Tough times sweep nation

'Nouveau broke' are problem

By DONALD E. MULLEN
United Press International

Hundreds of jobless men and women shivered overnight in 9-degree weather in Milwaukee Tuesday, drawn by an advertisement of 200 workers wanted. An unruly crowd fought to grab surplus cheese and butter in Vancouver, Wash.

The homeless were sleeping in makeshift cardboard houses in New York City's Bronx, in tents in Phoenix and in an elegant cathedral in San Francisco.

As the Labor Department Monday reported November's unemployment figures, January's flesh and blood statistics strained the facilities of charities from coast to coast.

Some affluent areas were resisting the organization of soup kitchens and shelters because they were afraid of attracting still more of the "nouveau broke."

The A.O. Smith Corp. a Milwaukee auto frame company, overwhelmed by about 20,000 people applying for 200 jobs Monday, opened its doors a half hour early Tuesday to give warm sanctuary to about 2,000 more who lined up overnight, huddling and bundling around trash can fires.

Michael Love, of Milwaukee, said there was only one explanation for that kind of perseverance.

"Why? Hope," he said. "That is all I can say. It is hope. They want a job and I want a job."

In Vancouver, Wash., distribution of federal surplus cheese and butter had to be temporarily halted Monday because of pushing and shoving mobs.

An angry Salvation Army commander said he had to break up four fights. He said the Salvation Army would get out of the distribution program when the current supply is gone.

"We have been pushed to the limit by the food distribution program for the past eight or nine months," Capt. Carl Prouty said. "I cannot subject my

Reagan takes heat from conservatives

By SUZANNE F. GREEN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Conservatives may not lack President Reagan for re-election in 1984 unless he reverses what they consider "almost a stampede to the left" in the White House, three New Right leaders said Tuesday.

"Quick and comprehensive changes" in Reagan's staff and policies are needed to win back longtime supporters in the conservative wing of the Republican party, they indicated.

No candidate that stands for such things as "the biggest tax increase in history ... can represent conservatives in 1984," said Howard Phillips, who heads the Conservative Caucus, a New Right lobbying group.

"There is growing sentiment that President Reagan has to make quick and comprehensive changes in his White House staff and strategies or bow out of the picture early enough so that a strong conservative candidate can emerge," he said in a telephone interview.

"It is reaching the point of no return," Phillips said.

Richard Viguerie, a conservative fund-raiser and publisher of the monthly "Conservative Digest," said by telephone. "Many (conservatives) are coming privately to the conclusion that we would suggest that the president not run again. I am not there yet, but that would have been unthinkable a year ago."

Viguerie, who expressed the same view earlier on NBC's "Today" program Tuesday, said, "Conservatives have watched with concern as this

Pentagon planning to wage war from space

By RICHARD C. GROSS
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon has directed preparations to "wage war effectively" from outer space and barred the signing of any treaty banning space-based weapons, which "add a new dimension to our military capabilities."

A secret 136-page document urges that an anti-satellite (ASAT) weapon "should achieve" operational status by fiscal 1987 and orders the Air Force to devise concepts about how it could be used in a prolonged strategic war.

The directive orders the Defense Department "as a matter of priority ... (to) accelerate these areas of technology offering the potential for significant military advantage and develop those space systems that have been shown to enhance the U.S. military balance of power."

The document, titled "Fiscal 1984-1986 Defense Guidelines," sets forth policy, strategic, spending and planning priorities during that five-year period and reflects the thinking of the Pentagon and officials of the National Security Council within the White House.

It is accompanied by a covering memorandum dated March 22, 1982, and signed by Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger. It was made available to United Press International by sources familiar with defense issues.

Previous administrations have not emphasized the military uses of space in the same way as the framers of the guidance document, who "are determined to exploit the technology" now available to weapons and space engineers, the sources said.

"The Department of Defense will vigorously pursue technology and systems development to allow the launch and operation of space systems both to provide responsive support and to project force in and from space as needed," the document said.

It did not spell out by what means space-based systems would "project force."

"Space-based systems have the capability of providing us with almost instantaneous access to any point on the globe and thereby add a new dimension to our military capabilities," the document said.

With the exception of an ASAT device under development, the document appeared deliberately vague about types of space systems that should be developed for use against an adversary.

A space-based system would indicate an orbiting weapon, unlike the ASAT now under development — a missile that can be launched into space from an F-15 fighter. Pentagon officials have said the Soviet Union is ahead of the United States in developing satellite hunter-killers.

But space-based laser or particle beam weapons are thought by the former chief of Air Force research and development, Lt. Gen. Kelley Burke, to be 20 years from reality because of their complexity and the weight of their power source.

The document termed an ASAT weapon "an essential ingredient" of President Reagan's $180 billion strategic modernization program announced in October 1981, although it was not included in the plan presented publicly.

But the document makes it clear space is the new frontier for weapons of the future and explicitly bans signing of any treaty that would prevent their development. As a guideline for defending America, it makes no mention of reaching accommodation with the Soviet Union for the peaceful uses of space.

The 1967 Space Treaty bans nuclear weapons from outer space and celestial bodies but does not specifically bar use of space for military purposes. Satellites for military surveillance, communications and navigation have been orbiting Earth since shortly after the dawn of the space age in 1957.

"The U.S. reliance on military space systems continues to grow, despite the asymmetric growth in Soviet capabilities to deny our access to space and our ability to operate freely in space," the document said.

Watt wants to 'liberate' Indians

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Interior Secretary James Watt Tuesday called Indian reservations "an example of the failure of socialism," where residents are plagued by drug and alcohol abuse, unemployment, divorce and venereal disease.

In an interview to be broadcast Wednesday on the Satellite Program Network based in Tulsa, Okla., Watt argued reservations aggravate major social problems besetting Indians and fail to "integrate" them into American social life.

"I try to liberate them and get squashed by the liberal Democrats in the House of Representatives," said Watt, whose department includes the Bureau of Indian Affairs that supervises the nation's 50 million acres of reservations.

"If you want an example of the failure of socialism, don't go to Russia — come to America and go to the Indian reservations," he said.

Watt contended the 1.4 million Indians who live on reservations maintained by the federal government experience overwhelming social problems, including drug abuse, alcoholism, unemployment, divorce and venereal disease.

"Every social problem is exaggerated because of socialist government policies on the Indian reservation," Watt said.

Watt's spokesman, Douglas Baldwin, said it would be "totally untrue" to characterize Watt's remarks as meaning he endorses abolishment of Indian reservations or believes Indians would be better off without them.

Plan to borrow on buildings may drop state bond rating

By MARK SHENEFELT
United Press International

BOISE — The Legislature's special budget-balancing committee heard a New York financial expert warn Tuesday the state could lose its top-grade market rating if it adopts a plan to sell major public buildings.

Jerrold Gold, a Bankers Trust Co. vice president, said Idaho now enjoys a premier financial standing among Western states. But using major buildings as collateral for $40 million or more in bond-sales income could bring disfavor upon the state in national money markets, he said.

"When you start borrowing long-term to boat a problem in the next year or two, a red flag is waved," Gold said.

Chairmen of four subcommittees presented their first reports to the 14-member panel, generally saying there aren't as many options available to cover the impending $69 million fiscal year 1983 general-fund shortfall as earlier thought.

But the subcommittees did list several options — some unveiled last week by legislative staff members and the other turned up by subcommittee members in recent days.

Some tax options are:

- Impose a 3 percent excise tax on utility bills — "easy to collect," according to subcommittee Chairman Walter Yarbrough, R-Grand View — that would bring in $24 million a year and $6 million to $8 million in the remainder of fiscal 1983.
- Require prepayment of insurance premium taxes, attracting a one-time windfall of $7 million to $10 million.

- Boost "sin" taxes. "This area hasn't been worked out yet," Yarbrough said, and some committee members said revenue gained would be minimal.
- Budget-cutting options are:
  - Abolish the state Genealogical Society.
  - Close and sell the old Idaho State Penitentiary, now a museum and historical site.
  - Phase out the Idaho Personnel Commission, eliminate the state Administration Department's Purchasing Division and trim or eliminate the Economic and Community Affairs Division.
  - Resurrect the CAVE committee of two years ago to investigate ways of saving money in the Health and Welfare Department.
  - Add across-the-board spending cuts.

Congressmen want tax law repealed

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho's two Republican congressmen Tuesday called for quick repeal of a recently adopted federal law requiring the withholding of 10 percent of all interest and dividend income earned by taxpayers.

Rep. George Hansen said the law, slated to go into effect July 1, would cost financial institutions billions of dollars in administrative costs to withhold and report income and would prompt many investors to withdraw funds from savings and bond accounts.

He said the statute is "absolutely absurd" in light of the fact that 96.7 percent of all federal taxpayers already list their interest and dividend revenue accurately on returns.

Rep. Larry Craig added the law runs counter to the Reagan administration's goal of economic recovery through stimulation of the nation's capital reserves.

"We have done just the reverse with this measure by attacking the instrument which can rebuild that capital base," he said at a new conference in the Statehouse, attended by Hansen and representatives of the state's financial institutions.

Craig said it makes little sense to create a new bureaucratic machinery to process the withholding when the vast majority of Americans are already complying with laws on the reporting of dividend and interest income.

Hansen said a bill to repeal the law has the support of nearly 100 congressional co-sponsors. And he said a "grass-roots fire" has been started in Idaho and other states to eject the measure from federal tax-code books.

"You know what they say about congressmen," he said. "They steal the light when they feel the heat. We're going to turn up the prairie fire."

Bill would require bonds for dealers

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — Commodity dealers purchasing grain and other produce in Idaho may have to post bonds of up to $300,000 to stay in business.

A bill was introduced Tuesday in the House. Agricultural-Affairs Committee to increase the amount of bonding these businesses must carry in order to provide financial protection for farmers.

"This is strictly a consumer-protection bill," said Ed Carr, the state director of warehouse bonding. But he acknowledged that many commodity dealers may oppose the legislation, since it could increase their cost of doing business.

Existing law requires commodity dealers to post only $15,000 or $25,000 bonds, depending on whether their annual business exceeds $250,000.

The proposed measure would set bonding for commodity dealers at 2 percent of their cost of purchase — how much a dealer pays out for crops during a year.

The minimum bonding would be $25,000, while the maximum would be $300,000. The largest bonds would have to be posted by commodity dealers doing $25 million worth of business, or more, during a year's time.

"The problem is that a fellow can virtually come in and rent an office and a telephone, and do $20 million worth of business with very little protection for producers if he goes bankrupt," Carr said.

Support for the bill came in response to the recent $24-million bankruptcy of Coast Trading of Portland, Ore. Carr said the company's failure left Idaho producers with about $900,000 worth of uncollectible bills.

"The bill does not apply to grain-elevator operators, however," Carr said. "Elevators require a great deal of capital investment for land buildings and equipment."

"It's the commodity dealers who are more apt to pick up and leave without paying farmers for their crops," he said.

But the proposed bonding increase is not enough to effect most commodity dealers, especially established firms like D.R. Curtis Co. in Burley and Reed Grain Co., headquartered in Gooding, Carr said.

"If your track record of business is good and your financial situation stable, the extra bonding isn't going to cost you that much more," Carr said. "I was talking with one fellow re-

Groups outline plans for raising sales tax

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — Two plans for hiking Idaho's sales tax were presented Tuesday to the House Revenue and Taxation Committee.

One measure, sponsored by the Association of Idaho Cities, would raise the state sales tax from 4.4 cents. The other proposal, drafted by Reps. Dan Kelly, R-Mountain Home, and James Lucas, R-Moscow, calls for a 2-cent increase.

No action was taken on either bill; they were forwarded to a special subcommittee for additional study.

Although the AIC bill only calls for a penny increase, it is the more complex of the two proposals, because it departs from the existing distribution formula for sales-tax revenue.

"One half of the 1-cent increase we're proposing would go directly to education, while the other half would be distributed to cities and counties," said Martin Peterson, a lobbyist for the municipal association.

"It is not our interest to say what is to be done with the portion going to education, however," he said. "But we are concerned with the half-cent going out to cities and counties."

Under the AIC plan, the half-cent dedicated to local governments would be split equally between cities and counties.

"Then, of the counties' portion, half would be divided equally between the 44 counties, while the rest would be distributed on a per-capita basis," Peterson said.

The cities' share would be distributed much the same. Half would be divided equally among Idaho communities, while the other half would be distributed according to assessed property valuation.

"We've found that city services are more tied in to property than with population, so the valuation figure is a better estimate of the amount of city services required," Peterson said.

Rep. Martin Peterson, R-Idaho Falls, criticized the AIC for not limiting its bill to a half-cent increase to help cities and counties, while letting

"the people in education fend for themselves."

Peterson responded by saying that his group expected its plan to be delegated to a study committee, along with several other sales-tax bills. He said the AIC bill should be more attractive with the provision for education, but that he did not expect the measure to pass without being joined first with some of the other proposals.

"If the sponsors don't even think their bill will pass, then I move that we table the proposal," said Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome.

But Hollifield's motion was defeated by other committee members, and the AIC proposal was sent on to the special committee.

The Kelly-Lucas plan calls for a 2-cent increase in the sales tax, while doubling the state income-tax deduction for grocery items. The revenue would be distributed according to the existing formula of about 80 percent to schools and 20 percent to other services, according to Rep. Harold Reid, D-Craigmont.

Lucas estimated that the measure would generate about $2 million a week, "or about $28 million by the end of the year. If you consider it will take us at least a month to get it in place."

Kelly claimed that a majority of his constituents in the Mountain Home area support a sales-tax increase to help ease the state's $69 million revenue shortage.

"I guess maybe folks back home are ahead of here in the Legislature," Kelly said. "They know we're in serious trouble."

"The problem is that a fellow can virtually come in and rent an office and a telephone, and do $20 million worth of business with very little protection for producers if he goes bankrupt," Carr said.

Sixth hour plan working in school

News reports, it seems, often focus on what's wrong with the world, but not often enough on what's right or successful.

We read — and write — often of the weaknesses in our education system, the law and criminal justice, taxation and government. But much of the time, things work out reasonably well, particularly when there's participatory involvement by people at the local level. That's what democracy is all about.

Take schools. Last spring, an ad-hoc citizens advisory committee studying the Twin Falls public schools curriculum proposed several changes in high-school classes, including expansion of the school day from five to six periods.

At the time, according to committee member Gary Fay, fewer than 160 students were enrolled in a sixth class hour daily. The plan was implemented, and this year, an estimated 660 students are enrolled in sixth-hour classes.

Enrollment is higher in the lower high-school grades, and is being phased in gradually. The effects are many. Classes are more available to students who need them because the demand is being spread over six hours, not five.

An important benefit that is less easily measured is the increase that more class time will have on the academic training, and ultimately, on the quality of education students get.

There is a direct relationship, as the committee said last spring, between class time and how much students learn.

Twin Falls school administrators are to be congratulated for implementing the sixth-hour plan so rapidly. That kind of flexible response to a reasoned idea is the kind of responsiveness we don't always see in educational circles.

Senators give Abscam legal, ethical clean bill of health

WASHINGTON — After nine months of research and interviews, a select Senate committee on undercover operations has given Abscam and similar investigations a clean bill of health — both legally and ethically.

The final draft report does make some minor criticisms — that law enforcement agencies were not carefully supervising informants and were somewhat overzealous in their use of phony bribes to induce public officials to commit crimes.

But considering the enormous amount of public criticism directed against the FBI from politicians and civil libertarians, the bipartisan report is a strong vote of approval for continued use of the sting-undercover approach.

In fact, the report can be considered an official encouragement to continue to develop sophisticated schemes to catch both public officials and organized crime syndicates.

In 1977, the FBI conducted 53 undercover sting operations; in 1981, the number rose to 460. The report says the sharp increase should not be considered as a factor in deciding "how many undercover operations are necessary or desirable. . . or what safeguards should attend their use."

The reason the committee report basically supports the use of sophisticated undercover operations is that the members appear to agree with the underlying premise — that an honest government official should be able to say "no" when an attempt is made to bribe him.

The Abscam debate, however, is much more concerned with organized crime and drug trafficking than with dishonest congressmen. The committee emphasizes that the congressmen only came into the investigative picture as the result of previous investigations into other crimes such as securities fraud.

Harvard Professor James Q. Wilson, a scholar who specializes in the crime problem, wrote an article defending Abscam-type operations.

Wilson said, and correctly, that for years congressional and other critics complained that the FBI spent most of its time dealing with criminals on the lowest rung of the crime ladder and was not able to catch the bosses. The reason, of course, was that single informants who infiltrated crime families generally were the main witnesses in previous efforts to prosecute organized crime.

However, these types of informants usually have criminal histories themselves so their veracity on the witness stand is always open to serious question.

Furthermore, until the undercover technique was developed, the single informant-witness could offer no more corroboration than his own testimony.

Crime bosses stay well hidden behind layers of subordinates unless the amount of money involved is substantial. And until the late 1970s, the FBI could not obtain from Congress the authority to spend $1 million to set up a big drug or securities buy, which may be the requisite first transaction before the crime boss himself will personally become involved.

In addition, sophisticated electronic devices, especially tiny cameras, have replaced the unsubstantiated word of the eyewitness informer.

In the Abscam case, for example, the FBI used as its chief informer a man with a long criminal history. On the witness stand, his testimony on the bribery of congressmen might have been disbelieved by the jury because of his unsavory past.

Because much of his testimony was verified by film of various congressmen agreeing to take the payoffs, the informer's credibility was no longer the key evidentiary element for the prosecution.

There are still a great many critics of the undercover technique. Professor Alan Dershowitz of Harvard Law School, who was quoted in the Senate report, states that "some of the new police undercover work has lost sight of the profound difference between carrying out an investigation to determine whether a suspect is, in fact, breaking the law, and carrying it out to determine if an individual can be induced to break the law. "Fake documents, lies, subterfuge."

Intrusive surveillance, and the creation of apparent reality are not, generally associated with United States law enforcement."

Dershowitz assumes that adult public officials, gangsters and other citizens are like children — to be questioned only if there is a suspicion that they have committed a misdemeanor.

He also assumes that an adult, like a child, will commit a misdemeanor if he is offered enough money. And then, once having accepted the bribe, there is something faint about the efforts of law enforcement to record the crime by "intrusive surveillance."

Fortunately, the Senate select committee rejected this philosophy for the Anglo-Saxon ethic that adults are supposed to know the difference between right and wrong. They are free to reject the commission of a crime if an opportunity arises — whether the opportunity arises by accident or is planned by the police.

Social Security panel steps on toes but earns its medals

WASHINGTON — To my considerable surprise, the National Commission on Social Security Reform did, indeed, produce a package for balling out the pension system.

Both President Reagan and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., have — if not embraced it — at least said they would "support and work for" the panel's recommendations.

Reagan and O'Neill both were careful to call it "bipartisan." Each was eager to give credit to the other for the package. In the announcement from the White House, the president put the speaker's name ahead of his own. The speaker said the agreement was "acceptable to the president and me."

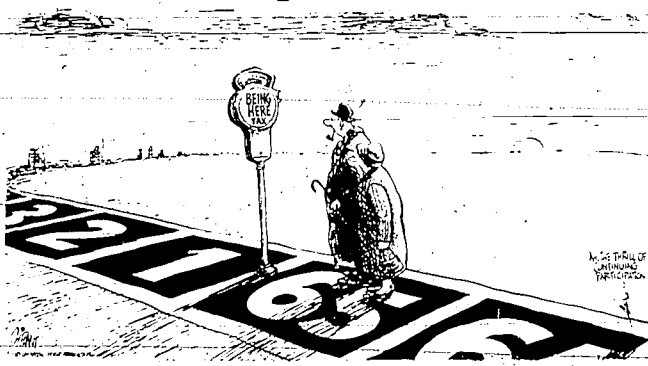

This massive display of politeness, this arms-length embrace, is wholly understandable — for now will come the screams, rolling like high thunder across the political sky.

Recommendations that will accomplish anything toward helping the Social Security system require stepping on some toes. The commission didn't come down too hard, but it doesn't take much pressure to elicit screams. Lobbyists must justify their existence. They scan the newspapers and the Congressional Record daily for things to scream about.

The commission was gutsy enough to step on some toes. This is the surprising part. The screams are as inevitable as the death of the soprano in the opera's last act.

The shortfall in the system was estimated at from $50 billion to $200 billion by 1989. This may be optimistic. If past estimates had been accurate there would be no shortfall.

Measuring the recommendations in order of gutsiness is easy. Just listen to the volume of the screams. The bravest recommendation was the decision to postpone this year's cost-of-living increase from July to January. This will pick up $40 billion of the $169 billion the package claims to save by 1989. It trends on the $60 million toes of the 36 million people who are retired now. Their numbers are large, they are thoroughly organized, they vote — and this hits them first.

Recommendation No. 2 on the bravery index is the proposal to tax half of the Social Security benefits of single retirees having other income of $20,000 (couple, $25,000). While this has been characterized as a tax on the wealthy, elderly people with incomes of $20,000 or $25,000 do not feel wealthy. It affects 4 million people, but it will bring in $30 billion by 1989, so it hits hard. They will scream.

These two recommendations are benefit cuts. Most of the rest are tax increases. The largest number of toes being stepped on is the 1.16 billion toes of the 116 million workers now paying Social Security taxes. All involved are careful to label the tax increase a "rescheduling of present taxes already on the books" — but it remains a tax increase. If it were not, it could not raise $40 billion, and get the bronze medal for bravery. The real bite on this one, however, doesn't come until 1988. People don't scream too loudly while they wait in the dentist's office.

Self-employed persons are fewer in number and not well-organized, so it isn't as brave to stick it to them. Their Social Security tax is going to increase by one-third. They get most of it back as an income tax credit, so their screams will be muted. This is a back-door way of getting Social Security money out of general revenues without admitting you're doing it. It also will increase the federal budget deficit.

Federal unions will object as future federal employees are forced to join the Social Security system. This doesn't help the system over the long run one bit, but is expected to provide a $20 billion infusion by 1989.

Employees of state and local governments will be prohibited from dropping out of the Social Security system, which they have been doing in droves. They will not only scream, they will sue.

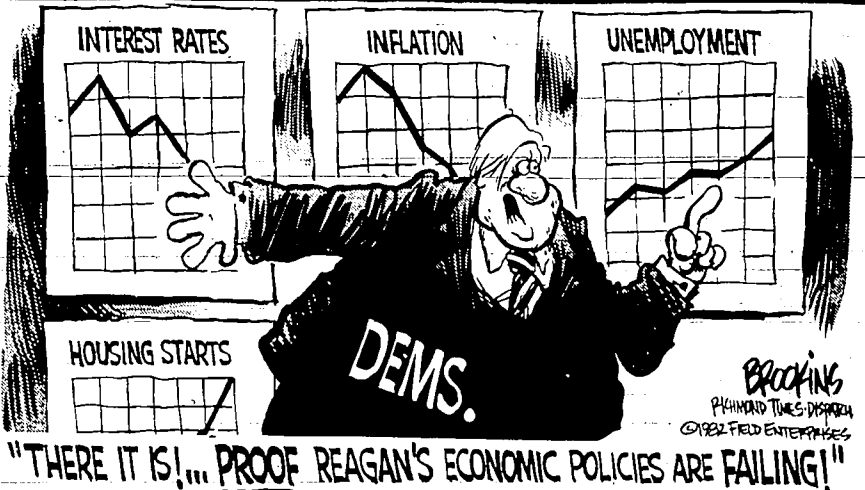

The commission did a moderately brave job on the immediate problem, but backed off on some things it should have done — like increasing the retirement age to compensate for our longer lifespan, and tying benefits directly to the lower of cost-of-living increases or wage increases.

It failed to address the dangerous disparity between today's generous benefits and the skimpy ones that today's workers can anticipate.

There will be dozens of excuses for members of Congress to vote "no" — because the proposal does too much, does too little, or does it wrong.

The baby is on Congress' doorstep, and it will take some moderate bravery on Congress' part to adopt it — instead of just listening to the screams.

Otis Pike, a former Congressman, writes his column from Washington, D.C., for Newhouse News Service.

Reagan trying to reduce 'gender gap'

WASHINGTON — Even when politicians engage in the most obvious damage control, they usually won't admit that something needed fixing.

Thus, the official administration line when two women were appointed to the Reagan Cabinet in a space of one week was that it had nothing to do with the "gender gap." That disclaimer, to use a polite term, is nonsense.

Elizabeth Dole is going to be transportation secretary and Margaret Heckler secretary of health and human services at least in part because the Reagan administration recognized it was in trouble with women.

In the past, both Republican and Democratic presidents have had about the same approval rating from men and women in national polls. But Reagan has had significantly lower ratings from women than men since 1980 and that gap has widened during his first two years in the White House.

That Mrs. Dole and Mrs. Heckler were named to the Cabinet because they are women in no way means either. Both have first class experience in government and, if anything, appear more qualified for their new jobs than some male Cabinet appointees in the past.

But both of them — and hundreds of other women — were as qualified to serve in the Reagan Cabinet when it was first formed two years ago as they are now.

The new president chose 13 men to head the executive branch departments. Jimmy Carter started with two women Cabinet members, Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps and Housing Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris — a contrast that itself might have as much to do with Reagan's gender gap problem as his opposition to the Equal Rights Amendment.

The only Cabinet-level representation of women in the original Reagan Cabinet was Jeane Kirkpatrick as United Nations ambassador, a job that has been described since the days of Adlai Stevenson as all bark and not much bite.

Reagan did place women in some other top jobs — Ann Gorsuch as head of the Environmental Protection Agency, Nancy Steerts as head of the Consumer Product Safety Commission — and he made history by selecting Sandra Day O'Connor for his first Supreme Court appointment. But the gender gap still widened during 1982 and several recently disclosed internal White House memos made it clear that the situation was causing concern.

In addition to the two appointments, the administration took another step last week that fits into the same mold. The Justice Department joined in a legal challenge of the insurance industry's practice of paying smaller monthly pension benefits to women than men because their life expectancy is higher.

Whatever the merits of the case, that action might do as much as the appointments to ease the hostility of women's groups — and presumably, their reconstituents — toward the administration.

It is unlikely that any of the above will cause a mass migration of movement feminists to the Reagan standard. Nor is that what the president needs in practical political terms. He does need support from roughly the same percentage of the female electorate as the male, and to get it he must try to stop the gender gap from widening.

If he can't, and if the GOP becomes indelibly labeled as the anti-woman party, the president or any other Republican might find the White House out of reach before the 1984 campaign ever starts.

Bishops meet to draft letter on nuclear weapons policy

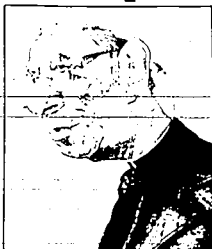

By PHILIP PULLELA
United Press International

ROME -- Chicago Archbishop Joseph Bernardin said Tuesday the U.S. church may modify its pastoral letter on nuclear war to accommodate Reagan administration concerns on the Soviet arms buildups.

But Bernardin, who met European bishops in the Vatican with three other American Roman Catholic churchmen, said he did not believe any changes in a draft of the church position paper would be "substantive."

The Vatican organized the meeting reportedly to let European bishops comment on the theological foundations of the letter, which has sparked debate in the U.S. church on the morality of stockpiling nuclear weapons as a deterrent force and whether it is morally right for Catholics to work in industries that develop and build nuclear weapons or serve U.S. nuclear military installations.

Speaking to American seminarians in Rome and to reporters, he said, the language of the draft letter may be modified to accommodate administration criticism that it did not pay enough consideration to Soviet military policy.

JOSEPH BERNARDIN
At Vatican session

"We are conscious of the fact that two superpowers generate the arms race today, and that the nuclear arsenal of the Western nations exists in large measure because of the history and conduct of Soviet policy," Bernardin said.

"But this fact does not relieve us of our responsibility to address our government on the content of its defense and foreign policy," he said. "I personally don't consider them (the expected modifications) to be all that substantive. Some sections will be made clearer," Bernardin told reporters.

In his address to seminarians, Bernardin said the final draft would be revised to more clearly confirm a nation's right to self defense, better define the morality of deterrence and better describe U.S. policy.

He said the revisions would better evaluate the relationship between the principle of non-violence and the church's traditional teaching of a "just war."

Bernardin repeated that he and the other committee members would listen to any suggestions or criticisms of the letter by European bishops but stressed that the U.S. church alone would prepare the final draft.

"In writing the letter, we are searching for the truth, and so obviously we will listen to all suggestions and advice," said Monsignor Daniel Hoyer, general secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

The U.S. committee has been drafting the letter since last year and was expected to release the final draft in early May.

Gromyko denies statement

By The Chicago Tribune

BONN, West Germany -- Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko Tuesday denied statements by President Reagan's former arms control chief, Eugene Rostow, that U.S. and Soviet arms negotiators had reached a compromise formula in Geneva last summer on limiting American and Soviet missile forces in Europe.

Speaking at a news conference, Gromyko said there had been "rumors" to the effect that progress had been made in Geneva that, however, in no way reflected reality.

Members of the U.S. and Soviet negotiating teams had many official and unofficial talks on medium-range missiles, he said. Arms negotiators even had taken walks in the mountains together so as not to be disturbed.

"But there was no progress," Gromyko said. "It's the fault of Washington ... it's the fault of those who are at the helm of the American government."

The Soviet foreign minister also accused the Reagan administration of trying to block agreement in the parallel strategic arms limitation talks by making proposals that were unacceptable to Moscow and of stalling on a superpower summit.

Asked about the possibility of an early summit between President Reagan and the new Soviet party chief, Yuri Andropov, Gromyko said such a meeting originally had been proposed by former Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev and later reaffirmed by Andropov.

"We were told that preparations were necessary for a meeting of this kind," he said. "We are all for that. One should not only talk about it, however, but actually make the necessary preparations. The American administration should know that the Soviet Union is not waiting with outstretched hands and begging (for a summit)."

Major battle brewing in Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) -- Rebels claimed Tuesday to have killed 35 soldiers participating in a 6,000-troop counterinsurgency offensive shraping up to be the biggest battle in El Salvador's three-year-old civil war.

Guerrilla Radio Venceremos said rebel forces killed 35 soldiers and took eight prisoners in a leftist advance Monday to Meanguera, 12 miles north of the capital of Morazan province, San Francisco Gotera.

Military sources in San Francisco

Gotera, 72 miles northeast of San Salvador, said guerrillas armed with heavy automatic weapons attacked Oscalca, less than six miles to the north.

Rebels, who since October have occupied a half dozen villages in the northern part of Morazan, in early January began advancing south along the only paved road toward San Francisco Gotera, closing in from three sides.

Both rebels and the government forces call the road "Calle Negra."

Black Street in Spanish -- both for its color and the frequent intense combat which has taken place along it in the past three years.

Rebels said they counted 150 troop trucks, each holding between 40 and 50 soldiers, entering the area near San Francisco Gotera.

Three U.S.-trained "immediate reaction battalions," Atonal, Atacali and Bellosa, are among government forces moving against guerrillas north of San Francisco Gotera, rebel and military sources said.

Falklands report out

LONDON (UPI) -- An official study absolved British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and her government Tuesday of "any criticism or blame" for Argentina's invasion of the Falkland Islands and the ensuing 10-week war.

But opposition leaders accused Mrs. Thatcher of missing "opportunities which might have prevented an unnecessary war," due to poor organization and misjudgment.

David Owen, former Labor Party foreign secretary and a current leader of the new Social Democratic Party, admitted the report was "not a great scandal."

"The government is not going to resign tomorrow," he said.

The Mormons

Who are the Mormons? How do they view their community? How do others see them?

These are questions often asked privately, but too seldom explored in serious, public discussion. Beginning Sunday, The Times-News will take a step to change that.

We have purchased re-publication rights to a lengthy series of articles on the Mormon church in Utah, first published in the Denver Post last November.

Sunday is the beginning of that series, written by Denver Post staff writer John Aloysius Farrell, who spent more than three months in Utah researching the articles.

You may not agree with every point in the series, but we hope it will make you stop and think. No matter what your perspective, it will challenge your views.

U.S. expels Polish reporter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department retaliated Tuesday for the expulsion of United Press International reporter Ruth Gruber from Poland by ordering a Polish News Agency correspondent to leave the United States within two days.

The announcement made clear that the expulsion of Stanislaw Glabinski was a direct reprisal for the treatment of Miss Gruber and not for any improper behavior on his part.

In Warsaw, Polish authorities lodged a "sharp protest" with U.S. Ambassador Francis Meehan over the action against Glabinski, the only Washington-based correspondent for the Polish News Agency PAP.

Egypt to buy American flour

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary John Block announced Tuesday the United States has agreed to sell 1 million tons of wheat flour to Egypt over the next 12 months.

The agreement, which was worked out in Cairo, represents a major advance in U.S. efforts to compete aggressively for the Egyptian flour market, the largest in the world, Block said.

"This single arrangement represents one-sixth of the annual world trade of wheat flour, and it will generate more than $150 million in U.S. export earnings," he said.

Feminist indicted on charge

GRETNNA, La. (UPI) — A Jefferson Parish grand jury, apparently relying on testimony from a California feminist leader's ex-husband, Tuesday indicted Ginny Foat on a first-degree murder charge in a 1965 slaying.

The parish sheriff's office said John Sidote, Ms. Foat's former husband, was granted immunity in exchange for his testimony. A spokesman in the district attorney's office confirmed Sidote testified Tuesday.

The indictment charged Ms. Foat in the Nov. 20, 1965, fire-iron slaying of Argentinian businessman Moses Chayo, 62, near New Orleans. Authorities have said robbery was a motive.

Both Sidote and Foat, president of the California Chapter of the National Organization for Women, were suspects in the murder.

Zealots only had knives

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Seven religious zealots killed by police after they beat to death an officer they had taken hostage had only three knives for weapons when they first grabbed the patrolman, authorities said Tuesday.

Two guns were also found in the house where the shootout occurred last week, but authorities said these with police. 38's taken from the hostage and one other officer during the opening hours of the siege.

Apparently the zealots had expended all 12 shots in the police revolver when officers stormed the house with automatic rifles and tear gas after a 30-hour standoff. All seven died of bullet wounds in the head.

Leak won't bring citation

ATHENS, Ala. (UPI) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission said Tuesday it probably will take no "major enforcement action" against TVA for dumping 208,000 gallons of radioactive water into the Tennessee River from the Browns Ferry Nuclear Plant.

The NRC, which has fined TVA $172,125 since 1980 for six safety and security violations at Browns Ferry, said it had sent a radiation specialist to the three-reactor facility to verify TVA reports that radioactive water discharged into the river posed no health risks.

Swine can parachute

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Humane Society officials said Tuesday they won't try to stop a pig parachuting act this weekend.

The pigs, dressed in goggles, hats and scarves, are scheduled to take the 4,000-foot plunge Sunday strapped to three sky divers during "The Great American Pig-Out" — an outdoor music festival at the Central Florida Fairgrounds.

"I don't condone this, but the fact of the matter is that it isn't really illegal," said Dick Meyers, president of the society.

Meyers said the animals would not be "tormented" or "hurtured" so the society "would be on shaky legal ground if it sought an injunction to stop the event."

Conservatives to oppose tax increase

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two conservatives launched a campaign Tuesday against the Social Security bailout plan, but one conceded opponents have "less than a 50-50 chance" of whittling away the tax increases outlined in the package.

The plan, drawn up by a special commission and endorsed by President Reagan, House Speaker Thomas O'Neill and bipartisan congressional leaders, would raise $169 billion over seven years through higher payroll taxes, taxing benefits for upper-income pensioners and imposing a six-month delay in July's scheduled cost-of-living increase.

The package, adopted by the commission on a 12-3 vote, would erase two-thirds of the pension program's projected deficit over the next 75 years.

In a report to be published Thursday, a majority of the commission is expected to urge Congress to find the rest of the needed cash by raising the retirement age from 65 to 66 in the next century, but the panel's liberal Democrats will propose a conditional payroll tax hike in 2010.

Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., and Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, commission members who voted against the compromise plan, denounced it as leaning too heavily on taxes and failing to make needed long-term changes, such as raising the retirement age.

Sources said one likely change in the package approved Saturday would involve adjusting the proposal to tax half the benefits paid to single pensioners with more than $20,000 in annual outside income and couples with more than $25,000.

Archer argued that meant a retiree with a $19,999.99 income would pay no taxes.

Armstrong said he would write fellow senators urging them to "keep their powder dry" because the package could be "profoundly embarrassing" to them. He met Monday with Senate staffers to give them the same message, and is contacting lobby groups.

Archer released his five-page dissent to the commission report, in which he complained that three-quarters of the revenue for the bailout would come from tax hikes or direct and indirect general revenues.

He also warned, "There is great danger that these proposals have made promises which the system will not be able to support."

The House Ways and Means Committee begins hearings on a Social Security bill Feb. 1.

Michigan city hit with highest unemployment

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Flint, Mich., hard hit by layoffs in the auto and related industries for more than a year, had the nation's highest unemployment rate in November at 23.4 percent, the Labor Department reported Tuesday.

Several other cities in the industrial Midwest also recorded 20 percent plus rates and the department said that 91 metropolitan areas across the nation had jobless rates above the unadjusted national average of 10.4 percent in November.

The department's Bureau of Labor Statistics also said the jobless average increased over the past 12 months in all but 10 localities.

Stamford, Conn., with an unemployment rate of only 3.9 percent, again was the lowest.

On a statewide basis, Michigan and West Virginia had the highest unemployment rates in November.

Active market gives ground

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market gave ground despite several rally attempts Tuesday when nervous traders cashed in on profits made in Wall Street's volatile new year rally.

Observers said prices bounced around as fourth-quarter earnings reports began to emerge. But some high-technology stocks sparked with American Telephone & Telegraph and IBM leading the way.

The Dow Jones industrial average, down 1 point at midsession after rising 3 1/2 Monday, fell 5 1/2 to 1,079.65. It came within a fraction of its all-time high of 1,092.35 in Monday's session.

Some analysts said a retreat has been triggered by traders who have programs requiring brokers to sell automatically when the Dow gets into the 1,090 to 1,100 area.

The New York Stock Exchange index, which reached a record high Monday, eased 0.16 to 84.63 and the price of an average share decreased seven cents. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index (off 0.31 to 116.40. Declines edged advances 667-757 among the 1,995 issues traded.

Big Board volume slowed to 78,380,000 shares from the 83,010,000 traded Monday.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 92,456,220 shares compared with 102,861,810 traded Monday.

The American Stock Exchange index rose 0.14 to 371.73 and the price of a share added four cents. Advances topped declines 347-292 among the 830 issues traded. Composite volume totalled 91,996,230 shares compared with 111,224,150 traded Monday.

The National Association of Securities Dealers NASDAQ index of OTC stocks lost 0.49 to 49.70.

On the trading floor, AT&T, which gained 1 1/2 Monday, was the most active NYSE-listed issue, up 1/4 to a record 69 1/2. The company's American Bell unit introduced a new dimension PBX communications system.

IBM, which managed to add 1/4 Monday after hitting an all-time high of 100 1/2, was third on the list, up 1/4 to 95 1/2. IBM is expected to introduce a low-cost personal computer soon, according to the Wall Street Journal.

On the Amex, Wang Laboratories class B was the most active issue, up 1/4 to 3 1/2. Dome Petroleum followed, up 1/4 to 3 1/2. National Patent Development was third, up 1/4 to 1 1/2.

Boise Cascade posts 'worst year' figures

BOISE (UPI) — Boise Cascade officials say last year was the worst the forest products company has experienced since World War II.

"And that considers the company made a profit by taking advantage of accounting adjustments and foreign exchange gains."

The Boise-based company reported that net income last year was $7.2 million, or 20 cents a share, down from $120 million or $4.50 a share the year before. Sales were listed as $2.9 billion, down from $3.1 billion in 1961.

Company officials called 1962 an "awful" year, although the firm did make a profit through accounting adjustments and gains on foreign exchange.

"It was awful," said Vice President, manager of media relations.

In the company's quarterly financial report, Chairman John Fery predicted business conditions probably will remain "severely depressed" throughout the first quarter of this year.

Fery said he believes the paper business has hit its lowest point and probably will improve gradually along with the rest of the economy.

The firm also announced it plans to issue $100 million in preferred stock later this month as a means of reducing short-term debt.

In the fourth quarter of 1962, net income was $7.6 million or 28 cents a share compared with $7.2 million or 21 cents a share the year earlier. Sales in that period were $721 million, down from $728 million in the comparable quarter a year earlier.

First Security income rises during 1962

SALT LAKE CITY — First Security Corp. reports consolidated unaudited income of $44.3 million before securities transactions for 1962.

This amounts to $3.70 per share.

These figures compare with $43.4 million or $3.63 a share in 1961.

Spencer F. Eccles, president, said consolidated net income after securities transactions for the year was $53 million or $4.42 per share, compared with $40.6 million or $3.39 a share in the prior year.

Fourth quarter income before securities transactions was $12.6 million or $1.04 a share, compared with $13.3 million or $1.12 a share a year earlier. Net income for the quarter was $2.3 million or $0.17 per share, compared with $1.1 million or $0.09 a share in the final quarter of 1961.

Eccles said income for 1962 was hit substantially by high interest expense including $240 million paid in interest on savings accounts.

Consolidated resources of First Security Corp. and its subsidiaries was $4.6 billion at the end of 1962, an increase of 11 percent over the $4.2 billion reported a year earlier. Total deposits in First Security banks and its thrift and loan company were $3.3 billion at the end of 1962, an increase of 11 percent. Loans and leases outstanding at the end of the year were $2.9 billion, an increase of 10 percent.

Eccles said complete details of 1962 operations will be presented to the regular meeting of directors Monday in Salt Lake City.

What's what

After a divorce, the woman usually stays home in familiar surroundings while the man leaves to start fresh. Not always, certainly, but that's the more common pattern. And analysts think it explains why more divorced men than divorced women commit suicide.

Q. What's a "Henry V kiss"?
 A. A theatrical term. That the man steps up behind the lady, reaches around her head, takes her face in his hands, turns her mouth toward him, and kisses her over the shoulder.

In a traffic jam, typically, far more men than women drivers start honking their horns.

WHITE HOUSE BREAKFAST

Q. Is it true that President Ronald Reagan eats the same breakfast every morning?
 A. Reportedly. He breakfasts daily on fruit or juice, cold cereal and a cup of brewed decaffeinated coffee, according to those who care.

Q. Was there ever a Lone Ranger chewing gum?
 A. There was. Briefly in 1945. Only three wrappers of same are now known to exist, and all of these recently sold for $850.

Q. What's the only species of bird that intentionally defecates on people?
 A. The original dirty bird, that one — the skua of the Antarctic. It's said to dive bomb its enemies, including people. In that atrocious manner.

BEDOUIN PHILOSOPHY

Bedouin men of the Middle East are said to have a philosophy that's expressed something like this: "I am against my brother, my brother and I are against our cousin. My brother and I and our cousin are against the world."

Even though correspondents insist there's no women's underwear fashion model in London named Stark Jaybird, I don't believe it. Beginning to sound as though somebody's making up these trick monikers.

If you've ever had a zipper stick, you well may understand why it took only 30 seconds to design, but 22 years to make it work.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Considerable confusion and muddled thinking exist later in the day, so make a point to make important decisions earlier. You begin to see things more clearly in the evening.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Go to the right sources for the data you need. Don't take advice from those who are not cognizant of all the facts.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Obtain important information about a project you are interested in before you go ahead with definite plans. Use your wisdom.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) If you handle routine duties in a more up-to-date way, you get more benefits.

Study a new plan before making any changes.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't neglect important work early in the day. Try to cooperate more with co-workers. Strive for more harmony.

LION (July 22 to Aug. 21) Take care you don't take on any heavy expenditures of money in the evening. Allow time to engage in creative activity.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Postpone going ahead with a new interest you have in mind and wait until a better time. Evening is fine for recreation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Improve the foundation of your life so you can have added abundance in the days ahead. Get rid of annoying conditions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Iron out any problems with others in a quiet and tactful manner. Seek the company of congenials in the evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)

You have to use careful thought in handling monetary affairs today. Use your intuitive faculties for best results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Use a different attitude in handling a puzzling situation and you get better results. Relax in the company of friends tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have hidden desires that need more study before you pursue them. Strive for increased happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Some of your friends may have problems so be sure to give a helping hand. Show others you have practical wisdom.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY: he or she will be one who comprehends the problems of others, and knows instinctively how to help them. Be sure to give your child progeny the right education to bring out this ability. A busy life in the chart.

Top honors at awards show for Nelson, Rogers, Richie

By JEFF WILSON
United Press International

LOS ANGELES — Willie Nelson's hit album "Always On My Mind" swept top honors in both pop-rock and country categories and Kenny Rogers and Lionel Richie also captured double prizes in the 10th annual American Music Awards.

Rogers, honored as favorite country male vocalist and for his top country single, "Love Will Turn You Around," also won a special award of merit for "his rise to the pinnacle of the music industry."

Ex-Commodore Richie won top honors as favorite male soul vocalist and for his pop-rock single "Truly."

Barbara Mandrell was honored as the top female country singer for the third consecutive year.

Rogers, who has won 14 American Music Award trophies in the last decade, said the awards were "the culmination of everything I've strived for."

With his wife, Marianne, at his side and his 13-month-old son, Christopher Cody, riding on his shoulders, Rogers told the standing audience of 6,000 at the Shrine Auditorium, "I may look foolish but I feel great. The trophies are only important if you have someone to share them with. And I share this with all of you."

ist, while Daryl Hall & John Oates were named favorite pop-rock group. Olivia Newton-John accepted her favorite pop-rock female vocalist award via a live satellite hookup from Hawaii.

Nelson's "Always On My Mind" award in the pop-rock category beat out Journey's "Escape" and

Fleetwood Mac's "Mirage."

Richie was a surprise winner in the pop-rock single category with "Truly." He was competing against favored "Ebony and Ivory" by Paul McCartney & Stevie Wonder.

Other winners were Alabama, country group; Diana Ross, female soul vocalist; Kool & The Gang, soul group; Marvin Gaye's "Sexual Healing," best soul single and Aretha Franklin's "Jump To It," the top soul album.

Winners in the 10th annual American Music Awards were selected by the public with 30,000 ballots sent to a national sampling of record buyers. Names of the nominees were compiled from the year-end record industry sales charts.

Richie's song "Truly" is his first solo effort since leaving The Commodores.

Rogers joins a select group of musicians in winning the special award given in recognition of "outstanding contributions over a long period of time to the musical entertainment of the American public."

Previous winners include Bing Crosby, Barry Gordy Jr., Irving Berlin, Johnny Cash, Ella Fitzgerald, Perry Como, Benny Goodman, Chuck Berry and Stevie Wonder.

"The previous winners are the most talented artists to ever make music in America and I feel humbled to be counted among them," Rogers said.

Burns marks 80 years in show business

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — George Burns, vaudeville star, TV comedian, recording artist and "God" — was honored by a who's who list of Hollywood stars at a dinner celebrating the start of his 80th year in show business.

At least 200 of the top people in the entertainment industry attended a dinner at Chasen's restaurant Monday night to honor Burns, who gets his start at the age of 7 when he quit school to join the Pee Wee Quartet, which roamed the Lower East Side in New York.

He celebrates his 87th birthday anniversary Thursday.

One guest described the festivities as "fantastic, a very special evening to honor a very special person."

Burns, who cut his first country-western album, "I Wish I Was Eighteen Again," when he was 83, sang "Young at Heart" at his dinner party. "I don't mind getting older," Burns said. "I just don't want to become old."

Academy Award-winning lyricist Sammy Cahn led the audience in singing, "I'm Glad He's Not Young Any More," a parody he wrote for Burns.

Burns was a comedian in vaudeville, burlesque, radio, television and movies for half a century, and for 38 of those years, he was happily married to the late Gracie Allen.

The couple attracted enormous audiences throughout 17 years on radio and eight years on television.

When asked how he has lived so long, Burns' stock reply has been, "All I can say is, I drink martinis, smoke cigars and dance very close."

Lost Ark quest finally ends run

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — Indiana Jones has quit his search for the Lost Ark — at least in San Jose theaters.

The film "Raiders of the Lost Ark," released in the summer of 1981, finally ended its run in San Jose this month after a record 81-week engagement at the Century Theater chain.

The show closed Jan. 6, one week after a film trade magazine proclaimed the San Jose run "endless."

"Nothing even came close to 'Raiders.' 'Star Wars' ran a year and 'American Graffiti' ran 40 weeks," said Jim Keenan, promotions director for the Century chain.

Approximately 450,000 people paid $2.1 million to see the film in its San Jose run.

Tuna sells for more than $24,000

TOKYO (UPI) — A 550-pound tuna was auctioned for the equivalent of about $24,486, a record price, Tokyo's main wholesale fish market reported.

A spokesman for the market said, "This tuna will be served only at high-ranking Japanese restaurants beyond the reach of ordinary people."

The price was equivalent to about $86.96 per kilogram (2.2 pounds) or more than double the ordinary price for this season.

Market officials said the tuna, 6.6 feet in length, came from Hachinohe in northern Japan, one of the nation's major fishing bases.

News briefs

No memory of taking pills

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — A woman whose husband is charged with trying to poison her testified Tuesday she does not remember taking any pills the night she fell into a cyanide-induced coma, her husband's attorney said.

Susan Bowen "remembers getting sick ... getting dizzy and falling down," but that's it," defense attorney, Melvin Belli, said outside the courtroom.

Belli relayed the testimony for reporters who earlier were ejected from the Santa Clara County court by order of Municipal Judge Edward Nelson.

Sultan's suite available

BELLEVUE, Wash. (UPI) — Thanks to the Sultan of Selangor, Bellevue's Overlake Hospital now has a suite for the patient who can afford everything.

Last August, the Malaysian sultan spent five days in a three-room hospital suite at Overlake for cataract surgery, a 30-minute procedure which can be done on an out-patient basis.

The sultan spent $15,000 renovating the suite, adding gold-plated bathroom fixtures and a canopied queen-size bed.

Uranium mill closing down

BLANDING, Utah (UPI) — More than 100 people will be laid off over the coming several weeks as one of the nation's most sophisticated uranium mills closes in Blanding because of the depressed uranium market.

He skipped, wife says

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — One of his many wives testified Tuesday that accused bigamist and conman Giovanni Vigliotto sent her to a phony rendezvous in Canada while he skipped away with her money and property.

Sharon Clark, 41, Ray, Ind., told a Maricopa County Superior Court jury Vigliotto left her in Canada with no money and no shoes — only the clothes on her back and a broken-down car.

When last she saw him, she said, he had a truck loaded with her antiques, her mother's possessions and property of another man. She said she also sold property in Florida at his insistence and gave him the $2,000 cash from the sale.

Clark was the second witness in the bigamy and fraud trial of Vigliotto, whose attorney said may have married more than 100 women.

Doctors accused of murder

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Murder charges against two doctors who disconnected a patient's life support systems will test whether families or the courts have the right to decide to keep a person alive by machines, one defendant said Tuesday.

The hearing before Municipal Court Judge Brian Crahan was expected to last about two months.

Herbert, 55, died Sept. 6, 1981 at Kaiser Permanente Hospital after lapsing into a coma. He died 11 days after surgery after doctors disconnected all life support systems, including nourishment.

Dr. Robert Neul, a surgeon, and Dr. Neil Barber, an internist, appeared at a preliminary hearing that will determine whether they must stand trial on charges of murder and conspiracy to commit murder in the death of Clarence Herbert.

Valley trembles

SAN FERNANDO, Calif. (UPI) — A small earthquake shook the San Fernando Valley early Tuesday, registering 2.6 on the Richter scale and causing no damage.

Police said there were no reports of damage or injury.

Caltech spokesman Dennis Meredith said the quake hit at 7:21 a.m. MST and was centered nine miles west of San Fernando, a suburb 25 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

School district urges support of bond issue

By HARRIET GUTHERTZ
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls School District officials urged concerned citizens gathered at O'Leary Junior High School Tuesday night to promote passage of a $3.5 million to $4 million school bond issue.

A continued increase in the number of grade school students has created an urgent need for a new elementary school, said Paul Ostyn, chairman of the school district's citizens' curriculum committee. Ostyn also said the expansion of girls' athletics and intramural programs means the high school will need a new gym.

School officials expect problems in passing the bond issue and want to strengthen public support before they put the proposal before the voters in April or May. "We're going to have to attack this program as if we were going to plant the flag on two Jims," Ostyn said.

Members of the Twin Falls Educational Association also are looking at ways to support the bond issue, said Richard Chilcote, president of the association. According to a fact sheet distributed at the meeting, the state accreditation board has cited four of the five elementary schools in the district as being "overcrowded." The five schools have had to accommodate more than 400 additional students since 1977. Schools Superintendent James Sawin said that demographic studies forecast a continued increase in the number of elementary students to the year 2000. Ostyn said the district eventually will have to build a second elementary school unless Bickel Elementary can be renovated.

The proposed elementary would be built on one of two sites near Robert Stuart Junior High, or on a parcel of land on Park Avenue South, Sawin said. Because the district owns the land, the bond issue would include construction costs only.

Design-West of Boise estimates that the school would cost between $2.5 million and $3 million and take around 20 months to finish. The gym remodeling and expansion would cost around $1 million.

Sawin wasn't prepared to offer the audience an estimated cost per household of "the taxes needed to repay the construction project's bonds, but said that he would do so next month.

School officials are reluctant to split the elementary school and gym projects, but are starting to conduct straw polls on both issues.

Sawin asked that concerned citizens meet again at O'Leary Junior High on Tuesday, Feb. 1, to form a committee that would get information out to the community.

Pool plan

City manager offers proposal to renovate Harmon Park pool

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Despite a consultant's recommendation that the Harmon Park pool be closed, city officials remain reluctant to pull the plug on the facility.

City Manager Tom Courtney has developed a plan to seek federal funding to extend the life of the facility another five to 10 years.

He presented a tentative proposal to Twin Falls City Council during Monday's work session. His proposal included a recommendation that solar heating be used to reduce the pool's utility costs.

Council gave Courtney the go-ahead to at least investigate the possibility of renovating the pool, but no decision on the pool's fate was made.

Last month, council reviewed a report from a consulting firm based in Bellevue, Wash., that said the pool should be abandoned due to deteriorating conditions. The firm said a new pool should be built in another area.

Wayne M. Smith of William M. Smith and Associates Inc. reported that the Harmon Park pool was in "poor condition" and that it lost "as much as 6,000 gallons of water a day" through leaks in its concrete wall. Any funds poured into its renovation "might be money down the drain," he wrote.

City officials, however, immediately ruled out building a new pool due to the high cost.

Smith said a "modest-sized" outdoor facility could be built for $300,000 to $750,000. Courtney estimated the cost of a new facility to be "a minimum of $400,000, which is totally prohibitive at this time."

Although Smith said he could not recommend that the pool undergo major rehabilitation, his four-page report did contain some suggestions for renovation, should the pool remain in operation.

In a Jan. 17 report to council, Courtney said the city staff's goal was "to extend the life of the pool for a minimum of 10 years."

He disagreed with some of Smith's conclusions. In particular, he said, he did not feel the water loss was as great as Smith portrayed.

Last week he also learned that Idaho has received $700,000 in federal Land and Water Conservation Funds to be awarded cities on a 50 percent matching-grant basis. Courtney said he believed the Harmon Pool project could qualify for a grant.

One of the more unusual pool renovations suggested by Courtney involves setting up a solar heating system, modeled after a Minot, N.D. system, which uses plastic pipe under a paved parking lot. Courtney suggested researching the possibility of running plastic pipes under the tennis courts west of the pool to heat the water. The tennis courts, he said, already are due for refinishing.

Last summer, the city spent about $300 to heat the pool for three months. The cost will approach $10,000 this summer, according to Courtney.

Other suggestions include leaving the pool filled year-around to control the freeze-thaw cycle that can crack the concrete. The pool is drained now as a safety precaution. But improved fencing, signing and covering the pool could minimize the city's liability. Courtney also suggested that the deck and the locker-shower room be renovated at a combined cost of $40,000. He estimated the total cost for all the renovation work would be $100,000.

"The project is funded through a federal Land and Water Conservation Fund grant, the city's share would be $50,000, according to Courtney's projections.

Council members expressed fears about pouring money into the 34-year-old facility in the face of a negative consultant's report.

Courtney acknowledged more research was needed to see if renovation was indeed feasible.

However, "like many consultants, he (William M. Smith) likes to see new buildings built," Courtney said.

Council members encouraged Courtney to utilize city resources to further investigate renovation options.

Arrests may clear up series of valley thefts

TWIN FALLS — Seven adults and four juveniles from the Buhl area have been arrested in connection with a series of burglaries in Twin Falls and Gooding counties.

Sheriff James Munn of Twin Falls said the burglaries have occurred over the past two-and-a-half weeks in the west end of Twin Falls County and in the Hagerman area.

He said Deputies Mike LePray and Robert Goltner, who are assigned to the west end area of Twin Falls County, have worked with Sheriff County Aja of Gooding County and several of his deputies in a cooperative investigation that resulted in the series of arrests.

The burglaries involve the Thousand Springs Resort near Hagerman, the Dan Skeem farm near Kanab, Rapids in Hagerman Valley, the Donald Bostock residence near Buhl, The Train Station Pizza restaurant in Buhl and the Parson-Dairy, also near Buhl.

At the dairy, a Holstein heifer was stolen. Munn said. The animal has been located after having been sold several times.

He said about $300 in quarters from coin machines also taken from the resort has not been recovered, although tools, electronic equipment and other items taken from the farms and homes have been recovered.

Munn said Tony Kuntz, 21, and Stanley Vincent, 22, as well as a 17-year-old Buhl male juvenile have been charged with the burglary of the Dan Skeem farm.

David Floyd, 19, and Michael Riil, 18, both of Buhl, are charged with burglarizing the Bostock residence, and Floyd and two male 17-year-old juveniles are charged in connection with the Thousand Springs Resort burglary.

Arrested on charges of grand theft in connection with the stolen heifer from Parson Dairy are Tim Gene Whitted, 18, Richard Tyree, 20, and a male juvenile, no age available, all from Buhl.

Farmer-participation is key

Conservation efforts helping solve Rock Creek pollution

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Rock Creek may become a prime fishing spot thanks to a federal grant awarded in 1980 and work since then to prevent sediment from entering the stream.

"Rock Creek has a real good chance of responding to all the attention it's getting," said Don Martin, the senior water resource analyst for the state Department of Health and Welfare's Division of Environment, Martin has been "measuring the water quality throughout the stream as part of the clean-up project.

His report was given to about 50 farmers at a meeting Tuesday where officials working on the Rock Creek clean-up project presented a progress report.

Historically, Rock Creek had salmon runs until 1909 and was a "viable" trout fishery until the 1950s, Martin said.

The problem today is that between 26,000 and 46,000 tons of sediment each year are washed into Rock Creek as it flows through Twin Falls County farmland before entering the Snake River.

But in one portion of the watershed, where the sediment runoff once was the heaviest, conservation efforts during the last two years have reduced sediment entering the stream by 80 percent, he said.

"With more conservation measures still scheduled to be put in practice, the amount could be reduced even further," Martin said. "I expect the sediment loading is going to be negligible next year," Martin said.

Local conservation officials received one of 13 experimental grants in the nation in 1980 to help reduce pollution in Rock Creek, which at the time was considered one of the most polluted streams in the state.

The grant, made through the federal Rural Clean Water Act, provided about $2.5 million to pay a portion of the cost of installing a variety of soil conservation measures on farms in the area. About $500,000 was included to help pay the local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service and Soil Conservation Service for their assistance on the project.

Farmers were asked to participate voluntarily, and had to pay for a portion of any conservation measures installed on their farms. The goal of the project was to install "best-management practices" on 70 percent of the farms in the area and to reduce agricultural pollution of Rock Creek by 70 percent in 10 years.

Irrigation water from about 290 farms, covering 45,000 acres, drains into Rock Creek. Since the project began, 78 farmers have signed contracts entitling them to receive $870,000 in return for installing sediment ponds, filter strips and other conservation measures, said Kent Kirk, the ASCS director in Twin Falls.

As part of the study of the impact of those conservation measures, Martin interviewed fishermen along Rock Creek during the summer. That "creel census" showed that they were catching fish at a rate of 0.1 fish per hour.

"In this state, 0.1 fish per hour is poor. One fish per hour is good,"

Martin said. "So 0.04 per hour is real bad."

Another study of Rock Creek, conducted by Dan LaPlant, showed that the stream provides a good environment for rainbow trout in the reaches from the South Hills to just south of Twin Falls. But from there to where it joins the Snake River, the creek provides a relatively poor environment, said the area biologist for the Soil Conservation Service.

Sediment contained in agricultural runoff is almost entirely responsible for the problem, he said. It covers potential trout spawning beds with silt and leaves the water muddy, making it more difficult for fish to find food.

Search for missing pilot canceled; he calls home

BURLEY (UPI) — The search for a pilot who disappeared late last week on a flight from Pasco, Wash., to Burley was canceled Monday after family members called authorities to report they had heard from their missing relative.

Idaho Aeronautics Division spokeswoman Nancy McConaughy said relatives of automobile dealer Don Ovitl called the Federal Aviation Administration early Monday to say they had been telephoned by the man.

Ovitl, 34, was reported missing by his family when he failed to arrive at Burley as scheduled Friday. Federal officials said the man did not file a flight plan, and dropped off radar screens about 15 miles south of Pasco.

McConaughy said family members did not provide specifics on whereabouts of Ovitl.

"They declined to tell us where he is, but we have to assume he is safe and sound," she said.

Jim Heathington of the Aeronautics Division said Ovitl "just disappeared" shortly after takeoff. He said FAA officials had checked airports across the western United States, but failed to turn up any sign of the pilot or his Piper craft.

Ovitl is the president of Ovitl Chevrolet-Oldsmobile in Burley.

Group plans annual solicitation campaign to fight birth defects

TWIN FALLS — The March of Dimes' annual Mothers March on Birth Defects will be held Jan. 23-31 in Twin Falls County.

Besides seeking donations to fight birth defects, this year's door-to-door campaign also will survey area residents about their views on solutions to the "acute problem of children having children," according to Jennifer Leavitt, local chairman of the event.

"The high incidence of children having children has long-term repercussions for all of society. Babies born to mothers under 17 have a higher-than-average risk of mental retardation, physical malformations and early death," she said.

"The very young mother also places her own health in danger, and young parents often face an uncertain educational and economic future."

'Birth defects have an impact on the lives of some 15 million Americans,' — Jennifer Leavitt

No one will be identified by name in the survey.

Nationally, contributions go toward programs of research, medical service and education. In Twin Falls County, money raised from the campaign helps sponsor the life-support system module for the infant transport system at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. Last year, $2,500 was raised for that project.

The local chapter of the March of Dimes also is interested in planning new, community-based educational and health services to prevent newborn damage and death.

"Birth defects have an impact on the lives of some 15 million Americans," Leavitt says. "During our drive we want to reach people with health education about prevention of birth defects."

But, Leavitt said, volunteers to participate in the local march are needed.

"Our goal is 10,000 marchers to cover Twin Falls, Hansen, Kimberly, Filer, Buhl, Murtaugh, Castleford and Rogerson."

Persons interested in participating in the march should call 734-2013 or 734-7695.

Officer quits, is named chief

JEROME — Earl Flannery, Jerome Police Department captain, has resigned to accept the job of Chief of Police in Wetsler.

Jerome police Chief Darryl Cameron said Tuesday the resignation is effective Jan. 31. Flannery will assume duties in Wetsler the following day.

Flannery was hired as police captain for the Jerome department on April 13, 1982 after returning to Jerome from California. He has served as a Jerome police officer for several years before moving to California.

"One of my goals has always been to be a police chief at some time in my career. I hate to leave Jerome, but it is an opportunity I can't pass up," he said.

Sheriff investigates theft from shed

RUBERT — Over $2,000 in tools and equipment were reported stolen Monday from a storage shed located five and a half miles east of Rupert, according to Minidoka County Sheriff's Office reports.

The burglary was reported by owner Bud Furniss, who lives on the property near the shed. The break-in apparently took place sometime Sunday night, sheriff's officials said.

A welding torch, air compressor and saddle, worth $2,350, were taken. There was no information available on how entry was gained into the shed.

French class at CSI still has openings

TWIN FALLS — Registration still is being taken for the "French for Fun" class being offered at the College of Southern Idaho.

The course will start today and last for 10 weeks, meeting from 7 to 9:30 p.m. in Room 108 of the Shields Building.

This is an introductory course, with emphasis on the spoken language and tied to situations common to the traveler in Canada and France. Linda Chamberlain will teach the course. The fee is $28.

For more information, call 733-9554, extension 243.

Council agrees to purchase TV to see inside of city sewer lines

TWIN FALLS — City officials hope to peer inside city sewer lines soon, without tearing up a single pipe.

Twin Falls City Council approved Monday the purchase of a close circuit television system that can inspect the insides of sewer lines, allowing officials to find the exact location of deterioration or obstructions.

The city has about 130 miles of line, ranging in size from six-inch to 42-inch pipe. City Engineer Gary Young said the television system was needed to determine where capital investments should be made.

"Now we wait until something falls in. That's a poor way to plan." Young told Council at its Monday work session.

Council approved a bid of $37,606 for a television system from Underground Survey of Fresno, Calif. City staff had recommended against accepting a bid of $35,850, as one of three alternatives submitted by Quess of Sacramento. The staff said the lower bid did not meet specifications.

Upon a recommendation from Councilman John Peterson, council directed City Manager Tom Courtney to use a leasing arrangement to fund the project.

In other business Monday, council:

- Approved a bid of $31,350 from

AMCOR of Idaho Falls to purchase 2,300 linear feet of concrete barrier rail for the upper grade of Canyon Springs Road. A second bid was submitted by Severance Construction of Fden for $45,190.

- Extended a lease with the Twin Falls Senior Citizens Federation for use of the city-owned building at 939 Fourth Ave. W.
- Appointed John Doerr of Twin Falls to a three-year term on the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport Advisory Board. Doerr takes the place of Fred Wanznerried who asked not to be re-appointed when his term expired Dec. 31, 1982.

Farmer wins repossession lawsuit

TWIN FALLS — A 12-member jury has ordered a Washington corporation to pay more than $80,000 to a former Nevada desert farmer, who sued when the company repossessed his irrigation system.

The jury's verdict was reached after a six-day trial that concluded last week in Fifth District Court in Twin Falls. The lawsuit was waged by D.J. Nelson of Homedale, Ore., against World Wide Lease Inc. of Lynnwood, Wash.

Both sides in the lawsuit agreed to have the matter heard in Twin Falls County, court officials said.

Nelson was involved in farming operations in the Desert Valley Irrigation project, located about 25 miles west of Winnemucca, Nev. After a series of financial reversals, Nelson decided to forego farming operations for the 1980 growing season and requested an extension on his rental payments for the irrigation equipment.

"He alleged that the company wrongfully repossessed one system and thereby breached the agreement. The company argued that no such agreement had been made.

Nelson further alleged that a World

Wide representative repossessed a second system owned by another company.

The plaintiff was seeking $200,000 in damages, plus $100,000 in punitive damages.

In its verdict, the jury found that no agreement had been breached, but it concluded that World Wide had misappropriated the irrigation system to its own use.

It ordered World Wide to pay Nelson $96,278. But the jury also concluded that Nelson was indebted to the Washington firm in the amount of $13,929.

Arrests

On Jan. 1, Joseph Goulette, 37, of Buhl, a burglary suspect, was arrested in the Train Station Pizza restaurant. The arrest was made by Deputy Gouther and Ruhl police officer, Jay Heward, Munn said.

A report was not available Tuesday night on the Gooding County burglaries.

Whitted requested the services of the public defender when he was arraigned in Fifth District Magistrate Court on grand theft charges Tuesday. Goulette, charged with first degree burglary and grand theft, also was arraigned and granted the services of the public defender pending further court appearances.

Other suspects are scheduled for court arraignment later in the week.

Kuntz also appeared in Fifth District Court Tuesday to plead guilty to first-degree burglary in connection with a different incident.

He was arrested by Gooding County officers and charged with the theft of a 12-gauge shotgun and a pair of binoculars from a vehicle in Buhl on Dec. 6, 1982. The property later was recovered.

District Judge George Granata set bail at $10,000. Sentencing is scheduled for Feb. 7.

Rozelle asks producers for names

By COOPER ROLLOW
Chicago Tribune

Pete Rozelle, commissioner of the National Football League, Tuesday fired back at the producers of Monday night's public television program, daring them to come up with the names of perpetrators of alleged fixed NFL games and the dates on which the games were held.

If the information is not forthcoming, Rozelle indicated, the issue is closed as far as he is concerned.

"We'd like them to give us the names they have if they've got the guts to make them public," Rozelle said in New York. "They said they had names, but didn't want to make them public."

There is no known evidence to support such allegations. If someone has a preconceived notion and tries to build a whole show around it, we can't stop them. The only thing we can do is count on the normal integrity of people in journalism."

Jessica Savitch, anchor of a Public Broadcasting Service documentary dealing with gambling in the NFL, said after the broadcast that a Justice Department source had informed her an investigation of possible links between pro football and gambling and narcotics is underway.

Rozelle said in the telephone interview that the league has no plans to ask for outside help in policing the sport based upon the evidence that has surfaced so far.

"I have no reservations about our owners or players," the commissioner said. "I know of no owners that bet on games, no players. I put them both in the same category."

"We're going to continue the way we are. We'll conduct our own investigations confidentially. We've got as strong a security force as there is in team sports. We've got 28 part-time people in various cities, two full-time people here (New York), plus full-time eastern and western regional persons.

"I'm satisfied that they are efficient. They work closely with law enforcement. I think this thing is going to be just like the player strike. The effects of the strike are over now with the playoffs, and we'll get off to a good start next year."

Rozelle earlier released a statement calling the program "a cheap rehash of press clippings, gossip and rumor, some almost 25 years old. The innuendoes and unsupported allegations, including the circumstances of Carroll Rosenbloom's death and the so-called fixed games, were, in my view, disgraceful examples of cheap sensationalism and checkbook journalism."

"If the producers of the show and their paid informants are at all confident of their information, why won't they offer specific facts including names of players and dates of games? Without these facts, every coach and player of the period the show cited (1934 to 1970) is subject to suspicion."

Rozelle said he agreed to be interviewed for the show in response to a written request.

"They came into my office on Dec. 2 with a full television crew," said Rozelle. "I knew only that the subject was gambling and associations."

"They asked one question after another, shotgun style, for an hour and a half. I wasn't given the opportunity to give our positions. Nowhere were we given a chance to counter what they said."

"They asked me about Rick Casares (Chicago Bears fullback from 1955 through 1964). 'Did you know that (former commissioner) Bert Bell cautioned him on associ-tions?' I said, 'Gee, that must have been 25 years ago.'"

"They asked me a number of things that went back about 20 years, including many questions that predated my commissioner-ship. I wasn't able to go to our files. You can't remember every detail, going back that far."

"It isn't pleasant to have a show like that go nationwide, particularly when they apparently don't have enough confidence in their facts to even list names and dates. They just take the word of a fellow in Miami whose testimony a judge said earlier was clearly impeachable."

The commissioner emphatically denied inquiries that he has taken action against players for maintaining unsavory associations and looked the other way when owners do the same thing.

Tigers fall again

MOUNTAIN HOME -- It's been a season of streaks for the Jerome Tigers -- but only the first one was fun.

Since running off a 10-0 mark to open the season, the Tigers have lost their No. 1 ranking in the state poll with three straight close losses.

Ball hawking Bobby Dunne capped a succession of steals, including the game-breaker with 42 seconds left and bounced in a pair of free throws to secure a 57-53 victory for Mountain Home Tuesday night.

Dunne's two free throws gave Mountain Home a 55-51 advantage and although Kevin Hulsey pulled Jerome within two points with five seconds left, Mark Bingham nullified those with two free throws after the final buzzer.

Jerome, which won the first meeting between the two schools 63-51, had the lead twice in the fourth quarter, the last time with 1:30 left. Mountain Home, which moved ahead by nine points on three occasions, took the lead for keeps when Armand Stevenson hit a three-point play with 1:10 remaining.

After Jerome missed a free throw, Mountain Home picked up one of two from the line. With 42 seconds to play, Jerome set up for the possible tying bucket. But the shot never happened as Dunne picked off a cross-court pass and was immediately fouled. He switched the first one and bounced in the second.

Dunne was a major problem for Jerome all night as he came up with several steals and led the fast break for a succession of easy lay-ins.

Although Jerome has lost the three games by a total of nine points, Coach Pat Hoke shows little consolation.

"This is the one I feel worst about," he said. "It irritated me to heck to lose their point guard out there blowing bubbles when we were playing defense. They fell like they were laying with us. I felt that we were the more

Poky stays in Gem race by whipping Bruins

By MARV CLEMONS
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS -- Pocatello guards Wendy Bitton and Susie Collins combined to outscore the Twin Falls Bruins as the Indians took a 39-26 Gem State Conference girls' victory Tuesday night to stay in the running for the league title.

Bitton and Collins each netted 14 points by either driving in against the Bruin defense or hitting 15-foot jumpers.

The win pushed the Indians to 10-3 in the league, one less behind

Highland High's 8-2 mark. The Rams have three games left including one Thursday against a tough Blackfoot squad. Pocatello, which defeated Highland twice this season, concludes its loop season Thursday against cellar-dwelling Minico.

The Bruins fell to 3-10 in the league and 5-10 overall.

Twin Falls played even with the Indians through the first quarter, tying the count at 9-9 with 10 seconds left when Ashley Bisplinghoff hit a lay-in.

Pocatello took charge in the early minutes of the second quarter as Collins and Bitton each hit driving baskets to forge a 13-9 lead.

Bisplinghoff's single free throw cut the deficit to 13-10, but Bitton hit from the corner and reserve center Melanie Henderson came off the bench for a short jumper and a 17-10 Pocatello lead.

Lauree Romasko, Pocatello's 5-10 center, hit two of her three field goals in the last 2:10 of the half to stretch the Indians' margin to 21-12.

Henderson, Collins and Bitton hit the first three field goals of the second half for a 27-12 Pocatello lead and the Indians used the remainder of the game to work on its pressure defense and offensive spread.

The Bruins, who finish their regular season at Skyline Thursday, cut the deficit to 10 points by the end of the third quarter, 29-19, but could get no closer as the Indians worked the delay effectively.

Guard Alma Hernandez and Bisplinghoff paced the Bruins' anemic offense with six points each. The 26 points is the second lowest point production of the season for Paul Stover's squad, a 22-point effort against Highland in the second game is the low.

In the preliminary game, Mallin Miller pumped in 20 points as the Bruins defeated Pocatello 39-27 to push their record to 11-3.

Thorpe's medals given to family

LOS ANGELES (UPI) -- The International Olympic Committee Tuesday returned Jim Thorpe's medals from the 1912 Games to his children, as the great Indian athlete's descendants gave tribal war whoops of triumph and shed tears of joy.

One son, the present chief of Thorpe's tribe, appeared for the ceremony feathered and fringed in full tribal regalia.

The return of the medals ended a 70-year-old controversy over Thorpe, considered by some to be among the greatest athletes of the century.

Thorpe won the medals for coming in first in the decathlon and pentathlon at the 1912 Games in Sweden but was forced to return them the next year. The Amateur Athletic Union ruled he had lost his amateur standing by playing baseball for money in small towns in North Carolina in 1910.

"I'm sure father is with us here today, and he would say one word -- thanks," said William Thorpe of Arlington, Texas.

The return was hailed as a victory for "the Indian people of America" by Jack Thorpe of Shawnee, Okla., chief of the Sac and Fox tribe, who appeared in a fur hat bedecked with feathers, a scarlet tunic dripping colorful Indian decorations, a white neck scarf and beaded moccasins.

"I wish he could have been here," said a granddaughter, Dagnar Thorpe-Seeley, 36, of Reno, Nev., tears rolling down her face.

As IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch presented the medals to Thorpe's children, war whoops burst from the group where many of Thorpe's 20 grandchildren and great-grandchildren, including a number of small children, stood watching.

"We never gave up. It's been a long fight," said Gail Thorpe, 63, the oldest child, of Tahlequah, Okla.

"I can't believe it -- I've been working on it all my life," said Grace Thorpe, also of Tahlequah. "I'm not young anymore and I kind of thought my children would have to take up the fight."

Thorpe himself never asked that the medals be returned, and in fact refused to discuss the matter, even with his family, the children said.

"It just wasn't his nature to go around begging," said Grace.

"He was a very quiet man," said Gail. "He knew he won; the world knew he won, and he didn't have to have the medals to prove he was the winner."

The IOC had new copies of the 1912 old medals struck for the occasion. The original medals were awarded to the second-place finishers.

UCLA takes No. 1 after upset week

NEW YORK (UPI) -- UCLA, once synonymous with college basketball supremacy, is back on top of the heap -- at least for a week.

The Bruins, who have an 11-1 record, were voted No. 1 by the UPI-Board of Coaches after three of the other top-rated teams suffered upsets. UCLA jumped from fifth place to become the fourth team in the last seven weeks to be ranked No. 1.

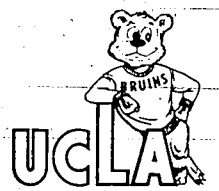

It marks the first time since February 1979 that UCLA has been ranked first.

UCLA, of course, practically ruled college basketball during the long reign of Coach John Wooden. That reign ended following the 1975 season and, while UCLA has remained an excellent team, it did not reach the heights that it had under Wooden.

Memphis State, No. 1 last week, suffered its first loss of the year -- to Virginia Tech -- and fell into a tie for No. 3 with North Carolina, which upset Virginia 101-95 Saturday to improve eight positions.

Now coached by Larry Farmer, the Bruins collected 16 first-place votes and 565 points from the 11 coaches who participated in this week's balloting. Indiana, 13-1, received two more first-place votes than UCLA (10-16) but finished with 550 points as the Hoosiers moved up two spots to No. 2. Memphis State, 12-1, and North Carolina, 12-3, both had one first-place vote and 413 points to tie for No. 3.

Arkansas, 13-0, advanced two positions to No. 5 after victories over Texas A&M and Southern Methodist, while Virginia, 12-2 following its loss to the Tar Heels, slipped four notches to No. 6.

NEW YORK (UPI) -- The United Press International Board of Coaches Top 20 college basketball rankings (first place votes in parentheses), records through Jan. 16 and total points:

1. UCLA (16)	565
2. Indiana (18)	524
3. (tie) Memphis State (1)	524
3. (tie) North Carolina (1)	524
5. Arkansas (13)	510

—JOHN ELWAY
Has three choices — NFL, Yankees, USFL

Negotiation phase to start for soon-to-be-rich Elway

By Knight-Ridder Newspapers

PALO ALTO, Calif. — So much for the playing. Now for the talking. John Elway, Stanford's nonpareil quarterback, turned a corner in his life last Saturday after the East-West Shrine game.

No longer will he fire footballs as a collegian. No longer will he play that sport for free.

Elway is working with a couple of deadlines — picking an agent, preferably by Feb. 1, and the National Football League draft April 26-27.

"Right now, we're still gathering information," said his father, Jack, the head coach at San Jose State and John's closest adviser. "We'll settle the agent thing first and then see what the NFL does. Right now, of course, Baltimore has the No. 1 choice. That could change, or it may not."

Elway's talent as a baseball player (the New York Yankees have rights to him), plus the emergence of the U.S. Football League, puts him in a three-sided, gold-clad position. He will listen to the bidding and go with what suits his fancy.

It may not be the most lucrative offer.

He can't be overjoyed at the possibility of playing for martinet Frank Kush of the Colts, who managed to go winless this season (0-8-1) — a distinction matched by only two other clubs since World War II. A gas hose or sharp knife are easier ways to commit suicide.

One glance at Jim Plunkett's scarred shoulders or Dan Pastorini's wobbly knees is testimony to what happens to quarterbacks starting out with wretched NFL teams.

Would Elway be wise to announce that he will consider only a West Coast team in the NFL? Or should he opt to idle in neutral, praying the woeful Colts will trade their pick? It makes little sense for Baltimore, with Mike Pagel aboard and Art Schlichter in reserve, to hoard Elway when it can deal him to another team for maybe two first-round picks. San Diego has them and Coach Don Coryell reportedly would even smile for a sideline camera if he could land Elway.

Dan Fouts? Ed Luther? The Chargers seem well-stocked at quarterback. But are they? Fouts is 35 and last weekend, again, he failed. He has never ramrodded the Chargers to the Super Bowl.

Houston, choosing second, is said to be coveting deluxe running back Eric Dickerson of SMU. Battered Earl Campbell would be traded.

The Los Angeles Rams go third and want defensive help Denver is fourth and seeks a receiver. Next, thanks to the Fred Dean trade with the 49ers, comes San Diego.

The odds are 3-1 Elway will select football over baseball if the situation is appealing.

Elway could try baseball for, say, two years. If he isn't progressing satisfactorily, there's always football.

The NFL team that drafts him, according to the new players' agreement, will have rights to him for four years. After that, it has an indefinite right of first refusal. So, although up to 27 other clubs could bid for him, the original team drafting him could keep him by matching the offer.

The Oakland Invaders of the USFL, already have made Elway a nifty offer. Who knows? In the unpredictable John Elway sweepstakes, they could hit the wire as the compromise winner.

Your Spine & Health
CHILDREN'S SPORTS
by Dr. Ludwig C. Landwehr, D.C.

WILL PARTICIPATION IN SPORTS HURT A CHILD? In relation to the number of children participating in sports, the number of injuries is probably very small, and yet a parent's fear can be well founded even when there is no accident.

Fast starts and stops, twisting, turning and body contact can cause sprains, strains and spine problems.

Even if a child Dr. Landwehr does not participate in formal sports, there still are falls and mechanical injuries.

Developmental spinal problems may not result in immediate pain, but neglect is likely to result in disturbed function.

Your doctor or chiropractic recommends that you guard your child against spinal problems with a regular spinal examination.

Duck!

Desert Classic has Ford, O'Neill paired together

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Some people are hoping the 1983 Bob Hope Desert Classic — the PGA's only five-day, 90-hole tournament which begins today — will be a repeat of the 1982 tournament.

Ed Flori, for example, is hoping history repeats itself. He won the event last year and earned $67,000.

But Speaker of the House Tip O'Neill will be praying this year's tournament isn't a repeat. In the 1982 tournament O'Neill bounced a wayward shot off a man's face, breaking his eyeglasses, and now faces a Superior Court lawsuit for negligence.

It should be an interesting five days of golf. O'Neill is paired, as he was last year in the amateur division, with a world-class erratic linksman, former President Gerald Ford. Noting that Palm Springs has 51 golf courses, someone once said the former President doesn't know which one he'll play until after his first tee shot.

The tournament's motto should be "Duck!"

While the celebrities take care of the fun and danger, the pros will take care of the real golf. The $375,000 purse has attracted 11 of last year's top 12 money-makers on the tour, including Jack Nicklaus, who makes his 1983 debut.

While obviously keeping an eye on the lucrative winner's share, Nicklaus uses the tournament and Bing Crosby tournament two weeks later as a tuneup for the Masters in August. The major tournaments are still Nicklaus' prime consideration.

The field of 136 professionals and 400 amateurs will be spread out over four courses — La Quinta, Bermuda Dunes, Indian Wells and Tamarisk — until Sunday when just the 70 low pros square off for the run at the cash.

The only player among last year's leaders who won't play the Hope is 1982 U.S. Open champion Tom Watson. He played in last week's Los Angeles Open and said he'd return to his Kansas City home this week because he wanted to "change the diapers on my new son, Michael, for awhile."

Also in the field will be 1982 Player of the Year Craig Stadler, five-time Hope winner Arnold Palmer, Ray Floyd, Jerry Pate and Gil Morgan. Morgan might arrive late because of negotiations at his bank. He won the first two tournaments on the PGA's 1983 calendar — the Tucson Open and the Los Angeles Open — and earned $108,000 for eight days of golf.

Following his victory Sunday in Los Angeles, Morgan said, jokingly, that he might shoot for an undefeated year.

"I think I might be able to do it," he said, laughing. "At least three in a row would be interesting. I'll be at the Bob Hope and let's just see what happens."

Morgan said his winning streak is not a fluke, rather the result of hard work.

"I've been prepping for this moment for the last two and a half years, chipping and putting and working on dozens of techniques," Morgan said. "I think it's all finally coming together for me now. All the changes and all the practice is paying off. I'm starting to reap the rewards of a lot of hard work."

Palmer said he was also looking forward to the Hope tournament after turning in his best performance in a decade at the Los Angeles Open. The 53-year-old master led the tournament through the final 16 holes Sunday before struggling through three consecutive bogeys and finishing five strokes behind Morgan.

SAVERS WARNING

ON JULY 1, 1983
THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT WILL BEGIN WITHHOLDING 10% OF YOUR INTEREST AND DIVIDEND INCOME.

A new law, scheduled to go into effect July 1, 1983, requires financial institutions to withhold 10% of interest and dividend income. The law is intended to clean up an $8.2 billion "tax gap". That's the amount of dividend and interest income the IRS says is unreported and underreported each year.

This provision was tacked onto the general tax bill, the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA), with no warning. In order to kill the withholding provision, the entire tax bill would have had to be killed. The bill was rushed through Congress so quickly that most people still don't understand the impact of this legislation.

The financial institutions of Idaho feel this provision of the law is faulty legislation for a number of reasons:

1. It means a loss of your earning power. Since it will block the full use you have of your funds, you will lose the compounding power of those funds withheld. Over the years, the size of any savings account or certificate will become significantly less than it would if withholding had not taken place.
2. It is not necessary. The Treasury itself admits over 90% of taxpayers now report their interest and dividend income. The cheaters can be caught through more efficient use of the existing computerized Form 1099 system.
3. It will discourage savers. Besides reducing the return on savings, all investors and savers will be saddled with this new layer of paperwork and red tape. This disincentive to savers is contrary to the Administration's goal of trying to encourage people to save.
4. Implementation of the law will be excessively costly in relation to the benefit expected by the Treasury. The IRS expects to collect $4.3 billion the first year. The private sector costs to act as tax collectors are estimated at 30 to 40 percent of this amount. These costs will ultimately have to be passed on to the consumer.
5. It could not come at a worse time. Withholding will be a disincentive to save, at a time when the economy is trying to pull out of a recession. Savings are needed to finance home buyers and industrial revitalization.

Only an extensive campaign by concerned citizens will persuade Congress to repeal the 10% withholding provision of the new law. Time is critical. We urge you to call or write your Congressman immediately to overturn this faulty provision.

THE ACES

BOBBY WOLFF

He who fears being conquered is sure of defeat. -- Napoleon Bonaparte

Table with columns for NORTH, SOUTH, WEST, EAST and various card symbols (AKJ, 109, A-Q, 10-9-8, etc.)

Dealer had no fears in either bidding or play of today's teetering slam. The atrocious trump stack gave him second thoughts...

Table with columns for North, East, South, West and card symbols (2NT, Pass, 3, Pass, etc.)

North's four club bid over three hearts promised heart support and a maximum opening full of control cards (21-22 point range for 2 NT).

Opening lead: Diamond 10

Baer played to dummy's ace and king of spades, cashed the club ace and discarded two of his clubs on dummy's ace and queen of diamonds.

a club, and Baer's 8-6 would be sitting over East's 7-5. If East refused to cover, dummy's 10 would win and a club lead would polish things off in the same way.

Baer played to dummy's ace and king of spades, cashed the club ace and discarded two of his clubs on dummy's ace and queen of diamonds.

With the Aces

East was now left with the 7-7-5-4 in trumps and the trump 10 was led from dummy. Whether East covered or not, he could take no more than one trick.

Table with columns for South holds, 1-19-B and card symbols (10-9-8, J-7-5-4, K-6-4-2, etc.)

ANSWER: Four hearts. May or not make but the great two suited fit and the singleton club justify the risk.

Send budget questions to The Aces P.O. Box 12382, Dallas, Texas 75225, with self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

Winter Entertaining: ELEGANT AND EASY

Long hours over the hot stove and painstaking time at the chopping board was the price yesterday's hostess paid to appease appetites, warm hearts and gladden eyes. Today the beauty and quality of fine food and warming drinks can be achieved quickly and easily. Even the elegance of a pâté can be food processed or blenderized, shaped and garnished in a matter of minutes. Add a make-ahead brown, gold and white cheese log and you have a treat fit for the most discriminating palates.

Let the light of a fireplace or candles play twinkling games on sparkling glassware. Lace both the pâté and the cheese with the universal spirit, California brandy. Use toasted Oregon hazelnuts (filberts) to impart a flavorful crunchiness and serve with steaming mugs of coffee enhanced with brandy and spices or lemon.

Don't worry about labels as you shop for ingredients. Just make sure the brandy is not an import which tends to be heavier in body and more traditionally made for sipping straight than for mixing. Use fragrantly flavored, full-bodied Brazilian fresh-ground coffee if you are near a store that grinds coffee. If not, blended coffee from your supermarket will do — nearly all blends contain the classical Brazilian bean and go deliciously with the light flavor of California brandy.

Oregon hazelnuts impart a unique haute cuisine flavor and texture to the pâté and cheese log. So why not serve them, toasted and salted, to complete the unusual party snack tray?

It is helpful to have the right glassware — whether for a steaming beverage cup, dessert drink or nut bowl — to add sparkle and warmth to a winter evening.

Brandy, coffee and hazelnuts, provide the basis for an exceptional winter buffet that can be made ahead or made in minutes. Drinks are (clockwise from noon) Brandy Blazer, Brandy Velvet, Sierra Toddy, and Capistrano Coffee.

BRANDIED OREGON HAZELNUT PÂTÉ

- 1 pound braunschweiger
- 1 cup ground Oregon hazelnuts (filberts)*
- 2 hard cooked eggs
- 1/4 cup minced parsley
- 1/4 cup California brandy
- 1/4 cup butter or margarine
- 3 green onions, chopped

Place all ingredients in food processor or blender. (This may require two batches, depending on your blender.) Purée until smooth. Pack into tureen or crock and refrigerate until serving time. (Makes 2-1/2 cups of pâté.)

CHEERY CHEESE LOG

- 1 pound sharp cheddar cheese, shredded
- 3 tablespoons soft butter or margarine
- 1/2 teaspoon curry powder
- 1 8-ounce package of cream cheese, softened
- 1/4 cup California brandy
- 3/4 cup ground Oregon hazelnuts*
- 1 tablespoon finely chopped green onions

Combine cheddar cheese, butter and curry powder, beating until smooth. In a separate bowl, blend cream cheese with brandy, 1/4 cup of the Oregon hazelnuts and the green onions. Form the cheddar cheese mixture into an eight-inch by ten-inch rectangle and spread the cream cheese mix over it. Roll up the long way. Then roll the log over the remaining chopped Oregon hazelnuts and refrigerate. Remove the cheese log about 30 minutes before serving time so it can soften.

Hazelnuts should be roasted before serving or using in recipes. If you buy them pre-shelled in a package, they are most likely to have a rich, deep brown color and robust taste indicating they have already been roasted. But if you shell your own or buy a package labeled "raw" hazelnuts or filberts, you can roast them in a 275-degree oven in a shallow pan for 20 to 30 minutes (until their skins crack) or cook them 3 to 4 minutes on full power in a microwave. One pound of unshelled Oregon hazelnuts yields about 1-1/2 cups of nut meats. Roast Oregon hazelnuts for full flavor.

FREE RECIPES

Recipes for main dishes, vegetables, salads and desserts using Oregon hazelnuts are free for the asking. Write: Oregon Filbert Commission, P.O. Box 23126, Tigard, Oregon 97223.

BRANDY BLAZER

- 3 ounces California brandy
- 1 tablespoon honey
- hot coffee to fill
- lemon peel

Combine brandy and honey in a pre-heated, heavy stemmed goblet. Pour in hot coffee and stir until the honey is dissolved. Twist the lemon peel over the blazer and use it for garnish. The brandy blazer should be steaming hot and sipped slowly. It is shown here in a 12-3/4 ounce Libbey Chivalry Viva Grande glass. Serves 1.

BRANDY VELVET

- 1-1/2 ounces California brandy
- 2 ounces strong cold coffee
- 1-1/2 ounces chocolate syrup
- 2 #8 size scoops of coffee ice cream
- shaved chocolate for topping

Combine brandy, coffee and chocolate syrup. Whirl in blender (or beat with an electric or rotary beater) with one scoop of ice cream just until blended. Pour into a glass and top with the second scoop of ice cream sprinkled with chocolate. Drink is shown here in a 12-3/4 ounce Libbey Chivalry Tulip Goblet. Serves 1.

SIERRA TODDY

- 4 ounces hot coffee
- 1 rounded teaspoon brown sugar
- dash of powdered cinnamon
- 2 ounces California brandy
- 1 stick of cinnamon
- 1 thin lemon slice
- cloves for garnish

Combine coffee, sugar, powdered cinnamon and brandy in a heavy glass. Stir and add cinnamon stick and lemon slice stuck with two or three cloves. Shown here in a Libbey 9-1/4 ounce Glass Pot which matches the larger size nut bowl in background. Serves 1.

CAPISTRANO COFFEE

- 1-1/2 ounces California brandy
- 1 teaspoon chocolate syrup
- 1 teaspoon brown sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon vanilla
- dash cinnamon
- 4 ounces hot coffee
- Sweetened Whipped Cream

Stir brandy, chocolate syrup, sugar, vanilla and cinnamon together in a glass mug. Pour in hot coffee. Top with sweetened whipped cream. Shown here in a Libbey 8-1/2 ounce "After Dinner" Coffee Mug. Serves 1.

Indian Lamb Chops and Rice will fit any occasion. The dish provides new taste treat when garnished with cashews

Meal in home is impressive

HOUSTON — An elegant meal at home is often more impressive than entertaining in a fancy restaurant. Taking the extra time to prepare that special dish can be fun — and the praise of guests will be a pleasant reward.

Indian Lamb Chops and Rice is a dish to fit any special occasion. It guarantees praise. Thick juicy lamb chops are topped with a sauce of onions, tomato, green pepper, pineapple chunks and a delicious array of seasonings — all served over rice and garnished with cashews, for a new taste treat!

The key to this dish is in the rice. Tossed with a mixture of brown sugar, ginger, other seasonings, and pineapple juice, the rice takes on a unique flavor, guaranteed to mystify and please your guests.

INDIAN LAMB CHOPS AND RICE

- 6 lamb loin chops, 1-inch thick, (1 1/2 to 2 pounds)
  - 1/2 cup chopped butter or margarine
  - 1/2 cup chopped onions
  - 1 clove garlic, minced
  - 2 teaspoons garam masala (or curry powder)
  - 1 teaspoon salt
  - 2 cups beef broth
  - 1 large tomato, chopped
  - 1 green pepper, chopped
  - 1 can, 8 oz. size, pineapple chunks, drained and halved, reserve juice
  - 1 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch
  - 1 tablespoon packed brown sugar
  - 1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
  - 3 cups hot cooked rice
  - 1/4 cup coarsely chopped cashew nuts
- In a large skillet saute chops in butter over high heat 4 to 5 minutes on each side. Remove; set aside. Pour off fat; return 1 tablespoon to skillet. Add onions, garlic and seasonings; cook until onions are tender-crisp. Return chops to skillet; add broth. Cover and simmer 40 to 45 minutes or until lamb is tender. Skim fat from broth. Add tomatoes, green pepper and pineapple. Dissolve cornstarch in 3 tablespoons water; add to skillet. Cook until green pepper is tender-crisp and sauce is clear and thickened.
- Meanwhile, cook sugar and ginger with 1/2 cup reserved juice. Toss with rice. Serve meal and sauce over rice mixture. Garnish with cashews. (Makes 6 servings.)

VEAL WITH CHERRY SAUCE

- 12 thin veal cutlets, about 1 lb. each
  - 1/2 salt
  - 1/2 ground black pepper
  - 3 tablespoons butter or margarine
  - 1 can, 16 1/2 oz. size, pitted dark sweet cherries
  - 1/4 cup Madeira wine
  - 1 chicken broth
  - 1 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch
  - 3 cups hot cooked rice
- In large skillet saute veal in butter 2 to 3 minutes on each side over high heat. Remove veal; season with salt and pepper, keep warm. Pour off fat. Combine reserved syrup, wine and broth to equal 1 1/4 cups. Add to skillet; simmer 5 to 10 minutes. Blend cornstarch with 3 tablespoons water; add to sauce. Cook, stirring, until clear and thickened. Stir in cherries. Serve sauce over veal and beds of fluffy rice. Garnish with lemon slices and watercress...if desired. (Makes 6 servings.)

Nothing pleases winter sports enthusiasts more than a bowl of freshly made soup

Vegetable soup warms, nourishes

CHICAGO -- Sometimes, what your body craves most is exactly what it needs. For example, the almost universal urge for a steaming bowl of hot soup that strikes winter sports enthusiasts after a day outdoors skiing, skating or sledding is no mere coincidence.

In addition to warming you up without weighing you down, soup helps replenish the liquids and carbohydrates the body uses in strenuous cold-weather activity. What it doesn't add is too many calories because it is chock-full of vegetables and fresh, lean meat. Most winter sports enthusiasts, however, don't want to be stuck in the kitchen making stock and chopping and paring vegetables when the snow falls. The beckoning urge to be outside where the action is can often mean "soup's on" to their hungry group thanks to two quick and easy recipes. Using Homemade Soup Starter, a hearty main-meal dish can be made in less than the time it takes to stoke the fireplace and set the table.

30-MINUTE VEGETABLE CHOWDER

1 package chicken noodle or chicken vegetable Homemade soup starter
4 cups water
1/2 pound bacon
1/2 ounce can cream-style corn
2 cups milk
In a large saucepan or Dutch oven, combine soups starter ingredients and water. Bring to a low, reduce heat, cover and simmer 25 minutes, stirring occasionally. Meanwhile pan-fry bacon. Drain and crumble coarsely. Add bacon, corn and milk to soup. Cook and stir until heated.

Pasta stretches money

Special to The Times-News

There's one food that's right for practically every light-food budget: right now, it's pasta.

Lasagna, spaghetti, shaggettini, linguine, macaroni, noodles broad and thin, ziti and some other 75 varieties. All types fit into four categories -- ribbons, tubes, cords and special shapes such as stars, shells and bows.

Homemade pasta from eggs, flour, water and salt is delicious if prepared properly. There is no need to do it at home now because store-bought varieties are many times much lighter and tastier. Just read the labels on the packages to make sure you're not buying artificial ingredients.

Pasta-cooking myths should be done with once and for all! It needs plenty of water in a good deep kettle. About 6 quarts per pound will do for any type. Bring the water to a rolling boil, add 1 teaspoon salt per quart of water and 2 tablespoons oil to the entire pot. Long pastas should never be broken into the boiling water. Lower the lengths slowly into the boiling water; they will curl into the kettle as they soften. Stir pasta several times while cooking. Read package directions to determine this.

There is no need to rinse off pasta with cold water. It does nothing, but cool it off. For best flavor, pasta should be served very hot with the topping you desire for flavoring.

CHICKEN IN TOMATO SAUCE

1 chicken, 3 1/2 to 4 pounds, cut into serving pieces
5 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 jar, 14 ounce size, thick spaghetti sauce with mushrooms
1 small can sliced mushrooms, drained
1/2 pound cooked pasta
In heavy skillet, sauté chicken pieces with oil; sauté until brown on all sides. Pour tomato sauce and mushrooms over chicken; simmer uncovered until chicken is tender. This should take about 2 1/2 hours. Put chicken, when tender, on serving platter; pour sauce over pasta. Serve right away. If desired, for more flavor add 1/2 cup dry wine to sauce just a few minutes before chicken is tender. Makes 6 servings.

TUNA FISH WITH PEAS

2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 medium-sized onion, peeled and sliced
1 tablespoon chopped fresh parsley
1 tablespoon tomato paste, may use ketchup
2 cups frozen or fresh peas
2 cans, 7 1/2 ounces each, tuna fish, drained salt and pepper to season to taste
1/2 teaspoon oregano
dash cumin
In heavy skillet, heat oil; add onion, parsley and brown. Stir in tomato paste or ketchup and peas with just enough water to cover peas; cook about 10 minutes, or until peas are tender. Add tuna, being careful not to stir hard. Add salt and pepper to season to taste along with oregano and cumin. Cook 5 minutes more and serve hot over hot cooked pasta. (Makes 6 servings.)

FETTUCCINI WITH CHEESE

1/2 pound fettuccini
1 cup sweet butter
1 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
Cook fettuccini in boiling, salted water to which several tablespoons of oil have been added. Cook following package directions. Drain fettuccini and toss with butter and cheese in heated skillet or chafing dish. Serve immediately and sprinkle, to order, with freshly grated peppercorns. (Makes 6 servings.)

THIS WEEK'S BEST MARKET BUYS: Look for paper goods at special prices. Bananas and citrus are very good buys. Pasta in the dry, package form. In packaged dinners or frozen meals makes extremely good, inexpensive and nourishing eating. The holidays are over and there are now plenty of good raisin buys. Put some in your freezer for Easter baking time.

Ground turkey good buy

By JEREMY IGGERS
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

An ad in the paper recently caught my eye — a supermarket chain advertised ground turkey for 68 cents a pound. That's less than half the cost of ground beef.

But, even when it isn't on sale, ground turkey is one of the undiscovered bargains at the meat counter.

Turkey may be the hamburger of tomorrow — the all-purpose budget stretcher we turn to when times are tight. Like now. Turkey has several advantages over beef — it's lower in cholesterol, lower in calories and cheaper to produce. Because turkeys convert feed into meat more efficiently than cows, the price differential will likely get bigger if the cost of energy (needed to grow grain) continues to increase.

The biggest drawback to ground turkey seems to be that nobody knows what to do with it. The packaging directions say you can substitute ground turkey for ground beef, but it's kind of flavorless in hamburgers. In other ground beef dishes, like chili, where a lot of other flavorings are used, it seems to work well.

Ground turkey doesn't have as much flavor as ground beef, but that's something you can turn to your advantage. Ground beef tastes like ground beef no matter what you do with it, but ground turkey can be made to taste like whatever you want it to.

I did a little experimenting recently. Since turkey cutlets are sold as a cheap substitute for veal scallopine, I thought ground turkey might pass as a low-cost substitute for ground veal. It looks a lot like ground veal. I tested this theory by adapting a recipe for veal patties with pepper and sour cream sauce.

I started by mixing a pound of ground turkey with a cup of bread crumbs, some finely chopped onions, dill weed, paprika and a little salt and pepper. I made a sauce by sauteing some onions and green peppers, adding a little wine, and finishing it off with a cup of sour cream. The last step is just to saute the patties for a few minutes on each side.

It turned out OK. But the meat was very lean and very finely ground so it wound up rather dry and without much texture. If I try it again, I think I'll work in a little melted butter or beef tallow. (Some ground turkey is sold with added beef fat.)

My next test was to substitute ground turkey for ground pork in a won ton recipe. This worked extremely well. I mixed the meat with chopped water chestnuts, chopped Chinese mushrooms, soy sauce, sherry, a little chopped ginger, some chopped scallions and a raw egg. To make the won tons, I put a teaspoon of the mixture into a won ton skin, folded them up, blanched the won tons for a minute in boiling water and then transferred them to a pot of boiling soup broth. Voila!

Conclusion? If I was really trying to impress my date, I'd probably spring for real hamburger, ground pork or ground veal. (Actually, I usually avoid ground veal, because of the way veal calves are raised.)

But for everyday use, it's a very satisfactory and economical substitute, especially in dishes that have a lot of other flavor components.

Scientists improving tomatoes

By JON VAN
Chicago Tribune

Even in a winter without blizzards or harshly cold temperatures, there is at least one annoyance you can count on: tomatoes.

They may look appetizing gracing a salad or decorating a hamburger, but winter tomatoes are almost always disappointing.

At least one group of researchers is working to solve the difficulty posed by those tasteless, woody, imitation tomatoes that haunt grocery stores and restaurants this time of year.

Plant breeders at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., hope that by crossing the common domestic tomato grown in the United States with a partially domesticated cousin from Brazil, they can come up with a fresh and tasty fruit good even in winter.

The Brazilian fruit, called an acobaca, has two genetic characteristics to be welcomed by anyone craving a good ripe tomato. Unlike the domestic tomato, it refuses to continue ripening after being picked from the vine, and once it ripens, it remains tasty and edible for up to 40 days, instead of about a week.

Nearly all tomatoes this time of year are picked green and allowed to ripen in shipment. Many immature green pieces of fruit are picked as well, and they never ripen. A major reason for the sorry state of off-season tomatoes is that they spoil within about a week of ripening, don't tolerate the cold and are poor candidates for refrigerated storage.

Broccoli becoming popular

By ROBERT W. STRUBE
Chicago Sun-Times

Broccoli is a success story among vegetables. In 1929, broccoli consumption was 12 million pounds a year. Today, the annual consumption is 151 million pounds. And it is growing even more popular.

Broccoli is one of the oldest members of the cabbage family. The Greeks and Romans ate it more than 2,000 years ago.

Fresh broccoli is a nutritionally superior vegetable. One-third of a pound of fresh broccoli has 260 percent of the U.S. recommended daily allowance of vitamin C. One pound of broccoli has 150 calories.

Broccoli has 1,670 milligrams of crude fiber, twice as much fiber, ounce for ounce, as celery. It is high in fiber and is a good source of B1, B2, B6 and folic acid.

One medium stalk of broccoli has 20 percent of the daily requirement of vitamin A and 4 percent of a person's daily iron requirement.

This delicious vegetable was practically unknown in America until the 1920s, when Italian immigrants brought the broccoli seed to this country.

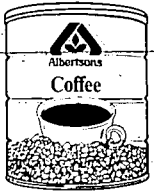

When shopping for fresh broccoli, look for a firm, compact cluster of small flower buds; the bright yellow flower should not be visible. Bud clusters should be dark green or sage green or even green with a decidedly purplish cast. Stem should not be too thick or tough.

To prepare broccoli for cooking, wash it and trim the main stem slightly. Do not remove the stem because the stalk is edible. Make lengthwise gashes in the stems, almost to the florets, if they are more than a half-inch in diameter.

Broccoli Quadrattini

1/2 pound bacon
1 (6 oz.) package pastina
1 bunch fresh broccoli
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
Salt (optional)

Cook bacon until lightly browned. Drain, crumble and set aside. Cook pastina according to package directions. Drain. Trim broccoli and cook covered in 1 inch of boiling water until crisp-tender, 10 to 15 minutes. Drain and chop into 1/2-inch pieces. In large saucepan, melt butter. Add bacon, pastina, broccoli, grated cheese and salt. Mix well and cook over low heat until heated through. Makes 6 servings.

Try nutmeg on carrots

By EDIE LOW
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Q. I am on a no-salt diet. My doctor said to substitute herbs and spices to season food, but he didn't offer any specifics. What spices would make beets and carrots taste better? They are the two vegetables I like least but think I should eat.

A. Try one of the following on either, until you find the seasoning you like best: allspice, bay leaf, caraway seeds, cloves, dill, ginger or thyme. For a pleasant surprise, try a dash of nutmeg on carrots (also tasty on Brussels sprouts).

Q. My teen-age daughter is constantly dieting, yet she will eat pistachio nuts as long as one is left in the dish. I know nuts are good for you, but she overeats it. Can you find out how many calories are in pistachios?

A. According to the California Pistachio Commission, 100 grams — just shy of a half a cup — of shelled pistachios contain 594 calories.

Q. Help. I married a man who thinks he knows how to cook. He insists I thicken my gravy with cornstarch or arrowroot. Instead of the flour I've always used, I have never used either, so need to know how much is substituted for flour?

A. It takes about half as much arrowroot or cornstarch to thicken the same amount of liquid. If you normally use 2 to 3 tablespoons of flour to thicken two cups of gravy, use 1 to 1 1/2 tablespoons of the arrowroot or cornstarch. Start with the smaller amount, since you can always add more.

Q. Just curious. I read or heard somewhere that food writers write only about foods they like. You seem to write about every kind of food. Are there any foods that you absolutely won't eat?

A. Only buttermilk. There are several foods I don't care for, but if they are served to me, I'd eat at least part of the servings.

Will stores be 'high tech' or 'bulk'?

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

For the supermarket industry, 1982 was a year of decision. On the line were hundreds of millions of dollars destined to shape the supermarkets of the future. But what should they look like?

The traditionalists urged caution. The industry had just come through a very unsettling period. In the late '70s, double-digit food price inflation caused many consumers to point an accusing finger in their direction. Then there were the warehouse stores that had given them all a start and diverted their attention. Now there was a recession to worry about.

So the traditionalists built their "new" stores in 1982 much like the stores they had built in the '70s; perhaps a little bigger. The stores were still big "boxes." The aisles were still perpendicular and even longer. And in these new stores the produce sections still greet you as you walk in the door.

"We can't stay the same," said the supermarket innovators. The innovators cherish growth and they looked with horror at the latest 1981 figures which showed no real growth in supermarket sales. If the amount that we shoppers spend at the supermarket isn't increasing, the only way for a supermarket to increase its sales is to take them away from neighboring stores. But how?

To the rescue came the supermarket consultants. They said the problem was that supermarkets all look the same, and pointed to consumer "blink tests" in which shoppers were shown slides of the interiors of various supermarkets in their neighborhoods and couldn't tell one store from another.

"Good store design can make a difference," said the experts, and noted that it would increase sales.

The stores the supermarket innovators built in 1982 look different. Take the Safeway prototype store recently opened in Arlington, Texas. From the outside, its unusual framework of steel roof supports makes it look like a huge space platform waiting to be put in orbit.

As you walk inside this gigantic superstore the first thing you notice is that it is not arranged in a uniform pattern of mile-long perpendicular aisles. Once you walk past the bakery to the deli and the pharmacy, you realize that the store is in the shape of a 'vee'; service islands, a sit-down eating area and frozen food in the middle; food aisles angled to the left and non-food aisles angled to the right.

Photomurals decorate the walls. Shiny chrome cylinders hang from the space frame ceiling, shifting their high intensity light on the merchandise subtly through the aisles. In this ultra-modern super of superstores is a floral shop, a photo and gift shop, a large cosmetics section, a natural foods area, small appliances, cookware of all kinds, lots of clothes and shelves upon shelves of children's toys. The new Safeway prototype carries the idea of "one stop shopping" to new heights.

Impressive? You bet! But just as I was about to cast my vote that the Safeway "hi-tech" look would be the supermarket of the future, I received word that the hottest new supermarket innovation in the Midwest is the new "bulk" section recently installed in the National Supermarkets in St. Louis.

It is "bulk" because it could be described as hundreds of wooden barrels and boxes from which shoppers select exactly the number of cookies, spaghetti and other items that they desire, and have them individually bagged and weighed. It has really caught on with singles and seniors and the low prices for these unpackaged items are catching the interest of many other shoppers.

Is "bulk" the new look of the future? Suddenly my crystal ball is clouded!

Cooking in vacuum-sealed bags termed 'incredible'

By SUZANNE HAMLIN
New York Daily News

Cooking in vacuum-sealed plastic bags, heated in hot water, is that rare bird—a method that has equal appeal to both the nutritionist and the gastronome.

"The results are incredible," says Paula Wolfert, the cookbook author and teacher, who has recently returned from France; a disciple of what she calls "water immersion cooking."

Francis Garcia at the Restaurant Clavel in Bordeaux introduced Wolfert to the water method, a procedure that is also being used by notables such as Pierre Troisgros at Troisgros, the Michelin three-star restaurant in Roan; Patrick LeNotre at Pre Catalan in Paris, and Emile Jung at Au Crocodile in Strasbourg. Their results have intrigued enough people that in the spring these four chefs will give a course on the subject on a cruise ship through the Aegean, led by their mentor, chef Georges Pralus.

Besides the taste—which might be said to be the gastronomic equivalent of stereophonic sound—food cooked this way has some other appealing benefits: Because the moisture of the food provides so much flavor, very little extra fat is needed; cooking time is often twice as fast as by usual methods; more nutrients are preserved, and cooked food can be quickly cooled, refrigerated and stored several days later with no loss in flavor.

Wolfert has taken what she learned in France and applied it, with some ingenuity, to the American kitchen. Although the French chefs are using a professional vacuum sealer—made in Switzerland, it costs approximately $5,000, Wolfert uses a home appliance and the plastic bags that come with it. Called the "Dazey Vacuum Seal-A-Meal," it costs about $40.

The Dazey people, with headquarters in Industrial Airport, Kan., are unaware that they have such a potentially hot haute cuisine machine on their hands. Their "Vacuum Seal-A-Meal," which came on the market two years ago, is promoted and bought mainly as a device to package food at home for freezing and refrigerating. And at retail prices, it is well.

Vacuum-packed food has had all the excess air removed, which means it has a much longer shelf life. The air that promotes spoilage can't get to it and the food is kept "on hold" so to speak. Commercially vacuum-packed coffee is a good example of this, as are the vacuum-packed cold cuts and corned beef sold in supermarkets.

People who vacuum-pack at home have found that blanched vegetables, meat, fruit—anything that can be frozen—freeze much better in vacuum-packed bags than in ordinary wrappings, and with the excess air removed the packages take up much less room in the freezer. An appealing benefit is that the frozen food, still in its bag, can be reheated quickly simply by popping the bag in boiling water.

Parents of babies can vacuum-pack and freeze small amounts of homemade purees. Leftovers, vacuum bagged and refrigerated, can be reheated right in the bag with no leftover taste. Vegetables and meat brought home from the grocery and vacuum-packed will stay fresh much longer in the refrigerator.

The list of storage possibilities goes on, although Wolfert says that the big news is actually cooking in the bags.

"Hot water is, in effect, much hotter than hot air," she explained recently. "You can prove this to yourself by putting your hand in a 500-degree oven. You can leave it there a minute, but you can't put your hand for a minute in boiling water—which is 220 degrees."

Machines available

New York Daily News

Although Kathy Blalek, a Dazey spokesman, said that several other vacuum-sealing machines have been on the market, at present they manufacture the only one made in America.

The Vacuum Seal-A-Meal is a compact electrical appliance, about the size of a tape recorder. It sits on a counter and works simply by pressing down the lid. The machine uses special clear plastic bags which are heavier than ordinary food storage bags, and which can be used both in boiling water and microwave ovens.

Made from a combination of polyester and polyethylene, the bags contain no polyvinyl chloride and meet all Food and Drug Administration standards for safety. Although the machine can be used to seal regular plastic bags like "Baggies," these cannot be used for cooking, nor can they be vacuum packed.

The Dazey Seal-A-Meal Vacuum machine retails for $35 to $40 at a large number of department and houseware stores including J.C. Penney.

Make sure you buy a "Sam III," which is the vacuum-sealing machine; the Dazey Company makes two other models which seal bags but do not vacuum seal them. The heavy plastic bags needed for vacuum-sealing are sold at the same stores that sell the machine, or they may be ordered from the Dazey Company.

To use the machine, simply insert a bag and press the lid down. Pressure with the left hand removes the air; pressure from both left- and right hands seals the bag.

Dear Abby

Advice given on car trouble

By ARIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: You could help a lot of females if you'd answer this question: What does a girl (or woman) do if her car breaks down on the highway and she's alone at night?

My mom says I should sit in the car with the windows rolled up, and the doors locked, and wait for a police car to stop.

But a friend of mine said I should get out of the car and hide while waiting for the police to come by because if a potential attacker should find you, locked doors and windows would not prevent him from carrying out his intentions. Another friend told me I should try to flag down someone for help, but how long can you wait in the open in the winter?

I'm an attractive 19-year-old woman who lives in a small Midwestern town. Many friends live in adjacent towns. I am on the highway alone quite a lot at night, and my mom is worried. What's the safest thing to do should I have car trouble alone at night on a highway?

—SITTING DUCK
DEAR DUCK: Turn your emergency blinkers on and/or lift your hood to indicate you have car trouble. Then sit in your car with the windows rolled up and the doors locked.

If an older couple stops and offers to help, the chances are it would be safe to go with them. If a lone man stops, and he looks questionable, roll your window down just enough to talk to him, but not wide enough for him to get his hand through the window. Ask him to send the police or a tow truck to help you. I wouldn't recommend flagging anyone down or "hiding."

An ounce of prevention: Minimize your chances for "car trouble" by making sure that you have plenty of gas and that your car is in good condition. Always keep a signal flare and a flashlight in your car. And, of course, if you have a CB radio, you'll never be

DEAR ABBY: I have started dating an older man, (I am 22). He has been married twice and says he wants to marry again, but good sex is important to him and he doesn't want to make the same mistake he made before, so this is his proposition. He wants me to go away for a weekend with him so he can see how I measure up. He wants to "grade" me on my sensitivity, endurance, responsiveness, willingness to explore, etc. He is by far the most attractive man I have ever met, and I would very much like to be his wife, but this "trial weekend" he suggests turns me off.

He would not had sex with him, and although I am not a virgin — a fact he knows because I was completely honest with him — I do not want to be graded like a side of beef.

How can I let him know how I feel without losing him entirely? —PRIME
DEAR PRIME: It's my guess that if you don't take his "test" you will lose him — which is probably the best thing that could happen to you.

DEAR ABBY: I have enjoyed your column for years, but there's something that mildly irritates me. What's the virtue of "I'll call him Joe" — or whatever name they submit? I find this and "not his real name" equally distracting.

First of all, who knows if that's his real name, and second, who cares? Please explain. —MERT (MY REAL NAME) IN FLORIDA

DEAR MERT: Sometimes the writer does this to mask the identity of the people in his letter. Otherwise it could be very embarrassing — or worse yet, libelous.

Sometimes I change the names for the same reasons, and I use "not his real name" to ensure that readers will not mistakenly think a person mentioned in one of my letters is someone they know.
