Evans wants increase in sales tax

Delivers 'State of State'

By MARK SHENFELT
United Press International

BOISE — Gov. John Evans said Monday the Legislature must resist the temptation to cut programs as a way out of the state's fiscal crisis. Such a course would backfire against Idaho in the form of an underdeveloped economy and an ill-educated work force, he said.

In his annual State of the State message to the Legislature, Evans repeated several times the message which he said cannot survive if spending is cut further.

The 26-minute speech — which drew smattering of applause seven times from the audience of legislators, elected state officials and Supreme Court justices — featured repeated warnings against "regressive" program eliminations, particularly in the areas of public schools and higher education.

The warning tone of the address was in contrast to many of his past State of the State speeches, in which he attempted to chart bold courses for Idaho via program expansions.

"Now is not the time to pull back and draw the wagons into a protective and limiting circle," he said.

He said continued investments in the education system and essential government programs, such as those for the elderly and the disadvantaged — combined with efforts to improve the economy and the job market — should be the state's central priority.

"If we hesitate or refuse to make these investments in our people and in our state, we will find ourselves left behind in the dust of the more ambitious states willing to make that investment and move out ahead of us," he said.

Evans repeated his plea to lawmakers to approve a package of tax increases to get the state out of its fiscal dilemma, which includes a projected $50 million to $66 million revenue shortfall this fiscal year and a similar shortfall in fiscal 1984.

He specifically called on lawmakers to permanently raise the sales tax to 4 percent. Urged "its current 3 percent rate and urged enactment of legislation to set up a state revenue-sharing plan for local governments in the tradition of the Reagan administration's New Federalism program.

The Legislature this year must take "bold and aggressive action" to preserve state programs and agencies, he said, "or... we will close off opportunities for our citizens."

The governor said legislators must help the state take advantage of growth in high-technology industries and keep abreast of trends in international trade and the agricultural industry.

Preservation of the colleges and universities is critical to providing the state with a well-education work force that will be able to compete against other states and other nations in the coming decades, he said.

He said flatly that agricultural research and extension services under

Plan gets mixed reviews

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

With one exception, most Magic Valley legislators say that Gov. John Evans' "State of the State" address was old news.

But during his speech on Monday, the governor called for establishing a revenue-sharing program to aid city and county governments. It was a move that caught many lawmakers by surprise. "I really was stunned," House Speaker Tom Silvers, Elgin Falls, said of the revenue-sharing proposal. "It doesn't appeal to me as a solution."

Evans asked legislators to enact a 1-cent sales-tax increase, half of which would be distributed to cities and counties "with no strings attached."

"The revenue-sharing concept sounds like a good way to solve some of our local governments' problems, like streets, bridges, sewers and police protection, that we've been ignoring — too long," said Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey.

"Right now, we have communities that literally can't handle a new plant locating in their area," he said. "They just don't have the money to support the extra services industry requires.

"We've talked for years about allowing these local governments to set their own local option taxes, so they can help themselves, but it just doesn't get passed," Peavey said. "This revenue-sharing concept would be just as good, and hopefully, it will be approved this session."

But Silvers firmly opposes the plan. "It would create a new level of bureaucracy," he said.

"Federal revenue sharing may have a lot of benefits, but you always come back to the prevailing argument that the federal government really doesn't have any money to share," Silvers said, "and neither does Idaho."

He said state government would become a collecting agent for local taxes and state costs would skyrocket, as the extra sales tax was collected and then dispersed to communities statewide.

"That's playing Robin Hood games," Silvers said. "It's an attempt to redistribute wealth where there is none."

Reagan finds short cut to 'crop swap' program

By NORMAN D. SANDLER
United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Reagan today will tell hard-pressed farmers he will not wait for Congress to set up a "crop swap" program that pays them surplus grain in exchange for reduced production.

Reagan will announce in a speech to the 64th meeting of the American Farm Bureau Federation in Dallas that the government will go ahead with the program despite the lame-duck 97th Congress' failure to approve it, aides said Monday.

Administration officials, who worked through the weekend on final details, said sign-ups will begin Jan. 17, in time for farmers to make decisions before the start of spring planting.

The officials said Reagan also is expected to announce other moves to improve the plight of farmers, whose protests turned violent in Colorado last week over farm foreclosures.

Administration officials decided to go forward with the grain swap program only after a lengthy review by government lawyers concluded legislation that had been sought was not needed because the essential feature of the program is an in-kind payment of grain and not cash payments.

However, the officials did not rule out the possibility of a court challenge.

The White House put the finishing touches on Reagan's announcement of the "payment-in-kind" program as the president moved closer to crucial final decisions on the fiscal 1984 budget.

Reagan met with his top advisers and key administration officials, including Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger, to discuss ways of reducing deficits that could exceed $200 billion next year and rise as high as $300 billion by 1988.

Budgetary reasons, in part, prompted Agriculture Secretary John Block to consult last year with farm leaders and agricultural economists on alternatives to traditional support programs that pay farmers cash for taking acreage out of production.

These programs have done little to prevent record and near-record harvests that created huge surpluses that have driven down grain prices and plunged agriculture into its worst financial period since the Great Depression.

"Farm income has hit a 50-year low and the costs of federal support programs have risen sharply, adding to the budget deficit and to Reagan's problems in achieving his goal of weaning the farm economy from its dependence on government aid."

Inmates release hostages

By STEVEN N. COHN
United Press International

OSSING, N.Y. — Rebellious inmates today broke a three-day uprising early this morning, freeing unharmed the 17 guards held hostage at the maximum security prison once called Sing Sing, officials said.

From on a hill overlooking cell block "B," the sound of cell doors shutting could be heard as the inmates locked themselves in.

Officials said there was no promise of amnesty in ending the uprising.

The prisoners were the first to announce the end of the takeover. An inmate spokesman said over a bullhorn the hostages were being freed after local television news programs broadcast a list of the prisoners' demands.

Cheering was heard from the cell block as the demands were broadcast. Five hostages were released earlier in the day, and the remaining 12 were freed in pairs starting just shortly after 11:30 p.m. EST Monday.

At 12:29 a.m. Tuesday, the watch commander announced on the prison radio that the last two captives had walked to freedom.

"The hostages have been safely returned to the custody of the department," Corrections Commissioner Thomas Coughlin said.

He said the hostages, some of whom were slightly injured in the uprising that began 7:40 p.m. Saturday, were being checked by doctors.

The inmates returned to their cells and were being fed, Coughlin said.

He said he agreed with some of the inmates' demands and that they should be implemented, but that the "final agreement" with the prisoners did not include amnesty.

The worst prison uprising in New York since the bloody Attica riot of 1971 ended almost 53 hours after it began.

Word the end was near came about 11:30 p.m. when, speaking over a bullhorn, a prisoner said the hostage were being freed.

"We are in the process right now of releasing the hostages," the inmate said. "We are going to release all of the hostages two at a time."

Apparently fearful of retaliation, the inmate spokesman made an appeal to reporters.

"We're alone now. Don't let us down. We're depending on you. We responded to you, you responded to us, we appreciate that. The hostages are being released. There are no broken bones, and nobody is hurt."

A cheer went up in besieged cell block "B," which houses 600 prisoners, when the demands were broadcast.

Gov. Mario Cuomo, who directed negotiations with the inmate from his New York office, said the state would not meet any demands until inmates released the hostages.

Supreme Court agrees to hear Silkwood case

By LYLE DENNISTON
The Baltimore Sun

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court has agreed to consider the rights of workers at nuclear plants to collect damages if they are poisoned by radiation.

In a brief order Tuesday, the court said it would hear an appeal that seeks to revive a $10 million damage award to the family of a worker contaminated by radiation at an Oklahoma plant.

That award was thrown out by a lower federal court on the theory that the federal government has taken over the entire task of controlling radiation hazards; thus wiping out any state law attempting to punish a company for allowing such hazards to exist.

The test case before the court involves a woman, now dead, who had become a major figure in the nationwide controversy over nuclear power, Karen G. Silkwood.

She and other workers complained that Kerr-McGee Nuclear Corp. repeatedly violated federal nuclear safety rules at its plutonium fuel rod manufacturing plant some 30 miles from Oklahoma City. Silkwood was killed in a hit-and-run accident when she was on her way to meet a newspaper reporter to hand over documents about the plant's hazards.

After her death, her family sued Kerr-McGee because Silkwood had been exposed to radioactive plutonium three times in 1974, while working as a laboratory analyst at the Cimarron plant.

A jury awarded her estate $500,000 to compensate for her injuries, plus $10 million in "punitive" damages as a way to punish Kerr-McGee and to deter it from maintaining any safety hazards in the future. That was the first time in history any court had awarded "punitive" damages in a radiation case.

The 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals voided the $10 million award, and Silkwood's father then asked the Supreme Court to revive the $10 million part of the award. The court is not expected to issue its final ruling until next year.

The justices put the Silkwood case on their docket after returning from a four-week recess. In another action, the court turned down the last appeal in the celebrated case of ex-Army Capt. Jeffrey R. MacDonald, now serving three life prison sentences for the murder of his pregnant wife and two daughters nearly 13 years ago.

MacDonald was convicted of a crime that he has insisted repeatedly was committed by a group of drug-crazed "hippies" who broke into the family apartment at Fort Bragg, N.C.

Weather causes four deaths

By United Press International

A new round of heavy rain triggered earth slides and floods in Washington Monday and drove hundreds of families from their homes in Louisiana as rivers rose over their banks once more.

At least four people have been killed since Sunday as a result of high winds, ice-coated roads or mudslides.

Snow mixed with rain pushed across the northern Rockies to southern Montana and a high wind warning was posted for north central Wyoming and the upper Yellowstone Valley in Montana.

Hais Koffman, 43, of Sudro Woolley, Wash., was killed Monday when a mudslide collapsed the barn in which he was working. A Skagit County Sheriff's Department spokesman said Koffman and an unidentified number of calves were buried under the mud.

Report says Baker won't run

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker will not seek re-election in 1984 — but may run for president, it was reported Monday.

The Knoxville Journal, in a copyright story in Tuesday's editions, quoted sources as saying Baker, a Tennessee Republican serving his third six-year term, may make a second run for the presidency in 1984 if President Reagan chooses not to seek re-election.

Tom Griscorn, Baker's chief spokesman, told United Press International the report was "premature."

Baker is vacationing in an undisclosed Florida city with his wife, Joy, and could not be reached for comment.

"We can't confirm the reports that are out right now. Sen. Baker himself will make the decision on seeking a Washington Monday night. "I can assure you that the senator himself has not made the decision at this point, and when he does he will have a public statement to make."

The aide also said Baker hopes Reagan will seek a second term but that Baker "will take another look" at running for president.

Part of satellite leaves orbit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A piece of "space junk" from a disabled Soviet nuclear-powered spy satellite has burned up in the atmosphere, but two bigger sections including the reactor are still descending, Pentagon sources said Monday.

"We're primarily interested in the nuclear reactor, which is still up there," one source said.

This is the biggest and heaviest part of the 6,000-pound ocean surveillance satellite, parts of which might survive the plunge through the atmosphere and hit somewhere on Earth.

Today's weather

Northern Nevada and Utah:

Synopsis:

Fair and mild.

That's the outlook for the Magic Valley area for most of Idaho through midweek.

The extended forecast calls for continued dry and mild conditions with partly cloudy skies through Saturday in the Magic Valley. Highs will be in the 40s or low 50s with lows from 20 to 30. Similar conditions are forecast for northern Idaho, although there is a chance of rain in that area Thursday and again Saturday.

A northwest air flow continues across Idaho, bringing fair skies to the south and a tapering off of clouds and showers in the north. Temperatures will continue above normal.

On Monday, temperatures were far above normal in all sections, rising into the 40s and 50s. Lewiston set a record with the state's warmest reading, 60 degrees. The coldest morning low was 9 degrees at Sun Valley.

Winds were gusty, reaching near 40 mph in the north and near 30 mph in the southeast. Velocities were only about 10 to 15 mph in the southwest.

A few clouds and showers remained over north Idaho after a band of precipitation crossed that area Sunday night. Precipitation reports ranged from .39 inch at Mullan to .61 inch at Sandpoint. Elsewhere in the nation Monday, the warmest temperature reported was 86

U.S. observers are concerned that radioactive chunks might hit land, as some did in Canada from the breakup of another Soviet spaceship in 1978.

A smaller third section of Cosmos 1402, described as a "piece of space junk," preceded the other two parts into the atmosphere within the last few days and burned up, the sources said.

Magna voters mutiny ended

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Salvadoran President Arturo Magna Monday ended a mutiny against the defense minister, calling it a "grave danger to the republic."

Magna, in his first comment on the rebellion, demanded Lt. Col. Sigifredo Ochoa "to comply immediately without conditions" to a Jan. 5 transfer order to El Salvador's Uruguayan embassy — a post of virtual exile.

Ochoa, touted by U.S. advisers in El Salvador as one of the nation's most effective field commanders, defied the order and demanded the resignation of Defense Minister Josea Guillot Garcia, claiming the top general was corrupt.

"Obedience, discipline, subordination and respect for the hierarchy are fundamental pillars of all armed forces institutions and their members are obligated to the strict observance," Magna said in a statement.

He said he would strive for the "maintenance of the dominion of the law and the preservation of the institutionality in this moment of grave danger for the republic."

Garcia said Ochoa could face "military justice." He added if the mutiny does not end soon "we are going to be in even more trouble than we're in now," because the command structure could collapse.

Clue to cancer cause found

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Brown University researchers said Monday they have uncovered evidence that the body carries two different cancer-causing genes. Their findings could have important implications for controlling the disease.

The research involves "oncogenes," or cancer-causing genes. Brown scientists found that a tiny piece of the genetic material is activated in the bodies of rats when their damaged livers are regenerating.

The research by Michele Goyette, Peter R. Shank, Christos J. Petropoulos and Nelson Fausto provides evidence for the growing belief among scientists that cancer-causing oncogenes normally serve an important purpose in the body.

The Brown scientists are now trying to learn how the rat cells turned off the cancer-causing gene once the liver was regenerated. If they are successful, doctors may eventually be able to discover how to thwart the gene's activities if it starts to produce a tumor.

Their results are to be published later this year in the journal Science.

The University of Idaho "is too critical a program to target for elimination" and that "further cutbacks in state government programs essential to the health, safety and well-being of our citizens are no longer feasible."

Only Alabama, Arkansas and Mississippi spend less per capita on public education than Idaho. Evans told the 105 legislators, who gathered in the House chambers to hear the speech.

And he said twice for emphasis that the percentage of an Idahoan's income paid in taxes to state and local government has dropped 22 percent in the past five years — demonstrating dwindling income for the state.

"Just as there are no frills left to cut out of state government, there are no frills left to cut out of education," Evans warned lawmakers.

"We are long since past the days when the one-room schoolhouse was the norm, yet our willingness to understand this most basic government service seems to indicate that some of us want to return to the good old days — well, not I."

Reaction

Stivers opposes any type of tax increase this year. He says that businesses and individuals cannot afford more state government during a recession. Instead, he advocates some program cuts, emergency fund transfers and mortgaging some state buildings to generate money to balance the state's $404 million budget.

Except for Peavey, the region's sole Democratic delegate, Magic Valley lawmakers expressed disappointment with Evans' annual message. They said they were looking for more guidance in solving the funding crisis, than just having the governor beguile his unwillingness to approve budget cuts — especially in education.

"He outlined the problems and suggested how we could help cities, counties and public schools, but he did not tell us how to handle our revenue education is. But we also need strong help with the rest of our state's society."

Nelbaur said Evans' call for more high-technology education — computer and electronics — will produce too many graduates who will have to leave the state to find work.

"We just don't have that many firms in Idaho that need that type of work force, and by promoting it too hard, we'll force our youngsters out of the state," he said.

The governor's call for a sales-tax increase goes against the desires of Magic Valley residents, said Rep. Donna Scott, R-Twin Falls.

"We have to look for budget cuts before considering any type of tax increase," she said. "I have not heard from anyone back home asking me to raise their taxes."

Falling tax income, growth to squeeze state's finances

By MARK SHENFELT
United Press International

BOISE — Declining tax income will combine with population growth in a crippling pincer action against Idaho's local governments throughout the 1980s unless the Legislature significantly boosts revenues, a report by the state Financial Management Division said Monday.

The 86-page study, unveiled as lawmakers convened for their 1983 session, sketched a bleak future for the state and its communities if government leaders fail to soon beef up Idaho's tax structure.

Continued reductions in federal aid, further restrictions on local property-taxing power and failure by the state sales and income taxes to produce revenue equal to demand will increasingly paralyze city and county governments through the rest of the decade, said the report by Gov. John Evans' fiscal staff.

Economic and fiscal analysts prepared the report under the direction of Evans and the Idaho Investment Panel, a body created by the governor last year.

"If current service levels are maintained, there will still be a need to spend more on the future," the report said. "Rising wages and a growing population will force expenditure levels up throughout the 1980s."

The report predicted that state general-account revenue will grow 7.5 percent in "real" term after inflation is taken into account. But at the same time, the state's population is expected to increase 30 percent — further accelerating demand for public services.

"The current tax structure cannot provide sufficient revenue to maintain fiscal year 1981 service levels or to meet needs which were unmet by the state in fiscal 1981," the study indicated.

"There is an ever-widening gap between the general-account revenue raised and the needs for general-account revenue — the estimated expenditure needs less projected federal funding, highway users revenue and dedicated and enterprise funds."

Legislative amendments to the state's corporate tax laws and the increasing variety of sales-tax exemptions are responsible for most of the state's problems in keeping general-account revenues up with demand, the report said.

The continuing impact of the 1 percent property-tax limit of 1978 and the sudden withdrawal of federal funds in many areas are added burdens for local governments, it said.

The report noted that local governments need for water and sewer projects is picking up at the same time federal and state appropriations for such undertakings is falling.

And state, city and county transportation systems will require mass infusions of funds in the 1980s if they are to be maintained at adequate levels, the report said.

To foot the bill for the required work on the 11,000-mile state highway system over the next 10 years will cost $160 million annually, while projected funding will be only $73 million," according to the report.

"Confident neglect of roads will raise costs of transportation for Idaho businesses and make Idaho communities less attractive places to begin new enterprises."

Federal and state aid to cities and counties is expected to fall dramatically through the next four or five years, the report said, despite additional restrictions on the abilities of local governments to preserve property tax revenue.

Because of population hikes and some renewed inflation in the decade "there will be a 14 percent decline in real per capita operating-budget expenditures funded by property taxes" because of the 1 percent initiative and its after-effects, the report said.

The division study attacked the notion that increased taxes drive marginal businesses bankrupt and deter corporations from expanding into Idaho.

The study also notes that concerns about market location, quality of life for employees, labor and energy costs and availability of transportation all play a larger part than taxes in the thinking of corporations looking for places to expand their operations.

Spill-site may be off cleanup list

CALDWELL (UPI) — Environmental Protection Agency officials say the site of a toxic chemical spill near Caldwell may be removed from a list of hazardous waste locations targeted for federal cleanup because well-water analysis shows there is little danger from the residue.

Steve Provant, an EPA air and hazardous waste team leader in Idaho, said Monday the site will be recommended for removal from a list of waste locations if analysis of agency laboratories in Seattle verify the field results.

Those field studies showed there is "no appreciable" danger from residual pentachlorophenol which may still be present in the ground as the result of a spill a decade ago at the now-defunct Flynn Lumber Co. east of Caldwell, he said.

Provant said water samples taken from the site showed the level of PCP was "below the detection limit" of testing equipment. He said the water tested at less than five parts per trillion of PCP.

The site was included with two other Idaho locations in an EPA announcement last month of a "Superfund" cleanup effort to eliminate hazardous waste at 41st locations across the nation.

The other Idaho locations were at the Bunker Hill smelter near Kellou; and at Arrecom Corp. in Rathbun.

Provant said the lumber company site was added to the "Superfund" list because EPA officials were concerned that PCP might have contaminated drinking water in the area. He said the leak occurred within 100 yards of active wells.

200 in march to help state's poor

By KITTY FLEISCHMAN
United Press International

BOISE — About 200 people marched Monday from Julia Davis Park to the steps of the Idaho Statehouse to dramatize the plight of the poor to the Legislature.

Included in the group were parents with youngsters in arm, a woman in a wheelchair carrying a placard to "Take the A-I-S out of disabled," and people of all ages.

Charlotte Nixon-Barsness, spokesperson for the Boise State University Organization of Student Social Workers, which coordinated the "Parade for People," said the group "decided to do something locally affecting the community, and just hit upon the idea of a march and rally on the day the Legislature starts."

Mrs. Nixon-Barsness said 30 area groups, including the Grey Panthers, the Idaho Hunger Action Coalition and Vietnam Vets sent representatives to the first planning session for the march last October.

One hundred marchers met at 11 a.m. at Julia Davis Park and trekked to the Statehouse, where they were joined by about 100 more persons who listened to four speakers.

Addressing the crowd were Mrs. Nixon-Barsness; Jim Barsness, who listed himself as an unemployed citizen; the Rev. Andy Schumacher of St. Johns Catholic Church in Boise; Dwight Frey, unemployed citizen; and David Owen of the Democratic Socialist Party.

Carrying placards with slogans such as "hand out jobs not hand up welfare" and "People's March," the crowd heard David Frey urge them to become "vocal and visible."

Frey, an "unemployed psychologist and a humanitarian by nature," said later he has "no faith in the government anymore."

"People are tired of being last consideration consistently. It is much more than a matter-of-being unemployed. It is a matter of self-esteem, of feeling self-worth."

More marches are planned when the weather gets better, Frey said, adding that the poor need to make a "show of strength, show of concern and a show of sincerity" to make their message heard.

Frey said he and other group members feel they will have great impact on the community and the Legislature when they can "get people motivated, and get people involved."

Mrs. Nixon-Barsness admitted the turnout was much less than the 1,000 persons organizers hoped to attract.

"The number-one rule when planning something like this is 'don't hold a rally in the middle of winter, no matter how good the weather is.'"

The rally on the Statehouse steps ended with a reminder of another era as chanters cried out slogans and sang "We Shall Overcome."

Ex-deputy faces sex charge

BOISE (UPI) — A former Ada County Sheriff's deputy was arraigned Monday in Fourth District Magistrate's Court on charges he performed oral sex with a female juvenile inmate at the county jail last year.

Donald H. Fisher, 42, posted $5,000 bond following his arraignment, deputies said.

Magistrate Judge Wayne Willis set the bond and scheduled a hearing Jan. 17 to fix a schedule of further court appearances, said Ada County deputy-prosecutor Dennis Johnson. No plea was taken at the hearing, Johnson said.

Fisher was fired Friday and charged with committing an infamous crime against nature stemming from incidents allegedly occurring between July 21 and Sept. 28, 1982, authorities said.

Fisher is accused of engaging in oral sex with the girl during routine jail checks conducted by male deputies in the women's section when no matrons are on duty, said Sheriff Chuck Palmer.

The girl was in custody on charges she assaulted a corrections officer with a deadly weapon. She was later convicted and sent to the Youth Services Center at St. Anthony, where authorities said they first became aware of the alleged sexual encounters.

Don't increase tax on Social Security

Despite the months of haggling and more than a few attempts to put the blame on each other, the administration and Congress appear finally ready to get down to specifics on how to solve the huge problems facing Social Security.

Now, the question is, who will pay and how much? carrying the burden? One proposal would accelerate already-scheduled Social Security tax increases, in effect, pushing still more of the load onto wage earners and employers.

Or will it be Social Security recipients, many of whom have no other source of income? Several proposals would drag out schedules for payment changes—reduce cost-of-living increases, and perhaps gradually raise the benefits age, thereby delaying the rate at which future benefits are paid out.

We think the solution has to come from both directions. For example, federal employees should, in our judgment, be included in the Social Security system. That one change would bring in millions.

But the balance, in our judgment, should come from delays in benefit increases and a raising of the benefits age, not from increasing wage earners' taxes. The American people, we think, already know that Social Security payments are just another form of taxes, and they also know that those taxes are scheduled to go up between now and 1990.

To step up the implementation of the increases without also making some major changes in the benefits raise would signal to Americans that the administration and Congress are more concerned with playing venal politics than with solving Social Security's real problems.

Out of fairness to current and soon-to-be recipients, we don't think there should be drastic changes of present benefits. But we see nothing wrong with making changes now that will be effective later on that would ensure Social Security's continued solvency.

The worst alternative of all would be for Social Security to fail. That simply cannot be permitted to occur.

'Women's vote' a hazardous pursuit

WASHINGTON -- Any man knows how utterly impossible it is to please a woman.

Give her flowers once, and she will appear to enjoy them. Shower her with flowers, and she will soon hint that they are the wrong color, or bear the wrong scent, or make her sneeze. Give her all the money you earn, and she will find some gentle way to suggest how much more Jones must earn, for just look at the fine clothes Mrs. Jones wears.

Recognizing the futility of the task, men keep trying. None try harder than male politicians. "The women's vote" is deemed to be a commodity, considered to be attainable. It is pursued with the same intensity with which Captain Ahab pursued the great white whale, and with the same result. As Mohy Dick destroyed Ahab, so can the women's vote destroy a congressman or a president.

Since men committed the grievous error of ratifying the 19th Amendment to the Constitution in 1920, they have been forced to expand the arena in which the political race must be attempted from the home to the polling place.

Washington was awash this past week with male politicians in frantic efforts to please women.

In the House of Representatives, the coveted honor of being the first bill dropped in the hopper in the new Congress was awarded to the reintroduction of the women's Equal Rights Amendment.

The hopper is a little box on the edge of the clerk's desk at the front of the House chamber. On opening day, members drop bills into it at an alarming rate. No matter how early they get up in the morning or how long they stand in line, they aren't going to get the number "1" stuck on their bill. No. 1 is symbolic—and while the Democrats control the House of Representatives, No. 1 will be assigned to something in which Democrats really believe in.

Democrats really believe in women -- that was the message as the Equal Rights Amendment got the magic number.

Democrats can count, and they know that there are more women of voting age than men of voting age. In 1980 there were 9 million more such women. While the figures for 1982 are incomplete, women have voted more than men in every national election since 1966.

Some 55 million more women than men voted in the 1980 presidential election. This is a group that male politicians must try to please. How better than for the Democrats to be for the Equal Rights Amendment?

Well, how about the Republican president nominating a woman to his Cabinet? This, says he, is "more substance" than any symbolic old Equal Rights Amendment. He is right, but with the singular exception of one excellent Supreme Court appointment, he arrived at the substance late in the game.

President Jimmy Carter named three women to his Cabinet. For the tiny handful who have forgotten, their names were Juanita M. Krepps, Patricia Roberts Harris and Shirley Mould Hulstedler. Carter was also completely sold on the Equal Rights Amendment. Neither his three Cabinet appointments nor his support for the ERA saved

President Reagan appears to have displeased women, who voted for him in fewer numbers than men did in 1980. Women approve of him less than men do in 1982.

The nomination of Elizabeth Dole won't help a great deal, but it might help a little. It is a good appointment in any event, and should at least please her -- for a while.

Elizabeth Dole has had a fine reputation around Washington for a long time. She has served in the administrations of presidents Democratic and Republican and will breeze through her Senate confirmation hearings. Not only do the senators know and respect her, the senior senator from Kansas has become a lot easier to get along with since she married him.

The news of the week merely confirms the dread knowledge that the campaign of 1984 has begun, and that great, mercurial glob, the women's vote, is out there.

The women's vote will, during the long campaign which stretches before us, be called crucial. So will the black vote, the Jewish vote, the Italian vote, the Polish vote and a host of other votes. All of them, alas, are at least half women, which means there is no way of pleasing any of them.

In the first week of the new year, as in every day since Adam ate the apple Eve sipped, the men were still trying.

Otis Pike, a former Congressman, writes his column from Washington for the Newhouse News Service.

Ghost of Smoot-Hawley hangs around, snickering

WASHINGTON -- Before the opportunity passes, one kind word should be said for last month's lame-duck session of Congress: The Senate quietly killed the "domestic content" bill that the House had passed on Dec. 10. Hooray for the Senate.

Only in legislative halls is death a temporary condition. The bill will be born again in the new 98th Congress, and such is the liberal shift in the House that the House almost certainly will pass this miserable measure once more. Raspberries for the House.

The domestic content bill is a reversion to protectionism, pure, simple and untainted by the slightest trace of statesmanship or common sense. The idea is to protect the domestic automobile industry by requiring foreign manufacturers to meet certain "content" requirements for cars sold in the United States. Toyota and Nissan, for example, by 1985 would have to have 70 percent to 75 percent of their cars assembled from American-made components.

In theory this would create new jobs for American workers -- as many as 1 million new jobs, in the warped view of the United Auto Workers. The theory is bogus. For every job that might be created in the domestic parts industry, another job would be lost in industries that rely upon export trade. In the course of the House debate, Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., put the matter bluntly: "This is not a jobs bill; this is going to destroy jobs."

Kemp comes from Buffalo, where the depressed steel and auto industries presumably would benefit from the bill. It was an act of high political courage on Kemp's part to oppose the measure. This was also true of J. William Stanton, R-Ohio, who comes from the very heart of UAW country. He refused to head "down the protectionist route." Joel Pritchard of Seattle was another who stood on principle against the bill.

The bill passed the House 215-188, but not before a dozen amendments had been debated. Sam Gibbons of Florida compared the amendments to "putting a Band-Aid on a rattlesnake." There's not much you can do to improve a rattlesnake, he said, "and there is no way you can improve this bill."

One proposed amendment, however, would have been a distinct improvement. It was offered in scorn and derision by William F. Dannemeyer of California. He wanted to provide a substitute title and a new statement of purpose: "This Act may be cited as the Smoot-Hawley Trade Barriers Act of 1982. The purpose of this Act is to reduce competition in the automobile industry, protect jobs in one industry to the detriment of jobs in other industries, and to increase the price of automobiles to consumers."

The Dannemeyer amendment had the perfection of good cast irony. It precisely stated the case. The infamous Smoot-Hawley Act of 1930 was intended to protect Midwestern agriculture and Northeastern industry by drastic increases in the tariffs charged on imported commodities and manufacturers. The act immediately provoked retaliatory measures by our trading partners. Over a 10-year period, the value of world trade dropped in half and U.S. trade dropped by two-thirds. Smoot-Hawley was a calamity.

Protectionism was not the answer in 1930, and it is not the answer 50 years later. Indeed, protectionism is a much poorer answer now than it was then, for the volume and the complexity of world trade are much greater today. If the domestic content bill ever becomes law, the ghost of Smoot-Hawley will be snickering around the world. The legitimate grievances of American manufacturers will not be relieved; they will only be compounded.

These grievances are indeed legitimate. Our industries must compete on world markets where an overvalued dollar tends to price our goods out of the market. Not only Japan but European nations also impose serious obstacles to American competition. Foreign governments subsidize their industries in ways that we do not. Wage levels are vastly disproportionate here and abroad. Our domestic producers have plenty to complain about, but the "Smoot-Hawley Trade Barriers Act of 1982" would make bad matters worse.

No simple answer is in sight. It would be fanciful to wave a wand and down the dollar against the yen; incantations work no magic here. Only by patient adherence to sound principles will we work our way out of the monstrous trade imbalance that now afflicts us. A fair balance won't be easy, and it won't come soon.

James J. Kilpatrick writes his column, "A Conservative View," from Washington.

Letters/ Wendell farm sale was media's story, not farmer's

Family caught in middle

First of all, I've got to say, the media has got to be awfully hard up for a story to come clear to Wendell to witness a farm sale. Hopefully, it wasn't a waste of the media's time, energy and gasoline. We realize, after all that you had to come up with a story to make it worth your trip and effort. But, unfortunately, it was your story and not ours.

The William "stuffs" were really quite amusing and entertained with the news coverage. Gosh, we didn't realize what was going on in our lives until you informed us. Thank you, but we believe it would be to your best interest and the validity of your reports to get the facts from the horse's mouth, and to get it straight. Talk's cheap.

It's hard to imagine where you got all your information since Mr. Ruffing made no comment and, in fact, was not even there.

The farmers' protest was apparently what drew the media. We happened to have a farm sale that particular day and there happened to be a group of protesters that wanted to express their opinions publicly. It just happened to be on the day of our sale. We personally know none of them with the exception of several Wendell farmers. But, we do believe the farmers have a right to express their opinion and felt they were very successful in doing so.

Farmers need to be heard. Those expressing their feelings were speaking for many a farmer. After all, they are a pretty important figure in today's economy. They need the support and recognition of not only the loan companies but everyone, even the ones that like to eat. Starvation is a respecter of no person -- whether it's a farmer or the guy in the suit behind the desk in his padded chair. They both seem to like to go home to that steak and baked potato. And if there's not more interest and action in the farmer's plight and their concern in providing all this for the consumer, there's going to be a lot more vegetarians running around. After all, the farmers don't have to farm, they can turn to another line of work that will be profitable. From the look of things, it's going to be a bleak future for everyone. Maybe when it's too late the unconcerned will wake up.

In the past, the problem with so many has been having the money to buy what they want to eat. I'm afraid in the future it will be the problem of having the money but not having the products available that farmers have so readily and abundantly provided for us in the past.

We feel our opinion should be voiced and considered for the first time since this coverage began. After all we were just caught in the middle.

Gambling and gambling

In writing this I realized I will be pulling down criticism from my Christian friends and brethren. I am positive that if my mother could speak from her grave she would oppose my position.

I have just searched the Bible and I have found nowhere that we are contended to not gamble. I do find many more things specifically named, such as lies, deceit, railing etc., that a Christian must avoid. I suppose that all of us practice a bit of all or a part of these, but gambling ... "oh, no" cries the devout.

I don't wilfully gamble though I would have a clear conscience if that was my worst evil.

About the biggest gambling my husband and I have ever done, and which we regret, was putting money into political movements and politicians. Though living on a very limited income we spent most of 1981 and 82 spending from 10 to $20 at least every two weeks to support what we thought were conservative politicians and people. That was a gamble, a gamble we lost for those who would sit in office and dictate concerning our gambling rights did not live up to the promises made. Now who was worse, we the gamblers or the laws?

Prohibition did not stop illegal liquor. Putting a ban on gambling did not stop gambling. It merely added to the sin (if sin it is) by driving the gamblers behind closed doors, into basements and into homes which was deceit, disobedience and withholding taxes on money earned.

Some condemn the gambling because they say little children will be deprived of necessities -- while parents squander on gambling. This might be true but through the years when we have no legal gambling, I have seen children in need whose parents spent freely on bowling, trap shooting (gambling) and other things they enjoyed. A parent who will neglect a child doesn't have to be a gambler.

Perhaps some gamble in the pursuit of happiness which the Constitution quotes as a right -- just for the fun of it, win or lose. Our Constitution specifies that the right to fail is one afforded us. Our Congress is not to be up there making laws, but carrying out the dictates of the Constitution which they have seemingly forgotten.

The biggest gamble, the most sure-to-lose gamble is for the people to put trust, money and effort into seating the average Congressman. They then have the chance to gamble with our lives, our money, our activities and -- well, our lives.

Our leaders who have become dictators have forced us into nothing less than inconsistency and failure.

MRS. E.H. RICE

She agrees with Aryans

I agree with the Aryan people in that all races are inferior to the white race. Until white people began taking on the job of teaching the colored people of such nations, such simple things as the importance of clean drinking water, cleanliness in preparing their meals and the need of something better than a mud hut in which to live, those people were living as had their ancestors hundreds of years before. And I am quite sure they would never have the brains nor the ambition to live any other way without the knowledge and help of white people.

Why any white person would want to take on such a task eludes me. What do you have after all the effort to make something out of such people? Basically they are still the same.

Colored people from foreign countries should never be allowed to enter the United States. They are not here because they love America. They are here to be taken care of while they sit on themselves and pollute our country.

Reagan plugs leaks to press

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, declaring "I've had it up to my keister" with leaks to the press, directed White House staff members Monday to exert tighter control over all interviews with reporters.

At Reagan's direction, chief of staff James Baker issued a set of guidelines that lay down the law on contacts with the media and aim at giving the ultimate clearance to the communications office.

David Gergen, director of the communications office, said, "The president does not appreciate the freelance artists who come out of a meeting with him and speak to the press."

He said Reagan "has been irritated on more than one occasion" at stories that have appeared following private meetings about the budget and other issues, and he quoted Reagan as saying:

"I've had it up to my keister (trump) with these leaks."

"We do not think it's helpful to have some freelance artists who may be passing around information that is inaccurate or one-sided," Gergen told reporters.

The announcement of the new orders on dealing with the press came on the heels of an interview Baker gave with the Dallas Morning News, in which he said Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan should not remain in the Cabinet. Baker apologized to Donovan Monday and expressed his deep regret.

Gergen insisted the guidelines did not stem from the Baker interview, although Baker quipped in a postscript to his memorandum on guidelines: "The president has refused to make an exception for interviews in turkey blinds."

Baker had been in Texas on a hunting expedition.

Gergen said the White House had considered the clamp-up orders before Christmas.

The first guideline reads: "The press office should remain the first stop for White House reporters seeking information about the president's policies and views."

Gergen insisted reporters may still telephone staffers directly, saying Reagan wants to continue to maintain an "open administration."

California quakes taper off

MAMMOTH LAKES, Calif. (UPI) — A mountain in the High Sierra which has been trembling for five days calmed down Monday, leaving scientists unable to predict what the 20,000-year-old volcano will do next.

Hundreds of quakes continued to be recorded in the Mammoth Lakes area, but their frequency and intensity tapered off.

"We have had about 10 swarms of earthquakes like this during the past two years," said G. Brent Dalrymple, chief geologist at the U.S. Geological Survey's Menlo Park, Calif., office.

"This swarm is tapering off. There is no way to know whether there will be another in a hundred years, or tomorrow, or ever."

Dalrymple said scientists who have been making measurements in the region since the spasm began Friday concluded that the activity is most likely related to fluid rock in motion underground. He said there were two hypotheses about what is happening.

The magma could be working its way up through cracks in the earth and getting nearer the surface, he said. The other hypothesis is that the "central chamber" of molten rock at the heart of the volcano is enlarging and causing the surface to crack.

"We know the central chamber is expanding. That has been detected by seismic measurements," Dalrymple said. But he said he was not sure whether the earthquakes were caused by this or by the upward movement of magma.

After several swarms of earthquakes were recorded, the S. G. S. last spring issued a volcanic hazard warning for the area. This aroused strong protests from local officials who feared it would frighten away tourists.

The scientists who have been taking geological measurement in the area during the weekend carefully avoided saying anything that could be taken as a suggestion the danger of an eruption increased with the latest swarm of quakes.

Skiers flocked to the nearby Mammoth ski area during the weekend. The town of Mammoth Lakes has about 5,000 permanent residents, but the area is populated by hundreds of vacationers during the summer.

The Mono County Board of Supervisors planned to meet later in the week to decide whether new escape routes should be plowed on logging roads.

Justice Department seeks ruling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department Monday asked a federal judge to rule President Reagan acted lawfully in ordering Environmental Protection Agency chief Anne Gorsuch to produce subpoenaed documents from Congress.

The department filed a brief with U.S. District Judge John Lewis Smith saying judicial intervention in the between the legislative and executive branches of government.

The brief asked: "May Congress compel an executive branch official to produce sensitive materials from open law enforcement files even though the disclosure of those documents would, in the opinion of the president and the attorney general, impair the president's ability to take care that the laws will be faithfully highest-ranking government official ever cited for contempt of Congress Dec. 16 in a historic bipartisan House vote of 239-105.

She was cited for refusing "on orders from Reagan" to produce numerous documents sought by the House Public Works Committee in its investigation of whether EPA is charging major chemical companies their share of costs to clean up the executive. Mrs. Gorsuch became the dumps under the $1.6 billion "Superfund" established in 1980.

Hearing holds up dioxin removal

TIMES BEACH, Mo. (UPI) — Plans to move flood debris possibly contaminated with dioxin to a landfill 40 miles away were postponed Monday because of a day-long court hearing on the removal.

"We definitely will not move the trucks today," said Sam Brenneke, an environmental specialist with the state Department of Natural Resources. "No matter what the court hearing does today, we won't move the trucks. There's just not enough time."

Edward D. Hodge to dissolve his temporary restraining order prohibiting the transfer to the landfill in Warren County. If that request was granted following Monday's hearing in Mexico, Mo., the trucks would begin rolling early Tuesday afternoon, Brenneke said.

The state has asked Circuit Judge

Cranston plans race

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., thinks a victory in this weekend's straw vote at the California Democratic convention will be a "giant step" in launching his presidential bid, his campaign manager said Monday.

A victory in his home state would give credibility to Cranston's campaign, Sergio Bendixen said.

Cranston, the assistant Senate Democratic leader, is scheduled to announce his candidacy formally Feb. 2, making him the first Democrat to enter the race although at least six others are in various stages of activity.

Kilauea eruption enters 2nd week

VOLCANO, Hawaii (UPI) — Kilauea Volcano spluttered and splattered molten rock fragments Monday, but scientists said the fire is not day after the molten rock lava solidified a half-mile short of the nearest home.

molten rock for four hours before it slowed to a gaseous spatter. The eruptions have been occurring at intervals since its intermittent eruptions into a second week.

The 4,000-foot volcano thundered to life Jan. 3 with a 200-foot high curtain of fire — and since has been spewing lava intermittently from scattered spots along a five-mile line of fissures. The volcano sent a threatening finger of lava toward inhabited areas of Kalapana on the coast line on Friday. Residents were evacuated, but returned to their homes the next significant level in the vent system area," said U.S. Geological Survey seismologist Bohi Koyanagi. "There's been no significant decay."

Scientists have said as long as their instruments showed harmonic tremor above normal levels, Kilauea could erupt some more.

Harmonic tremor is the vibration of molten rock seething underground. The volcano erupted Sunday evening, belching 50-foot fountains of Kilauea, 10 to 15 miles down the gradual slope from the summit. Although red glows of the fountains reflecting on their own steam and faint clouds can be seen at night when the volcano is active, the fountains themselves can only be seen from the air.

The vent system that has been the site of the lava fountains for several days is about four miles from the nearest homes.

Oil wells keep on pumping funds for 'filthy rich' school

By T.W. McGARRY
United Press International

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. -- In Beverly Hills, where even high school kids drive Rolls-Royces, they have a high school worthy of their wealth -- it has its own oil wells.

While school administrators across the nation gnash their teeth in frustration over financial problems, whimsical fortune has again smiled on the already fortunate.

Beverly Hills High School, in the heart of the fabled enclave of wealth, has struck oil -- and struck it big. Shares of the "Beverly Hillsillies."

Oil wells, camouflaged to avoid scandalizing the chic, are pumping up to 3,000 barrels a day from behind the soccer field, earning the school district about $100,000 a month.

They earn an equal amount for Beverly Hills, a city of 32,000 in the heart of the Los Angeles area, in which $1 million homes are common and an occasional Rolls-Royce graces the high school parking lot.

The high school, where many movie stars have been educated, is known for high quality educational programs on a par with some of the best private schools. The oil money, which began pouring in 15 months ago, helps the district keep up its traditional standards despite the Proposition 13 tax cut, school officials said.

The school district started the year with a surplus of $1.1 million -- a fifth of its budget. Teachers just got a 9.3 percent raise, bringing them to an average $32,335 a year, the highest teachers pay in the state.

his Ozark farmstead "came a-bubbilin' crude."

From its leased site on the school grounds, the company drills on an angle into the earth beneath neighboring and even not-so-neighboring properties. It now sucks oil from about 300 acres of Beverly Hills, reaching under ritzy boutiques on Wilshire Boulevard.

"We have 15 wells operating now, and we'll have up to 30 in the next four or five years," Fanger said.

The company pays yearly royalties averaging about $10,000 to about 400 homeowners from whose land the oil comes, in addition to royalties to the city and the school district for the site lease.

The school has been in the oil business since 1959, said Deputy School Superintendent Reuven Cordova, but the former wells were returning "very little money, maybe $10,000 to $25,000 a year."

School officials were actually trying to get rid of the wells -- "ugly grasshopper pumps right in the middle of the athletic field" -- as

Smog-blue campus oil well

"We're now getting between 2,500 and 3,000 barrels a day," said Bill Fanger, president of The Beverly Hills Oil Co., which operates the wells. "I've been called 'Jet Clamptett more than once,'" he jokes, after the oil-rich mountaintop in the TV series "Beverly Hillsbillies." Clamptett, in the words of the show's theme song, moved to "the hills of Beverly" after line raised the price of oil.

Under a new contract, the oil company turned the old drilling ground into a sports field, replacing it with a new drilling and pumping station designed to hide the operation and cut down the noise.

"We spent many, many millions of dollars on civilizing it... with the latest technology," said Fanger. The 150-foot derrick is wrapped in sound-muffling material and painted "smog blue" to blend into the sky.

Forecaster sees 3 marriages in lifetime

BOSTON (UPI) -- In the 21st century, American men will routinely marry three times, women will initiate pre-marital sex more often and a phone call to Japan will cost 25 cents, a professional forecaster says.

Painting a picture of what American life will be like next century, forecaster Marvin Cetron predicted increasing numbers of women will bear children for others for money and vast medical breakthroughs will be achieved.

Cetron, president of Forecasting International Ltd. of Arlington, Va., said he bases his forecasts on a computer analysis of current events and trends.

"More women will initiate pre-marital sex," he also told the annual convention of the Northeastern Retail Lumbermen's Association.

Cetron, who works mostly for industrial clients, said medicines will be discovered to cure addiction to drugs and alcohol and a non-addictive painkiller more powerful than morphine will be developed.

And, he said, satellite communications will enable a call from the United States to as far off as Japan to cost only 25 cents.

He said men routinely will marry three times in their lives -- taking their first wife for romance, their second to bear children and the third for mature companionship.

Inscription dates back 2,600 years

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) -- An Israeli archaeologist has found the earliest inscription of God's name ever discovered in Jerusalem etched on a seventh century B.C. silver prayer scroll, an Israeli newspaper reported Monday.

The scroll, made of 99.9 percent pure silver, was discovered three years ago by Tel Aviv University archaeologist Gabriel Barkay and was only unraveled last month in a laboratory by use of a special technique, the Jerusalem Post said.

Condor to wait in zoo for his mate

LOS ANGELES (UPI) -- A newly captured young male California condor will live at the Los Angeles Zoo while scientists try to catch some females so he can mate.

The condor was captured last month and was to have been released to its natural habitat after scientists determined it was a male. Officials had been hoping to capture a female to mate with Topa Topa, another male condor at the zoo.

But scientists received permission from the state Fish and Game Commission to keep the young bird at the Los Angeles Zoo permanently for the captive breeding segment of a program to rescue to giant vultures from extinction.

Silverman takes aim at Carson's audience

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) -- Former NBC President Fred Silverman, Johnny Carson's boss when he was head of the network, said Monday he plans to knock the comedian off his late-night cabined seat on "Tonight" with a new nightly show.

Silverman, now president of InterMedia Entertainment Co., will launch "Thicke of the Night," a 90-minute, nightly-comedy series next fall starring Alan Thicke, host of Canada's leading daytime series.

He said the new show could cut into Carson's huge audience. The "Tonight Show," the longest running late-night program on TV, is the most financially successful show in NBC history -- and was Silverman's pride and joy during his tenure at the network.

"Late-night programming is soft and vulnerable," Silverman said. "This show could turn the situation upside-down. Independent stations have been crying for years to fill this time area with good stuff."

Silverman's InterMedia outfit will produce "Thicke of the Night" in association with MGM-United Artists and Metromedia Television with plans to spot it directly opposite Carson at 11 or 11:30 p.m. around the country.

"So far we've signed enough stations to cover 25 percent of the country," Silverman said. "We think it will be seen in over 70 percent of the country by the time we go on the air."

The television executive said his new show would be aimed at a young audience, 18 to 49.

Penthouse comes down

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) -- The Russian consulate has removed a plywood penthouse atop its building in fashionable Cow Hollow, which neighbors complained blocked their view of the San Francisco Bay.

Mayor Dianne Feinstein wrote to Soviet officials after neighbors complained the structure atop the seven-story building blocked their view and violated city ordinances.

The structure, a storage shack for equipment to fix leaks in the roof, was removed Saturday.

The Cow Hollow Association complained when the penthouse was constructed without notices over the Christmas holidays. The mayor wrote Consul General Alexander Chikvadze Dec. 30, asking the structure be removed.

The mayor wrote: "In this country we do not repair a roof by putting a building on top of it."

Calligrapher aims to keep art of writing alive and well

By HARRIET GUTHERTZ
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The printing press lowered the status of scribes and destroyed the market for handmade books and documents, but the art of fine writing lives.

When Brenda Larsen arrived in Twin Falls five years ago, hardly anyone here even had heard of calligraphy. Now, Larsen teaches a growing number of Magic Valley residents the intricacies of fancy lettering in her classes at the College of Southern Idaho.

Larsen, who holds a bachelor's degree in philosophy from Mount Holyoke College and who also teaches an introductory course in philosophy at CSI, says, "I hope calligraphy never dies out. It's a reaffirmation of human values, and shows we aren't being replaced by machines."

Larsen isn't anti-mechanics, and she says that type designers can learn a lot from calligraphers. Designers who also are schooled in calligraphy produce better-looking type faces, she says.

Because students aren't able to produce beautiful handwritten wedding invitations right off the bat, they have to be interested in the process as well as the results. To break up the tedium of practice, Larsen tries to introduce special subjects, such as embossing in class.

Although America lacks a calligraphic tradition of its own, Larsen says that a growing number of people are picking up on it. Most major American cities now have a calligraphers' guild, and national calligraphy conventions have been held since 1981.

Larsen started out as a hobby soon became a passion, and Larsen started collecting as many books and as much information on the subject as possible. In her travels around the country in search of other calligraphers, Larsen has talked to the official calligrapher to Queen Elizabeth, among others.

It doesn't cost a lot of money or take a lot of equipment to start learning calligraphy, but it's not for coffee addicts or impatient people. All it takes is a pen, ink and a desire to learn, Larsen says. A steady hand and good eyes help, she says.

Sjogren receives fifth attorney

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Randy Stoker of Twin Falls has become the fifth lawyer to handle the defense of murder suspect J. Sjogren.

Monday, Stoker formally was appointed to Sjogren's case during a brief Fifth District Court hearing. Last week, Sjogren's fourth lawyer, assistant public defender Kathy Epfeld, withdrew from the case. Epfeld said that she did not believe she was adequately experienced to handle the defense.

Sjogren previously had fired Epfeld's boss, chief public defender Mike Powers — as well as two other lawyers — leading Judge Daniel Meehl to order another lawyer for Sjogren.

But Stoker's entry into the case forced another delay. In the 20-month-old case, which had been set for trial on Jan. 18.

"There's no way, practically, ethically or any other way, that I would be ready to go to trial with this case next week," Stoker said.

Stoker's request for the delay was not unexpected. Each one of the defense lawyers has brought a request for delay. In order for the new lawyer to acquaint himself with the case.

Sjogren, who appeared in court Monday, gave his approval to both Stoker's selection and to Stoker's request for a delay in the trial.

Meehl granted the delay after consulting with the judge. Meehl indicated the trial would be held either in late February or in late April.

Sjogren, who remained in jail Monday without bond, has been in custody since his May 29, 1981, arrest for the May 26, 1981, murder of 61-year-old Donna Hartley Smith of Twin Falls. Prosecutors contend that Sjogren strangled the woman with a telephone cord.

Early in the case, Sjogren struck a plea bargain agreement with prosecutors and pleaded guilty to second-degree murder. But that agreement broke down when Prosecutor Harry Deftaan recommended that Sjogren receive a fixed 50-year sentence. Sjogren withdrew the plea, and Deftaan subsequently filed the first-degree murder charge.

In a related note, Sjogren requested medical treatment Monday for a neck injury that he blamed on Deftaan. Deftaan, along with a group of sheriff's deputies, forcibly brought Sjogren from his county jail cell to the courtroom on Friday.

Sjogren contended that Deftaan caused the neck injury when he applied a wrestling hold on him.

The defendant said Sheriff Jim Munn had denied his request to see a doctor.

Meehl said he would order Sjogren examined by a doctor if the ailment continued today.

Council and zoning board members smoke 'peace pipe'

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls City Council and the Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission have agreed to disagree.

Members of the two agencies met informally Monday to hash out differences that sometimes have put council at odds with decisions made by the commission.

Members acknowledged that different opinions seemed inevitable given the different functions of the two groups.

"We'd like to think we could operate in step 100 percent of the time, but we don't think that's realistic," said Mayor Chris Talkington.

Monday's atmosphere remained cordial, however, as members discussed ways to increase efficiency in rendering zoning decisions.

Because the commission's decisions may be appealed to council, council members often are asked to overrule the commission. Recently, council overturned a commission decision concerning the proper zoning of the Villa Del Rio housing subdivision.

Also recently, council did not accept the commission's recommendations concerning the appointment of new members to the zoning board.

Sometimes, the different decisions leave commission members wondering, "If they (council) are going to do that, what do they need us for?" said commission member John Bonnett.

Commission members expressed frustration at not knowing why City Council members overrule commission decisions.

Mike Quesnell, another commission member, observed that often, council has more information on a situation than the zoning commission.

Councilman Emery Petersen noted that when parties appeal decisions to council, "they go out and get more guns," hence more information.

Councilman Alan Wubker suggested that the commission attempt to discuss zoning issues more thoroughly during work sessions, so less time is spent during public hearings "going over the same ground."

Commission member Bill Hollifield said he was weary of "limiting discussions at public hearings. Otherwise, he said, citizens in attendance might think, "This is cut and dry. Why do we bother to show up?"

To allow commission members more time to familiarize themselves with issues, City Manager Tom Courtney said he would try to have zoning meeting agendas sent out some days before work sessions, although issues may then take longer to come before the commission.

Wubker also suggested that the commission and council continue to meet every six months.

In other business during Monday's work session, council met with the city-appointed committee that studied possible changes in the city's building code.

The committee earlier had recommended that council adopt the 1982 Uniform Building Code, except for four specific chapters, which the committee said were unnecessary or not applicable to Twin Falls.

The committee also made other recommendations designed to make the members more aware of building-code stipulations.

Council members decided to hold a public hearing on the recommendations, — partly at the urging of Petersen, who said he wanted citizens to have input on the UBC before it is adopted.

Committee member Rudy Ashenbrenner said that probably the only area that would generate controversy would be the recommendation that the city adopt a chapter of the code that spells out "life-safety" requirements for existing buildings and sets a timetable for compliance.

That section of the code also set requirements for sprinkler systems, an item that might produce some conflict, according to Ashenbrenner.

New faces join county governments

Judy Felton newest Twin Falls commissioner

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The will of the voters in November's election became reality Monday when a slate of Twin Falls County officials, including Commissioner Judy Felton of Buhl, took their oaths of office.

Felton, who replaces Merl Leonard of Piler, was the only newcomer among the group of county officials elected to new terms last fall.

County commission chairman Ann Cover, Clerk Richard Pence, Assessor Dorothy Hamby, Treasurer Juanita Stettler, Prosecutor Harry Deftaan and Coroner Cloyce Edwards also began new terms.

Felton's first act as county commissioner was to nominate Cover to a second term as chairman of the county executive board. The third member of the commission, Marvin Hempleman, joined in that move.

Then, Hempleman was elected unanimously to a second term as vice chairman.

In response to a question, Felton said she would not challenge a series of controversial appointments made last month by the county commissioners. Critics of the appointments — to the county hospital and zoning boards — said that Felton, not Leonard, was entitled to participate in making the selections.

Felton said she is satisfied with the selections that were made.

Initially, Felton said she will spend her time "learning the office procedures, starting to discuss the priorities in the budget and trying to meet with people who have been appointed to county boards."

Butler then appointed the commissioners to serve as ex-officio members on the various county boards and commissions. He will represent the commissioners on the Jerome County Fair Board.

Smith was asked to serve on the Jerome Airport Advisory Board, the law library committee, the Jerome County Planning and Zoning Commission and the Jerome refuse advisory board.

Montgomery was named to the snowplowing and water works advisory committees, the district health board and — when Howell's term expires — the Murtaugh Bridge committee.

Grindstaff will complete his current term on the Jerome Cemetery District board.

JEROME — Carl Butler, a Jerome real-estate salesman, was elected chairman of the Jerome County commission, following a swearing-in ceremony Monday morning for new elected county officials.

Fifth District magistrate Judge Roger Burdick administered the oath to county Clerk Cheryl Watts, who then swore in the three new commissioners — Butler, Pam Smith and Carl Montgomery — as well as Prosecutor Dennis Adamson, Assessor Marjorie Dubois, Treasurer Elsie Childers and Coroner Gerald Ostler.

Families, other county officials and two of the three retiring commissioners, Mel Grindstaff and Russell Howell Jr., attended the ceremony.

Butler thanked the outgoing commissioners on behalf of the entire commission for their assistance in informing the new commissioners about county problems and procedures. And both of the former commissioners in attendance offered further assistance should it be needed in the future.

Butler then appointed the commissioners to serve as ex-officio members on the various county boards and commissions. He will represent the commissioners on the Jerome County Fair Board.

TWIN FALLS — Spokesmen for residents who oppose the construction of Idaho Frozen Foods' waste-water treatment plant say that no odor has been discernible yet from outside the Snake River Canyon facility.

However, both Ed Laats, the president of the Meander Point Homeowners Association, and Dick Lennan, who owns a home on the Jerome side of the canyon, say odors may become stronger in warmer weather.

It is still "too early to tell" if potential problems had been avoided, they say.

Last week, IFF switched from the Twin Falls municipal sewage system to its own system, which uses a pre-treatment process at the Russell Street plant and a series of basins near the confluence of Rock Creek and the Snake River.

The construction of IFF's system was opposed strenuously by Meander Point residents, who contended the area was not properly zoned for a waste-water treatment plant. A lawsuit, filed by the residents, is pending in Fifth District Court.

By PAT MARCANTONIO Times-News writer

BURLEY — The suspected drug-related deaths of two Burley residents last weekend are being investigated by the Cassia County sheriff's and coroner's offices, and by the Burley Police Department.

Minuz and Garcia became ill at their respective homes, and both were taken to the hospital, where they were pronounced dead on arrival, Young said.

The sheriff's office also suspects that Munoz, Garcia and the unidentified man were acquainted.

Mitchell said. Young said it could be several days before the results are available.

Death of pharmacist thought to be suicide

By MARTY TRILLIASSA Times-News writer

GOODING — The Gooding County coroner has ruled that a former Twin Falls pharmacist died as the result of an apparent suicide attempt last week.

Julian F. "Jo" King, 48, died Thursday from what investigators believe to be asphyxiation. King's body was found Friday in a parked car, located 4.5 miles north and 3.5 miles west of Gooding.

system into the car's interior. A group of Boy Scouts first reported seeing the parked car at about 6 p.m. Friday, said Gooding County Sheriff Robert Aja.

conviction from his record were pending at the time of his death. Such action was sought in order to ease King's efforts to win reinstatement of his professional license.

King, the former operator of City Drug in downtown Twin Falls, fell upon hard times in 1981, when he was charged with illegally providing a controlled substance to a woman.

He had worked for the Idaho Power Co. and was involved in the building of American Falls Dam, and he had farmed for several years. In 1942, he worked for a defense plant in California, moving to Twin Falls in 1952.

Magic Valley health chief transferred to Ada County

TWIN FALLS — Rich Donovan, the Magic Valley regional manager for the State Health and Welfare Department, has been named to replace an administrator who claimed his firing was motivated by politics.

STEPHEN ANDERSON New area director

Donovan will replace Larry Coleman, the regional manager for Ada, Boise, Elmore and Valley counties. The position is identical to the one he has held in Twin Falls for the past 15 months.

Purce has named Stephen Anderson to replace Donovan in the Twin Falls office. Anderson will manage services to Blaine, Camas, Cassia, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Minidoka and Teton Falls counties.

Donovan didn't wish to comment on the politics of his transfer, but he said that he hopes to have the same good luck at his new office that he has had in the Magic Valley regional office.

Purce noted Anderson's strong background in administration and programs.

She married Arthur Baxter Sr. on July 9, 1912, in Twin Falls. They farmed in Buhl until moving to Oregon in 1919. They then farmed in Filer from 1925 until her husband's death in 1941.

Mr. Gray married Neoma Anderson in June 1927. She died on Aug. 28, 1962. He married Adell Peterson in 1967 in Filer, Nev.

He married Shirey Reynolds in Grand Junction on Jan. 7, 1939. They later were divorced.

Lamb and a co-defendant, Jeffrey Terrell, 21, were arrested and charged with the Dec. 17 robbery of the Waremart store, 1708 Kimberly Road.

A FINAL GIFT

"What is the cost of an average funeral?" we are often asked. Our usual answer is that there is no average funeral.

Lamb told Judge Daniel Meehl that he surveyed the store before his accomplice entered the business, armed with what Lamb said was a toy gun.

Creative teaching produces 'charming' ballet

By WILLETTA WARBERG
Times-News arts critic

Ballet dancer Shelley Watson performs for the Twin Falls Music Club

On the surface, Beverly Hackney's ballet teaching looks like anybody else's ballet teaching.

Monday, for the Twin Falls Music Club, as part of the club's scholarship program, Hackney grouped five local teenage dance students — Tabetha Carlson, Jennifer Condie, Amy Green, Renae Plankef and Shelly Watson — to perform the "Saturday Night Waltz" from the DeMille-Copland ballet "Rodeo."

Their performance was charming, and they certainly were not just like everybody's fledglings.

By its nature, ballet calls for opera-house-goody dancing through vast space. Monday's carpeted floor in the small hall of the Community Christian Church may have refined the steps of the five quite fragile and publicly timid young ladies, but not one of the young beauties lost her ability to make the dance legible.

Contemporary ballet doesn't always fit today's dancers because many find it hard to deviate from their conservative and classical training.

The bodies of Monday's performers held to the Western sounds of Aaron Copland and Jo the Agnes DeMille cowboy choreography, which was altered to suit the occasion by Beverly Hackney, because of the girls' heights, builds and abilities. Graceful they were, but by no means the tiny swans of yesterday. This is probably the new trend for dancers.

Hackney's choreography demonstrates her power as a Magic Valley teacher for the past 25 years. She has imagination and develops subtle strength in her students. That was seen Monday, as well as a few weeks ago with the local dancers who participated in "The Nutcracker" ballet performance.

Barton heads Minidoka commission

RUPERT — Ten-year veteran county officeholder Lyle Barton was named the new chairman of the Minidoka County commissioners Monday.

Also Monday, Barton swore in the new and re-elected county officials, who were voted into office in November. Among the group was the new county clerk, Duane Smith; Maier; Prosecutor John Bradley; the new county commissioner, Norm Seibold; and Fifth District Judge Ron Bruce. Maier and Bradley were re-elected to their positions.

In other county business, Gary Beaver, Pam Rodgers, Verna Kendall, Dallas Stoller and Jim Merrell were appointed to the county fair board by the commissioners, Smith said.

Calligraphy

Each country has its own calligraphic style, Larsen says. The English tend to be very traditional, while the Germans and Scandinavians are more apt to try out modern designs, she says. The Americans have borrowed from both and fall somewhere in between.

After learning to copy the masters, experienced calligraphers try to develop a style of their own, Larsen says. Developing a fluid and spontaneous new look, however, takes hours and hours of practice, she says.

Larsen, for example, makes 20 to 100 copies of a letter before she picks one as a pattern for an embossing project. Still, she says it's the one thing she can get lost in.

"I can go into a room and work by myself for weeks," she says.

Larsen's knowledge of lettering makes her more sensitive to the signs and billboards in her environment. One of the first things she notices in a new town is the graphics.

"I see such a lack of classic proportion in most designs," she says.

CSI offers several courses

TWIN FALLS -- Due to the popularity of calligraphy courses at the College of Southern Idaho, several new specialized classes have been added.

"Calligraphy-Roman Capital" will begin March 22 and continue for six weeks. The class will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. on Tuesdays in Room 106 of the Shields Building, and the fee will be $25.00.

"Calligraphy -- Wooden Pens," which will teach the making and using of bamboo and wooden pens, will start April 14 in Room 106 of Shields. The class costs $10, and it will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. on Thursdays.

"Calligraphy-Embossing" is a one-night class, scheduled for 7 to 10 p.m. on April 23, also in Room 106.

The two usual calligraphy classes still will be held this semester. Calligraphy I starts Jan. 20, and Calligraphy II opens Jan. 18. The fee for both courses is $25.00, and they will run for eight weeks.

Brenda Larsen will teach all of the courses.

IFF

Lanis says that although the facility now is in operation, the residents intend to pursue their lawsuit to resolve the zoning questions.

"We don't believe it belongs there in the first place. If we have to live with it, there are other things to do," he said.

"We're watching it with hawk eyes. I'm sure everyone else is."

Lanis and Lennan say they were surprised at the extent of the series of ponds constructed by IFF to process the potato plant's waste water.

Lennan says the appearance is "very disappointing." A "casual observer" might not notice the ponds' appearance, "but we, of course, notice them," Lennan says.

IFF's president, Lee Odenwald, says that IFF has taken extra efforts to ensure that no odors are caused.

Eventually, the area will be planted with grasses and trees to make the area more attractive, he says.

He also says that IFF bought much more land than was actually needed for the basins as a safeguard against future problems. If odors become noticeable, wastes can be spread over a wider area, something that engineers predict will alleviate the problem, according to Odenwald.

"I have made a personal commitment to the community," Odenwald says. "Personally, I can assure you there will be no odor."

He says that construction of the treatment facility was necessary for the economic survival of IFF's Twin Falls plant and its 1,000 jobs. And he contends that only a minority of the homeowners in the area oppose the waste-treatment system.

Lennan, who has owned a canyon-side home for 13 years, says that about 20 to 30 homes on the Jerome side could be affected by odors. Lanis says that about 20 homes in two subdivisions on the Twin Falls side could be affected. Both areas also have lots for future development, they say.

Lennan says that he hopes to see IFF plant trees and crops in the canyon. "That would help the appearance of it."

"But we're disappointed people in Idaho let that (the facility) happen in such a scenic area," he says.

Burley will host annual irrigation equipment show

BURLEY -- Up to 5,000 people are expected to attend the Idaho Irrigation Equipment Show, which will be held Wednesday and Thursday at the Burley Inn in Burley.

Show chairman Chuck Botcher says the show is "the oldest continual Irrigation Industry show in the United States."

And Gale Chambers, the editor of the Idaho Farmer-Stockman magazine, calls it the "granddaddy of all Idaho winter ag shows."

The Idaho-Irrigation Show is entering its second decade. The show attracts farmers and ranchers from Idaho, surrounding states and as far as Canada, Botcher says.

An estimated 44 exhibits, representing 200 manufacturers, will be shown. Eight seminars on more efficient crop production through proper irrigation will highlight the show. The topics of the seminars will include: removing trash and weed seeds from irrigation water.

cahegation for surface irrigation, reducing costs through low pressure sprinkler systems, basin tillage, tools to tell when to irrigate and making falling water work for the irrigator.

Other topics will include: reducing pumping costs, selecting and caring for gaskets, obtaining top yields with less energy and water, selecting and calibrating equipment to apply chemicals through sprinklers, protecting water rights and ground-water concerns in Idaho.

The seminars, which are to last 45 minutes to an hour, will be repeated from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day. The exhibits will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day. Admission to the show is free.

The seminars will be presented by University of Idaho extension agents, irrigation industry representatives, the Idaho Power Co., the Idaho Department of Water Resources and the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, according to Botcher.

Twin Falls Canal Co. will hold its annual meeting today

TWIN FALLS -- The Twin Falls Canal Co. will hold its annual stockholders meeting today at the College of Southern Idaho.

The meeting will include reports on developments during the past year that have affected the farmers who live in the 200,000-acre tract served by the company. The reports will be given by: Warren Travis, the canal company manager; John Rosholt, the company's lawyer; the company's accountant; engineering consultants and U.S. Bureau of Reclamation officials.

At the end of the meeting, stockholders will be allowed to ask questions of the canal company officials.

As dictated by company bylaws, the meeting will begin at 10 a.m. in the canal company office, off Second Avenue West. But that custom was outgrown years ago. The meeting will adjourn immediately and move to the CSI Vo-Tech building, where the rest of the meeting will begin at 10:30 a.m.

The canal company office will be the scene of voting for new members to the company's board of directors.

This is the first year that the five directors will be chosen from five geographical districts within the canal company tract. All stockholders will be able to vote for each director, regardless of the district in which they live.

At the end of the meeting, stock-

CSI readies for Ricks with 100-78 triumph

Kennedy, Rohr combine for 47 points

By LARRY HOVRY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS -- Knock on wood but the College of Southern Idaho may be hitting Ricks College at about the right time.

When the season started, the forte of the 1982-83 Golden Eagles was expected to be its ability to shoot. The rebounding was known to be down. The defensive intimidation of last year wasn't there. But there was a suspicion that the Eagles could shoot about 50 percent on an average night and still have some hot ones.

Since the Christmas break, the Eagles have probably played their And that came to a head Monday when Gerald Kennedy and Phil Rohr — with a healthy assist from Dewey Haley — simply shot Eastern Utah into 100-78 submission.

Kennedy, pacing himself better in the early minutes and staying away from foul trouble, hit 11 of 13 attempts from the field and the team stats had Rohr at 11 of 14. With Kennedy adding three free throws, they combined for 47 points and Haley rang in with another 16.

In a span of 6:15 in the second half, CSI poured through 27 points and zipped from a 43-40 lead into a prohibitive 70-50 advantage. The most pleasing part for Coach Dave Campbell was that a large portion came in transition.

Campbell played "confidence builder" on the sideline as he stalked in front of the bench urging Rohr to shoot. The Allouargue sophomore, the near-eye of the tucks showdown — an up-tempo game.

"I think they're guards are excellent players with the ball. They play a lot of one-on-one and try to

"He got the ball and he hit the shot," Campbell said. "He's got to do that if we're going to win — if we're going to beat Ricks."

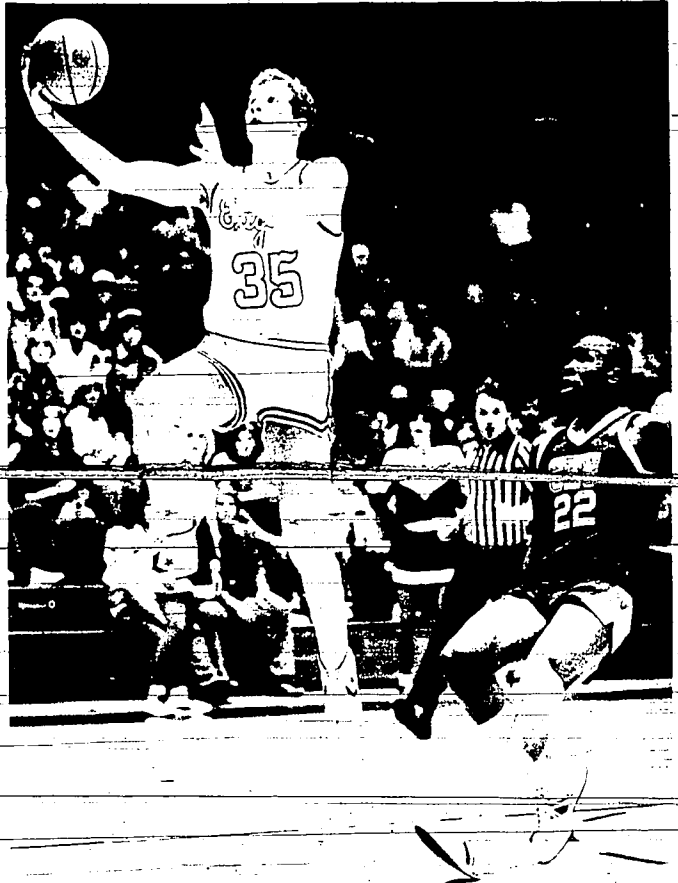

For a lot of reasons Campbell has to be happy with the way his team is playing as perhaps the single most important game arrives. The Eagles will be in Rexburg Friday night for the first regional battle of the season and with North Idaho losing six players (including both starting guards) 16, grade and Treasure Valley not really powerful, the right to host regionals — a two-game set with the Vikings.

Eastern Utah fulfilled another rethe near-eye of the tucks showdown — an up-tempo game.

"I think they're guards are excellent players with the ball. They play a lot of one-on-one and try to

Streaky CSI women surge near end for 64-55 victory

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS -- Alternating proper execution with shabby play, College of Southern Idaho's women managed their final competitive burst in the game's end, enabling them to defeat College of Eastern Utah 64-55 Monday night.

CSI, which lost to CEU 67-61 Saturday night, did much to reverse its fortunes in the last three minutes. Leading only 54-53, the Golden Eagles (a nickname they share with CEU) scored 10 consecutive points — its second such rally — to clinch victory in definitive fashion. Consistent with its style, CSI had preceded its climactic streak with a scoreless drought of more than three minutes.

CSI's erratic performance didn't leave Coach Hoyt Hardesty delirious with joy. Asked to explain the difference between Saturday night's loss and Monday's success, Hardesty spoke critically.

"We just hit a few more baskets. We didn't play much better," he said. "We kept forcing the ball. We played well in spurts, but we just couldn't control ourselves."

CEU Coach Jean Brooks echoed Hardesty's comments regarding control, a quality she felt her team also lacked due to the absence of sophomore center April Hatch. Hatch scored 11 points but sprained her ankle in Saturday's game against CSI.

Without Hatch, the visiting Eagles had less experience and on-court direction. Except for starter Venus Hare, CEU was forced to use exclusively freshmen.

"At least it would have been a better game (with Hatch playing) because she basically knows what to Meridian, unbeaten in 11 starts, easily clinched the top post in this week's coaches' poll of A-1 high school boys basketball teams around Idaho. While Jerome was returned to the No. 1 spot in A-2 play.

The survey, released Monday by UPI, showed Fruitland again as the best team in A-3, and Murtaugh as the squad to beat in the A-4 division.

The Meridian Warriors, who have been at the top of the A-1 rankings since they were first compiled seven weeks ago, added two wins last week to boost their record to 11-0.

The No. 2 spot in A-1 play was retained by Twin Falls, 8-1.

Jerome, now 10-0, narrowly edged Rigby, 10-1, for the nod as the premier team in A-2 play.

In the A-3 division, the top team was again Fruitland. The Grizzlies, now 9-0, were followed by Kimberly, 7-1, which moved this week from No. 4 to the second spot.

And in A-4, coaches chose Murtaugh, 8-1, as the best team. Second was Mullan, 7-2.

Jerome confronts Burley in A-2 duel

By MARY CLEMONS
Times-News sports editor

BURLEY — Jerome High's undefeated and top-ranked basketball team is about to find out just how good it is.

Burley High will act as the first measuring stick tonight at 8 when the two clash on the Bobcats' floor in a meeting between what appears to be the top two A-2 teams in the Fourth District. The game is one of seven boys-games-on-the-schedule-for-tonight while 10 girls games are slated for Magic Valley teams.

Jerome hasn't really been tested in its 10 consecutive wins although Gooding took Pat Hoke's squad into overtime before falling 43-41 in mid-December.

Burley skipper Gary Swan gave tonight's game a little boost when he predicted over the weekend that the Tigers will lose one of their next two games. Jerome visits second-ranked Rigby, now 10-1, Friday night.

"Gary just didn't look at our full road trip," Hoke joked Monday before practice. "We've got five straight on the road. We've got to go to Burley and Rigby and then come back and visit a tough Mountain Home team."

Hoke agrees with Swan's theory that "you can't get a team ready playing poor teams."

"We're looking forward to the five games," Hoke said. "We look forward to the challenge we face and to see how we evaluate after the next couple of weeks on the road."

Hoke recognizes that Jerome's No. 1 status will have each of the five teams "pointing at us to knock us down a notch or two."

One Tiger who won't be seeing action during the road trek is guard Greg Bartholomew. The starter had a surgery last week and will be out for a minimum of three weeks. Ray Levitt has assumed Bartholomew's starting role.

Bartholomew's absence — means Burley will be attempting to run even more when the two meet tonight.

"That just gives us more of a reason to run," Swan said. "That means Jerome has less depth and the best thing we can do with those big (Gary and Kevin) Hulseys is get out and run."

Swan said he expects to start in a man defense against the Tigers. He feels, and Hoke agrees, that the two teams are virtually the same when it comes to height.

Slowing Burley's break is Hoke's primary pre-game concern.

"We know we've got to keep the tempo our way," Hoke said. "If they get it going their way, they can get offensively and they've got the shooters to do it."

Burley's trademark this season has been balance. Senior 6-4 forward Randy Austin is the leading scorer with a 10.5 average, but the lowest average among the Bobcat starters is an 8.2 mark. Burley's first two men off the bench, Rich Ralphs and Ryan Huff, are averaging 6.0 and 4.5 points, respectively, and each has been a high scorer once. The Bobcats are 6-4 overall.

Hoke said he'll use a combination of man and zone defenses in an effort to control the Bobcats' balance. He admitted that Bartholomew's absence will have an impact on Jerome's defense.

"Ray plays hard defense, but Greg has those long arms, about three inches longer, to go after the ball," the Jerome skipper said.

Jerome's offensive firepower is concentrated in the Hulseys. Each is averaging in double figures and both are also capable of 25- to 30-point performances.

Swan said he'll use a press on Jerome. "If the opportunity presents itself."

"I felt Buhl was successful using the press on Jerome last week — a 52-39 Jerome win," Swan said. "It kept the big kids from being occupied with the half-court offense that Jerome runs very effectively if you'll let them."

Hoke said he expects more and more teams to double-team Gary.

"We expect that now that it's the second half of the season and it means the other kids will have to hit the 10- and 12-foot jumper and we'll have to get the ball to the open man."

In other boys contests, two Magic Valley contests put No. 1 Murtaugh at Hagerman and Oakley at Raft River. In Northside Conference action, Gooding State visits Dietrich and Carey goes to Richfield. Non-league games have Buhl hosting Gooding and the Castleford varsity visiting the Twin Falls Juniors.

On the female side, the most important clash is the Canyon Conference puts Kimberly at Declo. The host Hornets have a 9-1 loop mark and a

Campbell replaces 'emotionally burned out' boss Vermeil steps down as Eagles' coach

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A tearful Dick Vermeil, admitting he was "emotionally burned out" after 23 years of coaching, resigned Monday as head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles.

The Eagles immediately announced that Marion Campbell, former head coach of the Atlanta Falcons and defensive coordinator under Vermeil, would take over as head coach.

At an emotional news conference, Vermeil ended much speculation that he would step down after the Eagles, a Super Bowl team just two years ago, finished the strike-torn 1982 season with a 3-6 record and missed the playoffs for the first time since 1977.

Vermeil, 46, said he based his decision on a message — "Take good care of yourself!" — contained in public service announcements he filmed last spring for a health insurance plan.

"Right now, I'm going to take my own advice and step out of coaching," he said. "I am emotionally burned out and therefore feel that I need a break from coaching for a while. Not a sabbatical but a break — get out of it for a while to see if I can live without it."

Vermeil said he could recognize that the strain of coaching was getting to him last season, when the Eagles lost four of their last five and barely made the playoffs, then lost to the New York Giants in the wildcard game.

He made it clear that he would not seek other coaching jobs for the 1983 NFL season, but expressed a desire to go into television.

Vermeil was the guiding force behind the rise of the Eagles from an also-ran to a playoff contender after being hired on Feb. 8, 1976 out of UCLA. He compiled a 57-51 record in his seven years in Philadelphia and led the Eagles to four straight playoff berths.

He also established a reputation as a workaholic who poured over game films well into the early morning, then rolled out his sofa bed and caught a few hours sleep before turning on the film projector once again.

Vermeil, who had three years left on a contract which paid him a reported $250,000 per year, admitted that the intensity that enabled him to rank among the upper echelon of NFL coaches also contributed to his downfall.

"I've made a lot of mistakes, but probably the most vivid one is that I set a tempo for 23 years that may not be possible to keep through a 10-year contract," he said. "That's why I can say I'm just burned out. I read a book a while back on burnout and I didn't understand it. I thought they were wrong but I realize now they know what they were talking about."

"I know I pushed myself beyond the point. But with a break, I think I can regroup and regenerate the enthusiasm and the energy that it takes to do it my way. If I can't do it to my standards, I'm not going to do it."

Eagles owner Leonard Tose said Vermeil and his wife, Carolyn, visited him at his home Sunday night to personally deliver the decision to resign.

"I asked him if there was anything in the Eagle organization we could do without putting any pressure on him," he said. "We wanted him to stay but we didn't want to put a burden on him."

"That convinced me that this was the right thing for him, and the right thing for him is the right thing for the organization. The friendship that we have will continue, and the debt of gratitude we owe him will always be felt."

After going 4-10 and 5-9 in his first two years, Vermeil led the Eagles to the NFC wildcard game in 1978 and to the conference semifinals the following year.

But the crowning achievement of his pro career came in 1980. The Eagles finished 12-4 during the regular season and defeated Dallas in the NFC championship game before falling to Oakland, 27-10, in Super Bowl XV.

Tose introduced Campbell, who received a five-year contract, as the Eagles' new head coach just minutes after Vermeil formally made his announcement.

Campbell, 53, joined the Eagles in 1977 after being fired as head coach of the Falcons. In his five years as Philadelphia's defensive coordinator, the unit allowed only 15 points per game and led the NFL in fewest points allowed two years in a row.

Campbell has received and turned down a number of head coaching offers since joining the Eagles. He said he would not have "considered jumping back into the fire" unless it was the Eagles making the offer.

Memphis St. earns No. 1 rank—then loses

Cavaliers improve to 2nd; Indiana falls to 4th

NEW YORK (UPI) — Memphis State reached the pinnacle of its 39-year basketball history Monday by gaining the No. 1 position for the first time ever in United Press International's weekly Dow Jones Coaches college ratings.

The voting was held before Memphis State lost to Virginia Tech Monday night, 69-66.

The formerly unbeaten Tigers ranked No. 2 last week, received 24 first-place votes and 553 points from the 40 members of the coaches board who participated in this week's ratings to wrest the No. 1 spot away from Indiana. The Hoosiers suffered their first loss of the season during the week, at the hands of Ohio State, and dropped to fourth.

Virginia, ranked fourth a week ago, crushed Maryland in its only outing of the week and moved into the No. 2 position. The Cavaliers (11-1) received 14 first place votes and 545 points.

Indiana State John's, which set a school record by winning its 13th straight game, conquered two opponents during the week, including Pat Ewing-led Georgetown, to vault four places into the No. 3 position.

Coach Dana Kirk, who has a 61-33 record at Memphis State, said he was happy with the Tigers' No. 1 honor but not too concerned about it.

"It's a matter of pride," he said. "I'm pleased for the players and fans. But, as far as being overly concerned, no, I'm not."

UCLA (8-1) won its only game during the week to move up one place to No. 5 but Kentucky (10-2) slumped three places to No. 6 after losing to Alabama last Saturday night.

Alabama (10-0) trimmed three opponents last week and advanced five places to No. 7 and Louisville (11-2) also moved up three notches to No. 8 after beating three opponents.

Virginia Tech wins postseason, UCLA escapes

BLACKSBURG, Va. (UPI) — Reggie Stepe came off the bench Monday night to score 21 points and lead Virginia Tech to a 69-66 upset of Memphis State only hours after the Tigers were named the No. 1 team in the country.

The Hoopes, 13-1, also had 16 points from Dell Curry. Bobby Becker, a 6-foot-9 freshman, added 12 and forward Perry Young added 11 in posting the Metro Conference victory.

Memphis State, 11-1, was led by Bobby Parks with 21 points. Center Derrick Phillips added 17.

Keith Lee, Memphis State's star forward, got into foul trouble early and was held to only 6 points.

After trailing early, Virginia Tech came back to take a 33-28 halftime lead. The game stayed close until the final six minutes when Stepe, Young and Becker led the breakaway.

Tech pulled to a 53-47 lead with 4:33

TEMPE, Ariz. (UPI) — Rod Foster scored 30 points, including the winning basket with 17 seconds remaining, and No. 5 UCLA survived a last-second scare Monday night to edge Arizona State 87-86 in a Pacific-10 Conference game.

Foster sparked the Bruins down the stretch, but Arizona State battled back and took a one-point lead, 86-85, on a Paul Williams' basket with 47 seconds left. The Bruins then brought the ball down the floor and worked it into Foster, who hit a short jumper for the winning points.

The Sun Devils had time for one shot before the buzzer, but the ball hit the rim and rolled off.

G'town 97, Syracuse 92

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI) — Georgetown took a 21-point second-half lead Monday night but held on for a 97-92 victory over No. 14 Syracuse behind 31 points by freshman guard Michael Jackson.

The record Carrier Dome crowd of 13,327 was the largest on-campus gathering for an NCAA game, breaking the mark of 27,318 set in Syracuse last year against St. Johns.

Georgetown, coming off a loss to St. Johns Saturday, boosted its record to 10-4 and 1-1 in the Big East while the Orangemen, suffering their second straight loss, fell to 11-2 overall and 2-1 in the Big East.

Jerome, Richfield girls shade foes; Tiger wrestlers sweep

JEROME — With only seconds left, Jerome guard Ann Curtis hit a field goal at the foul line to help put away a 44-36 victory over the Cougars.

The non-conference victory was decided after Valley's Sue Shawyer missed a one-and-one free throw try at the other end of the court with 10 seconds to play.

The guard drove toward the basket, found it impossible to penetrate, then fed the ball to Curtis, who hit her only bucket of the game.

"Yeah, it sure made things interesting," admitted Jerome Coach Jim Stauffer. "Valley's a pretty good ball club, year in and year out, so it's always nice to beat them."

In a junior varsity play, Jerome completed the sweep with a 34-22

Monday night.

The non-conference topsy-turvy game began with Richfield roaring to a 10-0 lead in the first period.

However, a 17-8 final quarter effort by the Tigers decided the contest, which saw Richfield's record go to 4-1.

Wood River's Lori Pascoe, who normally scores high for the Tigers, was held to 10 points.

Tiger Coach Jim Thomas credited that to aggressive play by at least two of his players.

"It just so happened we had two girls (Ward and Hlatt) in her area," he said. "And both of them had four fouls." He said that Ward and Hlatt had Pascoe to just two points in the final, deciding period, while each drew her fourth unerving penalty.

create some things. You noticed they never shot the ball off the pass. Everything was off the dribble. I got a little stubborn tonight and stayed with the man defense to get us used to the transition game I knew they'd play. If we zoned them, it makes them a different team.

"In that way it helped us prepare for Hites because Hites will shoot the standing jumper. We want to be in their faces."

Eastern Utah's Ted Gunn provided a lot of fire power for Eastern Utah, hitting 20 points for the night, but scoring well in the first 25 minutes particularly.

The teams battled evenly through the first 10 minutes before CSI made its first move. Leading 24-22, North hit a jumper and Kennedy picking up five points, including a three-point play. After Utah's Craig Ensign hit two charity shots, Kennedy added two quick jumpers for a 35-24 advantage.

Baskets by Roth and Hlatky took that out to 39-26 with a minute left in the half and CSI led 41-29 at intermission.

Eastern Utah started quickly in the second half, hitting on a couple of fastbreaks and jumpers to close to within 43-40 with 17:11 to play. But CSI then started forcing turnovers and steals and the collective shooting eye came into focus.

Within two and one-half minutes Kennedy and Ron Beach had helped CSI back into a 40-point lead. Eastern Utah steeled for a moment, cutting back to within 58-50, before CSI sealed the victory with a 12-0 flurry.

After that it was a matter of bench clearing and the final five minutes were spent in free throws and turnovers with the crowd exhorting CSI to the 100-point mark. It came on a pair of free throws by Joe Vaadi with 11 seconds left.

Brooks said. "Because we had so many freshmen out there, we were so disorganized. They can't handle the pressure when it gets down to the end."

This wasn't a problem for CSI, however. Jeanne Morgan opened the Colon Eagles' decisive 16-point fastbreak by sinking a short jumper with 2:44 to go. Down on the other end of the court, Morgan blocked a CRU shot, and moments later Rhonda Terhaar scored underneath for a 59-53 CSI lead.

Trish Widner collected CSI's next two baskets, the first after a Belinda Fischer steal and both on fast breaks.

Fischer lay in with 24 seconds to go, ended the outburst which helped give CSI its fifth victory in 12 games.

CSI primarily displayed its streakiness in the second half. After an uninspiring first half, when Anni Levi's 15 points paced CRU to a 27-25 advantage, CRU assumed a 39-31 cushion, temporarily obliterating the close score on Cheryl Birch's three straight baskets.

CRU still led 47-41, when CSI rallied for its first 10-point binge. Fischer sank a 10-footer with 8:25 left to tie the score, 47-47, and nailed two free throws 20 seconds later to provide CSI with a two-point edge. Terhaar's follow of a missed shot at 7:41 finished the surge and put CSI on top 51-47.

After Widner scored on a turnover jumper with 5:51 left, CSI led 54-49. But that was CSI's last tally until Morgan inaugurated the winning uprising. While CSI went scoreless, CRU closed to within one on Birch's free throw and Levi's three-point play.

CSI benefited from the contributions of substitutes Terhaar, Fischer, Michelle Hillesland and Jenise VanderCwm, who combined for 27 points.

CSI players may go in major league draft

By The Times-News and United Press International

NEW YORK -- Leroy Langdon, a hard-throwing right-handed pitcher who reminds scouts of Milwaukee's Peter Ladd, is expected to be selected by the Cincinnati Reds today as the No. 1 player chosen in the regular phase of major league baseball's 18th annual winter draft of amateur free agents.

The Reds, who have the first choice in each phase of the draft, refused to say which players they would take but it was known that for quite some time they have had their eye on Langdon, who attends Brevard Community College in Cocoa, Fla.

Other players expected to be picked high in the first round of the draft's regular phase are pitcher Gene Simmons of DeKalb Central Community College in Atlanta; pitcher-hitting outfielder first baseman Javier Ortiz of Miami Dade South Junior College in Miami, Fla.; and pitcher Blaine Deabenderfer from Louisiana JC in Louisiana, N.C.

Several players from the College of Southern Idaho could also be selected. Last year, seven Golden Eagles were chosen in the winter draft by major league clubs.

CSI assistant Coach Jim Dawson said Monday three players will almost certainly be selected: outfielder-infielder Phil Braase, an Idaho Falls native, left-handed pitcher Steve Clements, a transfer student from Vancouver, B.C.; and another transfer, Mike Duncan, a left-handed batting first baseman from Bakersfield, Calif.

Dawson also termed three more Golden Eagles as "probables": infielders Lynn VanEvery and Jeff Schow, who led Minico to the state A-1 title last spring, and outfielder Jim Kotkas of Lethbridge, Alberta.

Those players eligible for the secondary phase who are given high ratings by the scouts include third baseman Robert Granstaff of Golden West JC in Huntington Beach, Calif.; pitcher Alexander Madrid of Yavapai JC in Mesa, Ariz.; pitcher Bradley Armstrong of Merced JC in Merced, Calif.; pitcher Kenneth Patterson of McLennan Community College in Waco, Texas, and pitcher Steve Wilborn of Louisiana JC.

Yankees won't open season in Denver

Judge calls team as vital to city as Statue of Liberty

NEW YORK (UPI) -- Declaring the New York Yankees as vital to the city as the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Statue of Liberty, a judge Monday barred the American League club from playing its 1983 "home opening" series in Denver.

Acting Justice Richard S. Lane, in a sharply-worded, eight-page opinion, issued a preliminary injunction against the Yankees, who had sought to move the April 11-13 games against the Detroit Tigers to Denver because of concern off-season renovation work at Yankee Stadium might not be completed in time for the April 11 home opener.

The city, which owns the stadium and has a 30-year lease with the Yankees, went to court to block the move.

The city informed the Yankees last fall that the stadium would be ready for the scheduled home opener, but by then, the Yankees had already received permission from the A.L. to play the games in Denver, a city which is seeking a major league club.

The day before a lease was scheduled to be signed, New York City filed suit, claiming the Yankees had a lease which required them to play all home games at Yankee Stadium until the year 2002.

GEORGE STEINBRENNER Will obey judge

Rejecting a Yankee argument that the team really opens the season April 5 at Seattle and that a real New York opening will take place later in the month, Lane ruled that "it is the symbolism of the act not the quantity which counts."

The Justice went on to write that the Yankees were a part of New York and that playing the games in Denver would damage the interest of the City.

"Dare one whisper the dreaded words, 'The Denver Yankees,'" Lane said in his opinion. "Yankee pastimes belong to New York like Central Park, like the Statue of Liberty, like the Metropolitan Museum of Art, like the Metropolitan Opera, like the Stock Exchange, like the lights of Broadway... Collectively, they are the 'Big Apple.' Any loss represents a diminution of the quality of life here, a blow to the City's standing at the top."

Lane openly chided Yankees owner George Steinbrenner in his decision. "Mr. Steinbrenner, in pursuit of the good faith efforts by the City to satisfy his needs, was grabbing a pretext to take his team to greener pastures... i.e. a larger stadium and a populace with an unfilled yearning for major league baseball."

"Taking major league baseball on tour, Mr. Steinbrenner, is an idea whose time has not yet come."

In a joint statement, New York City Commissioner of Parks Gordon Davis and corporation counsel Frederick A.O. Schwartz, Jr. said, "The temptation when victorious in a manner of this kind is to engage in self-congratulatory statements. On this occasion, we pass."

Mayor Edward Koch said, "Wasn't that nice what that judge did? You can't even say Denver Yankees. It doesn't roll off the tongue."

Earlier, in a written statement, Koch and Schwarz said, "Now that this question has been decided, we look forward to renewing the good working relationship between the city and the Yankees."

Steinbrenner called the entire thing "distasteful" but said the Yankees would abide by the judge's decision.

"The Yankees have received the judge's decision and are prepared to open their 1983 season at Yankee Stadium," said Steinbrenner in a statement. "This has been a very distasteful exercise for the Yankees and one we feel firmly was caused by the City due to the inefficient manner in which the City's Recreation and Parks Department operated in the matter."

"The Yankees and their fans everywhere certainly have to be pleased to learn from the Court what we have always maintained -- that is how important the New York Yankees are to the City of New York and what an integral part of the 'Big Apple' they really are... I certainly hope the City will remember this the next time we courtship negotiations."

Vikings' Grant plans to study Redskins hard

By United Press International

Minnesota Vikings Coach Bud Grant has always been known as a keen student of the game of football, and he's going to be studying hard while doing his homework this week.

In preparation for Saturday's NFC semifinal against the Redskins at Washington, Grant planned to begin viewing films of the conference-leading Redskins Monday night and not take his usual day off Tuesday -- mainly because he admittedly doesn't know a whole lot about the team.

"I have absolutely no opinion of the Redskins now," he said Monday. "When I leave here, from now until Tuesday night all we will do is go over the film."

Grant's puzzlement is understandable, since the two teams have not faced each other since Nov. 2, 1980. They were scheduled to meet last Nov. 14, but the game was canceled because of the players' strike.

"At least this means that the time our coaches spent preparing for Washington during the strike won't be wasted," Grant said. "On the film, we saw them, against Philadelphia and Tampa Bay, they were playing well -- and it's obvious they didn't slack off when the season resumed."

NFL playoff roundup

The Redskins routed Detroit 31-7 in their first-round game. Alvin Garrett, who replaced veteran receiver Al Monk, caught three TD passes. The game against Minnesota will match one of the NFL's premier scramblers, Washington quarterback Joe Theismann, against Vikings defensive end Doug Martin, who finished the regular season leading the NFL in quarterback sacks with 11.

In the other NFC semifinal, Green Bay plays at Dallas Sunday. In the AFC, the New York Jets are at the Los Angeles Raiders Saturday and San Diego is at Miami Sunday.

"They say the Cowboys are noted for playing well when our backs are to the wall," says Dallas wide receiver Drew Pearson. "Well, they were against the wall Sunday and they will be next week and for every week from now on."

Dallas trailed Tampa Bay by a point early in the fourth quarter of their opening-round playoff game before storming back to win, and the Cowboys' coaches and players agreed the team's intensity level had reached a high.

"All teams go up and down," said Coach Tom Landry. "It's just one of those years. There was nothing similar to the way we played against Tampa Bay and the way we played the two previous weeks."

"Hopefully, we will play even better next week." In the AFC, the Jets-Raiders game will rekindle an old rivalry from the original American Football League. Jets Coach Walt Michaels is not exactly the biggest fan of Al Davis, the Raiders managing general partner.

"How would I describe my relationship? Just fabulous," Michaels said with a touch of sarcasm. "Let's just say I enjoy the challenge, and why not? If you're going to play somebody, play the best. Nobody has any excuses that way."

Veteran Dolphins guard Bob Kuechenberg is one of only two current Miami Dolphins who have been to the Super Bowl, and he thinks the team has what it takes to go back this year, which would first include beating the Chargers.

"The team that goes to the Super Bowl is the team that gets hot right now," he said, "and it looks like our offense is coming together just at the right time."

Rogers quashes NFL rumors, will remain ASU's coach

TEMPE, Ariz. (UPI) -- Darryl Rogers, mentioned as a candidate for a job in the National Football League, said Monday he would remain as head coach at Arizona State University.

Rogers, whose Sun Devils finished 10-2 last season and were sixth in the final ratings, made the announcement at a news conference in an effort to quell rumors he said potentially were harmful to his recruiting efforts.

"It has become obvious the rumors surrounding my coaching future must be stopped in order to protect Arizona State University's football program,"

Rogers said in a statement. He said he had "no intention" of leaving ASU "now, very soon, nor anytime thereafter" as long as he has the support of the administration.

Rogers, who has been at ASU three years, had been mentioned as a possible candidate for coaching vacancies both with the Los Angeles Rams and the Seattle Seahawks.

"I like Arizona State," Rogers said in explaining his decision to stay. "I think it's very difficult to find universities that have the ability to win and are in a great surroundings, with great facilities, with great people to work for and fine athletes."

Rogers said the "No. 1 question" he faced on the recruiting trail dealt with whether he planned to stay at ASU. Rogers said it was "very difficult" to counteract rumors about his possible departure so he decided to issue the formal statement of his intent.

Rogers said recent news reports that ASU boosters were attempting to raise an additional $100,000 to supplement his pay did not play any part in his decision. He also said he did not give any guarantee to the boosters that he would remain at ASU.

Rogers said he was "very happy" to be in college football, and planned to remain unless there were drastic changes that would not allow ASU to be competitive. He said those changes would include a drastic slash in the number of scholarships allowed or tightening of entrance requirements for college athletes.

Jets' McNeil loses playoff rushing mark

Statistician mistakenly attributed teammate Harper's 9-yard gain

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI) -- Freeman McNeil of the New York Jets "lost" his 9-yard Monday playoff rushing record of 211 yards against the Cincinnati Bengals Sunday.

Through a statistician's error, a 9-yard gain by the Jets' Bruce Harper in the second period was credited to McNeil, who was not in the game at the time.

"McNeil actually had 21 carries for 202 yards, not 22 carries for 211 yards," said Fran Ramos of the NFL. "The error has been confirmed by Jets' game films."

Fran Ramos of the Jets said McNeil came out of the game when it was determined originally that he had compiled 211 yards, breaking the old playoff record of 208 set by Keith Lincoln of San Diego against Boston in 1963.

"There was ample time for him to go back in and break the record," Ramos said. "We thought he already had it."

What McNeil actually got was a tie for second at 202 yards with Lawrence McCutcheon of the Los Angeles Rams against St. Louis in 1975.

"It's no big deal," McNeil said.

"It would have been nice to have, but that's the way things go. We won the game and we're still in the playoffs and that's the nature of the thing. I feel bad for the linemen because they deserve the record."

Jets' Coach Walt Michaels specifically left McNeil in the game after being advised on the bench that he needed just one yard to break the record.

"They called from upstairs and told me he needed a yard, so I sent him back in," Michaels said. "He got four or five on the carry and I took him out. It's just too bad. He deserves the record for the way he ran yesterday."

Harper suspected something was wrong when he looked at the statistics sheet on the bus on the way to the airport.

"I sort of figured something was wrong when I was looking at the stat sheet," said Harper. "I knew I carried twice and when I saw the stat sheet it had one carry, one yard. I thought to myself that maybe it was given to Ferguson because our numbers are reversed. So his deal -- I got 10 yards and he loses a record. It's a shame."

THE ACES

BOBBY WOLFE

"Nine-tenths of the people were created so you would want to be with the other tenth"
Horace Walpole

Ninety percent of all bridge players will stake all on the flip of a coin. Hearts will produce the game-going trick most of the time but that's not good enough. Today you'd want to go with the minority 10 percent.

South refuses the first club and takes the second when East discards. There are eight winners on top, how should the heart suit be played to best yield a ninth?

If South plays his heart ace and finesse dummy's jack the game is bound to go down. South has a spade entry with which to try for three diamond tricks but after that, a lack of entries for South holds him.

The winning answer is that declarer should not try the hearts suit at all until he's first tried the diamonds.

After taking the club ace, declarer leads a low diamond to dummy's 10 and East's queen and East exits with a diamond to dummy's jack. If he now fails to try the heart finesse, and if dummy's jack loses to East's queen, declarer still has a second chance in diamonds. Declarer's spade king provides an entry and the diamond ace brings good news. West's jack drops and declarer's diamond nine ANSWER: Pass. That single trick might be of great value. But the strength is on weak to bid a game.

Send bridge questions to The Aces, c/o The Times-News, P.O. Box 7520, Twin Falls, Idaho 83401. Send SASE to help.

BLM opens leasing books

BOISER, (UPI) — The Bureau of Land Management has announced the agency is accepting applications for a simultaneous oil and gas lease drawing involving about 115,000 acres in 26 parcels scattered throughout Idaho.

The applications can be filed until 4:15 p.m. on Jan. 21 for the drawing, which will be held sometime later this year, according to State BLM Director Clair Whitlock.

A list of parcels is available from the bureau, and a $75 filing fee is required with each application filed. Whitlock noted, "Three applications will be drawn for each parcel, and the parcel is offered to the person whose application was the first drawn."

Whitlock said applicants for the drawing include private individuals as well as major oil companies.

Japan car sales up 3.5%

TOKYO (UPI) — Paced by brisk demand for small subcompacts, 1982 sales of new passenger cars in Japan went up 3.5 percent from a year ago, figures released Monday showed.

The Japan Automobile Dealers Association said the registration of small passenger cars with displacement capacity below 2,000 cc totalled 2,794,791 units, up 6.6 percent from the previous year.

Sales of high-priced autos with engine capacity above 2,000 cc declined 18.5 percent to 60,097 units.

Overall, new car registration for the year totalled 2,858,488 units.

Timothy retiring April 1

A native of Gilcrest, Colo., and a former teacher, Timothy is senior chief executive officer among the Bell operating companies.

He started with Mountain Bell as a commercial representative in Greeley in 1946 and after a variety of management assignments in Colorado and Wyoming, he became vice president and general manager of Idaho operations in 1971.

He was elected president in 1980 and became chairman of the board last November.

Firestone sells tire plant

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. and a Japanese tire maker Monday signed an agreement to sell Firestone's heavy truck tire plant in La Vergne, Tenn., for $52 million.

Bridgestone Tire Co. Ltd. of Tokyo, the world's fourth largest tire maker, had been in negotiations with Firestone for about a year, a Bridgestone spokesman said.

The Bridgestone spokesman said the company plans to call back 170 to 180 workers at the facility by the end of this month. About 650 workers are working at the steel truck radial plant, and about 500 other workers are laid off.

Sales report Wednesday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Commerce Department said Monday its report on retail sales for December, originally to be released today, will be released Wednesday at 12:30 p.m. MST.

The monthly report on inventories, originally scheduled for Wednesday, will be released Thursday instead. A Commerce Department spokesman said the original dates announced by the Office of Management and Budget were mistaken.

Shale project aid sought

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Occidental Petroleum Corp. and Tenecco Inc. of Houston, announced Monday they have formally asked the Federal Synthetic Fuels Corp. to support continuing development of the Cathedral Bluffs shale oil project in the Piceance basin in Rio Blanco County, Colorado.

Bull market moves up

By FRANK W. SLOSSER
United Press International

NEW YORK — Stocks surged to all-time highs Monday in a powerful new-year rally propelled by megabuck investors scrambling to get aboard the bull market of the 1980s.

The current heavy trading and broad-based price boom indicate investors believe the recession has ended and a recovery is underway.

The Dow Jones industrial average, down seven points at the outset after rising 5.15 Friday, climbed 16.28 to an all-time high of 1,092.35. A 29.53-point winner last week, it has soared 315.32 since Aug. 12 last year.

The New York Stock Exchange index rose 0.95 to a record 84.62 and the price of an average share increased 38 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index jumped 1.60 to 146.78, a new high. Advances topped declines 1,148-522 among the 1,976 issues traded.

Big Board volume totalled 101,890,000 shares, down from the 127,290,000 traded Friday.

Although some gains were shaved near day's end by reports the Reagan administration might consider deficit-cutting tax increases, "This market has everything going for it," said Michael Metz, Oppenheimer & Co. vice president.

"While the real world hasn't changed, the feeling on Wall Street is the economy is in the process of recovering thanks to the overzealousness of the Federal Reserve in making more money available.

"At the same time," Metz added, "there is a feeling that inflation will increase a bit as the recovery picks up steam and that has led to a surge in stocks of silver, gold, metals, steel and some oil stocks as hedges."

Chrysler chairman unveils new models

Iacocca sees black ink ahead at last

By GARY KLOTT
United Press International

NEW YORK — Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee A. Iacocca, unveiling the No. 3 automaker's new product line Monday, said the company may have to report an operating loss for 1982, but predicted that even a small increase in sales would put operations "in the black" in 1983.

Despite the possibility of an operating loss for 1982 as well as a projected fourth-quarter loss because of a costly year-end Canadian strike, Iacocca said Chrysler would likely record an overall profit for 1982 because of the sale of its Chrysler Defense unit to General Dynamics.

It would be the first yearly profit that Chrysler will have recorded since

Dow Jones Average 30 Industrials

The National Association of Purchasing Management's latest survey showed retailing volume sales were up while most orders were down.

Henry Kaufman, the influential Salomon Brothers economist, pepped up traders by reiterating his forecast both long- and short-term interest rates would continue to fall. But it warned that "volatility (in movement) is here to stay."

Federal funds rates dropped from recent highs.

U.S. Trust Co. and Bankers Trust sparked some buying when they lowered the rate they charge brokers for loans to 9 1/2 percent from 10 percent.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totalled 119,022,140 shares, down from the 148,209,730 traded last day.

The American Stock Exchange index rose 6.36 to 307.47 and the price of a share jumped 27 cents. Advances topped declines 440-221 among the 830 issues traded. Composite volume totalled 13,091,710 shares compared with 15,082,795 traded Friday.

The National Association of Securities Dealers NASDAQ Index of OTC stocks gained 2.34 to an all-time peak of 240.94.

On the trading floor, American Telephone & Telegraph, a 58-point winner last week, was the most active NYSE-listed issue, up 1/4 to 64 1/2. Southern Pacific, which operates the SPRINT telephone service, sued AT&T on antitrust charges. Southern Pacific added 3/4 to 33.

Citicorp was the second most active issue, up 1/4 to 36 1/2. Among the other banks, J.P. Morgan rose 2 1/4 to 70 1/2. Bankers Trust 1 1/4 to 39 1/2. BankAmerica 1 1/2 to 22 1/2. Chemical 1 1/4 to 41 and Chase Manhattan 1 1/2 to 63 1/2.

IBM, the market leader in 1982, was third on the active list, up 1/4 to 98. The computer giant is expected to report its fourth-quarter earnings around Jan. 21 and the results are expected to be good.

Gold-mining issues were strong as bullion prices surged to more than $470 an ounce on international exchanges.

BN, El Paso agree on takeover procedures

HOUSTON (UPI) — Burlington Northern Inc. and El Paso Co. ending weeks of fighting have reached agreement on Burlington Northern's takeover of the Houston-based energy pipeline company.

The agreement calls for Burlington Northern, the railroad-based conglomerate, to withdraw its Dec. 21 tender offer for control of El Paso and to make a new one Tuesday.

Burlington Northern's Larry Hart said Monday. BN's headquarters is at Seattle.

Both companies will drop all legal action against each other, and Burlington Northern will make a new tender offer that will give it about 51 percent of El Paso's 49 million outstanding shares.

The new tender offer price will be the same — $31 a share — but Burlington Northern will buy fewer shares by public tender, making up the difference by buying shares from the El Paso treasury.

The old tender was for 25.1 million shares. The new tender will be for 21 million shares. Burlington Northern will buy 4.1 million shares from the El Paso treasury and obtain an option on 4.9 million shares more.

Before it started its takeover bid, Burlington Northern already had purchased 300,000 shares, or about 1 percent of El Paso.

Sources said the withdrawal of all pending lawsuits filed by Texas Attorney General Mark White and then consolidated with the lawsuit El Paso had filed to stop the merger.

Auto experts think '83 sales will add up to 6 to 9 million

By JAMES MATFJA
Chicago Tribune

"Pick a number between 6 million and 9 million, and you're within the range of 1983 forecasts by auto company executives and the analysts who focus on the industry."

Opinions vary on the number of cars to be sold in the new year. Ironically, it's the executives who are on the low side, the analysts on the high side, but there's unanimous agreement that profits for the automakers will rise.

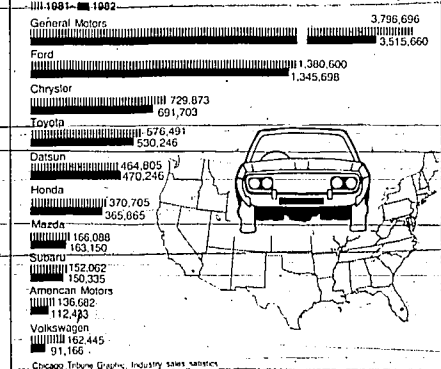

In 1982, automakers sold 7.9 million new cars; 5.7 million domestic and 2.2 million imports, a significant decline from the 8.5 million total of the year before — (6.2 million domestics, 2.3 million imports).

"In 1983, domestics should sell 6.7 million cars, and imports hold at 2.2 million for a total of 8.9 million," said Arvid Jouppl, independent Detroit analyst. "That's under the once-normal annual demand of 9.8 million new cars, but it's a 1-million-unit gain."

Phil Fricke, analyst with Goldman, Sachs & Co. Inc., New York, is even more optimistic.

"I see sales of 9.2 million to 9.3 million units, including imports. In

U.S. auto sales by company

attitude," Meris added, "but a lot of people still have to get to work each day, and must replace what they're now driving."

Meris believes the industry's weak small-car segment will pick up in 1982, the luxury cars did well," he said. "In a recession, dentists and doctors who buy Cadillacs and Lincolns don't get laid off; the little guys do."

However, George Lyles, president of the National Automobile Dealers Association and a North Carolina Chevrolet dealer, disagrees.

"With gas prices still down I see no reason for the small-car market to escalate," he said. "People are again accustomed to mid-sized and full-sized cars."

Fricke said an unknown was whether consumers would put $2,500 (the minimum allowed) into the new money market funds offered by banks rather than into new cars.

"They (the funds) are attractive but not as attractive as CDs (certificates of deposit) were 6 months ago, when people were getting 13 to 14 percent interest and there was the incentive to save," Fricke said.

William Pochulak, a vice-president with Chase Econometrics, insisted, "The less affluent won't participate in money market accounts, because they don't even know what they are."

As for industry profits, analysts agree automakers are going to make money this year, although not as much as in the halcyon past.

"The industry break-even is about 6.5 million to 6.6 million units," Pochulak said. "Full-year sales will be about 6.9 million domestics, enough to make the industry profitable, but not outrageously so."

"Everyone is going to earn money in '83," Jouppl said. "The industry has reached the ability now to operate at a profit with low volume. The cost-cutting in place in the last half of '82 will be in place for all of '83. Along with the substantial increase in unit volume, earnings are going to go up."

These are Jouppl's 1983 profit projections: General Motors Corp., $2.56 billion, or $8.50 a share, up from a $1.2 billion in 1982; Ford Motor Co., $1 billion, or $8 a share, up from a net loss of $242 million; Chrysler Corp., $105 million, or $1.50 a share, up from a $241 million loss; and American Motors Corp., $28 million, up from a $122 million loss.

"The increase in '83 unit sales certainly portends good earnings for the industry," Goldman Sachs' Fricke said. "I see GM moving to $5.50 in '83, Ford to as much as $9 a share, Chrysler to more than $4 a share."

Dear Abby

'Cousins' unaware of relationship

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: When I was 16, I got pregnant by my steady boyfriend. I wanted to keep the baby, but my parents wouldn't let me. Instead they sent me to another state to stay with my aunt and uncle, who took wonderful care of me.

After I had my baby I'll call her Tammy; my aunt and uncle adopted her on the condition that I would never tell her I was her real mother.

Tammy's real father, who had just turned 17 at the time, couldn't accept the responsibility, so as a favor to him, I listed Tammy's father as "unknown." (I don't even know where he is now.)

Tammy is now a beautiful, happy, well-adjusted 15-year-old. She knows she's adopted, but that is all. I am now happily married and have two fine sons whom aren't aware that "Cousin" Tammy is really their half-sister. When I see Tammy, my arms ache to hold her close and tell her who I really am.

How can I fight the urge to tell her?

DEAR ABBY: -- ACHING HEART
DEAR ACHING: Remember your promise to your aunt and uncle, and honor it. One day, when Tammy is of legal age and sufficiently mature to handle it, if she wants to know who her biological parents are, I think she has the right to know -- but you shouldn't be the one to tell her. For now, thank God she is a happy, well-adjusted child, and leave well enough alone.

DEAR ABBY: Sometimes when people call me and my line is busy, they call again and ask, "Who were you talking to?" What should I say?

I'm a respectable 41-year-old woman with nothing to hide, but I think such a question is an invasion of one's privacy. I would never presume to ask that question of anyone because it's none of my business, yet when I am asked I'm never quick enough to respond in any way other than to name the person I was talking to. Then I could kick myself. Any brilliant ideas?

DEAR PRIVACY: Put the offender on the defensive with this response: "Why do you ask?"

DEAR ABBY: My ex-husband is now seven months behind on his child support payments. I lost track of him five months ago and can't find him. I have heard that he has left the state. Is there any way I can find him? I can't afford a private detective.

DEAR NEEDS: He can be traced through the "Parent Locator System," operated by the federal government under the Uniform Reciprocal Child Support Law.

For more detailed information, call your local welfare office. You do not have to be on welfare to qualify for assistance from this office.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "His Wife," who was suspicious of her husband because it took him all day to play 18 holes of golf, reminded me of something that happened many years ago.

Our telephone number was one digit different from that of a nearby golf course. We frequently got telephone calls from people asking for reservations, and we always gave them the correct number of the golf course.

One Sunday morning I got a call from a lady who asked, "Is my husband playing a round over there?" Needless to say, immediate steps were taken to have our number changed.

Families all have informers

BY ERMA BOMBECK
Field Enterprises, Inc.

Every parent has been through the frustration of trying to get their toddler to talk. The kid slobbers and they shout in exclamation. "Did you hear that? He said, 'I love you, Mommy.'" A simple burp turns into, "I love my new curtains with the teddy bears."

I was the same way. I'd stand in front of my son and say, "Ma Ma, Ma Ma, Da Da... watch my lips, darling. Maamaaaa... Daadaaaaaa."

Finally, one day the child looked me straight in the eyes and uttered his first words -- "I'm telling."

It was a curious thing to say for a child alone in a room, but from that day forward that's all I ever heard him utter.

There would be a crash in the bedroom and his voice would emerge loud and clear, "I'm telling."

The dog would yelp and run 50 miles an hour out of the house and a voice would say, "I'm telling."

Sometimes, there would be no sound at all -- only a tantalizing threat, "I'm telling."

There is at least one informer born to every family. A family couldn't take more than one. His talent for seeing what no one else sees is positively uncanny.

Our stouthe was the only one to see his brother humming after I told him to stop... by watching his neck quiver.

He could tell by smelling his brother's breath that he ate the banana I was saving for the fruit salad.

He could look through a closed door and know that others were hiding from him and making faces by seeing their shadows under the door.

He knew by a sixth sense when they were going to raise their hands to hit him -- by the draft. He knew when his brother took off his coat on the playground, even though they went to different schools, because his arms were sunburnt.

In my heart, I knew he'd grow up to be an agent for the CIA if his brother permitted him to grow up.

Come to think of it, that's probably what Eve thought the first time she heard her son Abel call from Cain's bedroom, "I'm telling."
