

Roark investigates Blaine hospital

By STEPHANJE SCHOROW
Times-News Writer

Business practices at the Blaine County Medical Center have been the target of an investigation by the Blaine County prosecutor.

No charges will be filed as a result of the investigation so far, according to Prosecutor Keith Roark. However, two allegations, out of the several being investigated, appeared to have "implications of criminal activity," he said Wednesday.

The two allegations concern compensation to a hospital tycoon for dictation work unrelated to hospital business, and the alleged sale of government surplus commodities to hospital employees, a "possible violation of federal law."

Roark, who also has served as the attorney for the hospital board, said he has informed board members of his findings and will defer to their authority to take action — if they deem it necessary.

Frank McNamara, the administrator of the hospital for more than four years (he had been a part-time employee until January 1982), did not confirm or deny the allegations Wednesday, as they were outlined to him. However, he denied any wrongdoing.

McNamara said he did not "sell" the commodities to employees. Rather, employees compensated the hospital for freight costs, he said.

He declined to comment on the allegation that the tycoon had transcribed church-related business at his direction. "I think I'll follow the advice of Keith Roark, who said I should not comment on these subjects," But he did say, "I feel I've done nothing wrong in that regard," referring to the allegations about the tycoon.

The two allegations outlined by Roark are:

• In 1980, the hospital ordered 9,000 pounds of government surplus potatoes from the Idaho Department of Education as part of a program in which such commodities are provided to non-profit agencies. Such commodities by law may not be resold.

In August, about 4,500 pounds of potatoes were delivered to the hospital, Roark said. "A major portion" were "improperly transferred to employees, in possible violation of federal law, and in clear violation" of the program's rules, he said.

However, the prosecutor said no state law was violated. He said his office would notify the Department of Education about the matter. All money from the transfers went into hospital funds, Roark said, and none to "private pockets."

McNamara, however, says that no potatoes were sold. He said employees paid $3 a case to the hospital to compensate it for the freight costs.

Government surplus commodities, under this program, are provided free. Facilities pay only shipping costs, according to McNamara. He said he had ordered too many potatoes inadvertently, and the only alternative was to dispose of them. He said the hospital did not have storage facilities for the 100 cases of frozen and 50 cases of dried potatoes.

A later shipment of 4,500 pounds of potatoes was returned to the Department of Education because, McNamara says, he was able to catch that shipment in time.

He says he feels he acted properly in the case.

"It depends on hindsight. If I had taken them to the dump, I'd be more at peace with the authorities. Maybe I should have called the Department of Education. That's hindsight. That's always better."

McNamara told the board he had called the Department of Education about the transfer of the commodities to the employees after the fact. He said he was told by officials there that he had made the right decision. "We're not the bad guys, according to them," he said.

Hospital board member Kendall Kinghorn said the board had resolved that situation, but Bud Purdy, the board's chairman, said, "I don't think the board approved of it (the potato disbursements), but we didn't condemn it as much as Keith Roark."

Purdy added that he thought McNamara had exercised "poor judgement."

The second allegation "involves the use of a paid hospital secretarial employee to type matters which were related solely to a religious organization and had nothing to do with the hospital," Roark said.

The prosecutor said a part-time employee, whom he would not identify by name, was paid on an hourly basis.

Congressman pleads guilty

Admits drug, tax charges

By MARK MOONEY
United Press International

NEW YORK — In a plea bargain, Rep. Fred Richmond, D.N.Y., pleaded guilty to three federal charges, including tax evasion and marijuana possession, and resigned from Congress Wednesday in exchange for a promise that more serious charges against him would not be pressed.

Richmond, 58, a four-term Democrat who lived in one of New York's richest neighborhoods while representing some of the city's poorest areas, also pleaded guilty to violating federal salary laws. He faces up to seven years and a fine of $20,000. He will be sentenced by Judge Charles Sifton on Nov. 12.

"These acts to which I have pled guilty were irresponsible, unnecessary, foolish and wrong," Richmond said in a statement.

U.S. Attorney Edward Korman said, "Basically this is a tragic occasion. Congressman Richmond in many ways is a tragic figure considering these crimes — self-destructive, senseless. His public career has come to an end."

The congressman, a millionaire bachelor and businessman, went in the Brooklyn federal courthouse through a basement garage and entered a fourth floor courtroom through a side door. Dressed in a dark blue suit, Richmond looked grim. He avoided the eyes of courtroom spectators.

Richmond clasped his hands behind his back and bowed his head as he acknowledged his guilt.

Richmond, who had been campaigning for a fifth term, had been under investigation by a federal grand jury examining a number of charges.

The allegations included charges of campaign finance irregularities, that aides purchased drugs for him and that he helped a fugitive convict get a job with the House of Representatives.

Under the agreement worked out with federal prosecutors, Richmond pleaded guilty to one count of a three-count criminal information charging him with avoiding the payment of approximately $50,000 in income taxes.

Richmond also pleaded guilty to a one-count information charging him with possession of marijuana that was obtained for him by members of his congressional staff.

He also pleaded guilty to unlawfully supplementing the salary of a civilian employee of the Department of the Navy by arranging to have the tuition of the daughter of that employee paid by an associate of Richmond.

In his statement Richmond asked his constituents to "understand and respect my motivation in resigning and not seeking reelection as I hope they will respect my official actions over more than seven years that were consistent with the responsibility that office imposed on me."

Richmond spokesman Michael Kahan said the congressman was staying with friends in the city and was "all right under the circumstances."

He said Gov. Hugh Carey's office, which is empowered to appoint a temporary successor, had informed Richmond's staff an interim successor would not be appointed. But a spokesman for the governor's office said he had no information that such a decision had been made.

Down the tubes

What is 42 feet high, 350 feet long and uses 2,000 gallons of water per minute? Give up? It's the newest recreational outlet in Twin Falls — a hydrotube. During its first day of operation, the hydrotube, located off Addison Avenue

East, saw a crowd of approximately 750 participants go down the chute into a 4-foot-deep catch pool at the end. While kids composed most of the eager "tubers," an occasional adult managed to slip in the line for the 15-second ride down. The water used is filtered, heated and sent through the tube again.

800 U.S. Marines keeping watch over Beirut evacuation

By VINCENT J. SCHODOLSKI
United Press International

Eight-hundred U.S. Marines hit Beirut beach in a "piece of cake" landing Wednesday and took control of the city's port from French Foreign Legionnaires to help supervise the fifth day of the Palestinian guerrilla withdrawal.

Within 90 minutes, the Marines oversaw the evacuation of 550 PLO fighters, including Yasser Arafat's top political adviser Hani al-Hassan, to the northern Syrian port of Tartus, and 480 more to Beirut.

The withdrawals brought to 3,711 the number of fighters evacuated.

"Let's go Marines. Right on the money, the Marines arrive on time," shouted Col. James Mead as the 800 Leathernecks under his command hustled from amphibious landing craft onto the west Beirut beach just after dawn.

Special U.S. envoy Philip Habib, architect of the plan to evacuate 1,100 Palestinian and 2,200 Syrian and Syrian-backed fighters from west Beirut, stood by with U.S. Ambassador James Dillon to watch the Marine landing — the first American intervention in Lebanon in 24 years.

"There it is, right on course," Habib said as the U.S. Sixth Fleet's seven big ships stood by as the Marines came ashore in three landing craft. The mission brings the United States into its closest-ever contact with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Habib later made a surprise trip to Tel Aviv and told Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, architect of the June 6 invasion of Lebanon, that the planned 14-day withdrawal was going so well it may end two days ahead of schedule on Sept. 2, state-run Israeli television said.

Sharon flew to New York and plans to meet Secretary of State George Shultz in Washington Friday.

He said Israel felt "the expulsion of the PLO terrorists is going well" but the U.S. and Habib met "to solve some of the problems" that had arisen since the evacuation began Saturday.

He added they were "altogether minor problems."

The two also discussed the fighting Tuesday between Syrian-Palestinian forces and Israeli-backed Christian militias near the strategic Beirut-Damascus highway in the eastern Bekaa Valley.

The fighting put off Wednesday's over land evacuation on the highway of 2,000 guerrillas to Syria. But state-run Israeli radio said Sharon and Habib worked out arrangements to begin the evacuation. Lebanese sources in Beirut said it would commence Thursday.

"Piece of cake. Went off like clockwork," New-Hariri-Office-Moscow-Sprangers said of the Marine landing. A Vietnam "river rat," the 36-year-old Sprangers, of Virginia Beach, Va., directed the operation.

The Marines — their mandate in Lebanon for 30 days — took control within 90 minutes of the northern port area, a ghostly wasteland of crumbling buildings and sniper nests since the 1975-76 Lebanese civil war.

"I relieve you," Mead, 47, said sharply to the French commander of some 350 Foreign Legion troops who controlled the port since Saturday.

"I am relieved," the French officer replied without a trace of irony in his voice.

The French troops moved south to man peacekeeping points at the National Museum crossing point along the "green line" separating Muslim west Beirut from the Christian-held eastern sector. About 450 more French troops arrive Thursday.

The first group of the 330 Italian Bersaglieri troops also arrived Wednesday.

Germany joins defiance of U.S. on pipeline

By JOSEPH B. FLEMING
United Press International

BONN, Germany — West Germany joined France Wednesday in defying an American embargo against the Soviet natural gas pipeline and Moscow urged the Western Europeans to continue "resisting" President Reagan.

A West German — Economics — Ministry spokesman said the government was encouraging West German firms to live up to their pipeline contracts with Moscow despite Reagan's call for a ban on the sale of American-designed equipment for the 3,600-mile Siberia-to-Europe pipeline.

In Moscow, the Soviet press attacked on the "discontinuity" between the United States and its European allies and called on the Western European nations to "resist" U.S. dominance over their internal affairs.

"The United States is deliberately souring relations with its allies," the Soviet newspaper Literary Gazette said. "The question arises whether Europe will agree to play the part of Cinderella designed for her, or if she will have the courage and strength to resist."

The West German action made it the second American ally this week to defy Reagan's sanctions, imposed after martial law was declared in Poland.

France did so Monday by ordering Dresser-France, a subsidiary of Dresser Industries Inc. of Dallas, Texas, to deliver three huge pipeline compressors to the port of Le Havre and continue work on 18 others.

Dresser-France has compiled and the compressors are expected to leave Le Havre Thursday aboard the French freighter Borodine, bound for a Soviet port on the Baltic Sea.

In Los Angeles, administration sources with the vacillating Reagan said the president was likely to send a U.S. delegation to Paris to try to clear up the dispute over the sale of pipeline technology.

Officials said Reagan had not yet decided what action to take to enforce his ban but options under consideration reportedly included placing violating companies on a "denial list."

Firms on the list would be prohibited from receiving goods or data from the United States.

Reagan has banned all U.S. companies and their foreign subsidiaries from participating in the construction of the multi-billion-dollar pipeline. The administration fears the pipeline will leave Europe dependent on Moscow for energy.

In Bonn, State Secretary Dieter von Wurster said Wednesday the United States has no legal right to extend its embargo to foreign firms.

The West German policy was set forth in a letter to AEG Kanis, a heavy-machine manufacturer that has a $200 million contract to build 47 turbines for the pipeline. The letter said the American attempt to place restrictions on West German firms is an invasion of West German sovereignty.

Today's briefing

Peru says death toll inflated

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — The death toll in what police said was the deadliest leftist guerrilla attack in Peru since a civilian government took office two years ago may have been inflated, officials said Wednesday.

The government said the exact toll probably would never be known.

Police originally said 30 rebels and six civil guards were killed in a five-hour firebomb barrage Sunday on an isolated police station in the Andean department of Ayacucho, 250 miles southeast of Lima.

Tuesday, police in the area said only 20 guerrillas had died.

Later, however, government officials acknowledged that a single body of a suspected attacker had been found.

"There may have been many deaths," said Interior Minister Gen. Jose Gagliardi who flew to the zone Wednesday.

But he presumed, according to witnesses' versions, there were between 10 and 15 (guerrilla victims).

20 inmates shot in prison riot

NORCO, Calif. (UPI) — About 20 inmates were shot and wounded by guards breaking up a major fight between several black and Hispanic inmates at the California Rehabilitation Center, officials said Wednesday.

Four inmates were stabbed during the disturbance in the prison's main exercise yard Tuesday evening.

Guards first used loudspeakers and fired several warning shots in an effort to break up the fight, then dispersed the crowd of 1,000 inmates by firing birdshot at the prisoners' heads.

The stabbed inmates were treated at Riverside General Hospital, where two were held overnight, and the inmates with birdshot wounds were treated at the infirmary.

Lt. Arnold St. Peter said some prisoners set small fires after they were taken to their dormitories, but all the fires were quickly extinguished.

In a related incident early Wednesday, a black prisoner stabbed a Hispanic inmate in the neck inside one of the dorms. The injured man was also taken to Riverside General Hospital for treatment, then was returned to the prison.

Reagan appreciates rate cut

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — President Reagan called to congratulate a savings and loan for dropping home loan interest rates to 11.9 percent, saying he hopes others will follow suit in trying to stimulate the economy.

"I was a bit nonplussed when I got the call saying the president wanted to speak to me," William Schuett, president of Security Savings and Loan Association, said Wednesday.

"I've never spoken to a president of the United States before."

He was telephoned by the president Tuesday. Reagan promised to keep the call a secret until Schuett had a chance to announce it Wednesday at a news conference.

Security Savings and Loan is Wisconsin's largest with assets of more than $4 billion. Schuett, conceding the lower interest will affect profits, said he knew of no lower home loan rate in the country. The going rate was 16 percent.

He quoted Reagan as saying, "I've just been informed what you intend to do for me America rolling. I want to thank you personally for your help and gesture."

Schuett said he told Reagan, "You have asked the private sector to be the catalyst and take the lead in turning this economy around and we're doing our share in trying to get that job done."

Border roundup sets record

EL PASO, Texas (UPI) — U.S. Border Patrol agents arrested 1,205 suspected illegal aliens Tuesday, setting a one-day record for arrests in the El Paso sector, an agent said Wednesday.

Assistant Chief Patrol Agent Robert Barber said the 1,205 arrests Tuesday broke Monday's record of 989 arrests, the highest number in one day since 1978, when 1,200 suspected illegal aliens were apprehended on a single day.

Barber blamed the influx of aliens on Mexico's current economic woes, including the devaluation of the peso.

"We have, since the last devaluation, noticed an increase," he said. "We assume the peso is helping create the entries at this time. They are looking for jobs and dollars."

Chile bomb blast kills child

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — Five bombs exploded in Santiago, one of them killing a 12-year-old boy and injuring three other children, one seriously, authorities said.

The military government of Augusto Pinochet claimed Tuesday the attacks were part of a "pre-meditated" campaign to "alter public order and create an artificial climate of political agitation."

The bombs exploded at a police court, offices of the city water company, a development corporation headquarters, in the gardens of a suburban city and near a supermarket, police said.

The boy was killed when he and the three wounded children stumbled across one bomb while collecting trash outside a supermarket Tuesday, police said.

Damage was minor in all cases except the market, where the unidentified 12-year-old died and his three companions were injured, one gravely.

Oil companies plan merger

NEW YORK (UPI) — Occidental Petroleum Co. announced Wednesday it will acquire Cities Service Co. in a friendly $4 billion takeover that will create the nation's 8th largest oil company.

The merger of the two oil giants will be the third largest in U.S. history, after DuPont's acquisition of Conoco Inc. and U.S. Steel's purchase of Marathon Oil Co.

Los Angeles-based Occidental, which had launched a hostile $1.5 billion bid to buy 49 percent of Cities at $50 a share last week, upped the ante to $55 a share for a reduced number of shares after Cities scrambled to find a better alternative.

Canyon assessor won't give up

Canyon County Commission Chairman Carlos Hledose viewed Wednesday to wage war against the state panel charged with overseeing local property assessments despite an adverse court ruling.

The Idaho Tax Commission earlier this week rejected appeals from five Idaho counties.

Canyon County property owners face higher valuations, Hledose said, unless local residents band together and successfully fight the tax commission.

Hledose is encouraging action against the state panel despite a ruling issued by Fifth District Judge George Granata on Tuesday.

Hospital

He said she had, under the supervision of McNamara, transcribed several dictation tapes related to McNamara's position as a deacon in the Catholic Church.

Roark would not specify how long that activity had gone on. "I can only say examples were not isolated. They were numerous enough to be significant."

One protested the demolition of a licensed practical nurse at the hospital. A second one, signed by more than a dozen hospital employees, said those employees had lost confidence in the administrator because he was unable to effectively perform his duties. It also asked the hospital board to look into the situation. A third petition, signed by other employees, expressed confidence in the administrator and the job he was doing.

McNamara would not comment on those petitions.

Roark also would not discuss the petitions, saying that would violate his attorney-client relationship with the hospital board.

But Roark did say on Wednesday that he has informed the board he can no longer serve as its attorney, and he has advised the hospital to hire a private lawyer.

He said this was not precipitated entirely by his investigation. Rather, he said he felt the growing hospital needed its own attorney.

The Blaine County hospital, a 15-bed acute-care facility, recently built a 22-bed extended-care wing. Its total projected revenues for 1983 are $1.4 million, compared to $926,000 in fiscal 1981.

He said the employee no longer works for the hospital.

When asked about that allegation, McNamara said, "You'll have to ask Keith Roark... let him make the statements."

But McNamara again said he felt he had done nothing wrong.

Roark said, "My own judgment is it's ethically and probably legally improper for that activity to take place."

"On the other hand, I do not think a full-scale criminal investigation would be justified at this time, based on the facts as we now know them."

Asked whether the investigation into other allegations was continuing, Roark replied, "For obvious reasons, I will not comment."

The hospital recently was the subject of three petitions by employees.

Today's weather

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas:

Continued fair today with highs near 90. Slightly cooler Friday with highs in the 80s. Lows near 50.

Camas Prairie, Halsey, Wood River Valley:

Mostly sunny today with highs in the low 80s. Slightly cooler Friday with highs 75 to 80, lows in the 40s.

Northern Utah and Nevada:

Partly cloudy with widely scattered afternoon showers over Utah and mostly fair over Nevada through Friday. A little cooler Friday. Highs 65 to 90 both days. Lows in the 50s.

Synopsis:

Ideal late summer weather will continue over the Magic Valley and all Idaho through the weekend.

A ridge of high pressure along the West Coast allows a dry westerly air flow to dominate conditions in Idaho. Enough moisture to generate some patches of middle and high level clouds is reaching the southern part of the state, but not enough to generate showers.

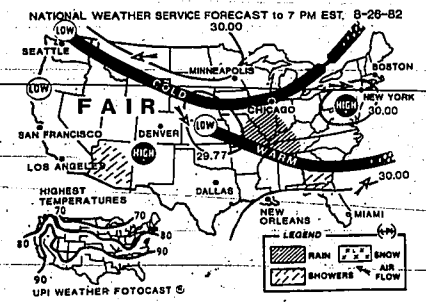

However, a weak trough of low pressure will move inland toward the weekend, with a wind shift to a southeasterly direction. This will draw enough moisture over Idaho to touch off some mountain showers.

Conditions for haymaking and harvesting in the Magic Valley should be good through Monday. Irrigation demands will be above normal through Friday, decreasing over the weekend as temperatures moderate.

Spraying conditions will be good today with winds 10 mph or less. Past spraying is forecast at 31 inch today and Friday.

Mid-afternoon temperatures Wednesday were generally in the middle to high 80s across Idaho, with the warmest readings 95 degrees at Lewiston. Stanley and Elk City were the coolest with morning lows of 30 degrees.

The extended forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with normal temperatures Friday through Monday. A few afternoon showers or thunderstorms may develop over mountain areas. Highs will be in the low to middle 80s with lows from 45 to 55.

Elsewhere in the nation Wednesday, the hottest temperature reported was 104 degrees at Prestidio, Texas, and the coolest was 23 at West Yellowstone, Mont.

Boulders strewn on the main street of Ouray, Colo.

Trees, logs, boulders

Slides bury mountain town

OURAY, Colo. (UPI) — With an eye to the sky, residents of this rustic Rocky Mountain resort town joined work crews cleaning up five days of mudslides.

Trees, logs and 600-pound boulders ended up in Ouray streets over an area a mile wide and several blocks long. The community was hit by a similar rampage last summer for the first time in 15 years.

A preliminary damage estimate of $250,000 was made, but Sheriff Art Dougherty said it was very conservative and would not include damage to homes and businesses.

"I couldn't even guess the damage," he said. "But $250,000 in my opinion wouldn't even pay for hauling out the debris."

And the National Weather Service warned residents to brace for more.

A flash flood watch was posted through 10 p.m. Wednesday for the Ouray area, the nearby San Luis Valley and the Four Corners region of southwest Colorado.

The rumbling mudslides had hit the scenic mountain town at the base of 11,300-foot Red Mountain Pass since Friday night.

"The mudslides make a big noise when they come through," he said. "You have a big roar when the thing comes. It is loud enough to scare you."

Dougherty said the slides halted Tuesday, but authorities were worried that new thunderstorms might start them up again.

"Everybody will be out looking and waiting and hoping it (mudslides) will miss us," Dougherty said. "If it does hit we have everyone out to help assist. There is not a damn thing you can do until it hits."

Most of the townspeople, aided by state and county work crews, have been working around the clock since Friday night cleaning up logs, tree limbs, rocks, and gravel which cascaded through town.

"Everybody's out helping each other," he said. "Residents have been getting out making food and coffee for the workers, as well as doing some of the cleanup themselves."

Dougherty said town officials were awaiting word from the office of Gov. Richard Lamm in Denver on a request for funds to help with repairs. A similar request was rejected last summer.

The mudslides have forced several hotels and restaurants to temporarily close, he said, and businessmen are worried about more rain.

U.S. steelmakers protest Europe import duty ruling

By The Baltimore Sun

WASHINGTON — In a major setback for the American steel industry, the Commerce Department has sharply reduced the penalty it had planned to impose against steel imports from six European countries.

Issuing its final ruling Wednesday in a mammoth trade dispute between the United States and foreign steel producers, the department found that the European countries were unfairly subsidizing steel shipped to this country.

But the department recalculated and reduced its preliminary ruling on the amount of subsidy and therefore also cut the amount of duties it would impose because of the subsidies. The amount of duties is to equal the amount of the subsidy.

A final determination on whether the subsidies have injured the U.S. steel industry will be issued Oct. 12 by the International Trade Commission, an independent U.S. agency. It already has issued a preliminary finding of injury, and should it uphold this, the United States would collect duties retroactive to last June, when the preliminary ruling was issued.

United States Steel Corp., the country's largest producer, immediately expressed "great displeasure" with the decision and said it would appeal to the Court of International Trade in New York.

David R. Roderick, the company's chairman, said the ruling, which he called "unjust, unjustifiable and inequitable," would "do nothing to alleviate the suffering that will continue to be felt by the 120,000 unemployed steelworkers, their families and their communities."

Roderick, in one of American business's sharpest attacks with the Reagan Administration, said the ruling appeared "to be an effort to bail the European steel industry out of the difficulty that it created by its unfair trade practices in this country."

Commerce Department officials strongly defended their action, on which a staff of 70 had spent months at a cost of $5 million, the largest subsidy investigation ever undertaken by the government. Much of the work involved examining the records of steel companies in Europe.

"It was a painstaking and sometimes a painful investigation," Gary Horlick, the deputy assistant secretary for import administration, told a news briefing.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, in a statement, indicated he will support the seven U.S. companies that brought the complaint, would accept an agreement worked out with the European Economic Community to reduce the European share of the U.S. steel market.

"This arrangement would provide the U.S. industry with greater stability than would be afforded by incessant litigation," he said.

The agreement was rejected early this month by the American companies as inequitable.

Australians probe CIA-bank link

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — Authorities Wednesday investigated a suicide, $50 million in savings and CIA involvement in the collapse of a bank with a number of high-ranking U.S. former military and intelligence officials on its payroll.

Frank Nugan, 37, was found shot to death in his Mercedes-Benz near a sheep grazing area west of Sydney in January 1980. His death was ruled suicide.

His death brought on the bankruptcy of Nugan Hand Ltd., a banking concern with a number of U.S. military and intelligence officials on its staff.

Nugan was chairman of a group of companies affiliated with Nugan Hand that reportedly handled $1 billion annually for clients.

The Wall Street Journal said that when word of Nugan's death reached the firm's president, retired U.S. Rear Adm. Earl Yates, he ransacked files and shredded documents. In the military, Yates had been was chief of staff for plans and policy of the Pacific Command.

The Journal reported that Yates refused to discuss Nugan Hand when presented with facts indicating his involvement in its operations. "You print whatever you want," he said. "I've never had any success in dealing with reporters."

The Journal said hundreds of investors, including many U.S. servicemen, were losers when the bank folded.

Medicine for herpes approved

OTTAWA (UPI) — A Montreal firm announced Wednesday it received government approval to market a medicine to ease suffering from genital herpes, an incurable viral disease that has reached epidemic proportions in North America.

Burroughs Wellcome Inc. said its new drug, Zovirax, should be available by prescription in mid-September after eight years of studies. The company said tests proved Zovirax speeds healing of the painful herpes sores that signal the initial outbreak of the sexually transmitted disease.

The company said its ointment reduces the pain of the disease for many patients as well as the amount of time the contagious virus is present in the sores.

It will also alleviate symptoms of non-genital herpes, commonly called "cold sores," which affect almost all Canadians by the time they reach 50, the company added.

However, Burroughs emphasized the drug is not a cure for either herpes or cold sores.

Genital herpes has become one of the most widespread sexual diseases in North America over the past 10 years, inflicting heavy suffering on its victims because of the unpredictable recurrence of the sores.

The disease becomes contagious whenever the sores reappear on the victim.

The company said herpes has spread so fast in the United States that the U.S. Center for Disease Control in Atlanta has declared it an epidemic.

Burroughs said its new drug represented a scientific as well as medical breakthrough.

British kill Irish youth

LONDON (UPI) — A British army patrol in a Roman Catholic neighborhood shot and killed a young man Wednesday, police said. The army said the shooting was being investigated.

The dead man's identity was withheld but he was reported to have been 23 years old. No other details of the incident were available.

Police moved into strategic points throughout the city to guard against any eruption of street violence.

On Tuesday security forces arrested 32 suspected members of the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

Tax notes signal new state problems

It has taken juggling, some special sessions of the Legislature, some severe budget cutting at the last minute, but for all of its 92 years, the state of Idaho has managed to go from one financial year to another with a balanced budget.

Now, that has changed. For the first time, the state had to "roll over" funds from one fiscal year to another. The change was made by shifting the state from an accrual to a cash-accounting basis, thus allowing the payment of some 1982 bills in the new 1983 fiscal year.

All of this signals deeper financial water for Idaho, a signal reinforced this week when the state Board of Examiners — its top financial and political officers — approved $109 million in new "tax-anticipation" notes.

The size of the note-issue is a record, and combined with $61 million in such notes issued earlier this year, it is more than 30 percent of all such notes issued since 1975.

The move made good economic sense in the short term. Many states issue such notes, and Idaho occasionally has done so before. But long term, the approach spells trouble.

Let no one be fooled. "Tax anticipation" is really deficit spending, and at a time when the state's and nation's economy are in serious trouble, a slide into deficit spending is not what Idaho needs.

Attorney General David Leroy, a member of the board, is right when he says this financing approach spells problems in the long-term future. It is time, he says, to strengthen Idaho's financial system and return, at the earliest possible moment, to an accrual accounting system through which deficit spending is hampered.

That's a topic the Legislature might put on its 1983 agenda.

A constitutional battle in the NFL

WASHINGTON — The wage slaves of professional football have taken to shaking hands before dislocating each other's shoulders in games. This incendiary eddying is part of a class struggle in which the working stiffs (a proletariat averaging $83,800) are advocating that 55 percent of the NFL's gross revenues be set aside for players. "We are," they say, "the game."

The owners respond with a comparably inane morsel of morality. Any percentage of the gross agreement would violate capitalist practice. Actually, the owners live by one kind of socialism, and the players want their own version.

The pleasant but awkward fact for management is that it is hard for an owner to lose money. The NFL's new television contract gives each team $14 million a year — an $8 million-a-year increase. Many, perhaps most, teams are near the break-even point before they sell a ticket.

Football players have short, high-risk careers, yet are paid on average about half what baseball players make.

What pulled up salaries in baseball and basketball was free agency — clubs bidding for players in a relatively free market. The football players' union emphasizes a percentage of the gross rather than free agency because it believes that the NFL's egalitarian revenue-sharing policies have reduced the owners' incentive to win, and hence the incentive to bid for players. That is true, but so is this: a competitive spirit causes managers to become owners. There are easier ways to make money.

Competition between professional teams is not like competition between shoe stores. Every team wants every other team to be competitive. Revenue sharing and other aspects of "NFL socialism" work. Since 1970, all but two teams have made the play-offs, and 15 have made the Super Bowl.

The players' union wants the 55 percent of gross divided according to a formula based primarily on years of service. It would narrow pay differentials, but would increase the rewards for team excellence.

The owners say that any percentage of gross formula dilutes their ownership by compromising the privacy of their private property. They have a point. They would have more of one if their private enterprise were less permeated with public involvements.

Most stadiums are built and maintained at public expense. Football is a labor-intensive industry and the job training is done at public institutions (e.g., Ohio State) and private institutions with tax and other public subsidies (e.g., Southern Cal). Most of the revenue for the revenue sharing comes from a publicly regulated oligopoly (the three networks). The fact that local governments give — and receive — much in cooperative relationships with NFL teams gives, also, a patina of plausibility to the nutty action of the city of Oakland, which is waging a — thus far, stay tuned — losing fight to keep the Raiders from migrating 400 miles to Los Angeles.

California's Supreme Court has ruled that the city of Oakland can go to trial with its attempt at Bolshevik conceptions: the city seizing the Raiders through its power of eminent domain. And Congress, having made America all but perfect, is contemplating a finishing touch: legislation to return the Raiders to Oakland and strengthen restrictions on the right to move franchises. Isn't that the sort of public service the Constitutional Convention had in mind when allocating powers to the federal government?

Football always has been reflective of modern life — violence punctuated by committee meetings. Now it incorporates America's two principal pastimes — litigating and legislating. And — hark! what discord follows! — there may be a strike. Be brave, fans, and remember: God strengthens the back to the burden.

Taiwan communique changes Congress' arms intent

WASHINGTON — In the melancholy matter of Taiwan, let us begin with two propositions. The first is that President Reagan is sincere in what he says. The second is that Mr. Reagan is capable of reading and understanding the English language. The trouble is, the two propositions cannot be reconciled.

The first proposition demands no exegesis. Unlike some presidents we have known, Mr. Reagan is quite incapable of telling a deliberate lie. When he told Dan Rostenkowski the joint communique of Aug. 17 made "no change whatsoever" in the situation, he believed he was telling the truth.

Yet if we compare the plain language of the Taiwan Relations Act with the plain language of the communique — both of which Mr. Reagan must have read — it is apparent that a change of major significance has in fact taken place.

By way of background: In 1955, the United States and the Republic of China entered into a treaty of mutual defense. In December of 1979, President Carter unilaterally abrogated that treaty. Mr. Carter's action set off an uproar. Many members of Congress complained angrily that no president, on his own say-so, could undo what it took two-thirds of the Senate to do in the first place. Sen. Barry Goldwater took the question to court and won a favorable judgment at the District Court level, only to have it overturned on appeal.

In the midst of the litigation, Congress decided to take its own legislative slap at the president. By overwhelming votes (98-6 in the Senate, 345-55 in the House), Congress approved the Taiwan Relations Act that became law on April 10, 1979. That act, as Mr. Reagan himself emphasized during his 1980 campaign, is part of the law of the land. This is what the law says: "The United States will make available to Taiwan such defense articles and defense services in such quantity as may be necessary to enable Taiwan to maintain a sufficient self-defense capability. The President and the Congress shall determine the nature and quantity of such defense articles and services based, solely upon their judgment of the needs of Taiwan, in accordance with procedures established by law."

Now, consider the language of the joint communique just announced between the United States and the People's Republic of China. This is what the communique says: "The United States and the People's Republic of China do not seek to carry out a long-term policy of arms sales to Taiwan, but that it may be necessary to supply in quantitative terms, the level of those supplied in recent years ... and that it intends to reduce gradually its sales of arms to Taiwan, leading over a period of time to a final resolution.

What are we to make of this? The Taiwan Relations Act clearly envisions that the defense needs of Taiwan will not remain static. The needs may diminish. They may increase. The "nature and quantity" of arms sales will be adjusted not only by the president but also by the Congress. Nothing whatever in the act suggests or implies that Congress intended gradually to reduce these sales and in time to phase them out altogether.

This whole regrettable incident strikes me not as outrageous or duplicitous, but simply as inexplicable. Mr. Reagan sincerely believes that nothing has changed, but unless words have lost their meaning, things have indeed changed. The president has committed us eventually to stop aiding the defense of a small but loyal ally.

This too is disturbing. Under the joint communique, the United States pledges that it will not "pursue a policy" of "one China, one Taiwan." The idea of a separate and independent Republic of Taiwan is an idea whose time should have come long ago. The surviving Nationalists of Taipei resist the idea, and of course Peking rejects the idea out of hand, but the prospect makes geographical and ideological sense.

For the moment, as a practical matter, perhaps nothing has changed. The Communist government on the mainland is not about to attempt an amphibious invasion of Taiwan. A relationship that has lasted for 30 years could last another 30 years. The joint communique, thus seen, is a disappointment. It is not a disaster.

Cruise scene misunderstood

In "my day" we called it "drugging Main." Today it is known as "cruising." Until tonight, I was under the gross misconception that this was the only difference. It is now obvious to me that the City Council is also operating under this wrong notion or they wouldn't be bending over backwards to see that these "cruisers" aren't inconvenienced in any way by our police, homeowners or businessmen.

What Mayor Talkington and his council members need is a good cruise.

Why they would see it in lights openly drinking alcohol. They would see public displays of "affection." They would hear — when the motors stop roaring and the tape decks rest a moment — language that would cause a gallop to blush.

If they cared to converse with the "cruisers" they would hear "how great the dope is." Or they could talk to the 8-year-old boy whose babysitter had brought him. (She was the pretty one, drinking the beer.)

My heart aches remembering these children. My blood boils that the council's main concern is new cruising routes and "cruiser" appeasement.

Why are we trying to make "cruising" so attractive? It seems to me if we make it a little uncomfortable (i.e., enforcing the law) the problem will be solved.

Why IPEA backs Evans

A recent letter to the editor from former state employee Dave Tayson criticized the Idaho Public Employees Association's endorsement of Gov. John Evans and attempted to characterize challenger Phil Batt as a "man of reason." I'd like to set the record straight.

As a State Senator, Phil Batt consistently voted against the right of public employees to organize and negotiate with their employer. Batt was one of the principal authors of the plan which he touted as the final solution to the problem of setting employee compensation. However, he pushed an implementation plan that denied state employees the appropriate pay level required by the plan.

At the same time, he joined forces with other legislative leaders to subvert key provisions relating to merit pay and prevailing rate by voting pay raises and then underfunding them. Batt's respect and consideration for public employees is embodied in his philosophy that they should be happy to have an underpaid job just for the privilege of living in Idaho.

Gov. Evans on the other hand has consistently recognized state employees as the most valuable resource available to State government. He has acted to preserve jobs in tough times and to provide fair and equitable compensation and benefits to the extent possible within budget limitations.

Mr. Tayson calls upon state employees to support the plan. As a current state employee, I'll support the man who has demonstrated positive leadership and supported not only state employees but quality government for all Idahoans.

Two pensions aren't wrong

What ever happened to the principle that people should earn what they get? What they earn? Media use of the term "double dipper" in a derogatory context to identify a person who draws both civil service and military retirement pay is unfair and false. It implies that federal retirements are some type of public good trough to be "dipped" into.

Both federal and military service are open to able-bodied men the simple entry requirements. I spent 20 years in the USAF working long hours at low pay, often under trying circumstances. I earned military retirement pay. Being fully taxable, if I work now, a considerable part of my retirement pay is reclaimed by the government as income tax. I also was promised health care, dental care and commissary and base exchange privileges for myself and family the rest of my life.

I committed to a military career looking at those things as they were at that time. After being whittled away by economy moves through the years, my pay amount to very little. For example the free health care I was promised is so limited that I pay health insurance premiums to augment it. And when I reach age 65, we will be forced under Medicare, which I have earned under Social Security anyway.

After I retired from the Air Force I entered federal civil service. Eight years later I was retired for disability. I didn't make the rules for disability retirement. Nor did I write the medical evaluation on which my retirement was based. I earned civil service retirement pay. When I accepted disability pay it was tax exempt. Since then income tax regulations have been changed to make it fully taxable. The government gives and the government takes away, without any regard to fair play.

Now there is discussion about curtailing military retirement pay where one starts drawing Social Security. In 1981 we were required to start paying Social Security deduction in order to receive an increased benefit. A few years later another act of Congress made it mandatory for all military personnel to pay Social Security. What we have paid in, we should be entitled to draw on the same basis as anyone else. I have earned Social Security.

A final blow came with the recent act of Congress which forces all states to deduct retirement pay from the unemployment compensation a retired person would — otherwise draw. If I work, I have to pay into the unemployment fund, so I should be able to draw the benefit. To hell with being employed!

A majority of the members of Congress have lost all sense of fairness and right. They continue to blindly raise taxes and increase deficit spending. They disregard what people have earned in order to spread the available money to as many voters as possible. Do you voters who read this also care so little about fairness and right? Are we to be a nation of parasites living on the efforts of a few productive workers? What a horrible future for a once proud people!

Nuclear position explained

Any similarity between the letter which I sent to the editor and the one which appeared in the Reader's Forum on Aug. 22 is purely coincidental. I stated the following in my original:

1. That my concern was for misinformation, and since I was involved in research for two months, I did some research into nuclear physics to find out if I had been disseminating misinformation.

2. I did not say that the three books I would refer to were "basically the three used to train nuclear engineers." If nuclear engineering is like most college degrees, 300 would be more like it. What I said was: "I will be referring to basically three books which are obviously used to train nuclear engineers." They were the only three in the University of Idaho library which spoke in layman's terms concerning broader reactor safety.

3. I stated that I did know that there were breeders in this state, but that I had not been referring to the experimental breeders at INEL, but a reactor three to five times larger, built for generating power.

4. I also stated that I was dealing in possibilities, not probabilities. I used the Teton Dam as an example, in that it was improbable it would break. I also made very clear the huge difference in magnitude between an accident at a breeder and a dam breaking. People wouldn't be able to return to an area spoiled by a reactor accident until after extensive clean-up, perhaps lasting years.

C'mon, editor. Editing a letter is one thing. Destroying it is another.

Thursday, August 26, 1982 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho A-5

By JUDI HASSON
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The historic break-up of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. will change the way consumers receive telephone service now and has the potential for dramatic communications developments in the future. U.S. District Judge Harold Greene approved Tuesday the break-up of the Bell system, ending the government's 8-year battle to dismantle the nation's largest corporation and bringing greater competition to the industry. Within the next 18 months, AT&T's 22 local operating companies will be spun off, and Ma Bell will be allowed for the first time to enter lucrative markets such as computer services and data processing. Under the agreement that ended the antitrust case against AT&T, the company will retain its long-distance division, manufacturing subsidiary and research arm. It will be prohibited for at least seven years from offering electronic information services, and the local operating companies will be allowed to publish the highly profitable Yellow Pages. Consumers soon will be offered a new choice of services and prices in telephone service, and likely will see a competitive rush for their business, industry analysts said Wednesday. The new system will involve sweeping changes in the management of telephone services, but the average telephone user will not be affected a great deal. The most visible difference is likely to be a somewhat higher cost for local service and lower cost for long distance. "The basic way people relate to phone companies is going to change," said a staff lawyer with the House communications subcommittee. "They won't just be dealing with a single entity that provides all the things they need."

Alien lands in inaugural sermon

JOSEPH BERNARDIN
Addresses new flock

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago's new archbishop, Joseph Bernardin, invoked the popular name of movie character "E.T." Wednesday in his first public sermon as spiritual leader of the archdiocese's 2.4 million Roman Catholics. Bernardin, former archbishop of Cincinnati, was formally installed Tuesday night as the new head of the nation's largest Roman Catholic archdiocese. The six days of celebration conclude with a public mass and picnic in Grant Park Sunday. Bernardin succeeds Cardinal John P. Cody, who died April 25. Surrounded by 10 cardinals, more than 130 other bishops and archbishops, Mayor Jane M. Byrne and Gov. James R. Thompson, Bernardin began his first public sermon by imagining how the fictional extraterrestrial, "E.T.," might react if he peeked into Holy Name Cathedral during the installation ceremony.

Bernardin imagined aloud that "E.T." might wander around, asking people from various walks of life what they thought of the ceremony. Typically, he imagined, the responses might vary widely. Then he imagined "E.T." returning to the cathedral and tuning into the thoughts of the people invited to the first mass. Again, the thoughts varied widely. Finally, he said, "E.T." might decide not to make up his mind about the new archbishop until he had listened to him speak. "And so, my brothers and sisters," he said, pausing, grinning and drawing a laugh and extended applause. Bernardin said the most serious problem facing the church is combating the feeling that material goods are more important than the spiritual life.

Policemen charged with club murder

BOSTON (UPI) — A grand jury Wednesday handed up indictments charging four policemen with first-degree murder in an alleged bar and club-wielding rampage at a cheap motel-lounge that left one man dead and eight others injured. Four other policemen and three civilians were also charged on lesser charges in 90 counts handed up by the Suffolk County grand jury. The late-night melee July 23 at the King Arthur Motel Lounge in Chelsea, a blue-collar suburb north of Boston, allegedly erupted after an off-duty policeman was thrown out of the bar and got into a fight with a bouncer. Victims claimed 10 to 12 on-duty policemen from Chelsea and neighboring Everett rushed into the lounge a short time later and chased patrons to a second-floor room. The officers allegedly broke into the barricaded room spraying Mace and attacking the patrons with ax handles, tire irons and clubs, the victims said. The three women in the room were not injured. Vincent J. Bordonaro, 54, of Everett, suffered severe head injuries and died a week later at Massachusetts General Hospital. None of the other victims are still hospitalized. The grand jury had heard testimony since early this month. The FBI was also investigating the incident. Charged with first degree murder and assault and battery with intent to murder were Everett police officers John Macaudo, William McCuskey, Richard Aiello and John McLeod. Each pleaded not guilty and were ordered to post $10,000 bail. Chelsea police officers Anthony Iantlosca, Richard Volo and John Quinn pleaded innocent to filing a false report and conspiracy. Officer Michael Nadworny pleaded innocent to conspiracy, assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, violation of civil rights and filing a false report. They were released on $1,000 bail.

New substance zaps mosquitoes

AUBURN, Ala. (UPI) — Auburn University researchers said Wednesday they are field testing a new substance that has excellent potential for controlling virtually every species of mosquito. The field testing of bacillus thuringiensis, variety israelensis (BTI) comes at a time when mosquitoes carried encephalitis has killed at least five people, more than 200 horses and thousands of birds in the Southeast. "It's a very promising material," said Dr. Gary Mullen, an entomologist with the Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station. Mosquito larvae exposed to a low concentration of BTI for as little as four to five minutes "experienced 100 percent mortality," he said. The material is "extremely safe, faster acting than most other insecticides and more effective against virtually every mosquito species," he said. "It's extremely safe," he said. "Also, it's very insecticidal. With just a few minutes exposure, it will kill them very, very quickly, within a hour. Some of the others (insecticides) take 24 hours or more." BTI is applied to water surfaces, where larvae ingest it. It is composed of bacterial spores that carry a potent toxin. The toxin is released inside the mosquito, causing paralysis and death.

Q. Where'd the younger set get the word "joint" to mean a marijuana cigarette?
A. Same place the older set got the word "joint" to mean a dispatchable hangout. Far East Orientals smoked opium in jointed bamboo pipes. First, a joint was one pipeful. Then it was a pipe. Then it was a pipeful. Eventually, it took on several more meanings.

A. 1894. At Manasquan High in Manasquan, N. J. That year he was voted "Class Clown," incidentally.

Q. How long did it take Noah Webster to write the first dictionary?
A. Thirty-six years.

Seven hundred books — that's how many are owned by each member of the American Association of University Professors.

Q. You once said the poet Ben Jonson was buried sitting up instead of lying. Why?

A. King Charles I of England had promised to entomb his remains anywhere Jonson chose in Westminster Abbey. When the time came in 1637, that chosen place was crowded. But a space 18-inches-square was available. So his coffin was inserted vertically. Or so goes the legend.

Graveyard makes weird homesite

NEWPORT, Ark. (UPI) — After five years of strange occurrences at their home, a Jackson County couple filed suit for more than $1 million contending developers knowingly built the house on a graveyard.

"I've had a lot of lawyers in town pooh-pooh the lawsuit, thinking it's about ghosts and goblins," said the couple's attorney, Larry Hartsfield, who filed the action Tuesday.

"It's not about the ghosts and goblins," Hartsfield said. "The 'Poltergeist' aspect is peripheral, a sidelight. It's not unrelentment in the lawsuit."

Charles and Sharon Johnson said they first realized their home was built on a graveyard when Charles discovered the first grave in May.

About a week later, the couple moved from their home of 5 1/2 years and four more graves were found. The graves dated back to the late 1800s.

The Johnsons said the strange occurrences — doors opening, fire alarms being set off, children crying, and other people being seen in the house — continued from the day they moved in to the day they moved out.

"I wanted to move out even before Charles found the graveyard," Mrs. Johnson said. "I always felt like somebody was watching me."

Hartsfield said the lawsuit against the homebuilder and subdivision developer contends the developer, W.E. McDonald of Tuckerman, intentionally removed the tombstones to "fraudulently disguise the true character of the land."

DOLLY PARTON
May need surgery

Dolly Parton hospitalized

NEW YORK (UPI) — Country music superstar Dolly Parton was in stable condition Wednesday at a hospital awaiting the results of tests to determine whether she will need gynecological surgery.

"She's resting comfortably," said Katie Valk, Miss Parton's spokeswoman. "She was in a tremendous amount of pain. She is in stable condition and in good spirits."

Ms. Valk said it would take at least two days before the test results were known.

Miss Parton, 36, was forced to cancel "all concerts for the present" on her first tour in 2 1/2 years after she started "severely hemorrhaging" over the weekend while traveling to a show in Indianapolis.

Unions stage boycott of supermarket chain

BOISE (UPI) — Two union locals said Wednesday they were promoting a boycott of D'Alessandro's Foods, claiming employees of the Boise supermarket received unfairly low wages and inferior benefits.

"We will not sit by and let non-union D'Alessandro's short-change its workers," said Wayne Larsen, president of United Food and Commercial Workers Union Local 1614.

Larsen said members of Locals 1614, Boise, and 368A, Nampa, would begin launch their boycott Friday with a demonstration at the D'Alessandro's store west of Boise.

Larsen charged that D'Alessandro's paid its workers at about legally required minimum wage rates, "and that is disgraceful in these trying times of double-digit inflation."

Ross D'Alessandro, owner of the one-store company, called Larsen's charges "totally wrong."

He said the pay and benefits available to his approximately 200 employees were comparable to those received by workers in unionized stores in the Boise Valley.

"D'Alessandro's is not anti-union, we are pro-employees," D'Alessandro said. "We treat this store as a family."

The store owner said the union had been trying to organize workers at his store for some time.

"If there were a need for a union, they would have already been here," D'Alessandro said. "Obviously they've had no success."

"If they want to boycott us, that's their right as American citizens, but we are a very family oriented store. My employees are like my family."

Larsen urged D'Alessandro customers to take their business to unionized stores in the Boise area, such as Albertson's, Bultrey, Safeway, Smith's Food King and M&W.

Larsen said the Boise and Nampa locals represented 900 union members.

Group to investigate Boise's redevelopment

BOISE (UPI) — Mayor Dick Eardley Wednesday named a nine-member committee to investigate alternatives for redeveloping downtown Boise in the wake of Winmar's decision to back out of a major shopping mall project.

Eugene Thomas, a lawyer and past president of the Greater Boise Chamber of Commerce, was selected as chairman of the blue-ribbon panel of business leaders.

Also appointed were John Mitchell, a Boise State University economics professor; Gary Casselback, a vice president of Trefling Inc. and former chairman of the Boise Planning and Zoning Commission; and the Rev. Fred Venable, minister of the First United Methodist Church.

Others named were Alice Hennessey, a Boise Cascade Corp. vice president and corporate secretary; Joe Robinson, president of Sexty's Jewelers; Earl Reynolds, board chairman of CH2M-Hill Engineers; Walter Munkittrick, president of Trus Joist Corp.; and John Dahl, a retired J.R. Simplot Corp. executive.

Thomas said he planned to call an organizational meeting of the committee for sometime next week. He said he expected the committee would submit a report to the mayor and City Council by Dec. 1.

Eardley appointed the task force after Winmar, of Seattle, and its local development partners earlier this summer gave up after five years of trying to line up major department stores to anchor a long-planned regional shopping mall in downtown Boise.

Winmar's decision apparently killed the 17-year drive to redevelop downtown Boise with a major shopping mall as its central part. But Eardley's committee will look at alternative methods of redeveloping the commercial heart of the city and investigate proposals to build a major mall at various suburban locations.

Also Wednesday, the Greater Boise Auditorium District formed a three-member subcommittee to work with the mayor's panel. District Board Chairman Asa Rule named Ralph Frier, Stan Daly and Don Knickstrom to the subcommittee.

Rule said the district's committee would look into the possibility of building a convention center within the eight-block downtown area vacated in the Winmar withdrawal.

Fall semester's registration breaks all records at UI MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — The one-day registration record at the University of Idaho was broken when 7,284 students signed up for fall-semester courses Tuesday, school officials said.

The figure surpassed the previous high mark of 7,018, which was set last fall, said Matt Telin, university registrar.

Telin attributed the enrollment boost to the university's popular engineering program and economic conditions that have driven unemployed college-age people to enroll.

College of Engineering enrollment was up 21 percent in the first day of registration, Telin said.

"I think the economy and unemployment certainly has a bearing on it," he said. "When students can't find work, the next best thing probably for them to do is go to school."

Telin said it was possible final fall enrollment would total more than 9,000. He said 8,998 attended the Moscow Institution in fall 1981.

The fall semester began Wednesday and runs through Dec. 17.

U.S. sues Weiser man

BOISE (UPI) — The U.S. government filed suit against a Weiser man Wednesday, claiming he owes the government more than $1,000 received when he was discharged from the Air Force.

The lawsuit lodged by assistant U.S. Attorney Jeff Ring contends Joseph M. Qualls obtained $1,345 too much when he left the service. The money was paid as a miscalculation of the leave owed Qualls and included unpaid leave for a period when Qualls allegedly was absent without permission, the suit said.

But the lawsuit said Qualls also is owed $302 in credits, leaving only about $1,050 owed the government.

State health plan granted approval

BOISE (UPI) — The state Health and Welfare Department Tuesday secured approval to the Idaho Health Plan for the next five years, officials announced Wednesday.

The plan — which also has been endorsed by Gov. John Evans — lists and describes health services and facilities in the state, upgrading a roster last reviewed in 1977.

The document in addition lists state health-care objectives and requirements for development of health services, hospitals and clinics through 1987.

Officials of the state Health Planning and Development Agency will use the study for reviews of certificate-of-need applications involving proposals for revised or new health services in hospitals and other institutions, the department said.

Symms says tax bill vote his toughest

BOISE (UPI) — Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, said Wednesday he voted for a $96-billion tax hike last week because it was part of a compromise package designed by the Reagan administration to gain backing from House Democrats.

Symms told a Boise news conference that included in the budget package also was $300 billion in spending cuts. While he said he would have preferred those cuts plus another $100 billion — rather than a tax hike — he said the president needed to compromise in order to gain support from House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill, D-Mass.

The Idaho Republican and Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, voted for the tax hike, while Reps. Larry Craig and George Hansen, both Idaho Republicans, voted against the bill. Craig also has joined other House members in a lawsuit that claims the bill was unconstitutional because it originated in the Senate, not the House.

"While Symms said he agreed with Craig and Hansen and would have preferred 'to vote against any kind of a tax increase,' he also said he believed the president needed full Senate support to, in turn, carry the House."

He also acknowledged that Craig and Hansen probably will move unscathed from their votes, but "Jim McClure and I will have to do the explaining."

"It was a tough call," Symms said. "It was probably the hardest vote I've cast since I've been in office."

"I would have preferred cuts of $400 billion, but we could never get the coalition together to do that."

Rather, he said, it pointed out that the process involved in the so-called Reaganomics "just takes a little longer."

Peace group claims theft of warhead

Demonstrators display what they claim is a stolen warhead

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Members of a peace group Wednesday said they stole four unarmed nuclear warheads from a General Electric weapons plant, but the company said it did not build warheads and the stolen material was "scrap."

Peggy McGuire of the Brandywine Peace Community said the group still has three Mark 12A warheads taken in April. She said a fourth was seized by GE security agents in May.

She said the group stole the devices to show the American people the type of weapon their tax dollars are paying for.

But GE said the group had only "scrap material" that apparently was removed from a fenced-in area at a GE plant in suburban Philadelphia.

GE said it builds re-entry vehicles for the Minuteman Mark III missile, but does not make warheads.

Pentagon spokesman Henry Catto indicated at a news conference in Washington that he thought the warhead story overblown and pointed out that no nuclear material was involved.

He said the GE plant involved was engaged in manufacturing missile casings, not nuclear warheads. "The things that they make require a very high degree of precision," he said of the casings, "and if there were any imperfections they would throw it out."

He said it was possible the peace activists got a discarded casing.

Ms. McGuire said the Mark 12As, which weigh several hundred pounds each and are about 5 feet long, were not fitted with nuclear explosives when they were taken and cannot be detonated.

"We removed them because we believe, No. 1, that they do not have a right to exist as they are mechanisms of death," she said. "We also believe they belong to the American people, since American taxpayers paid for their production. So it's not stealing; it's a matter of reclaiming something the people have paid for. People should see what they are paying for."

The GE statement said all material used by the firm as part of its government contracts is accounted for.

"The Brandywine Peace Community... has been claiming since last April that it had warheads removed from GE," the company said. "GE recovered a piece of unclassified scrap material from the group during a plant demonstration earlier this year."

A GE spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said the company was aware the items had been stolen in April.

Alaska primary produces upset

Former House Speaker Tom Fink of Anchorage scored an upset victory over Lt. Gov. Terry Miller in the Republican primary for governor of Alaska, but it will be days before the Democratic candidate is known.

Hotel businessman Steve Sheffield, maintained a slight lead Wednesday, with 18,550 votes, over attorney Steve Cooper of Fairbanks with 18,224 votes in the Democratic race. Former Lt. Gov. H.A. "Red" Boucher was a distant third with 7,408.

The uncounted rural-vote and absentee ballots will pick the winner and will not even be counted before Thursday or Friday, election officials said.

Neither candidate claimed victory or conceded defeat. In Oklahoma, Democratic Gov. George Nigh was renominated easily and state auditor Tom Daxon, a strong supporter of President Reagan, defeated House Minority Leader Neal McCaleb for the Republican nomination.

Oklahoma voters narrowly defeated a proposal that would have set up a so-called "rainy-day" state trust fund to invest the state's huge oil and gas surplus with no withdrawals for 10 years.

In Alaska, both Democratic contenders were optimistic. Sheffield contends the rural vote tally will work in his favor because early in his campaign, he covered Alaska's bush country extensively. He said he visited virtually every village.

But Cooper, a former state representative, said television has taken his campaign to the bush, where he already was well known.

On the Republican side, with 92 percent of the votes tallied, the conservative Fink had 37,004 votes to 30,830 votes for Miller, a moderate.

Miller, part of outgoing Gov. Jay Hammond's Republican administration, had been the early favorite in the race, but he conceded defeat Tuesday night.

Fink's strong conservative views apparently appealed to Alaska Republicans. During the campaign, Fink linked Miller to Hammond's moderate policies, such as development of Alaskan land and natural resources, which conservatives didn't like.

Alaska's sole member of the House, Rep. Don Young, was unopposed in the Republican congressional primary.

Hijackers commandeered jet

MUNICH, West Germany (UPI) — Two Polish jets armed with a fake bomb Wednesday hijacked a Polish airliner from Katowice, Poland, and flew it to Warsaw, where the pair gave up without a struggle.

Police said the hijackers threatened to blow up the plane, an Iljushin 18 of the Police state-owned LOT Airways. But the hijackers' "bomb" consisted of only candles and brown paper, authorities said.

The hijackers, who were armed, commandeered the plane shortly after the aircraft left Budapest at 6:35 p.m. (2:35 p.m. EDT) on a flight to Warsaw.

A police spokesman said the pilot and crew obeyed the hijackers and landed the plane at Munich's Riem international airport two hours later.

He said police boarded the plane after touchdown and arrested the two hijackers, ages 27 and 25, who gave themselves up without a struggle.

The police spokesman said the 62 passengers, 57 adults and five children — all from Eastern Europe — were escorted off the plane into the airport terminal.

The two hijackers, whose names were not immediately released, were taken to Munich police headquarters for questioning. The spokesman said one of the men said he hijacked the plane for "political reasons."

Police said none of the passengers had asked for political asylum and that the eight crew members remained aboard the plane and had asked for it to be refueled.

They said the crew was seeking permission from the Polish government in Cologne to fly the aircraft back to Poland.

The airliner was the third Polish plane to be hijacked to Western Germany this year.

Officials give stern warning

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Poland's military rulers Wednesday accused the Solidarity underground and the United States of masterminding widespread violence during next week's planned demonstrations marking the outlawed union's second anniversary.

The government vowed to crush any uprising, which observers believe could determine the future of martial law in Poland.

Statements by the Council of Ministers and Interior Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak were the toughest warning yet against nationwide rallies and protests the Solidarity underground called for Aug. 31.

The Council of Ministers statement said the underground "aims to organize allegedly peaceful demonstrations... but there are signals of preparations to open fighting with the forces of order."

Kiszczak said the union have stockpiled truncheons, Molotov cocktails, and sharpened iron bars to puncture car tires.

He warned authorities "have got enough and effective forces and means to guarantee peace and security. Public order will be protected."

In a speech broadcast nationwide on Polish television, a somber Kiszczak warned the "the instigators of these excesses take into account the possibility of bloodshed" and said "only extreme blindness or paid treason can explain a readiness to set one's own homeland on fire."

Kiszczak made it clear the government held the opposition responsible for backing the opposition to Poland's military regime.

"The so-called Polish problem is for them a splendid pretext to incite international tensions," he said. "Nobody can have the illusion that in Polish cities shows can be organized with impunity for the use of foreign television networks."

"The Americans want bloodshed not only in Lebanon and El Salvador, but also in the center of Europe — the blood of others — on which they will cheaply profit."

The planned demonstrations marking the second anniversary of Solidarity are considered a key test of strength for both the authorities and the underground. "There will be a real test of strength and the future duration of martial law will depend in a large way on what happens that day (Tuesday)," one well-placed government source said. Underground activists in Warsaw and in Gdansk have said they will either be leaving the cities or "not sleeping at home" in the days leading up to the demonstrations for fear of a police roundup of known activists.

Holiday may spark unrest

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Thousands of Polish pilgrims poured into the shrine city of Czestochowa Wednesday for religious celebrations the military regime fears may spark mass protests against its toughening martial law.

Pope John Paul II had hoped to attend Thursday's celebrations, marking the 60th anniversary of the holy Black Madonna icon, but military authorities feared his appearance would encourage protests connected with the second anniversary of the outlawed Solidarity union just five days later.

Instead, Archbishop Jozef Glemp will officiate Thursday's congregation in Czestochowa, a southern industrial center.

The Polish-born pope sent greetings to the shrine from the Vatican, Wednesday and said the image of the Virgin at Czestochowa is a "permanent expression" of Polish history.

Church sources said Glemp and other senior church officials will remain in Czestochowa Friday for a meeting — possibly to formulate an appeal for peace during the pro-Solidarity demonstrations.

Glemp's latest sermon on Aug. 15 disappointed many listeners because of its conciliatory character. While it stressed the need for dialogue between the military regime and the opposition, it did mention Solidarity or the plight of interned union activists.

Typhoon pounds Philippines, kills 19

By FERNANDO DEL MUNDO
United Press International

MANILA, Philippines — Typhoon Faye ripped across the northern Philippines and into the South China Sea Wednesday after a destructive rampage that killed at least 19 people and left thousands homeless.

The Manila Weather Bureau reported Faye nearly at a standstill in the sea 380 miles north of Manila at nightfall.

Official sources said Faye killed at least 19 people in its sweep northward since approaching Mindanao island 500 miles south of Manila five days ago.

Red Cross and government relief officials said the victims were killed by flying debris, drowned or attacked by sharks after their boats capsized.

In Iba, a coastal city 85 miles northwest of Manila, the typhoon ripped the roofs off 80 percent of the houses and 40 percent of the area's 500,000 population were left homeless, Red Cross officials said.

"Imagine a barrio (neighborhood) of 100 houses with only three left standing," said a Red Cross spokesman. "That's what happened in some barrios around Iba."

The typhoon and the torrents of rain it carried overflowed rivers, sent floods raging through lowlands, washed away roads and bridges, uprooted coconut trees and heavily damaged sugar cane and rice fields. The flooding caused more than $1.5 million in damage to crops, fishponds and buildings in the central Philippines, reports said.

The Red Cross said Faye destroyed 1,286 houses in La Union, Pangasinan and Iloilo provinces, sending 7,688 people fleeing to churches, schools and town halls.

Officials at the U.S. Subic Bay Naval Base, a 2nd fleet repair and logistics center in Zamboanga, however, reported no damage to roads and property around the base, but "I don't think it was too serious," a base spokesman said.

Faye developed from a low pressure area off Mindanao. It snaked its way northward before churning across the provinces on the west coast of the Philippines main island of Luzon where it wreaked the heaviest damage.

Claims signal escalation of Iraq-Iran conflict

By United Press International

Iraq said its warplanes scored direct hits on the main Iranian export oil terminal at Kharg Island Wednesday and Iran claimed it pounded Iraqi positions with artillery fire along all sections of the war front.

The rival claims signaled an apparent new upsurge in the stalemated 23-month-old Gulf War.

Baghdad's state-run Iraq News Agency quoted a military spokesman as saying that the attack on Kharg was in retaliation for Iranian shelling of residential areas and economic installations at Basra and Khamis on the disputed Shatt-al-Arab waterway at the head of the Persian Gulf.

"Our planes scored direct and effective hits on Kharg Island oil installations," INA quoted the military spokesman. Kharg Island is Iran's main oil gateway to the world.

The Iraqi communique gave no further details.

Ending a silence of several days on the war, Tehran's official news agency, IRNA, reported air, sea and land battles along the entire war front but made no specific mention of Kharg Island.

"Battle between the two forces continue during (the past 24 hours) with the exchange of light and heavy weapons fire on all western fronts," it said.

It said Iran pounded the Iraqi oil city of Faw with artillery and "some losses were inflicted" by Iran.

The agency quoted "reports from the front" of scores of Iraqi soldiers killed in the past 24 hours but gave no details.

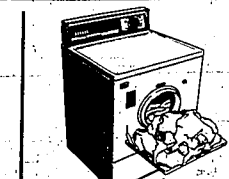

Iranian anti-aircraft batteries repelled Iraqi warplanes over the border city of Ilam Tuesday night, IRNA said. Artillery and mortar inflicted heavy damage on Iraqi positions along the southern front Wednesday morning.

Counties call council of war over tax hikes

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A strategy session involving representatives from the six counties that are at odds with the state Tax Commission tentatively has been set for next week in Twin Falls.

Meri Leonard, the president of the Idaho Association of Counties and a Twin Falls County commissioner, confirmed Wednesday that he has invited representatives of the six counties for a such a session.

The meeting has been set for 10 a.m. Tuesday. Leonard declined to elaborate further on the meeting.

But the development comes at a time when some officials are talking privately about possibly joining forces against the state Tax Commission.

"We're going to have to explore that possibility," says Doug Rose, the Lincoln County prosecutor.

Rose, who is serving as Gooding County's special counsel in its dispute with the state agency, indicated Tuesday that he had received messages "that would indicate that's the direction the other counties are moving."

So far, Gooding is the only county to mount a court challenge against the Tax Commission's order to increase property-tax assessments for some classes of property in several counties around the state. But that challenge ended in defeat Tuesday, when Judge George G. Smith of the 82nd District Court, struck down a temporary court order that banned the Tax Commission from adjusting Gooding County's tax assessments.

The four-member Tax Commission, sitting as the state Board of Equalization, is scheduled to consider the fate of Gooding County's property-tax assessments today.

Tax Commission staff members have recommended:

- A 19 percent increase on the value of residential improvements and a 7 percent increase for residential land located within Gooding County cities.
- A 14 percent hike in the value of improvements in rural residential areas within the county.

- A 15 percent increase in the value of property located within rural subdivisions.

The Tax Commission may issue a decision on the proposed assessment adjustments by Friday.

Assuming the Tax Commission follows the recommendations of its staff, Rose says he's planning to appeal the decision in the courts.

Earlier this week, the Tax Commission ordered Canyon, Bonneville, Twin Falls, Blaine and Caribou counties to increase property-tax assessments in some areas.

The orders followed hearings before the state agency.

Tax Commission officials contend such adjustments are required in order to provide equal rates of property taxation, both within the county and across the state.

However, county officials have argued that the Tax Commission is in error, and that adjustments would over-value some properties for taxing purposes.

The orders call for the following:

- Blaine County: a 27 percent increase in the value of improved residential property.
- Twin Falls County: a 15 percent increase in the value of improved residential property located within the county.
- Bonneville: a 7 percent increase in the value of improved residential property.

- Caribou County: a 34 percent increase in the value of improved residential property.
- Canyon County: a 10 percent increase for improved urban residential property and a 50 percent increase on rural residential land.

Officials in Twin Falls, Bonneville and Caribou counties say a decision to fight or comply with the Tax Commission's orders will be made by the end of the month.

However, some officials, including Prosecutor Harry DeHaan of Twin Falls County, have promised lawsuits over the issue. And Blaine County

Don Sullivan, senior vice president of research and development for Vidal Sassoon, examines the reporter's hair.

'Locks-smith' lets his hair down.

Chemist cares for coiffures

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Would you be afraid to ask a man who creates shampoo for Vidal Sassoon to evaluate your hair? I was.

But my hair passed the Don Sullivan test, although he suggested I make a few changes.

Sullivan grew up in Shoshone and Caldwell, went to school at the University of Idaho and the College of Idaho, and then went to Los Angeles seeking whatever young men sought in 1955.

Shortly after arriving there, he became an actor and was featured in dozens of grade "B" movies.

"The Giant Gila Monster still gets quite a bit of play at 2 in the morning," he says of his movie career.

Today, he is senior vice president of research and development for Vidal Sassoon Inc., and president of a Sassoon subsidiary, Don Sullivan Inc.

He went to work for Vidal Sassoon in 1973. "It was kind of a bread on the waters thing," he says.

Early in his career as a cosmetic chemist, he met a young hairdresser who wanted to know something about the chemistry of hair products. No one else would talk to him, Sullivan says, so he spent about an hour with the man and suggested some books he could read.

Eight years later, that hairdresser worked for Sullivan. "At the time, Sassoon had seen about 20 cosmetic chemists without finding one he really liked," Sullivan says.

The hairdresser suggested Sullivan.

Sassoon liked him. In fact, he still likes Sullivan, but rarely sees him.

"We don't see each other that often," Sullivan says. "We're traveling around the world in opposite directions."

Sullivan's travels brought him to Idaho for a hairdressers' conference, scheduled for the end of the week in Sun Valley. He also is promoting his Don Sullivan hair products, which were introduced recently in Idaho.

The Don Sullivan line is sold through beauty salons, instead of drugstores and supermarkets as the Sassoon products are.

Which are better?

"From my point of view, it's like comparing lemon cake to a chocolate cake. Some people like lemon, some people like chocolate," he says.

There are other shampoos as good, or nearly as good, as his, Sullivan says — something that can be obscured by the "puffery" that abounds in the business.

As an example, he said he promotes the "liquid silk" protein in his shampoos. "I could talk about 25 other ingredients that are equally important," he says. But people would only yawn. "Liquid silk has charisma."

What is more important than the products a person uses, is using them correctly, Sullivan says.

"Go to a professional hair stylist. Have them analyze your hair and suggest the right products for you," he says.

He offers several other tips for good hair care. Don't pour shampoo directly on your hair, he says. Someone with short hair should pour about enough in their hand to cover a dime, rub it between their palms and then rub it into their hair. Otherwise, there can be too much sudsing on a limited part of the head.

Also, one washing usually is enough, despite the instructions on some shampoos to lather twice.

And there is no reason to throw away blow driers, Sullivan says, just learn to keep them moving along the hair in the direction it grows. That will keep hair from being burned.

"My wife, Lucy, tints her hair, permanent waves it and has blow dried it every day of her life for 15 years," he says. "It's in perfect condition."

As for this reporter's hair, it is not perfect, but it got a good review.

"For a week prior to the interview, I used Don Sullivan shampoo and finishing rinse. Was that a long enough test?"

"You should notice it almost in one time," he says.

My hair style, which could be called "Fear of the Unknown" because I wait years before making even slight changes in it, could use more body on the side, he says.

My hair is healthy and a little finer and oilier than average, he says. His prescription is to use a molderizer and then rise the hair for several minutes. That will leave it lighter and fluffier, he says.

As for the numerous white hairs mixed in with my brown locks, the gray-haired Sullivan said they probably will not increase too much until I pass 40.

That's one problem he can't solve.

Sawtooth Forest supervisor named to replace Barker

Former Idaho ranger awarded top post

TWIN FALLS — U.S. Forest Service Chief Max Peterson has named a former forest ranger from northern Idaho to replace Paul Barker as supervisor of the Sawtooth National Forest.

Ron Stoleson, who has worked as a forest ranger for the Kenkus and Nezperce forests in Idaho, will report to the Sawtooth headquarters in Twin Falls on Oct. 5, Barker said Wednesday.

Biographical information about the new supervisor was sketchy Wednesday afternoon.

Barker said Stoleson is in his mid-40s, is a graduate of the University of Montana and works in the watershed division of the service's Washington, D.C. headquarters.

He is married and has two sons, one of whom will graduate in May from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point. The other graduated from high school in June.

Barker said he served with Stoleson when both were district rangers at the Kenkus National Forest in the Idaho Panhandle.

"It's nice to know the person replacing you and to be able to have confidence in his skills and abilities," he said.

Stoleson "is eager to get back to Idaho. He spent the greater part of his career here," Barker said.

The names of finalists are not made public, Barker said. But he termed the selection process "highly competitive," noting that Forest Service officers who qualify apply once a year to have their names included on a special roster used for such openings.

Leroy proposes state business-policy 'plan'

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Attorney General David Leroy says Idaho must establish a state business plan to help solve future economic crises.

Leroy, a Republican, announced his proposal for a state business plan while speaking Wednesday to the Twin Falls Rotary Club. He is running against state Sen. Mike Mitchell, D-Lewiston, for lieutenant governor in the November election.

He said Tuesday's unprecedented sale by the state of $109 million in tax-anticipation notes to pay outstanding bills is a sign that Idaho leaders must develop consistent relations between state government and private business.

Authorizing the tax-anticipation notes was a proper step, Leroy said, a member of the state Board of Examiners, which approved the sale.

"But it's also a proper signal that we'd better heed. This is the first time in our 32 years that we've had fiscal problems of this magnitude."

He maintains that through long-range planning, Idaho could be transformed from a raw-material state to one that processes materials.

Leroy said he said he saw a market, which means we could weather the economic crises of the future much better than we are right now," he said.

"Government is no more healthy than the business community that generates the tax revenue. Consequently, it is somewhat foolish not to have consistent relations between these two groups."

"Government is no more healthy than the business community that generates the tax revenue. Consequently, it is somewhat foolish not to have consistent relations between these two groups."

Leroy said that a future financial crisis by state government could be avoided partially by implementing a state business plan that would provide a consistent business environment: he said he saw a market, which means we could weather the economic crises of the future much better than we are right now," he said.

"Government is no more healthy than the business community that generates the tax revenue. Consequently, it is somewhat foolish not to have consistent relations between these two groups."

His proposal is somewhat like Idaho's water and energy plans, which offer general policy guidelines for state lawmakers.

Leroy cited three goals of his proposal:

- To reduce uncertainty about how government will regulate business in the future, so businessmen can plan long-range objectives more accurately.
- To create a permanent business environment so businessmen can consider more long-term investments.
- To promote competition while minimizing government interference in private enterprise.

If elected lieutenant governor, Leroy said he would like to "loosely chair over a group to develop such a plan. But it would require representation from the private sector, the Legislature and appropriate state agencies."

By selling the tax-anticipation notes to cover current expenses, Idaho is subjecting itself to a credit-rating service by New York banks and other investors, he said. And the move comes at a time when Idaho's credit is probably the weakest on record, Leroy said.

While he believes selling the notes is appropriate at this time, Leroy is not endorsing the move for ordering "the paying of 1982 bills with 1983 money."

Evans approved paying some 1982 tax refunds with 1983 funds, plus "rolling back" bill payments from the last two weeks of the 1982 fiscal year into this year. That was done by adopting new accounting methods for the state.

On paper, we still have a balanced budget, but the magnitude of our borrowing right now illustrates that we must strengthen the state's accounting methods and develop better coordination between the three accounting departments (the governor's staff, the state auditor and the Legislative Fiscal Office)," Leroy said.

Job paying $9.75 an hour lures scores of job-seekers to apply for single opening

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "Join the U.S. Postal Service," the recruiting notice could read.

You won't see the world — but you'll be paid $9.75 an hour.

The Twin Falls post office is taking applications until 5 p.m. Friday for a job with that starting salary.

A notice announcing the job was placed on the post office door last week. By Wednesday, about 135 applications had been turned in. Almost 200 more applications have been handed out but not returned yet, according to Wayne Utech, a distribution clerk who has been handling the applications.

"We usually have a fairly good response," he says, "but nothing like this."

The application is a card that can be filled out in a matter of minutes, Utech says.

No experience is required for the job. All applicants will be given a test. The person with the highest score will be first in line for the job.

But all that is not for someone who needs a job today.

"They're not going to walk in the door and get the job," Utech says.

It will take about two weeks after the application deadline to arrange to give the test. It will take another four weeks to score the tests, he says.

The person hired will work at night. Much of the work probably will be on the electronic mail-sorting machines that handle letters at a one-per-second rate. The operator has to read the ZIP code on the letter and punch the numbers onto the machine's keyboard.

The test for the job includes questions that ask a person to compare lists of numbers to see if they are identical, or to memorize a list of addresses and the blocks to which they correspond.

Utech advises that "people shouldn't be discouraged because there are a lot of applicants." In the past, 25 percent to 30 percent of the people who applied for jobs have not shown up to the test, he says.

"It's just a test. It's nothing to be afraid of. They ought to come in and try it," he says.

People who take the test will be put on a waiting list. Those who are scored. Job openings for up to two years will be filled from that roster, Utech says.

Deputy injured directing traffic at wreck site

JEROME — Two traffic accidents at the same location Tuesday night have hospitalized a truck driver and a Jerome county sheriff's deputy with serious injuries.

The first accident was reported about 6:10 on Interstate 84, near the Eden road overpass.

Cpl. Everett Waddell, of the Idaho State Police, said a tractor-trailer, operated by Douglas Orr, 32, of Ontario, Canada, dropped off the right side of the highway and overturned.

planning Orr's legs between the steering wheel.

While officers and ambulance personnel worked to free Orr, Jerome county sheriff's Deputy Ray Clark, 39, of Eden, was directing traffic around the accident, and he was struck by a passing pickup truck.

According to Waddell, two west-bound vehicles approached the accident scene, and Clark was motioning the first through the one lane still open to traffic. The first vehicle slowed down, but the second, a pickup towing a 24-foot trailer with no brakes, was unable to stop. The driver, Connie Kastler, 33, of Hazen, N.D., swerved to the right to miss the vehicle in front of her and struck Clark.

The impact threw Clark about 30 feet down the highway, according to Jerome County Sheriff Eliza Hall. He was taken to St. Benedict's Hospital in Jerome, suffering from several pelvic fractures and numerous cuts and bruises.

The hospital nursing supervisor said Wednesday night that she could not release a condition report of Clark. However, Hall said Clark was in good spirits Wednesday afternoon, but in pain.

The truck driver was planned in the truck for approximately 45 minutes and suffered fractures to one leg. He was listed in fair condition Wednesday night at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

The truck was owned by Rush Transport Co. of Massachusetts.

Kastler has been charged with failure to have proof of insurance, operating a vehicle with faulty equipment.

Addison construction work to be detailed

TWIN FALLS — Merchants whose firms are situated off Addison Avenue West in Twin Falls are invited to a meeting this morning to discuss construction work planned for the street.

The meeting is scheduled for 10 a.m. at the Addison West restaurant. The organizer is Bannock Paving Co., which will repave Addison from West Five Points to the Barger-Matson salvage yard. A Bannock spokesman said the meeting will include a discussion of the work schedule.

Bannock Paving also is the contractor for the Blue Lakes Boulevard widening project, and it has held periodic meetings with Blue Lakes merchants.

According to the Idaho Division of Highways in Shoshone, the construction project also includes replacing curbs, gutters and sidewalks along Addison, and installing curb returns that eventually will allow Martin Street and Addison to be better aligned.

LaMar Duffin, an engineer for the state, said the work began Aug. 17, with curb and gutter excavation. The entire project should be finished by mid-October, Duffin said Wednesday.

For the most part, Addison will remain open to traffic, Duffin said.

He said a brief detour affecting westbound traffic may be necessary, but he isn't sure of the time. Such a detour is at least two weeks away, he said.

Registration at Twin Falls High planned

TWIN FALLS — Registration for Twin Falls High School students will begin Friday.

National Honor Society students involved in working during the registration will register at 8 a.m. Friday. Seniors also will register Friday.

Juniors will register on Monday, and sophomores on Tuesday.

Classes begin next Wednesday, with all students reporting to their first-period classes at 8:50 a.m.

During registration, students will report to the north cafeteria doors at the high school at the following times, based on their registration day and the first letter of their last name:

A-D, 8:30 to 9:30 a.m.
E-H, 9:30 to 10:30 a.m.
I-L, 10:30 to 11:30 a.m.
M-P, 11:30 to 1:30 p.m.
Q-T, 1:30 to 2:30 p.m.

Students who do not register during the correct time will have to wait until the end of registration to choose their classes.

Sophomores and juniors will have their pictures taken for the annual at the time they register. The fee for annual pictures is $3.

Other fees payable at registration are: activity ticket, $28.50; annual, $11.50; class dues, $1; towel fee, $2 per semester; and locker rental, $2.

Deadline nearing for ISU sign-ups

TWIN FALLS — The registration deadline for Idaho State University classes offered in Twin Falls is 1 p.m. this Friday.

Persons can register at the ISU center at 140 Second St. E. in Twin Falls. More information is available by calling the center.

Jackpot dealers' hearings scheduled

ELKO, Nev. — Four 'Jackpot' card dealers charged with gaming violations have been scheduled for preliminary hearings on Oct. 26.

The hearings were scheduled Tuesday when the dealers, all employed by Cactus Pete's casino, made their first court appearances in Elko. Dealers Marvin Cox, Gary Saltas and John Healey, all of Jackpot, and Wayne Flint of Hollister were arrested Aug. 16 on charges that they cheated to help customers win at blackjack. The dealers, all represented by Elko attorney Gary Woodbury, appeared in Elko Justice Court.

According to the Elko County Sheriff's Department, no arrests have been made in connection with the warrants issued for two other Jackpot dealers, who also are suspected of committing gaming violations. Authorities have been unable to locate the two.

The four arrests were made as the result of an undercover investigation, according to Nevada Gaming Control Board officials. The arrested dealers, who are free on bond, are accused of helping blackjack players win in an effort to increase tips.

Man held for sexual abuse of child

TWIN FALLS — A 38-year-old man was arrested Wednesday and charged with sexually abusing a 13-year-old girl.

Jerrie Ramo, Route 4, Twin Falls, is being held in the county jail in lieu of $25,000 bond. He is set to be arraigned in Fifth District Magistrate Court today on a charge of having lewd conduct with a minor.

Twin Falls police allege that Ramo forced the girl to have sexual intercourse and oral sex with him over an 18-month period. The last incident occurred Aug. 10, police said.

Van sought in hit-and-run case

JEROME — Merl Leavitt of Jerome watched helplessly as a van, carrying a hoist with a loose chain and steel hook, rounded a corner Wednesday in Jerome and the chain swung into the sides of two parked vehicles, on his own.

Police Chief Darrell Cameron said the vehicle did not stop. Damage to both parked vehicles has been estimated at $300 each.

The other damaged vehicle belonged to Charlotte French of Jerome, he said.

The incident occurred about 11:35 a.m. in the 200 block of Main Street East.

Officers are looking for the van, which was described as white with red, orange and gold striping on the sides.

Prosecutor 'dismisses' suit against him

HAILEY — Blaine County Prosecutor Keith Roark said Wednesday that he has not been notified formally of a state prison inmate's $140,000 lawsuit filed against him last week.

"Apparently, that particular convict has determined that it's better to serve UP (United States Prison) than the defendant, which is an interesting proposition," Roark said.

Last week, the wire service reported that prison inmate Robert Bruce Pyne had filed a lawsuit, claiming that Roark refused to honor his right to vote in the 1980 general election. At the time, Pyne was being held in the Blaine County Jail, pending a deposition in a criminal case.

Pyne later was sentenced to a fixed five-year term in the state penitentiary at Boise, a fact that Roark believes is at the heart of the lawsuit.

"He was sent to a determinate term of five years, and I have very adamantly opposed commutation of that term to an indeterminate term, which would allow him to be paroled," Roark said. "I'm assuming that his real aggravation in this case has nothing to do with the election of 1980 and has everything to do with the fact that he's serving a five-year determinate term in the Idaho State Penitentiary because of the role I took in his case."

In his lawsuit, Pyne contends he was stopped from voting when a volunteer at the polls found that his voter registration card included the inscription, "denied per Prosecutor Roark."

The lawsuit contends that Pyne was subjected to a "systematic and concerted effort to deprive plaintiff of his constitutionally secured right to suffrage," and seeks $140,000 in damages, including $20,000 as punishment and another $20,000 as a deterrent.

Roark said he had advised the election clerk that Pyne had been convicted of a felony in Florida. Under the state Constitution, anyone who has been convicted of a felony is disqualified from voting, Roark said.

Taxes

Prosecutor Keith Roark said Wednesday that he would recommend such action Friday at a meeting of county officials.

"I think there's a very strong likelihood that we will now have to pursue this matter in the courts," Roark said.

"We feel like we've given the Tax Commission every reasonable opportunity to take a second look at this issue and to provide some due process rights to those affected taxpayers. They obviously aren't going to accept that opportunity."

Looking beyond the current dispute, Carlos Bledsoe, the chairman of the Canyon County Board of Commissioners, promises he will push for legislation next year to curb the Tax Commission's power.

"If nothing else, we'll go for a constitutional amendment to strip them of their authority. I'm a blued eyed Missourian, and they've got me mad," he says.

Oil stocks revive rally on 4th busiest day

By FRANK W. SLUSSER
United Press International

NEW YORK — Oil issues revived the stock market's record-shattering summer rally Wednesday. They drove prices broadly higher on 106.2 million shares, the fourth busiest day in New York Stock Exchange history.

Lower interest rates, which sparked some new large takeover bids, also continued to play a major role in the rally that gave the market its seventh gain in the past nine sessions.

The Dow Jones average, down at the outset following Tuesday's 16.27-point plunge, rebounded to gain 9.99 points to 884.88. It had been about 14 at mid-afternoon. Still, the closely watched average, which hit an eight-month high Monday, is up 107.97 points over the past nine sessions.

Oil, which weighs heavily in the Dow-Jones average, came to life following Iraq claims its warplanes bombed the main Iranian oil terminal at Kharg Island in the Persian Gulf, scoring direct hits.

The NYSE volume of 106,200,000 shares, down from the Tuesday's 121,650,000 shares, marked the third consecutive 100 million-share day this week and the fourth in Big Board history.

Tuesday's turnover trailed only the record 132,690,000 traded a week ago and was up from the 110.31 million traded Monday. More than 840 million shares have been traded since the rally began Aug. 13.

Robert Stavall, Dean Witter Reynolds vice president, was "surprised we hit 100 millions shares again. I thought things would cool off. But it looks like the market is saying it doesn't want to go down and investors are shopping around for previously unwanted stocks."

The New York Stock Exchange index rose 1.29 to 67.39 and the price of an average share increased 53 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index jumped 2.24 to 117.58. Advances routed declines 1,281-403 among the 1,979 issues traded.

Analysts said institutional money managers swung into action along with the smaller investor when they saw early profit taking was not going to drive prices sharply lower.

No one wanted to be left out of the rally. The Federal Reserve will cut its discount rate to member banks soon. Traders were encouraged Chemical Bank lowered its broker loan rate to 10 1/2 percent from 11 1/2 percent. Banks recently adopted a 13 1/2 percent prime lending rate, the lowest in nearly two years.

Federal funds rates banks loan one another for overnight loans dropped to 8 1/2 percent from 9, adding to the persistent speculation the Federal Reserve will cut its discount rate to member banks soon.

Bond prices, which had a record rally last week, were steady.

While many analysts believe the stock market could lead the economy's recovery, some traders still were disturbed there have been few other signs of improvement. Mid-August auto sales plunged 35 percent and retail sales have been nearly flat.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 123,240,720 shares compared with 142,617,710 traded Tuesday.

The American Stock Exchange index soared 6.35 to 271.63 and the price of a share jumped 26 cents. Advances topped declines 438-177 among the 310 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 7,856,390 shares compared with 8,876,800 Tuesday.

The National Association of Securities Dealers' NASDAQ index of OTC stocks gained 2.70 to 174.93.

On the trading floor, oil was in the spotlight. Exxon rose 1 1/2 to 29 in heavy trading. Atlantic Richfield gained 2 1/2 to 38 1/2. Getty 1 1/2 to 48 1/2. Mobil 1/2 to 23 1/2. Phillips Petroleum 1 1/2 to 22 1/2. California Standard 2 1/2 to 29. Indiana Standard 1 1/2 to 40 1/2. Ohio Standard 1 1/2 to 32 1/2. Superior 2 1/2 to 27. and Texaco 1/2 to 29 1/2.

Martin-Marietta, which gained 2 1/2 points Tuesday, soared 8 1/2 to 39 1/2 with blocks of 323,000 shares at 40 and 125,000 shares at 39 1/2. Bendix dropped 2 1/2 to 50. Bendix offered $43-a-share cash for 45 percent of Martin-Marietta's stock.

Great Western Financial was the most active NYSE-listed issue, up 1/2 to 16 1/2; after blocks of 208,000 shares and 100,000 shares, both at 16 1/2, 100,000 shares and 145,000 shares, both at 17, and 100,000 shares at 17 1/2.

Continental Illinois was second on the active list, unchanged at 16 1/2 in trading that included a block of 1,300,000 shares at 16 1/2. The bank, which has been in the spotlight for months in the wake of some bad loans, said it did not know who was involved in the block trade.

IBM, which has been in the forefront of the rally, was the third most active issue, up 1/2 to 69 1/2 with a block of 100,000 shares at 70.

American Telephone & Telegraph (ex-dividend), which dropped 1 1/2 Tuesday, rose 1 to 56 1/2 in heavy trading.

On the Amex, Champion Home Builders was the most active issue, up 1/2 to 3 1/2. Dome Petroleum followed, up 1-16 to 3 1/2-16.

Utah company offers to buy Cities Service gas facilities

By ROZ LISTON
United Press International

NEW YORK — Northwest Energy Co. said Wednesday it has made a cash offer to buy the natural gas transmission facilities of Cities Service Co., which is attempting to fight off an unwelcome takeover by Occidental Petroleum Corp.

Northwest, a pipeline company based in Salt Lake City, Utah, would not disclose the dollar value of its offer.

Cities Service's board, which has been frantically soliciting bids from other parties since Occidental launched its $1.9 billion offer for 49 percent of the nation's 19th largest oil company Aug. 19, met in New York Wednesday afternoon.

Cities Service asked the New York Stock Exchange to halt trading in its stock pending an announcement later in the day. There was no immediate reaction from Cities Service on the Northwest development.

Reports also circulated that the Cities Service board had rejected an offer from Texas Gas Transmission Corp. to purchase its gas transmission facilities and that Koch Industries was seriously interested in its Lake Charles, La., refinery.

In Wichita, Kan., a Koch spokeswoman confirmed her company was talking to the Cities Service refining, marketing and transportation division.

The Cities Service board met three days before Occidental's $50-a-share cash tender offer for 38.2 million Cities Service shares expires at midnight Friday. Occidental plans to acquire the rest of Cities Service in an unspecified securities swap.

Since Cities Service shareholders are expected to offer more shares than Occidental has agreed to purchase, analysts believe other bidders must make their move for the Tulsa, Okla., firm before the Friday deadline.

"We put in our case, we made our offer and we're waiting," said a spokesman for Los Angeles-based Occidental, ranked 12th in the U.S. oil industry.

Occidental Chairman Dr. Armand Hammer, who was in New York Wednesday morning, was due to leave before the Cities Service board convened.

A Cities Service spokesman had no comment on the company's request for a trading halt.

Cities Service stock rose $2.25 to $45 a share in active trading Tuesday amid expectations a sweeter bid from Occidental or another suitor could be imminent. Cities Service stock did not open Wednesday in line with its request to the NYSE.

Cities Service directors rejected Occidental's $50-a-share offer as "inadequate" Monday but asked shareholders to make their own decision in an apparent move to protect itself against suits in the event it fails to find a better alternative.

Cities Service threatened to liquidate if a suitable merger partner did not surface after Gulf Oil Corp. backed out of its $4.8 billion takeover deal Aug. 8.

Earlier this week Cities Service said it had received "serious expressions of interest" and "proposals" from several companies involving its $700 million gas pipeline system and its $1.2 billion refining and marketing operations.

Last week Amerasia Hess Corp. said it was exploring a possible purchase of Cities Service refining, marketing and transportation assets. The announcement sparked reports that another major oil company may join Amerasia and acquire Cities Service oil and gas properties.

M-K near waste storage job

BOISE (UPI) — Worldwide contractor Morrison-Knudsen Co. is close to final agreement on a contract for a $300 million federal project to upgrade radioactive waste storage sites, a U.S. Energy Department official says.

Boise-based M-K is the prime contender for a contract to oversee construction work at 24 low-level radioactive waste sites in 10 states, said Energy Department project engineer Mark Matthews.

Agency officials said the project was necessary to bring the waste disposal sites up to federal health standards.

Matthews said the government planned to cover or remove tailings and uranium mill sites to reduce possible health hazards from radon-gas emissions and to prevent groundwater contamination.

The sites listed in the project are in Utah, Oregon, New Mexico, Colorado, Arizona, Wyoming, North Dakota, Texas and Pennsylvania, Matthews said.

The project has been slated by Congress to begin in January 1983.

Mill project stretches out

CAMAS, Wash. (UPI) — Crown Zellerbach Corp.'s $425-million modernization of its 2,000-employee pulp and paper mill will take six months longer to finish because of a corporate decision to improve the firm's cash flow, officials say.

Completion of the work is now scheduled for early 1985 instead of fall 1984, Carol Eckert, a Crown spokeswoman, said Tuesday.

Levitz sales, earnings down

MIAMI (UPI) — Levitz Furniture Corp. Wednesday reported lower net sales and earnings for the second quarter ended July 31.

The nation's largest specialty retailer of home furnishings showed net sales of $116.9 million versus $120.6 million reported in the 1981 second quarter. Net income for the latest quarter was $1.18 million or 29 cents a share, against $1.69 million or 45 cents in the similar year-ago period.

Six month sales totaled $221.8 million compared with $242.6 million in the 1981 first half. Net income amounted to $750,000 or 18 cents a share compared with $1.02 million or 26 cents.

Timber transfer called off

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A U.S. Department of Interior proposal to transfer thousands of acres of federal timber land in Northern California to the Louisiana-Pacific Corp. to settle a four-year-old claim has been dropped.

"As I stated to you last week, the issue is far too easily misunderstood," Undersecretary of the Interior Donald P. Hodel wrote L-P President Harry A. Merio. "We believe it is, therefore, appropriate to lay aside further consideration of your proposal, and that we have done."

The Portland-based wood-products firm sought the timber to settle its claim that the federal government failed to pay fully for 25,600 acres of redwood forest it seized from L-P in 1978 to expand Redwood National Park.

Bin-busting grain crops mean continued low farm prices

Thursday, August 26, 1982 Timea-News, Twin Falls, Idaho B-7

By RICHARD ORR
Chicago Tribune

The blockbuster corn and soybean production estimates of 8.3 billion and 2.3 billion bushels, respectively, insure a price and income disaster for farmers and United States export earnings for the next 12 months or more, a storage glut affecting most of the country, and an extended period of federal program activity.

That gloomy assessment of the outlook for grain and soybean producers comes from Schnitker Associates, a Washington-based private economic consulting firm. Gary Ellis, market analyst with the Illinois Farm Bureau, agrees with this low price scenario, except that he describes the outlook as a "continuing disaster."

Ellis believes the record corn crop forecast by the U.S. Department of Agriculture could push cash prices for corn to the $1.50 to $1.75 per bushel range in the Midwest at harvest time. Soybean prices could fall below $4.50 a bushel for a short time, Ellis believes. The traditional harvest-time low prices may precede the harvest this year, Ellis said. Recently, cash prices for corn at central Illinois local elevators have been between $2.05 and $2.15 per bushel. Soybean prices at these elevators have been below $5.50 a bushel. The federal price support loan rate is $2.55 a bushel for corn and $5.02 a bushel for soybeans. Ellis said he has been basing his forecast of low prices on his belief that the corn crop was potentially larger than the record 8.3 billion bushel crop the USDA had forecast. With good weather through September and on until harvest, the crop could be as large as 8.5 billion bushels, he said.

"The potential size of the crop could be lowered if the gods are not good to us during September. We need a full growing season for a maximum harvest. If frost should cut short the growing season, price improvement will be seen," he said. The outlook for a second successive record corn crop and a near record wheat crop of 2.77 billion bushels (down 1 percent from last year's record) indicate the failure of the Reagan administration's voluntary acreage reduction program. Secretary of Agriculture John Block had asked corn and other feed grain producers to cut acreage by 10 percent and Block continues to resist pressures for paid acreage diversion programs for 1983 crops. He has already called for a 20 percent acreage reduction; payments, without payments, for next year's wheat crop.

Ads point to more jobless

NEW YORK (UPI) — Help-wanted advertising in the nation's largest newspapers decreased again in July, signaling that the nation may be in for at least one more hike in the unemployment rate, the Conference Board reported.

The Board's Help-Wanted Advertising Index fell to 80 in July from 85 in June and down from 123 in July of last year.

"Given the historical fact that the labor market lags the recovery in general, the latest figures can be taken as strong evidence that the unemployment rate will rise at least one more notch before turning down," Kenneth Goldstein, economist at the Conference Board, said.

The drop in classified advertising in 51 major newspapers across the country was seen in all regions measured in the survey. The Middle Atlantic region was hit the hardest, posting an 8 percent decline.

But Goldstein said no part of the country has been immune from joblessness. "This has been one of the fiercest recessions in recent times in that it's affected every area. Some sections have been devastated, others have simply been hit hard."

The South Central region posted a 7.1 percent decline in help-wanted advertisements; Pacific region 6.9 percent; Mountain region, 6.4 percent; West-North-Central region, 6.1 percent; East South Central, 6 percent; East North Central, 5.5 percent; New England 2.9 percent; South Atlantic 1.6 percent.

Goldstein said even if the economy has turned the corner and there is evidence of a firming, "the recovery is expected to be weak and slow and won't have any impact on joblessness for some time."

"There will be an end to this, there will be a recovery," Goldstein said. "But these numbers for July say that it hasn't happened yet and it won't happen in the next couple of months."

Comex hikes its margins on futures

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Commodity Exchange Inc. said Wednesday it was increasing the margin requirements on gold, silver and copper futures, effective with the opening of trading today.

Margins are funds posted during the trading life of a futures contract to guarantee fulfillment of the contract obligations.

The exchange said the speculative margin requirement for a 500 troy ounce contract of gold futures was increased $200 to $2,500 from $2,300 — while the hedge margin requirement was raised $300 — to $1,500 from $1,200.

For a 5,000 troy ounce contract of silver futures the speculative margin was increased $700 to $3,700 while the hedge requirement was increased $500 to $2,500.

The Comex said for a 25,000 pound contract of copper futures the speculative margin requirement was increased $200 to $1,000 and the hedge requirement $200 to $700.

Matt Zachowski, a spokesman for the exchange said the margin changes resulted from a special meeting of the Comex Margin Committee, which was called to review exchange margins in "light of increased price volatility."

Zachowski added that all margin changes are retroactive and therefore apply to previously existing positions as of that date.

Banks post rates

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Home Loan Banks Wednesday announced the following rates posted for consolidated discount notes: 30-90 days, 5.75 percent; 91-189 days, 7.40 percent; 190-219 days, 9.20 percent; 220-249 days, 9.20 percent; and 250-360 days, 8.50 percent.

The six primary dealers for the notes are Discount Corp. of New York, First Boston Corp., Aubrey, G. Lantson & Co., Wm. E. Pollack & Co., Bank of America and Goldman Sachs & Co.

Seat price rises

NEW YORK (UPI) — A membership seat on the New York Stock Exchange — sold — Wednesday — for $210,000, up $20,000 from the previous sale on June 2.

The exchange said membership seats are currently bid at $172,000 and offered at $240,000.

Opposes objections by Twin Falls Jerome County endorses land-swap plan

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — A Bureau of Land Management official told the Jerome County commissioners Monday that a protest from the city of Twin Falls to a proposed land exchange does not necessarily kill the plan.

Joe Aitken, a BLM really specialist with the Shoshone District, said the protest will be reviewed, along with the benefits of the proposal.

Known as the Thorn Creek land exchange, the proposal involves trading 900 acres owned by the Thorn Creek Cattle Association in Gooding and Lincoln counties, near the Thorn Creek Reservoir, for BLM land of equal value along U.S. 93, south of Interstate 84 in Jerome County.

Jerome County's commissioners questioned the Twin Falls protest, which is based on what Twin Falls officials claim is a threat to the aquifer that serves the city's water supply from springs in the Snake River Canyon.

"They (Twin Falls city administrators) were not so worried about their aquifer when they wanted to dump their sewage (sludge from the Twin Falls treatment plant) in our county," said Commissioner Russell Howell Jr.

He and other members of the Jerome County commission said they believe Twin Falls' officials are really more concerned about the threat of commercial development between the interstate and Twin Falls.

Presently, many tourists following the interstate through Idaho turn off on U.S. 93 and stop in Twin Falls for shopping, lodging and meals.

The Jerome commissioners, who strongly support additional commercial development in their county, say they want a share of the sales-tax revenue from the tourism trade that is now going to Twin Falls. They think that is the main concern of Twin Falls officials.

The roughly 135 acres involved in the proposed land swap represent part of a 2,500-acre BLM land study north of the Snake River.

Aitken and Jane Mulhall, the BLM district's recreation planner, also discussed a proposal from Jerome County for public recreation development in the canyon, just below the Jerome golf course.

The area is a favorite fishing spot, the commissioners said, and they do not want it sold to private interests that might preclude public uses.

Aitken said BLM land-use plans have designated the area for recreation. But to turn the 106-acre parcel over to the county would require a detailed proposal for developing the site. He also warned that access might pose a bigger problem, since the existing road is privately owned.

Mulhall said she is working on a recreational study of all BLM land along the north side of the Snake River.

The Jerome County Club wants to extend its land ownership to the edge of the canyon for additional golf-course development, Aitken said. The commissioners said they have no objection to that plan since their interest is in the property below the canyon rim.

Jerome fixes streets with city crews

JEROME — There are three-and-a-half miles of resurfaced streets in Jerome, which have been finished at a cost of only $28,000 for materials.

City crews did the work with city-owned equipment, according to Lanny Sloan, the city's public-works director. He said that allowed Jerome to stretch its available funds a lot further.

"Of course, we have to consider the manpower in the costs, too, but there are only the regular salaries of the regular employees involved," he said.

He said most of the work was completed in a four-day period, with the concentrated efforts of all street department workers.

As part of the work, crews reconstructed about two blocks of Rainier Drive in the north end of town. That included regrading and resurfacing. Another block of reconstruction work was done on East 11th Street.

Seal-coat work extended over a major portion of Buchanan Street, some on Second and Sixth streets, and on various spots throughout town.

"The seal-coating is designed to save the streets we have and protect them in the event of another severe winter," Sloan said. "With short-money budgets, it is important to keep existing streets in good condition and eliminate as much total reconstruction as we can."

He said it is the plan of his department to maintain the streets with some additional seal-coating and improvements each year.

"There were a lot of other streets we would like to have covered this year, but it all depends on the amount of money available for the work," Sloan said.

Last winter's severe weather caused more road damage than normal, he said. Patching repairs took about $10,000 for material and another $15,000 in labor costs from the street department's budget. Work extended over a period of about two months.

Lincoln Street sewer project to be planned

JEROME — An organizational meeting to plan a sewer-improvement project, covering the area just south of Jerome, has been scheduled for this Tuesday, Aug. 31, at 7:30 p.m. in the Jerome County commissioners' office.

All property owners along South Lincoln Street between the Jerome city limits and Interstate 84 are asked to attend.

The purpose of the proposed sewer district is to raise the needed local funds, estimated at $63,000, to pay for the installation of a sewer system that would serve existing property owners and encourage additional commercial development in that area.

Gerald Martens, a consulting engineer for Jerome County, and Donna Batch-Petrie, a planner with the Region IV Development Association, met with the county commissioners on Monday to urge them to push for the project.

Martens said that the county could act as the sponsor of an application for federal block-grant money, which — along with the local funding — would finance the $289,500 project. He is currently preparing the application, which must be filed by Sept. 17, he said.

Batch-Petrie said that with credit for the work already done, the project needs $237,500. Under the Economic Development Administration's grant system, the project would be eligible for 60 percent financing, or $173,000, leaving the $63,000 figure to be raised locally.

Martens suggested that the county go ahead with the EPA application. If funding is not approved there, he suggested approaching the federal Farmers Home Administration as an alternate source of financing.

Commissioner Russell Howell Jr., who met recently with the Jerome Chamber of Commerce to discuss the project, said the chamber is in full support of the proposal. He said that he believes most of the property owners also support it, although some objected when an earlier grant application was submitted, unsuccessfully.

Filer begins search for firm to replace well that collapsed

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

FILER — At a special meeting next Monday night, Filer City Council will select a company to dig a new municipal water well northwest of town.

The well will replace one that collapsed in May. It had provided 50 percent of the city's water supply during periods of peak need.

Filer was awarded an emergency grant of $5,670 from the state Division of Economic and Community Affairs on Aug. 17 to drill the well.

Monday council received verbal estimates on the cost of constructing a new well from Chuck Jones of Kimberly and Arnold Elasing of Twin Falls.

Council's decision to dig a new well, rather than repair the one that caved in, was based on several professional opinions, including those of Jones and Anderson and Kelly, a geological firm from Boise.

Scott Bybee, the city's engineer, said a report received from Keith Anderson of Anderson and Kelly "basically agreed with what they (city officials) have heard all along. They recommended a new well be drilled."

Since a state of emergency was declared this month by Mayor Perry Dyke, council can hire a well driller immediately, without the delay involved in a bidding process.

The grant money should be available to the city within the next few weeks, and construction on the new well should start early next week, Bybee said.

Once construction is under way, it can take a week to a month to dig the well, Bybee said. But even after the well is drilled, it may take six weeks to two months to finish installation of equipment and a pump house, he said.

Until everything is working again, the soonest the water system will be back in (order) is the end of September," Bybee said.

In the meantime, Filer residents have been requested to use an odd-even system of watering their lawns. Residents with odd-numbered addresses can water on odd-numbered days and vice versa.

Residents should also try to water "early in the morning or late in the evening," the mayor said, and "just the least they can get."

Because the Twin Falls County Fair is due to start in Filer early in September, which would be an additional burden upon the already limited city water supply, the fair board has volunteered the use of its irrigation well.

The state Department of Health and Welfare has approved connecting the fair's well to the city water supply for the eight-day period during fair week, he said.

However, the well, which pumps 350 to 400 gallons of water per minute and will replace a third of the water the city has lost, "must be physically disconnected after the fair," Bybee said.

Also, the fair board's well "actually was not intended for domestic use and does not meet all the requirements on 'Health and Welfare' wells," he said.

In order to bring the well up to domestic-use standards, the Department of Health and Welfare has loaned the city a chlorinator, he said.

At last After three attempts, Jerome finally awards bid for library roof

JEROME — The third time was the charm for the Jerome Library roofing project.

Bids were opened Friday in a third attempt by Jerome City Council to get a successful bid on reroofing the building.

On Tuesday, crews showed up and began work. Early this spring, the city took bids for insulation and a new roof for the building only to have all of the bids come in well above the budget for the project.

The first bids were rejected and the specifications were redrawn to cut costs. In July, another bid opening was held on the new specifications. Two bids were received within the budgeted amount, but neither contractor held the required state public works permit. Recently, City Council decided enough time had been lost waiting for one or the other to obtain the permit, and the bids were again rejected.

At the Friday bid opening, Beck's Urethane Roofing of Heyburn submitted a bid of $9,000, and the contract was awarded Monday.

Tuesday, workers from the Heyburn firm began removing gravel from the old roof, according to Lanny Sloan, Jerome's public-works director. By today, the company is expected to be spraying the first urethane coating.

Sloan said that urethane meets the city's specifications by providing insulation, and carries a five-year warranty by the manufacturer and the contractor. After the urethane is sprayed on the roof to the proper thickness, it will be covered by another coating of material that protects it from the sun and weather.

The contract calls for completion of the job by Sept. 30, Sloan said, but he expects the work to be finished earlier.

Commissioners give up pay hike

Jerome County proposes lean budget

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Jerome County's budget for the next fiscal year, showing expenditures of $684,097 less than the 1982 budget, tentatively was approved Monday.

A public hearing on the document will be held at 10 a.m. on Tuesday, Sept. 7.

The commissioners have approved a final budget total of $1,768 million. They met in several special sessions prior to Monday to spread the necessary cuts over the various county departments.

Because revenue is down this year, departmental requests had to be trimmed by about $200,000 to stay within the available resources, the commissioners said.

Revenue for the coming year is down in several categories, including federal revenue-sharing, federal in-lieu-of-tax payments and sales-tax allocations.

The largest reduction in the budget over last year is in the public-works department. This fund was budgeted at $684,940 and funded largely through state and federal grant money to pay for the runway addition. This year, the budget for the airport is only $15,000, which includes $6,000 in contract payments to the airport operator-manager.

The commissioners have cut their own salary increases, along with a proposed additional 50 percent for the chairman, who has extra duties handling county business on non-meeting days. The commissioners proposed budget of $21,000 for salaries was cut to $18,000, the same figure as this year.

Expenses for the commissioners also were left at the same figure as 1982 — $2,400. The commissioners' budget totals $21,480, or $150 less than the total for this year. The 1982 budget contained $180 for telephone expenses, but that was eliminated in the proposed 1983 budget.

The total current-expense budget, which includes salaries and operating expenses for various departments, will total $1,768 million, compared to $682,742 last year. As tentatively proposed, the budget allows a $5-per-month flat salary increase for all county employees.

In addition to current expenses, the county's revenue-sharing budget is only $306,207, compared to $402,800 last year. It includes $3,500 for each of the two senior-citizen organizations in the county, $20,000 for computer software (paper and other supplies), $3,000 for additional computer equipment and $31,000 for maintenance, equipment and additional supplies.

Other revenue-sharing funds have been divided among all departments to cover capital expenditures, equipment, supplies and repairs, leaving $5,000 to pay for the completion of the Murtaugh Bridge.

At the budget hearing, residents can comment and ask questions about the proposal. However, the total amount of the budget cannot be increased prior to being finalized following the hearing.

Jerome zoning commission will consider dairy request

JEROME — Two items will be on the agenda when the Jerome County Planning and Zoning Commission meets Monday night.

The commission will hear a request from Ralph Mallee for a permit to establish a dairy. He is proposing a facility that would accommodate 300 head of dairy cattle at a site two miles south and four miles west of Jerome.

The other request is for a zoning change on agricultural land owned by Dick Marshall. The land is near the intersection of U.S. 93 and Idaho 23, east of Jerome.

4-H youths get two new guide dogs

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

GOODING — Two new guide-dog puppies are being reared for their future careers by Gooding County youngsters.

Tricia Michaels of Gooding is now working with her third guide-dog puppy under the Guide Dogs for the Blind Inc. program, based in San Rafael, Calif. Her new dog, Tomika, is a German shepherd, the first of that particular breed that the family has had.

The other new puppy, Liss, a yellow Labrador, was brought back from the San Rafael following an Aug. 5 field day for 4-H club members. Her "guardian" during the early training period is Ardee Diehl of Wendell. It is Ardee's first 4-H project involving the guide-dog program.

Eileen Michaels of Gooding, who started the guide-dog projects in the Magic Valley when her family adopted "Uncle" two years ago, said the popularity of the dogs is growing. Tricia Michaels worked with Uncle, then Monk and now Tomika.

Five members from the 4-H dog club in Gooding County attended the field day at San Rafael.

In the year that the dogs spend with the 4-H club members, they attend school and church events, athletic games and contests, go shopping and dining and generally travel as they would when accompanying a blind person. The purpose of the program is to give the dogs initial training, before they complete their education at the San Rafael kennels.

At the field day, Mrs. Michaels said the 4-H club members had an opportunity to observe all phases of the training programs that teach the dogs to become guides and companions to blind individuals.

During the field day, instructors from the organization worked with club members to help them with techniques for handling and teaching their dogs.

About 250 4-H members from California, Alaska, Arizona, Idaho, Nevada and Oregon attended the event.

Reception for Uncle honors area's first guide-dog graduate

GOODING — An unusual open house will honor an unusual guest Sunday afternoon in Gooding.

The guest of honor will be a large yellow Labrador retriever.

Between 2 and 4 p.m. friends of Uncle, a guide dog for the blind who lived in Gooding County for 10 months in 1980, are invited to meet him and his owners during a brief visit in his former home.

The event will be held at the home of Albert and Eileen Michaels, southwest of Gooding. Accompanying him to Gooding will be his new owner, Maids Pottinger, and her daughter, Anna. The trio will arrive in Gooding on Saturday, and the two women will be getting acquainted with the Michaels and their daughter, Tricia, who served as the guide dog's first trainer.

Uncle was the first guide-dog 4-H project in the Magic Valley, and he accompanied Tricia and other family members as they went to school, church, shopping and other events, before returning to San Rafael, Calif., in August, 1981.

There, he underwent specialized training in guide work and in February, he met Maids.

Bloodmobile will visit in Jerome

JEROME — The American Red Cross bloodmobile will be in Jerome on Tuesday, Sept. 7.

The quota for the blood drawing, which will be held in the Moose Lodge from noon to 4 p.m., is 110 pints.

For more information, call Edna Pierson, the Jerome blood chairman, at 324-5724.

Elmore County grange plans picnic

KING HILL — The Elmore County Panoma Grange picnic will be held this Sunday at 1:30 p.m. at Hull Memorial Park in Glenns Ferry.

The King Hill Grange will host the event, furnishing all drinks. Those attending are asked to bring a covered dish and their own table service.

No progress made in NFL contract talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Representatives of NFL players and owners met for four hours Wednesday but did not report any progress in their quest for a new contract.

Both sides agreed that no progress was made during the first session in six weeks. No further meetings were scheduled.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the National Football League Players Association, said the union's executive committee would meet Sunday in Chicago to "determine what the next step will be."

"We'll discuss whether or not there'll be a strike and if so when. Your imagination is as good as ours in determining what the next action might be," Garvey said.

But earlier, after three hours of talks, Jack Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council, which represents league owners, smiled and said, "We are moving right along."

The talks were held at the players union headquarters in Washington, D.C.

The two sides met at the NFLPA offices in Washington, D.C., their first meeting in six weeks.

Donlan presented a league offer on July 13 that the union rejected the following day. They have not met since.

"(NFL Commissioner) Pete Rozelle testified last week in Congress that they will make $18 million more this year from television," said Garvey. "But when we asked Donlan for a way to get even one dollar of that money into the hands of the players, he had no response."

The union is asking to have 55 percent of the league's gross revenues placed in a trustee-administered fund that would be distributed to players under a salary-bonus system. The owners, through Donlan, have flatly rejected the idea.

However, Garvey said the union is flexible.

"If he can come up with something sharing the revenue that doesn't mean firing more experienced, more expensive players, we'll listen," said Garvey. "So far they haven't."

Talks began in February in Miami and have continued while alternating between New York and the nation's capital. At the Washington Redskins, Stan White of the Detroit Lions and John Bunting of the Philadelphia Eagles took part in Wednesday's session.

Garvey said players would continue to attend the sessions as long as there is "something meaningful taking place," but said they will return to their training camps if no progress is made.

Gene Upshaw of the Oakland Raiders, the NFLPA president, did not attend Wednesday's session but spoke with Garvey by telephone prior to the meeting.

"The players are just 17 days from starting the regular season," said Garvey. "We've talked to several players and they say we have to get a message across that we're willing to strike. Obviously the owners are not getting that message."

Garvey refused to speculate on the possibility of some sort of job action during exhibition games this weekend. Several players were fined for shaking hands with their opponents before earlier exhibition games, but the fines were later rescinded.

Braves' streak stopped

Fernando homers, puts L.A. into lead by United Press International Atlanta's string of come-from-behind victories finally ran out Wednesday night, but it took ex-Brave Gary Matthews to turn the trick.

Matthews hammered a three-run homer in the eighth inning to tie the score 9-9 and then singled in the 10th to drive home the winning run and give Philadelphia an 11-9 victory at Atlanta, snapping the Braves' six-game winning streak.

The Phillies' victory, coupled with Los Angeles' 11-3 win over St. Louis, put the Dodgers in first place in the National League West and left the Phillies only two games behind the Cardinals in the East.

"We got a big lead (6-0) in this game but they came back and gave us all we wanted," said Matthews. "We've had a pretty good road trip. To get this victory and be going back home just two games behind, we are right where we want to be."

Matthews, who had four hits and drove in four runs, said Braves' pitcher Rick Mahler had struck him out on a change-up on his previous trip to the plate prior to his home run.

"I decided he wasn't going to get me on a change again, he said. 'He threw me a fast ball and hit it out.' Gary Maddox said the win was a big one, especially since the Phillies had blown big first-inning leads two straight nights.

"When you get six runs in the first inning, you expect it to be enough," said Maddox. "The Braves battled when they had to and we did also."

"To be going back home just two games behind after this long road trip is going to be good for us," said Maddox. "We were down in this one and could easily have lost it."

Manny Trillo opened the Phillies' 10th with a double off Atlanta reliever Gene Garber, 6-7, and Matthews followed with a sharp single to right, with Trillo beating Claude Washington's throw to the plate.

Matthews was thrown out trying to reach third on the play, but the Phillies added another run on consecutive singles by Mike Schmidt, Bo Diaz, Gary Maddox — his first lead of the night — and Ron Reed. Reed, 4-4, pitched the final four innings, got victory.

The Phillies knocked out starter Pascual Perez with six runs in the first, aided by two Atlanta errors. With the bases loaded, shortstop Rafael Ramirez booted Schmidt's grounder, allowing two runs to score, and Maddox and Ivan DeJesus each had RBI singles. Dick Ruthven added a two-out triple that knocked in a pair of runs. The Braves scored once in the second on Bob Horner's solo homer and added four runs in the third. With the bases loaded, DeJesus dropped a throw on a potential double-play grounder, allowing one run to score. Dale Murphy's single delivered two runs and Horner's grounder scored the final run to pull Atlanta within 6-5.

Horner's second homer of the game and 27th of the season, a three-run blast that followed singles by Washington and Murphy, gave the Braves an 8-6 lead in the fifth. Atlanta added a run in the sixth on an RBI double by Ramirez.

The Phillies tied the score 9-9 on Matthews' three-run homer with two out in the eighth off Rick Mahler after singles by DeJesus and Greg Gross.

Dodgers 11, Cardinals 3
At St. Louis, Fernando Valenzuela scattered six hits and slammed the first home run of his major-league career to pace the Dodgers. The triumph moved the Dodgers one game ahead of the Braves in the NL West. The Cardinals' lead over the Phillies dropped to two games in the East. Valenzuela became the first 17-game winner in the major leagues, raising his record to 17-9.

Met 5, Astros 4
Don Sutton and Dave Smith couldn't stop the New York Mets — but Bert Beroberge did.

Art Howe hit a three-run, inside-the-park homer and the Astros held off a ninth-inning rally by the Mets for a triumph at Houston.

Houston starter Sutton took a five-hit shutout and a 5-0 lead into the ninth before the Mets knocked out the veteran right-hander, who was bidding for his 56th career shutout.

In other games, Chicago topped San Francisco 4-2, Cincinnati blanked Montreal 1-0, Pittsburgh nipped San Diego 7-6, Philadelphia defeated Atlanta 11-9 in 10 innings and Los Angeles crushed St. Louis 11-3.

Cubs 4, Giants 2
At Chicago, Leon Durham had three hits, including an RBI triple in a four-run second inning, to spark the Cubs. The victory was Chicago's 17th in 24 games in August — best in the NL — and completed a sweep of the three-game series with the Giants, who lost their fifth straight.

Reds 1, Expos 0
At Cincinnati, Bob Shirley and Brad Lesley combined on a seven-hit and Alex Trevino singled in Wayne Krenchick in the eighth inning to give the Reds the victory.

Shirley, 6-9, and Steve Rogers, 14-7, were locked in a scoreless duel and Rogers had a one-hitter until the Reds batted in the eighth.

Pirates 7, Padres 6
At Pittsburgh, Jim Morrison singled home pinch runner Enrique Romo from second base with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning lifting the Pirates. The victory went to a Kent Tekulve, 10-9, who pitched the last two innings and picked up his second win in two days.

Strachan admits selling cocaine

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Former New Orleans Saints running back Mike Strachan pleaded guilty Wednesday to selling cocaine to NFL rushing leader George Rogers of the Saints and star running back Chuck Muncie of the San Diego Chargers.

In exchange for his guilty pleas to charges of conspiring to distribute cocaine and selling the drug, the government dropped an additional 10 distribution charges against Strachan.

Strachan, 29, was released on bond pending a presentence investigation. He faced a maximum 20 years in prison, $35,000 in fines and special minimum 3-year parole.

Strachan initially pleaded innocent to 11 counts of cocaine distribution and one charge of conspiracy.

During the hearing, federal prosecutors told U.S. District Judge Veronica Wicker that Strachan sold cocaine to Muncie, Rogers and New Orleans defensive end Frank Warren.

"Are you pleading guilty because you are, in fact, guilty of these crimes?" Ms. Wicker asked.

"Yes, your honor," replied Strachan, whose wife, Loretta; son, Michael Jr., 5; and daughter, Michelle, 3, watched the proceedings.

"I pleaded guilty to what I had to plead guilty to," Strachan said outside the courtroom. "I don't agree with everything that was said but I agreed to plead guilty."

Strachan admitted selling cocaine to Muncie, a former New Orleans player, on at least four occasions from Feb. 4, 1980, to April 7, 1982. Prosecutors said he also sold the drug three times to Rogers, including twice on the day after games, and dealt one gram of cocaine to Warren Jan. 4,

MIKE STRACHAN Could get 20 years

1982. Rogers, a Heisman Trophy winner and the Saints' No. 1 draft choice in 1981, has admitted using cocaine. Muncie, who tied an NFL record by rushing for 19 touchdowns last season, recently entered a rehabilitation facility to handle his chemical dependency on drugs and alcohol.

A federal investigation of drug use by Saints' players was continuing, said U.S. Attorney John Volz, and prosecutors will interview former New Orleans player Don Reese about his claims of extensive drug use by team members.

Joselyn Bruno, a former business partner of Strachan, was convicted earlier this year of cocaine distribution and sentenced to three years in prison.

Bryant recognizes retirement closer

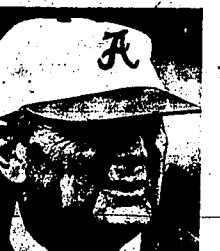

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (UPI) — Bear Bryant gave no specific date, but there's no doubt Alabama's legendary football coach feels it's about time for him to hand the Crimson Tide's reins over to a younger man.

"I don't know how much longer the university can afford to keep me," Bryant said Wednesday. "We're surrounded by young, energetic, hard-working coaches — at other schools throughout our area. We're surrounded by everybody and they're doing a good job."

"I'm not strong enough to fight back, I'm too old to fight back," said Bryant, who will be 69 on Sept. 11. "It looks healthier than he has for several years."

"I can't go out and beat the bushes (recruiting) like I used to when I was younger. I've talked to the university about this. I don't want to wait until our program has run down. It's time to make a move."

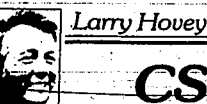

Bryant, who has won more football games (315) than any other college

CSI appears strong at guard, young underneath

TWIN FALLS — The annual August report on College of Southern Idaho basketball.

Coach Dave Campbell has a complete reversal of a year ago — and an unexpectedly large turnover.

A year ago — even before 7-footer Rick Tumstall moved into town — CSI's strength appeared to be its inside game with George Scott and Lebro Bates ready for their second starting years.

But when Campbell called the 1982-83 team together earlier this week for its first orientation meeting, the strength obviously was in the guard line.

The team boasts only three returnees — but all three were considered starters.

Back are floor general Ron Beach, wing Phil Rohr and all-arounder Gerry Kennedy. All three, on the basis of last year, must be considered perimeter players.

fact, Campbell says "Gerald will play four man sometimes" and that means center under Campbell's numbering system.

Giving the idea that both of the youngsters will be seeing a lot of wing and inside playing time is the fact that the "instant help" recruits also are perimeter players. They are Ed Farmer and Dewey Haley who will remind fans more of the days of Steve Hegens and Arnold Dugger without the size.

Both possess good ball handling ability and quickness. But Campbell says, without a doubt, their primary contribution should be shooting the ball.

"Just watch them in practice. They'll fill it up," he promised.

The Golden Eagles' hopes for a solidifier in the middle were dashed late in the year when Charles Williams decided not to return. Williams, an excellent leaper and improving rebounder, had become a usual starter late last year.

"We knew that we would have to be lucky to replace the experience and ability that we were graduating and we hoped that Charles' experience would fill a void while our freshmen were getting some game experience," Campbell said.

Williams will wind up either at Henderson County, Texas, Junior College or St. Louis University because "he feels he has the ability to play guard and wants that chance," the coach said. "With our returning strength being perimeter people, there's no way I could promise him a chance to start at guard or even get much playing time."

Campbell does have George Scott's brother, Andre Gilkey, and four other freshmen in the 6-5 to 6-7 range.

But unlike the team of last year, there isn't a lot of bulk.

"Most of them jump very well but it's just going to be a matter of them picking up experience," Campbell said.

The scoring ability underneath "will be suspect, indicating the Eagles, after two seasons of force feeding the ball inside, may be looking for the sharpshooters to get into the jumpshot game.

CSI's season of change in late November, will be formidable with Snow and Dixie on the road, followed by a home date with the Yugoslavian National Team.

"We could really take our lumps early this year," Campbell said. "But I think there's good potential there for success after the first of the year."

What one might compare this aggregation most to would be the alignments that Jerry Hale came up with in the latter part of his career here. He, too, went from power to swiftness in a couple of years.

The player who comes with the big credentials is Haley, a South Carolina product. He physically reminds one of Kenny Owens, the immediate past University of Idaho scoring leader and best remembered here for the way he led Treasure Valley past CSI twice in his sophomore season at the Ontario school. Dewey's built more like a football halfback than a basketball guard and has good acceleration and quickness. He averages 18 points his senior year. Farmer, also quick but more ferret-like with speed as opposed to the power image that Dewey creates, averaged in the high 20s for his Georgia high school team.

Both like to penetrate and Farmer shows good technique with the outside jumper. It should be a much more creative offensive team than CSI has seen in the past few seasons. In fact, if things fell according to preference, the CSI-Ricks game next year could shatter all kinds of scoring records and send the fans home screaming for more.

But for CSI in 1982-83, the key question will be rebounding. Size is not great and bulk isn't available. It does appear, however, that a couple of the inside youngsters, play there without fear and go hard for the ball.

"What we get on the boards this year will be from hard work," Campbell agrees.

Sipe has a lock on Browns' QB job, but 5 others traded

BRIAN SIPE
Position confirmed

By United Press International

If Brian Sipe had any worries about his job, he found out Wednesday that he has it all locked up.

Cleveland Browns Coach Sam Rutigliano emphasized Sipe was his No. 1 quarterback and would hold the job for the foreseeable future.

"He has a 'Yale Lock' on the starting job. 'Tot' obvious reasons," Rutigliano said.

It has been speculated that backup Paul McDonald, in his third year out of Southern Cal, might be given a shot at the job this season.

That speculation has been fueled by mediocre performances by Sipe in the first two exhibition games, on top of a below-par performance in 1981. McDonald sparked a rally in the Browns' 26-24 victory over the Los Angeles Rams last Thursday.

Rutigliano says he hasn't even considered replacing Sipe, who led the Browns to the Central Division championship in 1980 and was the AFC's Most Valuable Player.

Rutigliano said Sipe would play "most" of the first half of Saturday's exhibition game against the New Orleans Saints, with McDonald playing the second half. He said there was a chance that third-string quarterback Rick Trocano could see his first action of the summer in the game.

Also Wednesday, the Browns acquired two players on waivers: defensive lineman Mark Buben, who was released Tuesday by the New England Patriots, and defensive back Jerome King, who was cut loose by the Philadelphia Eagles.

To make room on the roster, safety Steve Gerton and nose tackle Joe Ferraro, both free agents, were waived.

In other trading came news: The Baltimore Colts cut three players and added three others to their 1982 squad. The team cut offensive guard Tony Vitale, offensive guard Bob VanDyne, and defensive end James Williams. Additions to the squad were offensive tackle Rob Taylor from Northwestern, offensive guard Ariand Thompson from Baylor and defensive end Steve Durham out of Oklahoma.

The New York Jets traded cornerback Donald Dykes, their third-round draft choice four years ago, to the San Diego Chargers for a conditional seventh-round draft pick next year. The acquisition of Dykes is seen as another step in the Chargers' quest for an improved pass defense, an area that has plagued them in recent years.

The Washington Redskins traded second-year quarterback Tom Fick to the New England Patriots for eight-year veteran quarterback Tom Owen. Fick, the Redskins' fourth-round draft choice in 1981, played in six games as a rookie.

Veteran quarterback Dan Pastorini visited the Philadelphia Eagles' training camp and Coach Dick Vermeil said he has expressed interest in playing for the team. Vermeil said he decided to bring in Pastorini, 33, who is a free agent, to West Chester State College for preliminary talks and then "go from there." Contract holdout Leon Gray and Houston Oilers' General Manager

Ladd Herzog expected to part Wednesday as good friends but without an agreement putting Gray back in uniform.

The two are restricted from negotiating by the football players' union. They are scheduled to meet for lunch and have one more conversation in what has become a protracted and fruitless debate. Herzog didn't seem optimistic about a last-minute break.

Gray, a five-time all-pro offensive tackle, said the arguing is not as polarized as it once was. "The impasse has passed," he said.

Gray refuses to accept either a multi-year contract or a one-year deal. The latter reportedly pays him $350,000 and includes $200,000 in deferred monies, reports indicate.

Women bowlers set meeting

TWIN FALLS — A training school for Women's International Bowling Congress league officers will be conducted at 7 p.m. Sunday at the Bowldrome.

Spokesman Eileen Day said in addition to brushing up on familiar procedures, the meeting will give officers an early preview of any rule changes plus the opportunity to pick up supplies for the coming season.

Steile aces Blue Lakes' No. 2

TWIN FALLS — Dr. John Steile scored the first hole-in-one of his career at Blue Lakes Country Club Wednesday afternoon.

Playing with Dave DaSoglio, Bill VanEngelen and Steve Soran, Steile accomplished the feat on the par three, 145-yard second hole. He used an eight-iron.

Bamberger gets thumb early

HOUSTON (UPI) — New York Manager George Bamberger was ejected by umpire Fred Montague prior to Wednesday's game between the Mets and the Houston Astros.

Bamberger went to home plate to present his lineup card, he got into an argument with Montague, apparently over a call in Tuesday night's game in which Montague, working home plate, ejected Hubie Brooks after a close play at the plate.

Montague called Brooks out in Tuesday night's game and then ejected the Mets' third baseman for bumping him. On Wednesday, Bamberger questioned Montague about why he had grabbed Wilson's shirt following the incident and, after heated words were exchanged, the umpire ejected Bamberger.

Coach Jim Frey managed the team for Wednesday's game.

Stargell still plans to retire

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Veteran slugger Willie Stargell of the Pittsburgh Pirates has declined an offer from the club to play one more year and will retire as planned at the end of this season.

The popular 41-year-old Pirate has performed primarily as a pinch hitter in his 20th full season with Pittsburgh, batting .224 with three homers and 14 RBI. He has 475 career home runs, tying him with Stan Musial for 14th place on the all-time list.

General Manager Pete Peterson said he made the offer to Stargell to stay about four weeks ago because "he still is swinging a quick bat."

But Stargell, who has drawn standing ovations in many of his appearances around the National League this year, said it would be too much of a grind on his knees to prepare for another spring training.

Peterson said the Pirates have definite plans for Stargell to remain in their organization, possibly as a minor-league instructor.

Utah field should be ready

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Crews recapitulating the University of Utah football field with Astroturf are expected to complete the job by this weekend, one week before the Utes' scheduled season home opener against Montana State.

Utah Athletic Director Arnie Ferrin said the Monsanto Company workers have been laying the synthetic turf since last week "and should be through by Friday or Saturday. Then we'll paint the lines on the field next week."

The university removed the running track from the stadium and lowered the playing field this summer to add 5,000 seats, upping the stadium's seating capacity to 35,000.

"Other crews were still installing seats along the new sideline rows, and Ferrin said that work "should be completed" in time for the Sept. 4 game against the Bobcats.

But, about half of the new seats will be placed in the stadium's south end zone and that portion of the expansion is not scheduled to be completed until mid-season. Utah hopes to eventually add another 15,000 seats to the stadium.

Baseball playoffs open Oct. 5

NEW YORK (UPI) — Major league baseball will open post-season play Oct. 5 with Game 1 of the American League Championship Series, it was announced Wednesday by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and the two league presidents.

One week later, the 79th World Series begins on Oct. 12. The ALCS, which matches the winners in the Eastern and Western Divisions, gets the best-of-five LCS competition underway in the home park of the West champion Oct. 5. The National League playoffs begin Oct. 6 at the home of the East champion.

NBC will televise all World Series games nationally while ABC will present national coverage of all League Championship Games.

The playoff schedules appear in Scoreboard, Page D4.

Brock to watch Henderson

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Lou Brock will be in Milwaukee today to watch Ricky Henderson of the Oakland A's try to tie and then break Brock's stolen base record.

"I've been asked by Oakland to come out and present the base to Ricky and I have accepted that challenge," Brock said. "I'd like to be there and to feel that excitement and to watch Ricky in his moment of truth and moment of triumph."

Brock holds the record for most stolen bases with 118, set in 1974 as a member of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Henderson stole two bases Tuesday, giving him 117 for the year. The A's were idle Wednesday before opening a series in Milwaukee against the Brewers.

"It's exciting to have the record being broken," said Brock, who broke Maury Wills' mark of 104 stolen bases. "It allows for some appreciation of the stolen base."

"The stolen base in itself has never been appreciated as a baserunner thinks it should be."

McEnroe, Navratilova No. 1

NEW YORK (UPI) — Defending champion John McEnroe and Wimbledon champion Martina Navratilova Wednesday were made the top seeds for the 1982 U.S. Open tennis championships which open next Tuesday.

McEnroe also was seeded No. 1 last year. Jimmy Connors, who defeated McEnroe in the Wimbledon final this year, is the No. 2 seed among men, with Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia third and Guillermo Vilas of Argentina fourth.

Navratilova gained the top seed for the first time since 1978. Chris Evert Lloyd, the top seed last year, is second this year, followed by Tracy Austin and Andrea Jaeger.

World Series of Golf starts today

Kite likes chances on long Firestone course

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — At 7,173 yards, the Firestone Country Club Course is one of the longest the PGA Tour sees each year and is made for the big hitters, right?

Not so, says Tom Kite, who feels his chances are "maybe better" on a shorter track like Marion.

"People don't understand what it takes to win a golf tournament," says the Tour's Mr. Consistency, who, despite having won only one event so far in 1982, still is No. 3 on the PGA money list with more than $308,000.

"On a course like this," Kite said during a practice round for the $400,000 World Series of Golf which starts today, "everybody has to hit the driver."

Kite, who describes himself as "average" off the tee, claims that's no big deal for him because he has to hit his driver nearly all the time. "We're used to it," said Kite, "and the guy who hits it straight is going to win. Even if the long hitters are driving it further, I can still hit the greens out of the fairway easier than they can from the rough."

"My main concern is pleasing Tom Kite. I don't really care what the public thinks."

Kite finished second to Bill Rogers, a relatively short hitter, in last year's World Series and notes that other World Series winners have included Jack Nicklaus, Gil Morgan, Tom Watson and Lanny Wadkins, all known for their accuracy.

"Everybody thought Marion was going to be a great golf course for guys like me (in the 1981 U.S. Open)," said Kite. "But it's too short. The long hitters all hit irons and it took away our advantage."

Kite labeled Firestone "a good golf course, but very monotonous."

"You look at the great golf courses and they all have short holes," said Kite. "They can't all be from L.A. to New York. But it's fun to play because it's always in such great shape."

Kite, despite being the top money winner on the Tour a year ago, was overshadowed by Rogers, who won both the World Series and the British Open, and still hasn't gotten the public acclaim his game deserves.

"My main concern is pleasing Tom Kite," he said. "I don't really care what the public thinks. I think the players on Tour know: Most of them have gone through it. If they haven't, they aren't very good players."

Kite, who at 32 years of age should still be on the rise as a golfer, then backed off some from his initial reaction.

"Don't get me wrong," he said, "everybody wants to be recognized by the public and the press as a good player, but I think I'm more of a critic of Tom Kite than they are."

James' Huskies in position to gain Rose Bowl

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Over the last half dozen seasons, follows such as John Robinson at Southern California, Terry Donahue at UCLA and Frank Kush at Arizona State have been immortalized by their respective fans but among more dispassionate followers of the game Don James of Washington ranks as the best college football coach in the West.

Since turning the program around, in 1977, James has taken the Huskies to three Rose Bowls and the Sun Bowl, and in those games he is 3-1. The only blemish was a 23-6 loss to Michigan in the 1980 Rose Bowl. Last season, the Huskies demolished Iowa, 29-0.

With nine returning starters from the defensive team that ranked second in the Pacific-10 Conference in 1981 and eight starters back on offense, the outlook is bright for James and Washington to play in the Rose Bowl for a third straight year.

There are no apparent holes in the Huskies and James' job will be refining rather than rebuilding. It's a very nice spot to be in, and if you throw in a relatively easy schedule, how could anyone in his right mind bet against Washington, especially with Southern Cal on probation and ineligible for the Rose Bowl.

"There are some areas we'll need to shore up, like the solidification of the offensive line by developing guards," James says. "And we've also got to develop some players at fullback, but outside of that our main concern is to develop depth."

On defense, Mark Stewart, Tony Caldwell, Ray Caltage, Lynn Madsen, Dean Browning and Scott Gannett are the up-front returnees along with Ken Driscoll at linebacker and a secondary unit of Ray Horton, Bill Stapleton, Chris O'Connor and Robert Leaphart.

As for their schedule, the Huskies play outside of Seattle only twice before Oct. 30 — at Arizona and Oregon State. Not having to play Southern Cal this year makes it that much easier for Washington to claim the Pac-10 title.

Washington's march to the Rose Bowl won't be easy because, as always, there is balance in the Pac-10. This year's contenders include UCLA and Arizona State with Stanford, resting its hopes on the arm of quarterback John Elway, given an outside chance.

California, with a new coach in Joe Kapp, is expected to be a lot better than its 2-9 record of a year ago, and Washington State, which was within a victory over the Huskies of landing in its first Rose Bowl in 50 years, will be competitive once again. Only Oregon, Arizona and Oregon State seem out of it. The Ducks, like Southern Cal, are on probation, while the Sun Devils come off probation in time to play in a bowl game if their record warrants it.

The Trojans have lost Heisman Trophy winner Marcus Allen and may be hard pressed to play with the better teams unless Robinson junks the tailback offense and lets John Mazur throw the ball more.

The 1981 season ended on a sour note for the Bruins — a one-point loss to USC and a battering by Michigan in the Bluebonnet Bowl. UCLA will be strong at wide receiver (Cormac Carney), quarterback (Tom Ramsey), running back (Kevin Nelson) and in the defensive secondary. Offensive line holes and an inexperienced defense are the problem areas.

Arizona State, which lost the heart and soul of its high-powered offense, will need help from the defense — at least at the start. Gons are quarterback Mike Pagel, punting backs Gerald Riggs and Robert Weathers, tight end Jerry Bell and tackles John Meyer and Tony Lora. Darryl Rogers has his work cut out for him but never bet against the offense-minded coach.

In the PacAA, Coach Jack Elway once again has the best team in San Jose State, but Utah State, after three fine recruiting seasons, is in position to be a serious challenger.

Steve Clarkson, who passed for more than 3,200 yards and threw 28 TD passes last year, is back to lead Elway's offense.

New strain of trout may show in Magic catches soon

Special to The Times-News

How about some good news on the fishing front? A new type of rainbow trout was planted at Magic Reservoir last June.

The strain of rainbow which has done excellent in Oregon lakes is called "Mountain Whiting" trout.

Some 80,000 fingerlings of this type were planted and could possibly show up in late fall catches.

Free you and I, the fish will appear as just another rainbow, but the Idaho Department of Fish and Game says you will only be able to tell if you have caught this new type by analysis of a black light.

This different egg source has produced some trophy-sized trout according to Lynn Brewer, fishing writer for the Eugene, Ore., Register-Guard.

Lynn tells me that the growth rate was tremendous where the fish had a good supply of feed.

Some of our Richfield Canal fishermen are probably already licking their lips in anticipation of when these fish may get into the canal.

The Fish and Game Department reports that nearly a million trout were planted in Magic Reservoir this year, including the Mountain Whiting strain.

Sometime during September, the results of a study made by the Department of Fish and Game will be released as to the feasibility of planting walleye in the slack waters between Minidoka and Walcott reservoirs.

The problem will be the possibility that these fish may migrate into the rest of the Snake River where fishermen and the Fish and Game personnel don't want them.

One possibility, after the walleye success of Salmon Reservoir, may be Oakley Reservoir located in Cassia County, three miles from Oakley on Trapper Creek.

Here's a hot tip, from a Twin Falls businessman, for you creek fishermen.

"Summit Creek is hot," was his report. Summit Creek is just over the summit on the Trail Creek road leading from Sun Valley.

In the past years I have fished this creek and the usual catch was several 10- to 12-inch fish.

This year many were near 16 inches. A real find during this high water year.

Clark Canyon is in Montana, about a five-hour drive from Twin Falls.

Ever lost a nice fish because of slippery hands?

There is nothing more effective than a plain old rag to remove fish slime or to hold a flailing fish that is trying to wreck your tackle box in a boat.

Slippery hands, aside from being lksome, can lose a rod on the next cast. Old towels and washcloths are best. They can be washed out and dried when the fishing is done. Paper towels just don't fill the bill. They stick to you, hands and cause litter.

Just make sure the woman of the house approves of the cloth you take.

Because of the heavy flow of mail, and its cost, I will have to adopt a new policy regarding the answering of mail.

Mountain lakes planted by helicopter

By STU MURRELL
Special to The Times-News

JEROME — Region 4 fisheries personnel are in the process of planting 35 high mountain lakes with an estimated 23,000 fingerling cutthroat and rainbow trout.

The planting is a cooperative program with the U.S. Forest Service using one of their helicopters. Bob Bell, regional fishery manager, said most mountain lakes are planted on a three-year basis if they do not have sufficient natural reproduction.

Such a rotation has provided excellent fishing in most of Idaho's high mountain lakes.

Lakes being planted include those in the upper Little Wood River and Big Wood drainages, plus the Trinity Lakes on the South Fork of the Boise River. The trout are transported in chilled, oxygenated, plastic bags and are released as the helicopter passes over the lake. This method has provided for a high survival rate and is both safer and more expedient than landing the helicopter.

The mixture of cutthroat and rainbow has proven popular with anglers. Cutthroats, provide a brilliantly colored fish with red cheek patches and the rainbows are noted for their fighting abilities.

Mountain lake fishing is usually best in August and September. Some of the most productive methods include small lures, such as the Apeps and brown rooster tail, fly fishing with dark colored flies such as the Renegade, and spin fishing wooly worms with a spin bubble. Use a four-pound test or lighter line since mountain lake water is exceptionally clear and a heavy line reduces the success rate.

Mountain lake fishing can be very temperamental and many times people will say a lake does not contain any fish when the main problem is they have only tried their luck during a brief stay. To adequately test a lake's potential, I like to fish throughout the daylight hours.

I only keep enough fish to provide a meal for the members of my hiking crew, since cooling fish for the trip out is difficult on a backpack expedition.

One of the better ways to prepare trout is to seal them carefully in aluminum foil with a pat of butter, salt and pepper and chopped onions. Place the sealed package in the hot coals of your campfire and cook about 20 minutes for a real treat.

Stu Murrell is the regional conservation educator for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

Visitors double at Gifford Pinchot National Forest

St. Helens eruption cuases 'discovery'

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI)—The "forgotten forest" has been rediscovered. All it took was a volcanic eruption.

The Gifford Pinchot National Forest has been discovered by more and more people this summer and has become one of the Pacific Northwest's most visited outdoor attractions.

The reason is obvious: Mount St. Helens.

Before the volcano's May 18, 1980, eruption, Gifford Pinchot was one of the nation's least publicized national forests, even though it was named for the first chief of the U.S. Forest Service.

The 1982 visitor count "is expected to more than double" last year's 1.32 million visitor days, said Kurt Austermann, an information specialist with the Forest Service regional office.

For the blast, regional residents

came to sail on the dark blue waters of Spirit Lake, camp in the pines and romp through the snow to the top of the cone-shaped peak.

Now the lake is thick and gray with volcanic debris. Stripped tree skeletons are all that remain of once-verdant forests. The mountain is disfigured, its north face blown away by the eruption.

These stark reminders of nature's force are the big attractions to visitors, who this year for the first time are able to drive to areas on the fringe of the devastation as more roads are opened to the public.

Not all enjoy visiting the wasteland. "It is very depressing to me," said Barbara Johnson, an information receptionist at the forest headquarters. "I remember it when it was very pretty."

She and receptionist Charlotte

Martin-Sams visited the blasted area recently, deciding they should be able to describe it for people who inquire about visiting.

The logistics keep them busy. "For the last two years I've been tied to this desk," said Ms. Johnson.

It is even hard to find substitutes from among the headquarters staff, she said, because "we have so many different answers embedded into our brains. No one else has the information we know."

Each time the volcano starts acting up again, the calls increase, some from people in other states who do not understand the local geography.

A grandmother in Kansas City, who cannot reach her granddaughter in Brush Prairie on the telephone will call to ask us to tell her to get away from the base of the mountain, Ms. Johnson said.

"She doesn't realize that Brush Prairie is not even close. She is looking at a very small map and the mountain looks near."

To aid those who come to see the mountain, the Forest Service has set up a visitor's center and viewpoint a few miles off Interstate 5 near Toledo and has other well-marked viewing sites scattered all around the devastated peak.

Those willing to travel on dirt roads can drive through a rugged moonscape of downed timber, destroyed automobiles and ash-covered slopes for a closer look at the volcano and at the stark remains of Spirit Lake.

To the thousands making the trip this summer, the sights are an awesome revelation—or reminder—of the forces of nature on the rampage.

CAP receives nearly $35,000 through checkoff

BOISE — The controlled hunt refund checkoff has produced $34,723.69 for the Citizens Against Poaching reward fund — almost the same amount that was provided by hunters last year.

Dennis Gratton, president of CAP, received the check from Fish and Game Commission chairman Fred Christensen during the August commission meeting in Boise.

Applicants for controlled big game hunt permits could designate all or part of their refund for CAP if they were unsuccessful in drawing a permit. Net contributions in 1981, the first year of the anti-poaching program, totaled about $36,000.

Department of Fish and Game records show that 8,013 applicants contributed this year, representing 15 percent of the $3,000 unsuccessful applicants.

Gratton said about $2,000 has been paid out of $25,000 in rewards since the citizens organization was formed in January, 1981. Rewards of from $100 to $500 are offered if a report from a concerned citizen results in an arrest for fish and game law violation.

CAP maintains a toll-free hotline, 1-800-355-5989, for calls about suspected violations.

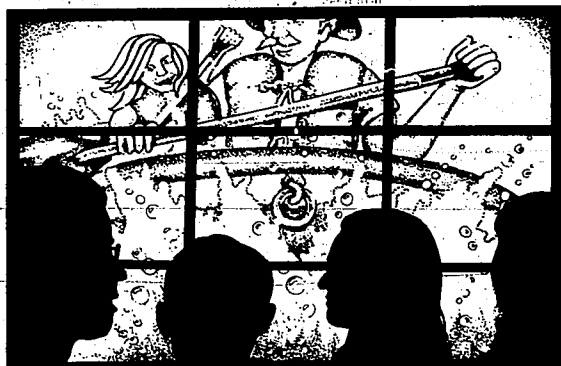

Hearings will be held for management plans

BOISE — A set of big game species management plans and another for Idaho fisheries have been cleared by the Fish and Game Commission for public review later this year.

Commissioners approved clearance of the draft plans for mountain lion, bear, and fisheries when they met in Boise Aug. 16-17. At an earlier meeting in Coeur d'Alene, the commission gave similar approval for antelope, moose, bighorn sheep and mountain goat draft plans.

Public meetings will be scheduled throughout Idaho, probably starting in mid-September, a Fish and Game spokesman said. Copies of the plan designed to establish guidelines through 1985, will be available for study at department offices.

Washington's march to the Rose Bowl won't be easy because, as always, there is balance in the Pac-10. This year's contenders include UCLA and Arizona State with Stanford, resting its hopes on the arm of quarterback John Elway, given an outside chance.

California, with a new coach in Joe Kapp, is expected to be a lot better than its 2-9 record of a year ago, and Washington State, which was within a victory over the Huskies of landing in its first Rose Bowl in 50 years, will be competitive once again. Only Oregon, Arizona and Oregon State seem out of it. The Ducks, like Southern Cal, are on probation, while the Sun Devils come off probation in time to play in a bowl game if their record warrants it.

The Trojans have lost Heisman Trophy winner Marcus Allen and may be hard pressed to play with the better teams unless Robinson junks the tailback offense and lets John Mazur throw the ball more.

The 1981 season ended on a sour note for the Bruins — a one-point loss to USC and a battering by Michigan in the Bluebonnet Bowl. UCLA will be strong at wide receiver (Cormac Carney), quarterback (Tom Ramsey), running back (Kevin Nelson) and in the defensive secondary. Offensive line holes and an inexperienced defense are the problem areas.

Arizona State, which lost the heart and soul of its high-powered offense, will need help from the defense — at least at the start. Gone are quarterback Mike Pagel, punning backs Gerald Riggs and Robert Weathers, tight end Jerry Bell and tackle John Meyer and Tony Lola. Darryl Rogers has his work cut out for him but never bet against the offense-minded coach.

In the FCA, Coach Jack Elway once again has the best team in San Jose State, but Utah State, after three fine recruiting seasons, is in position to be a serious challenger.

Steve Clarkson, who passed for more than 3,300 yards and threw 29 TD passes last year, is back to lead Elway's offense.

New strain of trout may show in Magic catches soon

Special to The Times-News

It's about some good news on the fishing front.

A new type of rainbow trout was planted at Magic Reservoir last June.

The strain of rainbow which has done well in Oregon lakes is called "Mountain Whitey" trout.

Some 80,000 fingerlings of this type were planted and could possibly show up in late fall catches.

For you and I, the fish will appear as just another rainbow, but the Idaho Department of Fish and Game says the fish and you will only be able to tell if you have caught this new type by the use of a black light.

The different egg source has produced some trophy-sized trout according to Lynn Brewer, fishing writer for the Eugene, Ore., Register-Guard.

Lynn tells me that the growth rate was tremendous where the fish had a good supply of food.

Some of our Richfield Canal fishermen are probably already licking their lips in anticipation of when these fish may get into the canal.

The Fish and Game Department reports that nearly a million trout were planted in Magic Reservoir this year, including the Mount Whitney strain.

Sometime during September, the results of a study made by the Department of Fish and Game will be released as to the feasibility of planting walleye in the slack waters between Minidoka and Walcott reservoirs.

The problem will be the possibility that these fish may migrate into the rest of the Snake River where fishermen and the Fish and Game personnel don't want them.

One possibility, after the walleye success of Salmon Reservoir, may be Oakley Reservoir located in Cassia County, three miles from Oakley on Trapper Creek.

Here's a hot tip, taken from a Twin Falls businessman, for you creek fishermen.

"Summit Creek is hot," was his report. Summit Creek is just over the summit on the Trail Creek road leading from Sun Valley.

In the past years I have fished this creek and the usual catch was several 10- to 12-inch fish.

This year many were near 16 inches. A real find during this high water year.

George Williams of Twin Falls tells me that Clark Canyon was "tremendous fishing."

Clark County is in Montana, about a five-hour drive from Twin Falls.

Ever lost a nice fish because of slippery hands?

There is nothing more effective than a plain old rag to remove fish slime or to hold a flailing fish that is trying to wreck your tackle box in a boat.

Slippery hands, aside from being irksome, can lose a rod on the next cast. Old towels and washcloths are best. They can be washed out and dried when the fishing is done. Paper towels just don't fill the bill. They stick to your hands and cause litter.

Just make sure the woman of the house approves of the cloth you take.

Because of the heavy flow of mail, and its cost, I will have to adopt a new policy regarding the answering of mail.

Please enclose in your letter a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Twins just too much for this old duffer.

Swen is a Twin Falls fisherman who writes a weekly column for the outdoors page.

TWIN FALLS — Idaho native Mike Harrop will be writing a weekly hunting column for the Outdoors page starting Sept. 2.

Harrop, 42, runs a family ranch near Bliss. He has been an outdoorsman since early childhood.

Born in Idaho Falls and raised in Pocatello, Harrop attended Idaho State University. He entered journalism in 1970 and worked for two newspapers in Idaho, the Coeur d'Alene Press and the Lewiston Morning Tribune in addition to working for two Canadian papers, the Lethbridge Herald and the Edmonton Journal.

He returned to Idaho two years ago to help operate family farms at Bliss and Pocatello.

Mountain lakes planted by helicopter

By STU MURRELL
Special to The Times-News

JEROME — Idaho's 4 fisheries personnel are in the process of planting 35 high mountain lakes with an estimated 23,000 fingerling cutthroat and rainbow trout.

The planting is a cooperative program with the U.S. Forest Service using one of their helicopters.

Bob Bell, regional fishery manager, said most mountain lakes are planted on a three-year basis if they do not have sufficient natural reproduction.

Such a rotation has provided excellent fishing in most of Idaho's high mountain lakes.

Lakes being planted include those in the upper Little Wood River and Big Wood drainages, plus the Trinity Lakes on the South Fork of the Boise River.

The trout are transported in chilled, oxygenated, plastic bags and are released as the helicopter passes over the lake. This method has provided for a high survival rate and is both safer and more expedient than landing the helicopter.

The mixture of cutthroat and rainbow has proven popular with anglers. Cutthroats provide a brilliantly colored fish with red cheek patches and the rainbows are noted for their fighting abilities.

Mountain lake fishing is usually best in August and September. Some of the most productive methods include small lures, such as the Mepps and brown rooster tail, fly fishing with dark colored flies such as the Renegade, and spin fishing with worms with a spin bubble. Use a four-pound test or lighter line since mountain lake water is exceptionally clear and a heavy line reduces the success rate.

Mountain lake fishing can be very temperamental and many times people will say a lake does not contain any fish when the main problem is they have only tried their luck during a brief stay. To adequately test a lake's potential, I like to fish throughout the daylight hours.

I only keep enough fish to provide a meal for the members of my hiking crew since cooling fish for the trip out is difficult on a backpack expedition.

One of the better ways to prepare trout is to seal them carefully in aluminum foil with a pat of butter, salt and pepper and chopped onions. Place the sealed package in the hot coals of your campfire and cook about 20 minutes for a real treat.

Stu Murrell is the regional conservation educator for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

Visitors double at Gifford Pinchot National Forest

St. Helens eruption causes 'discovery'

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — The "forgotten forest," which has been rediscovered, all it took was a volcanic eruption.

The Gifford Pinchot National Forest has been discovered by more and more people this summer and has become one of the Pacific Northwest's most visited outdoor attractions.

The reason is obvious: Mount St. Helens.

Before the volcano's May 18, 1980, eruption, Gifford Pinchot was one of the nation's least publicized national forests, even though it was named for the first chief of the U.S. Forest Service.

The 1982 visitor count "is expected to more than double last year's 1.32 million visitor days," said Kurt Austermann, an information specialist with the Forest Service regional office.

The 1981 figure was up considerably from the years before the eruption, which tore 1,300 feet off the mountain's top, sent a pyroclastic flow of destruction down the slopes and killed 59 people.

Due to the blast, regional residents

came to sail on the dark blue waters of Spirit Lake, camp in the pines and romp through the snow to the top of the cone-shaped peak.

Now the lake is thick and gray with volcanic debris. Stripped tree skeletons are all that remain of once verdant forests. The mountain is disfigured, its north face blown away by the eruption.

These stark reminders of nature's force are the big attractions to visitors, who this year for the first time are able to drive to areas on the fringe of the devastation as more roads are opened to the public.

Not all enjoy visiting the wasteland. "It is very depressing to me," said Barbara Johnson, an information receptionist at the forest headquarters. "I remember it when it was very pretty."

She and receptionist Charlotte

Marlin-Sams visited the blasted area recently, deciding they should be able to describe it for people who inquire about visiting.

The inquiries keep them busy.

"For the last two years I've been tied to this desk," said Ms. Johnson.

It is even hard to find substitutes from among the headquarters staff, she said, because "we have so many different answers embedded into our brains. No one else has the information we know."

Each time the volcano starts acting up again, the calls increase, some from people in other states who do not understand the local geography.

A grandmother in Kansas City, who cannot reach her granddaughter in Brush Prairie on the telephone will call to ask us to tell her to get away from the base of the mountain, Ms. Johnson said.

"She doesn't realize that Brush Prairie is not even close. She is looking at a very small map and the mountain looks near."

To aid those who come to see the mountain, the Forest Service has set up a visitor's center and viewpoint a few miles off Interstate 5 near Toledo and has other well-marked viewing sites scattered all around the devastated peak.

Those willing to travel on dirt roads can drive through a rugged moonscape of downed timber, destroyed automobiles and ash-covered slopes for a closer look at the volcano and at the stark remains of Spirit Lake.

To the thousands making the trip this summer, the sights are an awesome revelation — or reminder — of the forces of nature on the ramp.

CAP receives nearly $35,000 through checkoff

BOISE — The controlled hunt refund checkoff has produced $34,723.69 for the Citizens Against Poaching reward fund — almost the same amount that was provided by hunters last year.

Dennis Gratton, president of CAP, received the check from Fish and Game Commission chairman Fred Christensen during the August commission meeting in Boise.

Applicants for controlled big game hunt permits could designate all or part of their refund for CAP if they were unsuccessful in drawing a permit. Net contributions in 1981, the first year of the anti-poaching program, totaled about $38,000.

Department of Fish and Game records show that 8,013 applicants contributed this year, representing 15 percent of the $33,000 unsuccessful applicants.

Gratton said about $42,000 has been offered or paid in rewards since the citizen organization was formed in January, 1981. Rewards of from $100 to $500 are offered if a report from a concerned citizen results in an arrest of poachers and game law violation.

Gratton maintains a toll-free hotline, 800-525-5899, for calls about suspected violations.

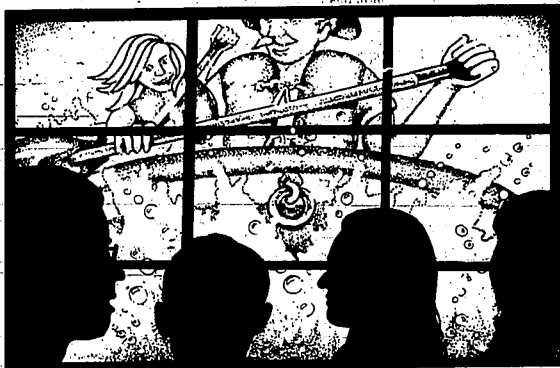

Hearings will be held for management plans

BOISE — A set of big game species management plans and another for Idaho fisheries have been cleared by the Fish and Game Commission for public review later this year.

Commissioners approved clearance of the draft plans for mountain lion, bear, and fisheries when they met in Boise Aug. 16-17. At an earlier meeting in Twin Falls, the commission gave similar approval for antelope, moose, bighorn sheep and mountain goat trap plans.

Public meetings will be scheduled throughout Idaho, probably starting in mid-September, a Fish and Game spokesman said. Copies of the plan, designed to establish guidelines through 1985, will be available for study at department offices.

Elders

Valley happenings D8

Dear Abby D8

Elder section to move

Editor's note: Beginning Sept. 5, our "Elders" section will move to Sunday. This is the last Thursday paper that will feature the Elders package.

All of our regular Elders features, including profiles, weddings, anniversaries, social security columns and related news will be included in our Sunday editions.

The move will allow us to improve our coverage of outdoors and recreational activity, which will become a regular Thursday feature. In addition, it will help us improve the local content and variety of our Sunday "Valley life" section. Our regular Sunday coverage — including weddings, engagements and columnists — will not be changed.

So, follow "Elders" beginning Sept. 5 in the Sunday Times-News.

Ex-teacher has variety of interests

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When Fern Manning left home to attend the former Albion State Normal she hid her guitar at home in a closet.

Guitars were not "in" back in the 1930s and the only time she touched the now-popular instrument during those years was once to perform a part in a play. And then the audience thought the musician was paid to perform, the retired school teacher said.

But when her two children became teen-agers and guitars had again become "socially acceptable" her late husband, Howard Manning, surprised them by dragging out her long neglected instrument.

"You should have seen their eyes," Mrs. Manning said.

An accomplished organist and pianist who has studied at Sherwood Conservatory in Chicago and still gives music lessons, Mrs. Manning learned to play both the guitar and ukulele as a child because she came from a musical family where everyone played not one, but several instruments.

Both her parents were musical and they and the family had regular jam sessions almost nightly, with the children playing everything from flute to drums.

"My parents were strict," she said, "we weren't allowed to run loud, but they insisted we all keep busy."

Her formative years, first in Missouri where she was born Aug. 26, 1912, in Willow Springs and later at Declo where she graduated from high school, were happy ones. She had dancing and music lessons, learned to sew, which she still enjoys and "always was busy."

"My mother never let us say no; I thought I could do anything," Mrs. Manning said. This child rearing approach apparently paid off in terms of enriched living, for there is scarcely a thing the retired teacher is not interested in.

She paints in both oils and water colors, gardens, knits and crochets, likes to golf, bowl, play cards and read as well as being active in several organizations. Each year she knits 25 small gift items for Christmas giving. She and a friend walk two miles every evening and she's got a grandson started on an entomology project, despite his mother's protests.

She still has five piano students, three of whom are senior citizens. She doesn't like to have any more because she takes several major trips each year.

Her weeks are pleasantly full of planned activities, such as breakfast with former teaching colleagues one day, luncheon another, club meetings and even classes.

"I've been going to school all my life," she laughed. For years when both she and her husband, who later served as Lincoln County extension agent, taught, they regularly attended summer school. After earning her degree at the University of Idaho she took a variety of courses from tailoring to art.

Last winter she took the aerobic exercise class for seniors at CSI and plans to take a course in "back yard mechanics" this fall "so I can fix my leaking faucet."

But of all her activities her first love has always been teaching and she still substitutes at Robert Stuart Junior High School here.

After graduating from the two-year teaching training course at Albion in 1933, she began her 27-year career at Albion, an isolated rural community near Arco.

She never had much Jean Smith. There were community dances every Saturday night and while she'd "rather dance than play" she sometimes had to provide the music at the piano. (This was no problem as she had helped finance her last year at Albion playing for dance classes taught by Irene Buckley as well as playing tuba in the college band and piano in the orchestra.)

Howe was the first one-room school she'd ever seen as Declo was then much larger than it is now. Her paternal grandfather, F.C. Voeburg, an eastern capitalist, had brought people and cattle and was one of the early developers of homesteads in the Malta and Declo areas. Her father, C.V. Voeburg, who had worked in various locations for the Bureau of Reclamation later operated a store in Declo.

After teaching two years at Howe she went to Burley where she married Mr. Manning in 1935. They had met years earlier at a talent show in Burley while she was still in high school. Manning was scheduled to sing, but when his accompanist did not show, she was recruited from the audience to play him.

After their marriage they taught at the old Mountain View County school south of Twin Falls, one of the few districts which would then hire both man and wife. Then they taught for eight years in the Shamrock district near Twin Falls where there was a teachers' (school-owned) house, spending summers at the University of Idaho.

When World War II came, her husband served in Europe with the army and she went to San Francisco where her parents had then moved. She worked two years there for the Permanente Metals Co., using IBM machines to make reports for the FBI on employees with much absenteeism, which was "considered a serious thing."

Her parents then returned to Declo so she taught in the Declo High School instructing not only music, for which she was well trained, but biology, for which she was not, and English in which she had minored.

"I spent every night with an encyclopedia trying to keep ahead of the biology students," she said. She also directed the chorus and the school orchestra.

After her husband returned from the war they turned down jobs which would have paid them jointly $600 per month, much to their relatives' disgust, and went back to school, this time at the former Utah State Agricultural College at Logan.

Manning, who had switched careers from education to agronomy, finished his work in the latter subject and they came to Twin Falls where he worked for Charter Seed and she taught first graders at the Lincoln school.

Later they spent three years in Oregon where Mr. Manning worked for J.R. Simplot before going to Shoshone as county extension agent. She taught for three years in the Vale, Ore., high school but remained home while her two children were small. They are Mrs. Tim Hill of Kimberly and Michael Manning of Seattle and she has two grandchildren.

But her homebound years in Shoshone were equally busy, with her children's activities, giving music lessons and leading a 4-H group, a job she inherited as wife of the county agent. She fondly remembers traumatic outings such as one to the Hagerman fossil beds.

She trained some half dozen young students to play the organ at the Shoshone Episcopal church so there was always an organist and she only played on special occasions. In addition she learned to play and taught the students to use the carillon bells at the church.

After her husband died in 1964 she went back to work the following year and taught in Shoshone five years before moving to Twin Falls in 1970. She continued teaching, serving a fifth grade class at the old Washington school, then after it was destroyed she moved to Lincoln school. She retired five years ago.

Mrs. Manning belongs to the Order of Eastern Star, PEO, has served as president of Alpha Delta Kappa teachers sorority and currently is president of the Retired Teachers Association.

But of all her many interests, she believes the most important one is her many friends with whom she shares her many varied activities.

Anniversaries

WILLIAM DUNHAMS

GOODING — Mr. and Mrs. William Dunhams will be honored at an open house Aug. 29 in honor of their golden wedding anniversary.

Friends and relatives are invited to call between 2 and 5 p.m. at the Masonic Temple in Gooding. The Dunhams came to Gooding in January 1938. They previously lived in Big Piney, Wyo., and in Buhl. Dunham was an automobile mechanic and Mrs. Dunham worked for many years at the old Tuberculosis Hospital.

The event will be hosted by their children, Bill Dunham of Anchorage, Alaska; Charles Dunham of Boise; Jon Dunham of Bellingham, Wash.; and Marge Bain of Pocatello and Linda Bolton of Twin Falls. They have 14 grandchildren.

WILLARD ELISONS

BURLEY — Mr. and Mrs. Willard (Diz) Elison will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary at an open house Aug. 29 at the Senior Center on Highway 20 in Burley.

Friends and relatives are invited to call between 3 and 7 p.m. Elison and the former Jean Smith were married Aug. 29, 1932, in Brigham City, Utah. Their marriage later was solemnized in the Idaho Falls LDS Temple.

The couple farmed in Oakley until 1952, when they moved to Burley, farming in the Unity area until 1961 when they moved to their present home at 1748 Grandview Lane.

Elison worked at Idaho Potato Processors, Inc., and Ore-Ida from 1958 to 1976 when he retired. The couple has one son, Tony Elison of Burley, and two grandsons.

R.W. BERGLUNDS

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. R.W. (Sweede) Berglund will celebrate their 50th anniversary at an open house Saturday at the home of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Gould, Route 3, Hankins Road, Twin Falls.

Friends and neighbors are invited to call between 4 and 6 p.m.

Berglund and the former Marjorie Jackson were married Sept. 26, 1932, in Columbus, Neb. In 1939 they moved to Scottsbluff, Neb., and in 1954 the couple came to Twin Falls.

Hosting the event will be their daughters, Sara Foxworth of Lincoln, Calif.; Mary Lou Walcroft and Cathy Gould, both of Twin Falls. The couple has 12 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

RALPH DRAKES

TWIN FALLS — Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Drake will celebrate their 60th anniversary Sunday with an open house at Woodstone Retirement Center.

Friends, acquaintances and the public are invited to call between 2 and 4 p.m.

Drake and the former Hazel Sturges were married Aug. 21, 1922, in Glendale, Calif. Drake graduated from medical school in Loma Linda, Calif., and interned at Portland Sanatorium and Hospital.

Mrs. Drake took nursing training in Loma Linda. The Drakes moved to Twin Falls in 1933 where he had a private practice until recently.

RAY F. BLAIRS

GLENNIS FERRY — Mr. and Mrs. Ray F. Blair will celebrate their 50th anniversary on Aug. 28 at the LDS Church in Glens Ferry.

Friends and relatives are invited to call between 2 and 5 p.m. Blair and the former Mary A. Godfrey met as students at Lava Hot Springs High School. They were married Aug. 29, 1932, in Logan, Utah.

Blair, a graduate of Utah State University, was employed by the federal government in Pocatello, Mountain View, and Glens Ferry. He also served in the Navy in World War II and retired as a lieutenant commander.

The couple leased a dry farm in 1952 which they operated for 23 years. In 1958 they began the development of Reservoir Ranch near Glens Ferry where they now reside.

The couple has eight children, Romona Himerich of Boise, Margene Horne of Juneau, Alaska; Dennis Blair of Idaho Falls; Laura-Lovin of Hagerman; Mary Lu Bishop of Foster City, Calif.; Ray Blair Jr. of Meridian, Olga Cook of Fairbanks, Ala., and Jim Blair of Pocatello. They have 18 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Law change delays wage postings

By JUDY BENGE
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

We have received a large volume of letters from readers who are still working and are unable to get their earnings posted to their work records. Since, in many cases, these earnings may increase benefit amounts, our readers have indicated frustration at not being able to get their earnings posted quickly.

In 1976, Public Law 94-202 changed the posting of wages to only once a year; previously they had been recomputed on a quarterly basis. This change has resulted in a delay in recompiling benefits. Instead of checking earnings on a quarterly basis, they are automatically checked now once annually by a process called Automatic Earnings Reappraisal Operation (AERO). After added earnings are found, the Social Security benefit is recomputed. This process takes about 18 months.

Anyone — including the self-employed person — who wants to speed up the process can do so by submitting proof to his or her local Social Security office of wages or earnings he or she paid Social Security taxes on.

A cover letter should be sent requesting a manual recalculation. This can be done by mail or in person.

Whether your benefit is recomputed manually or by the AERO process, you will still realize the same amount of money.

Valley happenings

Flag to be retired Friday

KIMBERLY — Members of the Twin Falls and Kimberly Veterans of Foreign Wars will retire a U.S. flag Friday at the Kimberly Senior Citizen Center. The ceremony, under the direction of district and state VFW officers, will precede the noon luncheon.

Garage sale set at Hazelton

VALLEY — The Valley Presbyterian Church in Hazelton will hold a yard sale from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday on the church lawn. Items will include fresh garden produce, clothing, and household items.

Open house slated at Richfield

RICHFIELD — Mrs. Elva Blumer will be honored at an open house from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday in observance of her 80th birthday. The event will be held at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. Jay Jones.

Mrs. Blumer was raised on the Marley tract near Richfield and has lived in Magic Valley most of her life.

Mental health group plans dinner

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Mental Health Association will hold a dinner meeting at 6:45 p.m. Monday at North's Chuck Wagon to discuss plans for the Magic Valley Country Music Association jamboree scheduled Oct. 4 and 5 at the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium.

Anyone interested in helping promote the country music event is urged to attend. Reservations should be made by Friday with Doris Youtz, mental health association president, at 733-7905.

Opera guild schedules event

TWIN FALLS — The Northwest Opera Guild will hold its fall luncheon Tuesday noon at Canyon Springs Inn. The program will be presented by Stagecoach Inc. of Boise on Germain. Interested persons are invited to attend. Call Doris Youtz, 733-7905 for reservations.

Junior Miss competition set

TWIN FALLS — The Kiwanis Club of Twin Falls will award approximately $10,000 in scholarships to contestants of the Twin Falls Junior Miss competition scheduled for 5 p.m. Sept. 18 at the College of Southern Idaho.

Lance Clow, chairman, said Kiwanians hope to increase the 1993 scholarships to include $3,000 in cash, five CSI Trustee scholarships, five J.B. Simplot matching gift scholarships to the College of Idaho, one 1-year tuition scholarship to Idaho State University and five matching gift scholarships to the Eastern Idaho Vocational Technical School in Idaho Falls.

Thirteen senior girls from area high schools will compete for the title. Tickets are $4 and may be obtained by contacting Brad Siegel at Jensen Jewelers at 733-6308.

Retired teachers will meet

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Retired Teachers will meet at 1 p.m. Sept. 3 at the Turf Club. Ruth and Elmo Farrar will provide the program. All retired teachers are invited and are asked to call 733-2504 to make reservations by Sept. 1.

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am 30, and John (not his real name) is 39. When we became engaged last March, I was thrilled because I'd been waiting for him to propose for two years. We agreed on an October wedding, but I went ahead and made all the arrangements — right down to having the invitations printed.

I've been paying for everything myself, but last night I asked John if he could help some. That's when he said some friends advised him to ask me to sign a statement saying everything he had before our marriage will be his alone. I told him I would sign anything and gladly. Then he said he still loves me but he wants to put our wedding on "hold" for a while!

Abby, we've lived together for nearly two years, so we're not exactly strangers. I love John and don't want to push him into anything he's not comfortable with, but our plans are made and the date is set. What should I do besides cry?

DEAR LOSING: Be grateful that John admitted that he's not ready for marriage. (He's not.) And since he suggested that you put the wedding on "hold," don't you be left holding the bag. Let John know that he's expected to share the expenses that have already been incurred.

DEAR ABBY: What does a mother do when she suspects her son has become a drug dealer? He doesn't fit the description of what one pictures a drug dealer to be. He is educated, clean-cut, well-mannered and dresses beautifully. He's 22 and still in college.

I wonder how he is able to drive an expensive new car, live in a beautiful apartment, travel first class and buy expensive clothes and gifts without working. He tells me he has done well on some "investments," but he knows I don't believe him.

Do I let him make his own mistakes? The price could be very high. He's my son and, of course, I love him.

NO NAME OR TOWN
DEAR NO NAME: If your son has chosen not to reveal the source of his mysterious income, there is nothing you can do about it. Eventually you will learn — to your sorrow, or your relief.

DEAR ABBY: I belong to a social club for single men and women over 50 years old. Being a man, I notice that most men look the women over and book the prettiest ones for dances right away.

Met I look the women over, then I pick the women I think will be the least likely to be asked to dance — the plain ones, the overweight, the very tall, the skinny, or the ones who look bashful and hang back. They are my first choice.

Why? Because I find them to be the best company. Most good-looking women are inclined to be conceited, spoiled and selfish. The plain ones tend to be more thoughtful and generous. Plain women are usually smarter, too. Most pretty women never worked too hard cultivating their brains because they were able to get by on their looks.

So my advice to gentlemen is: If you want a real jewel, you will find her wrapped in a plain package.

DEAR MEL: Generalizations are generally unfair, but your observations are worth noting.

CONFIDENTIAL TO DESPERATE IN GREENSBORO, N.C.: The darkest hour in a man's life is when he sits down to plan how to get money without earning it.

— Horace Greeley

SUPERPLAYS, SUPER-SAVINGS TIME

OVER 13.4% YEAR AFTER YEAR AFTER YEAR
U.S. GOVERNMENT GUARANTEED
AND YOU RECEIVE A CHECK EVERY MONTH

13.4%*

When you're looking for an investment that will give you a safe, high yield over an extended period of time, GNMA Mortgage Backed Certificates are something to think about.

With a U.S. Government guarantee on "the timely payment of both principal and interest", you receive a check every month. For years to come. And since many GNMA's are now selling at a discount from their original issue price, the face amount of interest (varying upwards from 6%) yields over 13.4% for current investors.*

What's more, although prices of the certificates are subject to normal market change, no interest penalty is charged should you decide to sell. They provide excellent liquidity.

To learn more about GNMA's, call or mail the coupon.
