

Reagan offers grain for idle land

By DAVE BARTEL
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

WASHINGTON — In a radical shift of farm policy, President Reagan agreed Thursday to give government-owned grain to farmers who sharply reduce food production in the coming year.

In effect, the president will offer some farmers a government-paid vacation for one year in order to reduce a huge grain surplus that has depressed farm prices and sent the cost of government farm programs to a record $12 billion this year.

Reagan hailed the plan as "a good imaginative program" that could help end a near-depression on U.S. farms and staunch the flood of government spending.

"Production (of grain) can be reduced, thus bringing supply back into closer balance with demand," Reagan said. "Stocks can be reduced at the same time, lessening the overhang on the market at harvest next year and enhancing the prospects for a market-led recovery in farm prices and incomes in future years."

The president effectively conceded that administration farm policies have failed to hold down production of wheat and corn, — both crops set records this year — and that more drastic action was necessary.

With grain supplies approaching an all-time high, the administration announced a grain program earlier this year to idle 20 percent of farmers' wheat land and corn acreage.

The new program is known as "payment in kind" or PIK because it would swap government grain for grain that farmers don't produce. It would be added to the earlier program to idle 50 percent — or even all — of a farmer's land in 1983.

Last year, Agriculture Secretary John Block objected to any program for paying farmers to idle their land. But he took a totally different view Thursday in briefing members of the Senate Agriculture Committee on the new program.

"It is crucial that agriculture have this program to reduce grain stocks and increase prices," Block said. "We have a serious problem and we're trying to deal with it."

Agriculture Department officials said the new program could boost farm prices modestly in the coming year and reduce government costs by about $5 billion over the next three fiscal years. But they cautioned against expecting a miracle cure for the farm problem.

"Even if a large PIK program were announced, there may not be that much improvement in prices — perhaps 5 percent above last year's average," said William Leshner, the department's top economist. "But this would set an environment for farmers to have a chance for better prices in the years ahead. Until we get our stocks down, prices aren't going to go up much."

Block told senators he probably could begin the new program under his existing authority, but he asked the committee for two changes in present law. One would be to freeze target prices at 1983 levels; the other

President's proposal was tried before

By STEVE LIPSON

TWIN FALLS — The Reagan administration's proposal to pay farmers to grow less wheat, while using surplus wheat to make the payments, failed to aid farmers when it was tried last.

"It has a little appeal because it's something that hasn't been mentioned for 20 years," Dick Sargent, an agricultural economist at Washington State University, said Thursday afternoon. "It's been tried before, and it wasn't very effective then."

Whether the current proposal would work, Sargent could not say.

"At present, it's so nebulous, I can't tell what it is. There just weren't any handles on it that you can do any analysis."

One obvious problem exists, though, he says. Although a large surplus of wheat is in storage bins around the country, depressing prices, the majority is not owned by the government.

A great amount is in the farmer-owned reserve, stored at government expense but owned by farmers, he says, in accordance with another federal program that is supposed to help farmers earn more for their crops.

"It's not a new idea at all," says Dick Rush, the administrator of the Idaho Wheat Commission. "It's something that was tried in the early 1960s. It didn't work very well. It was a lot easier to use dollars."

But perhaps U.S. Department of Agriculture officials could use the lessons of the past to design a new, more workable program, he says.

"In theory, it sounds good, but theory doesn't do you much good if it doesn't work in practice," says Steve Berglund, the executive director of the Idaho Association of Wheat Growers. "We'll just have to wait and see."

Officials from the National Association of Wheat Growers were unable to find out enough details about the proposed program Thursday to know if they would support it.

"USDA just isn't coming out with the details," Berglund says. "We are encouraged the USDA is looking at different programs. I think they are starting to realize we do have a serious problem."

The problem is a grain surplus amounting to 1.5 billion bushels, which dwarfs the total yearly grain consumption in this country of about 800 million bushels, Berglund says.

"What we would like to see is something that would basically cut down the supply of grain we have in the U.S. We're not really sure if this program will do that."

Government sees bad times for farmers

By LINDA WERFFELMAN

WASHINGTON — Farmers are unlikely to see any substantial improvement in their financial problems in the coming year, with farm income expected to remain low, the government said Thursday.

An Agriculture Department report noted net farm income, cash flow and personal disposable income, for farmers all are expected to drop this year.

"The outlook for 1983, while still highly uncertain, does not promise much improvement in these aggregate indicators, although some individual farms and areas could do better," the department said in its monthly agricultural outlook summary.

For 1982, net farm income is projected at $19 billion. The department has estimated cash income from farming will total $31 billion, down 2 percent from 1981.

The low prices paid to farmers for raw farm products will limit increases in retail food retail prices in 1983 to between 3 percent and 4 percent, compared to about 4.5 percent this year, the department said.

The farm value of food accounts for about one-third of retail food costs.

In the report by its Economic Research Service, the department also predicted world carryover stocks of grains would increase about 40 million metric tons this season, with most of that increase in the United States.

Statistics indicate the United States will hold 74 percent of the world's coarse grain stocks and 44 percent of its wheat stocks by the end of the current marketing year.

Cyanide scare pops up again

Tainted Anacin poisons woman

By SPENCER SHERMAN
United Press International

SAN JOSE, Calif. — A woman hospitalized two weeks ago and still in critical condition may have taken cyanide-laced capsules of Anacin III.

Fearing another case of tampering with over-the-counter drugs, authorities launched an intense investigation into the poisoning, pain remedy and the illness of Mrs. Bowen.

Mrs. Bowen, 30, was in Good Samaritan Hospital in critical but stable condition. Doctors had diagnosed her condition as a stroke when she was admitted on Nov. 26.

Mrs. Bowen passed out at home, turned pale, stopped breathing and foamed at the mouth, officials said. Three days ago she was taken out of intensive care at Good Samaritan Hospital.

A police report said Mrs. Bowen was tested for toxic drugs when she was admitted but none was detected in her system.

On Thursday morning, Long's Drug Co. stores in the San Jose and San Francisco areas removed all Anacin III from their shelves.

"We may have a possible suicide, murder, attempted extortion," San Jose Police Chief Joseph McNamara told reporters. "Until we conduct a thorough criminal investigation, we're not going to speculate. We don't know if a crime has been committed."

Police said Thursday that her husband, on his own, had become suspicious and turned over to state officials a bottle of Anacin III for analysis.

California Department of Health Services officials concluded that at least one of the capsules submitted by Richard Bowen, 29, for analysis contained lethal cyanide. They said three other capsules were suspected of being poisoned but tests were inconclusive.

McNamara immediately alerted all hospitals, paramedics and police units in the area to watch for symptoms of poisoning that might be mistaken as other diseases.

He said other cases of poisoning may have "slipped by, diagnosed as stroke or cardiac arrest."

San Jose Mayor Janet Gray Hayes said she wants to determine whether the request for an analysis of the capsules was handled in "timely" fashion by the state Department of Health Services.

McNamara noted that the report from the state laboratory came to his office in routine fashion late Wednesday and that apparently no precautionary steps had been taken until he saw the report Thursday morning.

An official of the state health department said the laboratory received the suspected bottle of Anacin III on Dec. 3, that tests were begun Dec. 6 and that the results were found Dec. 8.

The manufacturer of the over-the-counter headache remedy, Whitman Laboratories, a subsidiary of American Home Products, said the firm was "cooperating completely with state and federal officials" as well as launching its own investigation of the incident.

Station Manager George Paul and General Manager Jack French are busy with final plans before KCIR radio airs on Sunday

Christian radio was long time coming

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Four years after the effort began to bring a Christian radio station to the Magic Valley, that station is scheduled to begin broadcasts.

Using the call letters "KCIR," which stands for "Christ is risen," it will go on the air at 6 a.m. Sunday. It will be found at 91 on the FM dial.

In signal tests that began Thursday, the station reportedly was picked up clearly in Idaho Falls. It is expected to cover the entire Magic Valley, Mountain Home parts of eastern Idaho and perhaps northern Utah and Nevada.

Plans call for the station to be supported with donations.

From $10,000 to $12,000 per month will be needed to keep the station on the air, French says. Currently, about $5,000 a month is being raised through donations. "which is the most unusual thing I've ever seen," he says, considering that the station has yet to make its first broadcast.

This is the third station in the Faith Communications chain. The first was started 10 years ago in Las Vegas. The second is in Ogden, Utah.

The new station will broadcast from 5 a.m. to midnight on weekdays and from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. on weekends. Programs will be mixed between religious and educational talk shows and music, says George Paul, the station manager.

A weekday morning show called "Rise and Shine" will be broadcast from 5 to 9 a.m. Disc jockey Vern Jattin of Kimberly will mix music, weather reports, news and the time, with scripture readings, a Bible quiz and other religious messages. "We want to help focus our listeners on God as they start their day," Paul says.

Full program schedules are available by calling or writing the station, which is located at 1446 Filler Ave. E. in Twin Falls. Schedules also can be picked up at the Christian bookstores in Twin Falls and Rupert, Penny-Wise Drugs and Francisco's Restaurant.

Much of the four-year effort to bring the station to the air was spent navigating in troubled waters. Christian Radio of Magic Valley Inc. gave its broadcast license to Faith Communications last summer and merged with the group because local fund-raising efforts had fallen short of raising the money needed to put a station on the air.

David Denault, who worked from May 1980 to January 1982 as the first general manager of the station, parted ways with the station's board of directors after the station had missed several target dates for going on the air.

His plans to use the National Public Radio network for much of the station's non-religious programming were dropped. The station also moved from its partially built studio in downtown Twin Falls to what the present managers considered a far more convenient location, off Filler Avenue.

Mayer was shot to defuse 'time bomb'

By HIRAM M. REISNER
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Police decided hours before shooting a 66-year-old antinuclear war activist that they would not let him move his rolling "time bomb" from the Washington Monument grounds onto city streets, officials said Thursday.

Specially trained marksmen were ordered to the scene as soon as the tense 10-hour standoff began, authorities said.

Norman D. Mayer, obsessed with bringing an end to the arms race, was killed by the police snipers Wednesday night as he drove a truck he claimed was loaded with explosives away from the monument, in the general direction of the White House. "The barrage of gunfire ended a siege that began when Mayer drove the truck to the front entrance of the 555-foot marble tower Wednesday morning. He threatened to blow up the national landmark unless the country focused its attention on the danger of nuclear war."

Mayer, of Miami Beach, Fla., said he had 1,000 pounds of dynamite in the white van, which carried a sign, "No priority, ban nuclear weapons." But officials said later no explosives were found in the vehicle, which overturned about 200 yards from the memorial building as it moved down a sidewalk. In the confusion, authorities initially believed a second man was involved in the siege, but a cautious, two-hour search of the monument after Mayer was killed failed to turn up an accomplice. The search was called off about 12:30 a.m. EST.

Travel committee gets grant

WALLACE (UPI) — The Idaho Travel Committee has awarded $306,425 to communities and regions across the state to attract conventions and promote tourism.

Included in the total, is $68,816 grant to the Magicland Travel Committee, which represents the Magic Valley region, and $23,250 to the Sun Valley-Ketchum Chamber of Commerce for its marketing program. During a visit to Wallace on Wednesday, committee members announced the awarding of $5,770 to the Sierra Silver Mine Tour outside of the North Idaho town.

The mine opened earlier this year, giving tours to the public of the old silver mine, which was refurbished by classes at Wallace High School. The mine took in almost $14,000 during the summer season, with 5,000 visitors from 20 states, Canada and Germany.

The state committee, funded with revenues from a 2-percent tax on hotels, motels and campgrounds in Idaho, also gave the Coeur d'Alene Chamber of Commerce $12,250 to place together a slide show and brochure touting the North Idaho city as a convention center.

In addition to the Magic Valley, the five other regions of the state also received grants. The Panhandle area, called Big Water Mountain Land by the committee, was awarded $51,859. Lewis and Clark County received $21,831; Treasureland in southwestern Idaho $71,656; Pioneer Country got $31,288 and Mountain River Country received $57,982.

Mayer's claims were true, leaving one overriding concern.

"If he did in fact decide to move that mobile time bomb, there was no way we would let him leave the monument grounds."

Federal law enforcement sources said Mayer had tried to purchase explosives in several locations, including Kentucky, recently, apparently without success.

Park Police spokesman George Berkley said the snipers, described as a special equipment team, were operating under instructions to disable the vehicle at any cost.

Herring disclosed the snipers arrived at the memorial site soon after Mayer parked his truck at the main entrance to the marble tower and ordered people from the area about 9:20 Wednesday morning.

"We put our plan into action, brought snipers in right away," he said.

Herring said the decision to shoot was a collective one among the local and federal authorities involved, but he gave the final order. "That's correct," he said when asked if the truck rather than the man inside it was the target.

An autopsy showed Mayer died of a single gunshot wound to the head and also suffered a wound to the face and to one arm.

Officials Thursday reduced from nine to eight their count of the number of people trapped inside the monument when the takeover began.

Two government employees and six visitors holed up on the observation deck at the 500-foot level for about five hours. Mayer allowed them to leave early in the afternoon.

Repairs were made Thursday to a flagpole on the monument grounds hit by the truck, and the building was aired out to clear traces of tear gas. It was closed to the public, but officials said the main reason was high winds.

Mayer, who had worked as a handyman at several Miami Beach hotels in recent years, had told a friend earlier this year he had a plan "to take out an icon" in Washington to dramatize his view.

Among the lingering questions about Mayer was where he got his money. A clerk at the Washington motel where he stayed on and off during the past eight months said he spent about $6,000 for his room, always paying with $100 bills. A World War II veteran, Mayer had an arrest record dating back more than 30 years, including drug charges in both the United States and Asia.

In recent weeks, Mayer frequently had been seen outside the White House handing out antinuclear literature.

A pamphlet Mayer handed out at the monument Wednesday demanded "a national dialogue on the nuclear weapons question as a first order of business on every agenda of every organization in the USA" and insisted on extensive media coverage.

Rich Miller, a member of Washington's Community for Creative Non-Violence, said he talked to Mayer outside the White House on Thanksgiving.

"He said he was fed up with it all and he was just going to sit back and watch everything blow up," Miller said.

16 killed during Mideast violence

By United Press International

Rocket, mortar and artillery battles killed 16 people and wounded 59 others in Lebanon's northern city of Tripoli Thursday, and President Reagan said the United States wants to "speed" up the process for peace in the region.

State-run Beirut Radio said fighting between pro and anti-Syrian factions escalated dramatically in the Syrian-controlled city of Tripoli. At least 16 people died and 59 others were wounded.

Fighting in Tripoli erupted for the third straight day after unidentified gunmen ambushed a Syrian army truck near the Syrian border. Police said four soldiers died and 11 others were wounded in the ambush.

Tripoli, Lebanon's second largest city 53 miles north of Beirut, is base for numerous Syrian, Lebanese and Palestine Liberation Organization guerrilla groups, often clashing because of political and military disputes.

Former Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karame appealed to Syrian President Hafez Assad to help stop the fighting — an indication that Syrian troops, who entered Lebanon in 1976 to quell civil strife, were taking part in the fighting.

As factional strife raged in Tripoli, fighting between Lebanese Christians and Druze Muslims left at least four people dead in the Israeli-occupied Shuf mountains southeast of Beirut, police said.

Rights law would state commitment

While we see some potential problems with the state Human Rights Commission's plan to ask for legislative help to discourage racism and bigotry in Idaho, we think the idea is essentially a sound one that deserves the Legislature's consideration.

Compared to some other states, Idaho — despite its homogeneous white and Christian population — has a reputation, essentially, as a free, pluralistic community where racial and ethnic tolerance is the norm.

In recent years, however, a number of supremacist groups have sprung up in the state, chiefly in the Panhandle region. They include the Ku Klux Klan and the American Nazi Party, both of which preach anti-semitic and anti-black dogma.

Nationally, these groups foment prejudice; they advocate various degrees of racial and ethnic supremacy. Neither has broad appeal either among Idahoans or among Americans in general, for they denigrate human beings, judging them on their color and religion, not on work and merit.

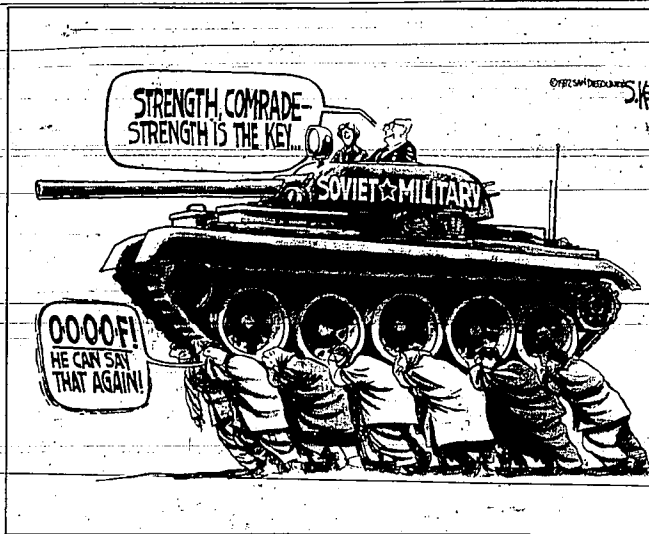

But as deTocqueville observed 150 years ago, one of the great tensions in American society is how minority views, however offensive, are allowed to exist in a society where the rule of the majority is law.

A great measure of our freedom as a people is our tolerance for disparate views, even if they are objectionable to many.

That is why the American Civil Liberties Union fought for the right of Nazis to march through the predominantly Jewish community of Skokie, Ill., several years ago despite wide disgust with the Nazi beliefs.

We think a law can be structured that would make "ethnic terrorism" a crime and would discourage hate groups that preach it. Similar civil-rights statutes have been enacted elsewhere in state and federal law.

But as important a result as any would be in serving notice that such views do not represent more than a tiny minority of the people of Idaho. Those minorities often get visibility far out of proportion to their numbers, and the message the publicity sends is that the views are generally held. A legislative statement would express the reverse.

Obfuscating government euphemisms

It was missed by the Washington news media, but the federal government with the encouragement of state and local governments, is in the process of officially making the United States bilingual.

The change will not directly affect the majority of the citizens, who can still use English in their daily business; however, bureaucrats and politicians henceforth will be able to use Euphemese in all communications with the public.

Euphemese is not to be confused with Obfuscation, the unofficial language used by bureaucrats to write reports to each other.

The differences between the two are sometimes subtle. An obfuscator would tell a person to go to hell in such a way that he couldn't determine what his destination was. An euphemist would give the directions in such a way the person would look forward to the trip.

The unprecedented linguistic reform is contained in a bill now moving through Congress that will increase the federal gasoline tax by 125 percent.

The tax hike is really not a tax increase at all, its bipartisan proponents claim. The president, a Republican, refers to it as a "user fee," and the Democrats call it a "jobs bill."

Prior to the invention of Euphemese, the two parties would have had to disagree on whether to increase the gasoline tax, with one denouncing it as government waste and the other endorsing it as a measure to help the poor. The adoption of the new language permits both parties to support it for opposite reasons.

Thus the age old political practice of using euphemisms to obscure from the governed the intentions of the governors is now official United States policy.

Lexicographers have been able to decipher some of the more commonly used Euphemese words and provide the following glossary:

- Cost of Living Adjustments — pay raises for government workers.
- Revenue enhancement — tax hike.
- Revenue shortfall — broke.
- Cash flow imbalance — impending bankruptcy.
- Program consolidation — cutbacks due to revenue shortfall (see previous definition for term Shortfall).

- Public funding requirement — any transit system deficit.
- Entitlements — unallowable programs, such as welfare and tobacco subsidies.
- Entitlement program client — a smoker on welfare.
- Fund imbalance — sufficient cash on hand to pay employees but not the rent.
- Accounts payable — overdue bills.
- Appropriation ordinance — an official guess, sometimes called a budget.
- Appropriation ordinance amendment — a frantic last minute change in the budget to keep things legal when you've guessed wrong.
- Authorization — a vote by Congress to spend money for political reasons when it has no intention of doing so but wants to look good in the Congressional Record.
- Continuing resolution — what Congress passes when it can't get the federal budget done on time, which now occurs annually.
- Float — what rubber checks don't do.

Military appropriates for weapons, can't maintain them

WASHINGTON — In a secret 1962 memorandum to President John F. Kennedy, Defense Secretary Robert McNamara recommended killing U.S. Air Force proposals to develop 1,000 air-launched Skybolt missiles, 700 improved Minuteman ballistic missiles and the RB-70 manned bomber.

"It has become clear to me," McNamara wrote to Kennedy, "that the Air Force proposals, both for the RB-70 and for the rest of the Strategic Retaliatory Forces are based on the objective of achieving a first-strike capability, the ability to destroy Soviet military forces in a surprise attack."

These plans must be rejected, McNamara said. Even in 1962, the Soviet had sufficient military power to respond to a U.S. attack with devastating force. "If (Russia's) remaining forces were targeted against U.S. cities, they could inflict roughly 50 million direct fatalities in the United States, even without fallout protection. I do not consider this an 'acceptable' level of damage."

Ah, for the good old days. Imagine a secretary of defense who could look the Joint Chiefs in the eye and say, "No. You can't have it. It's dangerous."

Kennedy and McNamara were not doves, you will recall. They launched an attempt to depose Fidel Castro in Cuba. They sowed the seeds for massive U.S. military involvement in Vietnam. They were willing to "pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship" to assure the survival of liberty. But not commit suicide.

McNamara made his decisions stick. The Skybolt was scrapped, the RB-70 was never built and the nation centered itself with 550 improved Minutemen instead of the 1,200 the Air Force wanted. Somehow, the nation survived.

Today, 20 years later, it's "Merry Xmas." The Reagan administration does not choose between and between weapons systems. It orders them all in its headlong $1.6 trillion — that's $1,600,000,000,000 — military buildup.

Try entering that on your pocket calculator and it will tell you "Error."

It wants tanks and ships and two different types of manned bombers and 12 different types of anti-tank missile and an F-18 fighter bomber that Navy test pilots cannot fly very far if you actually hang bombs from it. No matter. Get it anyway. We'll spend those Russians into the ground. If you dropped the dollar bills on them, they would smother to death. But that would be cruel, and opposed to the rules of civilized warfare.

A year ago, David Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, was asked whether the looming federal budget deficit could be remedied by cutting out at least some of these weapons systems. "No," Stockman replied smoothly. "You don't save a lot by cutting anything now. The real expenditures are in the coming years." By this logic, nothing was cut from last year's defense budget.

John Lehman, secretary of the Navy, recently sprang the trap that Stockman set. At a seminar in the Brookings Institution, someone proposed that major defense savings could result from abandoning plans to build a 600-ship Navy at a total cost of $100 billion. "Ha, ha, Gotcha!" Lehman replied. "I'm sorry to suggest to you that it's too late to stop it. We are already up to 514 ships and we've got 106 more ships under contract."

This is a sales tactic that would make an encyclopedia salesman blush. The administration is telling Congress that it has already signed away its right to stop mammoth defense expenditures. Everything must be bought. Survival depends on it. Nobody in the Executive Branch stops and reflects and says, "No."

The sad part of this is that when the Navy gets its 600 ships, it's not going to be able to afford to run them. Congress has ways of getting back at the military for overspending. It cuts the services' budget for fuel, ammunition and salaries.

The Navy can't man and maintain the 514 ships it has today largely because there is a recession, with 12 million people unemployed. In this economy, boiler-makers and machinists' mates can't find jobs in the civilian economy. Navy pilots can't take their flight training to Braniff. There is no more Braniff.

Braniff's planes were not shot down by the Russians. The factories that have shut down, laying off machinists and steelworkers and autoworkers, were not hit by Soviet missiles. The farmers going broke in Iowa and Kansas did not lose their crops to Soviet poison gases and nuclear holocaust.

They are the victims of recession, caused in large part — and certainly prolonged — by an easy-going guy who looks at all the deadly toys on the Pentagon's letter to Santa and doesn't have the heart to say, "No, you can't have it. It's expensive and dangerous."

Barney Clark's operation raises ethical dilemmas

BOSTON — As I write this, Barney Clark is surviving. The heart inside his chest, a contraption of polyurethane that replaced his own devastated muscle, is still working.

But the bulletins from the hospital that told us that he spent his days — sleeping, listening to Handel's "Messiah," dangling his feet, breathing — now tell about seizures. On the seventh day of this vigil, his medical status was labeled critical.

Watching the life of this "first" from my seat in the national gallery, I think about the moment Monday when a reporter asked the nurse whether Dr. Clark thought of himself as a medical pioneer. The nurse said no. What her patient thought about was the daily business of his recovery. "He talks about, 'Am I going to sit up today?'"

I suppose this wasn't his theme to be introspective. Maybe it's not ours, either. We have before us a dying man who was saved, at least for a while. We have before us another, yet another, breakthrough for medical technology. Maybe it's the time for a news-magazine covers, toasts to life and huzzahs.

Yet I think we do need a moment for reflection. Once again we are surprised, caught unaware by some medical advance on our lives. A technology known only to the readers of medical journals jumps out at us from headlines. It happened before when the first kidney was transplanted, the first test-tube baby was born, and now as the first artificial heart is implanted.

Surprise seems to be a fallout of our own successful marketplace medicine. Our doctors are trained to respond to the orders of need, our scientists to manufacture cures. We receive handsome gifts of progress for our health-shelf.

Yet often the gifts come with strings attached. They come from decisions that should have been made in public, not just announced to the public. They come without warning tags about hidden costs.

Daniel Callahan, director of the Hastings Center Institute of Society, Ethics and Life Sciences, where they deal in trade-offs and hard choices, has studied each catalog of technologies and possibilities with a careful eye. "The fundamental philosophical issue," he says, "is just how far do we want to go in extending and improving life?"

There are costs even in cures. "The current crisis over Social Security," Callahan points out, "is one more consequence of the triumph of medical progress."

We have to concern ourselves with the allocation of resources. Not just money, but human as well. The early trade-offs of technology were simple. Vaccinations and antibiotics cost little and helped millions. Today, expensive advances help fewer people and add fewer years to the human life span. We haven't devised a way to think about such high-ticket items as artificial hearts. How do we determine the relative costs and value of research that went into this device, rather than to, say, money for child nutrition or basic prenatal care? How do we determine the relative cost and value of dealing with heart disease versus lung disease?

It's hard to decide what sicknesses deserve priority. It's even harder to decide what people deserve priority. Today we pay for any American who needs kidney dialysis to stay alive; $1.6 billion a year for 70,000 Americans. This way, we avoid choosing among kidney victims. But it's a blank check.

On what basis will we distribute scarce high-tech medicine? Will a couple like Roger and Judith Carr get a test-tube baby only if they can afford the treatment? Will a girl like Jamie Fliske get a liver only if her parents are savvy enough to lobby medical meetings and talk shows? Will a man like Barney Clark get an artificial heart only if he has "a stable home situation" with a "reliable spouse" as well as a "stable psychological mechanism?"

"The traditional ethic of medicine," says Callahan, "is that you do everything possible for the patient. Doctors are not in the policy business of allocating medical research nationwide. We want doctors who are worried about us, doctors who are our advocates."

Dr. Clark was not introspective in his sick bed. None of us are. We don't chew over moral dilemmas when we're sick. We want to know, "Am I going to sit up today? We want a cure and damn the costs."

It would be unreasonable, unhealthy, to turn off medical technology. Yet we need a public dialogue, a sense that we are, in fact, participating in the ethical decisions, the moral choices, the social trade-offs. We don't need any more surprises.

CIA's Casey getting U.S. up to ears in Central America

what price for victory?

WASHINGTON—William Casey is a spy out of the good old days, when agents were parachuted behind enemy lines or rowed ashore at night on rocky coasts.

"Never mind that Casey's World War II daring was mostly confined to a desk.

Or that, too often, the agents were caught on the spot.

What worries experts in and out of Congress is that Casey's nostalgia for those free-wheeling days is rapidly getting the Central Intelligence Agency into trouble in Central America.

"Nobody really knows what Casey is doing in Nicaragua," said a man close to the Senate Intelligence Committee. "But there is fear that he's got the agency out of control."

You can't blame the senators for lacking full-blown confidence in Casey.

At 69, he is a brusque, arrogant man with deep-set eyes, thick glasses, and a gravelly voice in which he mutters.

One Cabinet officer joked that the CIA wouldn't need code for Casey because "even we can't understand him."

Except for a couple of honorary presidential commissions, Casey hadn't been mixed up in real spookery for 35 years. He'd made a fortune as a New York tax lawyer, writing such profitable books as "How To Build and Preserve Executive Wealth."

There was only one solid reason to make Casey the head of the CIA—a reward for being Ronald Reagan's 1980 campaign manager. One Republican close to Reagan's appointive process said, "It's a job that will keep Casey out of sight."

Not true. Casey stumbled onto the front pages by naming Max Hugel, a brassy politician, as his No. 2 man at the agency.

Hugel quit. But his old, questionable business deals kept the CIA director in the news.

Then in April, Admin. Bobby Inman resigned as Casey's deputy. Inman was the most respected pro in U.S. intelligence. There is suspicion that he was the governor who kept Casey from going on any wild CIA joyrides.

Now Casey is on the verge of hitting the headlines again, and not in a fashion that will make Reagan happy.

Casey's new notoriety springs from his covert operations in Central America, which Casey has expanded into the most full-blown U.S. paramilitary action since the early days of Vietnam.

The plot was hatched a year ago by Casey, then Secretary of State Alexander Haig, and Haig's assistant Tom Enders, who had won his spurs in 1970 as the deputy chief in Phnom Penh coordinating the secret bombing of Cambodia.

Reagan reportedly signed on to the Central American caper last December.

Ostensibly, the scheme would focus on rebels in El Salvador. But under Casey, the plan has blown into a full-fledged paramilitary effort to overthrow the Sandinista government of Nicaragua.

The Sandinistas are not exactly right-wing generals with whom the Reagan team is comfortable.

So the CIA has put anywhere from 50 to 150 agents—depending on whose estimates you believe—into overthrowing Honduras to set up training camps for 10,000 anti-Sandinista exiles and to direct hit-and-run jaunts across the Nicaraguan border.

Sounds like a Tinker-Toy war, right? So did the CIA's covert-caper in Vietnam in the early 1960s.

For more Vietnam echoes, the Honduran operation is reportedly counterbalanced by U.S. Ambassador John Negroponte, who worked for Enders and Henry Kissinger in Southeast Asia during the Vietnam War.

"The Reagan people picked Negroponte to be the boss of the paramilitary deal," said a Washington source. "What they're looking for now is a popular figure to lead the counterrevolution in Nicaragua."

So what's the danger in this banana republic come-opera? For one worry, there's the chance Nicaragua could strike at CIA-led forces in Honduras, sucking the United States into an ugly jungle war.

"Casey may be getting out of control on this one," said a senatorial aide close to the intelligence scene. "People are starting to call it Reagan's Bay of Pigs."

That may be hyperbole, but such skeptics as Sens. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., and Joe Biden, D-Dele., have been upset by stories in Newsweek and The New York Times about the CIA's "secret war." They've pressed Intelligence Committee Chairman Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., to get the agency's version before Congress adjourns.

That means finding Bill Casey, of course. The jowly chief spook has been making trips to Tegucigalpa, the capital of Honduras, to check out his troops.

Yes sir, for Casey it's just like the glory days of World War II—a cloak- and-dagger adventure that he can operate from behind a desk.

If Casey's reckless behavior is getting the United States hip deep in a Central American Big Muddy, the Senate will have to blow the whistle.

Maybe it's time for Reagan to send his mumbling master spy back to Wall Street, where Casey can pick losers without endangering U.S. lives and prestige. Bill Casey's fantasies could start a real war.

Congress may force Reagan to cut defense spending

By HELEN THOMAS
United Press International

WASHINGTON—President Reagan feels he has lost a battle but not the war in the House defeat of funding for the MX missile.

Having noted that the vote took place on Dec. 7, the 41st anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor, Reagan has described the 245-176 vote as "a slap in the face."

But he believes with an all-out effort he can salvage the program in the Senate.

"No one is betting on that. Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., is leading the fight against the MX, saying that for all of the deliberation, the "dense pack" basing mode for the MX does not meet "even its basic objective of survivability."

Careful, pragmatic and thoughtful decision-making is required if we are to maintain a strong defense posture," he said. "Our economy has no room for a Pentagon wish list."

Reagan suffered his most serious setback to date on defense spending. After the vote, he charged the House had made a "grave mistake" and called on the Senate "to reverse this grievous error."

In a now familiar blitz style, Reagan lobbied heavily up to the last minute for victory on a bill that provided $368 million to start production of the MX. But both he and his aides knew it was an uphill battle.

Reagan hoped that the congressmen on the fence would do as they have done most of the time: how to an appeal from the commander in chief, who points out that he is privy to more secret information than they are about the enemy.

In the past few days, the administration also warned that the Soviets had tested a new light missile. But the arguments that without MX the nation would be without an adequate deterrent did not sell.

Reagan also insisted failure to pass the package would give the Soviets more reason to stall at the nuclear arms negotiating table in Geneva.

"I had hoped that most of the members in the House had awakened to the threat facing the United States," Reagan said. "That hope was apparently unfounded."

White House aides attribute the defeat to a misunderstanding about the dense pack basing mode, which would place 100 missiles in closely spaced silos near Cheyenne, Wyo.

But more telling apparently was the money involved and the growing apprehension that Reagan will heavily slash into the budgets of social programs while leaving intact the proposed trillion dollar defense spending over the next five years.

NCAA hides win's lie

I believe the article on the "interception" which appeared in Sunday's paper missed the point.

The all-sewing television did prove that officials are human. That is true.

However all-sewing television displayed some things even more important: the true character of college football—its wastefulness, its philosophy—the hypocrisy of the NCAA.

The defensive back dropped the ball. There is no question. However he jumped up with the ball in hand—displaying it as a trophy of his prowess—feigning an interception.

The officials deceived the team. They had been blocked out from the action.

The defensive back knew it was a lie, the coach knew it was a lie, many of his teammates knew it was a lie. No one said a word, take the victory. The win is the important thing. Try a lie, okay. But win!

"Even the TV commentators accepted it with no reservation about the hollowness of the 'victory.'"

Is this the NCAA's Field of Honor? By whatever name, it is disgusting. JOHN COOLIDGE Halley

Notes from the past

Old news isn't always good news, but sometimes it's quite interesting.

In 1973, the Idaho Statesman reproduced some earlier news releases from 1873 and 1923:

• Announcing the death of ex-Empress Napoleon, near London

• Jan. 3, creating "intense excitement among the Bonapartists;" and

• Reporting on an explosion caused when a lady in church, "with her head bowed as if in pious thought," pressed "too heavily on her cushion bustle; no rumormongers but a stern fact."

Under "In The Statesman, 1923," three items report:

• That 1,000 people in Twin Falls "crowded into a theater," with hundreds turned away, to attend a series of three lectures in the interests of the Ku Klux Klan, presented by Rev. L.E. Burger of Walla Walla, Wash. Klansmen "in hoods and gowns" occupied seats on the stage and were served by ushers. Mounted Klansmen in full dress regalia paraded the three lectures on several occasions, advertising the lectures.

• That item certainly presents the KKK as a much different kind of body than that being represented to the public today!

• Another not so old clipping is of interest today in light of the escalating income tax. Back in the 1950s it was reported that upon the death of the beloved Democrat Alben Barkley, his estate was assessed $400,000 in back taxes because he had failed to file returns during the major times he held public office.

The Barclay omission made only a few lines on the back pages of publications printing the bit of news at all. Assuredly, old news is not always good news either.

Christmas' meaning

My attention to your article "Jesus: an enduring 'misfit,'" written by the late Louis Cassels and reprinted in the Times-News of Magic Valley, page B-6, Dec. 6, it is disrespectful to any Christian.

It is hard to believe you would reprint such literature in a paper like the Times-News. The writer had no knowledge of the Bible truth, or he would not have written such an article. It is a real insult to the meaning of a true Christmas to any American citizen who enjoys life as a Christian in our beautiful United States of America.

I feel as a fair trade, you should write our opinion in "Other Views." With joy I write "The real meaning of Christmas."

The angels heralded the good news of Jesus's birth by singing Glory to God in the highest, and on earth, peace, good will toward men.

As the angel told the shepherds, fear not for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people; for unto you is born this day in the city of David, a savior which is Christ the Lord. The star guided the wise men to the child, King Jesus.

Christ, the son of God, was to come forth as a babe, as was promised. (Matthew 1: 20-23)

His life: As a child he was subject to his parents. As an adult, he did the work of his Father in Heaven, healing the sick, opening the eyes of the blind, causing the dead to hear. His work was finished at Calvary. (John 19:30)

His resurrection triumph is recorded many times in the scriptures. One comes to mind, Luke 24: 5-6.

He now is sitting on the right hand of God. (Colossians 3: 1)

This makes Christmas a joy for both young and old, as it is the real meaning of Christmas truth. One thing is sure, truth will always win!

Heart attack claims Leon Jaworski

Leon Jaworski dies at 77

WIMBERLY, Texas (UPI) — Former Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski died Thursday afternoon, a spokesman for the Hays County sheriff's office said.

He was 77.

"My understanding is he had a heart attack out in the field cutting wood, which is what he loved to do. He was in the country, happy, he was up at the ranch like he loved to be," said attorney Tom McDade, a member of Jaworski's law firm in Houston.

Earlier this year Jaworski underwent exploratory surgery for a liver ailment which he later disclosed was malignant, but he underwent treatment for it and the problem appeared to be under control, McDade said.

Jaworski was fully retired from active practice from the firm of Fulbright-Jaworski, one of the largest in the country, McDade said.

His relationship with the firm was what lawyers call "of counsel," which meant he had an office in the firm and was available for consultation but carried no regular client load.

"He apparently had a massive heart attack out in the woods," said Justice of the Peace Sonny Gold who went to the scene.

"He was out with his ranch foreman Jon Clayton and they were cutting wood. Jon said he just keeled over. Jon tried to give him CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation), but he couldn't help him. One of them was sawing and one was loading. I don't know which."

Gold said he ruled death was from natural causes. He said he did not order an autopsy.

Gold said he was called to the ranch about 3:30 p.m. MST.

He said the body was taken to a funeral home in San Marcos, about 15 miles southeast of Wimberly, and would be taken to Houston later.

Jaworski's ranch, called the Circle J, is between Wimberly and Kyle, in the central Texas Hill Country. Gold said Jaworski and Clayton were about 2 miles from the ranch house when Jaworski died.

"It was his favorite place to go," Gold said of the ranch.

He said Clayton had gone to the ranch house to console Mrs. Jaworski.

Reagan asking for MX alternatives

By ROBERT SHEPARD
United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, trying to salvage funds for the MX missile, said Wednesday he is willing to "hear other proposals" on basing methods in addition to the controversial "dense pack."

But White House officials quickly said the president was not abandoning the dense pack concept.

Much of the opposition to the MX stems from Reagan's proposal to deploy 100 of the 10-warhead nuclear missiles in closely spaced superhardened silos in Wyoming. The House cut production funds for the missile Tuesday and the Senate takes up the matter next week.

Reagan's statement, in a 10-minute telephone call to NBC correspondent Chris Wallace, was the first signal Reagan is willing to compromise on the issue.

Reagan told Wallace he was "willing to be fair, to hear other proposals. If someone comes up with something better, that's fine." He then quoted Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger as saying, "Of all the basing methods studied, this one had the least wars."

A White House official said a short time later, "He's not backing off dense pack. He's still saying dense pack is the best." But the official added, "There's plenty of room for further discussion."

The House voted 245-176 to cut $388 million in MX production funds from the $23.5 billion 1983 defense appropriations bill. Reagan hopes the Senate will vote to restore the funds when it takes up the defense bill next week.

Reagan told Wallace in his unusual call to a reporter that parts of the House debate were "very dishonest" and called the outcome of the House vote "a very tragic mistake."

Reagan's remarks prepared for delivery later to a dinner for Republican senators at the Library of Congress. Reagan said the House vote sent the wrong signal to the new Soviet leadership.

"Now, I won't take this opportunity to twist any arms but I must tell you when we can look each other in the eye, the MX system is needed," Reagan told the GOP senators.

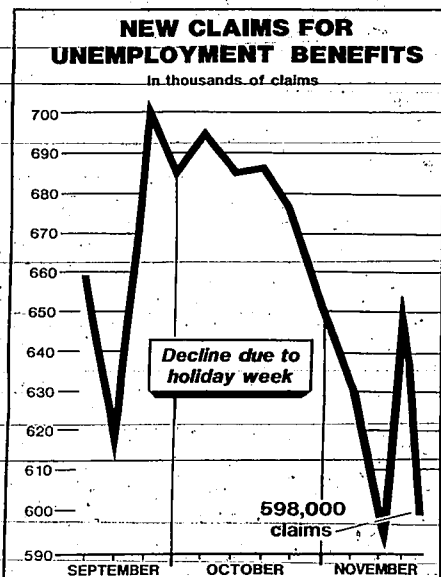

"If we expect the Soviets to take our arms control proposals seriously, we must act seriously with the choices we make. The defeat of the Peacekeeper is the wrong message at the 'wrong time to the new Soviet leadership.'"

Earlier, Assistant Senate Republican leader Ted Stevens predicted the Senate will vote to restore MX production money. But Stevens said that even if this happens, "we'll have a difficult time" gaining approval from all House-Senate conference committee during the lame-duck Congress.

The Senate takes up the appropriations bill next week, with the post-election session scheduled to adjourn Friday. Administration supporters will move to restore the MX money.

The administration's case suffered a setback Wednesday when Chairman John Vessely of the Joint Chiefs of Staff told the Senate Armed Services Committee three of the five members of his panel opposed Reagan's dense pack plan.

Holiday holds down jobless claims

WASHINGTON (UPI) — About 598,000 Americans filed initial claims for jobless benefits in the shortened Thanksgiving week, 56,000 fewer than a week earlier, the Labor Department reported Thursday.

The week ended Nov. 27 was the third in a four-week period in which first-time claims dropped. The seasonally adjusted figure of 598,000 claims was down from the previous week's 654,000.

Unemployment offices were closed at least one day Thanksgiving week, which contributed to the lower number.

Despite the 56,000 decline, the total was still at the same 598,000 level it was during the survey week that helped generate the November national unemployment rate of 10.8 percent, a new post-Depression record.

The overall rate reported Dec. 3 showed 12 million American workers were unable to find jobs, less than half of whom are covered by jobless insurance and thus included in the weekly claims figure.

The seasonally adjusted state unemployment insurance figure also does not include another 6,300 federal employees and newly discharged veterans who also applied for jobless pay for the first time during Thanksgiving week.

Department officials said most of the more than 6 million people not covered by unemployment insurance are apparently living with their families and are being supported by spouses or relatives who still had jobs.

The number of people already receiving benefits for the week ended Nov. 20 dropped by 39,800 to 3.9 million, the report said. That brought the rate of unemployment among people eligible for benefits to 4.4 percent, from 4.8 percent a week earlier.

That figure also does not include another 464,700 federal employees, people newly discharged from the armed forces, railroad workers and those receiving extended benefits.

There were 339,800 workers claiming certain extended benefits that were available in 14 states, down from 355,700 the previous week, the report showed.

The 10 states with the highest unemployment rate among people covered by benefits were led by Michigan at 8 percent, replacing long-time leader West Virginia that reported an insured unemployment rate of 7.2 percent for the week ended Nov. 20.

Other states with high rates were Pennsylvania, 6.8 percent; Oregon, 6.6 percent; Alaska, 6.5 percent; Idaho, 6.2 percent; Washington, 6.2 percent; Ohio, 5.8 percent; Illinois, 5.4 percent and Mississippi 5.3 percent.

The national unemployment rate is calculated from a survey taken during the week that includes the 12th of the month and often reflects the same trends that influence the weekly initial claims figures.

Gas tax increase faces conservative filibuster

By MARY BETH FRANKLIN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Several conservative Republican senators are prepared to "tie up debate indefinitely" when the Senate takes up President Reagan's proposed nickel-a-gallon gasoline tax increase, an aide said Thursday.

The Senate Finance Committee approved the revenue package on a 15-4 vote Wednesday night, including a 6-cent increase in gasoline taxes to 9 cents a gallon beginning next April 1.

The full Senate had hoped to start debating the tax proposal Thursday, but a filibuster threat by Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., prevented Senate leaders from taking it up until Friday at the earliest, and possibly next week.

The tax hike, approved by the House earlier in the week, would raise about $5.5 billion a year to fund needed highway, bridge and mass transit repairs. The administration says the repair projects would create 320,000 jobs, mainly for skilled construction workers.

Paul Lee, a Nickles aide, said the senator strongly opposes the proposal and is prepared "to tie it up indefinitely."

Once it is brought to the floor, Lee said, the senator and some of his conservative colleagues "have a good couple hundred of amendments to offer."

House Democrats, meanwhile, put final touches on an additional $5.4 billion program to create 800,000 job slots in public works projects including highways and bridges, rural water and waste systems and public housing.

Speaker Thomas O'Neill said the House Appropriations Committee will spell out the details Friday.

Earlier this week, Senate Democrats proposed a $9.7 billion program to create 600,000 jobs through highway and bridge construction, rehabilitation of sewer and water distribution, "pothole filling and 'heat raking' programs in areas of high unemployment.

Even without the filibuster threat, the legislation faces problems, including controversies over sharp tax increases for heavy trucks.

Auto workers settle with Chrysler

By MICHELINE MAYNARD
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT — Bargainers for the United Auto Workers in the United States and Canada reached agreement with Chrysler Corp. Thursday on wage and benefit provisions of new pacts covering 43,000 U.S. workers and 9,600 striking Canadians.

UAW President Douglas Fraser announced the U.S. settlement in Detroit late in the afternoon following his return from Toronto where he and UAW Canadian Director Robert White announced the Canadian settlement.

In both countries, however, "a few pieces" of non-economic issues remain to be worked out, Fraser said.

Bargainers in the United States planned to work late in the night on discussions of absentee disciplinary action — an issue which helped defeat a contract agreement earlier this fall.

A union spokesman said he expected a full settlement in both countries on Friday.

Fraser would not reveal details of the settlement until workers are briefed.

However, union sources indicated the agreements are for one year each and include a pay raise of about $1 an hour for U.S. and Canadian workers.

Workers in both countries also will see their cost-of-living allowances restored, but the amount in Canada will be larger because of higher inflation rates.

The U.S. settlement must be presented to the union's Chrysler Council in Dearborn, Mich., Saturday for approval before it goes to rank-and-file. The Canadian pact, however, will be presented directly to a striking workers' vote for ratification.

If they approve it, their strike, which started Nov. 5, will end Monday.

Chrysler Vice President for Labor Relations Thomas Miner said 4,600 workers laid off in the U.S. due to the Canadian strike would return to work "almost immediately" after the pact is ratified.

Fraser said the U.S. settlement is "substantially better than the original agreement," referring to a pact rejected two months ago. "That will become obvious to (workers) after they see it."

Hole moves to eat house

MORRISTOWN, Tenn. (UPI) — State officials said Thursday Lloyd Coblack will have to pay to plug a sinkhole that is gobbling up his backyard and threatening to consume his home, but Coblack said he cannot afford the expense.

"I can't hardly afford to buy groceries. Let alone hiring a crane in to dig that hole out," Coblack said.

"I am concerned about what we're going to do," he said. "We've just put it in God's hands. There are some people who've got a fund started, and the shop (M&M Saw Co., where he works) is fixing to get in on it."

MARTIN FELDSTEIN
— Won't make forecast

Feldstein still mum on plans

By ROBERT MACKAY
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Under pressure from Congress, President Reagan's new chief economic adviser Thursday testified before the Joint Economic Committee. But he refused to make economic forecasts or to take a stand on most economic issues.

"Pretty soon, not knowing the facts or not giving your position is not going to be satisfactory to this committee," Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., warned Martin Feldstein toward the end of the hearing.

Feldstein earlier had refused to appear before the Joint Economic Committee, citing his lack of Senate confirmation, even though he held a recess appointment that would expire at the end of 1983.

He was confirmed late Wednesday. But irked Senate Democrats held up the vote until Feldstein agreed to testify Thursday to the committee.

During his testimony, Feldstein refused to predict when an economic recovery would begin, whether unemployment will increase, how he should act to reduce unemployment, whether he supports a proposal to tax employer-paid health benefits or how much money should be spent on national defense.

About the only position Feldstein took was against public works jobs programs, such as those proposed recently by congressional Democrats as a means to reduce unemployment. He said they would be "counterproductive" and "lead to larger budget deficits."

But when it's efficient to come before us and suggest people should stay the course," Sarbanes told him. Feldstein said the administration is now considering several different options for reducing the unemployment rate, but he refused to discuss them since they are still under White House consideration.

"Only an economic recovery" can reduce the basic unemployment problem, he said, adding, "the favorable signs of a coming economic recovery are getting stronger all the time." Sarbanes noted that in Feldstein's September confirmation hearing, when the unemployment rate was 9.8 percent, Feldstein said the economy was "about ready to recover."

"In less than three months, the unemployment rate grew from 9.8 to 10.8 percent and you're essentially telling us the same thing."

"Of course I'm disappointed," Feldstein replied.

"When are these disappointments and assertions going to translate into action that will 'do something'?" Sarbanes asked.

"I think it would be wrong to stimulate the economy at a time when there is very widespread professional agreement that a recovery is about to occur," Feldstein said.

Panel wants limit on fees

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Rules Committee approved a resolution Thursday to keep a $9,000 limit on senators' outside income from taking effect Jan. 1.

There presently is no limit on such income.

Unless the Senate takes immediate action, however, a law takes effect at the start of the new year capping members' outside income at $9,000, or 15 percent of their $60,662 salary.

Members of the House are limited to $10,000, or 30 percent of their salary.

The rules panel approved the resolution 5-2. If passed by the Senate, it would be binding on senators. No House action or presidential signature would be required.

Last year, the most money in speaking fees was earned by Senate Banking Committee chairman Jake Garn, R-Utah, who collected $78,000 and donated $30,000 of it to charity.

Finance Committee chairman Bob Dole, R-Kan., got $66,830, giving $30,500 to charity. Senate Republican leader Howard Baker got $57,000, of which $15,000 went to charity.

Baker told the rules committee Thursday he has "a strong feeling" outside earnings should not be limited to 15 percent. Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., said there were plans to fight for a limit on the Senate floor.

Hansen trying to trace utility bond

BOISE (UPI) — Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, said Thursday he is having trouble finding out who holds bonds for the troubled Washington Public Power Supply System nuclear projects and fears investors may fall prey to unscrupulous underwriters trying to unload the certificates.

Hansen said he has asked major financial institutions to tell him the names of their WPPSS bond portfolios, and he has requested a congressional investigation into the bond issue and other problems surrounding the beleaguered Northwest power system.

Hansen, however, said he had no evidence that wrongdoing is taking place regarding current offerings of WPPSS bonds. He said that he only has "indications" that investors could be taken advantage of.

"I'm not making any absolute accusations," he said.

"Whatever the reason, all indications are that there is a serious problem with the issuance and pricing of these (WPPSS) bonds," Hansen said. "Until this matter is cleared up, prudent investors will be well-advised to consider carefully before purchasing these securities."

Hansen said several underwriters have acknowledged that they hold WPPSS bonds, but that they have refused to reveal to him the extent of their holdings.

"Their unwillingness makes it appear that they are afraid someone might think that their retention of the bonds is improper," Hansen said.

However, two Idaho stock brokers said the financial problems surrounding WPPSS are common knowledge.

Higher education faces fund shortage

By STEVEN CHRISTENSEN
United Press International

BOISE — Idaho's colleges and universities face serious cuts in course offerings and enrollment over the next five years, even if the Legislature increases higher-education funding by millions of dollars, says a report prepared for the state Board of Education.

The study, presented to board members Thursday by University of Idaho Business College Dean Charles McQuillen, predicted a deepening gap between education needs and available funding in the coming half-decade.

For all board-controlled programs except the public school system, that rift could equal $32.6 million by 1987, the report said. It said available dollars that year should total $130.1 million, while funding requirements are projected at $162.7 million.

The research forecast a gap of about $5 million for the current fiscal year which ends June 30.

If education revenues from tax sources are hiked by an additional $17.6 million in 1987 and student fees are raised to bring in another $6.9 million, there would still be a shortfall of about $8.1 million that year, McQuillen said.

After hearing the presentation, the board voted unanimously to ask the Legislature and governor to find "additional funds from tax revenue sources" to support higher education and other related programs.

The report recommended the board initiate immediate studies of ways to bring program costs into line with available monies. Some areas suggested for research included:

- Reducing annual enrollment at colleges and other board agencies by up to 3,000 full-time students.
- Trimming research activities and graduate programs.
- Eliminating all financial support for remedial college courses.
- Cutting back on support for intercollegiate athletics.

athletics.

— Consolidating duplicative courses offered at universities.

If lawmakers do not squarely face the problem of finding additional funds for higher education, McQuillen predicted a significant deterioration in the quality of state university programs over the next several years.

"The question we should be asking ourselves now is how do we systematically and sensibly distribute the investment we have in higher education in Idaho, because that is the question we will be facing," said the dean — who replaces Milton Small, Jan. 1 as executive director of the education board.

In addition to cuts in academic programs, McQuillen noted the physical condition of campuses — buildings, landscaping and support systems — will continue to decline unless new monies are found. The board resolution said deteriorating economic conditions in Idaho have cut funds for education — especially at the college level — by "an alarming degree."

Racists welcome attack

HAYDEN LAKE, Idaho (UPI) — Richard Butler, pastor of the white-supremacist Aryan Nations Church in Hayden Lake, said Thursday a plan by the Idaho Human Rights Commission to combat a purported influx of racists — merely will help to "wake up our people."

Butler said white Americans have been slow to realize a "race war" is going on around them — and proposals such as that from the Human Rights commission are "a necessary evil to openly bring this race war to its conclusion."

Agency Director Marilyn Shuler said Wednesday the commission would seek help from the Legislature in countering an influx of white supremacists in Idaho — a trend the panel says is giving the state a reputation as "a haven for racists and bigots."

The commission has asked its staff to seek sponsors for a bill designed to allow authorities to impose criminal penalties on people who commit acts of "malicious harassment," such as cross burnings, she said.

But Butler said already planned is a second "world meeting" of the Aryans and Ku Klux Klan in Hayden Lake July 9-10 and, just like last year, a cross will be burned as "part of a religious ceremony."

Kootenai County Prosecutor Glen Walker said he agrees with commission's sentiments "in principle," but would have to study the proposed law to see if it could be enforced.

Evans pushes extra session

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans will continue to encourage Republican legislators to consider their opposition to a special session before the end of the year so the state's budget problems can be addressed, the chief executive said Thursday.

Evans told the board of the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry that options for dealing with the revenue shortfall will be "severely limited" if he and lawmakers wait until 1983 to address them.

Revenue-producing measures, such as hikes in the income and sales taxes for this fiscal year, change or repeal of adoption of the IRS code's accelerated depreciation schedules and loss carry-back benefits, all need to be addressed before Dec. 31, he said.

But GOP legislative leaders last week advised the governor that if he called a special session this year, those methods of dealing with the budget crisis probably would not clear the House and Senate.

"If that attitude continues to prevail until the end of the year, the variety of options presently available to us to respond to our revenue shortfall will be severely limited," Evans said.

Due to the economic slowdown, the state is facing a $70-million shortfall from the amount appropriated by the Legislature for the current fiscal year — about $395 million compared to the original $465 million appropriation.

Remaining alternatives for improving the financial picture after the first of the year involve budget cutting.

Trial under way for assailant of justice

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A federal judge testified Thursday he witnessed Newton Estes repeatedly slug U.S. Supreme Court Justice Byron White and that he was convinced the attack was serious.

Judge Monroe McKay of the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said he was walking toward his seat next to White's when he saw Estes strike the Justice "three or possibly four times." McKay was the first Justice Department witness in the assault trial of Estes, 57, Kayaville, Utah. The judge told the six-man, six-woman jury the blows that hit White on his head and neck "appeared to be very hard."

Estes has admitted he attacked White in Salt Lake City while the Justice was attending a July 15 Utah State Bar convention. But, his attorneys claim the case should not be tried before Federal Judge David Winder because it is "technically a civil assault" matter.

McKay identified Estes as the assailant and said he and other men attending the bar meeting quickly subdued the attacker. "I tried to restrain him and got my arms on him when the others arrived."

"We moved him away... but he struggled back in the direction of White and said, 'This busing and pornography—don't go. I had to struggle hard to hold him. He appeared to be very angry and very intent,'" McKay said.

Daredevil McPeak ends protest

Steve McPeak perched above Hoover Dam

HOVER DAM, Nev. (UPI) — Daredevil Steve McPeak, who had staged a three-day foreign aid protest on a cable 750 feet above the Colorado River, climbed "down" Thursday because of a rainstorm and was arrested by security officers.

"Steve McPeak voluntarily descended the cableway at 2:45 p.m.," said Bureau of Reclamation spokesman Julian Rhinehart.

Rhinehart said McPeak was taken to the North Las Vegas Jail and would be presented before a federal magistrate Friday on charges of trespassing and disorderly conduct.

Reports indicated he gave up the protest because of rains which soaked the gear he carried onto the cable suspended near Hoover Dam.

McPeak climbed onto the cable Tuesday to protest President Reagan's proposed $1.2 billion loan to Brazil. The highwire walker said the money should be spent at home to bolster the economy and help the needy. He vowed to remain on the perch until he could tell Reagan personally of the grievance.

Earlier Thursday, McPeak, 39, said, "I am not a nut trying to destroy a national monument."

"I want President Reagan to know I am serious... what I'm going to do is donate one hour of edited video tape to the highest bidder from my 15-hour library of all my past stunts. All proceeds will go to Social Security and needy senior citizens."

"Reagan is giving a $1.2 billion loan to Brazil and cutting Social Security by 10 percent making the elderly of America starve. That is not the American way. You don't give money away to Brazil when it's needed by our own citizens."

Share the spirit of the season.

South African raid kills nationalists

By ERIK VAN EES
United Press International

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — South African soldiers killed 30 black nationalist guerrillas and seven civilians in a raid into Lesotho to prevent terrorist actions at Christmas, the chief of the army said Thursday.

Gen. Constand Viljoen said his forces had orders to avoid killing Lesotho citizens and soldiers but five women and two children also were killed in the fighting in Maseru, the capital of Lesotho, an independent kingdom completely surrounded by South Africa.

Two leaders of the banned African National Congress — Tembani Hani, the anti-South African movements chief in Lesotho, and his deputy, Sekhoane Mathabathe — were apparent targets of the strike. Both their houses were attacked and burned but neither man was home, witnesses said.

At the United Nations, Lesotho requested an urgent meeting of the Security Council Thursday to condemn South Africa "daringly, cowardly and barbaric act."

Lesotho's Charge d'Affaires Ts'eliso Thame said in a message to the council that "this situation clearly constitutes a very serious threat to international peace and security."

Viljoen said the South African troops stormed the targets in residential suburbs of Maseru in the early hours. He said he "regretted" that five women and two children, who had been in houses with the guerrillas, had died in crossfire.

Viljoen said the defense force was aware of a gradual month-long buildup of ANC guerrillas in Maseru and claimed the ANC was planning "acts of terror" in South Africa over the Christmas period.

The army's "sole aim was to prevent deeds such as the bloodshed of the innocent, bombings, sabotage and other acts of terror."

In a message from neighboring Zambia to Zimbabwe's semi-official news agency Zina, the ANC rejected South African claims that a headquarters in Lesotho had been among the targets and promised retaliation for the raid.

"The utterly false claims put out that the residences of our people in the suburbs of Maseru where a military headquarters will not save the apartheid regime from the consequences of this cold-blooded massacre," the ANC said.

In Washington, Bishop Desmond Tutu, head of the South African Council of Churches, said he was "deeply appalled" at the incursion into black-ruled Lesotho by South African troops.

In London, the British government delivered a formal protest to the South African ambassador and appealed to all countries in the area to show restraint.

"We consider this a flagrant violation of Lesotho's sovereignty and greatly regret the loss of life," the British Foreign Office said.

Lesotho Radio said the attack lasted about an hour.

Ten bombs rip through San Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Ten powerful bombs rocked San Salvador Thursday, destroying five buses and four cargo trucks, officials said.

In another development, a Salvadoran judge said an appeal by three former national guardsmen to block their trial on charges of killing four U.S. churchwomen in 1980 was without merit.

Court officials say they will push to start the trial before Jan. 28, when President Reagan must certify to Congress that El Salvador is improving its human rights record.

Reagan also must certify progress was being made toward prosecuting the killers of the three nuns and a Catholic social worker, as well as toward those who assassinated two American land reform advisers a month later.

A police official said two men in a white sports car drove around San Salvador in the early afternoon planting bombs that blew up five public buses and four cargo trucks.

No injuries were reported in the blasts, the latest of a string of about 75 such bombings in the capital since a guerrilla offensive began in early October. About 300 vehicles have been destroyed nationwide in the campaign.

Cesar Augusto Canas, attorney for three of the five guardsmen arrested in the Dec. 2, 1980 slayings of the four U.S. churchwomen, entered the appeal Wednesday in the southeastern court of Zacatecoluca.

He said the trial should be blocked because of lack of evidence.

Bulgarians reported active in Italian espionage

By JACK R. PAYTON
United Press International

ROME — Bulgarian agents have carried out extensive espionage operations in Italy and have been involved in a massive arms and drug smuggling ring and the attempt to assassinate Pope John Paul II, Italian newspapers reported Thursday.

The newspaper reports, based on leaks from police and judicial investigators, came after television reports in the United States and Italy that Bulgarian intelligence agents orchestrated the attempt on the pope's life last year on behalf of the Soviet Union.

According to the reports published by two newspapers in Rome and Milan's Corriere della Sera, the espionage allegations grow out of testimony given by Luigi Scricciolo, an Italian labor union official arrested last February on spy charges.

Scricciolo, the reports said, gave investigating magistrates the names of four Bulgarian officials who had asked him to help them establish contact with Italy's Red Brigades terrorists.

In addition to the spying charges, Scricciolo also is accused of complicity in the Red Brigades kidnapping of U.S. Army General James I. Dozier, rescued by police in January 1981.

Three separate investigations are underway in Italy in which Bulgarian officials or in embassy employees have been implicated.

The first inquest, headed by magistrate Ilario Martella, concerns the attempt to kill the pope in St. Peter's Square May 13, 1981.

Turkish terrorist Mehmet Ali Agca is serving a life sentence in an Italian jail for shooting the pope and has told investigators at least three Bulgarians in Rome were his accomplices.

The second investigation, headed by magistrate Carlo Palermo, concerns a massive arms and drug smuggling operation uncovered last month.

Amerasians coming to U.S.

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Twenty-two children fathered by Americans during the war in Indochina will leave Vietnam this month, perhaps in time to spend Christmas with relatives they have never met, the U.S. Embassy said Thursday.

"That would be a Christmas miracle," the embassy spokesman said. "But it can happen. They can process them and put them on a flight."

The embassy spokesman said the 22 youths comprising the third group of Vietnamese-American children allowed to leave Vietnam will leave Ho Chi Minh City — formerly Saigon — on an Air France flight to Bangkok Dec. 23.

He said the embassy would streamline immigration procedures in an effort to rush the children to the United States in time for Christmas with their new families.

Cosmonauts to land after record mission

By STEVEN R. REED
United Press International

MOSCOW — Two Soviet cosmonauts will return to Earth Friday, having completed the longest manned orbital flight during which they grew their own vegetables and were visited by the world's second spacewoman.

The official Tass news agency reported Thursday that cosmonauts Anatoly Berezovoy and Valentin Lebedev will make a soft landing at an undisclosed site and, at an unspecified time.

Most missions however, touch down in Kazakhstan in central Asia.

Berezovoy and Lebedev completed 210 days in space Thursday. All but the first three hours after blast-off and the period of descent were spent aboard the 19.8-ton Salyut 7 space station.

The cosmonauts mapped the stars, surveyed and photographed the U.S.S.R. and Earth's oceans for mineral deposits, and grew vegetables in a hothouse.

The second woman in space, Svetlana Savitskaya, 34, orbited Earth with two male cosmonauts in the Soyuz T-7 capsule, which will now carry the cosmonauts home, and rendezvoused with Salyut 7 in August.

The Soyuz T-5 capsule which Berezovoy and Lebedev rode into orbit was returned to Earth by the visiting three-member Soviet crew.

The emphasis of the mission was more on man's ability to endure space for lengthy periods than on growing crystals or launching tiny communications satellites, though the cosmonauts did both.

The cosmonauts, both 40, were reported in good health throughout the mission, though there was an indication they might be weak from the effects of 7 months' weightlessness.

Mission chief Valery Ryumin was quoted in a news report as saying both men were expected to be able to walk normally within a few days.

China may be ready to enter space age

PEKING (UPI) — An American astronaut disclosed Thursday that Chinese scientists successfully sent animals into space and said there was nothing to stop China from becoming the third nation to launch manned space flights.

Col. Jack Louma, who commanded the third mission of the space shuttle Columbia in March, told a news conference that the Chinese sent two dogs, rats and fruitflies into space and returned them safely.

He said he and Col. Charles Fullerton, his partner on the Columbia, were shown film indicating the animals were placed in a suborbital path and returned to China's desert region.

The Chinese did not say when they conducted the flights.

"It is clear some time downstream they intend to be involved with manned space programs," Louma said.

He said it is difficult to predict when China will launch manned flights, a feat achieved only by the Soviet Union and the United States.

National goals, research and development and allocation of resources will be determining factors, but China has the capability, Louma said.

"They have clearly made good progress in the past," he said. "They are bright people and there is nothing to hinder them moving along as rapidly as they wish."

NATO group mulls post-Brezhnev era

By JIM ANDERSON
United Press International

BRUSSELS, Belgium — NATO foreign ministers, combining "firmness in policy and openness in approach," sought ways Thursday to improve East-West relations in the post-Brezhnev era.

The alliance once again expressed its determination to go ahead with the deployment in Western Europe late next year of 572 intermediate-range cruise and Pershing-2 missiles unless the Soviet Union agrees to dismantle 333 SS-20 missiles aimed at Europe.

Assistant Secretary of State-designate Richard Burt said allies continued to hope "that the moment will come when the Soviet Union realizes it can no longer disregard Western security concerns, and that it is in the Soviet interest to reach a negotiated solution."

The foreign ministers' meeting was the first since the death of Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev and his replacement as Communist Party general secretary last month by Yuri Andropov.

"It is only natural to expect that this event might influence the perspective of East-West relations and therefore should be taken into account by our meeting," said Danish Foreign Minister Uffe Ellemann-Jensen in formally opening the two-day session.

Saying that NATO's approach will be marked by "firmness in policy and openness in approach," Ellemann-Jensen added, "we call upon the Soviet Union to make the necessary contributions to improving confidence in international affairs. We will be very attentive in order to distinguish any new signals coming from the Soviet Union."

As the foreign ministers met, NATO's Special Consultative Group, set up to monitor arms control, reviewed the Geneva talks on the limitation of medium-range nuclear weapons.

NATO's "twin-track" decision to deploy the cruises and Pershing-2s while at the same time negotiating their elimination dates from 1979. The Geneva talks began little over a year ago, and recessed Nov. 30.

The SCG reaffirmed support for President Reagan's "zero option" at Geneva, calling for the elimination of such weapons on both sides. Burt, who chaired the group's meeting, later said, "all Soviet proposals to date have failed to meet the basic criterion of equality. They have had just one objective: to prevent U.S. deployments and thereby to leave the Soviet Union with a massive monopoly" of land-based, intermediate-range missiles.

Rejecting the zero-zero approach, the Soviet Union has instead called for a nuclear freeze at current levels and has insisted that British and French nuclear forces as well as U.S. aircraft in Europe be included in the Geneva talks.

The cruises and Pershing-2s will be based in West Germany, Britain, Italy, Belgium and the Netherlands over a three-year period beginning about one year from now.

Testimony supports prayer in schools

By ROCKY SCOTT
United Press International

OKLAHOMA CITY — A 13-year-old student testified Thursday he attended weekly prayer sessions at an Oklahoma public school the past two years because it gave him someone to talk with and made him "feel good."

"People come in and share experiences and give testimony and all kinds of different things," said Gary Savage, a witness for the defendants in the suit over religious activities at the Little Axe School 60 miles south of Oklahoma City.

"Everybody needs someone to come in and talk with," the slender blond youth said. "It kind of makes you feel good." The defense opened its case Thursday, and all said the weekly meetings served to advance religion. Cristina Stanciu, a Rumanian refugee who came to the United States three years ago, said she appeared at one of the weekly sessions earlier this year and told the students of religious oppression in her native country.

Bob Anderson, a Church of Christ minister, testified he felt the prayer sessions "would be a religious service" because they contained testimony and prayer.

In testimony Wednesday, Joann Bell, one of the plaintiffs, said Little Axe residents were so upset by her action that "they were ready to kill me." "I feel like we have been driven from the community," Mrs. Bell testified Wednesday in the fifth day of the federal court trial of the suit she and Lucille McCord filed in May 1981.

The plaintiffs ended their case Wednesday and the defendants were expected to open their presentation today. The suit seeks to halt weekly prayer sessions, Bible distribution and other religious activities at the school and to overturn the 1980 Oklahoma law that allows voluntary prayer in public schools.

Four school-board members named as defendants in the suit testified Wednesday they instituted the policy in November 1981 to protect the constitutional rights of students.

The policy allows school facilities to be used prior to the beginning of class for religious purposes.

Mrs. Bell said she was threatened often after the American Civil Liberties Union filed the suit on behalf of her and Mrs. McCord.

"People, I think, were ready to kill me, if they could have gotten away with it," she said.

The petite, blonde mother of four told the court she was assaulted in May 1981 and her trailer home was burned four months later because of her opposition to weekly "sharing sessions" at the school.

A tourist views a cooling tower

TMI turning into a tourist attraction

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (UPI) — Officials at Three Mile Island, site of the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident, claim their efforts to turn the plant into a tourist attraction have brought more than 250,000 visitors to the crippled facility.

"There's a lot of mystique about the plant," William Gross, head of the plant's community relations division, said.

"There's a curiosity factor because people have read and seen a great deal about it since the accident. It (the tour) is a real eye-opener for a lot of them," Gross said.

Since the plant was shut down in March 1979, more than a quarter-million curiosity seekers have gone to the southeastern Pennsylvania installation for a close-up of its dormant cooling towers and cylindrical concrete reactor buildings.

In contrast, about 150,000 people toured the plant or its visitors' center in the nine years prior to the accident.

Gross said the plant is located, a relatively short distance from other Pennsylvania "tourist" attractions, such as Hershey, Pennsylvania Dutch country, and Gettysburg, and many tourists who visit those places also go to Three Mile Island.

Madam can't stay, but must sell brothels

WINNEMUCCA, Nev. (UPI) — Sylvia Binder, the French madam of three brothels, has agreed to sell them for $2.5 million as part of her battle with immigration authorities to stay in the United States.

Mrs. Binder said she signed an agreement to sell the brothels to a California man she did not identify. She said she will turn herself over to immigration authorities in San Francisco next month.

"I want to present my new status now that I have divested myself of the three houses," she said Wednesday.

Although prostitution is legal under local option in some Nevada counties, the occupation is "portable activity" under immigration regulations that have been upheld by federal courts.

Attorney William McLaughlin said he will try to convince immigration officials that her status has changed since she is out of the business. But Bernard Shanks, director of the San Francisco office of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, said it will make no difference. He said the fact prostitution is legal in Winnemucca is irrelevant.

Bald eagles make comeback

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The bald eagle in northwestern Ontario appears to be making a comeback after years of low reproduction blamed on DDT insecticide contamination, an American zoologist reported Thursday.

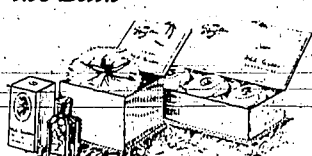

James W. Grier of North Dakota State University said the effect of a harmful byproduct of DDT on eagle reproduction appears to be diminishing much faster than originally predicted.

"It appears that the ban on DDT use was appropriate and effective," Grier said in a report published in the Dec. 17 issue of Science magazine, released Thursday.

The Environmental Protection Agency banned DDT in 1972 because of its environmental problems. The chemical DDE, which is a metabolic product of DDT, causes birds to produce eggs with abnormally thin shells.

To grace Blue Room Giant fir at White House

By HELENA THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON — The Christmas season opened at the White House Thursday when Nancy Reagan, wearing a bright green wool coat, accepted a giant fir tree for display in the Blue Room.

"It's beautiful," the first lady exclaimed, getting her first look at the 24-foot Fraser fir tree presented by Christmas tree growers Hal and Sarah Johnson of Lansing, N.C. She said it would be decorated with "old fashioned" ornaments, explaining "that's my favorite" style.

Mrs. Reagan will start trimming the tree Friday morning with the help of volunteers from Second Genesis, a drug treatment center for youth, who helped make the glittering ornaments, many of them paper cutouts.

The 25-year-old tree, delivered to the North Portico of the executive mansion, will have to be cut down to 18 1/2 feet to fit into the Blue Room.

The Johnsons, accompanied by their three children, also presented Mrs. Reagan with a smaller tree for the family quarters.

Five-year-old Ben Hill, the 1982 March of Dimes Poster Child from Paso Robles, Calif., was on hand, too, having just toured the White House in a wheelchair. Mrs. Reagan bent down to wish him "Merry Christmas."

The first lady, asked what she planned to give the president, only smiled. In the past, her gifts have tended toward the practical — such heavy-duty items as a log-splitter for use at their California ranch.

The Reagans will celebrate Christmas in the White House for the second year in a row, traveling to California on Dec. 27 to join friends in ringing in the New Year at Palm Springs.

The White House will be closed to visitors this weekend while it undergoes — a transformation — into Yuletide.

Mrs. Reagan will conduct a media tour of the state rooms on Monday to show off the decorations — including a 15th century crèche pres-

Santa's bills are Claus for alarm

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Want to do Santa a favor this year?

Don't leave cookies and milk. Leave cash.

His annual visit to the children of the world will cost $5.53 billion, a Madison-published consumer magazine says.

And that doesn't include batteries. "Everybody's Money," a publication of the Credit Union National Association, Inc., listed Santa's expenditures in its winter issue. The biggest cost, naturally, was $10 in toys for each of the world's 553 million children.

"Batteries are not included, so Santa is spared this expense," the magazine said.

Santa told the magazine that labor — $1.55 million for his 100 toy-making elves and $45,000 for temporary clerks to help process requests — make up the next biggest share of the expenses.

Then there are the incidentals: — A WATS telephone line to take incoming requests: $10,337.33.

Reindeer maintenance: $6,949.60 for a keeper; $1,806.75 for food and $2,000 for a reserve reindeer should flu strike any of the regulars on Christmas Eve.

Rhino makes a novel Christmas gift idea

CLIFTON, Texas (UPI) — Texas Safari Ranch this year would like to put a rhinoceros under your Christmas tree.

Mike Cloer, public relations director for the drive-through exotic animal park north of Waco in central Texas, placed an advertisement to that end in a Dallas newspaper. "Texas-sized Christmas gift."

One year old, 1,500 pound female rhinoceros, Weaned and ready to be given to the Texas rancher who has everything, $50 per pound on the hoof, plus $10 per mile one way delivery.

"Contact Texas Safari Ranch in Clifton, Texas at 817-776-4789, 817-772-6753, or 817-675-3658.

"Conditioned sale. Other exotics more reasonably priced are available."

Cloer said the condition to be placed on the sale would involve a careful examination of a person's ability to take care of a rhinoceros.

"We are not interested in someone who just wants to throw money away," he said. "We would check out completely whoever the buyer was."

The public relations man said the advertisement was legitimate, that numerous exotic animals are sold by the ranch each year, though not necessarily at Christmas.

The ranch has animals ranging in price from $100 up to the $30,000 for the rhino.

Postcard brings $50

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — It's approaching Christmas and Santa Claus is timely, but asking $50 for an early-1900s postcard bearing his likeness?

A Louisville woman who is a member of the Kentucky Post Card Club paid that for a single circa 1908 "hold-to-light" postcard Thursday at a sale of thousands of early 20th Century cards at the Masonic Widows and Orphans' Home.

The fact that the card, when held to a strong light, disclosed other figures is what made it especially valuable. Other colorful 1900-1910 era Santa postcards were selling occasionally for $20 each.

The Masonic home decided to dispose of dozens of albums of the cards, which were among collections of political buttons and memorabilia, blocks of postage stamps and old phonograph records that an 84-year-old woman brought with her to the rest home this fall.

The Kentucky Post Card Club helped classify, price and sell the estimated 5,000 cards in the collection.

Rita Giffen, Louisville, club president, said, "It was a big job, and virtually the entire club helped out. We tried to price them to be reasonable so they would sell."

Dr. Wade Hall, a Bellarmine College professor and collector, said, "It's exciting to look through so many cards. You're bound to find something you collect, whether it be steamboats, Santa Clauses, religious cards or whatever."

The Declo multi-purpose building is near completion

Declo gets new school facilities

DECLO — Students in Declo will have an extra Christmas present this year.

A new multi-purpose building and two additional classrooms are near completion and ready for use.

With a $131,000 insurance settlement from the fire that destroyed the old Declo school gym this summer, the district is building a free-standing, four-classroom complex for the elementary school, according to Norman Hurst, the Cassia County School superintendent.

District plant-facilities funds also were used in constructing the 4,000-square-foot building, Hurst says.

But only two of the classrooms will be finished and used after Christmas break, he says. The other two will be completed when money becomes available. The total project will cost about $160,000, Hurst says.

Declo residents also raised money and donated time, labor and materials for the construction of the multi-purpose building, Hurst says. The new facility is attached to the newer Declo High School gym.

Already used for elementary- and secondary-school activities, the multi-purpose building is approximately 2,800 square feet and cost about $15,000, not including the donated labor or materials.

"Very little" district money went into the building of the multi-purpose room, Hurst says.

The multi-purpose room still needs a few finishing touches, he says.

The district was remodeling the old gym for classroom use when it was leveled by the fire, Hurst says.

Although the district lost a valuable facility, "we are recovering from the fire very well," he says. In fact, part of the bricks from the old gym were used in the foyer connecting the newer gym to the multi-purpose room.

Most money from out of state

Right-to-work groups led PAC contributions

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Right-to-work groups funneled more than $5,700 into Magic Valley-area legislative campaigns this year — most of it from out-of-state sources.

Other political-action committees — PACs — contributing heavily to area campaigns including an Idaho business group, a teachers association and the AFL-CIO.

Statewide, the AFL-CIO PAC spent the most money of any political group, by distributing $95,781. In addition to legislative races, the unions contributed heavily to the campaigns of Gov. John Evans and Democratic attorney-general candidate J.D. Williams.

Other PACs had statewide expenditures of between $40,000 and $80,000. All told, more than 40 PACs participated in Idaho's 1982 election.

Those contribution figures were released this week by the Secretary of State's Office, following the filing deadline for post-general-election reports.

Locally, United for Idaho — a coalition of Idaho corporations and utilities — channeled the most PAC money into legislative campaigns. It spent about $6,000 here. Half of that sum went to the campaign of Eugene Durrell Moon, a Heyburn Republican who unsuccessfully challenged Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey.

Moon, whose campaign contributions will total about $10,000 when all the books are closed, also received about $2,800 from the right-to-work PAC. He received more PAC money — $5,800 — than any other area candidate.

Other "contenders" for that position were: Peavey, who received about $1,500 from PACs; GOP primary candidate Larry Olsen of Buhl, who received about $1,900 in PAC money; and independent candidate Chris. Talkington, the Twin Falls mayor, who received about $1,000.

"I have no problem with the money I received," Moon says. "It was from groups who advocate ideas that I support."

"My campaign was targeted at the businessman," he says, referring to the United for Idaho contributions. "I wanted to see deregulation of some of the duplicative rules that are tying up small businesses and are hurting our economy. They supported me in that effort."

He also notes that United for Idaho and the right-to-work PAC were seeking to oust Peavey, a member of Democratic leadership.

United for Idaho

In addition to its $3,000 to Moon, United for Idaho also supported four Magic Valley candidates for the House and a second candidate for the Senate. All were Republicans, and all except Moon triumphed over their Democratic opponents.

The other recipients — all receiving either $750 or $500 donations — were: Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Burley; Rep. Donna Scott, R-Twin Falls; Rep.

ROBERT ALLRED
Society reaps benefits

CSI professors believes

Humanities reinforce sense of community

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Federal funding for local history projects may not produce results as tangible as, say, an MX missile, acknowledges Robert Allred, the newly elected chairman of the Association for the Humanities in Idaho.

But the benefits reaped from such projects can be infinitely more valuable to society, he contends.

Money from the National Endowment for the Humanities is channeled by the association to "the finest corners of the state," says Allred, who has been a history professor at the College of Southern Idaho for 11 years.

Community projects in Kuna, Preston and Halley, as well as ones in Boise, Nampa and Twin Falls, have been supported by the association.

State support of humanities can help create "an awareness of community. That, in our judgment, is a very valuable thing," says Allred, who was first appointed to the association in 1979.

"It brings a sense of belonging, of community, of pride that no money can buy. And that strengthens independence and patriotism."

"That may be intangible. It may not be an MX missile you can physically touch. But we think it's invaluable."

Formed in the early 1970s, the Association for the Humanities in Idaho has the responsibility of administering money from federal sources to humanities projects in Idaho.

The 18-member board reviews applications for funding — from 45 to 60 a year — and disperses the grants. Projects later are reviewed to determine if the association's money was well-spent.

Allred, 42, of Twin Falls, recently was elected as the association chairman after serving a stint as vice chairman. A native of Halley, Allred received both his bachelor's and master's degrees from Utah State University in Logan and a Ph.D. from Brigham Young University in Provo. At CSI, he teaches European history, geography and German.

Allred first became familiar with the association when he served as a humanist consultant for filmmaker

Court reverses zoning ruling

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

BOISE — In deciding a Twin Falls zoning dispute, the Idaho Court of Appeals has handed city officials a decision that could strengthen zoning laws.

Essentially, the Court of Appeals ruled Wednesday that a so-called "grandfather right," — a term used to refer to properties that predate zoning ordinances and as such, are not necessarily required to conform with zoning laws — does not free a property owner from all zoning regulations.

The decision reversed Judge Theon Ward's 1980 Fifth District Court ruling over a dispute between Twin Falls zoning officials and Arlon Bastian of Twin Falls, over Bastian's grocery-store building at West Five Points.

The building, which has been used as a grocery store for nearly 30 years, now is occupied by Swenson's Market. Ward had sided with the property owner, after city officials had refused to grant Bastian's request for a building permit in 1979. Bastian planned to enclose an outdoor canopy in order to add space within the building. To do that, city officials wanted Bastian to comply with zoning regulations that required landscaping and off-street parking.

In the court case, Bastian argued that the building was immune from such requirements because its use as a grocery store predated adoption of the city's zoning ordinance.

Ward's ruling, issued on Feb. 11, 1980, agreed with that argument and ordered city officials to approve a building permit. City officials complied, and the remodeling work was completed.

But in a unanimous opinion, the three-member Court of Appeals has tightened the definition of a grandfather right. Such a right "simply protects the owner from abrupt termination of what had been a lawful condition or activity on the property. The protection does not extend beyond this purpose," the court said.

The opinion, written by Judge Don Burnett, added that a grandfather right does not give a property owner an automatic right to expand or enlarge an operation.

"If it follows that a non-conforming property enjoys no special immunity from reasonable regulations generally governing the enlargement of buildings," the court ruled.

Just what the opinion means to the Bastian property was unclear Thursday.

Susan Swanberg, the city's attorney, said she is studying whether Bastian would be required to make changes on the property in light of the court decision.

But the "most important part of the decision" is the language regarding the status of grandfather rights, Swanberg said.

"Judge Ward had, in his judgment, stated that a non-conforming use had special protections under the law and the city disagreed with that," she said.

"The city has been, at times, reluctant to impose firm regulations upon non-conforming uses, and I think the city, in regulating non-conforming uses, will feel a bit more confident about imposing reasonable regulations," Swanberg said.

Groups say wilderness proposals too large, too small

By KELLY EVERITT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Bureau of Land Management won't begin evaluation of comments on its proposal to designate several parcels of land in the Magic Valley area for wilderness status until the comment period ends on Jan. 11.

But based on the testimony at two hearings on the plans this week in Halley and Gooding, those interested in the BLM's eventual recommendations are split about evenly between those who want more land designated for wilderness status, and those who want less, according to Rob Helle, the BLM Shoshone District's recreational planner and the team leader on the wilderness-area studies.

The two hearings, the only ones that will be held on the proposals during the 60-day comment period, were attended by 26 persons, representing cattlemen's groups, government officials and environmentalists, he said.

Written comments still are being solicited by the district BLM office.

The district has proposed that an area south of Fairfield, known as the Gooding City of Rocks Area, and land northeast of Halley, known as the Little Wood River Area, be given wilderness status.

"Pretty much, the environmentalists want us to expand the areas, and the other groups want us to eliminate them," Helle said Thursday in an attempt to summarize the positions of those who offered testimony at the hearings.

He noted, for example, that the Black Canyon Cattlemen's Association had voted not to support the district's proposals, but did not submit an alternative plan.

One rancher who spoke urged the BLM not to recommend any areas for wilderness status, but he supported the district's recommendation to designate other parcels of land involved in the wilderness study as being "non-suitable" for wilderness status.

The hearings this week were part of a 15-year process, begun in 1976, to identify all lands that have wilderness characteristics, Helle said. In November 1980, the district identified a number of parcels as wilderness study areas.

"All the areas meet the basic criteria for wilderness status," Helle said. "The next phase, the one we're in now, is to recommend to the Department of the Interior those lands that should actually be given wilderness designations."

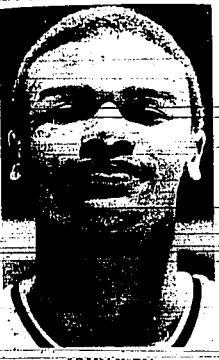

"What we've been charged to do is to look at other resource values and compare them with how they stack up against the need for wilderness status. One important factor we're looking at is if the lands can be maintained as wilderness in perpetuity, as required by the law."

He said the studies done by his team have attempted to analyze the impact of each alternative, from wilderness to multiple-use status, for the lands.

Helle said that among the conclusions of the studies to date, "we have found that the economic impacts are not significant in any of the alternatives under consideration."

Copies of the district's proposals are available from the district office in Shoshone.

JOHN KIRBY
Top rebounder should play

CSI faces toughies at home

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — After eight straight games, College Southern Idaho is hoping the home court is really worth everything it's cracked up to be.

After two weeks of playing teams from three states, however, the toughest part may be yet to come.

The answer to that speculation begins coming to light tonight with the opening round of the annual K and T Steel Tournament. At 6-3, CSI has the poorest record of the bunch.

Tonight's first round will find the tall Ricks Vikings taking on the Casper T-Birds at 7 while CSI plays the Western Nebraska in the nightcap. The two Idaho teams will change opponents — but keep the same starting times — Saturday, which also marks the end of CSI's pre-holiday schedule.

Western Nebraska has an 8-1 record, Casper is 7-0 and Ricks is off to a strong 11-0 start.

"I have the feeling the Idaho teams are going to be tested," said CSI Coach Dave Campbell.

Campbell also is aware that CSI is fighting history in the K and T. The host Golden Eagles have won it just twice — a fact that definitely flies in the face of most inter-regional basketball tradition.

"We will have to play extremely well offensively and defensively to win this one," said Campbell.

CSI hasn't shown much consistency and that has been complicated further by the slow recovery of Gerald Kennedy from a pre-season broken foot and a case of bronchitis that still has veteran Ron Beach in its grip. CSI sustained a further setback Tuesday night when 6-8 frosh John Kirby, emerging as the team's top rebounder and inside player, severely sprained an ankle in the win over Eastern Utah.

And, as Campbell points out, "you don't expect a lot of consistency in the first several games when most of your team is made up of freshmen."

That CSI is 6-3 and will go into the holidays with a winning record despite what happens in the K and T is more a credit to the team's determination than anything else.

"We haven't blown anybody out but the guys have played well enough to win in a lot of close games," Campbell said.

He credited second-half defense for the victories over the BYU University and Eastern Utah. "The guys really got after them and played hard on defense," Gerald had a great defensive game against Eastern Utah. He must have had five or six steals and got his hands on a lot of other passes. He was moving well for the first time since his injury."

The big puzzle has been the team's shooting, which was considered the strong point of the aggregation.

"We shot just 39 percent for the game against Eastern Utah and still won, so you know we had to be doing some thing defensively and on the boards," Campbell said. "We had that one spurt in the second half when Rohr and Kennedy hit a couple three pointers to get us out in front but overall we still didn't shoot well. Beach was two for 11 and (Devee) Haley was 0-8 and you know those guys are much better shooters than that."

Still, Campbell feels the team's shooting will improve, and is most pleased with the improvement the Eagles have shown on defense and rebounding.

"We've out-rebounded two of our last three opponents and we didn't out-rebound anyone in the first three games. That's the kind of improvement that won't come and go like shooting. I have to feel that once the guys get the rest of their game in

Bulldogs, Devils win; to settle tourney title

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

MURTAUGH — It was an evening where two teams had difficulty doing what one player easily accomplished during the first.

In Thursday night's opener of the Murtaugh Holiday Basketball Tournament, Kimberly's Earl Molyneux scored 39 points to spark the Bulldogs' 85-57 triumph over the Hansen Huskies.

The second game was turnover-filled and a brawl-marred before Murtaugh's Roy Nebeker hit five free throws in the final 1:02, enabling the Red Devils to outlast the Valley Vikings 44-39.

Kimberly and Murtaugh meet in tonight's championship game at approximately 8:30. Hansen will duel Valley for third place at 7.

Molyneux's dominance was such that, until the middle of the third quarter, his point total usually matched Hansen's.

Tantalizing the Huskies with an array of short jumpers and shifty layins, Molyneux sank 15 of 27 shots from the floor and nine of 10 from the free-throw line. Had some of Molyneux's shots taken more fortuitous spins, the 6-1 senior could have approached 50 points.

"Molyneux was unobtrusive in amassing his impressive total, never flashy but almost always effective. . . I didn't realize he had that many points," said Kimberly Coach Rich Thompson when informed of Molyneux's gaudy statistics. "If I had known, I might not have kept him in there late in the game."

Indeed, Molyneux did most of his scoring in the contest's earlier stages, notching 15 points in the first quarter, 12 more in the second and six quickies in the first two-and-a-half minutes of the third period.

"He's got good quickness and good hands," Thompson said of Molyneux. "He created a lot of turnovers. The way the game started out, we definitely needed that."

Thompson was referring to Hansen's spirited effort, which thrust the Huskies into a 10-7 lead.

"I would tend to say it was a case of Hansen's being really ready to go," Thompson said. "Maybe we weren't as 'up' as they were. It's a comparative type of thing."

Nobody, however, compared with Molyneux, who scored Kimberly's first nine points. He and Eric Wannan sank a basket and two free throws apiece, giving Kimberly a 15-11 edge.

Skip Miller and Steve Elman each scored to forge a 15-15 tie, but Molyneux struck for two instant baskets and Jeff Livingston scored to help Kimberly to a 21-17 advantage.

The Bulldogs then clinched their third victory in as many games by scoring the first 10 points of the second quarter, with Molyneux accounting for six of these points and twins Tim and Tom Ferrell getting a basket apiece. Hansen, which fell to 1-2, never came closer than 10 points of the Bulldogs afterward.

Tim Ferrell supplemented Molyneux's performance with 10 points. The 6-4 Elman also had 10 points, Hansen, gunning his effort with five blocked shots.

Whenever Murtaugh and Valley scored, they often did so in streaks, particularly in the second half. Valley took a 21-17 halftime lead, then, with a 22-21 advantage, reeled off six consecutive points to assume a 29-21 edge midway through the third quarter.

The Red Devils roared back with 16 points in a row, wiping out Valley's lead and grabbing a 37-29 cushion of their own. Murtaugh shared the scoring load equally during this sprint, as Nebeker tallied the first four. Tim Gott added the next four and Pratt Matthews got the final pair of baskets.

Valley finally quelled the Red Devils' uprising with 6-40 remaining to play, when Gary Taylor sank a jumper from the right baseline. Nebeker answered with a reverse layin.

Then the streaks returned. Valley scored eight in a row, six by Dwight Rarik, whose last basket forged a 39-30 tie with 2:42 remaining.

But Valley's downfall came as suddenly as their resurgence. It didn't come right away, as Nebeker missed his second and then his third straight free throws with 2:34 and

Finally, with 1:02 left, Nebeker regained his normal form, nailing two free throws after drawing a foul from Gary Blacker while grabbing an offensive rebound.

Valley lost the ball out of bounds on its ensuing possession, and had to foul James Matthews with 34 seconds left to try and get the ball back. The strategy should have worked, as Matthews missed the front end of a one-and-one.

But Nebeker again soared for the rebound, this time entering Rarik to foul him. A frustrated Rarik also drew a technical foul. Nebeker calmly sank three free throws, the technical and both ends of the one-and-one — putting Murtaugh in front to stay and keeping the Red Devils undefeated at 4-0.

Despite the victory, Murtaugh Coach Jim Anderson was displeased. "We still haven't played well yet," he insisted. "I don't know what the problem is."

Anderson had plenty of reason to wonder during the first half. When both teams made wild passes and inaccurate shooting a habit. However, Blacker came through with eight points for Valley and Taylor added seven, enough to give the Vikings, now 2-1, their four-point edge at intermission.

Deals shift 19

HONOLULU (UPI) — A total of 19 players switched uniforms in three blockbuster deals and an accompanying smaller one Thursday when the general malaise at the winter baseball meetings ended.

The Los Angeles Dodgers obtained catcher Jim Sundberg and got up veteran right-hander Bart Hooton in one trade with the Texas Rangers, the Cleveland Indians acquired second baseman Manny Trillo from the Philadelphia Phillies for rookie outfielder Von Hayes and the New York Yankees sent outfielder-first baseman Dave Collins to the Toronto Blue Jays.

Earlier in the day, the Yankees signed their second big name free agent in a week when outfielder Steve Kepp agreed to a five-year contract that will pay him $1.1 million a year and possibly more with assorted bonus incentives.

Until this sudden flurry of activity, only one other significant deal had been completed since the meetings began five days ago. On Monday, there was a five-player swap between Boston and Oakland in which Carney Lansford and Tony Armas were the central figures.

A scorecard was needed to keep track of the players that went back and forth in Thursday's rapid-fire trading. Five players figured in the deal between the Dodgers and the Rangers. To obtain the 31-year-old Sundberg, a six-time Gold Glove who had a disappointing season, the Dodgers gave up Hooton, who was on the disabled list most of this year following knee surgery, along with right-handed reliever Dave Stewart and two players from their Albuquerque farm club in the Pacific Coast League — outfielder Mark Bradley and right-handed pitcher, Orel Hershisier.

Six players were involved in the Indians-Phillies deal. The Phils gave the Indians a left-handed reliever, shortstop Julio Franco, two other rookies, Gary Willard and pitcher Jay Ballester, along with Trillo for Hayes. And in a following transaction, the Indians sent infielder Larry Milbourne to the Phillies for a player to be named.

Along with Collins, the Yankees sent right-handed pitcher Mike Morgan, a minor leaguer and an unspecified sum to the Blue Jays for reliever Dale Murray. Left-handed pitcher — and a minor-league pitcher — Tom Dold of Knoxville of the Southern League.

Subsequently, when Garvin decided he could not accept a minor-league assignment, the Yankees decided to return him to the Blue Jays.

Acquisition of Sundberg by the Dodgers and Hayes by the Phillies culminated long-term negotiations for those players by those clubs.

Sundberg broke in with the Rangers in 1974 and is regarded one of the finest fielding catchers in the American League. But he slipped at this year, finishing with a disappointing 21 average from four straight previous seasons in which he hit .270 or better. The Dodgers figure to make him their No. 1 receiver.

Hayes hit only .250 for the Indians in his rookie season this year but showed flashes of power with 32 RBI and 14 home runs.

Trillo, an 18-year-old veteran, batted .271 in 149 games with the Phils and is a three-time All-Star. He set three major-league fielding records this year and a primary reason the Phillies moved him was because of safety concerns.

Vukovich became the Phillies' right fielder against right-handed pitching in late June and finished with a .272 average, 42 RBI and six homers.

Saturday's game not only a coup for WTBS

PATRICK EWING
Worth $11 million plus

By STEVE DALEY
Chicago Tribune

WASHINGTON — So what we're talking here is great moments in television. Saturday's confrontation at the Capital Centre between the University of Virginia and Georgetown, between 7-foot-4-inch Ralph Sampson and 7-foot Patrick Ewing, is your basic milestone for the tube.

Remember when Walter Cronkite hung it up? When ABC first went for Acapulco cliff diving on "Wide World of Sports"? When Ricky Riccio first turned to his wife and said, "Lucy, lemme explain?"

It's that big, folks.

This game cost Ted Turner's Broadcasting System $550,000, and the renegade cable outfit, giggling at the competition, hopes to ride a pair of two-story stuffers to respectability.

This game is reported to be worth in the neighborhood of $600,000 to Georgetown, the home team and principal negotiator of the cable deal.

That roundish number is $100,000 larger than the amount earned by coach John Thompson's Hoyas during their trip to the finals of last year's NCAA tournament. So if you wonder just how much Patrick Ewing's scholarship is worth in real money, add up those two figures. Then remember Ewing is a sophomore.

This game has a great many other television executives crying into the night. Rob Hoyas — Turner's minions outmaneuvered CBS and outbid some other broadcast operations for the rights to this affair, easily the most celebrated college basketball game since Elvin Hayes and Lew

Commentary

Aleindor staged a trio of tall contests in the late 1960s.

The problem for CBS was a reluctance to accommodate the school's athletic departments and principal negotiator, as suggested by the Jan. 8 date suggested by the network.

Georgetown athletic director Frank Rienzo, the hard bargainer in the negotiations, wanted to play the game this Saturday, which is the day it will be played. For their part, the folks at Turner Broadcasting told Rienzo they would be pleased and proud to air the Georgetown-Virginia game on Arbor Day or Election Day on the second Sunday in Lent.

You tell us, Rienzo was told. This welcome change from the network approach, in which TV guys in pastel buzzers change playing dates and starting times at will, probably got Turner's outfit the broadcast rights.

NBC, the school's longtime college hoops; did not make an official bid. The network felt that a three-year contract with the Atlantic Coast Conference, of which Virginia is a dues-paying member, gave NBC the rights in the first place.

Wrong, Peacock. Breath. NBC was fine-printed out of the equation because Sampson versus Ewing was put on the schedule after the closing date for the network's bid.

"It's my game," Rienzo said of his dealings with the major networks. That attitude, the notion that network TV may forever be the tail wagging the pooch, is not the least significant aspect of this basketball game. If you forget prize fighting — not a bad idea as far as some network programmers are concerned — you'd be hard-pressed to remember the last time the major networks were shut out of a sporting event of this magnitude.

Magnitude is just the word to describe Saturday's game. Around Washington, Georgetown-Virginia is being treated with reverence, even awe.

The principals, Messrs. Sampson and Ewing, are hidden away, sequestered like rock stars, spared the paralyzing indignity of dealing with the outside world. A little publicity, like a little $500,000 package banked in university coffers for an undergraduate's effort, is fine; never let it be forgotten, however, that while the money rolls in, this is all being done in the interest of higher education.

On the publicity front, Turner, who has had $550,000 later, has been unable to secure an interview with Ewing. That circumstance has some cable execs laughing to keep from crying.

Obviously, this is not a craver that could be pulled off by the folks at Virginia Tech and Liberty Baptist.

What Georgetown has done, thanks to Ewing and Rienzo, is precisely what many of the school's football-playing counterparts in the NCAA fraternity would like to do.

They have turned the cable-TV revolution to their advantage and gone outside the accepted boundaries. They have brokered a far better deal than they could've reached playing strictly by the rules. They have jumped the fence.

Not hard to do, it seems, when you start with more than 14 feet of basketball player.

Polish cager jumps to U.S.

CENTRAL FALLS, R.I. (UPI) — Jack Duda, a 6-foot-10 center with the touring Polish National basketball team, has defected and is seeking asylum so he can remain with his parents in the United States.

Zenon and Gertruda Duda, parents of the 19-year-old athlete, left Warsaw in September and settled in this heavily ethnic mill city. Duda joined them last month during a basketball tour. College coaches are already notching him.

A spokesman at the State Department in Washington said she knew nothing about Duda, but added "as a practice we don't comment on asylum requests."

The Polish National team was Duda's ticket to freedom. Duda was unable to join his parents when they moved to the U.S. because he was denied a passport under the martial law government in Poland.

A 22-year-old center has asked for asylum and his case is pending with immigration officials. He is now enrolled in an English program at Central Falls High School.

Xavier women set FG record

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Remember when "You shoot like a girl?" was a derisive basketball comment. Well, it's a compliment of the highest order around Xavier University.

The Xavier women's basketball team set an NCAA women's field goal shooting percentage record Tuesday night, sinking 38 of 51 shots for a sizzling 74.5 percent in an 82-77 win over Otterbein. Jo Ann Osterkamp led the way by hitting 15 of 19 shots.

The old record was 69.1 percent set by the University of New Orleans.

Upchurch files for bankruptcy

DENVER (UPI) — Denver Broncos wide receiver and punt returner Rick Upchurch has filed for bankruptcy in federal court because he lost $210,000 on his fitness center.

Upchurch also said Wednesday the NFL players strike contributed to his financial problems and forced him to file a bankruptcy petition.

"It was due to the strike," said Upchurch, who supported the players union's position. "I had a business downtown that was in trouble and the only way of salvaging it was through my salary."

"When the strike came about, I just had no income to run it with."

Upchurch's annual salary reportedly is about $200,000, but he lost about half that due to the strike.

Upchurch said he originally planned only to lend the use of his name for the All Pro Medical and Physical Center, but began putting his own money into the business to save it.

Teacher wins on soggy court

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) — Brian Teacher squeezed into the fourth round of the rain-drenched Australian Open Men's Tennis Championships Thursday, defeating Mike Bauer 6-2, 5-7, 6-3 in a tight match played on the soggy No. 1 court.

Teacher, of Los Angeles, clashed with officials twice during the match and dropped the second set when he lost his service twice because of reluctance to chase the ball on the wet court.

Pryor wins boxing honor

NEW YORK (UPI) — WBA junior welterweight champion Aaron Pryor, who successfully defended his title with a 14-round TKO over Alexis Arguello at Miami's Orange Bowl Nov. 12, Thursday was named the Boxing Writers Association of America's Boxer of the Month for November.

The monthly award was initiated in June and previous winners have been Larry Holmes, Davey Moore, Dwight Muhammad (Braxton) Qawi, Juan LaPorte and Renaldo Snipes.

Lombardi honor to Rimington

HOUSTON (UPI) — All-America center Dave Rimington of Nebraska Thursday night won the Lombardi Award as the outstanding lineman in the country.

Rimington won in balloting by 124 head coaches, sports writers and sports casters; award organizers said.

He became the second Nebraska player to capture the award in 13 years. Cornhuskers nose guard Rich Glover won the Lombardi Award in 1972. No school ever has had three winners.

Rimington, a 6-foot-3, 290-pound senior from Omaha, Neb., added the honor to his unprecedented two Outland trophies won after his junior and senior seasons. The Outland Trophy is awarded to the nation's top interior lineman.

Kansas St. to begin its bowl history

SHREVEPORT, La. (UPI) — The 1982 bowl season opens Saturday night and at the same time bowl history begins for the Kansas State Wildcats.

For the first time in the 87-year existence of their football program, the Wildcats have fought their way into a post-season attraction, where they will run up against the Wisconsin Badgers.

Their matchup comes in the 7th Independence Bowl, which kicks off at 6 p.m. MST Saturday. It is the first of 16 major college bowl games which will be run off from Jacksonville, Fla., to Honolulu over the course of three weeks.

Kansas State, thanks to a well-publicized play on the part of coach Jim Dickey along with a tough defense, enjoyed its first winning season since 1970 this year.

Before the 1981 season, Dickey chose to red-shirt eight senior starters. He was willing to suffer through yet another dismal year in 1981 in hopes of making 1982 successful. And it worked.

The Wildcats went 2-9 last season with a youthful squad and then, with the young returnees combining with the red-shirted, the Wildcats began to win games. They won despite a series of injuries that in past years would have wiped out hopes of a winning season.

They finished 6-4-1 for the year and held seven of their 10 points or less. Dickey's son, Darrell Dickey, was one of only two quarterbacks in the "Big Eight" to throw more touchdown passes (eight) than interceptions (seven).

Wisconsin, meanwhile, is making its second straight bowl trip and its fifth year. But the Badgers have lost all four of their previous bowl games.

They posted a 6-5 record overall with four of those losses being to bowl clubs, including both of the participants in the Rose Bowl.

Wisconsin, however, had lost three games in a row before beating lowly Minnesota in the final game of the season, 24-0, and thus barely secured a bowl bid.

The Badgers had their share of good fortune leading up to the bowl bid. They defeated Purdue, 35-31, on a last-second touchdown run on a deflected punt. They defeated Michigan State, 24-23, by stopping a two-point conversion at the end of the game and also surprised Ohio State, 6-0, when the Buckeyes fumbled deep in Wisconsin's end of the field late in the game.

Wisconsin, under coach Dave McClain, has managed to bring a boost in football fever to the state during the past two years.

shape and learn to relax. This team will start shooting like it can. When that happens, it shouldn't be nearly as nervous on the bench as it has," Campbell said.

From a scouting standpoint, CSI doesn't know much about Western Nebraska.

"You know they have to be better because they've got five sophomores back from last year's team and eight sophomores overall," he said, adding that 6-3 Sedric Toney is a transfer from Dayton, Ohio.

Nebraska's height is found in a pair of 6-7 sophomores, Greg Dockery and Rick Smith plus 6-6 Darrell Daniels. Point guard Tim Murphy returns for the second year to guide the team.

"And we don't know much about Casper," Campbell said "except they are returning three players who we saw last year (in the T-Bird classic)."

Those returners are 6-0 Ron Strain at the point, 6-5 Kelly Davis who hit 11 of 12 free throws against the Eagles and 6-5 Dave Allen who had an eight-point night.

Casper has added height in 6-0 Ron Hughes from Roanoke, Va., and 6-7 Bob Crawford from Cleveland.

While Western Nebraska and Casper will be the problems at hand, CSI will be interested in seeing Ricks College, which, with Treasure Valley and North Idaho apparently at a three-year low, appears the team to beat for the regional title.

Ricks has won four tournaments in collecting its 11-4 record and is far and away the biggest team on the CSI slate.

Coach Gary Gardner has one player at 6-9, four at 6-8, two at 6-6, two at 6-5 and no one under 6-2 on the traveling team.

"They again apparently have some great shooters, headed by Jeff Anderson (6-6) of Salt Lake City," said Campbell. "I talked to an NCAA coach who scouted them and he was impressed. He told me they looked like a team that can run forever."

in the Phillies' minor-league system. He was considered untouchable until the Phillies signed Ivan DeJesus to a five-year contract and undoubtedly will get a crack at Cleveland's regular shortstop job.

He hit .300 at Oklahoma City of the American Association this season and .276 in 16 games with the Phillies.

Willard has only three seasons in organized ball. He's a 21-year-old left-handed hitter who batted .292 in 81 games with Reading of the Eastern league. Beller, a 23-year-old right-hander, turned in a 9-4 record as a starter with the same club.

Milbourne has played for the Yankees, Astros and Twins besides the Indians. He showed a .275 average in 82 games with Cleveland this year.

While sending him to the Phillies, the Indians also announced they were assigning Joe Charbonneau—Steve Martinez and Ed Saavedra to Charleston of the International League.

In the Dodger-Ranger deal, Texas acquires a pitcher in Hooton who missed a good part of this year because of surgery on his right knee in late May. He returned in August and finished with a 4-7 overall record and 4.03 ERA.

Bradley, a 26-year-old right-handed hitter, batted .317 in 139 games for Albuquerque and showed power with 101 RBI and 12 homers.

Dokes meets Weaver for WBA title

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — World Boxing Association heavyweight champion Mike Weaver defends his crown for the first time in more than a year today against undefeated Michael Dokes in a scheduled 15-round title bout.

The bout will appear in Twin Falls on Home Box Office starting at 7 p.m.

Weaver, 30, who won his crown by knocking out WBA champion John Tate in the 15th round March 31, 1980, in Knoxville, Tenn., last fought Oct. 3, 1981, when he defeated James "Quick" Tillis. His only other title defense was Oct. 25, 1980, when he stopped Gerrie Coetzee in the 13th round in South Africa.

Since then, Weaver, who has a 24-9 mark with 17 knockouts, has been involved in a series of delays that forced three postponements of scheduled meetings with Randall "Tex" Cobb for the WBA version of the heavyweight crown.

Their first meeting was cancelled because Weaver injured a shoulder in training. A second try was scrapped when Cobb suffered an arm injury.

MIKE WEAVER
First defense in 14 months

The third time proved not to be a charm when Cobb suffered a split lip during training one week before the scheduled July 25 meeting this year in Las Vegas.

Weaver, a native of Gatesville, Texas, who now calls Diamond Bar, Calif., home, told a mid-week news conference he does not believe his lengthy layoff has tarnished his boxing skills.

"It feels good getting back in the ring," said Weaver, the No. 1 contender for Larry Holmes' World Boxing Council crown. "I'm coming in here as champion and I'm leaving as champion."

The Nevada Athletic Commission was scheduled to meet Friday morning to formally approve the fight at its regular monthly meeting.

Asked about a possible title unification bout with Holmes, who stopped Weaver in the 11th round of a title bout June 22, 1979, the WBA champ said he was not looking past Dokes, but would like a rematch.

"I consider Larry Holmes a great champion," said Weaver Wednesday. "I'd like to fight him again."

The champion said he has trained 7-8 weeks to prepare for Dokes, but added: "I don't know how Mike Dokes is going to fight. Each fight is different."

Dokes, 24, from Akron, Ohio, is making his first try at a title. He has a record of 25-0-1 with 14 knockouts.

"I'm in the best condition of my life," said the challenger. "I have fought 15-20 rounds in one day and I have progressed by leaps and bounds."

Asked if he feared Weaver's punching power, Dokes replied: "I've never been in the ring with anybody who couldn't punch. Anybody who weighs more than 200 pounds can hit."

Dokes said he expected to enter the pay television fight at about 215. Weaver said he would weigh in at about 210.

Dokes has posted two wins in 1982 including a Jan. 30 first round knockout of Lynn Bell in Las Vegas and a March 20 fifth round knockout of Franco Thomas in Atlantic City, N.J.

The challenger said since Weaver was noted to be a slow starter and a strong finisher, he planned to pressure the champion early.

Two pairs deadlocked for mixed golf lead

LARGO, Fla. (UPI) — Lynn Adams and Chi Chi Rodriguez carded seven birdies and Carole Charbonnier and Leonard Thompson put together a round of eight birdies and a bogey to tie for the first round lead Thursday in the $500,000 Mixed Team Classic with seven-under-par 65.

Tied for third, one stroke back at 66, were the teams of Hollis Stacy and Jay Haas and Cathy Morse and Vance Heafner.

The tournament is known as the J.C. Penney Mixed Team Classic.

The format pairs golfers from both the PGA and LPGA circuits. Both teammates tee off and then play each other's ball for their second shot on the par 4 and 5 holes. They then pick the best ball and alternate shots until it is holed out. On the par 3 holes they pick the best ball after the tee shot.

Adams and Rodriguez string together four birdies on the front nine and added three on the back while complementing each other's game. Adams carded birdie putts of 2, 6 and 8 feet; Rodriguez had birdie putts of 2, 3, 8 and 30 feet.

Charbonnier and Thompson had six birdies on the front nine and added another on the 10th hole before coaling off. They took their only bogey on the par 3 13th hole when Thompson buried his tee shot in a bunker and Charbonnier left her tee shot short.

Charbonnier's accurate iron play allowed Thompson to go on a four-hole birdie streak on the front nine. She hit two five-iron shots within 10 feet, put a sand wedge within eight feet and chipped to within five feet with Thompson capitalizing each time with birdie putts.

"I made everything I looked at on the front nine," Thompson said. "If I was always as close to the pin as Carole put me today, I'd have a lot of putting rounds like this."

Stacy and Haas started fast, with birdies on five of the first six holes, and were six under after 11 holes. But they took pars the rest of the way in.

"I had quite a few short birdie putts and after being under after six holes, I'm kind of disappointed," Haas said. "We kind of fell asleep after starting fast."

Tied for fifth at 5-under 67 were the teams of Jan Stephenson and Fred Couples, Jo Ann Washam and Jerry Pate and Sandra Palmer and Mark Hayes.

Defending champion Beth Daniel and Tom Kite were three shots out of the lead with 4-under 68 and were tied with the teams of Alitz Ritzman and Fuzzy Zoeller, JoAnne Carner and John Mahaffey and Bonnie Lauer and Gary Koch.

N.C. State says violation a 'minor' one

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Present and former North Carolina State athletic officials say the violation for which the Wolfpack faces NCAA disciplinary action is "minor" and involves a prospect also heavily recruited by Clemson, which is now on probation.

Assistant coach John Stucky said Thursday the infraction may involve one too many visits with freshman defensive tackle Reggie Singletary of West Columbia, N.C. His mother said her son stayed with a Wolfpack supporter the night before signing with North Carolina State to avoid a tenuous Clemson recruiter.

Singletary's night out is a practice known in college athletics as "babysitting" and may also constitute a violation of NCAA rules.

Another assistant, who asked not to be identified, said Clemson blew the whistle on the Wolfpack because of its own problems with the NCAA and a desire to strike back at anybody they could.

Clemson Coach Danny Ford, whose program was placed on two years' NCAA probation last week for improper recruiting, could not be reached for comment.

North Carolina State Athletic Director Willis Casey said he hoped the probe would find that "any infraction would be minor in nature and prove that nothing was done by a staff member trying to circumvent the rules."

WBC cuts title bouts to 12 rounds

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The World Boxing Council Thursday announced that world title fights will be reduced to 12 rounds from 15 beginning in January, a move that drew immediate criticism from promoter Bob Arum.

"This is a stupidity that converts boxing into a joke," said Arum, in Mexico City to announce a Jan. 29 bout in Los Angeles between Panama's Roberto Duran and Pulpito Cuevas of Mexico, both former welterweight champions.

Arum, who runs Top Rank promotions, said a WBC decision to cut the length of world title bouts to 12 rounds will prevent the unification of titles between WBC and World Boxing Association champions.

The Mexico City-based WBC said it was reducing the length of title fights beginning Jan. 1 in hopes it would give more protection to boxers from possible injuries, which often occur in the late rounds.

Arum said the loser of the Duran-Cuevas bout "probably will be left eliminated from boxing."

RING IN THE NEW.

CHANGES FOR MOUNTAIN BELL'S RESIDENTIAL CUSTOMERS.

New Year's Day, 1983, will be a day of changes for Mountain Bell. And that means changes in the way you'll do business with us.

Some of these changes you'll like. Some will take getting used to. But all are the result of a Federal Communications Commission decision to increase competition in the telecommunications industry. This should result in a greater choice of products and services.

Here's how the changes will affect you.

ORDERING PHONE SERVICE

Beginning January 1, you won't be able to order service or pay your bill at a Bell Phone Center. That's because Bell Phone Centers will no longer be owned and operated by Mountain Bell. They'll be part of American Bell, a new AT&T subsidiary created to compete in the sale of telephone equipment.

Some of the existing Bell Phone Centers will be converted to Mountain Bell Service Centers which we'll operate to do business with you. So you'll still be able to do business with us in person. Although you'll probably find calling us is a faster, more convenient way to take care of your service needs.

Just call your Service Representative to order new service or make changes in your service. The toll-free number to call is 1-333-8448.

GETTING TELEPHONES AND REPAIR SERVICE

In 1983, you'll still be able to get phones from us at our Service Centers. But your choice of certain styles and colors will be limited to our current supply. You can also get phones from other suppliers. When you get telephones from us, you can either pick them up or have them delivered. Delivery will take a few days and there is a charge for this service.

We'll continue to repair or replace equipment purchased or leased from us after January 1. Our repair service numbers are listed in the Customer Guide. Equipment obtained from other suppliers should be returned to them for repair.

PAYING YOUR BILL

The easiest way to pay your bill is to mail it.

Call your Service Representative for questions about your bill or for the nearest location to pay in person. The toll-free number to call is 1-333-8440.

USING THE CUSTOMER GUIDE

Most of the information in the Customer Guide section of the White Pages Directory will continue to be helpful when these changes occur. However, some changes may have been made after the Customer Guide went to press. Your Service Representative will always have the latest information and is ready to help you.

As you can see, many of the coming changes will mean more choices for you. But what's best about your service won't change. You can always depend on our continuing commitment to excellence for quality, reliable service in the future.

CALL 1 800 555-5000 • AND LET'S TALK

We know you may have other questions. Call us toll-free any time between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. Monday through Friday. Or send for our free booklet, "Let's Talk About Change."

Score controversy splitting bowling into three factions

By DICK EVANS
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

The controversy over high scoring continues to split bowling into three camps.

League bowlers blame proprietors and American Bowling Congress officials when high scores are not approved; ABC officials in turn blame proprietors and bowlers; and proprietors blame bowlers and the ABC.

Paul Bolter, secretary of the Bowling Manufacturers Association, added embers to the boiling issue during a recent proprietors meeting.

"I am fed up with the high scoring and running around checking lanes (for high score awards) all the time," Bolter stated in a written report. "So far this season, we have had 33 high-score awards reported. Of these 33, 14 have been rejected on lane conditions (too much oil which created an artificial block) and probably MOST of the others should have been rejected."

That last comment irritated some proprietors and is bound to upset many bowlers, especially the ones whose 300 games and 800 series were approved.

And the statement is in direct contrast to the message that the ABC has been trying to get across with stories that "91 percent" of all scores submitted nationwide last year were approved. It also goes against the grain of the ABC home office in Milwaukee, which Friday reported that "since Aug. 1, 29 honor scores have been processed and 14 rejected administratively."

Bolter also had something to say about bowlers in his report. "I am fast growing disenchanted with the game as it is today," he said. "Too easy, no skill needed. . . If the bowlers in our area go to the nationals, most of them don't even get a mention because they can't or don't know how to bowl on honest conditions anymore."

Roger Tessman, new executive secretary of the ABC's four-million-plus members, was aware of Bolter's report.

"In view of the volatile issue, I don't think that kind of statement is in a positive nature," Tessman said. "I can't account for what he said; it didn't come from me."

Despite the flak, Bolter is not backing off.

"No, I am not trying to sit as God on this thing, and I am not biased despite the comments in my report," he said. "I was merely reporting what I have been finding."

"I stand behind my statements. I think it is a shame to turn down a score when a bowler didn't have anything to do with the illegal condition."

In addition to earning $691,085 while capturing the stock car crown with 12 wins in 30 races during 1982, the 35-year-old Waltrip received bonus checks for winning the Busch Pole Award (7 pole positions), for being named Olssonite Driver of the Year by a panel of writers, and for leading the most laps during the season to win the Gillette-Altra Award.

It was left to Bobby Allison, who lost the chance at a title in the final race of the season for the second straight year, to take home the largest single contingency prize — $75,000 awarded by the Union Oil Company of California.

Geoff Bodine, who sat on the pole in races at Daytona and Talladega, was named NASCAR Rookie of the Year after successful rides on the modified trail.

The Melling Tool team of driver Bill Elliott and crew chief Ernie Elliott won the pit crew championship.

Waltrip, who dared New York's hectic traffic patterns Tuesday by cycling down Fifth Avenue with his wife Stevie, has been on a whirlwind tour since arriving in the city earlier this week. His schedule Thursday included a noon luncheon by his Mountain Dew sponsor, a 2 p.m. press conference with the Olssonite panel, a 3:30 NASCAR news gathering and the evening awards dinner.

It wasn't surprising to Waltrip that he was picked as the best driver on the NASCAR Grand National circuit in a summer survey of fellow drivers.

"I thought Richard Petty would win it because so often it's a popularity contest," said Waltrip. "But it's nice to know that the other guys think that. The bottom line is — how you perform."

And then with typical Waltrip impishness, he added: "But then, what car do you have to beat every week? What car is always in the thick of things?"

However, Chuck Pezzano, a nationally syndicated bowling columnist, thinks Bolter went too far. "I've never heard anything like that in my life," Pezzano said from Clifton, N.J.

"I think the ABC had better watch its step with statements like that. And it had better get the proprietors in on the act one way or another."

The ABC's home office recognizes the dilemma and is frantically searching for a solution to both the oiling problem (many people blame it on the reaction of urethane finishes now being used on lanes) and the inspection problems (many officials insist that the current inspection procedures fall far short of being scientific).

That is why the ABC is experimenting with water-base lane-coaters and trying to develop an instrument or device to measure dressing film thickness on the lane surface.

Atari reports quarterly sales down

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks plunged for the second consecutive session Thursday on Wall Street's fears that Christmas spending will not be strong enough to pull the economy out of recession.

Warner Communications' stock plunged 16 1/4 to 35 1/4 on more than 6.2 million shares after the video-game maker announced late Wednesday its 1982 earnings would be less buoyant than expected.

The grim pronouncement, which depressed the market Wednesday, and toy maker Mattel's prediction of a fourth-quarter loss knocked down several rally attempts and sparked a widespread sell-off.

The grim forecasts mean "we are having a terrible Christmas selling season," said William LeFevre, Purcell Graham & Co. vice president. "And that raises the question of when this supposed consumer-led recovery is going to start," LeFevre added. "It looks like the recovery once again has been postponed."

when Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker withdrew his motion to reduce the capital gains holding period to six months from a year.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 9.85 points Wednesday, skidded 19.13 points to 1,027.96 after several rally attempts fizzled. It challenged its all-time high of 1,063.49 the previous two sessions.

The New York Stock Exchange

Composite volume of NYSE issues lost on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 106,982,780 shares, down from the 114,460,100 traded Wednesday.

The American Stock Exchange index fell 2.30 to 338.10 and the price of a share fell 11 cents. Declines topped advances 419-225 among the 832 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 10,343,300 shares compared with 9,517,500 traded Wednesday.

The National Association of Securities Dealers NASDAQ index of OTC stocks lost 3.46 to 237.24.

On the trading floor, Warner Communications was the most active NYSE-listed issue. Matter, which had a third-quarter profit but expects a loss the final three months, did not trade.

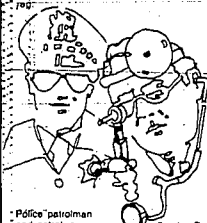

Chrysler was the second most active NYSE-listed issue, up 1/4 to 14 1/4. The automaker and the striking Canadian members of the United Auto Workers union reached agreement on monetary terms of a new settlement.

Slumberger was the third-most active issue, up 1/2 to 43.

Consumer confidence, federal deficits, interest rates key to economics in 1983

By RICHARD ALM
Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — Forecasters expect economic recovery — the bright light they have been seeing just over the horizon for at least six months — finally to get under way early next year.

Its sluggish pace, however, probably will keep unemployment rates high throughout most of 1983.

A key element in many of the projections is the hunch that the Federal Reserve Board, whose tight monetary policies helped foil the recovery expected last year by keeping interest rates too high, will now provide whatever the economy needs to make the sure economic stagnation doesn't continue for a fifth year.

Many analysts say more lenient Fed policies already have set the stage for recovery by giving a boost to spending and nudging interest rates down.

"The short-term factor—swinging the economy up is the expansion of the money supply that has been very rapid for four or five months," said Robert Geneski, chief economist for Harris Trust & Savings Bank in Chicago. "When you print more money, you get more spending in the economy."

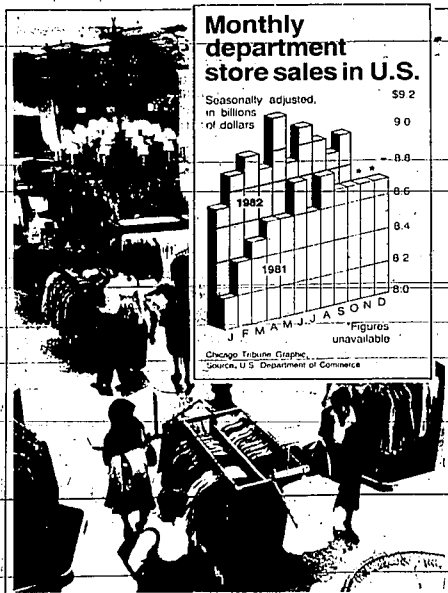

An average of 16 forecasts compiled by The Dallas Morning News indicates that the gross national product, adjusted for inflation, will grow at a quarterly annual rate of more than 3 percent in the first half of 1983, then accelerate to almost 5 percent in the second half of the year. However, the over-all annual growth, dragged down by the poor performance at the tail end of this year, will be a mediocre 2.6 percent for 1983.

Although the long-awaited pickup in business activity looks good beside the 1.7 percent decline in GNP expected this year, it doesn't approach the 7 percent first-year growth of typical post-World War II recoveries. The slow start comes from the combined effects of "high real" interest rates, weak capital spending, wary consumers, anemic exports and declining state and local government outlays, forecasters said.

The sluggishness, along with the economy's record excess capacity, will restrain the rise in the Consumer Price Index to its current level of about 5 percent through 1983, producing the least inflationary year since 1971. But it will mean the jobless rate will come down only slowly from its current 10.8 percent, the highest since the Depression.

"There's no chance of our seeing more than a 1 percentage point reduction in the unemployment rate between now and the end of 1983," said Kenneth T. Mayland, chief economist for First Pennsylvania Corp. in Philadelphia. "We're just not going to see the kind of economic growth that would allow employment to increase fast enough to pull down the unemployment rate."

Nevertheless, the economy is expected to make some progress for the first time since 1978. Many of the reasons for the cautious optimism are echoes from early last year: Consumers have money to spend on purchases they've delayed; inventories are near rock bottom; tax cuts will pour billions of dollars into the economy; and interest rates are declining at last.

And there are many signs of recovery, most of which were absent early last year. Investor confidence has sent stock prices skyrocketing to record levels, help-wanted advertising and consumer confidence have turned upward slightly in the latest reports, housing and automobile sales have begin to pick up and the government's Index of Leading Economic Indicators has risen, albeit slowly, in six of the past seven months.

"It's not so much that the positive factors are becoming better," said Maury Harris, chief economist for Paine Webber Inc. in New York. "It's that the negative factors become less negative."

One of the negative factors that probably will bite less is interest rates. The average forecast favors slightly lower rates. The prime rate, which has fallen from 10 1/2 percent to 11 1/2 percent since mid-August, will ebb another percentage point or two by the end of 1983, mostly the lagged effects of the Fed's expansionary policies during the latter part of 1982.

On other interest rates, forecasters are divided:

• One camp expects a recovery, huge federal deficits and the Fed's efforts to pull monetary growth back within announced targets to push interest rates up a percentage point or two in 1983.

• Another argues the central bank may go too far in letting out the money supply, creating fears of inflation that will be built into higher interest rates.

• And a third group finds hope in the Fed's newfound willingness to do

• See FORECASTS on Page B11

Bank of America: Economic future uncertain

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — In its annual report on the economic outlook, the Bank of America said Thursday that much uncertainty remains about the strength and durability of the recovery.

"We've waffled a bit as you can see," Leland S. Prussia, chairman, said.

For 1983 the bank thinks the gross national product is most likely to grow between 1.3 and 2.5 percent. Prussia said he personally is inclined "to the low side."

"There's a good chance it's going to be zero," he said.

The Reagan administration, he said, should no longer "stay the course" of holding to its economic policies. Prussia said they now need dramatic restructuring.

In Prussia's view, the 1983 tax cut across-the-board should be revised to give more spending power to the lower and middle class and less to the rich.

The bank report said recovery in 1983 will be largely determined by strength of consumer spending, and Prussia said that means more tax relief should go to the consumer.

The outlook for the foreign trade deficit, Prussia said, "looks grim and I think it's going to get worse."

The bank expected the deficit to rise to $55 or $60 billion.

Prime interest rates will tend to rise early in 1983 because of large federal deficits, but should drop later in the year, perhaps by 2 percent, because of weak credit demands and declining inflationary expectations, the bank said.

"I think the problems of inflation are really behind us," Prussia said. "I'm not worrying about rekindling inflation."

Recovery depends on the consumer, the bank said, because business investment will decline at least through the first quarter of 1983 before improving very gradually.

Prussia said there now is little doubt but that the United States will experience slow economic growth, probably 3 percent annually, throughout the 1980s.

Therefore, he said the stock market may be vulnerable in the extent that it is now discounting the future.

For 1983 the bank forecast continued high unemployment but declining to 9.5 percent, a rise in consumer spending of 3 percent and an increase in housing starts of 40 percent from the depressed 1982 level.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Under pressure from Congress, President Reagan's new chief economic adviser Thursday testified before the Joint Economic Committee.

Buy he refused to make economic forecasts or to take a stand on most economic issues.

"Pretty soon, not knowing the facts or not giving your position is not going to be satisfactory to this committee," Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., warned Martin Feldstein toward the end of the hearing.

Feldstein earlier had refused to appear before the Joint Economic Committee, citing his lack of Senate confirmation, even though he held a recess appointment that would expire at the end of 1983.

He was confirmed late Wednesday. But Irked Senate Democrats held up the vote until Feldstein agreed to testify Thursday to the committee.

During his testimony, Feldstein refused to predict when an economic recovery would begin, whether employment will increase, how he would act to reduce unemployment, whether he supports a proposal to tax employer-paid health benefits or how much money should be spent on national defense.

About the only position Feldstein took was against public-works jobs programs, such as those proposed recently by congressional Democrats as a means to reduce unemployment.

He said they would be "counterproductive" and "lead to larger budget deficits." He refused to say whether he would support a proposal to tax "is now considering several different options" for reducing the unemployment rate, but he refused to discuss them since they are still under White House consideration.

"Only an economic recovery" can reduce the basic unemployment problem, he said, adding "the favorable signs of a coming economic recovery are getting stronger all the time."

Sarbanes noted that in Feldstein's September confirmation hearing, when the unemployment rate was 9.8 percent, Feldstein said the economy was "about ready to recover."

"In less than three months, the unemployment rate grew from 9.8 to 10.8 percent and you're essentially telling us the same thing."

Of course, I'm disappointed," Feldstein replied.

"When are these disappointments and assertions going to translate into action that will do something?" Sarbanes asked.

Holiday shows cluttering networks

By TERRY KELLEHER
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Ever wonder if the networks are using a different calendar than you are?

Christmas is two weeks away, but quite a few of the seasonal specials have already aired. Andy Williams celebrated the Yuletide early on CBS — without the family this time. Johnny Cash sang his carols for ABC on "Pearl Harbor Day." He looked so Christmasy in black.

Yet it's not too late to spend Christmas with a star or two. The Bob Hope Christmas special (Dec. 19 on NBC) is a Yule tradition, like aluminum trees. "More than 90 top NBC-TV stars" will shine in the "Second Annual NBC Family Christmas." The lineup includes the cast of "Quincy" without Jack Klugman and the "CHiPs" cast except Erik Estrada. The really big stars apparently don't have a Christmas clause in their contracts.

The Bugs Bunny and Charlie Brown Christmas specials have come and gone, but the video-gene generation will celebrate Christmas with Pac-Man Thursday on ABC. The whole family will gather: Ms. Pac, Pac-Baby, Champ the dog.

Yes, Christmas is a family time, so television offers special programs for all ages. The true meaning of the season even peeks through where you least expect it. Here's a sampling:

Christmas with Como:

Perry Como likes to move his annual Christmas special around the map. That way the traveling will always be new, even if the patter is stale and the music — familiar — who — can — forget — Perry Como's Christmas in Austria? Who wouldn't like to forget "Perry Como's Christmas in New Mexico"? Mr. C. is in Gay Paree this year, so the hour is called "Perry Como's Christmas in Paris" (ABC, Saturday).

Christmas in Paris isn't white, but at least it's cold. Guest star Angie

Dickinson certainly looks chilly as she and Perry sail up the Seine while lip-synching "It's Beginning to Look a Lot Like Christmas." Of course, it doesn't look a thing like Christmas. Dickinson also attempts a little song-and-dance in a segment featuring designer Pierre Cardin. Cardin presents Angle with one of his fashion creations as a Christmas gift. She seems pleased, although the voluminous green gown makes her look like a plant.

Como still sings respectably at the age of 70. His "Mona Lisa" to simple piano accompaniment is the musical highlight of the show, and what would a "Perry Como Christmas" be without the "Ave Maria"? But Como's demeanor could feel insidious rumors that he and Dean Martin are the same person. If Mr. C. weren't a famously upright man, we might take his supreme relaxation for slight intoxication.

He's so lazy he failed to lip-synch all the way through the opening song. Standing in front of the basilica of Sacre Coeur, he informs us that the church was built in "oh, I guess around the turn-of-the-century." In a possible homage to Dino, he even makes a drunk joke about Santa Claus.

Jingle-bell boogie:

The third annual "Dance Fever Christmas Special" is an unintentional triumph of camp. (It will be shown at different times on local stations throughout the country.) Once again, host Denney Terrio proves he should have started with McGuffey's Reader before graduating to cue cards. Sporting sequined lapels for Christmas, he introduces "guest deejay" Cindy Somebody-or-the-other as "a native of Colorado who's attending UCLA for commercials." That must be an interesting major.

Adult and child dance teams from four cities compete for "incredible" prizes. Judging their efforts are three celebrity parents and their offspring: Connie Stevens and daughter, Bill Rafferty ("Real People") and son, and James B. Slikking ("Hill Street Blues") and daughter. Rafferty is fairly giddy with praise for the contestants. "I'm easily pleased, I guess," he admits.

Slikking, who plays the pompous SWAT-team leader on "Hill Street," struggles to give his critiques a properly with-it tone. "I was absolutely terrified to see it executed like that," he says after a particularly pedestrian piece of choreography. Well before the finish, he runs out of superlatives: "I thought they were sensational and, uh, I just want to wish a Merry Christmas to everybody here."

The sentimental favorites have to be the teams from Hamburg, West. See CHRISTMAS on Page C4

Marty Robbins honored by fans, Opry stage friends

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Singer Marty Robbins, who shot to fame with the ballad "El Paso," was mourned Thursday by the country music world and praised as an entertainer who took fame in his stride.

Robbins, 57, the author of the classic "El Paso," died Wednesday night, six days after suffering a massive heart attack and undergoing quadruple bypass surgery.

St. Thomas Hospital, where Robbins spent the last six days of his life, said it was swamped with thousands of telephone calls, cards, telegrams and flowers from fans across the United States and abroad. Country music radio stations across the country played special program tributes.

His wife, Marizona, and children Ronnie Robbins and Janet Robinson, were at the hospital when he died.

Dr. William J. Ewers, Robbins' personal physician, said the singer "put up the best fight I have ever seen."

Services for Robbins, a native of Arizona, were tentatively scheduled for 11 a.m. Saturday at Woodlawn Memorial Park in Nashville.

"In a business where egos are heavy, Marty, if he had an ego, kept it under control," said Hal Durham, vice president and managing director of the Grand Ole Opry where Robbins had been a headline act for 25 years.

"Marty was true country," said Hank Snow, another Opry veteran. "He could have been a top pop-type singer but he chose to stay with his roots."

"I'm deeply grieved about Marty's death," said country singer Skeeter Davis. "It was Marty who recommended me to the Opry. I shall never forget his kindness."

Roy Acuff, "The King of Country Music," was a fixture on the Opry when Robbins became a star of the show in 1953.

Remembering his friend as "invariably a jolly person," Acuff said, "I'm going to miss him. First time I heard him sing, I told the boys in my band, 'That young feller is going to be a star.'"

The Country Music Foundation estimated that Robbins sold at least 10

MARTY ROBBINS

million records during his long career, including "White Sport Coat," and "Singing the Blues."

Robbins was the composer of more than 500 songs and had 18 No. 1 hits on the country music charts during his career. He also had 43 records in the Top 10.

Robbins, an avid race fan, also competed on an infrequent basis in NASCAR races and owned his own car.

Robbins was inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame only two months ago, but was the first country entertainer to win a Grammy — for the 1959 ballad "El Paso." He won another for the song, "My Woman, My Woman, My Wife," recorded in 1970.

During an interview earlier this year, Robbins attributed his enduring success to being able to please his audience.

"What I don't do anything great, but I have a good time and so does the audience," he said. "Knowing how to please people is the only secret for staying in the business."

Buhl H.S. melodrama features theater, food

BUHL — "Little Nell," an old-fashioned melodrama, was performed by Buhl High School acting-lab students this Saturday, Dec. 11, at 7:30 p.m. in the Poppewell Elementary School gym.

"We want audience participation," says drama teacher Ambra Martin.

Everyone is encouraged to boo and hiss the dastardly villain, cheer on the valiant hero and sign along with the damsel in distress, she says.

Along with the production, the audience will be treated to desserts made by the drama-club students, who receive points for their creations.

After the expenses of the costumes and scenery are paid, the remaining money raised will benefit the eight to 10 students in the drama club who have earned the most points from various fund-raising events. Those students will be able to attend an activity of their choice, which Martin says she "tries to keep theater-oriented."

Students who will appear in "Little Nell" are: Paul Olsen, who will play the villain; Ken Hansen, the hero; Theresa Driskell, the fair maiden; Diana Hixon, who will portray the maiden's mother; and Mike McBride, the father.

Tickets for the performance are: $4 for adults; $3.50 for students with activity cards; $2 for children 4 to 12; 50 cents for children 5 and under, and $2 for senior citizens.

There is also a special rate, $10, for families, so Martin says, "your best bet is to come with a family."

CBS gets lock on season's ratings

By ED BARK
Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — It's all over but the shouting. With a smashing victory in week No. 10 of the regular season, CBS apparently has a lock on a regular season ratings race that runs through mid-April.

For the week ending Dec. 5, CBS had a 20.2 rating and 31 percent share of the viewing audience for its prime time programming. After winning the previous week by one-tenth of a rating point, ABC dropped far behind with a 16.7 rating, 26 share. NBC was last again at 14.823.

For the season to date, CBS has an 18.5 rating, 29 share. ABC (16.727) and NBC (15.725) are seemingly out of contention.

Caught with its numbers down, ABC is facing a fourth straight second place finish. But the network apparently is determined to save face by bringing in two potential blockbuster miniseries in February and March.

"The Winds of War, an 18-hour marathon; is scheduled to air in February. The Thorn Birds, a 9-hour show starring Richard Chamberlain, was scheduled for the May "sweeps." However, ABC spokesmen in New York and Los Angeles confirm that Thorn Birds probably will be broadcast in late March before the so-called regular season ends.

War and Thorn Birds almost assuredly will score big in the Nielsen. But only a complete stampede away from CBS could put ABC in command before mid-April. During February at least, CBS will counter with the 2-hour movie that ends the MASH series. Soccer ratings are guaranteed.

In the latest ratings week, CBS had 8 of the top 10 prime time programs. These ratings grabbers represent an interesting mix of programming choices.

The remarriage of J.R. and Sue Ellen Ewing gave Dallas, the week's No. 1 show, its highest rating since the reading of Jack Ewing's will during the Oct. 29 episode. The run-of-the-mill episodes usually draw a much smaller crowd.

All-Star Party For Carol Burnett (No. 2) was a nice sentimental shenanigan that again demonstrated Burnett's enormous popularity among TV watchers.

Teen movies becoming a very lucrative 'science'

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD — R-rated movies for 16 to 22-year-olds have become a science, their formulas: equal parts nudity, sex, scatological dialogue and music.

Plots and story lines are marginal, total frontal nudity and explicit copulation are forbidden, token romance almost mandatory. In the past year or so "Porky's," "Fast Times at Ridgemont High," "Zapped," "HomeWork," "The Last American Virgin" and even "Blue Lagoon" reaped fortunes for their producers. They are made specifically for the youth market, which represents 65 percent of frequent moviegoers. The "R" rating, requiring persons under 17 to be accompanied by an adult, is a national joke.

Ben Efraim, president of Unity Pictures, produced "Private Lessons" last year and collected $50 million worldwide, enough to encourage the Israeli-born producer to film "Private School" this year.

Before beginning "Private School," to be released by Universal, Efraim extensively researched major markets to learn precisely what kids want to see and what turns them off.

There are two keys to successful youth-oriented pictures today, according to Efraim. The first is the 16-17-year-old male motivator who determines what movie he and his date or his friends will see. The second is the 16-17-year-old girl who is turned off by rank tastelessness.

"The important ingredients to both are comedy, sexual tease and music," said Efraim. "They want reliable experiences, the embarrassment of young kids faced with sex for the first time."

"Voyeurism is an easily relatable comic situation and takes place in most of these films. So are scenes with kids trying to make it for the first time. But it is absolutely vital that innocence is involved."

The theme of the film is vital, the magnet that draws youngsters to theaters, not the cast. Efraim says youth-oriented pictures need not approach perfection. Kids willingly overlook plot flaws.

"All you need are a few scenes that leave lasting impressions," Efraim said. "The shower scene in 'Porky's' is a perfect example. It gave kids something to laugh and talk about."

"Kids want to get out of the 'house' on weekends and they love to go to movies that amuse them without embarrassing them. Therefore, we can't impose an adult approach to sex in these films."

"We are suggestive rather than explicit. We concentrate on reactions of young people in the cast when they're uncomfortably confronted with sex. Kids know about that because it is what they're going through."

"You can show nudity, but for girls sex scenes must be romantic. They're more interested in story line. The boys want female nudity and comic sex scenes."

"Universal tested 'Fast Times At Ridgemont High' and found girls objected to the explicit sex. They toned it down. Explicit sex in the adult movie, 'Body Heat' did not attract young audiences."

Efraim surveyed reactions to "Private School" with three different plot lines. He settled for a story of two 17-year-old girls — one good, one bad — vying for the sexual attentions of the same boy.

Girls preferred it to two other themes. One: a group of boys in drag breaking into the girl's school. Two: the female student body scheming for revenge against a prudish head mistress.

Aside from sex, romance, comedy and nudity, young people are hooked into musical themes. According to Efraim, top 40 rock songs are obligatory.

Pragmatist Efraim said, "When we discover what young people want, we construct a screenplay and music to meet the demand. That way we know what we have is what they want to see."

"It's only logical to make films for the major group of filmgoers. Only five or six movies a year succeed like 'On Golden Pond' and they do 50 percent of the box office."

"I can't be in the business of making one of the top five films of the year. If I fail, I lose all my money. Even if my youth-oriented movie doesn't work, it's appeal is so inherent it will still attract large audiences."

"My films may not be a high prestige product, but they are very lucrative."

BEN EFRAIM

Warberg joins staff

TWIN FALLS — Willetta Warberg of Twin Falls has joined the staff of The Times-News as a correspondent.

Willetta, who has written a food column for The Times-News for the past five years, will concentrate on music, theater and the arts.

A graduate from the Mannes College of Music in New York City, she was invited by Maurice Abravanel in 1984 to perform with the Utah Symphony Orchestra. She performed with Cesar Franck "Symphonic Variations."

Willetta married internationally recognized pianist, David Bar-Ilan, but gave up her musical career to become a journalist.

"I was on the stage as a kid and I hated it," she says. "I really love journalism. If I could afford it I'd like to just research and write. My very favorite places to be are in libraries and museums."

Willetta is owner of Willetta Enterprises, through which she markets her stories and freelance skills. Her food column has appeared in 28 newspapers, including The Times-News. She also writes for national magazines on science, arts, music and food.

Willetta works as a graphic artist, interior decorator, photography and food marketing.

She has worked for Look (as associate food editor), Gourmet (as a cover designer), Ladies Home Journal (as food editor) and Status magazine (as food editor) and is the author of two cook books — Cooking from Scratch: The Single Man's Guide to Making Out in the Kitchen and Space Age Cookery.

Willetta has two children: Daniela, 24, is a stock broker and Jeremy, 20, plays in a rock band and is studying economics at Columbia University. Both live in New York City.

KEEP switches shows

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls Radio Station KEEP is making a change in their nighttime and weekend programming at the end of the year.

Over the past 18 months Ed Busch has hosted "America Overnight," an all-night talk show based from Dallas, Tex.

Recently, RKO Radio Network, which distributes the program via satellite, announced the cancellation of "America Overnight." The program had only 50 affiliates nationwide and could not compete commercially with three other national talk programs.

Bob King, KEEP station manager, says Busch's talent will be sorely missed by a very receptive Magic Valley audience.

KEEP is picking up another talk service to replace "America Overnight." The new program from NBC called "Talknet." The program deals with people's everyday problems in a very unique fashion. Hosted by Bruce Williams and Sally Jessy Raphael, weeknights and on weekends by Dr. Harvey Ruben and Bernard Meltzer.

"Each of the hosts are sharp conversationalists," says King. "They have most all the answers."

"Talknet" will begin earlier than

"Overnight," running 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. weeknights and weekend nights plus Sunday mornings 7 a.m. to noon.

King added information about a rearrangement of KEEP's daytime personalities. Mark Capps will now be on weekday afternoons, D. Ray from 6 to 10 a.m. and King will be on mid-days.

According to King, KEEP is making a deeper commitment to becoming a full service adult radio station, adding more news, weather, talk and sports. Including broadcast rights to all CBS Radio sports events that start with the broadcast of the NFL Divisional Playoffs and the Superbowl.

Theory argues end to limited nuke war

By Laura Berman
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

President Reagan is busy marketing MX missiles to the public as Peacekeepers and popularizing the notion of limited nuclear warfare. Science 63 (January-February) suggests the need isn't bother.

A mysterious electromagnetic pulse, dubbed EMP, is triggered by nuclear explosions. EMP is "an intense burst of electromagnetic energy that can travel halfway across a continent at the speed of light and still pack enough punch to burn out electrical systems."

Ultimately, EMP could have consequences as devastating as the more obvious impact of a nuclear attack. In fact, writer William Broad argues that, from the Soviet view, an EMP attack would "be the ideal first step in a massive atomic assault against the United States." A single warhead detonated 250 miles over the Midwest would unleash enough electromagnetic energy to knock out all power and communications. Chaos would follow.

The strategy of limited nuclear war is based on an assumption that communications between troops and the president operate smoothly and quickly. "But EMP renders this assumption mere wishful thinking," says Broad. "and turns the notion of limited nuclear war into fantasy."

The Pentagon has been aware of the EMP problem since 1962. Broad says, when a nuclear blast in the South Pacific disrupted communications in Hawaii, 800 miles away.

Since then, the EMP effect has been cloaked in secrecy. Nuclear physicist Theodore B. Taylor, who directed a Pentagon examination of the effects of nuclear weapons, says other exotic effects of nuclear explosions, in addition to EMP, could be equally traumatic.

While EMP wouldn't directly injure people; the pulse would be conducted through power lines, telephone cables and any metal objects. People could be injured or killed while ironing. Listening to stereo heads or popping bread into toasters.

'82 country holiday albums so-so

By BILL BELL
New York Daily News

It's that time of year again, folks, when Nashville sends out its new Christmas albums by the bushel, hoping that somebody somewhere has come up with another "Rudolph, the Red Nosed Reindeer" or a new "Jingle Bell Rock."

It didn't happen again this year. But oh, how Nashville tried!

Even before the Thanksgiving turkey disappeared, the biggest bunch of country Christmas songs in years was moving into record racks and radio play lists. But there are no super-songs this time around.

The Oak Ridge Boys, Merle Haggard and Larry Gatlin and his brothers, to name three big acts, have Christmas albums, and a dozen other top country artists, including Dolly Parton, Roy Clark, Alabama and Charlie Pride, are pitching new Christmas singles.

That's a lot of action for a market that lasts for about a month and is over by Dec. 26. But it's worth it: Christmas albums by Kenny Rogers, Anne Murray and The Statler Brothers went gold last season, and if the season is right, a Christmas album will sell year after year after year.

This time around, the Oaks look like the biggest winners, with "Christmas" (MCA), an eclectic mix that goes from the reverence of "O Holy Night" to the whimsy of "Christmas Is Paintin' the Town" (done with a kids' chorus). One of the songs, "Christmas Carol," is about an old lady with a tin cup, tambourine and endless supply of what else?—Christmas carols. And there are the retooled golden chestnuts, "Silver Bells" and "White Christmas."

The biggest song, however, is "Thank God for Kids," which is showing up on the best-selling singles list. It isn't really a Christmas song, even if the Oaks do mention the holiday a few times. It's simply a jolly celebration of children in general.

Despite its title, "Hard Candy Christmas," the best-selling single off the new Parton album, is not a pure Christmas song either, but a recollection of a poor girl's Christmas past.

"A Gallin Family Christmas" (Columbia) is more traditional, with a strongly religious overview. "Sweet Baby Jesus," with a Baptist church handbell choir backing the Gallins, is the seasonal single. And the obligatory kids' chorus here is on "Away in a Manger." The brothers even tackle Handel, and like the Oaks, they do "Silent Night" and "O Holy Night."

Haggard may have produced the most country Christmas package of all in "Goin' Home for Christmas" (Epic), the 50th album of his staggeringly productive and successful career. "Rudolph" is on this one. So is "Santa Claus Is Comin' to Town" and the old Ernest Tubb hit, "Blue Christmas." Also reworked here is "If We Make It Through December," one of Hagg's finest ballads, and, once again, not strictly a Christmas song.

Haggard wrote six of the songs including "Daddy Won't Be Home Again for Christmas," about a guy in prison, and the bonus is the cover shot, which makes Hagg a dead ringer for Jesus.

Chances are, Haggard's other new album, "Going Where the Lonely Go" (Epic), is the one that most people will choose. And rightly so. It is, purely and simply, one of his jewels. It also is selling faster than anything he's done in years.

Backed by his splendid western jazz band, The Strangers, and especially by his longtime guitarists, Roy Nichols and Norm Hamlet, Haggard presents a ballad and blues set that shows him at his most personal and introspective. Haggard has long occupied a special place in popular American music, and this set shows why.

The best cuts, and it's hard to pick out only two or three, are "I Won't Give Up My Train" (an anthem to freedom), "Hail a Man" (a Willie Nelson ode that Haggard makes very much his own) and "If I Left It Up to You." Plus the title cut, a real gem.

In short, one of the year's top 10. At least.

Magazines

Eye Catchers:

People (Dec. 13). Yoko Ono stars on the magazine's cover, on the second anniversary of John Lennon's death, and campaigns vigorously for the worst mother of the year award.

Expanding on her views of motherhood, she says, "He (Sean, 7), has his independent life, and I have my work, but I think he sort of enjoys it." The story, with poignant pictures of Sean alone with his toys, is kind of heart-breaking.

Computers Magazine for Beginners (Dec.). This is, like it sounds, a computer magazine for kids — smart kids.

Articles give basic "computer" instructions for using Radio Shack and Atari computers. Matt Goldammer, 12, of Jefferson City, Mo., is Computikid of the month. He goes to computer camp, owns an Atari 400 and is proficient at "Bug Attack." He probably understands this magazine. I certainly don't. Subscriptions are $16 for 12 issues from Computikids Magazine, Subscription Services, P.O. 975, Sedalia, Mo. 63301.

Money (December) What to do with money for people who have it: Buy coffee, in gourmet varieties. A good coffee pot can be had for $45 to $90, claims Money.

From there, it's only another $5 to $10 a pound for beans and an additional investment in a coffee grinder. But that's only the beginning. "Coffee drinkers often adjust the blend to suit the time of day. Starting with a light fragrant brew first thing in the morning, they progress to complex harmonies of as many as six different beans and roasts for their after-dinner cup."

Starting economic realities boldly in the face, the magazine profiles a Chicago executive who's out of work.

'The Toy' a great idea that's wasted

Chicago Sun-Times

I've got an idea. They should shelve "The Toy" immediately after Christmas, and then make this movie all over again in a couple of years, and do it right.

"The Toy" contains such a great notion for a satirical comedy that it's a shame to see it wasted on this limp, gooey mess. And it's painful to see what they've done here with Richard Pryor, one of our brightest and edgiest comedians, by turning him into family entertainment.

"The Toy" begins with a simple premise (all the great comic premises seem simple). A millionaire, played by Jackie Gleason, lives in lonely splendor in a Louisiana mansion with his buxom wife, a herd of servants and a little son who comes home from boarding school for Christmas.

The millionaire, who can't relate with his son, tries to buy love by telling the kid he can have anything he wants for Christmas. The kid goes to a department store and picks out what he wants. He wants Richard Pryor.

Pryor arrives at the department store by his own route. He's a former newspaperman, unemployed because of the recession, and he's so desperate for work that he takes a job as a maid at Gleason's mansion.

He agrees to wear the maid uniform, skirt and all, but forgets to shave his moustache and Gleason fires him. Up until this point, the movie is fairly promising, but it goes wrong after Pryor fast-talks his way into the department store job, and the kid decides he's a toy.

What we ought to have here is the setup for some sharp-edged social satire. Pryor, who is so good at zeroing in on American institutions, hangups and hypocrisies, could have had a field day with subjects like the commercialism of Christmas, the subtleties of racism and even the trend toward brainier toys. But no. The movie doesn't take that route.

Instead, it turns into a soupy, maudlin Christmas saga, and we know we're in trouble the moment we realize "The Toy" wants us to like its characters.

It's a waste all the way around, but the biggest waste is of Pryor's talent. Here is this anarchic, penetrating comic intelligence, and they're trying to package it as sweetness and light. It won't work.

Germany. The adults, Hans and Uta, are chemists whose "Christmas wish" is to obtain work permits so they can stay in the United States. The kiddie couple consists of Hugo, a 12-year-old native of El Salvador, and Janice, who looks Polynesian. Why these children are representing Hamburg is never explained.

A fine folk tale:

"The Juggler of Notre Dame" is a folk tale that traces back to medieval times. Through the centuries, the basic plot has been adapted for the opera, the theater and a popular short story by Anatole France. Now the Paulist Fathers and Capital Cities Productions have come up with a syndicated television version that will be seen at different times throughout the country. It would be easy to overlook amid the network offerings, but "The Juggler of Notre Dame" is well worth watching.

The performance of Carl Carsson in the title role is what makes this Christmas special truly special. Carsson, an accomplished Swedish juggler for whom acting has been a sideline, brings rare emotional honesty to his characterization of a guilt-ridden former circus performer haunted by his wife's fatal fall from the high wire.

"The Juggler of Notre Dame" has been updated extensively (and not always successfully), but it remains at heart a miracle play, with an ending that aims to be as inspirational in the 20th century as it was in the 12th. The miracle is moving, all right, but not so much as the human lesson the juggler learns from a hobo:

"Sometimes there's nothing one can do but go on ... and live."

Ratings

60 Minutes (No. 4) showed that prime time viewers want at least one hour a week of top public affairs programming.

Circus of the Stars (No. 5) was unadulterated entertainment. Schlocky but harmless.

MASH (No. 7) represents another gratifying vote for intelligent comedy. Falcon Crest (No. 8) shows that a lead-in from Dallas can make anything a hit in the ratings.

Something So Right (No. 9) was an excellent family program. Its big ratings encourage more of the same. Well done, Nielsen families.

Simon & Simon (No. 10), a ratings failure last season, is a hit mostly because it follows another light-hearted adventure series called Magnum, P.I. This is what the networks mean when they say two shows are "compatible." In most other time slots, Simon & Simon almost certainly would flop again.

On the subject of flops, it's sad to see some of the finest shows on television residing week after week in Nielsen's basement. All of them are on NBC, the network that cares enough to send some of the very best weekly series.

Brief film reviews

From Times-News wire services

THE CHOSEN: An adaptation of Chaim Potok's novel about two Jewish young men, one much more religious than the other, growing up in New York during World War II. The film is a sweet celebration of tradition and scholarship, which marks it as a very old-fashioned but refreshing entertainment. Rating: Berson and Rod Steiger costar. PG, 3 stars.

DEATHTRAP: Ira Levin's actor-proof mystery performed beautifully by Michael Caine and Christopher Reeve as adversaries over the author of the hit play. PG, 3½ stars.

FRIDAY THE 13TH, PART III: Twelve people are horribly murdered in the third episode of this abysmal summer slash-and-gore series. BUT, they're murdered in superb 3-D!!! The scene where one victim's eyeballs pop out into the laps of the audience is a real milestone. One star for the movie, three for the dimensions. Rated R for the grisly violence.

HEIDI'S SONG: An animated musical version of "Heidi," featuring the voices of Lorne Greene and Sammy Davis Jr. G, 2 stars.

THE MISSIONARY: An occasionally amusing but drawn-out comedy of manners about a timid missionary who comes alive when assigned to save the souls of London prostitutes. Michael Palin of the Monty Python gang costars with Maggie Smith and Trevor Howard. R, 2½ stars.

MONSIGNOR: Christopher Reeve stars in the highly implausible story of a Vatican priest who sleeps with a student nun to please himself and makes deals with the Mafia to help the Church's finances. An outrageous drama that just might make your jaw drop. R, 2½ stars.

MY FAVORITE YEAR: Peter Onorato gives a grand performance as a drunken old movie star akin to Errol Flynn in the story of a young TV comedy writer in the '50s trying to keep O'Toole sober for a guest shot on a live TV show. A marvelous celebration of stardom; youthful enthusiasm and the high energy of live TV. PG, 4 stars.

NATIONAL LAMPOON'S CLASS REUNION: A dim-witted variation on "Animal House," with young adults making fools of themselves at the 10-year reunion of their high school class. Weak slapstick combined with a pathetic spoof of dead-legend horror films. R, 1½ stars.

Q: A surprisingly entertaining horror film about a winged serpent that terrorizes New York City. Michael Moriarty steals the show as a two-bit thief who finds the monster's hiding place and tries to use that knowledge for personal gain. R, 3 stars.

THE SECRET OF NIMH: If this charming animated movie about the adventures of a widow farm mouse smacks of vintage Walt Disney, it's just that—a return-to-classic animation adeptly pulled off by a group of former Disney animators. G, but there is some violence.

THE SECRET POLICEMAN'S OTHER BALL: Four members of the Monty Python comedy troupe join Peter Cook and various rock stars in performances filmed during an Amnesty International fund-raiser in London last year. There are some moments that will make you laugh, but paying first-run prices for a film with production values this bad will only make you cry. R, profanity, adult theme humor.

SILENT RAGE: Chuck Norris stars in a thriller that is a cross between "Dirty Harry" and "Halloween," with a low-key sheriff chasing a medically treated killer who is virtually indestructible. The excessive blood and guts diminishes what could have been a most entertaining movie. Rated R, 2 stars.

SMASH PALACE: A strong domestic drama from New Zealand about a race car enthusiast who freaks out when he finds himself trapped in a dull marriage. R, 3½ stars.

STAR TREK II: THE WRATH OF KHAN: Further and far more entertaining adventures of the Starship Enterprise crew, this time in trouble because Capt. Kirk left the evil Khan (Ricardo Montalban) stranded on a galaxy a few light years ago. The characterizations are strong here, and this film may go down to make a "Trek" out of a disbeliever. PG, 3½ stars.

STRIPES: Bill Murray's latest comedy is great, irreverent entertainment. Murray plays a laid-back anarchist who, with pal Harold Ramis, impulsively joins the Army and turns his platoon upside down. P.J. Soles, Warren Oates and John Candy also star. Rated R, 3½ stars.

SUMMER LOVENS: A pretty but inconsequential teen-age love story set in Greece, with a young American girl (Darryl Hannah) learning to accept her boyfriend sleeping with another woman. The Greek locations are gorgeous and so are many of the bodies on display, but the story builds a head of steam and goes nowhere. R, 2½ stars.

'Missionary' the best of British humor

By KATHLEEN CARROLL
New York Daily News

"The Missionary," a delectably daffy British comedy, gets off to an inspired start.

It is 1906, a time when every fleet-footed Englishman was jogging to the beat of the "Charlots of Fine" theme song. The Rev. Charles Fortescue, who is played by the movie's creator, Michael Palin, has just returned from darkest Africa, where he taught the natives the basic facts about the Magna Carta while they, in turn, taught him a few things about fertility symbols.

His childhood sweetheart, Deborah Fitzbanks (played by the adorably prim, Phoebe Nicholls), has waited "10 years, 44 days and 45 minutes" for this reunion, having spent these last lonely years carefully filling his letters in numbered boxes. Fitzbanks, who displays a great passion for organization while maintaining the correct distance from her intended—a man she hopes will be a pillar of the church or, at the very least, a vicar—is quickly consumed with the task of planning the seating arrangements for their wedding.

The Rev. Fortescue, who has never shirked his duties, is quick to report to the Bishop of London, who puts him in charge of the city's "fallen women." "Go amongst the prostitutes," orders the bishop. "Find out what they do, where they do it and stop them from doing it."

With his mission financed by the all too generous Lady Ames (Maggie Smith), who is also quite keen about African fertility symbols, Fortescue dedicates his life to saving the souls of London's harlots. However, the bishop is less than pleased with Fortescue's work, for it seems that "the fallen women" have a tendency to fall into Fortescue's bed and he is simply too nice to refuse them a little affection.

Produced and written by Palin, a member of Britain's best loved comedy group—Monty Python—"The Missionary" is practically as on-point as Fortescue, whose worst sin is that he is just a thoroughly decent chap.

True, the movie is nothing more than an overly extended sketch and director Richard Lancelotti has trouble sustaining the level of merriment.

but, even so, Palin has a wonderfully wry sense of humor and he has wisely surrounded himself with some of the best actors Britain has to offer. Maggie Smith, Denholm Elliott, Michael Hordern and Trevor Howard are in splendid form as always. Smith is crisply seductive as Lady Ames. Hordern is hilarious as her befuddled butler who is forever losing himself in the Ames' 400-room mansion ("Head him off before he gets to the maze," demands Lady Ames, who knows her wandering butler all too well).

Howard is equally comical as Lord Ames, a chronic complainer who detests the upper and the lower classes with equal relish.

What's what

Q. You said the state where the fewest hammers are bought by women is Texas. In what state are the most hammers bought by women?
A. California. Pretty strong bunch, the California women. This is not to say there's anything weak about Texas women. It's just that if they want something hammered, they can find a man to hammer it.

Maybe you've read that the security guard forces are growing in a rapid manner. This is not just because of the rising street crime. Recession layoffs. When people think they're going to lose their jobs, they become more inclined to steal from their bosses. The detective outfits get a lot of contracts from company owners who want their employees watched.

BRIDAL VEIL

Q. Who wore the first bridal veil?
A. Nobody knows. Can only report the first bridal veils draped all the way to the floor, and they weren't designed to conceal the brides' faces, but their waistlines.

That the car-repair mechanic makes good money during a recession has been reported. Client asks what other occupations do well when times are hard. Those who deal in welding rod. Likewise, oatmeal distributors. Shoe repairmen, too, as you might expect. And encyclopedia sales managers prosper when unemployment is high.

Q. Where'd we get "the hoosegow" to mean the jail?
A. From the same place we got "the jug" — the Spanish "jergado" meaning "tribunal."

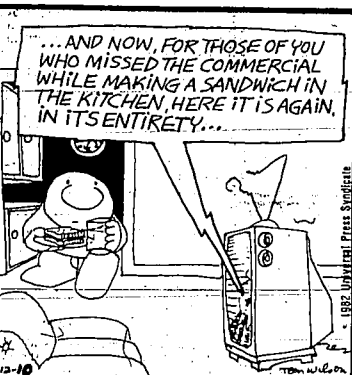

DAN MCGREW

Robert Service wrote "The Shooting of Dan McGrew" for recitation at a church program. But somehow, church or no, he couldn't get it down on paper without throwing in the realism of some small profanity. So he just gave up and put it aside for many years.

Q. What's the commonest complaint that homeowners have about their houses?
A. Too few electrical outlets.

Am told muskmelons now sell for about $12 apiece in Japan.

Survey finds high daytime ratings

College kids all soaped up

By PATRICK YOUNG
Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — Someone out there on the nation's college campuses loves television soap operas — a lot of someones. The first national survey of daytime-drama viewing by college students reports 56 percent watch at least one soap opera at least once a week, women viewers outnumber men more than 2-to-1, and the students prefer ABC's soaps by a wide margin.

The high number watching daytime dramas wasn't a surprise. "We realized college students were watching when we tried to schedule afternoon classes," says Barry Sherman of the University of Georgia, who helped conduct the study.

But the number of males who watch and the high ratings given ABC's soaps were unexpected. Students rated four of ABC's five soaps among their five favorite daytime dramas. Among those who watched such shows, 73 percent said they saw "General Hospital" at least once a week, 58 percent viewed "All My Children," and 45 percent watched "One Life to Live." CBS' "The Young and the Restless," the top non-ABC show, drew 29 percent; ABC's "Ryan's Hope" 28 percent.

"We suspected they watched ABC, but not to the extent they watched ABC and excluded others," says Guy Lomelt, supervisor of social research for ABC, which financed the study.

The survey was conducted last April on 11 campuses by local professors who specialize in mass communications research. The campuses were selected to give a representative cross-section of the nation's more than 7 million college students, whose television preferences are not recorded by such rating services as the A.C. Nielsen Co.

"The college audience is one often talked about, but one where there is very little hard data that demonstrate college students are watching daytime television," Lomelt says. "We wanted to be able to document that they are watching."

ABC is circulating the survey findings in hopes of attracting more advertisers to its soaps.

A total of 1,836 students were asked in telephone interviews if they watch "daytime serials." The 1,023 who did were interviewed further. The survey included ABC-originated questions and a series of questions developed by the 11 researchers to help in their own projects.

Seventy-one percent of the college soap-opera fans were women, and 29 percent were men.

"That is a surprise," Sherman says. "Even a few years ago, the assumption was that only 7 percent to 15 percent male."

And Richard Allen of the University of Michigan, who also conducted part of the survey, says it may underestimate the number of males watching soaps.

"It may be males are reluctant to admit they watch soap operas because they are associated with females," Allen says.

Researchers say ABC's daytime dramas are particularly popular among students because they tend to feature more college-age characters, have a higher sexual content and now use more on-location footage and innovative production techniques.

"There is nothing in prime time that compares with daytime television in terms of sexual content," Sherman says. "It's a new era."

Soap opera viewing appears to be a social event for college students, an experience shared with friends. Twenty percent say they watch alone, while 69 percent say they watch in groups of two to five.

Students were interviewed at Cleveland State, Ohio State and San Diego State universities, the State University of New York at Buffalo, and the universities of Georgia, Maryland, Michigan, Missouri, North Carolina, Texas and Wisconsin.

Blood pressure score easily misread

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Association

DEAR DR. LAMB — Our son who just became 40 years old has just had a complete physical. He is 6 feet 4 and weighs 218 pounds. His blood pressure was 126 over 90.

The doctor told him he was quite concerned about the 90. If it had been 89 he would not have mentioned it. I always thought it was the top reading that counted. Could you explain to me what the doctor meant concerning 90? He also said he had a medium frame and should weigh about 195.

DEAR READER — The importance of high blood pressure is what it does to your arteries. That in turn may cause heart attacks and strokes. A recent review based on worldwide studies of when physicians should treat blood pressure notes that the blood pressure should be considered along with the blood cholesterol and whether a patient smokes or not.

In other words, if your son doesn't smoke and his cholesterol is an optimal low normal, his borderline pressure may not be so important.

But if he has the higher a person's blood pressure is the greater his risk of artery damage that leads to heart attacks and strokes. The individuals with the lowest rate of such problems tend to have pressure readings nearer 115 over 75 or lower.

The old idea was that the lower blood pressure reading (diastolic) should be below 90. That is why your son's doctor was concerned. It should be lower and I'd like to see it below 90 for most people.

However, I must add that the difference between 89 and 90 is unimportant. The human ear cannot discriminate the changes in sound sharply enough to measure blood pressure that accurately. Your son's actual diastolic pressure may have been anywhere from 85 to 95 and the doctor might hear 90.

The top reading (systolic) is also as important as the diastolic pressure. We learned that from the Framingham studies that showed an increase, particularly in strokes, with persistently elevated top (systolic) readings.

Your son's best course would be to get this. That may lower his pressure to more optimal levels. I'm sending The Health Letter 15-8, Your Vital Blood Pressure, which explains the importance and management of blood pressure. Others can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — When I was 60 and had been without calcium tablets for three months I broke one hip. At 69, after another period of no calcium, I broke the other hip in a fall on ice.

I have been taking calcium on the advice of a physician in Connecticut but a kind and conscientious doctor here in New Hampshire said I should not take calcium. He, of course, felt vindicated after I had difficulty passing a kidney stone. It was the calcium oxalate kind.

Now I am in a quandary. I know I need the calcium for my bones but I don't need it for my kidneys. What am I to do?

DEAR READER — The question of whether to restrict calcium intake in a person who has calcium kidney stones is a subject of much disagreement. The real answer probably depends on the way each individual handles calcium.

To start with, you form calcium stones because there is an increased amount of calcium in the urine. Regardless of how much calcium is in your blood or your bones it is the calcium in your urine that counts. Doctors can decrease the calcium in the urine by giving patients thiazides. These work on the kidney to prevent the movement of calcium out of the blood and into the urine. In that way they prevent kidney stones. If you can do that and follow a regular diet with adequate calcium for your bones that could be your solution.

Beyond that, the calcium in your urine may not be solely dependent upon the calcium in your diet. It can come from your bones, weakening your bones and resulting in fractures. Restricting calcium in the diet makes this problem worse, as in your case. Before restricting dietary calcium a doctor should study his patient well enough to know whether the patient has an increased calcium absorption.

If she doesn't the calcium should not be restricted. Since patients with osteoporosis (dissolving bones that fracture) often have decreased calcium absorption anyway, this is important in your case.

Unfaithful fiance wants 2nd chance

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY — I'm nearly 39 and want to get married. I met Junior in 1972, got engaged in 1973 and set a wedding date, but five weeks before the wedding Junior canceled out. He said he wasn't ready.

We went together for six more years, and it was one excuse after another. We work for the same company but at different locations. Junior travels for the company. One day he came to see me and a front tooth was missing! (He said he walked into a door.)

Later, company records passed through my hands and I discovered his tooth had been knocked out by a girl named Gloria who works in his office. They were playing basketball and he went to see her to find out what my competition looked like. She was a pretty, young widow.

I told her I was engaged to Junior, and she said so was she. She had a ring, but it wasn't as big as mine. They had been engaged for three years!

Gloria broke her engagement to Junior and so did I. Now he's been camping on my doorstep saying that he loves me and wants to marry me. He's begging me to set another date. He even cried. He's the only man I've ever loved. What should I do?

— A FOOL IN LOVE
DEAR FOOL: If you want a husband who can't be trusted out of your sight, marry Junior.

DEAR ABBY: John (made-up name) is my husband of six years. I am John's second wife. He has a 25-year-old daughter who was married four years ago. I will call her Sue. Sue's marriage ended in divorce. At the time of her wedding, John wanted very much to walk his daughter down the aisle, but Sue did not allow him that pleasure. He was invited to attend as a guest and sat on the sidelines.

Now Sue is getting married again. This wedding is going to be another biggie. Sue has informed her father that the reception she is planning will cost around $5,000 and John asked Sue, "Am I to have the pleasure of being your dad down the aisle this time?" Sue replied, "If you pay for the reception, you will."

Advice

Johns wants more than anything in the world to walk his daughter down the aisle so he has agreed to the deal. I think this kind of trade-off is the pits. How would you handle this?

DEAR WIFE: What's to handle? If John is willing to pay for the pleasure of walking his daughter down the aisle, and she is willing to sell it, it's a fair exchange for both.

DEAR ABBY: This is the first time I've ever written to you, but after your column on the sexual abuse (rape) of a child, I had to write and tell you what it meant to me.

My 11-year-old daughter, who always reads "Dear Abby," came to me and said, "Daddy has been doing that to me and my brother every time you are gone." (He is their stepfather.)

I questioned my son, who is 6, and he said it was true. I nearly went into shock. I went straight to my husband and asked if what the children said was true, and he said "Yes, I couldn't help it — you are always sick."

I called the police and had him arrested, but he denied everything, including his confession to me!

I can't understand it — He's walking around free on bail, and we are living in hell.

Please keep campaigning on this subject, Abby. I never dreamed it would happen in our family, but it did.

— ARKANSAS MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: There is no reason for you to be "living in hell." If you feel that your husband is a threat to you and your children, take legal steps at once to ensure your protection.
