Wealthy gain from tax break

By buying municipals

By ELMER W. LAMMI
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Americans with annual income greater than $50,000 get more than 94 percent of $4.6 billion in federal tax breaks because interest on state and municipal bonds is not taxed, Treasury Department figures released Saturday said.

The break for holders of the tax-free bonds is just one of many tax credits that benefit the affluent under current tax laws, Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., suggested in releasing the Treasury study.

Reuss, chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, called the analysis "an important contribution to ... the new drive for broad-based income taxation."

The study, Reuss said, shows that some revenue losses resulting from tax breaks provided under existing law "have exceedingly regressive impacts on our tax system." The Treasury study ranked the exclusion of interest on state and local bonds as the most "regressive" revenue loss because taxpayers with income of over $50,000 a year get 94.1 percent of the benefits.

According to the study, high-income taxpayers also get more than 83 percent of the $13.2 billion in taxes lost to the Treasury due to a tax break on long-term capital gains on other than home sales.

While the study indicated that these and certain other tax credits benefit high-income taxpayers more than others, they do not result in the biggest tax losses to the federal government.

The biggest loss, about $24.4 billion, comes from the exclusion of pension contributions and earnings from taxation. Only 26 percent of the benefits from such tax savings go to high-income taxpayers.

The second biggest loss in tax revenues, $19.8 billion, comes from the deductibility of mortgage interest on owner-occupied homes. The more affluent taxpayers get 30 percent of the benefits from that tax break, according to the study.

Reuss said the study was the "most current and thorough" analysis of revenue losses resulting from 33 separate exclusions, exemptions, deductions and other tax credits provided for under existing tax law.

MX decision sets course of national defense

By RICHARD C. GROSS
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Whatever President Reagan announces about the basing of the new MX missile Monday, he will seek to set a nuclear strategy for the nation to follow into the next century.

It is a momentous decision that may involve the expenditure of tens of billions of dollars, and its gravity is reflected in the number of studies and manpower resources over the past 20 months committed to the problem of finding a home for the 10-warhead missile.

At stake is the future of the decades-old U.S. commitment to a triad of nuclear options to be unleashed in the event the Soviet Union launches a first strike against the United States.

Analysis

States: land-based missiles, missiles aboard bombers and submarine-launched missiles. Reagan's decision could determine whether America's nuclear deterrent capability will continue to stand fast on this doomsday tripod.

The Pentagon, believing its present fleet of land-based missiles is growing obsolete, says the new MX is necessary to ensure U.S. capability to retaliate after a Soviet nuclear attack.

After several false starts by Presidents Carter and Reagan, Congress set a Dec. 1 deadline for a decision on how to base the 90,000-ton missile. Reagan plans to make his announcement ahead of schedule, Monday. Congress must approve his basing plan.

The United States, under a $180 billion strategic modernization program, already is committed to the $20.5 billion B-1B bomber and radar-elusive Stealth bomber to follow it by the early 1990s and is developing a new generation of submarine-launched missiles.

The Pentagon has been adamant in arguing only land-based missiles can pack the punch and have the stability to make them a viable deterrent. Bombers, it is said, can be shot down and submarine-launched missiles do not have the pinpoint accuracy of their landed brethren even though military specialists agree submarines are the most survivable leg of the triad.

The Air Force and other official sources have been saying for weeks Reagan has little choice but to pick the "closely spaced basing" plan known as dense pack because some 30 other options have proved unworkable, at least on paper.

The estimated $25 billion dense pack plan is what it sounds like: crowding the missiles so densely that the debris, heat and nuclear particles kicked up by the first exploding Soviet missile directed at the field will destroy or deflect other approaching missiles.

Critics of the plan say it will not work because the Soviets can devise a variety of methods to counter it.

In addition, 100 MXs would be buried in canisters that would be superheated by withstand pressures of 5,000 to 10,000 pounds per square inch. By contrast, the Minuteman missiles can survive blasts of up to 2,000 pounds per square inch.

The missile field would be 14 miles long and a mile wide and would be attached to an Air Force Base in Wyoming, Nevada or New Mexico.

Putting the missiles in canisters instead of silos would enable the United States to get around provisions of the Soviet-American Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty that prohibit the construction of additional silos.

The MX is designed to replace the Titan II missile, the first of which already has been dismantled at a base in Arizona. There are 31 more Titans and another 1,000 Minuteman IIs and IIs, all based west of the Mississippi River.

Brezhnev death chance for fresh start

By KIRSTEN O. LUNDBERG
United Press International

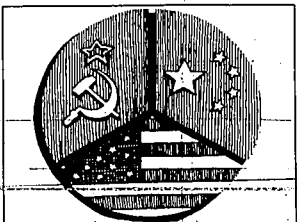

MOSCOW — The death of President Leonid Brezhnev has given Peking, Washington and Moscow an unexpected opportunity to re-examine their relationships and ease away from the confrontation politics of recent years.

But diplomats cautioned that there is a long way to go before overtures are translated into policy, as the three powers play the game of extending friendly feelers without giving each other any unearned advantage.

At the moment, much of the future development in these relations — and it's definitely a triangular relationship — depends on the next step. The United States takes "one analyst said."

The first was between new Communist Party chief Yuri Andropov and U.S. Vice President George Bush, with Secretary of State George Shultz also present, on the afternoon of the funeral.

It was the first such meeting on Soviet soil since President Gerald Ford met Brezhnev in Vladivostok in 1974 and the highest-level session anywhere since Brezhnev traveled to Vienna in 1979 to sign the Salt II agreement with Jimmy Carter. Bush called the half-hour meeting "frank, cordial and substantive" and the Soviets seemed to be likewise encouraged.

"They have a sense of expectation," said one diplomat who talked with Soviet officials after the meeting, "although it's all very rational. There's no indication the issues have changed or are going to."

The post-funeral meeting between Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko lasted nearly twice as long as that between Andropov and the Americans.

Signs of a thaw that began during three weeks of unofficial negotiations in October continued when Andropov singled out Huang for a chat during a reception following the funeral. Huang later met with Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Huang, the highest ranking Chinese to visit the Soviet Union in 18 years, resigned his post the day after he returned to Peking but Western observers said the move had nothing to do with his visit to Moscow.

Brezhnev seemed anxious in the last six months of his rule to patch up a 20-year rift with the Chinese, and the new regime is clearly of the same opinion.

It was only after Brezhnev's death, however, that the Chinese publicly conceded they, too, were in favor of a rapprochement. Huang said on return to Peking that he was "optimistic" about improving relations with Moscow.

Major areas of conflict still exist — China considers it vital that Soviet troops be withdrawn from Afghanistan and along the Sino-Soviet border. It also wants Moscow to deny support to Vietnam. The Soviets do not seem ready to take such actions but there may be token gestures in the offing.

The U.S. dialogue continued all week long. Some 250 American businessmen consulted with their Soviet counterparts in the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade Council, meeting for the first time in four years.

Prime Minister Nikolai Tikhonov offered the United States a chance for better relations built on the bedrock of improved trade ties, provided Washington stops using trade as a political weapon.

Embargoes and sanctions do not "inspire kindly feelings, but rather undermine the confidence of Soviet foreign trade organizations in the American market. Under such conditions, it is hard to expect a substantial growth in trade," Tikhonov said.

Merchants count on Christmas spending

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Some area merchants are nervous that the upcoming season to be jolly will see sales no higher than last year. And that might even prove to be an optimistic forecast for Christmas sales.

"The consumer has not been spending his money," says Richard Slaughter, the chief economist in the state's Division of Financial Management. Despite the federal income-tax cut that took effect in July, increases in savings and the substantial amount of debt that consumers have paid off during the last year, they lack confidence to increase their spending, he says. "The national data indicate consumers are in very good shape," he said. "On the other hand, a lot of them are out of work."

Some forecasters believe the Reagan to trim $30 billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a battle with Congress over the 1984 budget, President Reagan plans to ask for $25 billion to $30 billion more in domestic spending cuts, the New York Times reported Saturday.

Quoting unidentified White House officials, the newspaper said Reagan already has decided to cut $25 billion to $30 billion from the area of the budget that includes Social Security, federal pensions, veterans benefits and welfare and Medicaid for the poor.

Reagan met with his cabinet and budget officials Friday, and the Times reported that the defense budget was discussed, but no military spending cuts were mentioned.

The White House would not confirm the report. The cuts would reduce the projected deficit from about $180 billion — a figure that troubles Reagan's economic advisers — to about $150 billion, the newspaper said.

The cuts would come from an area of the budget worth about $500 billion in social spending programs, but the White House officials did not specify how the savings would be broken down, the newspaper said.

Three die in midair crash

LIVINGSTON, N.J. (UPI) — At least three people were killed Saturday in a collision between two light planes over a residential neighborhood, officials said. Essex County police Sgt. Philip Collins said debris from the collision was scattered over six blocks of suburban Livingston, located northwest of Newark.

Collins said no property damage or injuries were reported on the ground. The crash occurred about 4 p.m. and at least three people in the planes were killed, he said.

Lost elk hunters rescued

YAKIMA, Wash. (UPI) — Two teenagers who went elk hunting and were lost for six days in the frozen Cascade Mountains were rescued Saturday by a helicopter team who spotted them in a ravine.

David Smith, 17, and Chris Monson, 15, both of Selah, Wash., were pulled from the 175-foot ravine on Nelson Ridge and taken to Yakima-Valley Memorial Hospital, where they were listed in good condition.

One doctor called their condition "incredible," considering they had spent six days in the snow without survival gear.

The two suffered frostbite on their toes. "I knew he'd make it. He's tough," said Karen Winnegar, Smith's mother. "I had faith in him... just as many prayers were going up for him."

"It's been a terrible ordeal. A lot of tears have gone into this week."

She said her son and his friend became lost Monday near the Mount Aix trail in the mountainous Chinook Pass-Bumping Lake region.

They had made camp in a deserted shelter against snows that fell as deep as five feet around them, rescuers said.

Man frees hostage, shoots self

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — A man who held his girlfriend hostage for six hours while his wife begged him to surrender, "took care of business" early

Saturday and shot himself to death, authorities said.

David Zielinski, who had a long criminal record, released his girlfriend unharmed after gas-masked members of Buffalo's SWAT team fired tear gas into the house where he was holed up about 1 a.m. EST.

Zielinski, 35, then walked down the front porch steps of the home with a shotgun in his hands. But before police could take him into custody he placed the weapon under his chin and pulled the trigger.

"I'm sorry it ended that way," Capt. John O'Keefe said. "There was nothing we could do. We wanted to give him every chance. We talked to him, but he wanted to take care of business."

Inspector Daniel Redmond said Zielinski — who had been arrested at least 14 times and served time in prison — told members of the negotiating team "he didn't want to go back to jail."

Police said Zielinski had been living with his girlfriend, Irene Luce, 28, until about a week ago, when he moved out after a "violent argument."

Officials said he beat the woman last Friday because Ms. Luce declined his efforts at reconciliation.

Bomb threat diverts flight

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — A United Airlines Los Angeles-to-Chicago flight with 238 passengers aboard was diverted to Las Vegas and delayed 4½ hours on the ground Saturday because of a bomb threat, police said. No bomb was found.

Police said bomb threats also were made against two other United flights scheduled to depart Los Angeles.

Those flights, which were not identified, were on the ground in Los Angeles when the threat was made. A search turned up no bombs.

"The United reservations desk in Los Angeles received a bomb threat by someone who said, 'you might think that I killed the president,' said a Las Vegas Police Sgt. J. J. Smith.

United Airlines said it landed at 3:32 p.m. MST, then began a search of 338 pieces of luggage, McDonnell said.

"We were told by the captain we had to stop in Las Vegas because of a problem," said passenger Jack Billings of Holden, N.J.

Billings said passengers were notified flight 108 would be diverted to Las Vegas about 40 minutes after it left Los Angeles.

Passengers were taken off the plane and loaded on buses but then returned to the tarmac to identify their baggage as officials searched each piece.

Argentina getting Exocets

PARIS (UPI) — French officials admitted Saturday arms shipments to Argentina have resumed, including air-to-surface Exocet missiles, but said the deliveries were being made under old contracts placed before the Falklands war with Britain.

Officials confirmed reports by Saint Nazaire port authorities that a shipment of 200 tons of arms, including five SuperFlandard fighter bombers, and Exocet missiles, left the Breton coast harbor Thursday for Buenos Aires.

The reports came after Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Britain would be aggrieved if its allies send arms to Argentina before formal assurances from Buenos Aires that hostilities had definitively ended.

Christmas

Christmas buying season might be the time that consumers regain their confidence, begin buying more aggressively and help lead the economy out of its slump. But Slaughter does not expect that to happen in Idaho, however.

"I don't look for a quick turnaround in that (consumer confidence)," he says. Another reason he does not expect a booming Christmas — and one of particular importance in the agricultural-based economy of the Magic Valley — is that crop prices generally are depressed.

"I would anticipate a Christmas that may not be any better than last year at all," he says. "I don't see a big boom in Christmas this year."

And on a banker agrees with Slaughter's forecast. The good news is that the tax cut put more money in consumers' pockets, says Clyde Carney, the manager of the Idaho First National Bank branch in downtown Twin Falls. Interest rates are also falling.

But both these reasons — for Christmas cheer probably will be offset by lower farm income, he says. That, in turn, forced him to hold about even with last year.

Many merchants are making a similar forecast. At the same time, they are saying they may have to work harder to get their share of the Christmas-gift dollar.

"We really anticipate a break-even Christmas. We don't anticipate a real boom," he says.

"The trend up to this point is just flat. Usually you have an indicator of what the season is going to be like by now," he says.

Jack Muldoon, the manager of Penny Wise Drugs in Twin Falls basically agrees with that assessment.

"Business, as we see it, will be about the same as last year. We do not expect an increase over last year."

Muldoon expects to see a slightly different type of shopper this year, compared with those of Christmas past.

"We started planning for Christmas last January and February. We didn't want to be pessimistic," Muldoon says. "We felt people would spend just as much money, but for less expensive items."

Today's economy matches his projection. The season's start, however, the decision was made to put together a catalog of 200 gift items for under $20.

"Our hope and Irish prayer for 1983 is that 'farm' prices will go up," Muldoon says.

"There's no doubt about it, it's been harder to squeeze the money out of the customer," says David Pedersen of Pedersen's in Twin Falls.

But unlike some other merchants, he expects his sales of toys and ski and sports equipment to beat last year's sales during the Christmas season. Just as sales so far this year are ahead of last year.

"I have no reason to believe we won't have a banner year. Maybe it's the exception," he says.

Pedersen says he decided two years ago he was not willing to accept lower sales. That, in turn, forced him to change his business approach.

"We're taking shorter markups. We're looking in the market for better buys. We decided we needed to keep a closer watch on inventory," he says. "We anticipated it was not going to be as easy as it had been."

From what this has taught him, he says, "I would like to see the easy days again. Now that we know how to do it in the hard days, it would be easy."

Les Hazen, the general manager of Cain's Furniture and Appliances in Twin Falls, had a hard time finding a reason to be optimistic about Christmas sales until last month.

Cain's sales were down, compared with last year. But then October turned into the best October in the company's history.

"Out of the clear blue sky, whammo, it started opening up on us. We had business like we hadn't seen in a year," Hazen says.

Events like that have left him leery about trying to predict what consumers will do next, but his hope is that the surge in sales signals a bright Christmas season ahead.

"Who knows what's going to happen in November and December," he says. "We're optimistic. We think that we're going to have some really good business between now and the first of the year."

Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, speaking for those Americans who see their own interests served by a revival of trade — suggested — President Reagan might dust off a 1980 campaign slogan to work for a "new beginning" with the Soviets.

Peking is walking a delicate line between the super powers; but for the moment it seems to be in a good position.

The Chinese have their own reasons for keeping the process of rapprochement slow. As if to reassure the Americans that the Chinese are not "playing the Soviet card," Huang also met with Bush and Shultz in Moscow.

Diplomatic sources said the Chinese noted that the Soviets had shown no greater flexibility in considering Peking's concerns.

"The Chinese stand only to benefit from being courted by both the United States and the Soviets," said one analyst.

CRUISE THE PANAMA CANAL

Princess Cruises can take you on a spectacular 14-day vacation.

There is an awesome majesty about the Panama Canal. To stand on the observation deck and watch as a ship of nearly 20,000 tons is raised and then lowered 85 feet, is an experience unequalled.

To sail, in the space of 8 brief but unforgettable hours, from ocean to ocean, is a privilege only dreamed of for nearly four centuries.

To transit the Canal aboard a Princess is to do it justice. Vast floor-to-ceiling windows and spacious observation decks ensure a panoramic view of the entire passage. The lush jungles and mangrove swamps. Bright birds and exotic flowers.

Princess was the first to offer a regular Transcanal schedule. And they've been there more than anyone. This experience shows in convenient Saturday departures from San Juan and Los Angeles.

Princess Cruises offers more departures than any other cruise line. And no one offers more ports in 14 days. Departures January-May and September-December. Fare's including free air transportation to and from embarkation, and disembarkation points range from $2625-$7089. So for a great Transcanal cruise including the Mexican Riviera and the Caribbean, don't set sail without us.

*Fares are per person, double occupancy and include free airfare from 62 U.S. gateways.

Andropov facing big job

MOSCOW (UPI) — Now that the guests have left, Yuri Andropov can start putting his house in order.

The chores have been piling up for years, as the Politburo under Leonid Brezhnev made as few decisions as possible and virtually guaranteed job security throughout the Soviet hierarchy regardless of performance.

As a result, the economy is stagnating, relations have soured with the United States and the Kremlin is losing influence in key areas such as the Middle East.

But Andropov, who took over after a monthlong power struggle, is now in position to make some changes.

The domestic front probably will be first on the agenda, with a string of key appointments including a possible Politburo shuffle in the next few days.

With growth of industrial production down to 2.7 percent compared with a plan target of 4 percent and Soviet commentators persistently calling for each worker to turn out more, it is clear that the Soviet economy needs a jolt.

Frustrated economic managers are said to be one of the major interest groups, along with the military, who helped put Andropov in office.

YURI ANDROPOV
Supported by military

"We're in for a real roller coaster ride," said a veteran Kremlin-watcher. "This is a smart cookie, a fellow who will want to solve problems and not leave them ticking over as they have been for the last few years."

Another diplomat, who met

Andropov last week, said the new Soviet leader was alert and vigorous, unlike Brezhnev, who found it hard to concentrate during recent talks with foreign leaders.

"There is now for the first time in about 10 years a strong leader who can make decisions," said a senior Western diplomat. "We don't know what those decisions will be or even what the arguments will be about but he will be decisive."

Andropov made a name for suave decisiveness during his decades of work as a party leader, including 15 years as chief of the KGB and a term as ambassador to Hungary at the time of the Soviet invasion in 1956.

He is said to have kept close ties with the leadership that took over in Budapest and introduced reforms that made Hungary a showpiece of the socialist world.

This has led to some speculation that there may be a relaxation of central planning in the U.S.S.R., as well.

The intentions of the new leader will become clearer this week, after a meeting of the Soviet Legislature which is expected to endorse economic policies decided on by the Communist Party leadership.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — The Amway Corp., a company that sells the American dream, claims it is being blindsided by foreigners.

The Canadian government filed fraud charges against Amway, four senior officials and its Canadian subsidiary last week, claiming Amway misrepresented the value of its products over a 15-year period to bilk Canada of more than $28 million in customs duties.

The charges were not entirely unexpected.

Last summer the Detroit Free Press and the Windsor Star obtained internal memos which purported to indicate Amway had developed an elaborate trail of invoices to establish a false value for its Canadian exports.

Amway's two founders, Rich DeVos and Jay Van Andel, answered by threatening a $500 million libel suit against the Free Press. No suit has been filed.

"There was no fraud, no cover-up, no conspiracy to defraud the Canadian government," DeVos said last week. "Every action by Amway was done with the full knowledge and consent of Revenue Canada."

DeVos said the charges resulted from Canada's antiquated trade system, the actions of a disgruntled former Amway executive and an unflinching Ontario prosecutor.

Any culpability, the founders said, is on the part of the Canadian government, which "arbitrarily" raised the value of Amway exports and apparently intends to make Amway

"a victim of an anti-American trade war."

The answer delivered before dozens of television cameras at Amway's "Center for Free Enterprise" in suburban Ada, Mich., was the type of aggressive action that has made Amway the nation's No. 2 direct sales firm — second only to Avon.

The company owns the Mutual Broadcasting System, the Amway Grand Plaza Hotel and three office buildings in Grand Rapids, a posh island resort in the British Virgin Islands, Nutrilite Products Inc. and two 50,000-watt radio stations in Chicago and New York.

Van Andel and DeVos, high school buddies born and raised in Grand Rapids, founded Amway in Van Andel's basement in 1959. They started their business with liquid detergent and have stayed on the soapbox ever since, hawking their brand of the American dream.

The Amway marketing plan is based as much on recruiting as sales. Each distributor shares in profits of those he brings into the business.

That arrangement, investigated by the Federal Trade Commission as a pyramid scheme but later vindicated, produced a side product: Inspiration.

In the course of selling Amway, DeVos has become a top inspirational speaker.

China's 'youth' assuming power

PEKING (UPI) — China's appointment of new foreign and defense ministers appears to presage the start of a shuffle of government ranks intended to bring in younger and more able technocrats, Western analysts and official news reports said.

The current leadership under Deng Xiaoping injected new blood into the Communist Party apparatus at a party congress last September. Deng is also in the midst of a drive to control the military through the appointment of allies to key posts.

Now the government bureaucracy is undergoing a less dramatic but important fine tuning in advance of next week's National Peoples Congress, China's version of parliament.

The most high-ranking of the personnel changes were announced Friday. Foreign Minister Huang Hua, 69, whose resignation had been planned for a year, was succeeded by his senior deputy, Wu Xianfan, a 66-year-old Asian affairs expert.

Announcing the appointments, the official Xinhua news agency said they would be followed by "other appointments and removals" within the government.

It did not elaborate, but Western analysts expect personnel changes at the deputy minister and department head levels in an effort to streamline the bureaucracy and retire those too old to be effective in their jobs.

Gen. Zhang Aiping, 72, a veteran of the Long March -- the 1935-36 Communist retreat across China to the northwest where they set up new bases to fight the Chinese Nationalists -- and head of army research and development, was appointed defense minister. He succeeds Geng Biao, whose removal had been awaited since he lost his important party posts at the September congress.

In both cases, diplomats agreed the changes signaled no important policy or power shifts, although some analysts believed Zhan's appointment could give impetus to efforts to modernize China's military doctrine, still partly wedded to the late Mao Tse-tung's concept of a guerrilla-style "peoples war."

Congressman chokes on food, heart stops

PORT CHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — Missouri Rep. Dick Bolling, who suffered a heart attack after choking on a piece of lobster, was reported in improved condition Saturday at United Hospital, officials said.

The 66-year-old Democrat, who chairs the powerful House Rules Committee, was listed in critical condition after being rushed to the hospital Friday night, but a spokeswoman said his condition had been upgraded to serious.

"His vital signs are stable. He is fully alert and comfortable and we are continuing to evaluate his condition," she said.

Bolling was having dinner in Port Chester with congressional aide Chip Sayer when he collapsed after choking on a piece of lobster that became lodged in his windpipe, officials said.

At one point, Bolling's heart stopped and he was placed on a respirator, said Alex Petrovic, a spokesman for St. Joseph Hospital in Kansas City, who was in contact with the New York hospital.

Bolling was discharged from the Kansas City Hospital Sunday, where he had been admitted Oct. 31 for carotid endarterectomy, the unblocking of the arteries of his neck.

He flew from Kansas City to Rochester, N.Y., to rest and visit friends, Petrovic said. He had been scheduled for another checkup with his hometown physician.

The congressman, who spent 17 terms in Washington representing Missouri's 5th Congressional District, did not seek re-election this year.

Consensus is for sales-tax increase

The 50-50 initiative is now on the books as part of Idaho law, approved by the voters in the November election, but no one should be under any illusion that its passage will really ease the tax burden faced by Idaho homeowners.

Indeed, it may make the burden worse, because the tax-load-now-borne-in-part-by-property-taxes-will be shifted further toward other forms, chiefly sales. If we read the mood of the coming Legislature correctly.

The Idaho Taxpayers Association sponsored its annual conference this last week on state financing, and the picture emerging from that session is that the initiative may well have serious long-term financial impact.

Some legislators disagree, but the initiative is probably constitutional, despite language in the constitution that requires taxes to be uniform across a class of taxpayers.

The Legislature, however, can amend an initiative, and there was some sentiment at the session for that course when the Legislature reconvenes in January, despite the obvious political risks.

The main impact of the initiative, however, will not be felt until the 1984 fiscal year, beginning July 1. Of more immediate concern is how the state will make up what appears to be at least a $45 million shortage in the current year's budget by the end of June.

Delay, as we have said, will make the choices that much tougher by forcing the taxpayers (us) to cover the amount in only a few months.

The consensus of political and economic wisdom at last week's session was that some form of sales tax — combined with another round of budget cuts — is in the wind. If levied early in 1983, a 1-cent additional sales tax might cover most of the shortage.

But if the issue is unresolved until March or April, a 2- or 3-cent addition probably would be needed, combined again with another round of budget cuts.

In either case, the present consensus seems to be that the tax would have a definite "sunset" clause to expire at the end of the 1983 fiscal year.

Whatever the course, the options are clearly narrowing as a decision is delayed. Support for a special session in December is evaporating, despite the obviously tough economic decisions which lie ahead.

Right now, the players are mostly fiddling while Rome is burning. Remember that in March when they start pointing fingers at each other.

The press' main role is to inform

BOCA RATON, Fla. — I flew down to Florida the other day to share the hardships of Boca Raton with a couple of hundred newspaper publishers and to take the waters with them. My assignment was to moderate a panel discussion on "the role of the press in a free society."

Let me share a little spook talk with you, Most of the editors and publishers of my acquaintance have a curious blind spot. We cover everybody else's business in the thought that everybody else's business is of interest to our readers, but we seldom cover our own business.

This is self-abnegation, or something. We don't regard ourselves as interesting. Thus we report faithfully upon gatherings of doctors, lawyers, educators, bankers and the like, but when it comes to our own constitutions, the attitude is — well, I mean, who cares?

In any event, you should know that we of the press are forever convening for exercises in professional omphaloskepsis. That is an irresistible $10 word meaning "meditation while staring fixedly at one's navel." We do a lot of this sort of thing. We worry about about what our job is, and whether we are doing it well. Because we are such lovable people, we worry that so many persons seem not to love us. We worry about our industry: It is as flat as the ace of spades. The number of daily newspapers slips a little year by year; our cumulative circulation is stuck in the neighborhood of 61 million. We worry all the time.

What is the role of the press in a free society? Let me suggest one thing that our role is not. A couple of hundred years ago Edmund Burke was holding forth in Parliament. He mentioned the three estates of England — the Lord Spiritual, the Lords Temporal and the British Commons. Then he looked to the press gallery: "And yonder sits the Fourth Estate, more important than them all." We have suffered from swollen heads ever since.

Burke's exaggeration gained contemporary currency in 1959, with publication of Douglas Cater's "The Fourth Branch of Government." Two years ago, in his history of The New York Times, Harrison Salisbury swallowed the idea whole: The national press, he said "has quite literally become the coequal branch of government."

That is nonsense, pernicious nonsense, and it ought to be squelched. Nobody ever elected us to anything. In a free society the press is not literally, or metaphorically, or any other way, a branch of government. Our seats at the great game of government are not in the dugout, but in the press box. We ought never to forget it.

What is the role of the press? I will give it to you in one infinitive: to inform. Oh, we have other roles. We have some responsibility as the working, everyday trustees of the written word. We are an important medium of advertising, including legal advertising. We seek to amuse, to entertain, to perform useful services, to promote such benign civic causes as a community fund.

But our first duty, or so it seems to me, is simply to inform — to report to our readers as accurately, as objectively, as fairly as we can the news of the day. In our news columns we ought to cover the who, where, when and how, reflecting events of public interest as dispassionately as a mirror upon a wall. Let us save our subjective notions of "why" for the editorial writers and the pundits.

This is a sore point with me. Reporters ought to report, opinion writers ought to opine, and the laws of quarantine ought to be observed. One reason we are in trouble is that in the great national media, that distinction constantly is blurred. Every reporter, it often seems, is into "analysis" or "interpretation." He's "in depth," he yearns to go beyond the facts, sinking his subject in a corner pocket with a little spin on the cue ball.

For the past 10 years we have been on a binge of "investigative journalism." The very phrase gives me the willies. Beyond the level of yesterday's Dow Jones or last night's ballgame, all journalism is "investigative." It's high time to sober up, and in our news columns get back to Sergeant Friday's quest for the facts, ma'am, nothing but the facts. That task alone is quite enough for the press in any age.

Budget standoff may leave citizens holding tax bag

The outlook is dim that Gov. John Evans will call legislators to Boise for a special budgeting session in December.

With the total state revenue shortage appearing to be about $60 million, Evans, a Democrat, is asking legislative leaders to consider immediate fiscal remedies — meaning either budget cuts or tax increases, or both.

But in a talk Wednesday, Senate Majority Leader James Risch, R-Boise, said a special session would be too costly and "probably fruitless."

And Evans says that if the leadership cannot assure him some success, he will not bring the lawmakers to Boise. Instead, he simply will allow them to settle Idaho's budgeting problems after they convene Jan. 10.

Meanwhile, it's the taxpayer who is really being held hostage during this time of inflation. Certainly, we don't want to pay for a worthless special session. But it is equally important to remember that the later the budgeting remedies come, the more severely our pocketbooks will be affected.

This is precisely Evans' argument, and it is the same stand taken during the election by his GOP rival, Lt. Gov. Phil Batt.

"The less time we allow ourselves to correct for this shortfall, the more severe the remedy will have to be," Evans said last week.

Undoubtedly, he speaks the truth: Only seven-and-a-half months remain in the current fiscal year. If legislators wait until February or March to rework state budgets and revenues, those changes will have to be implemented in an abrupt four-month period.

State analysts say 1982-83 revenue will amount to about $406 million. The budget passed by legislators last session — and still in effect — is for $465 million.

Evans already has initiated several boldface and budget-saving measures, but according to Risch, a $30 million shortage still remains looming on the horizon.

The governor believes that additional measures can be taken before the year's end — budget-cutting, removal of some tax exemptions, etc. There's also talk of a temporary 1-cent sales tax.

But all these remedies would be most effective if enacted immediately. They cannot be adopted by the Legislature next year and made retroactive. And if enacted next year, there probably would not be enough time left for these remedies to bring in enough money to balance the budget by July 1.

Risch probably is equally correct in his statement that most Republican leaders do not favor these types of actions.

They do favor budget cuts, but they frown at suggestions to eliminate the newly passed investment tax credits, new job credits and fast depreciation for business property.

And if the leaders don't like the remedies being considered for a special session, then why have one?

Many Republicans also differ from Evans in saying that public-school funding should be cut, along with other state programs.

Meanwhile, Risch is warning that unless both the governor and the Legislature compromise between their budgeting ideals, then the shortage may continue until it automatically triggers increased property taxes as a means of maintaining the public schools.

If payments are not made in compliance with the already-passed public school appropriation, the state constitution requires that county officials immediately levy increased property taxes to make up the difference. Those tax collections would be made in December 1983 and June 1984, so school districts would have to issue tax-anticipation notes in the meantime in order to pay the bills.

Both Risch and Sen. David Little, R-Emmett, the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, are recommending that the Legislature reduce the appropriations to public schools, as one part of reworking the state budget in accordance with the revenue shortage.

It's a move that Evans vehemently opposes because he believes that new business will not migrate to a state offering its children inferior education. And there begins an apparent faceoff — one that could leave the Legislature in limbo during the 1983 regular session.

Evans already has said that he probably would veto a negative appropriation for education, as well as a repeal of the automatic property-tax triggering provision.

Therefore, it is unlikely that Evans and GOP leaders will agree to a special session. And for the same reasons, the regular session next year could prove to be an awkward and slow faceoff between political parties.

I'm a veteran. Just what is a veteran?

Someone who fought in a war or someone who served in the United States military?

How about both of them. All veterans of this country have been treated with great respect. Our wars have been just and for freedom and supported by both the people and the news media except for one, Vietnam.

Our veterans of the entire Vietnam era have been treated badly. They can't even get treated for things that happened to them in the service. They are being treated like the Orange and the delayed stress syndrome.

I'm proud I'm an American and a veteran, but how the American government and its people have treated its veterans makes me disgusted. The people of the U.S. treat the refugees from Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos better and with more respect than they do our own American Veterans.

I'm a 32-year-old Vietnam era veteran. I am a patriot and proud of it. I enlisted in the Army Security Agency for four years during the Vietnam war. I volunteered for Vietnam but was sent to Korea instead because that was where I was needed.

There were 20 of us in my electronics class in the Army. Of us, there were only nine who survived the Vietnam war. The ones who died in Vietnam. I remember on Veterans Day.

So remember, Veterans Day; that those veterans who served, fought and died, did so for not only America but for you.

Thanks for 'Family Circus'

I would like to thank Bill Keane, the creator of the daily "Family Circus" cartoon for his excellent cartoon. It is one of the few cartoons my children (and I) can enjoy. It also provides an example of a two-parent family happy in a situation. Unfortunately, two-parent families are diminishing, but what parent, caught in this situation for whatever reason, wants their children to follow in their footsteps?

Thanks, Mr. Keane, for giving us some sunshine "mid the clouds." I wish the television and other media would follow your good example.

Craig idea a good one

President that Congressman Larry Craig is going to introduce a constitutional amendment to change the term of congressmen from 2 to 4 years.

It would also be helpful if he would include a limit of three terms on both senators and congressmen, as one part of reworking the state budget in accordance with the revenue shortage.

With the seniority system that prevails, members who chair committees can stall legislation indefinitely. It also would provide an efficient turn-over to keep the organization up-to-date with the times.

Larry Craig and Steve Symms are two of our elected officials who have guts enough to introduce legislation which will improve the way our congress operates. Instead of maintaining the status quo.

Good luck Larry.

Genetic transplants could make slaves

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The idea of transplanting human genes into animals to create sub-human hybrids for use as slaves is repugnant, but the history of mankind is such that the possibility cannot be dismissed, a presidential commission reports.

Although there is no evidence any government is attempting to use gene splicing for unacceptable political purposes, the commission said, the role of eugenic theory in Nazi Germany's atrocities against Jews, Slavs and the mentally retarded makes such fears valid.

The administration released "Splicing Life: A Report on the Social and Ethical Issues of Genetic Engineering with Human Beings" by the President's Commission for the Study of Ethical Problems in Medicine and Biomedical and Behavioral Research congressional hearings on the issue this past week.

The commission undertook the study in 1980 because religious groups expressed concern to the White House that the new technology was not being monitored sufficiently to assure it would not be used in unacceptable ways.

Both the report and testimony before the oversight subcommittee of the House Science and Technology emphasized the benefits humanity could realize from genetic engineering.

Scientists and medical experts said genetic engineering eventually could eliminate some of the 3,000 identified human genetic defects and eradicate such inheritable illnesses as sickle-cell anemia, cystic fibrosis, muscular dystrophy, hemophilia and severe blood diseases.

But the commission found concern over genetic engineering valid and urged a permanent watch.

"Those who believe that the current treatment of animals — in experimentation, food production, and sport — is morally suspect would not be alone in being troubled by the prospect of exploitive or insensitive treatment of creatures that possess even more human-like qualities than chimpanzees or porpoises do," the report said.

"Could genetic engineering be used to develop a group of virtual slaves — partly human, partly lower animal — to do people's bidding?" it asked.

Speaker warns against teaching 'fad' courses

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities said Saturday educators are leading college curricula with faddish subjects instead of teaching rigorous courses in the humanities.

If Plato, Aristotle and Goethe are not facing well in course offerings and class attendance, it is because "rigorous modes of inquiry in organized fields of knowledge have been replaced by a jumble of indiscriminate offerings," William Bennett said.

The threat to the humanities comes not from advocates of expanded technical and professional training, but from within the professional education establishment, Bennett said in a speech to the annual convention of the National Council of Teachers of English.

"Humanities education is no longer an introduction to... the best thought and knowledge. It is, instead, a collection of disconnected and often eccentric areas of inquiry," said Bennett, who has taught law and philosophy at Harvard and Boston University.

Bennett said he recently met a student who said he was not taking religion courses because "no one in the religion department believed anything, and he wasn't taking any philosophy courses because no one in the philosophy department recommended anything."

"When most people think and talk of education in the humanities — philosophy, history, literature, and so on — they have other, more opaque things in mind. They talk about something called 'personal development' — and say it is desirable," Bennett said.

Reagan seeks fight against barriers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan warned Saturday that the international trading system is "at a crossroads" and said the United States will oppose protectionism at home and abroad.

In his weekly nationwide radio address delivered from Camp David, the president described the worldwide recession as being "bad news for all of us," but said building trade barriers could lead to disaster.

Warning up for the speech by giving technicians a sound level just before going on the air, Reagan jokingly offered an even blunter economic assessment.

"My fellow Americans," he said, "I've talked to you on a number of occasions about economic problems and opportunities our nation faces and I am prepared to tell you, it's a hell of a mess."

NBC News reported that shortly before Reagan went on the air budget director David Stockman told him in a meeting of economic advisers that the budget deficit could go as high as $197 billion unless more budget cuts are made.

The network quoted White House sources as saying Reagan "was not surprised" by the pessimistic assessment.

In his address, the president strongly emphasized his opposition to protectionism.

"There are some who seem to believe that we should run up the American flag in defense of our markets. They would embrace protectionism again and insulate our markets from world competition," Reagan said.

Democrat says president has head in clouds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's Saturday plea for opposition to protectionism in international trade was called "an unrealistic hope" by Rep. James Oberstar, D-Minn.

In the Democratic response to the president's address, Oberstar said Reagan had voiced "fifty principles" shared by all Americans, Republicans and Democrats alike.

But he said it would be "a terrible mistake" to expect other trading nations, including U.S. allies, "to make concessions in the face of their own economic problems."

"The president's message is an unrealistic hope that sidesteps the solutions we need now to solve our domestic economic crisis," he said.

In his speech from the Camp David presidential retreat, Reagan said international trade was "at a crossroads" and warned against the erection of trade barriers as a means of protecting domestic industries.

Oberstar, who was reelected to a fifth term this month, put the major emphasis on the domestic economy in his response to Reagan.

"The mandate of November 2 was a call for jobs and economic recovery," he said, adding that Congress and the president would have to cooperate in coming up with a workable program during the lame duck session of Congress.

"The people will not tolerate a tug of war stalemate between the White House and Capitol Hill," he said.

Oberstar said the Democrats are proposing a program for economic recovery, including the rebuilding of the nation's highways and bridges — a program that Reagan has indicated he may support if funded through an increase in the federal gasoline tax.

Spacesuit sent back

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — Technicians returned a broken space suit fan to the manufacturers for further testing to determine what caused the fan's failure aboard the space shuttle Columbia, a spokesman said.

A fan failure in the life-support backpack system of astronaut Joe Allen's spacesuit, coupled with a regulator malfunction in astronaut Bill Lenoir's space suit, caused NASA officials to cancel a three-hour jaunt in space Monday.

Johnson Space Center spokesman Dave Alter said a team of about 20 technicians tested the electrical input power system of the fan in Allen's suit Saturday and then shipped the equipment back to the manufacturer, United Technologies Hamilton Standard division in Windsor Locks, Conn., for further testing.

"They will continue to do failure analysis test on the fan until we don't have much yet," Alter said.

The fan, which ensures a flow of oxygen through the space suit, was considered more life-threatening than the regulator problem in Lenoir's suit. The regulator controls the pressure of air which flows into the suit.

Alter said technicians failed to find the reason behind the regulator malfunction and it, too, was returned to the manufacturer.

Without the component parts to inspect, the team of experts in investigating the problems with the $2 million space suits spent most of Saturday going over test procedures, Alter said.

"They're reviewing previous test procedures and reviewing previous uses of the equipment and going over the documentation to see if they can come up with an understanding of how it (the equipment) was handled," Alter said.

Pope attacks Mafia violence

PALERMO, Sicily (UPI) — Pope John Paul II, speaking less than 24 hours after four people were shot and killed by underworld gunmen, Saturday attacked the Mafia by name and condemned the "barbarous violence" that has bloodied Sicily's capital city.

John Paul, guarded by tight security at the start of his two-day visit to the center of the Sicilian Mafia's lucrative heroin trafficking trade, called the criminal violence that has claimed at least 127 lives this year an offense to man's dignity.

"The incidents of barbarous violence that for too long have bloodied the streets of this splendid city offend human dignity," John Paul said to the cheers of some 50,000 people in the heavily guarded main square.

Thousands of police lined Palermo's palm-dotted streets to greet the pope on his visit to the Sicilian capital, his third and longest trip in Italy outside the Vatican. As an increased security measure, hundreds of officers were sent to Palermo from other parts of Sicily and mainland Italy.

Palermo police reported they detained three young men, two of German origin and another foreigner, who had empty pistol cartridges and a handgun in their backpacks as they walked along the pope's motorcade route.

A police spokesman said two of the three were arrested on charges of possessing weapons. Police identified the pair as Yorg Hans Andersen, 21 and Georg Jurgens Fisher, 20, both of Worms, West Germany.

Police said a third man, Dieter Horst Hessel, 39, was detained but released after police determined that he was not with the other two Germans. A spokesman said there was no evidence the weapons were involved in any way with the Mafia.

The pope spoke just blocks from where gunmen ambushed Italy's top Mafia fighter, Gen. Carlo Alberto Dalla Chiesa, and his wife three months ago.

John Paul, without using the word Mafia in his address to city officials, called the killings a "phenomenon contrary to justice, equality and social peace that pollute human relationships."

Later, in a speech at Palermo University, John Paul did mention the Mafia when he told university professors they should use their positions to mold young people courageous enough to reject organized crime.

"You have another power which springs from the strength of ideas and which is today needed more than ever as an antidote to profound evils, particularly those connected with the Mafia phenomenon," the pope said.

The only way to "overcome the evil is through the patient work of forming consciences," he said.

The pope spoke less than 24 hours after four people, including two teenagers, were killed in the Palermo area, victims of two attacks in the continuing war among Mafia families for control of drug and protection rackets.

Drug trafficking, extortion, loan sharking, cigarette smuggling and other rackets provide the Mafia with revenues of several billion dollars a year, according to U.S. and Italian investigators.

Walesa confers with archbishop

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa met with Archbishop Jozef Glemp Saturday in the former union chief's first trip outside Gdansk since his release from 11 months of internment.

There was no word of the subject of the 2 1/2-hour meeting between Walesa and Glemp, the Roman Catholic primate of Poland who had personally appealed for the release of the Solidarity leader.

The last reported meeting between the two men took place four days before martial law was imposed on Dec. 13 and Walesa was taken into detention.

Lebanese counting on 'the American team'

By United Press International

Lebanese Prime Minister Cherif Wazzan met U.S. special envoy Philip Habib Saturday and said he was leaning on "the American team" to break the diplomatic deadlock over the withdrawal of foreign forces from Lebanon.

"We are working through the American team to clear all differences," Wazzan said after leaving the Baabda presidential palace where Habib also met with President Amin Gemayel.

Wazzan told the state-run television that Habib "so far has nothing new yet, but he is holding contacts with us and later with other parties to see how we can all work together to end the presence of non-Lebanese forces in Lebanon."

Habib would only say "we are working" toward a negotiated withdrawal of all foreign troops from Lebanon.

In Syria, President Hafez Assad accused Israel of planning new "conspiracies" and warned Arab states to prepare for further Israeli expansion.

In a speech praising Soviet weaponry, he accused the United States of having full knowledge of the Israeli invasion of Lebanon and endangering Arab security by catering to Israel's needs.

"After Lebanon, Israel looks at us with greater spite," Assad said in a two-hour address to the 20th congress of the General Union of Syrian Workers.

"There will be new conspiracies after Lebanon. We should be prepared to face the enemy whatever the cost is."

Assad accused Israel of having a "historic greed for Lebanon. Israel wants to expand without limit in the Arab world."

Sources in Damascus also said Assad had made two secret visits to the Soviet Union since Israel invaded Lebanon almost six months ago and was now receiving vast quantities of Soviet military hardware.

Socialist takes lead

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (UPI) — Socialist Leonel Brizola took an unofficial 125,000-vote lead Saturday in Rio de Janeiro's key gubernatorial election amid a bitter dispute with the military over a five-day delay in official results.

Unofficial computations of 62 percent of the some 6 million votes cast in Monday's state election showed Brizola, 60, leading pro-government candidate Wellington Moreira Franco by 125,000 votes.

Brizola, the Democratic Labor Party candidate, did not officially claim victory, though he did say his evaluation of returns showed he should win by 300,000 votes.

But Moreira Franco, refused to concede defeat and the number of votes officially counted and announced by the electoral court system amounted to only 2 percent.

Brizola warned delays in the official vote count had created an air of tension that could lead to fraud.

Last Monday's nationwide federal, state and municipal elections were seen as a key test of the military's commitment to its pledge to gradually return Brazil to democratic rule.

Nursing home patients to be cut

BOISE (UPI) — About 700 current patients of Idaho nursing homes would be declared ineligible for Medicaid benefits under new cost-cutting regulations drafted by the state Health and Welfare Department.

The rules, which were formally issued by the agency Friday, are designed to curb expenses to save the state more than $5 million in the remainder of fiscal year 1983 — saving the Medicaid budget from a deficit projected under current expense levels.

The agency expects to save about

$2.5 million by reducing to $400 from the current $610 level the maximum monthly income allowed for a nursing home patient to qualify for Medicaid payments, said William Whitman, state medical assistance supervisor.

Whitman said the state would save another $500,000 or more through changes in other parts of the Medicaid program, which is funded primarily from federal sources but also receives more than $15 million annually in state general-account dollars.

The rules issued by Health and Welfare Director Les Purce Friday afternoon now must go through a formal review process that could be concluded by early next year, when the Legislature will review the changes. In any case, the regulations would not go into force before February, Whitman said.

Purce called an emergency meeting of the Medical Care Advisory Committee Nov. 12 to consider ways of trimming expenses under the Medicaid program.

Because of two general-fund rollbacks imposed upon state agencies by Gov. John Evans so far this fiscal year, the total Medicaid budget was slashed to $52.4 million from the original legislative appropriation of $58.1 million.

Irrigation law is confusing

BILLINGS, Mont. (UPI) — Proposed rules for implementing the 1982 Reclamation Act are confusing and vague, irrigators have told Bureau of Reclamation officials.

Montana Water Development Association spokesman Robert Fagerberg of Fairfield, urged adoption of rules "that lay people can understand."

Frederick Mavencamp, representing the Malta and Glasgow irrigation districts in Montana, asked for a 90-day extension of the Dec. 14 deadline for comments so farmers can try to figure out what they are being asked to comment on.

None of the approximately 50 speakers at a Friday hearing by Bureau of Reclamation officials seemed sure about what some provisions of the proposed regulations mean.

The law increases to 960 acres the often-ignored limit of 160 acres on the amount of an individual's land that can be irrigated with federally subsidized water in the West. The new limit for corporations or partnerships with more than 25 members is 640 acres.

One section of the rules would require irrigators and corporations to submit detailed plans on how they plan to conserve federal water in the future.

Dean House of the Shoshone Irrigation District complained of "unnecessary, non-productive paperwork," and said existing conservation plans are so numerous they are "running out of our ears."

Deputies' lawyer vows to continue push for more pay

Despite dismissal of suit vs. commission

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The leader of the drive by Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies for better working conditions says that he will follow the advice of a judge who earlier this month dismissed a lawsuit filed by the deputies.

Jerome lawyer Greg Fuller, who represents the deputies, says he now will concentrate his efforts on securing a political victory for the deputies. "The point is, I'm going to keep the pressure on the county commissioners until they do something," Fuller says. "I'm going to keep going until something is done."

Fuller plans to put an initiative issue before the voters at a special election early next year. Assuming they approve the initiative, the county commissioners may be mandated to provide more money to the sheriff's office.

Since the proposed initiative will not call for a tax increase, the move would require the commissioners to raise the additional funds from existing sources, such as the budgets of other county departments.

"The initiative is the one that's going to take the time," Fuller says. "That's the one I've been grinding up for a long time. That's the big hammer."

Fuller has tried the legal route by filing, on behalf of the deputies, a lawsuit aimed at the county commissioners.

The deputies sought a court ruling that would have reversed the commissioners' position that a state law prohibits them from redistributing funds once the county budget tentatively is approved.

The deputies also sought a judicial determination that the funding of their department constituted an emergency, because county law enforcement was inadequate. Such a ruling would have entitled the office to more funding.

But on Nov. 12, Judge Douglas Kramer, of the Fifth District Court in Halley, dismissed the lawsuit. County officials, who argued that the issue was a political one, rather than judicial.

Kramer ruled on the case because the Fifth District Court judges in Twin Falls disqualified themselves from the suit.

However, Kramer's decision does not mean the issue is dead as far as the courts are concerned, Fuller says. Although he says he cannot be specific, Fuller says that he will spend time devising a new strategy.

Some deputies are saying privately that they are disappointed not only with Kramer's decision, but also with Fuller because he did not appear in Halley to argue the case. Instead, Fuller's associate, Jim Meservy, represented the deputies.

Fuller says he was unable to travel to Halley because of a scheduling conflict.

"It really wasn't a question of who argued. It was a question of law," Fuller says. "I'm not going to impress Judge Kramer any more than Jim Meservy."

Blaine County hospital picks temporary chief

HAILEY — The assistant controller for the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center has been selected as the interim administrator for the Blaine County Medical Center.

Greg Daniels, an employee of MVRMC for more than two years, will oversee operations at the Blaine County Medical Center until a permanent administrator is chosen, according to Kendall Kinghorn, the chairman of the Blaine hospital board of directors.

Earlier this month, Frank McNamara, the Blaine hospital administrator for more than four years, resigned at the request of the hospital board.

The Blaine County board then worked with MVRMC to find a person to temporarily run the hospital.

Kinghorn said Daniels will take a leave of absence from MVRMC, acting as an independent contractor with the Blaine hospital for about 60 days.

Daniels has a degree in business administration from Boise State University and has worked as a respiratory services technician at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise.

He has spent about 10 years in the health-care business, according to Sue Summers, MVRMC's community-relations director.

Kinghorn said Daniels will begin work at the Halley hospital Monday.

Health board succeeds in covering its deficit

But same problem remains for fiscal '83

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "We made it," was the happy message director Gerald Hurst brought to the board of directors of the South Central District Health Department last week.

The department's reductions and careful management, a projected $90,000 deficit for the 1982 fiscal year has been covered, allowing the department to end the year in the black, Hurst told the board. The department's fiscal year ended Sept. 30.

The department also was forced to absorb a 3.5 percent rollback in funds ordered by Gov. John Evans, which trimmed about $10,000 from the dis-tribut's revenues.

Budgeted expenditures for fiscal 1982 came to $1,279 million. Actual expenditures for the year came to $1,183 million, or about 92.5 percent of the budgeted figures, according to Hurst. That left about $96,000 to cover a $30,200 deficit and leave a $3,891 surplus.

Two areas where major cost savings occurred were in the health-education department, which spent only 62 percent of its budgeted funds, and the health board, which spent about 66 percent of its budgeted funds.

The department now has five less full-time positions than last year and

U.S. arm-sales question put to high-school teams

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Why is the United States selling arms abroad and what, if anything, should be done to stop it?

While such questions, at first glance, would appear to be more the province of the United Nations, national and international leaders might not have wasted their time Saturday if they had stopped in for a few hours at Twin Falls High School. If they had, they would have heard these arguments:

- The United States is selling arms abroad at the expense of its own military stockpile.
- By selling arms abroad, the United States retains some diplomatic leverage with other countries.
- As the chief military supplier of another country's weapons, the United States could find itself drawn into that country's wars.

By providing arms to other nations, the United States avoids the risk of nuclear proliferation.

Certainly, it was a question that could be debated for as long as the debaters had the time. And a group of 150 high-school students proved that point this weekend.

"This is a very broad and complex topic," said Twin Falls High School debate coach Roy Nicholson. "It's probably the most difficult topic that we've had to come to grips with in years."

Armed with volumes of documentation, briefcases and index-card files, the debaters, representing 13 high schools from across Idaho, gathered for the sixth annual Twin Falls Invitational High School Debate Tournament. With two-day tournament's close Saturday, several teams, including Twin Falls High School, emerged with awards. Rankings included:

- Senior class — First place, Weiser; second place, Borah; and third place, a tie between Twin Falls and Meridian.

- Junior class — First place, Borah; second place, Borah; and third place, a tie between Twin Falls and Meridian.

- Novice class — First place, Twin Falls; second place, Meridian; and third place, a tie between Borah and Meridian.

Nicholson said he was pleased with Twin Falls' showing, considering the contest marked his students' second competition this year. District and state competitions are scheduled for early next year.

"We're going to get better," he said. "We've got a dynamite squad out there."

Leading up to the awards was a series of high-spirited debates over a resolution that would reduce significantly the amount of arms sold abroad.

The arms-sale issue has been a controversial one for years, as evidenced by one quarter-final match between the first-place team in the senior division from Weiser and the third-place team from Twin Falls.

For the most part, each student in that match said he personally supported the stance he was taking. However, debate participants must be prepared to argue either side of the issue.

"Some of these kids started last spring researching this topic," Nicholson said. "We had a number of kids that went away to two- and three-week debate camps in the summer. Most of these kids have been working since last summer researching the material."

Diann Davis, 16, of Weiser, opened by charging that the United States was selling its own military stockpiles short for overseas sales. As a result, U.S. stockpiles are depleted, and the nation's armed forces would be unable to sustain a prolonged attack without heavy casualties, she said.

"The United States government has serious responsibilities to see that the United States armed forces are sufficiently armed to withstand a prolonged attack," she said. "Our defense priorities have been mixed up for too long."

Her Weiser colleague, 16-year-old Michelle Eberhard, added that the potential for an attack upon U.S. forces exists.

"The possibility for war always exists, and that's what we're storing for," she said. "The possibility always exists. We challenge the negative (Twin Falls team) to refute that."

State assigns full-time welfare fraud detective to this area

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Efforts to catch welfare cheaters have been boosted by the assignment of a full-time investigator to the Magic Valley area.

Tom Ruebelmann, an investigator with the Idaho Department of Law Enforcement and a former Idaho State Police officer, has moved to Twin Falls to concentrate on reports of fraud and misuse in the food stamp, Aid to Families with Dependent Children and Medicaid programs.

For three years, the state Department of Health and Welfare has had a contract with the state Department of Law Enforcement for welfare fraud investigations with the state law-enforcement department.

However, investigators were based in Boise, making investigations in the Magic Valley costly and difficult, according to area DHW officials.

The backlog of cases often allowed even blatant examples of fraud to go unprosecuted, as witnesses moved out of town or information became outdated, the officials say.

Following a reorganization of the law-enforcement department, Ruebelmann was assigned to this area to allow for more effective investigations, according to George F. Harrison, a bureau chief with the Department of Law Enforcement.

DHW officials now expect more cases to be prosecuted and more attempts made to win restitution from persons convicted of cheating the government.

Judy Brooks, a DHW medical and financial-assistance program supervisor, says that when Ruebelmann was assigned, the case workers began pulling cases "out of the drawers" in the hope that action finally would be taken.

While neither Harrison nor Brooks could estimate the amount of fraud in the various welfare programs, Brooks says that abuse occurs "in a majority of our cases."

However, Harrison notes that even a small group can cause major problems, just as a minority "criminal element" causes problems for the majority of the public's law-abiding citizens.

"From what we've seen and encountered in the past, the Idaho taxpayer is really paying for fraud, there's no doubt about it," Harrison says. "The law-abiding citizen, whether working or on assistance, ends up paying for the criminal element."

To date, about $90,000 in restitution for fraud has been ordered by Idaho courts, Harrison says. But only about $8,000 has been collected.

Welfare fraud cases reported in the Magic Valley include cases similar to these examples:

- A woman was receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children benefits from Florida at the same time she was receiving AFDC in Idaho.

- A client gave a child up for adoption but did not report it to the DHW and continued to receive AFDC benefits.

- A client on assistance received a large inheritance but did not report it to the DHW.

Often fraud involves a failure to report changes in income or living arrangements, as in the case of the woman who continued to receive AFDC benefits after her husband returned to support her, or the person who found a job but did not report the income to DHW.

Brooks admits that welfare grants are low, making some people reluctant to report outside income for fear of further decreases.

"Our grants have not kept up with the cost of living. When a steady check is coming in each month, the temptation is certainly there not to report it (extra income). But, the consequences are not worth it, either," she says.

"We have to show the rules and regulations have some strength, and breaking them is just the same as stealing from a store or shoplifting. If someone is without money and steals from a store, even though the reason (for the theft) may be evident, that does not excuse the offense."

Widespread misuse of food stamps has been reported in states such as Nevada. In some cases, food stamps have been used like currency to buy cars and luxury items.

In Idaho, only a few cases involving food-stamp fraud have been reported; although it's an area Ruebelmann will be watching. Brooks says there have been reports of a store giving clients 50 cents on the dollar for food stamps, but no proof has been found.

Ruebelmann and DHW officials have been meeting with county prosecutors to coordinate their efforts. Harrison says that minor cases, which would not be cost-effective to pursue, will be handled internally by the DHW.

However, persons who are found to have deliberately defrauded the government of large amounts of money will face criminal prosecution and possible jail sentences, Harrison says. Efforts also will be made to require restitution.

Both Harrison and Brooks hope publicity from the handling of welfare fraud cases will make "people stop and think" before they break the rules.

In brief

Prison warden to speak Monday

FILER — The problems facing Idaho's prison system will be the topic of a public meeting Monday evening in Filer.

Darrell Gardner, the warden of the state penitentiary, will be the speaker.

The meeting will begin at 7 in the Filer High School auditorium.

Gardner will discuss the funding problem facing the prison system and the problems caused by an increasing inmate population.

UP retirees will celebrate today

GLENN'S FERRY — The Union Pacific Railroad Oldtimers organization will hold its annual Thanksgiving dinner today.

The dinner will be held at 2 p.m. at the Glenn's Ferry Three Island Senior Citizen Center.

The turkey, dressing, potatoes and gravy will be furnished. The rest of the meal will be potluck.

The Twin Falls team responded by arguing that arm sales are a necessary evil.

financial outlook for this year is just as bleak. The department is facing a $100,000 deficit for fiscal year 1983.

The board of directors and area legislators met last Wednesday night to discuss the department's financial future.

In other business at the board's regular meeting Wednesday, the directors voted to give Hurst a 5 percent salary increase for six months in recognition of his efforts.

He also predicted that some Third World nations would retaliate against the United States if arm sales were curtailed.

"Countless perceive that they need the weapons right now," he said.

"Therefore, they're going to do everything in their power to get them, including trade wars."

Marriage discussion scheduled

KING 4HILL — An informational meeting will be held this evening at the Community Presbyterian Church in King Hill about a marriage encounter session.

The meeting, which will begin at 7:30, is open to the public.

Marriage-encounter sessions are designed to help couples of all ages and length of marriages to examine their lives together.

Correction

RUPERT — There was an error in Saturday's story concerning the possible abolishment of a Rupert ordinance that charges itinerant merchants a daily fee to do business in the community.

The Rupert Chamber of Commerce has not endorsed repeal of the ordinance, as was reported. The matter was brought up at last week's chamber meeting, but no action was taken.

In Friday accident

Officials doubt that PCB leaked

ARCO (UPI) — A truck hauling the chemical PCB likely did not leak any of the toxic substance after it was involved in a traffic accident Friday about 25 miles from Arco, an official from a hazardous waste dump said Saturday.

However, tests will be conducted on a liquid that escaped from the vehicle to verify that it did not contain PCB, said David Ralston, the manager of Envirotech Services, which operates the dump at Grand View.

"We are quite certain there was no contamination," he said.

Ralston said he and other representatives of the Philadelphia-based company went to the site Friday because the load of PCB-laced soil that was involved in the accident was headed for the firm's dump at Grand View.

No one was injured when two trucks collided shortly after noon Friday, but officials closed a 44-mile stretch of the highway because they feared a leak from the truck that contained PCB.

The road was opened about eight hours later, after the substance was removed and the highway cleared.

Ralston said the workers donned rubber gloves, according to procedure, and shoveled the frozen liquid back into the truck so it could be taken to Grand View.

He said the pink-colored liquid probably was melted snow that had come in contact with residuals from the poisoned soil, which was "very red" because it contained iron ore.

The company's chemical engineer decided there was little chance that the water was laced with PCB because the chemical does not mix with water, Ralston said.

He said Saturday that he did not know when the tests would be completed.

According to an Idaho State Police officer, the truck belonged to Sunrise Carriers based in Greeley, Colo., and was hauling the toxic load from Michigan to the Grand View site.

Pouring in money

Construction will prepare Twin Falls Canal Co. system for '83 irrigation

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Money is being poured into the Twin Falls Canal Co. system almost like water this winter, to prepare it for next year's irrigation season.

In addition to normal winter maintenance, gates at Murtaugh Lake are being reconstructed, at a cost of about $500,000.

That one project represents more than 20 percent of the approximately $2.4 million the canal company will spend during its current fiscal year for all maintenance work, salaries and other costs of delivering water to shareholders who farm the 200,000 acres of land served by the company.

Last week, nearly 40 shareholders were given a guided tour of the canal system so they could see how their money is being spent.

"They were shown a set of gates toward the upper end of Murtaugh Lake that are nearly identical to the gates at the outlet to the lake that are being replaced. Like the ones being replaced, these were new when the canal system began delivering water in 1905, but have had only minor repair and reinforcement work done on them since then."

"It's phenomenal to me they lasted this long," canal company manager Warren Travis told the tour group.

Those gates, which can let water out of Murtaugh Lake in case of a break in the canal — or other emergency that requires the water level in the canal to be lowered quickly — also are scheduled for replacement this winter. In fact, they will be replaced with the refurbished gates from the mouth of Murtaugh Lake.

During the irrigation season, Murtaugh-Lake is filled by the canal company's Main Line Canal.

The gates that are being replaced at the mouth of the lake regulate the flow of water out of the lake into the rest of the canal system.

The canal below the outlet from the lake is dry, filled with earth-moving equipment, trucks, trailers and workmen — instead of water. The concrete pads for the new gates have been poured.

Work is a week ahead of schedule, Travis says, because the canal company was able to empty the water from Murtaugh Lake at the end of the irrigation season faster than it had anticipated.

In many ways, the new gates being installed are designed to be a canal manager's dream.

The gates will be automated, so they can adjust automatically to fluctuations of the water level in the lake. The new gates will be larger than the old ones. This means fewer will be required, which in turn means slightly less concrete is needed to support the gates, Travis says.

The larger gates also give the water more room to flow through into the canal, which will allow for the water to move at a slower speed, causing less erosion damage to the canal, he says.

To further break up the driving current that can be created as water pushes through gates into the canal, "dragon's teeth" will be built on the floor of the canal immediately downstream from the gates. These are rows of triangular blocks that will disrupt the current and create a calmer flow.

The new Murtaugh Lake gates are a good investment for the canal company shareholders, Travis says.

"It's going to be here another 100 years. It's going to be automated. It's going to be handling water the way it ought to be handling today."

Warren Travis, of the Twin Falls Canal Co., leads a tour at the construction site of the new canal gates at Murtaugh Lake ding money because we like to. We're spending money because we have to."

Many less pressing maintenance projects have been postponed during the past year. The farmers

In the Twin Falls tract cannot afford to let the canal deteriorate, but they can't afford to pay for any more repair work than is absolutely necessary at a time when most commodity prices are depressed, Travis says.

Travis, who is in his third winter as canal company manager, says he is starting to see progress toward restoring the canal system to good repair. Within a year or two, he hopes the canal will be in good enough condition so the winter maintenance schedule will be neither as frenzied nor as expensive as this year.

"We might just get to the point where we can slack off a tug," he says.

Mountain Bell looks toward divestiture

By JOHN J. SANKO
United Press International

DENVER — Tom Lindholm makes it sound almost lyrical when he describes the creation of an independent phone operation in the Rocky Mountain West — one of several separate companies that will be created in 1984 by leaving the AT&T fold.

"We talk about it being from the seaports in Seattle to the cattle and the wheat and corn country of Iowa, from the mountains and timber of Montana and Colorado to the desert sunbelt of Arizona," the Mountain Bell executive said.

Under a Washington, D.C., federal judge's anti-trust order, seven regional holding companies will be formed out of the 22 existing Bell operating firms — possibly by Jan. 1, 1984. The largest will be in the West where Pacific Northwest Bell, Mountain Bell and Northwestern Bell will combine into a 14-state operation.

Lindholm, Colorado vice president of Mountain Bell, calls it an exciting challenge. But some officials in the Rocky Mountain West are worried that what is a challenge to some folks might be only an expensive burden to others.

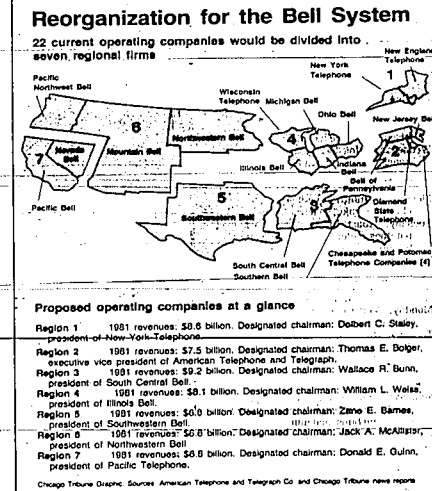

"There's a real possibility that telephone rates will go up substantially," said Daniel Muse, a member of the Colorado Public Utilities Commission, which already is considering a 100 million increase in phone rates.

Carry Rogers, assistant chief counsel for the Wyoming Public Utilities Commission, said his state is basically concerned about the projected increase in telephone rates and is taking an active role in a coalition of regulatory boards to keep an eye on what is happening.

Diane Woodard, a former Colorado P.U.C. commissioner, recently elected state attorney general, has similar worries and wonders whether the court-ordered divestiture will have any positive benefits on the local level.

"If anyone thinks there can be better service in Fort Morgan, Colo., in two years because of this divestiture, no," Woodard said. "It might make for a healthier, long-distance network for AT&T. It may improve American high technology in competition with the Japanese and the West Germans."

"It may do wonders for research and development and shareholders of AT&T. But if I were a telephone user in Brush or Estes Park, I'd have to wonder."

Lindholm agrees with at least one concern — that telephone rates will be increasing. And the increase will be on top of rate hikes that already are being sought.

That will mean a greater expense for phone users in Arizona, New Mexico, Utah, Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho, Montana, Iowa, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Washington and Oregon.

"There's no question rates are going to go up," Lindholm says. "But our goal is to continue to keep rates as low as possible."

The exact amount of the increase depends on factors still to be determined in the antitrust action before U.S. District Judge Harold Greene. A key decision — now under study by a regulatory commission — will be how much the local phone companies can keep from the profitable long-distance revenues raised by AT&T.

Because of new long-distance phone competition, AT&T will have to cut rates to be competitive. And if a uniform rate is approved, that could create a disadvantage in the vast but sparsely populated West.

"The problems of financing telephone service in Wyoming, which is one extreme, are a heck of a lot different than in New Jersey with its small size and concentrated populations," Lindholm said. "But there is good representation on that board from the less densely populated states."

Although AT&T and the local Bells have set up special phone lines for both customers and employees to ask questions about the future, there remains concern among the workers. An agreement was reached last March to protect employees' wages and benefits through the divestiture.

"But we still have a lot of worry and a lot of unrest over the uncertainty," said Bruce Thoren, administrative assistant to the vice president of District 8, Communications Workers of America, a union that represents

Legislation would return farmlands to Idahoans

GLENN'S FERRY — A bill proposed by Sens. James McClure and Steve Symms could help restore 4,400 acres of land to farmers who saw it repossessed by federal officials last spring.

The bill also would give farmers on the neighboring 3,700-acre Saylor Creek project who are fighting government efforts to reclaim their land a second chance to meet legal requirements to prevent the land loss.

About 26 farmers are involved in long-standing disputes between the U.S. Bureau of Land Management and developers of the Black Mesa and Saylor Creek projects, both located south of Glenn's Ferry.

The projects were developed in the mid-1960s under the federal Desert Land Entry act. Under the act, a husband and wife could get title to 320 acres of federal land for $1.25 per acre if they could bring water to it and raise a crop. Generally, a group of individuals would band together to build an irrigation system to serve their farms.

In the case of Black Mesa and Saylor Creek, the BLM charged that those projects were schemes by corporations or partnerships to gain control of blocks of land through fraudulent use of the Desert Land Entry process.

The ensuing fight dragged on for more than 15 years. Last spring, federal officials reclaimed the Black Mesa project. During the summer, the land sat idle, growing weeds where potatoes formerly grew.

The BLM's attempt to repossess the Saylor Creek project has been appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The Symms-McClure bill would give the farmers a second chance to meet the requirements of the Desert Land Entry act, according to a McClure aide, Tod Neunshwander.

The issue is fairness, he said, because the government changed its interpretation of the legal requirements for ownership after those projects were developed.

"With any other entity, when you enter into a contract, one party cannot change the terms. The federal government is the only group that can do that."

The current interpretation of the requirements for ownership would not be affected by the "private bill," which would apply only to the two Idaho projects, Neunshwander said.

The farmers would simply get a chance to do whatever was necessary to comply with the law.

"What they are asking is to go out and give them six months to get their house in order," said Max Rogers, another McClure aide.

Beating the scofflaws

Universal Press Syndicate

Small Claims Courts are rapidly being distorted into a mockery of what they originally were designed to be — courts in which the consumer (you and I) had a fair chance of getting justice and equitable treatment against big industry or uncaring business lobbyists.

The distortion is the result of either deliberate action or apathetic regulators or ignorant bureaucrats. Whatever the precise cause, we are the losers.

Thus, it is of major importance that a pioneering law requiring state agencies to revoke the licenses of individuals or corporations that openly ignore Small Claims judgments has just gone on the books in New York state. The law was signed by Gov. Hugh Carey and was sponsored by state Sen. John R. Dunne and Assemblyman Richard Gottfried. The law also requires that Small Claims Courts refer to enforcement agencies any pattern of consumer or other fraud that is disclosed by a large number of cases in those courts.

This law could — and should — become a model for similar legislation throughout the United States. The Small Claims Courts are fast being abused into non-existence.

The New York law builds on a group of prior measures adopted to make it tougher to throw away Small Claims judgments: a three-time Small Claims loser can be slapped with attorneys' fees plus triple the amount of any further judgments that aren't paid. Clerks are supposed to keep a list of unpaid judgments indexed by names of the defendants involved to make it easier to spot Small Claims scofflaws who might be liable for the penalties.

Even before the 1982 law, New York City's Department of Consumer Affairs had been experimenting with using its local powers over licenses against those who don't pay Small Claims judgments — and had reported a 100 percent success rate in getting the judgments paid when it used this leverage.

In most states, however, if you don't pay a Small Claims tab, you don't face triple damages or loss of any license you have. As a result, if you, a consumer, sue and win, you often just can't collect.

The situation has been pinpointed in New York — but in most localities it hasn't been even studied. And without sunlight focused on the extent of non-payment, few reform measures have been taken, throughout the country.

The other weak areas in the Small Claims Courts are getting weaker, too — those that demand attention include:

- 1) When does the Small Claims Court sit? In some regions, no night sessions are held. This means that if you can't take time off from work or hire a babysitter for your children, you can't get a hearing. Period.
- 2) Is the maximum payment too low or has it kept up with inflation? If the limit is piddling and you have a big-ticket lemon, you are without a remedy. A limit of, say, $1,000 permits you to sue for that amount if a $5,000 item costs $1,000 to fix — but your total price was obviously far above the $1,000 limit.
- 3) Does the court take debt collec-

New business

Calico Cottage, offering special Christmas gifts, will be operated by these women

Months of preparation for women go into holiday shop at Jerome

JEROME — Seven women have been working since the start of the year to start a business that will remain open less than two weeks.

The business is the Calico Cottage. It will sell handmade Christmas gifts. And it opens this week for its limited engagement.

The store opens Friday at 10 a.m., and will be open seven days a week through the first week in December.

The store is located about 100 yards to the west on a road four miles south of Jerome. From Twin Falls, the store can be found by going two miles north from the stop sign on the old Jerome highway and then turning west.

Once there, shoppers can expect to find hand-painted Christmas tree ornaments, dolls, stuffed animals, decorated baskets, quilts, pillows and more.

The seven partners each did two jobs in getting the business ready for Christmas. They have organized the business, arranged accounting procedures and inventory control. They are also the shop's suppliers, sewing, painting and making most of the items that will be on sale.

"The group got together last January, and after talking about it, nobody wanted to back out. So we went ahead and did it," says Marci Minkin, one of the partners.

"Everybody wanted an outlet for their things that they're selling," she says, "or just to try a retail business without risking everything."

Another partner expresses a similar feeling.

"We'd all kind of thought of the future," says Suzy Majors. "We'd all thought of having our own place. This is a chance to learn what's involved."

Janet Lohmann describes how she and some of the other partners became involved in the handicraft business.

"I would make a gift. People would say, 'Oh, that's beautiful. Can you make me one? I'll pay for it,'" she says. "That's how I got started."

In addition to Lohmann, Minkin and Majors, the other partners are Sheila Long, Connie Heizer, Chris Pepper and Cheryl Van Houten.

Artists' treasures offered

BUHL — Treasures take a little searching sometimes.

From the Farm, a shop that offers the works of 40 area artists, is a case in point.

The consignment gift shop will open for the holiday season the day after Thanksgiving, but you'll have to do a little climbing to find it.

From the Farm will offer the handwork of local artisans in the form of Christmas tree ornaments, wooden toys, feather wreaths and other crafts with the holiday season in mind; says shop owner Darcy Thornborrow.

Thornborrow's own works in pheasant and other wild-bird feathers will be on display in the studio-shop at 104 S. Broadway Ave. in Buhl. The shop is nestled upstairs above the Mode-O-Day clothing store.

Banking firm denies stockholder charges

SEATTLE (UPI) — Seafirst Corp. has denied charges by a stockholder that it mismanaged oil and gas loans made through defunct Penn Square Bank and lied about its energy loans to inflate the price of its stock.

The firm, parent company of Seattle-First National Bank, filed a six-page response in federal court to the suit brought by Harry Lewis of New York, who has a long history of suing firms in which he owns shares.

Lewis' suit asked for damages for shareholders who bought Seafirst stock between Feb. 16, 1981, and July 13, 1982. The bank holding company's stock plunged nearly 50 percent between those dates.

In July, the Seattle bank revealed it held $400 million worth of potentially bad energy loans issued through Penn Square, an Oklahoma bank that collapsed that month. As a result, Seafirst reported a $56 million loss for the second quarter.

Lewis charged Seafirst's senior managers "recklessly" engaged in a course of conduct "which operated as a fraud and deceit" in building up the bank's "$1.25 billion energy loan portfolio."

He said the writing off of a number of energy loans indicated Seafirst "lacked management experience, expertise and adequate controls" in that area. He charged public statements by the bank and its officers during the period were covers for the company's poor performance.

Seafirst denied those and all other allegations made in Lewis' 30-page complaint in the answer it filed Thursday.

The firm also declared a regular quarterly dividend of 36 cents a share on 16.2 million outstanding shares — or $5.83 million. During the third quarter, Seafirst reported a profit of $6.6 million, reducing its loss for the first three quarters to $29.5 million. The bank has continued to pay its regular quarterly dividends despite the loan losses.

New truck introduced

Chicago Sun-Times

International Harvester Co. has unveiled its latest truck model, which could set new fuel-efficiency standards for the trucking industry.

In an eight-day, 2,791-mile run from Los Angeles to New York City, Harvester's new International 2375 heavy highway tractor carried a 65,000-pound gross load. The 18-wheel truck averaged 8.26 m.p.g. — shattering the old record of 7.63 m.p.g.

The truck, essentially an adaption of an existing model, was powered by the new L10 diesel engine of Cummins Engine Co., the lightest in its class. Improved aerodynamics and a better cooling system also enhance its fuel efficiency, company officials said at a press conference in Dayton, Ohio, Friday.

The model, which will carry an approximately $50,000 price tag, will be on the market in January.

The International 2375 is a legacy of Archie R. McCordell, Harvester's former chairman and chief executive officer. McCordell was recognized throughout the industry for plowing money into research and development. The new truck has been on the drawing boards for two years.

Although the recession has cut demand for its products, Harvester expects to post losses of about $1.6 billion for the fiscal year ended Oct. 31.

Tradewinds

A Ketchum man has been named president of United Security Mortgage Corp. Paul Plett, who joined the company less than three months ago as manager of its Ketchum office, will move to Boise to assume his new duties. He was formerly co-owner of T.C.V. Properties in Ketchum.

Marlin Jeno, the owner and manager of New Beginnings Hair Design of Twin Falls, was recently featured as a guest artist during a Redken seminar in Seattle. Jeno gave makeup application instruction to about 200 hairdressers.

Kent Davenport and Don Baker of the Bellone Hearing Aid Center in Twin Falls recently attended a training seminar conducted by Bellone. The two-day school featured classes on hearing-aid selection and fitting.

Louise Ward of Murtaugh, associate broker with InterMountain Properties in Twin Falls, has received the Accredited Farm and Land Member designation. She is the first woman and seventh person in Idaho to receive the award. She has been a Farm and Land Institute member for 10 years.

Five members of the Twin Falls Board of Realtors attended the National Association of Realtors convention in San Francisco. They were Donna Bach, Lee Halder, Louise Ward, L. James Koutnik and Robert Jones.

4 Cassia men cited at dinner

BURLEY — Four Cassia County men were cited last week for their contributions to the community at the 16th annual Burley Chamber of Commerce Farmer-Businessman Dinner.

Retired bank warehouse owner Bill Morgan of Burley, and R.J. Harper, a retired Malta rancher, were honored as outstanding leaders in the field of farming at the banquet, according to Warren Mohrlang, the chamber manager.

Reed Stanley, a retired banker, and Gordon Robertson, a former Burley mayor and an Amalgamated Sugar Co. employee, also were recognized for their contributions to the area's business community.

The four men received plaques at the dinner which was held Monday at the Burley Inn. More than 300 persons were in attendance, Mohrlang said.

UP upgrading Utah tracks

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Union Pacific Railroad is spending $10 million to upgrade 87 miles of track south of Salt Lake City.

The project involves bringing tracks in the railroad's Provo subdivision up to mainline standards. It also includes a new train dispatching and communications center in Salt Lake.

Railroad spokesman John Bromley said automatic block signals are being installed from Provo south to Lyndyrd — site of the Intermountain Power Project which will burn coal shipped by rail.

A new microwave system is being built to operate the signals. New signals will cost $6.1 million with the communications center adding another $3.7 million.

The changes mean that train movements between sidings at Payson, Starr, Nephi, Sharp, Juab and Parley will be protected by automatic signal blocks. It also means that dispatchers in Salt Lake can control train movements all the way to Los Angeles.

Because of the remoteness of some locations, several signals will be powered by solar panels and batteries.

The railroad is also upgrading its track with 21,437 new ties and 40 miles of new rail.

Idaho Farm Bureau meeting Nov. 28

BOISE — The Idaho Farm Bureau Federation will hold its annual meeting in Boise, beginning Sunday, Nov. 28.

The four-day meeting will be held at the Red Lion Inn Riverside.

Among the presentations planned for the meeting are a panel discussion on the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service plan being considered by the Northwest Power Planning Council and a speech about the privatization of public lands.

Seminars will be held that will cover topics such as dairy management and choosing a computer for a farm or ranch.

Cattlemen's clinic set in December

TWIN FALLS — A clinic for cattlemen will be held at the College of Southern Idaho on Thursday, Dec. 9.

The free seminar is sponsored by the Southern Idaho Livestock Association, the Magic Valley Cattlemen's Association, the American Hereditarian Association and CSI. It will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the CSI Expo Center.

The clinic is designed for the cow-calf producer. Topics to be covered include record-keeping, frame size and decisions facing a cattle rancher trying to keep up with changes in the industry.

On Friday, Dec. 10, a tour will be held of several Rogerson-area ranches. Specialists on calf weaning and winter care will make presentations during the tour.

Forest Service to fill vacancy

KETCHUM — The U.S. Forest Service plans to fill a vacant district ranger position in Ketchum by the first of the year.

The position has been empty since September.

Sawtooth National Forest supervisor Ronald Stoleson says the possibility of leaving the position vacant was considered and rejected. A list of candidates for the job is now being prepared.

Retailers expect modest Christmas gains

By STEPHEN J. MORGAN
United Press International

The nation's major retailers would like to wake up Dec. 25 to find a really spectacular present under their Christmas tree, but like most of us they really expect something modest. "We are expecting this Christmas that our sales will improve modestly over last Christmas season but we don't expect anything spectacular," said Susan McKelvey, spokeswoman for K mart Corp., which operates 2,000 U.S. stores.

"Because most customers still are going to feel pressured by the economy, this will be a Christmas of basics for K mart," she said. "We're likely to be selling items that we sell day in and day out all year long, things that are needed and also can be given as gifts."

J.C. Penney Co. spokesman Duncan Muir said the retail industry as a whole should "see a 4 percent gain in the fourth quarter for general merchandise sales which, with an inflation rate of 3.5 percent for goods, represents a very small increase."

Muir, noting fourth-quarter sales can "make or break" retailers, said he sees no indication that consumers have loosened their purse strings yet.

Indeed, the Commerce Department reported Nov. 11 retail sales increased only 0.6 percent in October to a seasonally adjusted $89.55 billion. Penney reported October sales of $89 million, a 2.4 percent dip from October 1981, and K mart $1.18 billion, a 2.1 percent decline. Sears, Roebuck & Co., America's largest retailer, posted a 3.8 percent increase, to $1.59 billion.

About the best thing that Allen Gutheim of Philadelphia's Wharton Econometrics can say about the fourth quarter is that sales "should be acceptable to retailers."

"If we get 1.2 percent (increase) or something in that range over the next two months, retailers would be pleased," Gutheim said.

In expectation of a slow Christmas, inventories at K mart and at Sears have been pared.

"Last year inventories were pretty heavy and there was very little problem with shortages," Sears spokeswoman Kathy Guica said. "This year inventories are much leaner."

"I get the sense that, in general, retailers are very skittish about their ordering," says Dorothy Eckardt, an analyst who follows manufacturers for the Butcher and Singer Inc. stock brokerage in Philadelphia. "Last-minute orders have been frequent for six months now."

Some department stores are bullish on Christmas sales.

At Bamberger's, a unit of New York's R.H. Macy & Co. Inc., spokesman Bud Pomerantz said, "There has been no slowdown in our business at all. Based on that, we have no reason to believe Christmas won't be better than last year."

David Taylor, an analyst with Prudential-Bache Securities in New York, said Bamberger's, historically, does better than the industry in general.

"Unfortunately," he said, "the rest of the industry is not like Bamberger's."

Taylor, who believes consumers are quality conscious and more apt to buy brand-name goods this year, said, "Chains like K mart and Penney and Sears have been negatively impacted because they don't carry any brand-name merchandise."

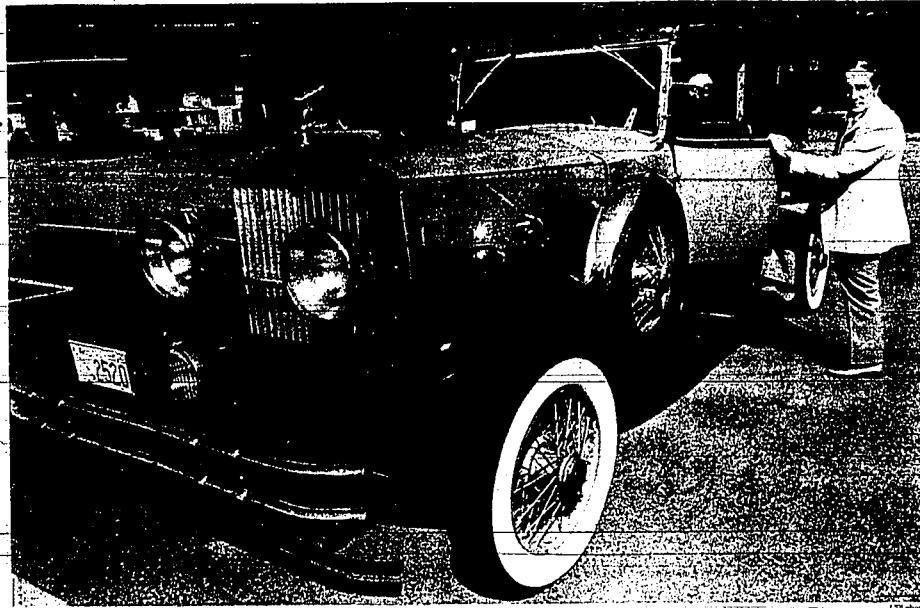

Some economists and analysts believe consumers, having cut back on installment debt this year and watched the value of their dollars rise because of lower inflation, are in a position to shrug off the recession and go on a buying spree that could spur economic recovery.

But there is some doubt about the extent to which they will do so.

"The only thing missing here is the sense that the economy has stopped sliding into a pit," said Otto Eckstein, chairman of Data Resources Inc., the Lexington, Mass., economic forecasting firm. "That is the major fly in the ointment."

Prudential-Bache's Taylor said consumers "have been sitting on pent-up demand all year" and stores will see "a veritable explosion" the last 10 days before Christmas.

Snob appeal

American-built Rolls-Royce luxury cars never accepted in U.S.

By CAROL ROSENBERG
United Press International

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Rolls-Royce: made in England for the richest people in the world. But not always.

For a dozen years, ending in 1931, Rolls-Royce Ltd. built its world famous cars for the American market in a Springfield warehouse. At first the cars even still had British-style right-hand drive.

Nearly 3,000 Rolls were built in Springfield, from sturdy touring cars to luxurious sedans.

The Springfield venture finally was the victim — depending on who you ask — of snobbish American tastes or the Great Depression.

The famous Ghosts and Phantoms cost about $15,000 in 1923, at a time when the Ford Model T cost less than $200.

It was the Roaring 20s and the Rolls were bought because they were fast, stylish accessories to elegant Industrial Age lifestyles.

Woodrow Wilson owned one. So did the Bloomington family, Howard Hughes, boxer Jack Dempsey, entertainer Al Jolson, financier Andrew Mellon and circus owner John Ringling.

Jay Gatsby's probably was American-made, too. The one Robert Redford drove in the film version of F. Scott Fitzgerald's "The Great Gatsby" was built in Springfield.

The story of the Springfield plant began in 1908 when the fledgling British motor company delivered its first order to an American — a Texan named Hutton, according to Rolls-Royce publicist Reg Abbliss.

By 1919, 100 Rolls had been shipped to America. Americans were buying more cars than any other country and the Britons wanted to tap the market.

"That's when Arthur W. Soutter entered the picture. He wandered into a downtown Springfield office and signed up to work as a tool designer with the company."

Soutter, still living in Springfield and considered by Rolls-Royce connoisseurs an expert on the only U.S. facility, was the first American hired at the plant, and the last to go, working after it was shut down supervising maintenance.

About 300 cars were made every year, identical to their British counterparts following exact specifications from F. Henry Royce himself. The chassis were identical, but each body was customized, Soutter said.

A customer picked a body design from a coach maker, personally choosing each detail from the paint for the trim to the fabric for the interior.

"When we started up there were 53 English supervisors from the English plant. I was the first American employee. We built 1,100 with right-hand drive which were identical to those built in England," Soutter said.

"The idea was to avoid the stigma that they would be different if they were made in America."

Later, Springfield engineers moved the wheel from right to left. Bumpers were added, an American style. The body was built stronger to travel on dirt roads.

A total of 2,944 Rolls-Royces were made in Springfield before the stock market crashed and the Great Depression snuffed the boom. The factory closed in 1931, never to open again.

Soutter says that's why it closed — interest in high-priced, luxurious cars dropped off in the depressed economy.

But that's only part of it, according to Abbliss, a spokesman for the company's American headquarters in Lindhurst, N.J. He said the Springfield plant also died because people never really accepted it.

High-brow Americans demanded their British cars be built in Britain.

"People said, 'If I'm going to buy a Rolls-Royce, I want a British-made one,'" he said. "This surprised the people in the company, too, because it was just the same. They were just as good."

In fact, the American-made cars may have been better, says John W. DeCamp, who, like Soutter, has written a book on the history of the Springfield Rolls-Royce and owns a Springfield model.

"I think the bodies were better," said DeCamp, an executive with Dapont in Delaware.

He said competition from the lesser-priced American cars was just too keen.

"It's not unlike today, but the contrast is much more graphic," DeCamp said.

In 1929, a Rolls-Royce cost between $17,840 and $19,965. (Today they start at $109,000.)

Amoco dedicates gas facility

EVANSTON, Wyo. (UPI) — Amoco Production Co. dedicated its $340 million Whitney Canyon gas processing plant Thursday.

The event was described by regional Vice President J.W. Vandenberg as "the coming of age of Wyoming's Utah portion of the Overthrust Belt."

Vandenberg said Whitney Canyon plant, located near Evanston, will produce 200 million cubic feet of natural gas, 1,200 long tons of sulfur, 6,000 barrels of condensate, and 12,600 barrels of natural gas liquids per day when running at maximum design capacity.

The Overthrust Belt is an area of complex geological structures which is recognized as the site of some of the most promising oil and gas reserves in North America, he said.

Industry and local government representatives were on hand at today's dedication for a tour of the plant.

It began startup operations in October and is already moving natural gas to markets through the newly-constructed Trailblazer Pipeline System, an 800-mile transmission line running through Wyoming and Nebraska.

The plant's primary purpose is to remove so-called "sour gas," the nickname given to the hydrogen sulfide, contained in the natural gas produced by the wells in area.

Amoco is a subsidiary of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana.

By ROBERT A. MARTIN
United Press International

SAN JOSE, Calif. — California's electronics industry is set to keep other states and nations from luring away the expanded operations of its companies.

"The electronics industry has grown at a dizzying rate in the last couple of decades and it's got to expand somewhere. Our focus is that there's an awful lot of room right here in California," James Conway, president of the Electronics Association of California, said.

"In the next 10 years 50 percent of the new manufacturing jobs (in California) will be high-technology jobs. We want to protect that."

Conway appeared at the opening of a two-day seminar focusing on business expansion opportunities in the state.

Some 75 California trade groups, development companies, city and county governments opened exhibits at the Cal/Expo in hopes of attracting some of the growth spilling out of the industry's unofficial Silicon Valley hub.

The cities ranged from Los Angeles, which state projections expect to become the top high-tech job market during the '80s, down to the tiny town of Weed in Siskiyou County's forests, hard-hit by the logging timber industry.

"We're trying to show the electronics industry that the whole state isn't located in the Silicon Valley, that there's plenty of other room in the state to expand," Terry Berke, a public relations specialist representing the organizers of the seminar, said.

The high-tech industry, he said, has gradually been expanding into other areas of California, "but we didn't have all these other states raiding us before."

Al Gianini, a business development specialist for the state, said there were no statistics available for the loss of business and jobs to other states, but that he expected it was significant.

"I wouldn't call it a hemorrhage, but we are losing a lot of expansion business," Berke said.

Texas, Colorado, New Mexico and New Hampshire have launched advertising campaigns in the Silicon Valley in hopes of attracting companies looking for growing space. Other nations have also come courting, most notably in the past few months the Republic of Ireland and Israel.

The high-technology industry, according to the state Department of Economic & Business Development, employs about 20 percent of California's manufacturing workforce and generates about 30,000 new jobs a year. The industry accounts for more than $1 billion in wages in the state annually.

Barter deals could trim U.S. farm surplus

TOP TEN FARM EXPORTS

FEEDING THE WORLD

By MARY BETH FRANKLIN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The current surplus of American farm products — the result of bountiful harvests and a worldwide recession that has depressed exports — could be reduced through an old-fashioned barter arrangement.

In an article in the Agriculture Department's Farmline magazine, foreign affairs officer Donna Vogt discusses the pros and cons of reviving a swap arrangement with other nations that would allow the U.S. to reduce its surplus of agricultural commodities in exchange for needed minerals.

The classic definition of barter is an agreement to exchange goods or services without the use of money. But the modern application of barter agreements can take different forms, such as using monetary values to help determine the amounts to be traded.

Agriculture Secretary John Block, in a recent speech to the National Agricultural Bankers Conference, underscored the problem of surplus American farm products and the lack of sufficient domestic or international markets. In the latter case, the strength of the dollar in international money markets has made American farm exports too expensive and slowed their growth.

"We can't be content with lame solutions," Block said. "Until we get these stocks down and demand up, prices aren't going to improve."

A week later in Washington, the secretary met with a small group of agricultural leaders representing different commodity groups to look at the problems facing American agriculture and to evaluate possible solutions.

In her article, Vogt said the United States operated a barter program from 1950 to 1972. It was established to reduce inventories of surplus agriculture commodities owned by the Commodity Credit Corp. — a government entity that buys excess farm products to stabilize prices.

During the operation of the barter program, 121 countries received U.S. farm products and the value of the exports total more than $6.5 billion. Barter exports reached a high of more than $1 billion in 1973, but the program was suspended that year because CCC stocks were largely depleted.

"If revived, an active barter program could provide a way to expand U.S. trade with other nations that face serious financial problems related, in many cases, to the current worldwide recession," Vogt wrote.

Commodities currently in CCC reserves include corn, wheat, cotton, nonfat dry milk, cheese, butter, grain sorghum, barley, rye, sugarbeets and honey.

"Those who support the idea point out that barter is not intended to displace commercial trade. In fact they argue that such arrangements may help promote future cash trade in the same way that U.S. food aid and barter programs of the past helped develop new markets for U.S. goods as once-needy countries became more affluent," she wrote.

But, she said, opponents are concerned about the costs and additional bureaucracy that a barter program may entail.

Despite reservations about barter, Vogt said it would offer additional trade opportunities for the United States since as much as 30 percent of the overall value of world trade today involves barter.

In the past, the United States concentrated its barter arrangement with those countries that could swap materials to help fill the nation's strategic stockpiles held in reserve for key industries and defense in case of a national emergency; a war or a major disruption in trade.

The minerals include bauxite, copper, cobalt, lead, manganese, rubber, zinc, platinum, tantalum and antimony.

Developing countries plus the U.S.S.R., China and Eastern Europe appear to hold the greatest potential for expansion of U.S. agriculture exports since they are the most frequent users of barter-type trade arrangements that avoid or reduce the use of convertibles "hard" currencies.

"The oil-exporting developing nations seem, especially interested in tying their trade to barter-type exchanges as they try to maintain exports in recession-weakened markets and reduce their balance of payments deficits," she wrote.

Despite barter's appeal, it has several shortcomings.

Barter pacts present more obstacles than normal money-for-goods transactions because the seller cannot simply find a buyer who wants his products. He must also have a product to trade that the seller wants.

Barter also requires elaborate negotiations to work out prices as well as quantities to be traded. Unlike cash sales that are largely worked out with private traders, it may require negotiations with two or more governments, a time-consuming prospect.

There are also several U.S. restrictions that ban barter agreements from replacing cash sales, disrupting market prices or interfering with long-term commercial markets. These restrictions are designed to safeguard commercial sales and producer prices, but they can also constitute significant barriers to barter trade.

China's wheat ban has political roots

PULLMAN, Wash. (UPI) — The Palouse Empire News reports the State Department of Commerce and Economic Development believes China's ban on Northwest wheat may have "economic and political" roots rather than the reported deep-seated fear of TCK smut.

At least, the paper reported, that's what Gov. John Spellman was told in a briefing before he left with on a trade mission to the world's most populated nation last month.

Washington Association of Wheat Growers official Gayle Gering agrees with that assessment.

Gering, chairman of customer services with the association, was in China with Spellman.

Scientists, the wheat industry and policy makers view the TCK smut problem is a local one that could not spread to China. Several years of testing, including efforts to spread the smut to other locations, have led to this conclusion, say the Chinese.

The question is why. The commerce department report said: "Given the apparent harmlessness of TCK smut itself, the wheat industry believes the Chinese may have other motives in denying the entry of white wheat from the Pacific Northwest."

There may be a rivalry between China's Ministry of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade, which should want to buy the wheat that is cheapest to ship, and the Ministry of Agriculture, Animal Husbandry and Fisheries, which controls the Institute of Plant Quarantine, the report said.

The report also suggests Chinese could get a better deal this year buying red wheat grown in the Midwest and shipped from Gulf ports.

"The price differential, Freight On Board the port, on Aug. 28, 1982, was 99 cents per bushel lower on soft red," according to the briefing notes.

During the marketing year ending June 1, 1982, China bought nearly 300 million bushels of U.S. wheat.

"China would have paid $166 million more for the same 300 million bushels of wheat had it come from the Pacific Northwest," Spellman's report disclosed.

China thus has little incentive to relax the ban on northwest wheat.

Gering believes the ban began for economic reasons and has become politically embarrassing to the Chinese government.

"Back in 1972, when they first embargoed our wheat, the price was $3.75 per bushel," said Gering. "They bought it then, they know how many cargoes, an awful lot."

"At the same time they bought our wheat, a wheat embargo was put on our wheat to Russia. The price dropped $1 per bushel in a two week period. They wanted to take advantage of that plummeting market."

"They got the first shipment in China, found some smut and refused all other shipments they had ordered. At that point, we weren't sure what happened. In fact, what happened is they wanted to buy wheat cheaper."

"They put the embargo on and don't know how to put it off without embarrassing themselves. That's one consensus."

Under those circumstances, the TCK smut problem is "simply a smokescreen."

"Another interesting point is that China has already been well exposed to the disease at a time when the incidence of TCK smut was much higher than it is today," Spellman's report said.

Prior to 1949, the Pacific Northwest sent many shipments of white wheat to China. If China does not have a TCK smut problem now—the Chinese have not said one way or the other — it probably never will."

Gering suggested the Chinese were finding problems with the wheat purchased from the Midwest that outweigh concerns about the TCK smut.

"They told us the quality of the (Midwest) wheat was so poor they had to clean it twice to get it to milling quality."

He added that Chinese officials admitted having a cash flow problem and said he understood why Midwest wheat was being bought over the northwest product.

Downturn to continue

Overseas sales decline forecast

By LINDA WERFELMAN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The government has revised its forecasts of U.S. agricultural sales overseas, noting that final figures likely will show more of a drop than expected in fiscal 1982 and warning of a continued downturn in the new fiscal year.

Preliminary data shows the value of U.S. agricultural exports probably dropped below $40 billion for the year that ended Sept. 30, the Agriculture Department said in a recent report. As recently as last month, the department was still projecting U.S. farm exports would total $40.6 billion — down from $43.8 billion the previous year.

Prospects for the current fiscal year, now one month off little promise of improvement, the Agriculture Department said.

Export prices, already at low levels, are likely to remain under downward pressure over the coming year because of record U.S. supplies and only modest improvement in domestic and trade demand," the department said.

Part of the problem, department analysts have said, is that even though the United States is exporting record amounts of raw farm products, prices for those goods are falling. U.S. exports of more highly processed goods, which carry higher price tags, have lagged, the analysts said.

In the newest report by its Economic Research Service, the department noted U.S. farm exports were down 12 percent in the first 11 months of fiscal 1982. With data complete for the period between October 1981 and August of this year, U.S. farm exports were listed at $36.7 billion.

Agricultural exports during July and August were the lowest monthly levels in three years, the department said.

"Although shipments normally slow in the summer months, falling prices aggravated the situation this summer, as they did last summer," the report said. "Expectations of record U.S. grain and oilseed harvests, accompanied by continued economic sluggishness and unfavorable exchange positions, dampened prices."

Department analysts attributed a large portion of the problem to low feed grain exports, which — at 45.5 million tons — were at their lowest levels since 1978.

The loss of sales to Mexico was largely to blame, the report said, noting that Mexico bought only 1.2 million tons of feed grain from the United States in the first 11 months of the fiscal year — less than one-fifth that country's purchases in each of the two previous years. The reduction is a result of Mexico's 1981 bumper harvest and deteriorating economic conditions that prompted a ban on all but essential imports, the report said.

U.S. imports of farm products also are down, with $14 billion in purchases in the first 11 months of fiscal 1982, down 12 percent from the comparable period one year earlier, the department said.

In its analysis, the department noted that decreased imports of beef, veal and sugar more than offset increased demand for imported orange juice, vegetables and live animals — mainly cattle.

World agricultural prices continue to drop for most commodities, the report said, adding, "Little, if any, price strength is expected soon." For some products, the report said, prices are at their lowest levels in three years. The department blamed large supplies and worldwide economic stagnation.

The report also forecast a continued downward trend for prices, noting that record U.S. harvests of corn, wheat and soybeans are expected this fall. The heavy supplies and weak demand will combine to push prices down to their lowest levels in three to seven years, the report said.

Frost damage check sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Idaho Director of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service has been asked to study how much frost damage crops in eastern Idaho counties sustained this fall, Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, says.

The Idaho Republican said he asked for the study because a number of farmers in the higher altitudes of the eastern-most counties have reported extensive frost damage to potatoes, grains and other crops.

"Such a study is necessary to help determine what assistance, if any, might be available through various government programs and other sources to those farmers affected," Hansen said.

Hansen said the study would show how many acres were affected by the frost, the number of farmers involved and the extent of the financial loss.

Irrigation disposal well meeting set

RUPERT — Management alternatives for irrigation disposal wells will be discussed at a public meeting on Wednesday, Dec. 15, in Rupert.

During the past 18 months, Idaho Department of Water Resources staff members have been analyzing alternatives to current disposal-well practices in Minidoka and Jerome counties, according to Kenneth Dunn, the department's director.

The study is being conducted by an advisory committee composed of irrigation district officials, other agency members and local elected officials.

DWR staff members have discovered that some farm-management methods may offer higher net returns than realized under present farming conditions, according to Dunn.

The meeting in Rupert to discuss these findings will begin at 7 p.m. at East Minico Junior High School, at 18th and I streets.

Chemical discoveries may open door to production boost

By PATRICK YOUNG
Newhouse News Service

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — The discovery of hormone-like chemicals that govern plant growth, redevelopment, and resistance to disease has created visions of totally new ways to increase farm production.

"The potential in our discovery for improving agricultural yields is great," said Peter Albersheim, professor of biochemistry at the University of Colorado in Boulder.

"We can imagine being able to spray specific messages on plants to tell them when to flower to form seeds and fruits, when to make tubers, when to be resistant to a disease or an insect, or when to drop their fruit or to become resistant to low temperatures or when to grow faster."

Albersheim and his team have identified about a dozen chemical regulators housed in the cellulose walls that surround plant cells. He told a science writers' seminar in Cambridge sponsored by the non-profit Council for the Advancement of Science Writing.

Several agriculture chemical companies have taken to the work and are looking for other regulatory chemicals.

"We believe there are hundreds of (chemical) fragments with activity in plant cell walls," Albersheim said. "This is the next generation of agriculture chemicals — specific messages."

But he added that considerable work remains to turn the discovery into commercial products. He predicted it will be another 10 years before farmers start spraying the chemicals on their crops.

Five primary plant hormones are known, but researchers have found that each one causes both good and bad effects to occur at the same time when applied to plants.

Albersheim's work opens the way to using specific chemicals to produce one desired effect in plants without other, unwanted effects.

"This work is an example of two different fields coming together to give an unexpected result," he said. "The only reason we got to it was because of our lab's work in disease resistance and cell-wall growth — two things no one thought were related."

Albersheim had spent years trying to decipher the structural details of the materials that make up the walls around plant cells. Like others, he had little success and he and his colleagues considered abandoning their efforts.

"We realized it was getting more and more complex and we didn't have the tools we needed," he said.

At the same time, they were studying how plants, which have no immune system, can fight back against fungi, viruses and harmful bacteria.

When a fungus attacks a plant, it produces an "antibiotic" to fight back. Albersheim's group discovered that plants recognize a group of sugars on the fungus. This causes the plant to produce an antibiotic in the walls surrounding its cells.

It was the first time anyone had shown a sugar took part in regulating plant biology.

Next they found that when bacteria attack a plant, the plant's cell walls release a sugar that then instructs other cells to make an antibiotic.

This led to the realization that sugars in plant cell walls could act as hormones — carrying chemical messages from one plant cell to the other to regulate their biological activities.

"It turns out these walls are essentially glands for the plant," Albersheim said.

He and his team have since discovered that the chemical activity cuts across species. A chemical extracted from grasses affects broad leaf plants for example, and one from trees works in tomatoes.

"There is no boundary," Albersheim said.

For land use

Local control may be best

By LINDA WERFELMAN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Land use planning — including the preservation of agricultural land — may be best left to local governments rather than federal officials, a private research group says.

The new study by the National Planning Association says local opinions on how farmland should be used are often likely to differ considerably from national or international theories.

And local opinions should prevail even though the land preservation issue "may spill over the boundaries of local jurisdictions and even though (it) involves issues almost exclusively national or international in scope," said report author Richard Barrows, an agricultural economics professor at the University of Wisconsin in Madison.

Local governments are far better equipped to exercise direct planning authority, Barrows said.

"An uninformed imposition of federal standards," he said, "would create chaos out of a local-state planning scene in which some order is beginning to appear."

Even on the local level, a variety of opinions is likely to exist on the proper use of agricultural land, Barrows' study said.

Often, newcomers who have moved to rural communities from big cities outnumber farmers and press for adoption of ordinances to restrict farm operations, he said.

"In the early stages of urban sprawl, it may be easy for farmers to rent large tracts of idle land held by speculators or developers, but high land prices may prohibit expansion of farm size through land purchase," he said.

"Eventually, land rental may be impossible as larger nearby tracts are cut up by housing or other development," he added.

At first, he said, investments in farm operations will drop — a reflection of farmers' uncertainty over their future in the area. But later, their anticipation of conversion of the land to urban uses will prompt a more systematic mining of the soil, he added.

In many cases, opposition to the development of farmland focuses on a desire to preserve a rural way of life or a fear that the area will be forced to depend on some other part of the country for its food, the study said.

Different problems face the nearby cities, which suffer a loss of business and high-income taxpayers to the suburbs, the study said, adding that residents who remain in the cities often are taxed to pay for increased public services in developing rural areas.

From the national and international perspective, the wisdom of preserving farmland often centers on less immediate problems, Barrows said. He pointed to the question of whether agricultural technology will be able to grow fast enough to feed the world's expanding population.

On a practical level, he said, the federal government cannot afford to become directly involved in local land-use planning.

Barrows also rejected the suggestion that the federal government could control conversion of farmland to other purposes by imposing federal standards.

"Forbidding non-agricultural development of land meeting the Soil Conservation Service definition of 'prime' would be administratively possible, but would have disastrous land-use results," he said, noting it would be impossible to set federal standards to accommodate the problems of individual localities.

Instead, he suggested federal use of "indirect policy tools," including incentives to encourage state and local governments to consider land preservation programs. He also called for adoption of federal project review procedures to "minimize the adverse effect of their actions" on farmland.

All but two states already have adopted tax policies to encourage farmland preservation, but direct state involvement in land preservation programs often does not work because of the high cost, he said.

Instead, local policies using "traditional tools of land-use planning and zoning" have been most effective, Barrows added, noting that in many cases they have moved to preserve both farmland and farms themselves.

More women running family farms

By ROBERT MACKAY
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Farmer John may no longer be the head of the family farm in America.

Try Farmer Jane instead.

Women, making strides in recent years in male-dominated professions, including police and firefighters, are now moving into agriculture in greater numbers, according to Judith Kalbacher of the Agriculture Department's Economic Research Service.

Visit 20 farms around the country and the chances are good that one of them will be operated by a woman, says Kalbacher.

She recently analyzed results of the 1979 Census of Agriculture, the first census to publish statistics on the gender of farm operators.

She found that women are the sole or principal operators of 128,000 farms, or just over 5 percent of all the farms in America. She also found evidence that more women are running farms today than 10 years ago.

According to the Department of Labor, the number of women working principally as farmers or farm managers doubled from 1970 to 1980.

"As farm operators, women contribute substantially to some types of agricultural production, and their numbers are growing," Kalbacher says.

Women constitute 13 percent of all farm operators in Hawaii, 10 percent of farmers in Florida and South Carolina, and 9 percent of farmers in Virginia, Connecticut and Vermont, she says.

In addition, the census provides only a partial count of women farmers, because the census reporting forms allow just one operator to be named per farm and it is usually the husband that is selected by most farm couples even though the wife may share the farmwork and management.

When women are designated as the operators, it typically means they run the farm alone, usually because they are widowed, separated, single, or their husbands just don't get involved in the operation, Kalbacher says.

Geographically, women farmers are best represented in the South and the Appalachian regions.

Women make up more than 5 percent of farmers in every state in these two areas; and the 10 states combined take in more than half of all women farmers in the United States.

Texas alone has almost 12,000 female operators, about 10 percent of the U.S. total.

Women farmers are also well represented in most western and northeastern states.

In the Corn Belt and North Central areas, however, they account for a relatively small share of the operators — only about 3 percent overall. Only 14 percent of female farmers operate cash grain farms, compared to 25 percent of male operators.

Kalbacher says women operators tend to have small farms, whether measured by acreage or sales. Their units average about 285 acres, while farms run by men average 423 acres. Four out of 10 female-operated farms are smaller than 50 acres; just 8 percent are larger than 500 acres.

Kalbacher says part of the reason for this is that a relatively large number of women farmers are older widows. As farmers age, she says, they tend to scale back their operations, regardless of sex.

Bruins win Twin Falls' 22nd effort proves sweet

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — In a classic example of having your cake and eating it, too, the Twin Falls Bruins made Nov. 20 a red-letter day in their football history.

Twin Falls toppled Borah High 43-20 Saturday in an impressive offensive display Saturday afternoon against Coeur d'Alene for the state A-1 championship; (B) beat Borah for the first time in history and end a 21-game losing spell at the Lions' hands, and (C) win nine games in a football season for the first time since the fall of 1951.

Not incidental to the victory, was that it helped erase a 19-17 defeat to Borah on the same field a month ago. Twin Falls led 17-0 with nine minutes left on Oct. 22 before falling apart.

But this time, Twin Falls absorbed a couple of bits of adversity in the first half, picked up a little breathing room in the third quarter and then owned the fourth period.

With the ancient and recent history dogging the Bruins, the first moments of apprehension came when Borah took the opening kickoff and quickly marched to a 6-0 lead. But the Bruins rebounded immediately with a touchdown and then took the lead.

In the second period, the specter of the jinx arose again just after the defensive unit, behind three sterling plays by Dave Slotten, stopped Borah on first-and-goal at the six. But the offense betrayed that effort when it fumbled the ball away at the one seconds later and Borah put that in the end zone.

But the offense redeemed itself after that as Mike Rice turned in his third strong game. In a row and running backs Virgil Hurt and Corey Federico came up with big runs. Twin Falls' offense, known more for steadiness than big plays, came up with several gainers in excess of 20 yards with

'I guess . . . that this is the happiest I've been in my life'

By LARRY HOVEY

BOISE — There were some yells, back slapping and once in a while a loud whistle.

But for the most part the crowd standing around the door at the Twin Falls dressing room, especially the adults, just stood and grinned -- broadly. Their Bruins had just beaten Borah 43-20 and marched into the state A-1 final.

Golf Coach Al Rohwerder clenched a fist and rapped it straight ahead. Most just savored and turned and spun in one place. Probably Gene Federico, father of running back Corey, summed it up.

"I guess," he said, smiling and searching for the words that could express it, "that this is as happy as I've been in my life."

Nobody wanted to go inside. The coaching staff kinda wandered, taking the congratulations and hugs from well-wishers.

"Congratulations, coach," said Merl Eden, former Twin Falls mentor, as he threw an arm around Jones' shoulder. "It's great. I can never do it," referring to a couple of losses at Borah's hands although his 1966 battle with the Lions ranks as one of the classics for Bruin Stadium.

But Eden had an ace in the hole. "Let's go," he said to his son Mark, who has been a defensive stalwart in the Bruin line all year. As most dads know, sometimes it's more fun to watch the son experience things denied the father.

Bruin Athletic Director Duke Wiseman was one of the biggest grinners, although he already was thinking ahead to next week's title showdown against Coeur d'Alene, which topped Highland 27-13.

"It'll be at our field," Wiseman told everyone. "They've been saying on the radio all day that if we win we go up there. But I talked to the state office yesterday and they assured me it would be in Twin Falls."

On the field Twin Falls had a succession of individuals who arose at key times to pick up the whole team. One such -- and perhaps the major one because of its resulting touchdown that moved Twin Falls out of reach -- was a screen pass interception by Benny Wright.

"I had no suspicions before the play," Wright said of the third and 30 situation. "But you can tell when the line starts letting you by and the quarterback is over-exercising (pan-tomiming a passing motion) the ball. I just went backward and it was right there."

Three times in one Borah drive, Dave Slotten made big tackles for losses. It helped set up a brilliant goal line stand that held Borah at the one. One of the tackles came when Slotten picked up Borah runner Ty Ogata, put him on his shoulder and then drove him backward into the artificial turf.

"I met that one just right. I loved it," he smiled. The other two came inside the five-yard line. "They'd run and lead with the block. I'd take the (fullback's) hit on my inside shoulder and just spin into the runner."

Running back Virgil Hurt and offensive tackle Lanning Morrison both felt the earlier loss to Borah was actually the reason for the big win Saturday.

"We were ready for the second half this time," said Hurt, who had a 75-yard rushing day. "The first time I think everyone thought we had it won at halftime. This time we came out fired up for the second half."

"It helps a lot to know they did it once when they shouldn't have. We were more for this game than any other one this year," Morrison confirmed.

For Rice it was the biggest moment of his senior career -- to this point. His 50 yards passing and 191 running accounted for nearly half of Twin Falls' total offense. Surprisingly, he picked up about 85 yards on three quarterback sneaks.

"Our guards and (center Randy) Masoner just blew them out. All I had to do was put one foot in front of the other," Rice smiled. "They shifted a lot on us but we went on a lot of quick counts and it never really affected us," he said of Borah's defense.

Offensive Coach Bill Ingram said the Bruins basically went after Borah with the same offense of the first game -- just executed it better.

"We put in the throw to the back (on which Hurt scored eight points) and added the quarterback draw because of the way their linebackers flew out with our backs," Ingram said. "But I think what you saw today was Twin Falls playing as well as we can play."

Offensive line Coach Andy Barron didn't mind putting off the start of the wrestling season another week.

"This was an easy week to coach. Next week will be easy, too, because we've got some fired-up people," he said.

Idaho falls, Montana gets playoff spot

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — Anthony Corley and Otto Kelly combined to rush for 271 yards to lead Nevada-Reno to a 25-16 upset over Idaho, knocking the Vandals out of the Big Sky conference championship Saturday.

The Idaho lost tied the Vandals with Montana for the league crown with a 5-2 Big Sky record, but since Montana owns a victory over the Vandals they won the automatic berth in the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs.

Quarterback Marshall Sperbeck passed for one score and caught a pass for another touchdown as Nevada-Reno ended its season with a 6-5 record.

Corley, who wound up the conference's rushing champ, ran for 149 yards and Kelly picked up 122 yards, including a 14-yard touchdown run.

Quarterback Ken Hobart threw for two touchdowns and Tim McMonigle kicked a 35-yard field goal for the Idaho scores.

The win kept alive Nevada-Reno Coach Chris Ault's career winning streak. Ault never has been associated with a losing team since he started coaching high school in 1969.

Idaho opened the scoring in the first quarter with a 57-yard drive mostly on the passing of Hobart to set up McMonigle's field goal.

In the second quarter, the Wolf Pack went ahead 7-3 on a 51-yard drive, capped off by a trick play. Sperbeck lateralled to wide receiver Paul Skinner who then tossed it back to Sperbeck for a 57-yard touchdown.

An interference penalty with the punt receiver Skinner in the second quarter put the ball on the Idaho 23-yard line. Sperbeck passed 14 yards to Jack DeMello setting up Kelly's 14-yard touchdown dash. Sperbeck capped a 57-yard drive in the third quarter with an 8-yard pass to tight end Matt Rivera, who was alone in the endzone.

Tony Zendejas kicked field goals of 37 and 44 yards to set a new Nevada-Reno season scoring record of 104 points breaking the old mark of 102 set in 1978 by Frank Hawkins.

With the score, 23-3, in the third quarter, Idaho scored on a 2-yard pass from Hobart to Kurt Vestman after an 80-yard drive. In the fourth quarter, the Vandals covered 71 yards and scored on an 11-yard pass from Hobart to Vic Wallace.

Idaho was driving for another score late in the game but was stopped by an interception by Alexander Jones on the Nevada 10-yard line.

Hobart, one of the leading passers in the nation, completed 27-of-57 attempts for 299 yards with one interception.

Dixie drills CSI

Utah trip nets 0-2 mark for Eagles

ST. GEORGE, Utah — Dixie's Rebels broke to a double-digit lead midway through the first half and held off the scrambling College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagles 82-66 Saturday night.

In absorbing their second loss in as many nights, the Eagles ran into the same situation they did at Snow College Friday. The Rebels jumped off to an early 8-8 lead. CSI rallied back for a tie on Phil Rohr's shot with just over 11 minutes left but Dixie hit the next time down court and never trailed again.

For the second night, Coach Dave Campbell experimented with starting lineups and different combinations on the floor. At times he went with a three-guard alignment. But again the Eagles were hurt when sophomore Gerald Kennedy, trying to play into shape and build up strength in a leg that was injured in pre-season, wasn't able to play in the second half.

Still, Dixie had the game pretty well in control by that time and at one point extended its advantage to 22 points before CSI, behind a kamikaze pressure defense, trimmed that to six points. But the Eagles could never get closer than that.

That grey to 47-29 early in the second half before CSI started its last major flurry of the night. Freshman Dewey Haley capped that effort with a three-point play off a steal that cut the deficit to 49-43. But Vermillion and West Hymas got Dixie going again and CSI was never able to get closer than nine, the last time at 69-60.

CSI returns to Twin Falls Tuesday to play the Olympic champion Yugoslavian National team at 7:30 p.m.

"I thought we played well in the second half, but we couldn't get anything going in the first half," Campbell said. "Of course we wanted to win last night and tonight but I think we're going to be okay."

Broncos win; Criner pleads for berth

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — One player who had contributed little all season and who had done a lot combined Saturday night to give the Boise State Broncos a chance at entering the division I-AA playoffs.

Tim Kienna and John Rade lifted the Broncos to a 27-24 Big Sky Conference victory over the Idaho State Bengals.

The win gives Boise State an outside chance at one of the three at-large playoff berths. In Bronco Coach Jim Criner's opinion, however, his team definitely deserves selection over conference rival Idaho.

"Right now, they are not as good as football team as we are," Criner said. "I think we've got to send our best representative right now and that's us."

Idaho's loss to University of Nevada-Reno earlier Saturday denied the title to the Vandals and gave the conference's automatic berth to Montana. That also brought Boise State back to life on a point system where Boise State's reward for beating three Division I teams might outweigh a loss to the Vandals.

The Broncos probably wouldn't have hopes, dim or otherwise, had it not been for Kienna. The junior quarterback replaced Gerald Desires who suffered a sprained right ankle midway through the third quarter. Kienna brought BSU back with touchdown passes of 35 yards to Joe Trotter and seven yards to Robert Farmer.

Overall, Kienna passed for 111 yards, completing eight of 13 passes. "I talked to him after the game and told him that he did an outstanding job," ISU Coach Dave Kraghorpe was sidelined with a pinched nerve in the final period, picked up 133 yards in 14 carries.

"I thought the turning point in the game came when they took the opening kickoff down and scored and our offense came right back to tie it," a beaming Coach Bill Jones said.

Borah moved from its own 38 to the Twin Falls' 28 in four plays after the kickoff. On third down, going from the shotgun, quarterback—Steve—Buratto—hit Shane Mace over the middle for 39 yards and the touchdown. The PAT died on a fumbled snap.

On its first possession, starting at the 31, Twin Falls fed the ball to Hurt six straight times for 31 yards and Borah chipped in with a major penalty. That carried to the Lions' 19. Hurt ran for eight and Rice hit Brent Standing for 11 to set up a one-yard sneak by Rice. But it remained tied when Standing missed the kick.

Borah was forced to punt on its next possession and Twin Falls rolled again, this time covering 70 yards in 14 plays. There was a moment of trepidation after a first down at the four when a five-yard penalty and a fumbled option pitch cost eight yards. But on third-and-goal, Rice hit Hurt on a swing pass for the score. Again Standing's conversion strayed wide.

It was at that point that Borah drove to the Twin Falls' five—most of it coming on a 43-yard bomb to Kip Meyer on the fourth play of the series. But Slotten hit the Lions twice for losses and on fourth-and-goal he and Brian Nield stopped Ty Ogata at the one-foot line.

Twin Falls took over but fumbled a handoff on the third play. Twice more, with Cliff Gambrel making one tackle for a loss, the Bruins held Borah out but on third and two, Buratto kept on a run-pass option and got in. Piotr Makula's kick gave Borah a 13-12 lead.

The Lions' lead didn't last long.

On the first play after the kickoff, Hurt nearly broke one but settled for 20. On the next play, Federico burst off tackle, broke a couple of tackles and sailed 42 yards to the Borah 11. Rice then "sneaked" for 10 and Federico culminated the whirlwind 72-yard drive on the fourth play. Rice hit Hurt for a two-point conversion and a 20-13 lead the Bruins did not give up.

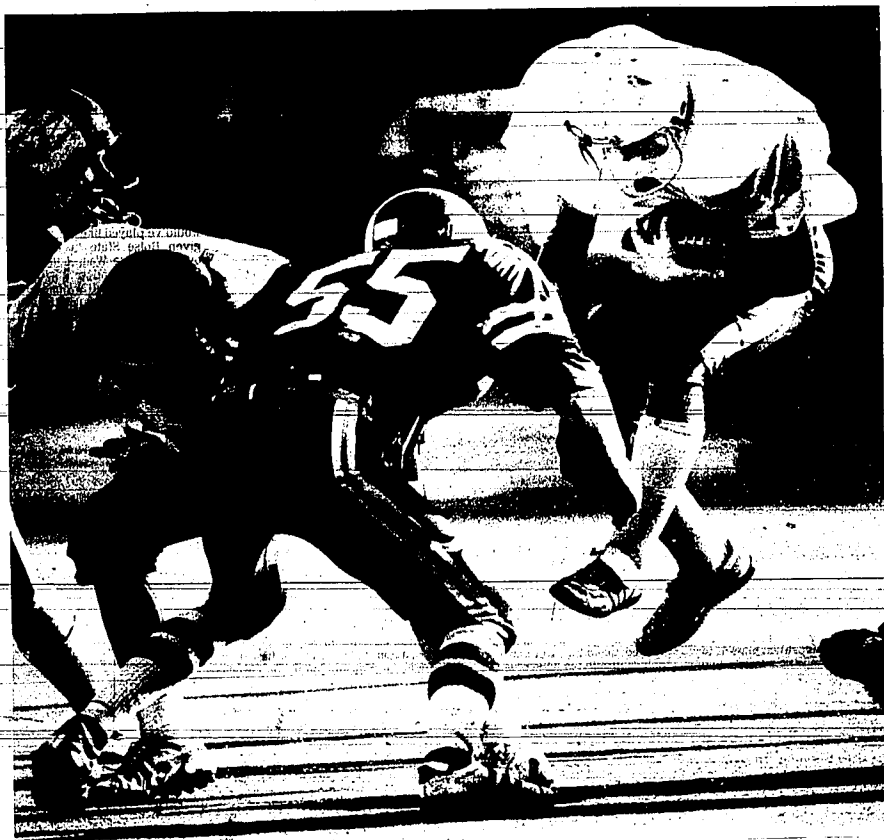

Twin Falls' Brock Miller's pass interception set up another Bruin drive in the third period. Federico started it with a two-yard run and then Rice kept on an option and was just hauled down at the Borah 15 after a 46-yard gallop. It only delayed the inevitable, however, as Federico "ripped" for the touchdown on the next play. Standing converted.

Borah used the rest of the third quarter, and 29 seconds of the fourth—in getting its last touchdown, the payoff coming on a fourth and four pass to Scott Fitzgerald. Makula converted.

Scott Morgan's 23-yard kickoff return triggered the final point outburst for Twin Falls. Twin Falls drove to the nine—where Federico was hurt—and the Bruins had to settle for a 22-yard Standing field goal.

Borah replied with a passing game that carried to the Twin Falls 38 before a holding penalty and illegal motion called knocked the Lions back 20 yards. On the next play Buratto tried a center screen, but wide guard Benny Wright snuffed it out and intercepted at the Borah 35.

Three plays later, Rice dropped back to pass, tucked it away on a draw and sprinter 27 yards for his second touchdown. The next time he carried the ball—with 3:52 left in the game—Rice broke a 36-yard run but this time Borah held at the 13—but only momentarily. Steve Root picked off a pass and returned it to the Borah 14. Rice hit for 12 and then Scot Scherer wound capped the victory with a two-yard scoring plunge.

14 win turkeys for guessing

TWIN FALLS — Henry Carvajal, Donna Yankey, Mike Nielson and Mary Ann Ribolt crossed the finish line first in their divisions Saturday at the Gobbler Classic, but they weren't the only winners. Ten turkeys were given away to the runners who came closest to predicting their finishing times for the 3- and 6-mile races. In addition, 10 more turkeys were awarded to the fastest runners and those winning a drawing.

Carvajal, the former College of Southern Idaho star, won the 6-mile race with a 33:41 clocking, while Yankey captured the women's division with a 45:55 effort. In the 3-mile event, Mike Nielson placed first among men with a 16:28, while Mary Ann Ribolt topped all women with an 18:18.

Jim Palmer was the best prognosticator, finishing the 3-mile race in 26:39 after saying he would complete the course in 27:00.

In all, 63 runners participated.

Following is a list of Saturday's best forecasters, with their actual and predicted times and the difference:

3-mile — Jim Palmer, 26:39, 27:00, -21; Harold Brown, 17:30, 17:27, -3; Rick Haysler, 18:55, 19:00, -5; Ernest Moss, 21:14, 21:00, -14; Dick Sterling, 22:27, 22:45, -18.

6-mile — Del Schell, 47:50, 47:45, -5; David Webster, 48:40, 45:00, -3:40; Jack Hassmisen, 42:37, 44:00, -1:23; Robert Carr, 42:22, 41:45, -37; Judy Trotter, 51:48, 51:08, -40.

42 Sage gymnasts gain state title

BOISE — Four Sage gymnasts qualified for the state Class III meet during a meet held Saturday afternoon at Gem State Gymnastics.

Wendy Fleming, Terrie Jarrell, Tonya Clark and Patricia Ward all scored high enough to compete in the state event to be held Dec. 4 at Wings in Boise.

Saturday's meet was a combined Class I and Class III meet, but scores and final team standings were not available because of a computer malfunction at the meet.

Melissa Butcher placed Sage's Class I entries by taking fourth on the uneven bars and sixth in vaulting. Elbert Buck was sixth on the bars and Macie Miller took sixth in floor exercise.

Glenna Jones led the Class III entries by taking third on the beam, fifth in vaulting and sixth in the all-around.

Namath keeps driver's license

TAMARAC, Fla. (UPI) — Former New York Jets quarterback Joe Namath will be allowed to keep his driver's license even though he refused to take a breathalyzer test after being arrested two months ago on a drunken driving charge.

Namath, the former NFL football star now turned actor, told a Broward County Judge Friday he didn't know he risked license suspension when he refused to take the test.

The judge agreed, ruling that police warnings were too confusing for Namath to understand.

Police said they spotted Namath's 1980 Cadillac weaving across a Broward road at about 2 a.m. Sept. 23. When police pulled him over, Namath refused to take a roadside sobriety test, police said.

Balloon prank delays game

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — A huge black balloon covered with the letters "MIT" mysteriously rose out of the 46 yard line before thousands of football fans at Harvard Stadium and exploded Saturday in an apparent remote control prank.

There were no injuries. The Harvard-Yale football game was delayed about 10 minutes while baffled officials removed the heavy black rubber balloon that was buried under the sod and activated by a remote control device, a spokesman said.

"It just appeared out of absolutely nowhere," said Harvard spokesman Kevin Fitzgerald. "It was quite curious. It had the attention of everybody."

The prank occurred after Harvard scored to go ahead 14-7 in the second quarter of the Ivy League game. The balloon was about 10 feet away from the Harvard bench.

Fitzgerald said the balloon, which looked like a round inner tube covered with the letters MIT, steadily rose until it was about 4 feet in diameter. It exploded and spewed out black smoke.

'Mediocre' BYU claims 7th crown

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Steve Young called his 254-yard passing performance for two touchdowns only "mediocre," but it was good enough to give Brigham Young a 17-12 win at Utah Saturday for the 1982 Western Athletic Conference title and host berth at the Holiday Bowl.

"Our offense wasn't that pretty, but we did what we had to do to win," said Young. "We won the WAC championship for a seventh consecutive time and that's all I care about."

The Cougars will face Ohio State in the Dec. 17 post-season bowl game in San Diego, Calif., where BYU has been the WAC's only representative throughout the Holiday Bowl's 5-year history.

Young completed 24 of 34 passing attempts with 20 interceptions, throwing six yards to Mike Eddo for one BYU touchdown and 16 yards to Casey Tlumaliu for what proved to be the game-winning TD.

"Utah did a great job, no make that an outstanding job on defense," said BYU coach LaVell Edwards. "They are the best 5-5 team I've ever seen. We played just well enough to win, and it was a great game to win."

Utah coach Chuck Stobart added, "We lacked just a little. We just didn't put the points on the board. We made the mistakes and BYU didn't. We moved the ball well, but we failed to score three times when we had the ball down there."

BYU's other points came on Kurt Gunther's two conversion kicks and his 32-yard field goal. But, it was the BYU defense that really produced the win.

The Cougars recovered three Utah fumbles, including one in the end zone by Dave Aupia, that stopped Utah's first scoring threat. And John Manning intercepted a Ken Viera pass in the end zone to stop another Utah drive.

Late in the game, BYU held Utah inside the 10-yard line when the Utes failed to convert on fourth-down-and-goal from the six.

On BYU's first scoring drive, Young completed a straight pass for 81 yards, including the six-yarder to Eddo that gave BYU the lead for good 7-0 in the first quarter.

On the Cougars' other TD, set up by a Utah fumble near midfield, Young passed eight yards to Eddo, 22 to Neil Balholm and 16 to Tlumaliu for the score.

With his 254 yards against Utah, Young finishes the season with 3,100 yards passing — becoming the fourth BYU quarterback to pass for more than 3,000 yards in a season.

Gordon Hudson caught five passes in the game for 68 yards, giving him 67 receptions this year and equalling the NCAA mark he set last year for receptions in a season by a tight end. Carl Monroe rushed for 157 yards and both Utah touchdowns, on runs of three and four yards. He finishes the year with 1,507 yards rushing, a WAC single season record. The old mark of

WAC

1,431 was set by Arizona State's Art Malone in 1968.

Harris Johnson added 145 yards rushing for the Utes.

BYU has now won seven consecutive WAC titles, the second-longest conference championship winning streak in the NCAA. Oklahoma won a record-14 in the Big Eight between 1959 and 1975. Texas and Ohio State are third with six consecutive conference championships each.

BYU ends the regular season with a 7-1 WAC record and 8-3 overall mark. The Utes dropped to 3-4 in the WAC and 5-6 overall.

Air Force 30, Notre Dame 17

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (UPI) — Junior quarterback Marty Louthan ran for two touchdowns Saturday and Sean Pavlich kicked three field goals, including a 57-yarder, to lead unheralded Air Force to a 30-17 upset of 16th-ranked Notre Dame before 46,712 partisan fans at Falcon Stadium.

Halfback Jody Simmons also scored on a 3-yard run for Air Force, which improved its season mark to 7-4. The Irish scores came on a 29-yard pass from Jim O'Hara to Larry Moriarty, a 35-yard aerial from O'Hara to Joe Louthan, and a 38-yard field goal by Mike Johnston.

Louthan, who had 115 yards on 15 carries, was the key to the Air Force attack, which made shambles of the third-ranked Irish defense. The Falcon offense, ranked third in the nation in rushing, demolished Notre Dame for 366 total yards enroute to its first winning season since 1973.

With Louthan at the controls, Air Force outplayed the Irish throughout. The first half, the Falcon defense created three Notre Dame turnovers, and two resulted in eventual touchdowns.

Air Force defensive tackle Chris Pank recovered a Notre Dame fumble at the Notre Dame 35 in the first period, and Louthan crashed over from 2 yards out three plays later for the only score of the quarter.

In the second period, Greg Zolner intercepted an O'Hara pass and returned it 36 yards to the Irish 16. Three plays later, Louthan again scored from the 2 yard line.

Pavlich added a 40-yard field goal on the final play of the first half to make it 17-0.

Notre Dame took the second-half kickoff and moved to the Air Force 21 in nine plays, where Johnston booted his 39-yard field goal. But Air Force came back on the ensuing kickoff as Louthan broke loose on a quarterback draw for a 35-yard run to the Irish-3 yard line. Simmons scored on the next play.

Air Force built its lead to 27-3 on Pavlich's 42-yard goal with 11:00 remaining, and added its final points on his 57-yard effort.

O'Hara tried to rally the Irish, but it came too late. He hit Howard with the last scoring pass with only 33 seconds to play in the game.

The win was Air Force's first victory over Notre Dame in the 12-game series. Notre Dame, dropping to 6-3, suffered its first loss to a service academy since Navy turned the trick 35-14 in 1953.

New Mexico 41, Hawaii 17

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — New Mexico's Mike Carter opened the fourth quarter with a 49-yard scoring run that ignited a four-touchdown outburst and carried the Lobos to a 41-17 Western Athletic Conference victory over Hawaii Saturday night.

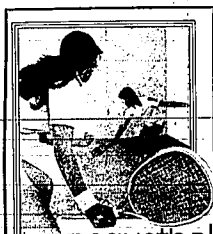

The Lobos ended the regular season with a 10-1 record, the best in the school's history. New Mexico finished second behind Brigham Young in the WAC with a 6-1 conference mark. Hawaii is 6-3 overall and 3-4 in the conference.

Behind the running and passing of senior quarterback Bernard Quarles, the Rainbows grabbed a 17-14 lead at halftime.

Neither team could score in the third period, but on the first play of the final quarter, Carter, who wound up with 100 yards on 10 carries, burst up the middle into the secondary, cut to his left and outraced the Rainbow defenders to the goal line to give New Mexico its first lead of the game.

Less than two minutes later, Lobo linebacker Johnny Jackson stripped the football from Quarles and scored 28 yards into the end zone.

Hawaii failed to move the ball on its next possession and was forced to punt. New Mexico then moved the ball 86 yards to score its third TD within a five-minute period.

Homedale becomes first team to win 2 straight titles

CDA remains undefeated, will meet Bruins

POCATELLO (UPI) — Scott Wellman lofted three touchdown passes and Mike Cox booted two field goals and three extra points to spur Couer d'Alene to a 27-13 win over Highland in a state A-1 high school semifinal playoff Saturday.

The unbeaten Vikings rolled to a 27-0 lead in the first half and held off a late rally by the home-field Rams to lift their record to 14-0 and gain a berth in the A-1 final against Twin Falls, a 43-20 winner over Borah in Saturday's other semifinal match.

Couer d'Alene used three interceptions by cornerback Nick Verdola to set up its offensive fireworks.

Wellman opened the scoring in the first quarter when he hit tight end Rich Klotz with a 16-yard touchdown strike.

Cox kicked his first field goal, a 20-yarder, before Wellman boosted the score to 17-0 with a 17-yard TD pass to flanker Dan Hanlon.

After Verdola intercepted a pass thrown by Highland's Steve Krathorpe, Wellman tossed a pass to end Kurt Lundblad for a 14-yard scoring play.

The Vikings added their final score with 17 seconds to go in the half after Krathorpe fumbled. Cox immediately boomed a 42-yard field goal.

Highland finally got on the board in the second half when Krathorpe connected with wide receiver Lance Stone on a 20-yard passing play.

State playoffs

The game's last score occurred as time ran out when Marty Hoge drilled Kerry Kawamura with a 17-yard TD pass.

Madison 14, Middleton 0

POCATELLO (UPI) — Doug Walker ran for one touchdown and caught a 12-yard scoring pass from Ryan Rydalch to lead the Madison Bobcats to the state A-2 high school football title Saturday with a 14-0 win over Middleton.

The Rydalch-to-Walker pass came with 27 seconds to play in the first half following a shanked punt by Middleton. After Gary Shies kicked the first of his two extra points, Madison had a 7-0 halftime advantage.

Rydalch tossed a pass to flanker Randy Sidiway for a 29-yard gain to set up the final score — a 3-yard dash by Walker in the third quarter.

Madison ground out the clock the rest of the way, using a strong ball-control offense featuring the running of Walker, Melvin Rudd, Gary Geister and Scott Dansie.

The Madison defense, meantime, squelched Middleton, keeping the Vikings in their own end of the field most of the game — which was played in the Idaho State University Mildom.

Middleton's only serious scoring threat was in the second quarter. The Vikings drove to Madison's 4-yard line, but the Bobcats thwarted four attempts by the southwest Idaho team to get into the end zone.

Madison ended its season with a 12-0 record and Middleton finished at 9-3.

HOMEDALE (UPI) — Senior fullback Bill Maxwell gained 119 yards rushing and scored three short-range touchdowns to power the Homedale Trojans to the state A-3 high school football title Saturday with a 36-0 win over North Fremont.

Homedale — the first Idaho high school team to win back-to-back state titles since the playoff system was conceived five years ago — racked up 220 yards on the ground while limiting the visiting team from eastern Idaho to 47 yards rushing.

The Trojans capped their season with an 11-1 mark in ruining North Fremont's bid for an unbeaten year.

The Huskies closed the season at 10-1.

Maxwell put the game out of reach in the first half by scoring consecutive touchdowns of 1, 2 and 3 yards.

Quarterback Mike Matteson was the game's top offensive producer for the Trojans, completing nine of 14 passes for 108 yards — including a 29-yard scoring strike to receiver Eric Kushlan in the fourth quarter.

Also, Darren Krzesnik booted a 29-yard field goal for the Trojans, establishing himself as the first player to kick a three-pointer in an Idaho A-3 championship game.

Homedale's final touchdown, scored with five minutes left in the game, resulted from a 26-yard run by tailback Terry Cuda.

North Fremont failed to generate sufficient offense to score and was plagued by seven turnovers. Homedale, meanwhile, gave up the ball on errors four times. Homedale defeated Kimberly 42-8 in last year's title game and lost the 1980 championship to West Side, 14-0.

Avoiding the knife helpful to UCLA

Defender in need of surgery makes tackle to stop USC

Pac-10

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — A month ago, UCLA nose guard Karl Morgan sustained a serious knee injury and doctors wanted to operate to repair the damage. Morgan told them they'd have to kill him first.

On Saturday, the 240-pound senior was alive and well. And thanks to him, the 11th-ranked Bruins are still alive in the 1982 Run for the Roses.

Morgan and Eugene Leoni capped a brilliant defensive performance by UCLA by sacking Southern Cal's quarterback on a two-point conversion attempt with no time left in the game to preserve a 20-19 Bruins victory.

The Trojans scored to make it 20-19 when Scott Tinsley hit sophomore Mark Boyer in the end zone with a 1-yard touchdown pass as time ran out.

Then, going for the two points and the victory, Tinsley dropped back to pass but was crushed by Morgan and Leoni, a linebacker blitzing on the play.

"I split the middle and I thought Tinsley was going to throw the ball, but when he tucked it back in, I jumped on him," Morgan said while still celebrating on the field. "When I got him down, I thought, 'It's over. Thank God it's over.'"

Just prior to the conversion attempt, UCLA Coach Terry Donahue huddled with his entire team around him on the sideline. According to linebacker Blanchard Montgomery, who made 15 unassisted tackles, Donahue told his players, "This is what the game is all about. All we have to do is give it your best. If we win, we win. If we lose, we lose."

The victory kept UCLA in the race for the Rose Bowl as Washington State scored a major upset over fifth-ranked Washington. The Bruins, 9-1-1 overall and 5-1-1 in conference play, need another upset victory next Saturday by Arizona over Arizona State to clinch the conference title.

USC, which fell to 7-3 and 5-2 in the conference, is ineligible for the Pac-10 title or any bowl game because of NCAA sanctions.

A victory by the Sun Devils will put ASU in the Rose Bowl.

"We have nothing to complain about," said USC Coach John Robinson. "It was the greatest loss on the goal line. We came to win."

The victory was only the fourth for UCLA in its last 16 meetings with the arch-rival Trojans in the unique contest that matches major national powers from the same conference and the same city.

UCLA led 17-10 at halftime and booted its lead to 20-10 in the second period on a 42-yard field goal by freshman John Lee, his second field goal of the game. But the Trojans pulled within a touchdown: 20-13, with 8:51 left in the game on Steve Jordan's 21-yard field goal. The kick of the game — a 3-yard scramble with 2:47 to play in the second quarter.

The Cougars then came on a 6-yard pass from Clete Casper to split end Mike Peterson early in the third quarter.

Washington running back Jacques Robinson led all rushers with 144 yards, including a 36-yard run which helped to set up the Huskies' first touchdown.

The win boosted the Cougars' final season record to 3-7-1 and 2-4-2 in the conference. The triumph was also WSU's first victory over Washington in eight tries, dating back to 1973.

The loss dropped the Huskies to 6-2 in the Pac-10 conference, one game behind Arizona State which is tied this week with a 5-1 conference mark.

Trailing 21-20 with 4:35 to play, Washington had a chance to grab the lead on what would have been kicker Chuck Nelson's 31 consecutive field goal but Nelson's 33-yard attempt went wide to the right.

WSU was forced to punt on its next possession but the Huskies ensuing drive was stopped abruptly when Cougar strong safety Rob Treece hit Husku quarterback Tim Cowan from behind, forcing a fumble. Cougar safety Gerald Waters fell on the loose ball at the Washington 28 yard line.

With 56 seconds to play, WSU kicker John Trout booted a 38-yard field goal to ice the win. And with 47 seconds remaining, Cougar Mark Plets intercepted a Cowan pass to end the Huskies final drive of the game.

Harris led the Cougar rushing attack with 124 yards, including an 8-yard run with 4:43 to play in the third quarter that put WSU on top for the first time, 21-17.

Matthews rushed for another 112 yards and the Cougar's first TD of the game — a 3-yard scramble with 2:47 to play in the second quarter.

egon knocked off Pac-10 opponent Arizona 13-7 for its first victory of the season.

The loss may have cost Arizona, 5-4-1, a post-season bowl berth. Oregon, 1-8-1, has one game left, against Oregon State. Arizona finishes its regular season next week against Arizona State.

Arizona quarterback Tom Tuncillicite hit running back William Redmond for his team's only score of the day with 45 seconds left in the first half. But Tuncillicite finished with only 17 completions in 45 attempts and was intercepted five times.

The last interception, by Oregon's Dennis Clay, came in the closing seconds of the contest.

Jorgensen led the Ducks on a three-play, 43-second drive in the second period, hitting Thomas on three straight passes to move the ball 76 yards into the end zone.

California 25, Stanford 20

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Kevin Moen, a defensive back used in punt return situations, scored on the end of a five-lateral kickoff return with no time left on the clock

Saturday to give underdog California a 25-20 victory over Stanford and deny the Cardinals a chance to play in the Hall of Fame Bowl.

Mark Harmon booted a 35-yard field goal at the end of the miraculous Stanford drive which started with only 1:27 left, and the Cardinals seemingly had the game won 20-19.

On the kickoff, Moen took the ball at the California 45, lateraled to Richard Rodgers, who ran about 10 yards and flipped it to Dwight Garner, who then ran about 20 yards as fans streamed onto the field and impeded the Stanford defenders.

Garner then flipped it back to Rodgers and Rodgers lateraled to Marlet Ford. The wide receiver then lateraled to Moen, who weaved his way through the crowd for a touchdown.

One of the officials threw his flag, down near the Stanford 40 and after the play was over, he consulted with three other officials, who were engulfed by the crowd left the touchdown stand.

The Stanford team pleaded with the officials that one of the laterals was a forward pass but the officials walked off the field leaving the Cardinals in total frustration in running up their sixth loss against five victories.

Oregon St. 30, Montana 10

CORVALLIS, Ore. (UPI) — Oregon State quarterback Ed Singler completed 11 of 17 passes for 160 yards and scored two touchdowns to lead the Beavers to a 30-10 victory over Montana Saturday, giving OSU its first victory of the year.

The win was OSU's first win since a 31-28 decision over Fresno State in the 1981 season-opening game, a stretch of 19 games without a win.

The loss dropped Montana's record, to 6-5, but Montana won an automatic berth in the Division I-AA playoffs because Idaho lost to Nevada-Reno Saturday. Idaho, Montana and Montana State finished with 5-2 Big Sky Conference records, but Montana beat both of the other teams during the season and was given the automatic berth.

OSU spotted the Grizzlies a 7-0 lead early in the first quarter when Montana quarterback Marty Morhinweg ran in from the Beavers' 5. But the Beavers needed just three plays to tie the score, with Singler hitting James Terrell with a 37-yard pass to set up a 1st-and-goal situation at the Montana 4. Singler scored over left guard on the next play.

St. John's edges North Carolina in overtime

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (UPI) — Kevin Williams almost made a mental mistake that would have cost St. John's the game, but it was fortunate for the Redmen that coach Lou Carnesecca had issued a reminder.

"My instincts told me to call a timeout," said Williams, "but I remembered the coach told me we didn't have any left and I took the ball downcourt."

Williams then sank an 18-footer with two seconds remaining in regulation Saturday to send the game against 1982 NCAA champion North Carolina into overtime.

David Russell scored 6 of his 19 points in overtime to lift St. John's to a 75-74 victory over the Tar Heels in the fourth annual Tip-Off Classic, the opening game of the 1982-83 NCAA season.

"That was great coaching," Carnesecca joked later. "Nine times out of ten I'm at the roof at that point, but this time I could see it in the players' eyes that they wanted to win."

The loss ended a 16-game winning streak for North Carolina, which had not lost since a 75-58 decision to Virginia last Feb. 3.

The Tar Heels led 63-60 with 1:46 left in regulation, but Russell hit on a driving stuff shot with 17 seconds remaining to cut the lead to 1-point. Sam Perkins made the front end of a 1-and-1 to give North Carolina a 64-62 advantage, but Williams grabbed the rebound of the missed attempt and raced the length of the court to equalize.

"It's a nice way to win, coming from behind. But we know what lies ahead is just as tough," said Carnesecca.

Russell put St. John's ahead to stay in overtime at 68-64 with 4:30 left, before a sellout crowd of more than 8,000 at the Springfield Civic Center.

"Whoever gets the first shot in overtime is usually in pretty good shape," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith. "We played well enough in the second half to win."

Billy Goodwin followed Russell's shot with a layup to give the Redmen a 68-64 lead. Williams had 4 of his 14 points in overtime.

Tar Heels' Michael Jordan led all scorers with 25 points. Perkins and the Redmen's Chris Mullin added 22 each.

North Carolina trailed by 4 points at halftime. But the Tar Heels used their zone press to key an 8-0 spurt at the start of the second half and gain a 36-32 advantage. A pair of field goals by Perkins — and baskets by Matt Doherty and Jordan sparked the run.

Mullin had 14 points in the first half to spark St. John's to a 32-28 advantage. The Redmen were ahead throughout the half, but never led by more than 6 as North Carolina, behind the play of Jordan and Perkins, tied the score four times.

With the score tied 24-24, St. John's used an opportunistic defense for a 6-point spurt as Goodwin, Mullin and Williams had field goals to lift the Redmen to a 30-24 lead.

ST. JOHN'S (78) — Russell 7 5-19, Goodwin 5 4-14, Allen 2 0-4, Kelly 1 2-4, Mullin 10 2-22, Washington 0 0-1, Williams 6 2-24, Jackson 0 0-0, Stewart 0 0-0, Totals 31 19-78.

NORTH CAROLINA (74) — Jordan 10 5-12, Jordan 23-26, Perkins 9 4-22, Bradstock 4 0-18, Peterson 2 0-14, Irlowles 0 0-0, Hale 0 0-0, Doherty 3 3-6, Krum 0 0-0, Hunter 0 0-0, Totals 26 14-74.

Halftime — St. John's 32, N.C. 28. Fouled out — St. John's, Allen, Kelly; N.C., Jordan. Total fouls — North Carolina, 17; St. John's 21. Technical — None. A — 8,000.

Mustangs spurn 2-point play; gain Cotton Bowl

SMU settles for tie against Arkansas

IRVING, Texas (UPI) — A controversial 40-yard interference penalty set up Lance McIlhenny's 2-yard scoring run with 2:51 to play Saturday that brought unbeaten and second-ranked Southern Methodist to a 17-17 tie with No. 8 Arkansas and put the Mustangs into the Cotton Bowl for the first time in 16 years.

The Mustangs, however, came close to winning the game in the final seconds with a 52-yard field goal attempt by Jeff Harell, who made a 49-yarder with ease to put SMU in front early in the third period. Harell missed the ball and it fell well short of the uprights.

Despite the tie, the Mustangs finished their season without a loss at 10-0 and thus set up a Jan. 1 date in the Cotton Bowl with No. 6 Pittsburgh, invited earlier in the afternoon following their victory over Rutgers.

Arkansas, which will settle for a Bluebonnet Bowl trip on New Year's Eve, had its record slip to 8-1-1, with a game remaining in two weeks against Texas.

Arkansas appeared to have put the game away with six minutes remaining on a 3-yard run by Gary Anderson, who had set up that score with a leaping 24-yard third down catch that put the Razorbacks at the SMU 5.

But after the Arkansas score, the Mustangs moved 80 yards thanks to two giant plays.

Facing a 3rd-and-8 at his own 22, McIlhenny threw a lob pass down the left sideline that fell into the arms of Bobby Leach for a 21-yard gain.

On the next play, McIlhenny threw deep for Jackie Wilson, but the ball sailed well over Wilson's head. Officials ruled, however, that Nathan Jones prevented Wilson from having a path to the ball and interference was called at the Razorbacks' 17. The Mustangs scored four plays later when McIlhenny kept the ball on an option play and darted in from 2 yards out.

Before the two late touchdowns that tied the game, the teams had exchanged first-half touchdowns and third-quarter field goals. Anderson scored on a 3-yard run the second time Arkansas had the ball, and the Mustangs tied it in the second period on a 6-yard run by Eric Dickerson, who in SMU's tying touchdown drive broke the Southwest Conference career rushing record of former Heisman Trophy winner Earl Campbell.

Harell kicked his 49-yard field goal to put SMU in front on the Mustangs' opening possession of the second half. Martin Smith tied it at 10-10 for Arkansas on a 27-yarder on the final play of the quarter, ending a drive that began at the Arkansas 13.

Texas 31, Baylor 23

WACO, Texas (UPI) — Robert Brewer threw two long touchdown passes to Herkie Walls Saturday to lift the No. 15 Texas to a 31-23 Southwest Conference victory over Baylor.

Texas, which will apparently accept an invitation to the Sun Bowl, snapped a four-game losing streak against the Bears on their home field.

The win lifted the Longhorns' record to 7-2 and 5-1 in conference play. Baylor finished the season at 4-6-1 and 3-4 in conference play.

Baylor had a chance to take the lead with 7:14 left in the game, but a two-point conversion attempt failed after the Bears had pulled to within 24-23 on a 7-yard touchdown pass from Mike Brannan to punt-sized receiver

Gerald McNeil.

Texas then drove 80 yards for a clinching score on a 3-yard run by Ervin Davis, his second score of the day.

But Baylor still refused to fold, and drove inside the Texas 10 with a chance to tie with less than a minute to play. But Alfred Anderson was stopped on a fourth-down run at the Longhorn 6.

Texas A&M 34, TCU 14

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (UPI) — Quarterback Gary Kubiak returned from leg injuries to pass for 288 yards and three touchdowns Saturday as Texas A&M beat the Texas Christian 34-14 in Coach F.A. Dry's final game as TCU's head coach.

Kubiak, a senior playing his last game at home, hit light and John Kellen, flanker Jimmie Williams and tailback Jimmie Hawkins with short scoring tosses.

The final scoring pass to Hawkins stopped a TCU third-quarter rally in which the Horned Frogs pulled to within 10 points of the lead.

A&M also got a 17-yard touchdown run from Earnest Jackson and field goals of 31 and 35 yards from David Hardy to improve its record to 5-5. The Aggies play their final game of the season Thanksgiving Day against Texas.

Dry, told last week by the school that he was being fired after Saturday's game, watched the Frogs finish the season 3-8 and 2-6 in Southwest Conference play. Dry posted 12-51-3 record in his six years at the Fort Worth school.

Houston 24, Texas Tech 7

LUBBOCK, Texas (UPI) — Houston's Lionel Wilson threw a 74-yard touchdown pass and ran 6 yards for another score Saturday to lead the Cougars to a 24-7 Southwest Conference victory over Texas Tech.

The loss ended Tech's season at 4-7 for the year and 3-5 in SWC play, while Houston finished at 4-5-1 with a 3-1 SWC record, good for fourth place with one game left to play.

Tech quarterback Jim Hart, who was replaced early in the fourth quarter with Kevin Williams, failed to spark the Raider offense, hitting 7-of-16 passes for only 64 yards and an interception.

Tech's only bright spot was its defense, which scored the Red Raiders' lone touchdown. Guard Gabe Rivera set a career record 17 tackles.

Leading 17-7, Houston cemented the victory with 2:06 left to play when fullback Dwayne Love broke through right tackle for a 16-yard touchdown.

Kansas St. earns first bowl game

MANHATTAN, Kan. (UPI) — Tailback Josefatu Faralino rushed for 97 yards and two touchdowns to give Kansas State a 33-10 victory Saturday over Colorado and send the Wildcats to their first bowl game in the 87-year history of the program.

The Wildcats were extended an invitation to play in the Independence Bowl against Wisconsin Dec. 11 as a reward for their 6-1 record — their first winning season since 1970.

Faralino rushed for touchdowns of 26 and 5 yards as Kansas State improved its conference record to 3-3-1.

Greg Dagerforde chipped in with a 7-yard scoring run. Mike Piersen, a 55-year-old fumble returner for another touchdown. Steve Willis kicked a 42-yard field goal and the Wildcats also blocked a punt out of the end zone for a safety in dropping Colorado to 2-8 overall and 1-5-1 in Big Eight play.

Kansas State jumped in front 14-0 before the game was eight minutes old on touchdown runs by Faralino, his 26-yarder, and Dagerforde. Faralino's longest run of the season capped a 64-yard drive on Kansas State's first possession of the game and the Wildcats got the ball back a minute and a half later at the Colorado 22 when the Buffaloes botched a fourth down faked punt.

Dagerforde then capped the five-play drive with his second touchdown of the season but Colorado answered with an 83-yard drive on the ensuing possession for its only touchdown of the day.

Missouri 16, Kansas 10

COLUMBIA, Mo. (UPI) — James Caver turned a short pass into a 76-yard touchdown Saturday to give

Big 8

Missouri a season-ending 16-10 Big Eight Conference victory over Kansas.

The victory enabled the Tigers to finish above .500, with a 5-4 record, and knocked Kansas into a last-place finish in the Big Eight. It is the first time since 1976 that the Jayhawks, 2-7-2, finished last in the league.

With the score tied 10-10 midway through the fourth period, the Tigers had the ball on their own 20. After Tracey Mack gained 4 yards on a run, quarterback Marlon Adler connected with Caver who was near the right hash mark at about the 35. Caver caught the ball, turned to his right and had the entire open left side of the field in which to find a path to the endzone.

Okl. St. 49, Iowa St. 13

STILLWATER, Okla. (UPI) — Tailback Ernest Anderson rushed for 160 yards, one touchdown and two school records Saturday to highlight Oklahoma State's 49-13 rout of Iowa State.

Tight end Barry Hanna caught a pair of touchdown passes from quarterback Mike Jackson, and four other Cowboys scored on running plays. Larry Hatch kicked the extra point after all seven touchdowns.

Anderson, the nation's leading rusher, carried 43 times to boost his season yardage total to 1,731 and his number of carries for the season to 327. The previous Oklahoma State records, both set by running back Terry Miller in 1977, were 1,714 yards and 314 carries.

Rimington wins 2nd Outland Trophy

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Nebraska center Dave Rimington won the 1982 Outland Award, making him the first two-time recipient of the award honoring the nation's best college lineman.

The Football Writers Association of America announced the award Saturday.

Rimington, a 295-pound fifth-year senior from Omaha, Neb., was a unanimous choice of the FWA's eight-man All-America committee. Rimington also won last year's Outland Award, which honors college football's outstanding guard, tackle or center.

Players who previously won the Outland as juniors but who failed to win as seniors were Zee Smith of Auburn in 1958 and Ross Browner of Notre Dame in 1976.

Rimington is only the second center to win the Outland. The other was North Carolina State's Jim Rutherford in 1979.

Seven other linemen were eligible for this year's award by virtue of being selected for the FWA's All-America team, which was announced Friday.

Bucks stop Michigan to gain some pride

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — It was hard to believe nothing but pride was riding on Saturday's Ohio State-Michigan football game. But, in the mind of Buckeye linebacker Marcus Marek, there was.

"I felt today was our Rose Bowl," said Marek after Ohio State's 24-14 win over the 10th-ranked Wolverines, who already had wrapped up the Big Ten title and Rose Bowl berth. "In our minds, we feel we're the Big Ten champs."

Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce, 3-1 against Michigan since taking over for Woody Hayes four years ago, said his team played, "about as well as they can possibly play."

"They gave great effort out there today," said Bruce. "There's no doubt there was intensity in the hearts of the Ohio State football players. We played 60 minutes of football today. It was a great team effort."

Ohio State Athletic Director Hugh Hindman announced immediately after the game the Buckeyes had accepted an invitation to play the Western Athletic Conference champion Brigham Young University Cougars in the Holiday Bowl Dec. 17 at San Diego, Calif.

Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler said his team did not lose the game. "We just gave them the ball game," he said. "We handed it to them — repeat, we did not lose, we gave it away."

Schembechler complained about what he called the jamming of his team's offensive signals by Marek, the Buckeyes' defensive captain.

"I am upset because he was permitted to jam our quarterback's signal which upset our rhythm and timing," said Schembechler. "We knew about it before the game. I mentioned it to the officials before the game and at halftime, but no action was taken. It definitely was a violation of the rules."

The Buckeyes got 124 yards and two touchdowns from tailback Tim Spencer and took advantage of six Michigan turnovers to post their second straight win over the Wolverines.

Ohio State overcame an early 7-0 deficit with two second-quarter touchdown drives, the first set up by one of three pass interceptions thrown by Michigan's Steve Smith.

The Wolverines, who finished the regular season at 8-3 and won the Big Ten with an 8-1 record by virtue of the fact they played one more conference game than did Ohio State — 8-3 and 7-1 — drove to the Ohio State 8 on their first possession only to fumble on first down with outside linebacker Curt Curtis recovering on the Buckeye 10.

Michigan went 52 yards in 11 plays on its next possession with tailback Larry Ricks going over from the 1.

Linebacker Rowland Tatum picked off a Smith pass and returned it to the Michigan 29 early in the second quarter and it took Ohio State seven plays to tie the game with fullback Vaughn Broadnax running in from the 6.

Ohio State put together a 75-yard drive late in the period with Spencer going over from the 2. He also had 25- and 12-yard runs in the march and quarterback Mike Tomczak also hit split end Cedric Anderson with a big 20-yard pass.

Ohio State marched to the Michigan 15 with the opening second half kickoff but a fumble by Tomczak was recovered by Michigan's Mike Hammersmeyer on the Michigan 37. The Wolverines then went 63 yards in 15 plays to tie the score with Smith running the final 4 yards.

Ohio State's tie-breaking TD came out a 1-yard run by Spencer three plays after rover Doug Hill had recovered a fumble by Michigan's Anthony Carter on the Wolverine 14.

Hawkeyes bury the Spartans 24-18 in a Big Ten Conference game Saturday that probably clinched a Peach Bowl berth.

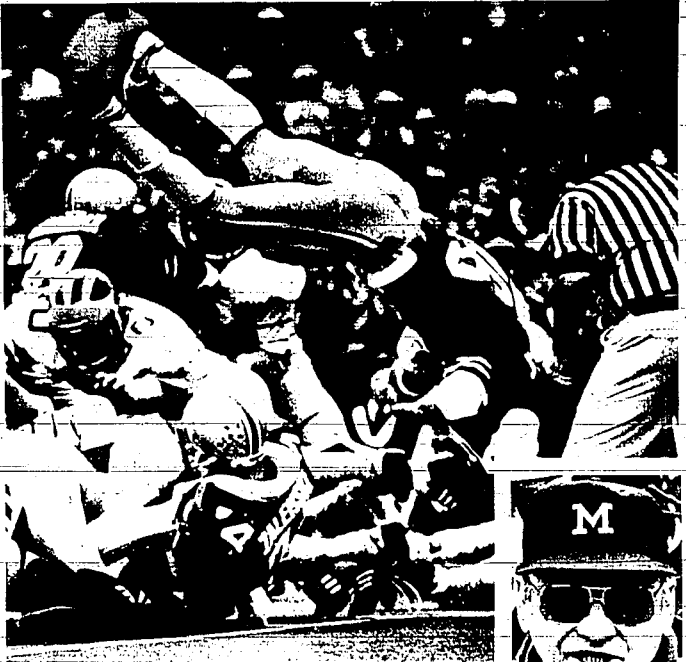

The win boosted Iowa to 6-2 in the Big Ten and 7-4 overall while Michigan State, playing its last game under fired Coach Muddy Waters, dropped to 2-7 in the conference and 2-9 overall.

Iowa's first score came near the middle of the first quarter when Tom Nichol kicked a 43-yard field goal.

Less than three minutes later, Gill scored his first touchdown, going 10 yards for the score to cap a 7-play, 32-yard drive.

Dave Yarema, who replaced John Leister as the Spartan quarterback near the end of the first quarter, picked up two quick first downs by passing.

However, the Hawkeye defense — which spent much of the day camped in the Michigan State backfield, dumped the quarterback for losses of 11 and 14 yards.

Ohio State's Tim Spencer dives into the end zone to register the Buckeyes' winning touchdown against Michigan, giving a sour note to Bo Schembechler's Rose Bowl-bound Wolverines.

Indiana 13, Purdue 7

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — Freshman Bobby Howard scored two first half touchdowns and the Hoosier defense stopped Purdue with a goal line stand in the last 20 seconds to give Indiana a 13-7 victory Saturday against the rival Boilermakers in the annual Old Oaken Bucket game.

The win was the second in a row for Indiana in the annual rivalry. Indiana has won 27 games to Purdue's 52 and there have been six ties.

The victory gave Indiana a 4-0 record and a conference mark of 4-5. Purdue, in a Leon Burnett's first season as coach, dropped to 4-7 and 3-6.

Purdue was within a yard of tying the game in the last minute following a four-minute drive that covered 64 yards, but Indiana stopped running back Eric Jordan and sacked quarterback Scott Campbell on the last play of the game.

Wisconsin 24, Minnesota 0

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Quarterback Randy Wright ran for one touchdown and passed for another Saturday as Wisconsin kept its Independence Bowl hopes alive with a 24-0 victory over Minnesota in the Big Ten finale for both teams.

The victory gave Wisconsin back-to-back winning seasons for the first time in two decades and despite a 6-5 record overall, 5-4 in the Big Ten, the Badgers were being strongly considered for a berth in the Dec. 11 Independence Bowl at Shreveport, La.

Minnesota, at one time 3-0 and ranked among the Top 20 nationally, slumped to its eighth straight defeat and finished the year 3-8 overall, 1-8 in the Big Ten.

Wisconsin, which notched its fifth consecutive victory in the traditional season-ending meeting between the two schools, led only 3-0 at the half but Wright broke the game open in the third quarter.

The junior quarterback drove Wisconsin 59 yards on the first possession of the second half, capping the march with a 1-yard scoring run on a fourth down play.

Bowl-bound Vols defeat Kentucky

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Alan Cockrell threw two touchdown passes and Fund Revelz kicked five field goals Saturday to lead Tennessee to a 28-7 victory over winless Kentucky and into the Peach Bowl against Iowa.

The Volunteers, 6-3 with one game remaining against cross-state rival Vanderbilt, will face the Hawkeyes, 7-4, Dec. 31 in Atlanta, Peach Bowl officials announced.

Revelz kicked his first field goal, a 47-yarder, midway through the first quarter to give Tennessee an early 3-0 lead.

Kentucky, 0-10-1, struck back with an 80-yard scoring drive to take a 7-3 lead late in the first quarter. Wildcat quarterback Randy Jenkins threw a screen pass to fullback Terry Henry, who then threw back to Jenkins for a 28-yard score.

Tennessee reclaimed the lead early in the second quarter when Cockrell threw a 1-yard touchdown pass to tight end Jeff Smith. The Colombian-born Revelz added a 55-yard field goal with 8 seconds remaining in the half to give the Vols a 13-7 lead.

That kick was Revelz' 11th consecutive field goal, a school record. By the game's end, the streak was still alive at 14.

Cockrell threw a 64-yard scoring bomb to Mike Miller in the third quarter to extend the Vols' lead to 19-7.

Revelz pounded fourth-quarter field goals of 50, 31, and 23 yards as Tennessee cruised to the win. The soccer-style sophomore kicker was connected on eight of nine field goal attempts of 50 or more yards for the season.

Cockrell completed 12-of-23 passes for 178 yards and tailback Chuck Coleman gained 96 yards and 11 carries to pace the Vols ground attack.

Jenkins completed 9-of-17 tosses, but was picked off three times. Kentucky's leading ground gainer was George Adams with 63 yards.

South

30-yard field goal by Mark Fleetwood. The Tigers got the offense on track in the next series, moving 56 yards in six plays with Austin scoring on a 9-yard run that made it 7-3.

Quarterback Homer Jordan keyed that drive with a 34-yard pass to Jeff Stockstill.

The Tigers made it 14-3 at the half with an 16-play drive that consumed nearly half of the second quarter. McSwain plunged over from a yard out for the score with two minutes to play in the half.

South Carolina staged a comeback effort in the third period, moving from its own 20 to the Clemson 1 where the Tigers mounted a goal line stand and South Carolina settled for another 30-yard Fleetwood field goal, making it 14-6.

Clemson scored on its next two possessions to put the game away. Austin crashed over from 2 yards out with 5:01 to play and Bob Paulling kicked a 44-yard field goal with 3:28 left in the game.

Miami, Fla., 41, N. C. St. 3

MIAMI (UPI) — Freshman Kyle Vanderwilt threw scoring passes of 60 and 20 yards to Rocky Bleck Saturday to spark Miami (Fla.) to a 41-3 triumph over North Carolina State.

While the Miami offense moved the ball when it had to, the defense, led by linemen Tony Fitzpatrick and Fred Robinson, shut down the Wolfpack offense.

The Hurricanes, 6-4 with a game remaining, kept their minor bowl hopes alive. North Carolina State wound up its season at 6-5.

Miami fullback Albert Bentley opened the scoring by bucking over from a yard out and then late in the first period, Bleck gathered in a toss from Vanderwilt on the NC State 15 and raced in untouched for the 60-yard score.

The teams then exchanged field goals of 47 yards by North Carolina State's Mike Cofer and 30 yards by Miami's Jeff Davis before Bleck and Vanderwilt hooked up again, this time for the 20-yarder down the right sidelines.

Robert "Speedy" Neal added a touchdown from a yard out in the fourth quarter. It was set up by a pass from another freshman quarterback, Vinnie Testaverde, who completed 14-yard passes to Bleck and Neal and a key 8-yarder to tight end Glenn Denison in the drive.

Finally, Testaverde and reserve tight end Andy Baratta got together for a 25-yard scoring pass late in the final period.

Knight to set up two touchdowns Saturday and guide Mississippi State to an easy 27-0 victory over arch-rival Mississippi in the traditional season-ending game.

The Bulldogs, 5-6, exploded for 467 yards total offense while the defense stopped the dangerous Ole Miss passing attack, blanking the Rebels except for a lone field goal and a touchdown resulting from a pass interception in the second period.

Bond, a 210-pound junior, connected on a 52-yard strike to Knight to highlight a 75-yard scoring drive in the second quarter. The touchdown came on a 7-yard burst by fullback

Knight also grabbed a 45-yard pass from Bond in the third period and senior — halfback — Michael Haddix scored five plays later on a 2-yard dive.

Mississippi State's other touchdowns came in the first quarter on a 4-yard run by fullback Lamar Windham and a 26-yard punt-by-reserve halfback Palmer Wilson.

The Rebels' only touchdown came with 3:57 left in the second quarter on a 36-yard pass interception return by linebacker Keith Forcade, who plucked off a screen pass by Bond.

Clemson plans statement

CLEMSON, S.C. (UPI) — Clemson University President Bill Atchley has scheduled a news conference to make a formal statement on allegations of athletic recruiting violations by the 12th-ranked Tiger football team.

University officials issued a statement Saturday before Clemson's 24-6 victory over South Carolina saying a news conference would be held at noon (MST) Tuesday.

The statement said the time and date are tentative because the NCAA is still evaluating Clemson's case.

The defending national champions are scheduled to leave for Tokyo Tuesday for the Nov. 27 Mirage Bowl against Atlantic Coast Conference foe Wake Forest.

Clemson, 8-1-1 on the year, has been under investigation by the NCAA since January 1980, following accusations by two former Tennessee high school football players who said they were offered money and gifts to sign with the school.

Clemson 24, S. Carolina 6

CLEMSON, S.C. (UPI) — Tailback Cliff Austin led a bruising Clemson running attack with 117 yards on 23 carries and two touchdowns Saturday to power the 12th-ranked Tigers to a 24-6 victory over arch-rival South Carolina.

Clemson simply lined up and ran the ball straight at South Carolina, using Austin, who boosted his season yardage to 1,064, tailback Chuck McSwain and fullback Jeff McCall.

The victory, Clemson's eighth straight, gives the Tigers an 8-1 record headed into the Mirage Bowl Nov. 27 in Tokyo against Wake Forest.

A victory there would give Clemson its second straight Atlantic Coast Conference championship.

The defending national champion Tigers are out of bowl consideration this year because of NCAA recruiting violations.

Pitt routs Rutgers, prepares to pick Cotton

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Dan Marino passed for 264 yards and three touchdowns Saturday to lead No. 6 Pittsburgh to a 56-6 victory over Rutgers and an invitation to play in the Cotton Bowl on Jan. 1.

In the bowl, the Panthers, 9-1, will play the Southwest Conference champion. Marino completed touchdown passes of 7 yards to Julius Dawkins and 14 yards to Joe McCall in the first quarter, and 10 yards to Keith Williams in the third. Making his last appearance at Pitt Stadium, Marino completed 22-of-30 passes with no interceptions in nearly three quarters of play. He was sacked once for 19 yards.

Bryan Thomas also scored twice for the Panthers, on plunges of 2 and 1 yards. Third-string running back Mike Boyd also scored from the 1, and Eric Schubert kicked six extra points and a 28-yard field goal.

Four of the Panthers' touchdowns came after turnovers by the Scarlet Knights. S-E. The Pittsburgh defense intercepted Jacque LaPrarie three times and sacked him five times for 49 yards.

Rutgers' only scores came on 51-yard field goals by Alex Falcinelli — one in the second quarter and one with 1:32 left in the game.

Pittsburgh scored on its first three possessions and its first five in the second half. Backup players, led by second-string quarterback Dan Daniels, were responsible for the last two touchdowns.

In the second period, the Panthers had a letdown of sorts, making numerous mistakes and penalties and punting each time they had the ball. The Scarlet Knights gained just 32 yards total offense in the first half and 44 in the second. LaPrarie completed 5-of-13 passes for 42 yards.

W. Virginia 26, Syracuse 0

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (UPI) — For West Virginia Coach Don Nehlen a certain type of revenge is sweet. After five straight losses to Syracuse, the 14th-ranked Mountaineers scored a 26-0 triumph over the Orangemen on Saturday.

The win, one of the Mountaineers' most impressive this season, was the prelude to a Gator Bowl bid that came minutes after the game.

"Last year at this time, I wanted to die," Nehlen said, recalling his team's 27-24 loss to Syracuse in the final regular-season game. "Now, I'm ready for a party."

The coach said there was a vast difference between his team's attitude last year, when it was headed for its title around.

"Last year, we worried about the Peach Bowl. This year we worried about Syracuse," Nehlen said. Jeff Hostetler threw a 68-yard touchdown pass to Willie Drewery, Tom Gray ran for another score and Paul Woodsie kicked four field goals to lead West Virginia.

The victory gave the Mountaineers a 9-2 record, their best regular season finish since 1969, when they went 9-1 in the regular season and were Peach Bowl champions. Syracuse finished the season at 2-9.

Boston Coll. 35, Holy Cross 10

CHESTNUT HILL, Mass. (UPI) — Doug Flutie triggered a 21-point first quarter with an 80-yard touchdown pass on Boston College's opening play Saturday to lead the Tangerine Bowl-bound Eagles to a 35-10 victory over Holy Cross.

Freshman Trey Stradford scored twice on 1-yard runs in the first quarter and Bob Bielecki also scored on a 1-yard plunge as the Eagles scored 28 points in the first 18 minutes on just 16 plays. The Eagles closed the scoring with 1:36 left on a 33-yard pass from John Loughery to Gerard Phelan.

After the game, the Eagles formally accepted a bid to the Tangerine Bowl on Charles Ross, the bowl's executive director. It will be the Eagles' first bowl appearance in 40 years.

Holy Cross, which scored on its first possession in each half, finished the season at 8-3 and still hopes to receive an invitation to the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs.

The Crusaders ran twice as many plays, had three times as many first downs and equalled Boston College on total yards in the first half, but trailed 28-3 because of four turnovers.

Holy Cross tailback Andy Clivio rushed for 85 yards to become the first Crusader to gain more than 1,000 yards in a season. Holy Cross's 8-3 record is its finest since 1962, while BC's mark is its best since 1962.

The Eagles have won 13 of the last 15 meetings between the two rivals.

Harvard 45, Yale 7

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — Quarterback Don Allard scored Harvard's opening touchdown and passed for another Saturday to give the Crimson a 45-7 triumph over Yale in the 99th meeting of the Ivy League rivals.

It was the most points Harvard has ever managed against Yale, and came after a two-year scoring drought against the Elis. Yale leads the series 54-37-4.

Peter Quartararo caught Allard's 12-yard, second quarter touchdown pass that broke a 7-7 tie. Jim Garvey scored on a 1-yard run in the second quarter for Harvard, which finished 7-3 overall and 5-2 in Ivy League play.

Steve Ernst and Mike Granger scored on runs of 1 and 23 yards in the third period. Mike Ernst scored Harvard's last touchdown on a 13-yard run in the fourth quarter.

Jim Villanueva added a 42-yard field goal and five extra points.

Rick Crews scored Yale's only touchdown in the second period on a 9-yard pass from Joe Dutko. Paul Andrie, Yale's top runner, gained only 4 yards in 15 carries, missing a 1,000 yard season by 31 yards.

Yale, 4-6 and 3-4 in the Ivy League, finished with its first losing season since 1971.

Duke 23, North Carolina 17

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Duke, led by the passing of Joe Barnett and running of Mike Grayson and Greg Boone, upset 19th-ranked North Carolina 23-17 Saturday but the Tar Heels salvaged the day by accepting a bid to play in the Sun Bowl on Christmas Day.

Sun Bowl officials extended the invitation to the game in El Paso, Texas, and Coach Dick Crum, although disappointed by the loss, said the team accepted.

"It's not fair to evaluate how we feel in the emotion of the moment," he said. "We are committed to going."

Sun Bowl President John Thompson said the Tar Heels, 6-4 with one game remaining, had suffered many injuries during the season. "I think the time between the regular season and the game will give North Carolina time to patch things up," he said.

In Duke's first win over North Carolina in nine years, Bennett passed for 273 yards, Grayson ran for 133 yards and Boone added 136 yards on the ground.

Duke, which finished the season with its second straight 6-3 record, trailed 17-10 midway through the third quarter. Boone then scored on his 11-yard scamper with 4:13 to go in the third quarter and John Tolish tied the game with his extra point.

On their next possession, the Blue Devils drove 70 yards in 13 plays with Bennett tossing a 4-yard pass to Carl Franks for the 28-10 score. "The drive was helped by an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty against the Tar Heels that took the ball to the North Carolina 12."

Tolish missed the extra point, leaving the score 32-17.

Maryland 45, Virginia 14

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (UPI) — Boomer Esiason tossed three touchdown passes and set three school records Saturday to lead 18th-ranked Maryland to a 45-14 victory over Virginia and into the Aloha Bowl.

The Terrapins, 8-3 overall and 4-1 in the Atlantic Coast Conference, accepted the bid to the first annual Aloha Bowl in Hawaii on Dec. 25, where they are expected to play UCLA.

The Terrapins jumped to a 21-0 lead in the first quarter and scored on their first four possessions.

Willie Joyner, who became only the third Maryland running back to rush for more than 1,000 yards in a season, scored two touchdowns on a 42-yard run on Maryland's third snap and on a 2-yard run in the fourth quarter.

Esiason threw touchdown passes of 23 yards to Mike Lewis, 8 yards to Greg Hill and 6 yards to Dave D'Addio. D'Addio also scored on a 28-yard run to open the third quarter and Jess Atkinson kicked a 28-yard field goal.

The Cavaliers, 2-9, scored two second-half touchdowns on a 9-yard pass from Wayne Schuchts to Kevin Riccio and a 3-yard run by Quenton Walker.

Colgate 22, Boston U. 21

BOSTON (UPI) — Fullback GJ Terenzi scored twice in the third quarter Saturday as Colgate edged Boston University 22-21 and kept alive its hope of an NCAA Division I-AA playoff berth.

Tailback Paul Lewis, who will lead Boston University to a playoff bowl as Yankee Conference representative next Saturday, ran for 164 yards, giving him 1,226 yards on the season.

Colgate, 7-3, must wait until Sunday for a committee to decide if it goes to a playoff game. Boston U. automatically makes the playoffs as the Yankee Conference representative with a 5-5 record.

With Colgate trailing 21-7 going into the second half, Terenzi provided the points while quarterback Steve Calabria directed the Red Raiders on a pair of scoring drives.

A 21-yard pass from Calabria to Joe Kosak set up Terenzi's first 1-yard TD run.

E. Carolina 23, Temple 10

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Freshman Jeff Heath kicked three field goals Saturday and quarterback Kevin Ingram, returning to his hometown, rushed for 105 yards and two touchdowns to lift East Carolina to a 23-10 victory over Temple, spoiling the farewell of Wayne Hardin, the Owls' head coach.

Heath kicked field goals of 30, 21 and 32 yards. The three kicks gave him 16 field goals for the season, topping the school record of 14 set by Pete Conaty in 1976.

Ingram, a junior who attended high school about a mile from the Temple campus and played at Villanova before transferring, scored on runs of 13 yards in the first quarter and 1 yard in the fourth.

Foreigners pace field in cross country finals

American hasn't won NCAA since '75

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — Americans Jim Spivey of Indiana and Jim Hill of Oregon will compete against runners from other parts of the world for the NCAA Cross Country championship Monday at Indiana University.

As it has been for years, Africans attending American universities make up the majority of top individual collegiate cross country talent. The last American to win the national cross country title was Craig Virgin in 1975.

Indiana cross country coach Sam Bell, a nationally respected distance running and track coach, said the team title could go to the defending champion University of Texas-E Paso, Wisconsin, Oregon, UCLA, Providence or Arkansas.

"They're not as strong as in the past," said Bell of the UT-EP contingent. "They're the best of the five strong runners and their fourth and fifth runners are not up to the top three. This may be the year their string will end."

"Wisconsin, the Big Ten champion, is a possibility to do it," he said. "They ran well last year with almost all freshmen."

The 10,000-meter men's championship and the 5,000-meter women's title race will be run on the Hoosier course, which should help American runners.

Bell said there are at least a dozen runners capable of winning the individual title.

Hill, Oregon's top runner, broke Henry Rono's course record at San Jose in the regionals by 39 seconds.

Bell, noting that there were only three Americans in the top 25 in the national meet last year, said age is the determining factor in the foreign domination of the sport.

"Craig (Virgin) is now at the age where a lot of those guys are at as freshmen," said Bell. "It's like making (Indiana University quarterback) Babe Laufenberg compete with (San Francisco 49ers quarterback) Joe Montana. It has the same amount of discrepancy."

"If we took our best Americans and competed against the best Kenyans, Tanzanians and Ethiopians, Americans would fare well."

These turkeys may not be running to dinner, but actually may be a part of dinner come Thursday

Albuquerque
Has a turkey
And he's feathered
And he's fine
And he wobbles and he gobbles
And he's absolutely mine.

He's the best pet
You can get yet —
Better than a dog or cat.
He's my Albuquerque turkey
And I'm awfully proud of that.

And my Albuquerque turkey
Is so happy in his bed —
Cause for our Thanksgiving dinner
We had Egg Foo Yung instead.

Turkey prices rise with dip in production

By LINDA WERFELMAN
United Press International

RESTON, Va. — American turkey growers expect a late fall price increase that could push the retail cost of Thanksgiving turkeys 20 to 30 cents a pound above 1981 levels.

"We expect we will see a seasonal rise in prices," said Lew Walts, executive vice president of the Reston-based National Turkey Federation. "But just how high they will go, I wouldn't want to say."

A price forecast is difficult since prices could still fluctuate before Americans buy their holiday turkeys, Walts said in an interview.

By Thanksgiving, he estimated, the price tag might read 79 to 89 cents a pound.

"I suspect you're going to see turkey prices 20 to 30 cents higher than they were a year ago for Thanksgiving," he said, recalling that 1981 prices dipped as low as 39 cents a pound in some parts of the country.

The likely increase means turkey growers will be "making a few cents a pound" on their birds this year, a welcome relief after the disaster of uncommonly low prices last year, when some growers lost as much as $2 on each turkey they sold, Walts said.

In early October, turkey prices across the country ranged from 5 to 7 cents a pound below last fall's levels.

Walts said substantial pre-holiday increases are virtually certain, since the U.S. turkey flock is about 4 percent smaller than it was one year ago.

"Overall, on supply and demand, you'd have to have higher prices," he said.

Producers' losses last fall prompted a two-month promotional effort by the industry to encourage consumers to buy fresh and frozen whole turkeys and turkey parts last spring, he said.

He said that promotion is continuing in an effort to build up year-round turkey sales beyond their current level.

"We need to produce turkeys 12 months out of the year," Walts said.

Best to ease bird from deep freeze

By JEANNE LESHM
UPI Family Editor

There's a lot to be said for an old-fashioned, cooperative holiday meal. It's not only easier on the host and hostess. It also has certain built-in safety factors.

The host household doesn't have to overcrowd its refrigerator, making it work less efficiently and allow food spoilage to occur.

Leftovers may be divided among the guests, to be taken home and eaten while the quality and nutritional content are high.

Whether you're cooking a holiday meal alone or sharing the chores with others, here are some safety tips:

The safest way to defrost a turkey is in the refrigerator — loosely wrapped and on a low rack in a pan or platter to catch drippings. Excess moisture is an excellent breeding ground for bacteria.

Or, defrost the bird in its original, unpunctured wrappings, in cold water. Change it often, as the thawing bird works like ice, chilling the water. Using warm or hot water may cause spoilage.

Or, loosen the wrapping, set the bird on a shallow rack in a pan or platter and stash it in an insulated picnic hamper or a large brown paper bag with the end closed.

Or wrap it in several layers of newspaper.

Whatever method you use, check often toward the end of thawing time and refrigerate the bird as soon as thawed, or stuff it and bake at once.

In all cases, the giblet package should be removed as soon as possible and its contents refrigerated or cooked to make broth for giblet gravy.

Thawing time varies according to the size of the turkey, the method, how crowded the refrigerator is and how often the door is opened — or room temperature, for the last four methods.

In general, room temperature methods take 20-24 hours for birds under 12 pounds, 24-30 hours for those over 12 pounds. The water method may take 6 to 8 hours for large turkeys. The refrigerator method, two to three days.

All ingredients for stuffing may be chopped or cut several days ahead; raw ingredients should be refrigerated tightly covered. Mixing and any precooking should be done the day of the meal, allowing enough time for the stuffing to cool before you fill the bird. Bacteria grow at temperatures between about 40 and 140 degrees Fahrenheit. So the stuffing and the bird should start out at the same temperature.

After dinner, refrigerate leftovers promptly, especially anything in a creamy, eggy sauce. Remove any stuffing left in the bird and refrigerate it and the leftover turkey, each tightly covered, separately.

Growers can't produce enough cranberries

NEW YORK (UPI) — Cranberries are as long on love as they are on taste, and their international reputation keeps growers hopping to increase bag space and production.

"At a time when so many areas of agriculture are suffering, the cranberry industry is flourishing," says Christine Masclee of Ocean Spray, a Plymouth, Mass.-based cooperative whose 700 grower-members market 80 percent of the crop.

The Massachusetts Department of Agriculture predicts a 1.26 million barrel harvest for 1982, a 7 percent increase over last year, which brought in $46.7 million — or 10 percent of the state's cash receipts. Each barrel contains 100 pounds.

"This was a good growing year. There was adequate rain throughout the summer. But it would have been so much better if we didn't have such a late start," Ms. Masclee said in a telephone interview.

The berries — high in Vitamin A, Vitamin B complex, Vitamin C and iodine if they are grown by the ocean — are expected to cost about the same this year as last, 79 to 99 cents for a 12 ounce bag.

The crop is the only area of agriculture in which Massachusetts is No. 1. It represents 46 percent of the entire cranberry crop forecast for 2.7 million barrels this year, the rest coming from Wisconsin, New Jersey, Washington and Oregon and Canada.

Although the harvest should be enough to keep sauces, muffins, pies and beverages on holiday tables in the United States, Ms. Masclee said foreign importers won't get enough.

Europe, Australia, Japan and Scandinavia want more of the juicy red berries that got their name because early pilgrims thought their pink blossoms resembled the heads of cranes, and called them "crane berries."

Top producer at Gem State Realty to date for the year 1982, Jane George has specialized in residential, commercial and investment real estate in the Magic Valley for the past five years. She states she takes a great deal of pride in reporting a very high degree of effectiveness for her sellers, with over 90% of her listings selling each year. To quote Jane:

Recession over the past two years has produced a market full of homes and investments available at modest prices with lenient, creative terms, and interest rates have just dropped drastically. Please feel free to call my home or office if you would like to discuss buying or selling real estate.

IF YOU'RE THINKING ABOUT BUYING A FORD, MERCURY, OR CHEVY, THINK AGAIN!
 Think Dodge and Chrysler-Plymouth—the ones that are making it in America.

Never before has the automobile industry been so competitive, so confused with rebates, incentives, giveaways and gimmicks designed to stimulate sales.

The reasons are simple. Most cars aren't selling as well now. The economy has been sluggish, interest rates have been prohibitively high and money is still in short supply.

According to the latest data from R. L. Polk and Company (sales figure through calendar year 1982), Ford and Mercury have been hurting. Their sales are the lowest they've been since 1980. The same situation applies to Chevy.

But not Chrysler Corporation cars. Their sales are the highest they've been over the last three years! Which means more people have been turning to Dodge and Chrysler-Plymouth products as the leaders.

For another thing, Dodge and Chrysler-Plymouth dealers have become more competitive, offering customers a substantial value for the money—the kind of quality Americans demand.

So Dodge and Chrysler-Plymouth dealers are determined to maintain the momentum already established by meeting the competition head-on, whether Ford, Mercury, Chevrolet or any other make—import or domestic.

For you, the public, this means a great deal on Chrysler-Plymouth, the cars that offer what the American driving public deserves! The cars that are quality engineered to be the best, with excellent styling, fuel economy, comfort and room. The cars that offer 5-year, 50,000-mile protection that's the best in the business.

So if you're thinking about buying a new car, think long and hard about Dodge and Chrysler-Plymouth. Talk to any of our owners. Take a test drive. Compare Dodge and Chrysler-Plymouth with any other car on the market, value for value. And listen to the deal your Dodge and Chrysler-Plymouth dealer can make.

Then you'll see why Dodge and Chrysler-Plymouth sales are up. You'll see why Dodge and Chrysler-Plymouth dealers are on the move. You'll learn that they mean business.

And you'll discover why Dodge and Chrysler-Plymouth dealers are the ones that have been making it in America.

THANKSGIVING DINNER & LEFTOVERS YOU'LL LOVE

The Thanksgiving table has a new look this year. Turkeys are more stylish, garnished with imagination and wit. In the northeast, turkeys are apt to show up at the table dressed in a pilgrim vest. This hand-painted pastry vest is easy to make and guaranteed to delight your holiday guests.

No matter where you live you can "dress" your turkey the California way with fruits such as grapes, pineapples and cherries. Fresh cranberries from the northwest, California oranges, lemons and cherries make a compatible Cranberry Cherry Relish.

The relish in the foreground, Cranberry Fruit Relish, has the flavors of the northeast with apples and whole berry cranberry sauce accented with curry powder.

PILGRIM-VESTED PARTY TURKEY

- | | |
|------------------------------|-------------------------------|
| 1 turkey, 12-15 pounds | Egg Yolk paint: |
| Stuffing mix or own stuffing | 2 egg yolks |
| recipe | 2 teaspoons water |
| 1 package (11 ounces) pie | Green and Black food coloring |
| crust mix | coloring package) |

Stuff and roast turkey as usual, removing it from oven one hour before it is fully roasted. Let cool. From brown paper, cut out a vest pattern 12" wide. Prepare pie crust mix according to package directions. Roll out dough on a floured surface to 1/4 inch thickness into an oblong large enough to cover paper pattern. Place pattern on top of crust and trace around with the tip of a sharp knife. Place pastry over turkey and press firmly in place. Return vested turkey to roast another hour. Remove from oven. Beat egg yolks with water. Color 2/3 of the mixture green and 1/3 black. Brush the green paint over the entire vest. With another brush paint the collar, buttons and belt in black.

CRANBERRY-FRUIT-RELISH

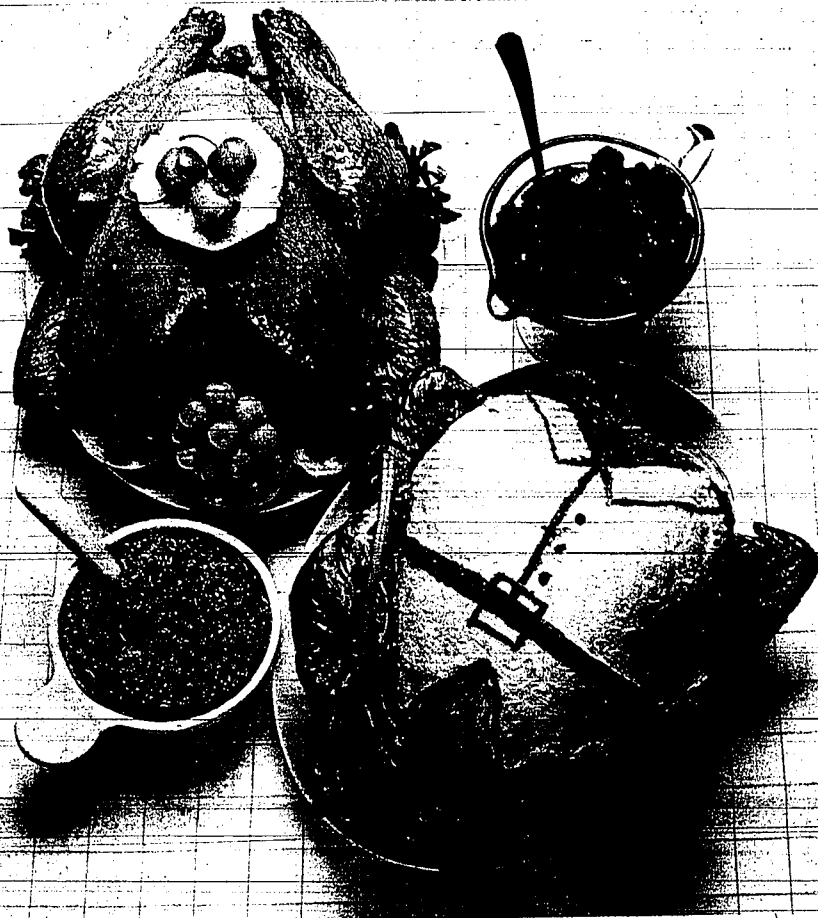

- | | |
|-----------------------|------------------------------|
| 2 red sweet apples, | 1 teaspoon curry powder |
| cored but not peeled | 1 can (16 ounce) Ocean Spray |
| 1/2 lemon, seeded | whole berry cranberry sauce |
| 1 small onion, minced | |

Grind apples and lemon coarsely. Add remaining ingredients. Stir to blend well. Chill. If desired, serve relish in hollowed out lemon halves. Makes 3 cups.

CRANBERRY CHERRY RELISH

- | | |
|---------------------------------|--------------------------------|
| 1-1/2 cups fresh or frozen | 1 cup fresh or canned cherries |
| cranberries | 1/2 cup vinegar |
| 1 orange | 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon |
| 1 lemon | 1/2 teaspoon ground cloves |
| 2 cups dark brown sugar, packed | 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg |
| 1-1/2 cups raisins | 1/2 cinnamon stick |

Rinse cranberries. Quarter orange and lemon; remove seeds. Cut into small pieces. In a large saucepan combine and mix thoroughly all ingredients. Bring to a boil; reduce heat, cook about 15 minutes. Remove cinnamon stick. Cool. Keeps for 2-3 weeks in refrigerator. Or it can be put in plastic containers and frozen. Makes 6 cups.

Just a little bit of leftover turkey can make tasty informal suppers that are a nice change-of-pace after the big holiday dinner. Shredded cooked turkey and leftover cranberry orange sauce are combined to make Green Chile Turkey Tacos that with other ingredients will fill eight taco shells. The filling is topped with shredded lettuce and Cranberry Salsa — a variation on traditional salsa that just substitutes cranberry orange sauce for the usual tomatoes.

Everybody loves leftover turkey for sandwiches. Cranberry Turkey Sandwich Loaf is something special, a sandwich spectacular made with turkey, mayonnaise, bottled salad dressing, jellied cranberry sauce and alfalfa sprouts.

CRANBERRY TURKEY SANDWICH LOAF

- | | |
|--------------------------------|--|
| 1 unsliced loaf of firm, round | 1 large ripe avocado |
| bread (8 inches in diameter) | 1/4 cup bottled Italian salad dressing |
| 2 cups diced-cooked turkey | 1 can (8 ounces) Ocean Spray Jellied |
| 1/3 cup mayonnaise | Cranberry Sauce, chilled and |
| 1 tablespoon bottled-Italian | sliced |
| salad dressing | 2 cups alfalfa sprouts |
| 1/4 teaspoon salt | |

With a serrated knife, cut off top 1/3 of bread and reserve. With tip of knife, cut bread 1/2 inch around edge being careful not to cut into the bottom. Carefully pull out soft center of bread to leave a shell. Also remove bread center from top of bread, leaving a 1/4-inch-thick top. (Use soft bread to make crumbs.) In bowl, combine turkey, mayonnaise, 1 tablespoon salad dressing and salt. Place turkey in bottom of bread shell. Cut avocado in half, pit and peel. Cut avocado into 1/2-inch-thick slices; toss in bowl with 1/4 cup salad dressing. Arrange a layer of avocado over turkey. Add a layer of cranberry slices then sprouts. Replace top of bread. With serrated knife, cut loaf into wedges to serve. Makes about 8 servings.

GREEN CHILE TURKEY TACOS

- | | |
|--|-----------------------------------|
| Cranberry Salsa: | 1 tablespoon oil |
| 1 medium onion, chopped | 1 teaspoon cornstarch |
| 1 small clove garlic, minced | 1/2 cup turkey or chicken broth |
| 1 tablespoon cooking oil | 1-1/2 cups shredded cooked turkey |
| 1 cup Ocean Spray Cranberry | 1 tablespoon canned, diced, mild |
| Orange Sauce | green chiles |
| 1/4 cup canned, diced, mild green chiles | Salt to taste |
| 2 tablespoons red wine vinegar | |
| 1/2 teaspoon salt | To Assemble Tacos: |
| Turkey Filling: | 8 packaged taco shells |
| 1 small onion, chopped | Shredded iceberg lettuce |

Prepare Salsa: In small saucepan, cook onion and garlic in hot oil until tender. Stir in cranberry orange sauce, chiles, vinegar and salt. Cover. Refrigerate until cold.

Prepare Filling: In medium saucepan, cook onion in oil until tender. Stir in cornstarch then broth. Heat to boiling. Stir in turkey and chile. Add salt to taste; keep filling warm.

To Assemble: Place taco shells on a baking sheet and heat in a 250°F oven for 10 minutes. Spoon 2 to 3 tablespoons turkey mixture into each heated shell. Top with some shredded lettuce and serve with salsa. Makes 4 servings.

Answers given to most often asked shoppers' questions

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

Here are seven of the most frequently asked questions concerning manufacturers' refund offers, and their answers:

Question: Is it really worth the effort saving all those box tops and labels in order to send for refunds?

Answer: More than half the shoppers in America are now refunding and the facts speak for themselves. This year there will be more than 9,000 refund offers on just about every advertised brand in the supermarket. The average value of a refund is now more than $1.30. Smart shoppers who save their box tops and labels are able to send for as many as 10 to 20 refunds a week. That adds up to a lot of savings!

Question: How many times can I send for a refund offer?

Answer: If the instructions printed on the refund form don't limit the offer to "one refund per name or family," then you can send for the refund as many times as you wish.

Question: Since many offers are limited to "one refund per name," how can I tell when a manufacturer considers similar offers to be one and the same?

Answer: It is often hard to tell whether two similar offers are actually the same for purposes of the "one per family" restriction. Offers that are in all ways similar except for the post office box numbers are probably the same offers. Offers that are in all ways similar except for expiration dates within a few months of each other are probably the same offers. Offers that require different proofs-of-purchase are probably different offers.

Question: Can I send for a refund offer without a refund form?

Answer: A small percentage of the offers don't require forms, but most do. Trying to send for these offers without the required form is a waste of time and postage. Back will come your proofs along with a rejection letter.

Question: If a refund offer asks for the net weight statement, from the 28-ounce size package, can I send in two net weights from the 14-ounce size?

Answer: One of the important rules of refunding is following the directions to the letter. If the offer asks for proofs from a certain size package, the company probably has a good reason for wanting you to purchase that size package. If you try to use any other proofs-of-purchase other than those specified in the offer, your refund request will probably be rejected.

Question: If a refund offer has no expiration date, how long will it be good for?

Answer: The offer will be good until the manufacturer decides to end it and closes the post office box. If you find a "no expiration date" refund form and it doesn't appear to be of recent vintage, you run the risk that the offer has already ended.

Question: How long does it take to receive a refund, and how long should I wait before I complain about a refund that hasn't been received?

Answer: It usually takes four to eight weeks to receive a refund.

Because of the increasing interest in refunding, some offers have taken as long as 10 to 12 weeks to arrive. If you haven't received your refund after waiting 12 weeks, then it's time to write directly to the manufacturer's customer relations department and let them know of the problem. Use the address found on the package.

By far the most frequently asked question is: "Where can I find more refund forms?"

You'll find the answer in my next column.

Potential cancer genes reported

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Scientists from Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center tracking after potential cancer genes have found two on a chromosome that's abnormally rearranged in several cancers.

It's the latest report in a burgeoning area of genetic research by scientists seeking the causes of cancer.

So far, about 15 to 20 potential cancer-causing genes have been discovered in various creatures, from fruit flies to man. They were first seen in the mid-1970s in viruses.

There may be more than 100,000 genes in a single cell, each directing the manufacture of one or another body substance. Genes are arranged along chromosomes, which are minute thread-like structures.

Even though each human cell contains the full complement of 46 chromosomes, all the genetic instructions for a complete human being, only a small percentage of genes are turned on in any one cell at any point in its life cycle.

Cancer genes seem to be normal genes. Though scientists do not know precisely what these genes are, responsibility for them is clear. In general, potential cancer genes play a role in the growth and proliferation of cells.

The fact that potential cancer genes exist in so many forms of life suggests that their primary functions are so important that they have remained a part of the gene pool virtually throughout evolution, scientists say.

The Sloan-Kettering team led by Dr. William S. Hayward dubbed the suspect cancer genes C-myc and C-mos. Normally, they are located at the precise spots where cancer-related breaks occur in a chromosome known to scientists as number 8.

A Sloan-Kettering report said these breaks in chromosome number 8 have long been associated with a type of blood cancer called acute non-lymphocytic leukemia; Burkitt's lymphoma, which is a lymph cancer generally seen in Africa; and other types of lymph tissue malignancies and a hereditary predisposition that leads to kidney cancer.

Scientists suspect that potential cancer genes — known as oncogenes — may go haywire when they are altered in some way by radiation or a cancer-causing chemical or virus.

Isn't good for everybody. Your doctor may want you to have something else. He may be concerned that you had some gastrointestinal symptoms, or for some other reason.

Know what's in your medicine chest and keep it fresh. Many older people tend to hold on to leftover pills, no matter how dated. That, too, can be dangerous because some can become toxic and most will lose their effectiveness. Harrington says the primary physician should be consulted about this when in doubt.

Here are some more of Harrington's comments:

• ON GETTING ALONG WITH ELDERLY PARENTS: Let your parents live their own lives as long as they're capable of making their own decisions. That's a lot longer than people give them credit for. Any advice that comes from a child to a parent is never well accepted because, no matter how old the child may be, a child is still a child. Don't be bossing parents around unless they're obviously incompetent. It causes a lot of problems. There are lots of ways to suggest things gently. We find some adults dole on elderly folks so much, and these elderly come to enjoy the attention so much that they actually perform less well when those children or relatives are present.

• ON LOVE AND AFFECTION: Older people crave physical contact. That is one thing most lacking in their lives, particularly when a loved one has died. We encourage staff (at the Benedictine Health Center and other nursing homes) to give them a hug or a kiss, to make some physical contact.

Women seem to adjust to the loss of mates better than most men. Perhaps that is because women go through much of their life anticipating it. Statistically, women live about 10 years longer than men.

As for sexual activity, most people are able to continue much longer than most people think. They may well be active sexually into their 70s and even 80s, and it won't hurt them unless they fall out of bed. Yet with age, everything takes a little longer. The emphasis shifts to quality, not quantity.

• ON KEEPING ACTIVE AND STIMULATED: It is very important to keep elderly people alert and stimulated. They should know what day it is and what's happening. They should have things to think about and things to do. They should get involved in some of those groups and senior citizens' activities for the social aspects as well as for the other types of support they can derive.

Nursing home care is intended only for those who really need it. The nursing home situation is extremely tough on bright, sharp persons who have a disabling condition that simply makes it impossible for them to be cared for in their own home.

Amaryllis favorite for winter

By ART KOZELKA
Chicago Tribune

Flowers of amaryllis (Hippeastrum) and paperwhite (Polyanthus) narcissus, eager to bloom within weeks of planting, are a delight to behold on gray winter days and so easy to grow that even beginners can be sure of rewarding results.

As with other bulbous flowers, these two indoor wintertime favorites are practically foolproof, but they have an added virtue — their flowers emerge much sooner than others — usually within 5 to 8 weeks after they have been planted.

Blooms of the amaryllis are appropriately described as spectacular. Often 5 to 8 inches in diameter, there may be four or more at a time atop a single, sturdy, 2-foot stalk. Colors range from deep red, a Christmas favorite, to pure white, which is popular for Easter. Many hybrids have striped or bicolor blossoms.

The paperwhites have delicately scented, dainty, starlike blossoms borne in clusters at the tips of tall stems.

As you plantings of the amaryllis and the paperwhites right and you will enjoy the distinctly contrasting blooms at the same time. If you start the bulbs now, and others at intervals during the next few weeks, you can enjoy a succession of cheery flowers — some perhaps for the Christmas holidays — as well as through many winter weeks.

Bulbs of both flowers can be purchased at garden centers or from mail order firms. If you've never planted them before, some suggestions may be helpful.

For amaryllis, which are rather large bulbs, use a 6- or 7-inch pot for each bulb. Then you can leave the bulbs in the pot for two or three bloom cycles. The potting mixture should be one that affords good drainage, such as one composed of equal parts leafmold or sphagnum peat moss, garden or peat moss and sharp sand. Place each bulb in the mixture so that the top third is left uncovered.

If your bulbs come with substantial roots, do not cut or shorten them. Work the growing mixture carefully around the roots then add more until the right level is reached (one third of bulb exposed). Water thoroughly and place the pot in a warm, well-ventilated, dark place until first signs of growth are noted. Then shift it to a sunny location, water sparingly until growth is strong, after which water often enough to keep soil evenly moist.

Soon the flower stalks or scapes and buds will emerge, making almost measurable growth each day until the flowers open. Leaves seldom appear until after the flowers have faded. Exceptionally vigorous bulbs may reward you with two, three or even four flowering scapes in sequence. If this occurs, cut each spent scape with a razor just above where it merged from the bulb so it will not interfere with the remaining scapes still in bloom or about to bloom.

The paperwhites grow so easily that you don't even need soil for them. Bulb fiber, vermiculite, perlite or colored pebbles make clean, ideal growing mediums and are readily available at garden centers if you don't have them on hand.

To plant the bulbs, pour the medium you select into a shallow container until it is about half full, then work the bulbs down into it with a gentle, twisting motion until they stand by themselves. Add more of the growing medium until only the top third of each bulb is exposed. If you use vermiculite, it will be easier to manage if moistened first.

When the bulbs are snugly imbedded, add water until it rises to the base of the bulbs. Then put the containers in a cool (55 to 60 degrees), dark place to stimulate root growth. In about two weeks move the containers to a warm, sunny room, keep the water level at the base of the bulbs, and before you know it, the scented flower clusters will emerge.

Classes start

RUPERT — The Minidoka County Community Education is offering four holiday crafts classes, beginning Nov. 29.

Holiday Candy Made in the Microwave, instructed by Joyce Schroeder, will be held Dec. 2 and 9. Cost is $8.

These recipes for traditional Thanksgiving dishes don't add too many calories

Recipes trim the calories

NEW YORK — In 1621, the Pilgrims celebrated the first Thanksgiving in Towne Brook, Mass. Proclaimed by the governor to celebrate the harvest, Thanksgiving turned into a three-day event to which the Pilgrims invited their Indian friends.

Because of its success, it became the tradition to have a "Thanksgiving day" after each harvest. The exact day varied in each of the New England colonies and was decided by the individual governor. During the Revolutionary War, a national Thanksgiving Day was proposed by Congress, but it wasn't until 1864 that President Lincoln declared that this great American tradition would be celebrated every year on the last Thursday in November.

It's been said that the first Thanksgiving repast consisted of turkey, venison duck, goose, clams, fish, corn breads and vegetables, with wild fruit for dessert. But turkey, with all the trimmings, has emerged as the main structure of the modern holiday table. Millions of pounds of turkey are gobbled up each Thanksgiving Day by over-thankful Americans.

Approximately 40 million Americans annually are "on a diet" and 79 million should be! Also, countless turkey tasters this year should be carefully watching cholesterol counts. So what if you want to enjoy your holiday feast, but don't want all those calories and cholesterol? You could, of course, push yourself away from the table. But on a holiday like this, when festivities center around food and family, that's not too easy.

Following are recipes which will help you prepare a feast free of high calories and cholesterol. These delicious, nutritious recipes keep the tradition of Thanksgiving Day without adding the traditional calories.

ROAST TURKEY

- 1 turkey, about 12 lbs., use fresh or frozen turkey, not pre-basted type
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon pepper
- 2 packets butter buds
- 1 cup hot tapwater or dry white wine stuffing, see below.

Remove giblets from turkey and wipe inside and out with paper towels. Rub inside and out with salt and pepper. Dissolve butter buds in water or wine. Sprinkle turkey cavity with about 3 tablespoons of mixture. Fill cavity with stuffing, sew or skewer cavities closed; truss well. Insert thermometer in thickest part of thigh without touching bone. Place on rack in roasting pan at 325° F about 4 hours or 20 minutes a pound. Baste occasionally with pan drippings and remaining butter buds. Turkey is done when thermometer registers 180 to 185° F. Remove from oven, cover loosely with foil, and allow to cool about 20 minutes before carving. (Makes 12 servings.)

LOW-CALORIE VEGETABLE STUFFING

- 1 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
- 3 cups celery, sliced
- 2 cups apples, peeled, cored and chopped
- 1/2 pound cabbage, finely shredded
- 1 cup onion, chopped
- 1/2 cup fresh bread crumbs
- 2 packets butter buds
- 1 teaspoon sage
- 1 freshly ground pepper to taste
- 2 egg whites, beaten

In large bowl, combine mushrooms, celery, apples, cabbage and onion. In separate bowl, combine bread crumbs, butter buds, sage and pepper; toss to mix well. Stir into vegetables. Fold in beaten egg whites. Lightly stuff neck and body cavities of turkey. Do not overpack as stuffing will swell. Bake extra stuffing in small casserole about 30 minutes, along with turkey. (Makes about 10 servings.)

YUM-YUM ORANGE YAMS

- 3 1/2 pounds sweet potatoes, peeled and cooked
- 2 cups orange juice
- 1 packet butter buds
- 2 tablespoons firmly packed light brown sugar
- 1/4 cup orange peel, grated
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- dash of pepper

Preheat oven to 350° F. Cut potatoes into 2" slices and arrange in baking dish. In separate bowl, combine remaining ingredients and spoon over potatoes. Bake, uncovered, about 20 to 30 minutes, basting once or twice with liquid. (Makes 8 servings.)

Buy enough turkey for leftovers

By EDIE LOW
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

More conscientious cooks break the basic rule of meat buying at Thanksgiving and Christmas than at any other time of year.

The rule is that a serving of meat should be four ounces a person, not counting the bone weight. But if you bought only that amount, you might have a lot of unhappy family members on your hands.

There would be no turkey sandwiches and no leftovers for meals the rest of the week.

To eliminate the problem, plan on at least a pound of turkey (including bones), maybe 1 1/2 pounds a person, so those leftovers will be available.

Cooking a turkey isn't hard; it just takes waiting for it to cook.

When buying, remember a hen turkey will have more meat for the same weight than a tom, or male turkey, because the tom has larger bones. It used to be hens also were more tender, but with today's technology in growing and processing, the genders are even in tenderness.

When you buy your turkey, it will probably be frozen, through fresh turkeys are available. These are usually ordered ahead since they aren't dressed until the day of delivery, and must be used within three days.

Place the frozen bird in your freezer until three days before you plan to cook it. Then move it to the refrigerator.

lor. The average turkey, weighing between 12 and 16 pounds, takes that long to thaw in the refrigerator. Do not thaw it on the counter. The turkey could end up being a breeding ground for harmful bacteria.

If there is no room in the refrigerator, a safe alternative is to thaw the turkey submerged in its wrappings in water. Thawing—taken about 30 minutes per pound of turkey. Changing the water frequently will hasten the thawing.

Stuffing is controversial. There are people who wouldn't serve a turkey without stuffing in its cavity.

Turkey leftovers such as Old Fashioned Turkey Pie are tasty and nutritious, too

Leftovers can be refreshing

—ROCHESTER, N.Y.— Leftovers don't have to taste like leftovers! Try Turkey Pie or Turkey Strata — two "leftover" main dishes that are refreshing additions to your autumn menus.

This Old-Fashioned Turkey Pie lets you take advantage of new-fashioned products. Use canned or frozen vegetables, gravy and biscuit mixes and you'll have dinner on the table in half an hour. Simply combine leftover turkey and vegetables with a delicately seasoned gravy that's made in minutes. An envelope of gravy mix assures a smooth, "lump-free" sauce without the tedious task of mixing and measuring.

Cover with a mouth-watering, flaky pie crust. It's a snap to make because the crust is actually a thinly rolled biscuit dough. After only 15 minutes in the oven, the pie is ready to serve! Complete the meal with a tossed salad, cranberry sauce, bread and butter and icy cold milk and canned peaches or pears.

If you have bread left over from your Thanksgiving stuffing recipe, serve Turkey Strata. This layered dish of dried bread cubes, a turkey salad mixture and shredded cheese is covered with a hearty lace-flavored custard. If the day's a busy one, make the strata in the morning. It will keep up to 10 hours in the refrigerator before serving. Serve with green beans, fruit salad, your favorite beverage and sherbert or ice cream.

OLD-FASHIONED TURKEY PIE

- 1 envelope, 1/2 oz. size gravy mix for turkey
- 3/4 cup water
- 1/4 cup milk
- 1 tablespoon sherry, if desired
- 1 teaspoon instant minced onions
- 1/2 teaspoon poultry seasoning
- 2 cups diced cooked turkey
- 1 can, 16 oz., sliced carrots, drained

- 1 can, 4 oz., sliced mushrooms, drained
- 1 cup peas
- 1 cup biscuit mix
- 1/2 cup milk

Combine gravy mix, water, milk, sherry, onion, and poultry seasoning in medium-size saucepan. Heat to boiling, stirring frequently. Add turkey, carrots, mushrooms and peas; heat while preparing crust, stirring occasionally. Combine biscuit mix and milk; knead on floured surface 5 to 10 times. Spoon turkey mixture into 10-inch pie pan or 1 1/2-quart shallow casserole. Roll crust to fit top of casserole; cut slits to let steam escape. Arrange over filling. Bake at 450° for 15 minutes, until golden brown. (Makes 6 servings.)

TURKEY STRATA

- 4 cups bread cubes, dried overnight at room temperature
 - 2 cups diced cooked turkey
 - 1 cup chopped celery
 - 1/2 cup chopped green pepper
 - 1/2 cup mayonnaise
 - 1 1/2 cups shredded Cheddar cheese
 - 3 eggs, slightly beaten
 - 2 cups milk
 - 1 envelope, 1/4 oz. size, taco seasoning mix
 - 1 paprika
- Spread 2 cups bread cubes in buttered shallow 2-quart casserole. Toss together turkey, celery, pepper and mayonnaise; spread over bread cubes. Sprinkle with half the cheese and remaining bread cubes. Beat together eggs, milk and taco seasoning mix; pour over strata. Sprinkle with remaining cheese. Cover and refrigerate at least 2 hours or up to 9 hours. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake at 350° F for 30 to 60 minutes, until set. (Makes 6 servings.)

Turkey lore

Turkeys were known to the Greeks who called them Meleagris because Meleager brought them to Greece to the year of the world 3669. Pliny describes a turkey in an unmistakable fashion. Sophocles, in one of his lost tragedies, introduced a chorus of turkeys to mourn the death of Meleager.

Anyone, even a famous gourmet, might wonder how to cook a turkey. When Brillat-Savarin, the famous 18th century gourmet, killed a turkey in Hartford, Conn., he said, "During the whole of our journey back from the hunt, I was reflecting on the manner in which I would cook my turkey... because I wanted to acquire great merit by the display of my rich prize." Brillat-Savarin decided to roast his turkey and said, "This turkey was delightful to look at, titillating to smell and delicious to taste."

Consumers wanting information about cooking their holiday turkey can call the Butterball Turkey Talk Line. The toll-free number, 1-800-323-4848 is staffed by professional home economists and may be called from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. through Dec. 24.

Candy sales dip, except Whitman

By EWART ROUSE
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

PHILADELPHIA — The sudden aversion in the United States to fattening foods has taken its toll on the confectionery industry.

In the last five years, the estimated annual per capita consumption of confectionery products has fallen from 17 to 15 pounds.

A combination of that decline and higher costs of ingredients and labor has resulted in the collapse of several regional candy-makers. Other marginal companies have managed to survive only through acquisition by larger companies.

Whitman Chocolates, however, is no "yardstick" by which the industry should be measured.

The company, with its headquarters in Philadelphia, has been bucking the general trend by turning in increased sales in each of the last five years. Just as it did in each of its previous 135 years, said Whitman president James W. Nixon.

"Our sales since 1978 are up about 30 percent," Nixon said. (Whitman is a subsidiary of Pet Inc., a St. Louis, Mo., company that does not normally provide separate breakdowns of Whitman's sales and earnings.)

the strength of the Whitman Sampler, which industry analysts say is the biggest-selling box of assorted chocolates in the United States.

They also followed implementation of new, aggressive marketing and advertising strategies, and the upgrading of the quality of its more than 200 chocolate and chocolate-coated products.

"Five years ago," Nixon said, "we put in all-new chocolate processing equipment at a cost of close to a million dollars, and at a time when companies were going out of business, so that basically that product today... is a better product than it was five or seven years ago."

Old inn continues tradition

By PAULA CAMP
Chicago Tribune

VALPARAISO, Ind. — Off U.S. Highway 30, just east of Valparaiso, in the small but tidy kitchen his grandmother built, Russell Adams stands among bubbling stock pots and hot roasting ovens contemplating the days ahead.

He began making plans weeks ago. Now he runs through a mental list of orders to be placed, schedules to be made, personnel assignments, nodding rhythmically as if checking off each completed task. He stops to jot down a reminder, then goes on. It is the last time he'll have a quiet moment alone for days.

On Monday the kitchen goes into high gear, turning 216 pounds of cranberries into 108 quarts of sauce, 24 gallons of pumpkin into 72 pies and 80 gallons of stock into soup and gravy.

By Wednesday the pace is frenzied. Thirty 28- to 30-pound turkeys are roasted by the end of the day. Fourteen more go into the ovens at midnight, another 14 go in at 4 a.m.

Finally at 11 a.m. on Thanksgiving Day, people begin to descend upon the Strongbow Inn. At first they come slowly, in ones and twos, threes and fours. Then suddenly it's crowded. Entire families congregate. The first wave of diners is followed by another, and another, and they will be followed by still more.

By the end of the day more than 1,100 people have eaten their Thanksgiving dinners at the Strongbow Inn. They consume about 2,000 pounds of turkey, with all the trimmings, and nearly 1,500 pieces of pie. Russ Adams along with his mother and father, two sisters and the more than 60 cooks, busboys, waiters and waitresses, dishwashers, bartenders and hostesses who make and serve this feast for so many, give thanks themselves that the day is over.

This Thanksgiving tradition got its start more than 40 years ago, when Bess Thurn, Adams' grandmother, announced to her university professor husband that she was going to start a turkey farm.

"Mother was from Southern society and unused to living on a professor's salary," recalls Charlotte ("Chuggie") Adams, Bess' daughter, who supervises all nonkitchen activities at the restaurant. "She was also a strong-willed woman. So we moved to the farm in 1937."

Of course, as a woman from Mississippi society, Bess didn't know anything about farming, and her husband, Dr. Walter Thurn, consented to move to the farm only if he had nothing to do with turkey tending.

Mrs. Aslett loves Hells canyon

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

JEROME — Leona Aslett left her heart, not in San Francisco, but in Hells Canyon.

The longtime Jerome resident moved to the scenic area where the Snake River carves out a rugged border between Idaho and Oregon in the fall of 1969 because of health reasons. Her doctor had ordered her to move to a lower climate.

She speaks fondly of the beauty of the area where she owned and managed a guide service of jet river-boats on the remaining stretch of white water below the dam. She handled reservations and all business details and had a pilot to operate the river boats.

At first she lived right at the launching site in a mobile home, but later moved to Halfway, Ore., where it was easier for people to reach her for reservations.

Usually she left the river running to her pilot, but "when important people came to make the trip" she'd go along.

She's made the trip three times, once when guests included sports writers from New York and Florida. Another time she made the run with a television crew from Seattle who wanted to photograph someone catching sturgeon.

Fishing for steelhead, salmon and sturgeon, is one of the major attractions of the area which, because of its inaccessibility, is still largely bypassed by civilization.

"One of their group had tried to hook a (fish) for several hours without any luck," she said, "so I took the rod and in 10 minutes had a sturgeon on," adding modestly that at one time she held the record for catching both the largest steelhead and salmon in Hells Canyon.

Being a good hostess, Mrs. Aslett offered her rod to one of the TV crew, expecting him to land it. But crew members insisted she land it herself, which she did after playing the fish for about two-and-a-half hours.

"You have to know something about you're doing," she said, explaining sturgeons feed on the bottom and have long suction cups for mouths.

So the enthusiastic fishermen understood that she was the "star" of the TV news feature, presumably aired on a Seattle station.

It is no wonder that the Jerome woman "fell in love" with the Hells canyon country since she grew up in another scenic section of the West — the Teton mountains of Wyoming. There she developed a love not only of horses, but hunting and fishing.

She was born on a farm "in a canyon at the foot of a Teton peak"

Aug. 17, probably in 1908.

"The uncertainty of her birth year stems from the lack of any recorded birth certificate and herein lies an unusual version of the similar situation that many retired people, born before birth records were routine, have faced when the time came to file for Social Security."

"My mother always said I was born in 1908," Mrs. Aslett explained. But, told by Social Security aides she needed more tangible proof than "word of mouth," she wrote to the LDS church in Driggs.

Their records put her birth in 1909. Then, as if to compound the situation, a check with the state Bureau of Vital Statistics, based on census records, indicated she arrived in 1910.

She was getting younger rapidly and could have easily eliminated two years, something many women would have eagerly done.

"They (Social Security aides) told me I could take my pick of which year I wanted to use," she laughed, "but I decided to stay with my mother's version since I am sure she was there."

So by her mother's reckoning, Mrs. Aslett was over 60 years old when she moved to Hells Canyon. After seven years of enjoying this type of outdoor life and operating a successful business, she had to give it up and reluctantly leave the canyon after suffering a heart attack, despite the lower climate.

Following this, she lived in Hansen for several years before moving to a mobile home southeast of Jerome on Highway 93 about three years ago.

Mrs. Aslett is no stranger to the Jerome area, having moved here in 1937 with her late husband, Leon Aslett, whom she married when she was 15 years old.

They first ranched near Cookville, Wyo., and Lava Hot Springs before coming to Magic Valley. They farmed in several locations in the Jerome area and then her husband went into the construction business with their son, Marvin, who now operates the Circle A firm. The elder Aslett died two years ago.

In addition to her son, who lives nearby across the highway, Mrs. Aslett has one daughter, Lorraine Kerruish of Pocatello. They are her only remaining children from five births.

She lost three little girls, each shortly after birth, because of her negative RH blood type. One infant nived three days, one about seven hours and the last one died a few minutes after birth.

With canyon catch

"That was before doctors even knew about blood types or what to do about them," she said. Her firstborn surviving children, both have positive blood types.

Although her early marriage cut short her formal education, Mrs. Aslett has taught herself both typing and bookkeeping and held a variety of jobs over the years which demanded office skills.

"I just got a typewriter and adding machine and learned it," she said. When someone was needed to keep the books for the construction firm, she assumed the job.

Earlier she worked in the district public health office in Jerome under the late Gene Overfield and also in the Jerome sheriff's office.

She also worked for seven years as a dental assistant in Jerome, obtaining her training through a correspondence course. During this time she also helped organize the Dental Assistants Association.

But she's also found time to donate considerable time and effort to community activities. She led the Polio Foundation in Jerome county for 17 years. Her interest stemmed from the death of a cousin from polio in Ogden during her childhood.

"I said then, if ever I have a chance I'll help blot out polio," Mrs. Aslett recalled. Under her leadership all county school children were inoculated for the disease before the oral vaccine was available.

She belongs in the Daughters of Utah Pioneers and the VFW Auxiliary and enjoys painting and traveling.

Since her heart attack, she's had to give up hunting and can't fish as much, but she is able to enjoy trips and recently returned from a Mediterranean cruise.

If you're 50, you'll be around some years, so take stock around 50, chances are good you'll be around for quite a few more years. So start being kinder to yourself.

By WALTER ELDOT
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

If your family has grown and you're thinking of moving, look at homes that don't force you to be a mountain climber. As you get older, you'll value more conveniences and fewer stairs.

If you haven't seen a doctor in years because you haven't been sick, get a checkup anyway. Everyone should have a primary care physician. He or she will know your history when problems arise or if you have questions or need a referral to a specialist.

If you're overweight and have to let yourself go, start getting into better shape. There's no guarantee this will lengthen your life, but it will make the years more pleasant.

If work has been your main obsession, take a good look at yourself and give vent to your other interests. Life will become a drag without friends and satisfying activities. You've got to nurture them.

If you don't want your old folks to live with you, help them retain their independence as long as they can. That means don't do them too much.

DULUTH, Minn. — Such down-to-earth advice comes from Dr. Vernon Harrington, medical director of the Benedictine Health Center on the College of St. Scholastica campus and a longtime physician in Duluth.

"We have to recognize that we're going to get older, so that we don't expect the impossible of ourselves. Every part of the body ages. We should accept that as a normal part of life. But there are some things we can do to minimize the adverse effects," Harrington says.

For instance, by maintaining normal weight, a person is less apt to develop certain health problems in later years, especially difficulty in walking. "And you're not so likely to break something if you trip or fall," Harrington points out. Regular exercise helps sustain good muscle tone, and "using bones seems to help keep them stronger."

Or, people can do much to make their homes more livable for the time when advancing years will lessen their agility. Stairs are a big factor. Sometimes a bit of remodeling or renovating helps, such as moving a bedroom downstairs or adding an extra washroom. "Try to set yourself up, so you can stay in your home as long as possible, even if someone becomes disabled," Harrington advises. "It would be well to avoid having 55 steps from the front door to the street, or a house where all the bedrooms are upstairs and the only bathroom downstairs."

A shower is preferable to a tub bath and generally safer for older people. So if you don't have a shower, you might think about installing one. "It's a more cleansing experience and you can sit under a shower on a stool if need be," Harrington says. "It's also easier to get out of." He recommends frequent showers, noting they also help minimize unpleasant body odor, which can come with age or over which some people seem greatly concerned. Skin lotion also is important and serves a double function if fragrant. "As you get older, your skin gets drier."

The advantages of having a primary-care physician are many and can forestall a great deal of trouble, Harrington stresses. "Especially older people may have a number of conditions and see a different doctor for each and receive different prescriptions, and there isn't anybody coordinating things. They wind up with too many different treatment programs and too many different pills. You know how dangerous that can be. Somebody should be coordinating their medical care."

Somewhat like the family doctor of former years, the primary physician has examined the patient and maintains a file of the medical care and history. He should be a patient's first contact and then coordinate whatever steps are taken, communicating with whatever other doctors may become involved. "I have a number of patients who never do anything medically unless they check it out with me first, although I may not need to see them at that point. But I do want the communication," Harrington says. That applies also to any pills they may buy over the counter without a prescription.

"I think it is best that any medication you take be coordinated by your primary doctor. For example, aspirin

Heart doesn't wear out

By JON VAN
Chicago Tribune

DALLAS — The widely held idea that the heart wears out as it ages is wrong, according to a report presented Tuesday at the American Heart Association's annual meeting.

The aging process itself doesn't cause cardiac decline," said Dr. Gary Gerstenblith of the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine.

Gerstenblith and colleagues have compared cardiac output of 61 men and women ranging in age from 21 to 79. They found that older people who exercise can increase cardiac output just as younger people do. There is a difference in how older cardiac systems work, but not in their ability to function, Gerstenblith said.

"In younger people, the heart increases its output by beating faster," he said. "In older people, output is increased by pumping more blood with each beat rather than by greatly increasing the rate of heartbeat."

Previous studies that concluded that aging hearts lose their ability to pump blood had several limitations, said Dr. Edward Lakatta of the federal Gerontology Research Center in Baltimore.

Previously, medical technology could detect that the hearts of older people were beating more slowly during exercise than were the hearts of young people. But new technology allows measurement of the amount of blood actually being pumped as well as the rate of heartbeat, Lakatta said.

Most past studies of "normal" older people were actually of hospital patients who had no diagnosed heart problems but did have other ailments.

The people in the Johns Hopkins study were all healthy, active people, mostly white and middle class with advanced college degrees.

"These are people who are high motivated and take care of themselves," Gerstenblith said. "They are active, not marathon runners, but people who regularly walk and engage in normal activities."

Probably only about half of America's elderly are as healthy as those in the study, he estimated. One thing the study does is assure people that keeping active and taking care of oneself is beneficial in late life; that aging doesn't arbitrarily diminish cardiac fitness.

"Older hearts stretch more, they beat more vigorously, but slower than young hearts," said Lakatta. "In future studies the researchers plan to examine how hearts are able to increase efficiency as they age."

"It is a mechanism that needs more study," Lakatta said.

Humor and confidence cure

By ANNA CHRISTENSEN
United Press International

BOSTON (UPI) — The mind plays a powerful role in illness, which can be cured in part with confidence and humor, author Norman Cousins told a conference on "The Role of Love and Laughter in the Healing Process."

"The best cure for illness is confidence, you can live it, believe me," said the author of "The Anatomy of an Illness," which described Cousins' own return to health after doctors gave him a 1-in-500 chance of survival.

We can become healthy through a positive attitude, healthy diet, humor and the willingness to resume responsibility for the cure, he told 1,200 people attending the fourth annual Interface Holistic Medicine Conference.

"In serious illness, there is nothing as important as the patient's ability to take responsibility to sense that he or she is in control, that patient and doctor are partners in a cure," Cousins

The conference continued Sunday with discussions on the importance of peace, harmony and joy in healing by the Rev. Angelo Rizzo and making the "impossible" possible through love by therapists Barry and Suzi Kaufman, whose most recent book, "A Land Beyond Tears" offers a new approach to death and dying.

Cousins, the author of 15 books and former editor of the Saturday Review magazine for 35 years, was diagnosed in 1962 as having an incurable disease of the connective tissue which causes pain and paralysis.

The combination of the morbid hospital atmosphere and the powerful drugs would not allow him to heal, he decided, so he worked out a plan with his doctor where he would, in a more pleasant environment and without drugs, deal with massive doses of laughter and vitamin C. "Anatomy of an Illness" first published in The New England Journal of Medicine in 1974, described the role love and humor played in his cure. Cousins told how recently about 200 people attending a football game in California suddenly became ill after an announcement that something may be wrong with the soda being served.

After it was announced the soda was fine, the people crowding the emergency room suddenly were cured, he said.

"Expectations can be translated into biochemical reality. There is a direct connection between the belief system and the healing system," said Cousins, now an adjunct professor of psychiatry at the School of Medicine, University of California, Los Angeles.

For the past four years, he said he has studied 252 cancer patients, two-thirds of whose illness took a sharp downward plunge after they were diagnosed.

"When symptoms were real and in many cases progressive, but the moment they were able to attach the name cancer to the symptoms, then suddenly they fell apart," he said.

Weddings

Ehrmantraut-Nutsch

JEROME — Rita Kay Ehrmantraut became the bride of Timothy J. Nutsch, Oct. 9 at St. Jerome's Catholic Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Ehrmantraut and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin C. Nutsch, all of Jerome.

Father William Taylor officiated. Curtis Thompson, nephew of the bride, and Kelly Martin served as acolytes. Mrs. Standley Fritzler, Linda Graefe, Rose Barga, Mary Vogel and Bob Whittechurch provided the music. Mrs. Donald Nutsch was lector.

The bride wore a floor-length gown trimmed with lace and pearls featuring a chapel length train. She carried a bouquet of silk roses and daisies with satin streamers.

Carol Ehrmantraut, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Rita and Barbara Nutsch, sisters of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids.

Anthony Nutsch, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Bill and Fred Nutsch, brothers of the bridegroom, were ushers.

Special guests included Mr. and Mrs. Frank Scheer of Jerome, grandparents of the bride.

A reception was held following the ceremony. Julia Colson, cousin of the bridegroom, was guest book attendant. Linda Schellhammer and Jean Thompson, sisters of the bride; Mrs. Lee Chojack, aunt of the bridegroom; Judy Hansing, and Mrs. Joyce Wiersma served. The Catholic Women's League assisted.

Kathy and Mary Lou Nutsch, sisters of the bridegroom, Mrs. Jack Tubbs, aunt of the bride, and Brenda Scheer assisted at the gift table.

The bride, a graduate of Jerome High School, is employed as a dental assistant by Dr. R.E. Williams. The bridegroom, a graduate of Jerome High School, attended the University of Idaho.

Boise class plans reunion

BOISE — The Boise High School class of 1973 is planning its 10-year class reunion next summer. Members of the class are asked to send their address and phone number and those of classmates whom they know have moved out of the area to: Class of 1973 Reunion, care of Boise High School, 1010 Washington, Boise, ID 83701.

Yoder-Nussbaum

TWIN FALLS — Gloria H. Yoder and Harold H. Nussbaum were married Oct. 16 at Kolonia Fellowship in Chandler, Ariz.

Geruldrine Coughell of Logansport, Ind., sister of the bride, was matron of honor. The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Wayne Nussbaum of Hesston, Kan.

The bride is employed by radio station KNIX.

The bridegroom, the son of George and Viola Nussbaum of Twin Falls, is a graduate of Twin Falls High School and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is attending Arizona State University studying music.

The couple resides in Mesa, Ariz.

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: For almost four years I have been a surrogate mother to five mentally retarded children, ages 12 to 19, so I can relate to "Los Angeles Mother" who described the daily horrors and heartaches of raising a 30-year-old retarded son at home.

"My" kids are also severely retarded, so I know how draining it can be.

True, I can go home after putting in my 40-hour week, but I still have to deal with them on my time off, but I often take one of my kids home on weekends, as well as holidays such as Christmas, Thanksgiving and Easter.

There are rewards, however. I have taught them how to eat, dress and bathe themselves. And they all have good manners. I am very strict, but I never abuse them. Their table manners are better than mine.

Dr. Lamb

He's too young to forget sex

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Association

DEAR DR. LAMB — My handsome husband of 35 years tells me that the problem he is experiencing in our sexual relationship is caused by a vasectomy he had when he was 25, after our third child.

He is now 55. He regrets the loss of the ability to father children and that is why he is unable to enjoy sex.

Until two years ago we certainly had an active sex life together. I'm 55 too and have kept my figure and take pride in my appearance. I don't like to think that our good sex life is behind us.

My husband is in good health, enjoys golf and is physically quite active. I think the root of our problem may be his daily double of gin or bourbon. This is about six ounces of gin or bourbon. After a long day, up at 5:30 to commute an hour-and-a-half, he falls asleep in his chair if he isn't in bed at 9 p.m.

Please answer soon as I miss this other "happy hour" which we can no longer achieve, even once in two weeks.

DEAR READER — Your husband is far too young to have an end to his sex life. He should look at his problem as a symptom and realize it may be an important indicator about his health.

Many men in his age group become depressed. The depression may be manifested by impotence or loss of interest in sex. It isn't easy for a lay person to recognize depression. A skilled and motivated doctor can put up a good front that hides his real emotional state.

In a significant number of men there is an increase in production of the hormone prolactin, produced by the pituitary. This is the hormone that stimulates lactation in women. These cases can usually be treated.

They keep one hand in their laps, wipe their mouths when necessary and use sign language to say please and thank you. They could sit at the president's dinner table and make me proud!

When I walk down the street with them and strangers attempt to shield their "normal" children from mine, I could cry. Mental retardation is not contagious.

"I'm not an administrator, I'm just a woman who cares. I earn less than someone who has worked in a supermarket for the same length of time, so I'm definitely not in it for the money. I truly love these kids."

As soon as I can afford it, I am going to adopt a lovable little girl. I'm caring for. (It won't be a problem. She was abandoned and has no family.)

My heart aches for "Los Angeles Mother," who confessed that the thought of "mercy killing" had crossed her mind. But she could have had worse problems. Her son could have been a "normal" murderer, rapist or drug addict. She should thank God she has someone to care for and love. Retarded children need love, and they give more in return than most "normal" children are willing to give. Sign me...

— CHILD CARE WORKER WHO LABORS FOR LOVE, JOY — AND PEANUTS

DEAR WORKER: You qualify for sainthood in my book. Read on for a letter from a reader with another view.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for the courage to print that poignant letter from "Los Angeles Mother" regarding life with her retarded son. I am sure that thousands of mothers in similar circumstances read that letter and sighed, "At last! Somebody said it!"

The fact is that life with "heaven's very special child" CAN be hell.

It is a tragedy, and a national disgrace that decent, affordable housing for the mentally retarded is so hard to find. We are a nation that spends millions on video games, yet thousands of marriages and families are being damaged beyond repair because decent residential care is not available for our mentally retarded.

Abby, please print this letter and alert our legislators in Washington. At the very least, families who suffer from catastrophic situations like this one should get some kind of a tax break.

And yes, you may use my name.

Anniversaries

Sunday, November 21, 1982 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho F-3

MR. AND MRS. WALDAMERE CAMP

JEROME — Mr. and Mrs. Waldamere "Walt" Camp will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary at an open house Saturday, Nov. 27, at the Jerome LDS Stake Center.

Friends and relatives are invited to call between 1 and 4 p.m.

The couple was married in Brigham City, Utah, Dec. 1, 1932. They have lived in Pleasant View and farmed in various communities throughout southern Idaho until 1958. They established a shoe repair business in Ogden, Utah, which they operated until 1974 when they retired and moved to Jerome.

Hosting the event will be their children, Geraldine Thorneock of Bountiful, Utah; Baxter Camp of Salt Lake City; Ferguson Camp of Jerome; Sandra Reeder of Odgen and Dian Fajol of Rock Springs, Wyo. They have 27 grandchildren and 20 great-grandchildren.

MR. AND MRS. ABE CALKINS

GOODING — Mr. and Mrs. Abe Calkins will celebrate their 50th anniversary at an open house Nov. 28 at the War Memorial Hall on the corner of Third Avenue and Idaho Street in Gooding.

Friends and relatives are invited to call between 2 to 4:30 p.m.

Calkins and the former Angeline Dunkel were married Nov. 28, 1932, in Minot, N.D. In 1934 they moved to Fort Peck, Mont., where Calkins worked on the dam. In 1937 they moved to Gooding where they have farmed since.

The event will be hosted by their four children, Ella Mink of Jerome, Walter Calkins of Jerome, Lawrence Calkins of Richfield and Rita LaChance of Nampa, and their families. They have 13 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT SPELLMAN

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Robert Spellman observed their 50th anniversary recently at a family celebration.

The Spellmans were married Nov. 14, 1932, in Waukegan, Ill. He taught school for 40 years in Illinois and Rochester, Wash. The couple moved to Halley following Spellman's re-irement in 1973 and moved to Twin Falls in 1981.

They have been active in the senior citizens organizations in Halley and Twin Falls.

They have two children, Barbara Sorenson of Twin Falls and Patricia Hicks of Denver. They also have nine grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Column helps widow get her benefits

BY JUDY BENGE
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Q: My husband was 79 when he died last April. We were married 56 years. I'm getting $294 based on my work; my husband was getting much more.

When our checks arrived in May, I returned his check with a certified copy of his death certificate. I then received a letter from the Social Security office asking for a copy of our marriage license. They asked for "the original, not copy."

I've lost it and the Seattle, Wash., marriage license bureau hasn't answered my letter requesting a duplicate—I've been waiting more than two months. I will be forever grateful if you can help get my widow's benefits started. — M.F.C.

A: Personnel at the South Miami office of Social Security solved your problem for us in record time. They contacted Seattle Social Security personnel to obtain a certified copy of your marriage license from the Seattle marriage license bureau. Within three weeks your claim for widow's benefits was processed. You've got a retroactive payment of $1,827 for the added amount in widow's benefits you should have received from April through September. Your $294 monthly widow's benefits will be paid in future without a hitch.

Q: I paid my medical clinic $290 last November.

But I can't get an explanation from Medicare on why they never paid the 80 percent refund. I called Medicare, but they said there was nothing due me. Could you look into this? — D.W.M., Meridian, Miss.

A: Your clinic visits from January through September totaled 18. The accumulated charges were $574.50. Medicare allowed $335.50 and paid $208.40 — 80 percent, leaving a balance of $306.10. Medicare officials checked with the clinic and verified that all services provided by their clinic were sent to Medicare for their consideration. Sorry, but you were responsible for the balance — plus the $16.10 the clinic neglected to charge you. We didn't mention it.

Q: Would you please check with Social Security and find out why they believe they overpaid me in benefits? I was widowed in 1964 and went back to work in 1968. I asked the people at Social Security if my benefits would be reduced by my work, and they said it didn't make any difference since we received a family benefit. I hope you can clarify this. — F.J.G., Kansas

A: Sorry, but you owe the $4,557. There are two limits on the amount paid out on a worker's Social Security record — the individual set limit and the family maximum.

When one family member's benefit should be reduced, Social Security increases the other family members' previously reduced benefits (up to the individual limit) so the total for the family remains the same. But a money-saving law allows Social Security to avoid the paperwork of changing the individual benefits as long as the family total remains the same.

Under this law, instead of reducing your benefits and increasing those of your children when you returned to work in 1968, Social Security simply left your family's benefits as they were.

In 1978, the family maximum no longer applied because only two children were getting benefits and both were receiving their individual set limit.

Therefore, your earnings from 1978 through 1981 should have reduced your benefits. Since you didn't notify Social Security of your earnings, you were paid $4,557 too much.

Medicare Hospital Insurance:

In 1983, this insurance will cost the patient considerably more. The Medicare hospital deductible will be $394 (up from $200) for in-patient care. From Day 61 through 90, a patient will be responsible for $76 a day (up from $65). The lifetime reserve days, 91 through 150, will cost $152 a day (up from $130). Skilled nursing care in a participating skilled nursing facility will cost $38 a day (up from $32.50). Only covered services are payable.

Antiques aren't as old anymore

BY ERMA BOMBECK
Field Enterprises, Inc.

I don't know what's happened to antiques during the last few years, but I don't get the honk out of buying them that I used to.

My husband and I had a rule of thumb. Anything 10 years older than we were, we'd buy it. We can't do that anymore. Anything 10 years older than we are is falling apart and not worth carrying home.

Besides, antiques aren't as old as they used to be when we first started to collect them.

Why, I remember when I could rummage through a show at the armory for half a day and not even know what the stuff was... let alone know what it was used for.

The other night I picked up a blue bowl with Shirley Temple's face at the bottom of it... $35. That's right, 35 big ones for a kid who's... what? 20 years old or so now? That's not an antique!

And listen to this. I saw a tray with the original Lawrence Welk band on it. They were wearing suits that my husband still has in his closet. They called it Early Americana and were charging $40 for it. What a ripoff!

I liked antiques in the days when furniture didn't have nails in it, dolls were cuddly and didn't have two-inch busts and ponytails, and quilts didn't have labels in them, "DRY CLEAN ONLY."

It's funny. I can remember when my Mom used to go with me to shows and there was an anger about her. She'd pick up a tin lunch pail and snort, "That's not an antique. I can remember your Grandma putting a bread and butter sandwich and a pear in that and carrying it to school for lunch."

And I'd smile condescendingly (like I was trying to talk someone off a ledge) and say, "Mother, Mother, you are getting older. They haven't used tin lunch pails in 40 years."

She seemed very bored through the whole exercise of curtain stretchers where you hooked your face curtains onto small nails, stop jars that I bought to hold geraniums in the hallway, four-inch hatpins and high-button shoes.

At the show the other night I was talking to a woman who said, "I saw a small thermos with Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs on the side of it. I was furious."

"That's not an antique," I said to my daughter. "I can remember your Grandma putting chili in that and sending it to school with me for lunch."

She started to speak, then decided against it. It was one of her more humane acts.

Part-time jobs made at gals' expense

By CAROL KLEIMAN
Chicago Tribune

For women who seek it, part-time work is a boon, especially for those women with families.

Part-time work means women don't have to be away from home all day. It also means being able to earn some much-needed money. In the current recession, many workers are happy to work part-time rather than being laid off completely.

But because of the harshness of the recession, the concept of part-time work seems to be backfiring and may have a direct effect on women's employment. Despite the fact it is a myth that women work for "pin" money rather than to support their families, women are sometimes viewed by employers as expendable as full-time employees when costs need to be cut.

Today, many working women are concerned about a management trend in some businesses — retailing, fast foods, banks and other service industries — to turn full-time jobs into part-time ones at the expense of women employees.

One of the reasons for the part-time play is that hard-pressed companies can save money on salaries and benefits. Studies by the U.S. Department of Labor show that 84 percent of all part-time workers are women, so women are disproportionately affected by this business practice.

"While many workers are grateful for measures to ease unemployment by spreading available working hours among employees threatened with layoffs, there are still drawbacks to part-time work," says Audrey Freedman, labor economist for the Conference Board, a nonprofit business research group based in New York. "For employers, using part-time workers is one marvelous way to cut the cost of labor."

By hiring part-timers, management has a cushion for doing business by reducing its full-time workforce yet retaining a firm level of activity, the economist says. Reports by the labor department and by management institutes consistently show that part-time workers mean real savings to the employer, because of decreased overtime and absenteeism at the same time there is an increase in per hour productivity.

The government's definition of part-time is anyone who works fewer than 35 hours a week by choice. According to the U.S. Department of Labor, there are 12,740,000 people who work part-time because they want to. There are an additional 5,648,000 million who worked part-time for economic reasons, presumably because they could not get full time jobs. But labor experts believe the increasing number of women now forced into part-time jobs is highly under-reported.

Additional labor department figures show that nearly one-fourth of part-time workers are employed in service jobs; about 23 percent hold clerical jobs; 13.3 percent are in professional and technical positions; 10.1 are in sales; 5.9 are laborers; 4.8 private household workers; 3.8 managers and administrators; and 3.5 are craft workers.

The scope of dependence on part-time workers in industries hard-hit by the recession is an increasing fact of today's economic conditions. One-third of workers in retail trades is part-time.

Sears, Roebuck & Co., the nation's largest retailer, says there has been a significant increase in the number of part-time retail clerks not only in its stores—but throughout the industry. "The majority of our sales clerks are part-time employees," a representative for the giant retailer says. "Sears and most other retailers have always had part-timers, but the trend has accelerated in recent years."

What often happens in part-time situations is that part-timers are hired to work at peak hours only, and many, such as sales clerks, bus drivers and bank tellers may work as hard in five hours as full-time employees do in eight hours, economist Audrey Freedman observes.

"People who work at peak hours should have full benefits," Freedman believes.

The salary discrepancy is further proof that businesses don't make monetary investments in part-time workers. The AFL-CIO frequently cites the classic case of the wage disadvantage of part-timers in a special project sponsored by Control Data Corp. of Minneapolis.

In 1979, the company created special part-time jobs for welfare mothers at a bindery plant in an impoverished neighborhood. The women were also given special training on the use of computer terminals and their baby-sitters were paid by the company. But the part-time women-workers were paid $3.40 an hour; union members doing the same job of the production line got $8.40.

"Industries that tend to hire part-time workers tend to hire women," says JoAnne Alter of Great Neck, N.Y., author of "A Part-Time Job for a Full-Time You" (Houghton, Mifflin). "This is hard on women because only half of all part-timers get any benefits. I can't say I see a trend by employers to change full-time jobs into part-time ones, but if I had to guess I'd say it is a factor that is on the increase." Employers are taking on more part-time people with the express purpose of not paying benefits.

Alter is an enthusiastic proponent of part-time work for those who want it. She's hopeful that if the demand for part-time workers increases, the disadvantages will be reduced.

Prefixes often mispronounced

I am perennially amazed at how often we fail to distinguish between similar sounds, particularly between "pre" and "per." Is this a hearing problem, or are our speech organs deficient?

Some individuals cannot hear the difference between "pen" and "per" or between "right" and "rat." (Some cannot distinguish between right and wrong, for that matter.)

Just last week, on "The Today Show," no less a personage than an admiral spoke of "persenting" a "perposal" for stepped-up space capability.

Here in the Magic Valley land, we attend premieres, are preoccupied with our personal problems and prepare our children for preschool and preparatory school. We pre-package our foods and pre-arrange our loans and, here, perched on the precarious precipice of our prehistoric perspective, we pursue our perennially perplexing pursuits.

Why is it, then, that we have periphery haircuts, water our fields with percolation irrigation systems, periside over meetings of the city council and, if we happen to be women, exercise the prerogative of exchanging our minds? When we are perched on the precarious precipice of our prehistoric perspective, we pursue our perennially perplexing pursuits.

I don't pretend to understand these peculiar phenomena, much less prevent them. They have pervaded all levels of society and have percolated out of all porportion. I presume there must be some reason for all these mispronunciations and I predict that this predicament will perdominate indefinitely, unless some of us take drastic percautions to perclude further perillifiration.

Well, I find it perplexing, to say the least. How are we ever going to perserve the percepts handed down to us by our perdecessors if things are permitted to perceed in such a perposterous way?

Less food keeps muscles youthful

Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Scientists have known for a long time that food restrictions markedly prolong the lifespan of several laboratory animals, and, by extension, human beings. What they have not known, however, is why.

Until now, theory has held that life was extended because metabolism was slowed down by a restricted diet so the body lasted longer, but this now does not seem to be the case.

Scientists Roger M. McCarter, E.J. Mansoro, and B.P. Yu of the University of Texas, San Antonio, tried some experiments on laboratory rats to study the life-restricted nutrition question. One group was given free access to food, a second group got only 60 percent of the amount of food eaten by the first group, while a third group was subjected to severe protein restriction.

Rats given free access showed age-related slowdowns in some muscle fibers, while those on restricted diets showed no age-related muscle slowdown, the researchers reported.
