feature will cause confusion among the elderly, "every withholding is some cases and outright loss of benefits if the pensioner dies before his Internal Revenue Service refund check arrives months later."

Falling through out the provision outright, withholding opponents are pressing for an exemption from the requirement on pensions of $7,400 a year per retired couple. They also want pensioners to be able to decide once and for all — and not annually whether they want to be withheld.

Meanwhile, opposition surfaced to two other provisions of the bill. United Technologies, a major defense contractor, took a full page ad in The Washington Post warning that repeal of some of last year's tax breaks for business investment could jeopardize $15 billion in defense orders.

Hot races in primaries

By United Press International

Eleven Missouri Democrats compete today for the right to challenge Republican Sen. John Danforth, once considered almost unbeatable.

In Kansas, a heated GOP primary will decide Democratic Gov. John Carlin's opponent.

A number of congressional seats also are involved in the primaries in both states, but the only incumbent believed to be in any danger is Democratic Rep. William Clay, Missouri's only black member of Congress. Clay faces tough opposition from state Sen. Allan Mueller in a reapportioned district.

A third primary will be held later this week — in Tennessee on Thursday.

In that one, state Sen. Anna Belle Clement-O'Brien, sister of the late Gov. Frank Clement, and Knoxville Mayor Bandy Tyson are competing for the Democratic nomination to face popular GOP Gov. Lamar Alexander in November.

In Kansas, Wichita millionaire Sen. Sam Hurdge and Shalvey banker Dave Owen are believed to be leading the five-candidate Republican race for the governorship nomination to face Carlin, who has only token opposition for renomination.

Budget process needs your ideas

It's hard to be controversial when you don't have money to spend, says Tom Courtney, the Twin Falls city manager... The proposed 1983 budget, at about $9 million, is a hold-the-line one that preserves municipal services at their current levels.

Watt letter stems from righteousness

WASHINGTON—Interior Secretary Jim Watt, whose ideological mindset classifies people as "liberals or Americans," has come up with a truly innovative wrinkle in ethnic politics... Watt decided the way to get more support for his energy policies was to write a letter to the Israeli ambassador to the United States.

emotional attachment to Israel that they back with both money and political action... But it also is extremely stupid thinking at its most simplistic to believe all American Jews support Israel and/or the Begin government to the exclusion of their interest in what their own government does... So is the notion that in the absence of the implied threat-Watt denied, the Israeli ambassador could influence any American Jew how to think about mining in wilderness areas or oil drilling on the continental shelf.

But just as some in Washington 10 years ago thought it was an acceptable political hijack to write top and burgle their political opponents, this is a classic example of adding a pound of salt to a recipe that calls for a pinch... The kind of thinking seems to be motivated by feelings of righteousness so intense that all other considerations of perspective is overwhelmed. Ends come to justify means and the most absurd propositions become logical.

This time, the welfare safety net didn't catch her

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA.—The story that follows is a true story. It is not one of those events that reportedly happened to someone else in some other place... didn't happen once upon a time. It happened here, last week, to Mattie Dudley, 67, crippled since infancy, a little old lady in a wheelchair who peddles the Daily Progress on the streets of this university town.

certificate, guaranteeing her a funeral from the Hill & Wood Funeral Service, made her ineligible for benefits under the Supplemental Security Income program. In order to preserve her SSI benefits, she was compelled to give up Medicaid... Charles Giampetta, a reporter for the Progress, spotted out the infuriating facts in a Page One story last week.

This is a federally funded program that aids disabled or poor persons who are not covered by regular social security. Such benefits are limited to those persons whose assets do not exceed $1,500... Purchase of the burial certificate in 1979 pushed her close to the limit. Now interest on the certificate is amounting to $200. It has pushed her over the top.

Because she did not sell the certificate and use the money to purchase necessities such as food or clothing, she violated state Medicaid rules... Welfare workers summoned Miss Dudley to a conference in City Hall. They gave her three options: (1) She could reacquire the certificate, cash it in and spend the proceeds on approved necessities; (2) she could reacquire the certificate and keep it, and thus lose her SSI benefits; (3) she could leave things the way they are and forfeit her Medicaid benefits for the next two years.

the wicked witches in this story. They were sympathetic with Mattie Dudley's plight, but rules are rules: "It's not what we want, it's the regulations we have to follow... A proper story should have a happy ending. This one doesn't. Congressman Kenneth Robinson, who represents the Charlottesville area, bolted over when he learned of Mattie Dudley's case. He has introduced a bill to remedy the situation for all pensioners so situated, but the mills of the law grind slowly and for this little old lady in a wheelchair, time is running out.

A new best seller list to keep up with the quiches

BOOKS—There seems a reason that I refuse to analyze; I am a devoted student of Comparative Best-Seller Lists. In fact, on the writer I read more lists than I read actual best-sellers... As proof of my studiousness, I must report on some curious changes in the non-fiction list since last summer. Last year's passion for diet books has been replaced by this year's passion for exercise books. Two 1981 books, admiring the Japanese way of management have been replaced by two 1982 books—reminding us of the Japanese way at Pearl Harbor. A touch of hostility there?

The themes of love, money and intrigue are as familiar as the authors. Another neglected territory is charted out by two special novels that deal with the relationship between adult children and their parents.

John Cheever's last book, "Oh, What a Paradise It Seems," was not his best and yet there are sentences and moments that could serve as eloquent eulogies. There are few writers who create their own world, but he was one of them... Raymond Carver may be another. ## Bias hits elderly ethnics

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federally assisted programs providing food, housing and social services discriminate against elderly Americans of minority and ethnic backgrounds, the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights said in a report Monday.

The commission said older members of minority and ethnic groups frequently fail to receive their fair share of nutrition, housing and health services, transportation and counseling.

The study examined programs in Bridgeport, Conn.; Cleveland; Honolulu; San Francisco; Tucson, Ariz., and Tulsa, Okla.

Salvador conditions better

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Democratic and Republican members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Monday agreed in varying degrees Monday that political and human rights conditions have improved in El Salvador.

However, several Democrats who attended a two-hour CIA briefing made clear that much remains to be done in El Salvador, although they did not dispute President Reagan's recent aid certification.

But one committee member, Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., predicted earlier the military situation in El Salvador could worsen to the point where President Reagan might have to request sending U.S. troops within six to 12 months.

Nixon wants lid on tapes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Richard Nixon has decided to appeal to the Supreme Court to keep some 6,000 hours of secret Oval Office tape recordings from being released to the public, his attorney said Monday.

It will be the third time Nixon has taken a controversy over Watergate-era tapes to the nation's highest court.

Attorney R. Stan Mortenson said the appeal, to be filed by Friday, will challenge lower court rulings approving of plans by the General Services Administration to replay the tapes at 11 regional listening centers across the country.

The tapes contain conversations dating from February 1971, when the White House tape recording system was installed.

Nixon, who resigned under threat of impeachment Aug. 9, 1974, claims that letting people listen to the tapes violates his privacy rights both as an individual and as a president.

Army ordered women slain

BOSTON (UPI) — A former U.S. Ambassador to El Salvador says a Congressional hearing today will produce "compelling evidence" that Salvadoran military officers ordered the slayings of four American churchwomen in the El Salvador countryside in 1980.

The Reagan administration "must have subsequently become aware that the killings were a 'deliberate policy of the Salvadoran military,'" despite its public statements to the contrary, Robert E. White said Sunday.

Both the U.S. government and the Salvadoran government, which the United States backs, have maintained that the December 1980 murders were committed by soldiers acting without orders.

White said nothing in the report links the U.S. directly to the slayings.

Smith defends Reagan rights record

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Attorney General William French Smith Monday defended the Reagan administration's civil rights record, telling a black group it differs on means — sticking to its opposition to busing and quotas — but not on equal rights as a goal.

"Things are not as they have been portrayed by our critics," Smith told the convention of the National Urban League.

"The goals we seek are the goals you seek. Although we may differ in some cases on the best means of furthering those goals — in the overwhelming majority of instances, our approaches are the same as or very similar to those you advocate."

Previous speakers, including the league's president, John E. Jacobs, had attacked the administration in harsh terms, accusing it of abandoning the poor. Smith's speech drew polite but muted applause.

Smith spoke after Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, a black candidate for governor, who assailed the administration's "New Federalism" as "a shell game" that will hurt poor blacks and saddle local governments with social welfare programs they cannot afford.

The theme of the convention attended by about 10,000 delegates is "the challenge of the New Federalism."

Bradley accused Reagan of trying to dismantle social welfare programs by shifting responsibility to state and local governments.

"We cannot handle that kind of inequitable burden," the Democratic mayor of the nation's third largest city said.

"Some have mischaracterized the civil rights efforts and objectives of the department of justice," Smith said. "They have chosen to brand a debate over some remedies as a difference over rights."

He said his office has been "evaluating the means by which government has sought to promote equality of opportunity during the last decade" and "found some of those means ineffective..."

Smith cited the administration's opposition to racial busing of school children — to "eliminate 'perceived' imbalances as an example."

"Experience has demonstrated that busing does not guarantee equal educational opportunity, and often promotes 'segregation' by encouraging many to leave the public schools," the attorney general said.

Smith restated the administration's opposition to "quotas," saying they have proved ineffective, but "more basically, they are contrary to our guiding principle of equal individual opportunity."

Balanced budget backers brace to repel amendments

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Facing a self-imposed Wednesday deadline, Senate backers of the proposed constitutional amendment to require a balanced budget braced Monday to fend off the last attempts by opponents to weaken or kill it.

Under a time agreement, a final Senate vote on the constitutional amendment will take place no earlier than noon Tuesday and no later than noon Wednesday. The measure must receive a two-thirds vote, or 67, to pass. It already has 62 co-sponsors.

One of the most formidable attacks was in the form of a "Pay-As-You-Go" alternative offered Monday by Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., and set for a Senate vote

Instead of a constitutional amendment, Dodd's alternative would substitute a simple federal law requiring the government to pay for all of its programs through spending cuts or increased taxes.

The Congressional Budget Office estimated the federal budget would be balanced in three years under the Dodd plan, while the constitutional amendment would not take effect until at least 1986 and, more likely, the 1990s, Dodd said.

What's what

If the chair on which the bishop sat had not been called a "cathedra," the building in which the chair was kept would not have been called a "cathedral." If the saint's cape had not been called a "chappelle," the building in which it was kept would not have been called a "chapel." Nor would the guard at that building have been called a "chaplain."

Q. What kind of rifles are used by the Palestine Liberation Organization?
A. Their favorite is said to be the Soviet-made Kalashnikov.

Contrary to previous report, you fit your bicycle properly if when you stand astride it (flatfooted on the ground, the top bar is an inch below the crotch. Then you adjust the seat level so your knees are slightly bent when your feet are extended on the pedals.

BOOKSTORES
Q. If a third of all bookstores operate at a loss, how do they stay in business?
A. Some chainstore book operations do all right. They're set up in high-traffic locations and they're stocked through special discount buys. Also, a bookstore that has been around for so long that it's part of the local history can survive with good management. But it's a shaky venture for beginners.

Q. I read that President John F. Kennedy invented dog tags. True?
A. The inventor was a man named John Kennedy, rightly enough, but he wasn't the president. More than a century earlier—in 1852, to be exact—the inventor tried to sell them to the Union Army, but got turned down. Numerous soldiers then bought them, individually, so Kennedy made a little money on his bright idea, anyhow.

STRENGTH
Eighty-seven percent of a normal man's weight is designed to give him strength. Only 54 percent of a woman's weight is for that purpose. Or so say the experts. How they arrived at these findings, exactly, I do not know. Has to do with muscle-bone ratios. Early one percent of the average man's body is muscle, only 25 percent of the average woman's.

Investigator claims actress' diary proves murder theory

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A private investigator Monday offered a $10,000 reward for Marilyn Monroe's diary to prove the sex goddess was murdered to stop her from exposing a CIA plot to kill Fidel Castro.

Milo Speriglio, director of the 76-year-old Nick Harris Agency, said after spending more than a decade investigating Miss Monroe's death, "I can say with 1,000 percent accuracy that she was murdered."

But Theodore Curfew, the coroner when Miss Monroe died, was quoted by the Daily Breeze of Torrance as saying, "The case is closed. If (someone) doesn't believe it was suicide, it's a free country."

MARILYN MONROE Ready to 'expose plot'?

Speriglio said the "red diary" would prove Miss Monroe did not commit suicide 20 years ago this Thursday.

"Instead," he said, the 36-year-old blonde was injected with drugs by a "dissident" faction of the CIA to keep her from holding a news conference she had planned for the next day to disclose the plot to kill Castro.

"The detective said his interest in the case began 10 years ago when Robert Slatzer, who wrote a book in which he claimed he was secretly married to Miss Monroe, came to see him.

"He said that Marilyn had shown him the red diary and he had read parts of it which disclosed the people who've provided us information over the years."

The diary, Speriglio said, details Miss Monroe's relationships with President John F. Kennedy and his brother, Sen. Robert Kennedy — both assassination victims — as well as "organized crime figures."

Dr. Thomas Noguchi, the controversial "coroner to the stars" who conducted the "autopsy," ruled Miss Monroe's death a suicide, even though there was no physical evidence to support such a finding, Speriglio maintained.

Noguchi, now fighting to regain his job after being demoted, declined to comment, saying he was having another assassination charges without getting involved in "conspiracy plots."

Speriglio said the last person to see the so-called "red diary" was Lt. Colonel Grandson, the deputy coroner who he said admitted signing Miss Monroe's death certificate "under duress."

"The following morning, he (Grandson) found the diary was missing and taken off the premises as if it never existed," Speriglio said.

The detective said he has scheduled a news conference Wednesday at which he would make further disclosures about the case, demanding the investigation be re-opened and an official coroner's inquest held.

Doctors say Bess Truman makes gains

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Bess Truman's heart rate has increased and her respiration stabilized but doctors Monday still would not say when the 87-year-old former first lady would be released from the hospital.

"Her condition has improved, however she is still listed in serious condition because of her age," said Tom Peck, public relations director of Research Medical Center.

Mrs. Truman spent a restful night in the intensive care unit, said Dr. Wilson Miller, her attending physician — her "personal" physician — Dr. Wallace Graham, is out of town but is consulting with Wilson on the case.

The wife of the late President Harry S. Truman was rushed to the hospital at 1:30 a.m. Sunday, suffering from irregular respiration and pulse. Miller said medicines Mrs. Truman had been taking to slow her heartbeat were building up in her bloodstream, possibly due to kidney trouble.

After a pulseless cardiac arrest, Miller said, Mrs. Truman's heartbeat quickened and by Sunday evening her pulse was back up to 85 from a low of 35 that morning.

Graham had said a buildup of the potassium level in Mrs. Truman's blood may have been the cause of the irregular respiration and pulse rates because he said she has experienced a similar problem during previous hospitalizations.

Mrs. Monday said Mrs. Truman's potassium level had decreased and her vital signs were stable but doctors have not yet given any indication when Mrs. Truman could return to her home in nearby Independence, Mo.

The former first lady from 1945 until 1953 has been hospitalized twice in the past 15 months, once for a mild stroke and also when she fell out of bed and broke her hip.

New chance for director

LONDON (UPI) — John Fernald proved Monday that some times life is a second chance.

Fernald quit in a huff as director of "The Mousetrap" before the play opened.

Since that was nearly 30 years ago, and since the Agatha Christie thriller is still going strong, the directors' feet Fernald passed up do not bear thinking about.

Now comes the second chance.

Fernald's old director Saunders hired him, at 76, to direct "The Mousetrap," beginning on its 30th anniversary in November.

"I think it's rather amusing," Fernald said, "to go away for a while and then to be asked to do it."

Medals approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House voted Monday to strike gold medals for — former heavyweight champion Joe Louis, musician Fred Waring and author Louis L'Amour.

The bill, which now goes to the Senate, would authorize $20,000 for the striking of each medal, and allow the sale of duplicate bronze medals to recover the costs to the Treasury.

The medals would be presented to Waring and L'Amour, and to the wife of Louis, who died in 1981.

World's ugliest canine wins contest by a hair

PETALUMA, Calif. (UPI) — A hairless runt of a mutt named Chi-chi defeated them all in the 13th annual Ugliest Dog in the World contest: such as well as the most-eaten chow and the bulkiest with a bad eye.

Chi-chi's unique, he's hairless — he's just kind of funny," said his owner, Dore Beesley, of Sunnyvale, Calif.

Chi-chi beat out 30 other ugly canines Sunday to win the title in the contest 40 miles north of San Francisco. His assets included a natural Mohawk hairdo and a hairless, poorly-shaped body.

Among contestants Chi-chi had to bow, were a drooping bulldog named Humphrey, a molotai chow and a purebred bulldog with a bad eye, broken hind legs and a screw tail.

Beesley, who proudly held Chi-chi for photographers, likes to describe his pet's appearance as "kind of like a rat."

CHI-CHI and OWNER
Bald is beautiful

As if displeased by all this faint praise, Chi-chi lifted his hind leg and let go on Beesley as the mutt was being trotted into the "savest" ring during the judging.

Tripod, a runt English bulldog, won the purebred division after arriving by 30-foot sailboat from the San Joaquin River. Her owner, Dan Kelly, Carmichael, said she came by boat because "she was too ugly to take on the highway."

Tripod's claim to the ugliest is enhanced by hind legs broken in a car accident and an eye put out by rock-throwing kids.

"Hard knocks," said Kelly. "She was in the fast lane for a while there."

The 13-year-old contest has become so popular that one of the prizes in a similar contest in St. Petersburg, Fla., two years ago was a ticket to Petaluma.

Posse comitatus turning to ballot box

DENVER (UPI) — Colorado law enforcement officials say the ultra-right posse comitatus, an extremist group with links to the Ku Klux Klan, has increased its activity in recent months and is even putting up candidates for election in some areas.

Authorities, however, differ on the strength of the group. Some describe it as a band of terrorists, while others perceive the posse as a small and fragmented group with a membership of no more than 200 across the state.

Officials said the organization has been successful in gaining access to conventional politics in Craig and Alamosa, where posse members in both communities are running for sheriff or county commissioner.

"I and other officials have considerable concern about any group that advocates taking the law into their own hands," said Denver District Attorney Dale Tooley. "There is a significant risk of violence in that."

"There has been, in the last year or so, an increase in activity (by the posse) though not in number of members. We think it is still a small organization."

"While there is no formal connection between the Posse Comitatus and the Klan and various tax-protest groups, there does seem to be some commonality of membership."

Authorities said the group has continued visibility in some eastern Colorado counties near the Kansas border, where ultra-right attitudes are strong among some farmers who were active in the American Agriculture Movement.

The reports that give greatest pause to law enforcement officers are those saying posse members are stockpiling weapons and conducting guerrilla warfare training under the guise of "survival" exercises.

The posse, officials said, was founded about 15 years ago by Mike Beach of Oregon, who was a pro-Nazi "Silent Storm" in the 1960s.

Posse Comitatus means "power of the county" in Latin, and posse members are said in view the county sheriff as the only legal kind of law-enforcement official in the nation.

But they claim the right to punish wrongdoers if the sheriff fails to protect them.

BLM reverses itself on fee for wild-horse adoptions

BOISE (UPI) — The Bureau of Land Management, reversing an "erroneous" announcement made by its national director last week in Idaho, said Monday the agency had no plans to drop its $200 fee for wild-horse adoptions.

BLM Director Robert Burford told cameramen in Silver City, Idaho, that the agency was temporarily suspending the fee because of legal problems.

Tim Monroe, chief BLM spokesman in Washington, D.C., said Burford apparently didn't know when he made the announcement that a horse protection group's lawsuit against the fee had been partially resolved and that senior BLM officials had decided to keep the assessment.

Burford was traveling in the West when BLM lawyers and counsel for the American Horse Protective Association agreed the suit could be held in abeyance while the legally required public review process was completed for the fee.

"This was an erroneous statement — we are not reducing horse-adoption fees," Fred Cook, public affairs director for the BLM's state headquarters office in Boise, said in retracting Burford's statement.

"It was just an erroneous statement by the director," Cook said. "That's all."

Cook said state BLM officials questioned Burford's announcement Friday and received confirmation of the inaccuracy from agency officials in Washington Monday.

Shrapnel blamed for copter crash

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Investigators have evidence that shrapnel from ground explosions severed the tail rotor of the helicopter that crashed and killed actor Vic Morrow and two children during filming of a movie.

A spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board said it still was unclear why the accident occurred — if the craft had strayed from its prescribed path, bringing it too close to the fire bombs being set off on the ground.

Officials planned to interview several more witnesses and present the preliminary results of their investigation at a news conference Wednesday.

Investigator A. Don Lorente said Sunday a missing metal cowling that covered the tail rotor of the helicopter was found Friday. It was peppered with foreign material that indicates it was hit by an "external object."

Discovery of the new evidence led investigators to cancel a recreation of the explosions that were set off during filming of the movie. In the scene in question the three were killed, a helicopter was trying to cover a scene in a field designed to simulate a battlefield.

The rotor covering is now undergoing laboratory tests to verify shrapnel from the explosions pierced the aluminum sheath and caused the crash. Lorente said the tests will be completed next week, Lorente said.

Police find kidnap clue

OMAHA (UPI) — A car allegedly belonging to a kidnapping suspect was found early Sunday outside a restaurant, authorities said.

Authorities said a couple coming out of the Steak 'N' Egg Kitchen at 22nd and Douglas Streets about 3 a.m. noticed the car matched descriptions of a vehicle that had been driven by Terry Nielsen, a former Salt Lake City police officer, is charged in a federal warrant with kidnaping Melanie Larson, 10, of Kayville, Utah, July 22. State charges also have been filed against him in Utah.

Nielsen allegedly brought the girl to Devilsville, where she walked to the city offices Thursday and alerted authorities.

The FBI, which impounded the car, declined to say how long the vehicle had been outside the restaurant. A child's sweater was found in the back seat.

Authorities said they were unsure if Nielsen had remained in Omaha.

Weddings

Schnitker-Sabala

GOODING — Holly Jean Schnitker and Mark Augustine Sabala were united in marriage at the Gooding United Methodist Church on June 18. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Darrel R. Schnitker, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Martin Nick Sabala, all of Gooding.

Father James Shinick officiated, assisted by Rev. Bob Hefty. Amy Patterson of Gooding and Christina Serpa of Pocatello were vocalists.

The bride wore a Victorian-style gown of organza and dotted swiss accented with beaded silk veils and chantilly lace. She carried a bouquet of roses and lily.

Julie Schnitker, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Wendy Winterfeld of Swan Valley, Mara Erkins of Bliss and Marlene Clark, Kathy Rice and Nancy Ryan, all of Gooding, were bridesmaids. Katy Schnitker, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

Steve France of Gooding was best man. Mike Sabala, Dennis Slatten, Mike Semler, all of Gooding, Keith Cope of Boise and Jerry Miller of Salem, Ore., were groomsmen. Lason Cope, nephew of the bridegroom, was ringbearer.

Special guests included Mrs. Augustine Sabala and George Moody of Gooding, grandparents of the bridegroom. Mr. and Mrs. L.H. Schnitker of Twin Falls and Mr. and Mrs. C.E. Jacoby of Idaho Falls, grandparents of the bride.

A reception and dance were held at the Gooding Country Club.

The couple is residing northwest of Gooding.

Chaplin-Browning

TWIN FALLS — Jacki Chaplin became the bride of Lindy Browning May 20 at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. John Hepworth, in Twin Falls.

The bride is the daughter of Helen Cobb of Twin Falls and Jack Chaplin of Butte, Mont. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Chad Browning of Twin Falls.

Pastor E.J. Bernthal of the Immanuel Lutheran Church officiated. Jennifer Capps, niece of the bride, sang.

The bride, who was escorted by her step-father, Jim Cobb, wore a street-length gown of knit accented with lace. She carried a bouquet of carnations and daisies.

Debbie Capps, sister of the bride, was maid of honor.

Barry Rudd of Boise was best man. Special guests included Mr. and Mrs. Charles Feckner of Twin Falls, grandparents of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Browning of Twin Falls, grandparents of the bridegroom.

A reception was held following the ceremony. Crissy Browning, sister of the bridegroom, was the guest-book attendant. Jane Moon of Boise, aunt of the bridegroom, and Bertha Haynes of Kimberly, great-aunt of the bridegroom, served. Jennifer and Sara Capps assisted with the gifts.

The bride, a graduate of Twin Falls High School, is employed by the Ada County assessor's office. The bridegroom, also a graduate of Twin Falls High School, is employed at Boise Cascade.

The couple is residing in Boise.

Scarrow-Jones

JEROME — Traffie Scarrow became the bride of Mike Jones June 26 at the First Assembly of God Church in Twin Falls.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Scarrow of Jerome and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Bill Jones of Twin Falls.

Rev. Homer Walkup officiated and Kim Lierman was pianist. Elle Urie sang.

The bride wore a floor-length gown featuring chantilly lace and accented with sequins and pearls. She carried a bouquet of silk baby roses.

Teresa Hargrave was maid of honor. Tina VanderMeer and Tamli Whitesell were bridesmaids. Katie Freeman was flower girl.

Mark Quaintance was best man. Gary Alfred and Paul Judd were groomsmen. Matthew Nutsch was ringbearer. Stacey and Mark Scarrow, cousins of the bride, were candle-lighters.

Special guests included Mr. and Mrs. Mark Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Scarrow, all of Jerome, grandparents of the bride, and Mrs. Christina Bartausky of Blackfoot, grandmother of the bridegroom.

A reception was held following the ceremony. Chris Joy and Conale Scarrow and Sue Thomas, aunts of the bride, served. Don Scarrow Jr., brother of the bride, and Amy Lierman were gift carriers.

The bride, a graduate of Jerome High School and the College of Southern Idaho, is employed by Idaho First National Bank Data Center. The bridegroom, a graduate of Twin Falls High School, is employed by Longview Fibre Company.

Following a trip to McCall, the couple is residing in Twin Falls.

Graham-Patterson

GOODING — Jayne Ann Graham and Larry Alan Patterson exchanged vows June 5 in the First United Methodist Church in Pendleton, Ore.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bud Graham of Echo. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alan Patterson of Gooding.

The bride wore a gown of organza and silk venisee lace accented with seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of roses buds.

Tina Graham of Echo, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Jody Kopf of Ellensburg, Wash., and Lori Gushee of Corvallis, Ore., sister of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids.

Andy Patterson, brother of the bridegroom, who is stationed with the U.S. Army in Dunson, Germany, was best man. Jim Probert of Echo and Marty Graham, brother of the bride who is stationed with the U.S. Army in Lawton, Okla., were ushers.

Special guests included Mr. and Mrs. Harry Patterson of Gooding, grandparents of the bridegroom.

A reception was held at the Pendleton Elks Lodge.

The bride is a 1982 graduate of Blue Mountain Community College. The bridegroom is a graduate of Washington State University and is employed by "Rex Ranches" near Pendleton.

Following a trip to Canada, the couple is residing in Pendleton.

Untrue rumor gives Proctor and Gamble devilish time

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I just received a mimeographed letter in the mail telling me not to buy products made by Proctor & Gamble. It was signed, "A Good Christian." I said the Proctor & Gamble Co. supports a religious group dedicated to witchcraft and the devil. As proof, I was sent a picture of the P&G trademark insignia—a man's face in a half-moon with 13 stars, a symbol of Satan.

The letter stated that the owner of Proctor & Gamble appeared on "The Merv Griffin Show" and also on "Donahue," saying he owed his success to "Satan!"

Abby, can you find out if the Proctor & Gamble Co. has any connection with Satan and witchcraft, because if it has, I am not buying any more of its products.

—NEEDS TO KNOW IN OHIO
DEAR NEEDS: Letters such as the one you received have been circulating through the U.S. for the last two years, and there is not a shred of truth in the rumor that P&G is connected with Satan, witchcraft or the devil.

Furthermore, neither Merv Griffin nor Phil Donahue has had anyone from Proctor & Gamble on their shows, but this rumor has been so widespread that both Griffin and Donahue have had to send out form letters to deny this false accusation.

Some of the nation's most respected Christian religious leaders have issued public statements in an effort to put an end to this vicious campaign.

They include the Rev. Jerry Falwell, the Rev. Jimmy Draper, president of the Southern Baptist Convention; the Rev. Donald E. Wildmon, Methodist minister and executive of the National Federation for Decency; Bishop Emerson Colaw, United Methodist Church; the Rev. William C. Black, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Southern Ohio.

All "good Christians" who have specific information about anyone distributing this propaganda should write to: Proctor & Gamble, P.O. Box 599, Department D.A., Cincinnati, Ohio 45201. Please include your name, address and telephone number.

DEAR ABBY: I met a very attractive young woman at a wedding. Since we were both unattached and seemed to have a lot in common, you might say we hit it off well from the moment we met. I invited her to dinner at the best restaurant in town for the following night, and she accepted on the spot.

Well, she spent the whole evening talking about her boyfriend—what a great guy he is and how much she missed him and was gone for two and three weeks at a time.

Every time I started to talk about something else, she would bring the conversation back to her boyfriend, quoting him and raving about his good points.

What I would like to know is this, Abby, if this boyfriend of hers is so terrific, why did she accept a dinner date with me?

DEAR WONDERING: Maybe she was hungry.

Vitamin D helps in osteoporosis

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Association

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm a 66-year-old female who had a complete collapse of the vertebrae due to osteoporosis three years ago. I'm getting along very well without the brace I wore at the time because of intense pain. I'm free of pain now.

I'm very upset because I read an article that said taking vitamin D could result in vitamin D poisoning if you take too much. If too much is absorbed in the system it can cause serious damage and can cause a buildup of calcium in the blood, which is causing kidney stones, kidney failure and death. I'm really scared.

Because of my condition I must take 100 Cal-tablets with vitamin D and drink a lot of milk. I've been doing this for three years. If I cut down on the vitamin D will my condition get worse?

DEAR READER — Many things in life that you need can also be harmful. In the presence of disease some things you use need to be increased or decreased. It is true that vitamin D will cause damage in a normal person.

But it is known that people with osteoporosis have trouble absorbing calcium from the digestive system. Putting them up to normal and getting enough calcium into the bloodstream to strengthen their bones many doctors prescribe large doses of vitamin D along with calcium.

In these cases, since you are combating a calcium deficiency in the body, you will not develop the problems of vitamin D toxicity. There are other medical conditions too, where absorption from the digestive system is impaired and additional vitamins and minerals are necessary.

Let your doctor chart your course in relation to your evidence of bone loss, symptoms and blood calcium levels. Don't change your medicines without his consent or you may increase your chances of having further bone loss.

And I'm glad you are doing well without your brace. I don't recommend braces unless there is an acute problem such as pain. Then you need them.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Our daughter is becoming quite serious with her boyfriend. We like the lad, but there is one problem. He has deep rings under his eyes. We have been told these have some relationship to a man's sexual potency. Is this true?

If it is true, is there any cure? DEAR READER — From all the letters I get about dark circles under the eyes there must be a rather deep-seated prejudice against people with this condition.

Why? Possibly because when a person is thin or loses weight the veins and the dark pigment are more obvious. A hundred years ago when the leading cause of death was tuberculosis, the veins may have been observed in terminally ill patients.

But it is caused by an increase of pigment, the same pigment that induces a tan, and in thin people the loss of fat pads under the veins, more obvious. It is untrue that it has any relationship to dissipation, too much sex, masturbation or not enough sex.

Dark circles under the eyes have no relation to your prospective son-in-law's sexual potency.

Savings

average net worth would be reduced to zero by mid-1983. (The conditions will occur only if they had sufficient cash flow.) Early recovery, Pratt said, would require rates of 9.5 percent through 1983 and beyond.

Interest rate projections by Congress, the administration and many private economists are somewhere between these figures, leaving the outlook for savings and loans very unclear.

A recent report by a task force on accounting, set up by the U.S. League of Savings Associations, said that if interest rates, measured by 6-month money market certificates, average 13.25 percent during the rest of 1982, the industry will lose close to $3 billion this year.

If rates fall to 12 percent in 1983, it will lose another $9 billion that year, the report said.

It warned that over the next few years "hundreds, perhaps thousands" of savings and loans could have to be merged in one way or another unless something is done to relieve the situation.

For that relief, the industry has pinned its hopes in large part on a draft bill by Senate Banking Committee Chairman Jake Garn, R-Utah, which the committee is scheduled to consider Wednesday and Thursday.

It is designed to provide the missing half of deregulation, allowing savings and loans — and mutual savings banks if in roughly the same boat — to earn money not only from mortgages but also through commercial, consumer and other types of loans.

It includes a "capital assistance" program, involving exchanges of notes with the federal government, designed to buoy the net worth of savings institutions ostensibly without cost to taxpayers.

The bill would make major changes for the financial system as a whole, moving it away from the pattern of the past, in which regulators set narrow slots for savings, banking and securities firms — toward an open system in which all these groups can compete in each other's fields.

The savings and loan industry also has asked the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to allow it to make major accounting changes during this transition, so as to allow savings institutions to show greater income on their books.

Cool spring helps boost Idaho Power profits for quarter

BOISE (UPI) — Energy demand increased in April and May due to the cool spring weather, helping boost second-quarter profits for the Idaho Power Co., a utility official said.

But the utility lost much of the financial momentum it gained during the first quarter, when profits rose sharply because of a harsh winter and higher electricity rates, Hammond said.

Net income for Idaho Power was $15.5 million, up about 16 percent from the $13.4 million in the second quarter of last year. Revenues were $81.2 million, up about 15 percent from $70.5 million.

Abundant supplies of relatively inexpensive hydro power held down quarterly operating costs by decreasing the utility's reliance on coal power and reducing purchases from outside sources, he said.

Withdrawals hit savings firms hard

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There were $2.2 billion more withdrawals from federally insured savings and loan associations in June than were deposited, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported.

These savings institutions received $11.2 billion in new deposits but lost $4.4 billion in withdrawals, according to figures released by the regulatory agency Sunday night.

The outflow had been only $300 million in May. It has totaled $8.7 billion during the first six months of this year.

However, deposit balances increased by $3.5 billion in June, largely because of increases in interest credited to accounts, which typically rise at the end of a quarter.

Net worth of the 3,586 federally insured associations increased by $31 million to $27,656 million, largely because of accounting adjustments.
