Archeologist Kelly Murphy and M.J. Crutchfield examine artifacts which were found in an area now being used as a corral

Curious crop

Garden at Hagerman yields artifacts from ancient campsites

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — When M.J. Crutchfield and his wife, Larry, planted a garden on their property in Hagerman, they started finding fossils and Indian artifacts regularly. And after any rain, they always could find an arrowhead or something that had become petrified.

"We just kept turning up things," says Mrs. Crutchfield. "The curiosity of the whole thing led me to contact Kelly."

Kelly is Kelly Murphy, a teacher at Castleford High School, who also is an archeologist. He will receive his master's degree in that field this summer.

Murphy dug a 6-foot-square test hole at the Crutchfield site, which is along Lower Billingsley Creek, and found "quite a bit more" than he expected.

The site turned out to be a natural campground that had been used for more than 6,000 years, he says.

Murphy, describing the site as "very rich," excavated it "over the course of two summers." The final "dig" was about 20-by-35 feet and revealed six assemblages, or "slices of time" of human use, dating from 600 to 7,000 years ago, he says.

A 200-page analysis of the Crutchfield site has taken Murphy three years to complete. In it, he describes the many tools that he found and their functions, such as primitive drills and various grinding stones. In all, he has documented more than 20,000 various artifacts found at the site.

The story of the site has fallen together as Murphy identifies and dates the fossils, tools and stones.

From 5,000 to 1,500 B.C., the site was a fall and winter deer-hunting camp. An ancient style of arrow, or spear head, tells its age like the style of an automobile, he says, Murphy says.

One of the assemblages, dated at 2680 B.C., shows a house floor, complete with a charred fireplace area and a chip-filled tool-making area. "This is one of the oldest house floors known in the Northwest," says Murphy. "We found several different house floors of several different ages."

From 1,500 B.C. to 1,400 A.D., the Crutchfield site shifted into a spring- and summer-use area. Murphy determined that, from the young age of the animals taken and from evidence found of fetal material from deer, bison and sheep.

Rodent bones, fish bones and fishing tools, along with a wide variety of milling stones, signaled more diversity at the site in later years, the archeologist says.

Murphy says the site is significant, in showing the arrival of the Shoshone Indians about 700 years ago. Styles of pottery and stones from the south side of the Snake River indicate that, he says.

"The work so far will benefit both scientists and archeologists," Murphy says. "The analysis is written in laymen's terms to make it easier for everyone to understand."

The final manuscript will go to press in early spring. It will be sent to libraries and schools for public record. And a display of the artifacts uncovered is being planned by the Hagerman Valley Historical Society.

"This is the first time, to my knowledge, a group of amateurs has undertaken and completed an excavation in this area and put out a report," Murphy says. "It's also the first hard-and-fast accomplishment of the Hagerman Valley Historical Society."

The actual excavation turned out to be "a horrendous experience" because "it was a lot of work," says Mrs. Crutchfield, describing the days of digging, sifting soil and pushing wheelbarrows.

"It really got to be quite a joke," she says. "Everybody would see us out there working, and

Truck strike resolution may be near

By DAN CHISZAR
United Press International

The president of the Independent Truckers Association said Sunday some resolution to the seven-day trucking strike may be announced this week.

But he added, "It won't mean, however, that the shutdown is over." ITA President Michael Parkhurst told about 300 independent truckers in Des Moines that he has been meeting with federal transportation and Reagan administration officials in Washington "on meaningful solutions" to the shutdown, which has idled thousands of truckers nationwide.

"We will get a handle on exactly what we can accomplish by Wednesday or Thursday of this week," Parkhurst told the truckers. "But if you want me to accomplish it for you, you should stay shut down."

"If not, it will have all been for naught — 2 billion pounds of freight shut down a day for six days, $20 million a day in lost wages. Isn't that disgusting? But that's what it's cost."

"Something will be announced Wednesday or Thursday," he said, refusing to elaborate.

The striking truckers are demanding a rollback on a 5 cents a gallon fuel tax hike and other road use taxes passed by Congress in December.

The strike ended its first week with a crack in solidarity — a group of Oregon truckers voted to go back on the road.

In Medford, Ore., about 150 independent truckers voted to return to work.

Lyle Stanley, vice president of the Western Truckers Association, said the truckers unanimously approved the action Friday night. He said between 300 and 400 trucks were represented by drivers, brokers and shippers at the meeting.

Stanley said the decision was not mandatory and if drivers were afraid they should stay home.

He said the decision to return to work was made because most truckers cannot afford to fall behind in payments on their vehicles and they felt the strike was "ill-timed."

"Most of the taxes, except the 5-cents per gallon fuel tax, don't go into effect for another year," Stanley said. "Those who called the strike were in left field. They didn't use their brains" because most trucking companies will raise their rates to cover those costs.

"Cockeyed taxes" were no reason to strike, Stanley said. "You have to change the law through legislation, not by strikes and violence."

A sniper wounded the point man in a convoy on the Ohio Turnpike in another of hundreds of violent incidents in the strike.

An Ohio Highway Patrol spokeswoman said Scott R. Pegg, 27, of Menomonee Falls, Wis., was shot about 11 p.m. Saturday. He was in serious condition at St. Charles Hospital in Toledo after surgery for a bullet wound in his lower right leg.

Pegg was the lead driver of a convoy of 12-15 trucks traveling on the turnpike about four miles east of Toledo, the patrol said. Four trucks were hit by gunfire, which troopers believe came from a rifle fired by a sniper on an embankment alongside the highway. No other injuries were reported.

The state police said the shooting was related to the strike by the independent truckers.

By 8 p.m. EST Sunday, a United Press International survey indicated at least 521 shootings across the nation since the strike began Monday.

Ninety-one people were injured in strike-related violence and a North Carolina trucker died from wounds suffered in a shooting. Police have arrested 94 people.

All but Washington, D.C. and six states — Kansas, New Mexico, South Dakota, Vermont, Hawaii and Alaska — reported ambushes on the highways.

Defense spending could reduce jobs

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Enactment of President Reagan's $23.6 billion defense budget for 1984 would cause a net loss of 2.2 million jobs in the civilian economy, a new study said Sunday.

The study by Employment Research Associates of Lansing, Mich., an economic consulting firm specializing in the impact of military spending, sought to apply Reagan's budget request to previous research on the issue.

With unemployment at 10.4 percent and Reagan proposing a $30 billion defense increase for 1984, the impact of the defense budget on the economy is expected to play a critical role in the budget debate on Capitol Hill.

According to the study, every $1 billion "deferred from purchases by the taxpayer to the treasury by the Pentagon caused a net loss of 18,000 jobs in industry and commerce."

"This is a net loss of jobs," said Marion Anderson, director of the consulting firm. "All the jobs which will be generated in industry and commerce through the purchase of goods and services by the Pentagon were calculated."

"This figure was then compared with the number of jobs which would have been created if taxpayers were able to spend the money on their normal needs: food, housing, clothing, cars, medical care and other goods and services."

The study does not analyze other federal domestic spending or take into account possible jobs created by implementation of Reagan's proposed third round of tax cuts to go into effect July 1.

"The study, like its earlier predecessor, 'The Price of the Pentagon,' used government figures, including Department of Defense figures and the Bureau of Labor Statistics' 156 sector Input-Output model of the economy, in determining jobs generated and jobs lost."

In the earlier study, the firm found the 1981 military budget of $154 billion

Volcano experts predict explosive eruption

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — There's a good chance volatile Mount St. Helens will erupt violently within the next week, resulting in explosions, clouds of ash and steam and mudflows, U.S. Geological Survey officials said Sunday.

Steven Brantley, spokesman for the Geological Survey, said recent readings of rates of seismic energy release, gas emission, deformation of the lava dome and crater floor and the glow of the dome have increased during the past week.

If the trend continues, he said, an eruption will begin within the next two weeks, most likely within the next week.

"Explosive activity may cause rapid snow melt and mudflows that could flow into Spirit Lake or down the North Tootle River," Brantley said.

"But at the present time, we do not anticipate an eruption that would jeopardize blockage in Spirit Lake." The lake was filled with volcanic debris during the volcano's catastrophic eruption May 18, 1980. Because officials fear a breach in the natural dam could cause massive flooding, crews have been working around the clock to pump water from the lake in an effort to keep the water level from threatening levels.

"Relatively small" explosions and rock falls from the dome may continue in the meantime, he added. The lake was filled with volcanic debris during the volcano's catastrophic eruption May 18, 1980. Because officials fear a breach in the natural dam could cause massive flooding, crews have been working around the clock to pump water from the lake in an effort to keep the water level from threatening levels.

Idaho House may get chance to debate, vote on budget

By MARK SHENEFELT
United Press International

BOISE — After nearly a month of preliminary work on the fiscal year 1983 fiscal crisis, the Idaho House this week finally may get a chance to hold a floor debate and vote on the Republican-drafted plan to eliminate the projected $69.2 million shortfall.

The original bill was scuttled by the House Printing Committee last Thursday because of typographical errors and other minor flaws, but the House State Affairs Committee voted to introduce a revised version one day later.

House Speaker T.W. Stevens, R-Twin Falls, chief proponent of the omnibus bill, said it would return to the State Affairs Committee this week for another review. He said he expected a floor vote would take place about mid-week.

The bill contains a 1-cent sales tax increase to generate $12 million before the end of the fiscal year, June 30, plus revenue in fiscal 1984 to cover the issuance of about $31 million in state tax-anticipation notes.

The package also contains about $8.1 million in accelerated income- and sales-tax payments by large corporations and more than $17 million in additional agency budget cuts and transfers of state dedicated funds.

In addition, House members this week may vote on a bill sponsored by Rep. Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls, to raise Idaho's minimum legal drinking age from 19 to 21.

Attempts to water down the bill with amendments were defeated on the House floor, but two minor technical changes accepted by the sponsor were attached — setting up a final vote by the full lower chamber this week.

The Senate and House Judiciary committees were to hold a joint hearing this afternoon in the Statehouse's Gold Room on legislation to toughen Idaho's laws against drunken driving.

At least four bills cracking down on intoxicated motorists have been introduced this session. All contain provisions for mandatory jail sentences and fines, revocation of driving privileges and wording under which a driver caught with more than a certain percentage of alcohol in his blood would automatically be considered guilty.

Also this week, Idaho Public Utilities Commissioner Conley Ward Jr. is to appear for a confirmation hearing before the Senate State Affairs Committee Monday afternoon. Most observers said Ward, the subject of some controversy among conservatives in the Legislature, will be easily confirmed to another six-year term. He was nominated for the job by Democratic Gov. John Evans.

The Idaho Environment Division was to propose to the House Health and Welfare Committee a bill establishing a state hazardous waste-management program, and the Senate Health, Education and Welfare Committee was to discuss faculty tenure policies of Idaho's colleges and universities.

Burger seeks appeals court

By ELIZABETH OLSON
United Press International

NEW ORLEANS — Chief Justice Warren Burger called Sunday for a major change in the federal judicial system.

He asked Congress to create a new appeals court to tackle some of the Supreme Court's legal overload. Burger, arguing the quality of American justice is at stake and denying he was "crying wolf," recommended setting up a temporary panel of judges to settle conflicting rulings among the 11 circuit courts of appeals, and perhaps some disputes over federal statutes.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, like Burger addressing the American Bar Association's annual mid-winter meeting, made a similar proposal. She said the new court should settle disputes over statutes as well as taxation matters.

"There is no one single, permanent solution," Mrs. O'Connor said. "Each time the court's caseload increases, congressional action is necessary to make some significant change in the court's jurisdiction or its procedures to reduce the numbers. It's been 58 years since the last major changes." The proposal was the first time Burger has endorsed such a major change to limit the court's case burden — a topic that seven of the nine justices have spoken about publicly since last summer. None agree on a solution.

WARREN BURGER
Trying to ease load

"Any fundamental changes in structure and jurisdiction will provide a solution that will maintain the historic posture of the Supreme Court, will ensure 'proper time for reflection,' preserve the traditional quality of decisions, and avoid a breakdown of the system" — or of some of the justices," Burger said in remarks prepared for delivery to 3,000 ABA members.

"It will no longer do to say glibly, as some have, that we do not need 'another tier of courts,' or another court or a change in the structure of the appellate procedure at the highest level simply because we have functioned since 1891 with the present structure of three tiers of courts."

"That is meaningless in terms of the needs of the present, and particularly of the next 10 to 20 years and for the 21st century."

Burger complained to an ABA panel Saturday a "60-hour week isn't a very good diet for a human being, especially when you get beyond 40." Five justices are over 70, and all but Burger earn $96,700, Burger, who has headed the nation's judiciary for 14 years, makes $100,700 a year.

Burger believes the "tidal wave" of cases coming to the court — more than 4,000 last term — will continue to increase to as many as 9,000 a year. Under Burger's proposal, the new court would be created for five years and attached to an existing federal court. Other specialized federal courts, including bankruptcy courts, have been created by Congress.

Its members would be rotating panels drawn from 26 judges, perhaps selected by Burger, who now is authorized by Congress to pick judges to serve on other specialized courts.

The chief justice said such an intermediate court could pare the high court's caseload by at least 30 cases a year — about 20 percent of the number the justices formally consider annually. The Supreme Court agrees to hear almost all disputes in which different appeals courts have rendered contradictory rulings.

Critics note that, under the proposal, decisions by the new court would not be binding. The justices still would have to refuse appeals from the court for the caseload reduction to become a reality.

New push begins for math classes

By THOMAS FERRARO
United Press International

WASHINGTON — With a vigor that recalls the Sputnik scare of 1957, President Reagan has thrown his support behind a major effort to put a new emphasis on science and math education in the United States.

The ominous beeping of the Soviet Union's first satellite a quarter-century ago rattled the American establishment and spurred an intense effort to make sure Johnny knew as much arithmetic as Ivan.

When the United States put the first man on the moon in 1969, resurting itself as first in the space race, interest in math and science began to fizzle back on Earth.

Today, there is a growing gap in science and math education in U.S. schools — a nationwide shortage of teachers in the subjects that are the building blocks of high technology. Concern has spread from the White House to Wall Street.

Reagan, who said in his State of the Union address that the technological frontier is the next horizon for American enterprise, last week proposed a $75 million-a-year crash effort to meet the teacher shortage.

"Science, mathematics and technology have a very special importance in this country," Education Secretary Terrel Bell told members of Congress in unveiling the plan. "They comprise one of the cornerstones on which our success as a nation is built."

The only argument Bell received from the House education subcommittee was that the proposal sounded a bit meager. The panel is considering a $300 million program — The Emergency Mathematics and Science Education Act — aimed at both providing more teachers and improving curriculum.

The National Education Association believes both programs are inadequate. It favors a comprehensive $2 billion effort. It is one of dozens of math-science bills, with various price tags, circulating on Capitol Hill.

Bell described the administration approach as a sensible and effective, given the nation's financial condition.

An NEA spokesman, however, said the administration's program "wouldn't even touch the tip of the iceberg of need."

The key element of Reagan's plan would provide $50 million for the states in each of the next four years for use in scholarship programs. Bell said the program would produce about 7,000 teachers a year.

The nationwide shortage of science and math teachers is estimated at 50,000 and growing.

Private industry, increasingly concerned with computers and other facets of the fast-changing world of science, is particularly interested in the outcome of the legislative process.

Along with Congress and the education community, businessmen find some current classroom figures troubling. For instance:

• A recent study found 43 states with a shortage of math teachers, 42 with a shortage of physics teachers and 38 with a shortage of chemistry teachers.

• A 1980 survey found only one state required three years of math for high school graduation and only nine states required two years of the subject.

Cranston offers arms curb

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., saying he has no illusions about Soviet intentions, proposed Sunday that Washington and Moscow stop producing and deploying nuclear weapons as a first step to curb the arms race.

Cranston, the first announced candidate for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination, said — if he is elected, arms control would be one of the main priorities of his administration.

The first thing I would do is to seek a freeze on the development and production of nuclear weapons systems," Cranston said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Budget Director David Stockman checks figure on calculator

Stockman defends budget proposals

By SEAN McCORMALLY
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Budget director David Stockman said Sunday President Reagan's spending plans for 1984 and future years will assure survival of the fledgling economic recovery by controlling federal deficits.

Stockman defended Reagan's plans to continue a massive military buildup, and spoke out against renegeing the third-year tax cut due this summer, stressing they can not "be held responsible" for the $189 billion deficit projected in the fiscal 1984 budget.

"Echoing the optimism expressed by Reagan and his key advisers in the last week, Stockman said there is a lot of underlying evidence in the economy has turned around. But he warned, 'We are threatened by huge out-year deficits that will abort the recovery.'"

Appearing on CBS' "Face the Nation," the director of the Office of Management and Budget denied the red ink swirling through Washington is a result of the failure of Reagan's "supply-side" economic policies.

"The immediate problem, Stockman said, was created by 'major unanticipated developments' — a recession longer and deeper than predicted; sharply lower inflation, which cut government revenues; high interest rates that jacked up the cost of bankrolling the nation debt, and failure of Congress to cut domestic spending as much as Reagan wanted."

"The $198.5 billion 1984 spending plan sent to Congress last week forecasts high deficits into the near future, what Stockman and other fiscal aficionados call the 'out years.' Based on the administration's projections, the deficit in 1987 will still be $117 billion."

Acid cloud discovered above Earth

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An new wide layer of tiny sulfuric acid drops, apparently from the eruption of a Mexican volcano last April, has been detected at record heights in the atmosphere, the National Science Foundation reported Sunday.

Scientists at the University of Wyoming said the acid cloud, the size of a continent and 20 miles high, probably will become "a semi-permanent feature of the 100,000-foot region" for many years.

But they told the foundation, which supported their research, that the acid particles are too small at present to affect the climate by reflecting the sunlight.

"The droplets are so small it will take gravitly many years to bring them to earth," said astronomers David Hofmann and James Rosen.

They said the droplets, approximately 500 of them per cubic centimeter, compared to a normal concentration of just one or two droplets in the same volume, presumably came from sulfur dioxide that billowed into the atmosphere from the explosive eruption of El Chichon.

Ex-union leader rests in hospital

KINGSTON, Pa. (UPI) — W.A. "Tony" Boyle, the former United Mine Workers president imprisoned for the 1969 slayings of a union rival, has been hospitalized, officials said Sunday.

Prison and hospital officials refused to specify the nature of Boyle's ailment or release his condition. The 80-year-old former union boss has a lengthy history of heart ailments.

A spokeswoman at Nesbitt Memorial Hospital would say only that Boyle's condition had not changed since he was admitted.

Final words about series on Mormons

Is author Farrell a Humanist?

Mr. Farrell is a clever and subtle writer. I agree with Gayle Gilbert. In my opinion he is a Humanist. He used the Mormon Church articles as a smoke screen. He appeared to be ridiculing the Mormon beliefs and practices, but I see it as attacking the one true God, His Son, Jesus Christ and the inspired word of the Bible. This was especially evident in the article on sex and family life Jan. 28.

I believe Mr. Farrell's real purpose for writing was to promote his religion, Humanism. Is not Humanism as much a religion as Catholicism, Protestantism, Mormonism and others? The Humanist Manifesto was drawn up in 1933. They believe man is alone in this universe; there is no God, no deity will save us; we must save ourselves.

From the condition of the world today man doesn't seem to be doing a very good job of saving himself from moral and financial ruin; if we are to believe the daily headlines in the papers and news on TV and radio.

One of the main differences between all religions and the Humanist, is that the other religions cannot be taught as facts in our public schools, while Humanism can. I am not of the Mormon faith, but I commend them for their strong moral teachings.

acquaintances what they thought of the series and the replies were uniformly negative — whether they had read the articles or not. Most of your letters from Mormons seem critical of one thing or another.

I was somewhat surprised by the letters from non-Mormons demanding equal time, but many of the others were what I would expect. There are those who used this opportunity to promote their own beliefs and many see the Mormon church as quite a threat. Most of the letters seem to me emotionally motivated and few comment on the subjects discussed in the articles.

I see John Farrell as a clever writer who structures his articles in such a way as to attract readers; hence, the highlighting of controversial subjects. I do not perceive his work to be either for or against the church but he is a non-believer, and perhaps this is what most Mormons find objectionable. We prefer to tell our own story, not have an outsider tell it for us.

Series made paper no friends

If the aim of the recent series on Mormons by John Farrell was to increase the number of letters written to the editor, then it was a success. If, however, it was to make friends, it was a complete failure. I wonder how many subscriptions will be canceled because of this series.

It has been interesting to follow the controversy by reading the many letters sent in to the "Times-News." The non-Mormons are up in arms because of the series and the Mormons are angry because of the content of it. Whenever religion is discussed, there will be problems. In this case, it is due to a difference of theology/doctrine between the two groups.

While Mormons are quick to point out that their theology is much like that of other Christian groups, they are as quick to cover up certain differences. Certain topics that have always generated controversy are plural marriages, blood atonement and baptism for the dead. Mormons will staunchly defend these and other doctrinal points without being fully aware of what they mean. Whenever they are urged to study the writings of their leaders closely, they begin using such terms as "apostate" and "spirit of the anti-Christ" to describe those who would question the works of their prophet.

It's interesting that the Mormon leaders are so set against their people looking closely at their prophecies. They know that a close examination will show the many questionable practices, deceptions and changes present from the very beginnings of Mormonism. It makes you wonder, doesn't it?

Gospel remains 'hard to take'

Concerning the recent article about the Mormons, we would like to add these from an editorial in the May 30, 1981, Church News.

Que: "In front of a beautiful church building there stands a sign of welcome to the public announcing that the subject of the next Sunday's sermons is 'The good news is hard to take.' Without hearing the pastor's discussion — we cannot know how he treated this subject. But if he referred to the trials and persecutions heaped upon Peter and Paul and their congregations, he was most certainly right.

"The gospel of Christ in those days indeed was 'hard to take.' Who could believe that a poor carpenter in the lowly village of Nazareth was the Son of God, and not of Joseph, who raised him?"

"The restoration of the gospel in modern times is impossible for many 'to take.' It seems fantastic, unbelievable and unnecessary.

"Who in this enlightened age is willing to believe that God Almighty and His Son Jesus Christ appeared to an obscure farm boy in a frontier New York State more than a century ago, and raised him up to be a prophet for today?"

"Who is prepared to believe that John the Baptist, Peter, James and John, Moses and Elijah would appear and give him divine authority. Hard to accept, yes, quite as hard as it was for people in the days of Peter and Paul to believe that Christ had risen from the dead. The gospel is 'hard to take' for those who are steeped in the traditions of denominational religion. It was so, anciently. It is so today.

"But Christ did arise from the dead, despite the doubts of the world! Joseph Smith was raised up as a modern prophet, the gospel was restored in our day regardless of doubt and opposition! The gospel was true anciently — and it is true today — hard to believe or not." It is true.

To us who add our humble amen, and our witness and testimony that it is true, along with our gratitude for the blessings and healing power of the priesthood that is a part of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Believes Bible to be correct

Elsa Ullman is mistaken in Wednesday's Letter to the Editor.

She states that Mormons believe in one true God when in reality they believe in many. The fact is that many Mormon men believe that they will become Gods complete with their own worlds and people. Doctrine and Covenants section 132 and Journal of Discourses 11:269. A favorite saying of Mormons is "as man is, God once was; as God is, man may become."

The L.D.S. Articles of Faith No. 8 states that Mormons believe the Bible to be the word of God as far as it testifies concerning His Son, Jesus Christ. 1 Corinthians 8: "There is no other God but one." To be an incorrect translation: "As for myself, I believe the Bible to be the infallible word of God 100 percent correct; if the Bible is 100 percent correct, then it stands to reason that the Book of Mormon is incorrect, the god of the Book of Mormon is false, and Joseph Smith is a false prophet.

Voices sorrow for misguidance

I am a Mormon and am very proud of my heritage. My great-grandfather came across the plains with Brigham Young and was well-treated. I can't blame any of you or Mr. Farrell. I can only feel sorry for your misguidance.

You know the adversary has his way of using true statements or facts and then twisting them out of all proportion. I, too, like Dan Haymore, grew up in Salt Lake City until my later teen-age years, when we moved to Twin Falls. I saw no bias and had friends, both Mormon and non-Mormon. I went to the same Libby Edwards grade school. When we moved to Twin Falls, our next-door neighbor's first comment was that we'd never make it here in business or school, because we were Mormons and should pack our bags, turn around, and move back to Utah where we belonged. It was very hard to break through that barrier here. That barrier I never saw in Salt Lake City, not even when I returned to teach at West High School. The Blacks and protestants were well thought of in the school and held very high positions in schools. We never did pray in class.

Right now, our best friend's daughter is student body president and her dad is a Catholic. I think we all need to remember the Savior's great commandment, "To love the Lord with all our heart, mind and strength, and then love our neighbors as ourselves." This means, brothers, sisters, mothers, fathers, neighbors, all races, enemies, and just everyone. We all need more love in our hearts and need to read the Book of Mormon again — the sermon on the Mount." Including the Rev. Moore. I feel so sorry for his misguidance. You know the Savior feels sorry, too.

"I know the Savior told us, — 'Blessed are the 'peacemakers' for they shall be called the children of God. — Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake for they is the kingdom of heaven, and 3. Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. . . . Father forgive them for they know not what they do. I hope we will all go read this again and become more charitable in our hearts.

What I would really like to see in your paper are more positive articles that are uplifting, instead of degrading. I wish you would put a reporter out into our community to find out the good works that are being done to each other in action and deed.

This and only this is what will save our beautiful America. Ourselves, through our negative comments and news, we will only destroy and tear it down: Our forefathers fought to give us religious pursuit and these special freedoms we enjoy. Let's not abuse them, let's learn to be together under Christ and love and accept all.

Incorporate sources cause trouble

I have enjoyed reading the current series running in your paper. I have lived among Mormons all my life, and do feel most of them are honest, as well as intelligent. In spite of this, it is common for them to refuse to discuss religion unless they do all the talking and teaching. This may be well and good if those teaching had studied their material and its background carefully. It is so easy for any of us to hastily believe an untruth if our sources are incorrect.

I believe most Mormons know very little of their actual church history and doctrinal beliefs. For instance, Brigham Young said that Adam was God, and the only God we have to do with, March 2, 1862. Bruce McConkie, a well-known Mormon writer, made a similar statement: We worship the father and him only, we do not worship the son. A contradiction of 2 Nephi 25:29. Joseph Smith also said that Jesus and God were brothers. Another statement from Joseph Smith is that as man is, so once was God; and as God is, man may become. According to the Bible, this is absolute blasphemy, which must be repented of before those guilty of such blasphemy may enter Heaven.

Ezra Benson said that the current prophet is more to be trusted than past prophets. This would include the Book of Mormon, the Pearl of Great Price, etc., as well as the words of the prophets. He changes now, he is the same yesterday, today and forever. Hebrews 13:8.

If Joseph Smith was inspired by God, then the revelations given by prophets since his time could not be inspired: The Bible says that if a prophet teaches false doctrine, then he could not be a prophet of God. Isaiah 8:20. Now comes Bruce McConkie who states that Brigham Young did teach false doctrine.

Joseph Smith, according to his own writings, asked the Lord which church he was to join. The Lord was supposed to answer none of them for they are all of the devil. Yet, in his own diary, 1828, he requested to join the Methodist Church. The Bible says that all men are created equal. The Mormons teach class distinction. The Mormon people seem to have a persecution complex, they are taught that Joseph Smith was murdered. The facts are he died with a gun in his hand. Lucifer asked to exalt himself as God, while still in Heaven. He now roams the earth "as a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour." Peter 5:8. He has as many deceptions as personalities. Ever since Eve, he has inspired man to be self-important and independent. Thus trying to exalt themselves above God as he himself had done.

In the way we will never reach our destination by following a false guide or a spurious man. Even more importantly, when our Heavenly destination is at stake our guide must be proven dependable. I am sure the Bible is the only true roadmap to Heaven. As truly as Jesus Christ died to save us from sins, he has given us the Bible to guide our steps aright.

I sincerely love the Mormon people, and will be glad to give the sources of every statement I have made in this letter and very many more such, but statements to anyone interested. Write me at P.O. Box 418, Eden.

Deaver should shed idea fast as weight

Michael Deaver, Ronald Reagan's deputy chief of staff, wants to write a diet book, telling how he lost 30 pounds while serving the president. The White House has okayed Mr. Deaver's project on grounds that Mr. Deaver would be writing about the "Deaver Diet," not the "White House Diet."

Mr. Deaver has agreed to limit advances on his book in accordance with what the law regarding royalties paid to public officials allows — 15 percent of his income, which is $9,000. When Dr. Deaver leaves the White House, the agreement allows him to collect the rest of the money his book meanwhile has earned.

Mr. Deaver now may look better, thanks to his diet. But he also looks awful, in terms of ethics; if not also the law, thanks to his desire to write about it.

Government employees such as Mr. Deaver should not be making money off their high positions, and the deputy chief of staff would be doing precisely that.

This is a book idea Mr. Deaver should shed much faster than he has his 30 pounds.

Cross fingers, hope

Cross your fingers — and hope, hope, hope. After the deepest and most prolonged recession since the Great Depression a half-century ago, economic recovery may be on its way.

The big unknown is how strong and how long the recovery will be. The answer depends mainly on how successful the Reagan administration and Congress are in this session in reducing runaway federal budget deficits, fast approaching annual rates of $200 billion.

The recovery — however strong it proves to be — promises relief for some of the nation's 11 million-plus unemployed. General Motors Corp. has announced plans to recall 21,000 laid-off workers during the next three months. And Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. announced smaller worker recalls.

Such worker recalls should stimulate employment elsewhere in the economy. Companies supplying parts to the automakers will be employing workers if auto sales pick up substantially in coming weeks and months.

In any case, at long last, more and more economists — in government and private business — are predicting that recovery of some duration is coming. Its strength depends on numerous factors, but foremost is the importance of government actions to reduce budget deficits. Without significant success in this arena, interest rates not only will go no lower, as needed, but will rise again and choke off substantial and long-lasting recovery.

Unexpected benefit

Since its imposition as an energy-saver back in the days when the Arabs turned off the oil spigot, the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit has been a point of contention. Accepted in its early months as something that had to be, the national limitation became an irritant as gasoline became available again.

An unexpected dividend of the 55-mile-per-hour ban was an appreciable savings of lives. Highway accidents continued to happen, but happening at well under the 65-mile per hour and even 70 MPH speeds allowable before the ban, fewer people were killed. The life-saving factor became one of the stronger reasons for maintaining the limit.

It could be that exceptions could be made to the 55-mile ban. It must be understood, however, that easing the rule could invite an increase in highway deaths and it is against that grim prospect that any move to a change should be weighed.

It's bad news, Rev. Moore

A response to Rev. Moore's second letter about Mormons. Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary describes religion as "1. (1) The service and worship of God or the supernatural," and defines a baptist as "1. One that baptizes."

Some bad news Reverend, Mormons worship God. Mormons also baptize.

Having been raised in a Baptist-dominated community in another state, I grew up with Baptists and know them best of all. I feel disappointed to learn that your personal weaknesses reflect so badly on such a fine people.

Let me refer you to James chapter three. It is in the Bible so you won't need a Book of Mormon. Take special note of verses 8 thru 10.

Objects to non-believer's work

I have read with interest your articles on the Mormon Church, and have also read most of the letters of response you have published. I would like to add my ideas.

As a lifelong Mormon, I am well acquainted with the issues discussed by Mr. Farrell and find he has done his job well in the short time he spent in research for the articles. I believe his approach was dispassionate and his facts were generally correct. The articles are obviously a little weak on doctrine and beliefs but rather discussed political, economic, and social issues.

In the first article, a number of statistics are quoted concerning divorce rates, teenage marriages, out-of-wedlock teenage pregnancy, child abuse and suicide. These statistics are for the state of Utah and not the Mormon Church, and it is invalid to imply the one means the other, as Farrell does.

The implication is that these problems exist among Mormons to a greater degree than in America generally; so, the conclusion can be drawn that the church must somehow be responsible. While Farrell does not state this directly, he infers it.

The articles concentrate too much on controversy. Rather than present a broad view of what Mormons are like, he has taken problem areas and discussed them at length, often far out of proportion to their relative concern to Mormons and the community in general. The book-banning problem in Bountiful is an isolated problem and does not represent a church-wide, or even a Utah-wide, problem. The discrimination problem in Brigham City schools was discussed at length, but what of elsewhere in Utah? In my life in the church, having lived in a number of communities, I have never encountered either of the above problems.

Farrell quotes at length in his articles but the quotes are always from non-members, disaffected or excommunicated Mormons, or from those in the church who represent the most liberal thinking. One has the impression that Farrell never interviewed a bishop, state president or a general authority because they are never quoted except that general authorities are quoted from sermons or writings. Thus the view of the leaders of the church and the majority of members is not well represented.

The Vernon family won my affection because they are in so many ways like my own family. But in selecting this family, Farrell does not choose a representation of what most Mormon families are like. Probably the "average" Mormon family has more than three children, but the real problem is that the Vernons are liberal in their thinking which most Mormons are not. In short, the liberals get far more attention in the articles than their relative preponderance in the church. The church does accommodate a wider variety of beliefs than most members realize, but the liberals are a small, albeit vocal, minority.

The articles rightly pointed out that Mormons often carry their church customs into community affairs and thereby offend non-Mormons. Most Mormons I know would not knowingly offend anyone, but many do unwittingly. We Mormons would do well to consider this in trying to improve our relationship with our neighbors.

Farrell's description of Mormons is right on target, so much so that it bears repeating: "Organized, middle class, cliquish, frugal, earnest, clean-living, industrious, optimistic, pragmatic, obedient, conservative, and intellectual and prolific. They want to be liked; worship heroes and celebrities; worry about being accepted, and tend to think the rest of us are doomed." Mormons have a strong emphasis on doing. A favorite Primary hymn originally contained the phrase, "Teach me all that I must know to live with him someday." The hymn later was changed from know to do.

Your final editorial states "Mormon articles shouldn't divide us." Judging from the letters you have published, there is a division between some liberals and non-Mormons and I suspect these articles fanned the flame rather than dousing the fire. I have asked a number of my Mormon

Disability-insurance plan receiving closer scrutiny

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Amid the loud wrangling in Congress over the Social Security crisis, another federal program is being rocked by the political tides of cutback and reform.

The Social Security disability insurance program — which provides monthly payments to persons with physical or mental handicaps that prevent them from working — has been buffeted by changes aimed at reducing abuse.

In 1980, jolted by evidence that thousands of persons no longer disabled still were receiving disability, Congress passed legislation amending the disability insurance program.

One amendment mandated that the status of all disabled workers be reviewed every three years. Previously only those persons deemed to have a chance of recovery were slated for periodic review.

So in early 1981, additional staff members were added to Idaho's disability determination office, the state agency responsible for deciding who gets benefits and who continues to receive them.

About 1,890 "continuing disability investigations," or CDIs as they are known, were conducted in fiscal 1982, according to Stan Kress, the director of the state office. The result: About 1,000 persons were cut from the disability rolls.

The reaction has been fierce. Social workers, vocational counselors, doctors, lawyers, even a conservative Idaho senator, say support has been slashed from persons who, by all reasonable criteria, are handicapped severely.

Moreover, when such persons appeal the decision, about half have had their benefits restored by federal administrative law judges.

"Thus, many disabled persons, already struggling with medical problems, have spent months of uncertainty and worry — only to be re-litigated and paid back benefits."

As in the main Social Security retirement program, disability payments are based on years of employment. But — unlike the retirement program, the disability program is financially stable — so stable in fact, that it has lent money to the retirement program.

Twin Falls Social Security officials acknowledge that perhaps not enough "care and caution" were taken when the continuing-disability-investigation process began. They also note that the appeal process, which averages six months, "can be extremely stressful for persons previously declared disabled."

But the CDIs, they contend, were long-needed to clear the rolls of persons fraudulently living off the government.

Nationally, the Social Security Administration has been bombarded with public outcry over cases such as the one where a quadriplegic was terminated as disabled. The Magic Valley also has produced its own "horror" stories.

"In the last year, we've seen a real increase in the number of people terminated from disability benefits," says Kathy Grupe, a counselor with the Idaho Division of Vocational Rehabilitation. Many of those terminations have involved persons deemed by the state division to be untrainable, and thus unemployable, because their handicaps are so overwhelming, she says.

She describes the case of a man in his mid-50s with a heart condition so severe he could barely walk across a room. Yet, his benefits were cut off after a medical examination set up by Social Security officials.

Cecilia Winkler, an Idaho Legal Aid attorney, tells similar stories. She represented a woman who underwent surgery for a severe brain tumor. The woman tried to work at Desert Industries but could not keep up the effort.

When her benefits were terminated, Winkler says the woman was told by Social Security officials that she could find a job as a file clerk, that even if she was not mobile, papers to be filed could be "brought" to her. What office would hire her under those conditions, Winkler asks.

Another heart-condition client, whose benefits were terminated because he had supposedly improved, died of his condition while appealing the case, Grupe says.

Even Sen. Steve Symms, who never has been considered an advocate of federal "handout" programs, has issued a statement decrying the rash of terminations.

Idahoans have endured "mental anguish and personal crises that are senseless, that should never have been allowed to happen," he says.

Symms blames the 1980 amendments and the Jimmy Carter administration. While he supports efforts to fight fraud and abuse, "the former administration neglected to use much foresight and their effort clearly went overboard," Symms says.

However, a former state disability determination office employee says the CDIs have been pursued with no less zeal by the Reagan administration.

"Even if the impetus came from the administration in last days of the Carter administration, the indication we got was that the Reagan administration really agreed with that policy," he says.

Also, Carter had planned to increase the number of cases reviewed over seven-and-a-half years. Reagan wanted the program completed in three-and-a-half years. Kress, the state director, states that.

The unemployment rate also has affected the disability insurance program. Disabled workers find it harder to find and hold jobs, and are more likely to panic if their benefits are terminated, officials say.

Idaho Legal Aid, concerned over the number of disability terminations, plans to file a class-action lawsuit in the matter, according to spokesman Michael Hinman.

The suit would challenge the Social Security Administration on these issues:

- Disability determination employees never meet recipients face to face and makes decisions only from records. This results in what Hinman calls "newspaper" cases, such as the one where a paraplegic deemed no longer disabled.

In addition to evidence from a recipient's physician, Social Security can set up — at government expense — additional examinations with another doctor. Hinman contends these examinations are rushed and incomplete, and the resulting reports leave erroneous impressions.

"The determination office may terminate even long-time disability recipients if they do not meet current disability guidelines. Hinman contends that federal court cases require the determination office to prove that

Bewildered

Severe diabetic becomes casualty of crackdown on benefits

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Bewilderment sounds in the words of Fred Allen, age 30 and the father of four: "The doctor tells me I can't go back to work, and Social Security tells me I have to go back to work."

Allen, a severe diabetic, is one of the casualties of the crackdown on the Social Security disability insurance program. After receiving benefits for more than four years, he was dropped from the program last summer, when officials determined he was not disabled.

But Allen, his doctor and a vocational counselor feel he is indeed disabled. He has appealed the decision and submitted statements from his doctors that say he could be risking his life by working.

Since August, he has waited for his case to come before an administrative law judge. Meanwhile, his family is slipping deeper into debt.

On Friday, his family was notified that the hearing date has been set for Feb. 17. Allen himself has been hospitalized since Jan. 23, when he suffered a seizure.

Kathy Grupe, a counselor with Idaho Division of Vocational Rehabilitation, has worked with Allen for more than a year — first to get him into a vocational training program and then to try to help him win back his benefits.

She says she does not understand why Allen was terminated when his condition clearly has deteriorated.

And if he wasn't disabled when the termination decision was made, the pressure and stress certainly has disabled him now, she maintains.

The decision to terminate Allen's benefits was made by the state disability determination office in Boise and is beyond the control of the Twin Falls office, Social Security district manager James Fritzeley says.

Although assistant district manager Wenden Nye expresses sympathy for Allen's situation, he is personally unsure whether Allen qualifies for assistance under the regulations set by Social Security.

But both Fritzeley and Nye deplore the long waiting period Allen has undergone. This, they indicate, is the real problem the review process — the long periods of uncertainty.

"Everyone is terribly sympathetic, but there's nothing anyone can do. To my knowledge, no one has been abrupt, rude or unfeeling to him — but no one knows exactly what to do about it," Grupe says.

Allen's case illustrates the difficulty of determining if a person is capable of work. The young man has use of all his limbs, is mentally alert and though suffering from eye problems, sees well enough to write with glasses. Certainly, diabetes does not prevent other persons from living normal, working lives.

But Allen's diabetes is not under control, his eyesight is diminishing and his kidneys are malfunctioning. Moreover, as a diabetic, his condition will inevitably worsen, doctors say.

For the Allen family, the termination of his disability benefits is another in a string of crises. The family had been financially devastated when a son died soon after birth, after running up a large medical bill.

Daughter Pamela was born with an impaired liver, and she has been in and out of hospitals since birth. At 19 months old, she has the bone structure of an infant and a jaundiced complexion.

The Allens hope Pamela can some day undergo a liver transplant to become a healthy child. The family now receives Social Security supplemental income for the child.

Allen, a diabetic since infancy, moved to Twin Falls with his family in 1973 to run a janitorial service. After losing an important contract, he moved back to South Dakota, where he ran his own cab company.

But his eyesight deteriorated, and he says that his doctor made him close down his cab company. In 1977, he applied for and began receiving disability payments.

He and his wife moved back to Twin Falls in January of 1981.

"No one likes to be on Social Security. I was trying to get off it. The whole reason I came out here was to maybe find work and go back to school," he says.

In August 1981, he enrolled in a year-long vocational training program. His wife, Carol, a licensed practical nurse, worked part-time and took care of Pamela. She recently went back to school to become a registered nurse.

In early spring of 1982, Allen was informed he had become able to do "gainful employment" and his disability benefits would be terminated.

Some time before, he had been seen by two local doctors as part of a review of his case. One of the doctors recalls that he found Allen to be a severe diabetic, with nerve damage to his eyes. But with proper management of his condition, the doctor felt Allen was capable of handling some kind of job.

When told he would be terminated, Allen feared he would have to quit school to find work. He contacted Grupe, who told him not to worry. Recently passed legislation stipulated that only under certain conditions could benefits be cut from a recipient undergoing an approved vocational rehabilitation program, she said.

Earlier, Grupe had sent a notice of Allen's training program to the Social Security Administration in Baltimore, So, she figured a simple, bureaucratic mistake had been made.

When she called Baltimore, she found that Social Security never had received the notice. In fact, she discovered the national office had "lost" Allen's file. Grupe sent off another copy of Allen's training program and also mailed additional medical reports, because Allen's health was deteriorating.

In May 1982, Allen was hospitalized for high blood sugar. In July, he suffered a grand mal seizure. Grupe also decided that Allen should drop from the training program. Because of illness, he had missed too many classes to pass the course, and Grupe felt his medical condition, particularly his seizures, made him too unreliable to be employable.

In August, a medical report by Dr. Ronald Mirch stated that Allen's prognosis was "extremely poor, and I sincerely doubt that he will ever be productive in an economic sense."

"Further, that attempting to have this man seek employment would severely endanger his life because of the strong likelihood of diabetic reactions with unusual activity, as is expected in the work force."

Dr. William Fitzhugh, who also examined Allen in August, found that his eyesight was reduced to the "legal blindness stage." Allen Sen. Steve Symms' office intervened. Allen's file was found, Grupe says. His disability insurance was extended two more months — because of the training program — then terminated as of September 1982.

"I was flabbergasted when Fred called and said they upheld decision to terminate him. I couldn't believe it," Grupe says.

"I can see why they (the Social Security Administration) are doing it," Allen says. "There are people who really don't need to be on it. It's their way of checking to make sure."

But he feels he qualifies for assistance. "Let's put it this way. I can't hardly see anything. With my diabetes, I'm sick all the time. If I was an employer, I wouldn't hire me."

Disability insurance provides workers with a 'safety net'

TWIN FALLS — The threat of permanent injury from an accident or illness hangs over every American worker.

Since 1954, the disability insurance program, handled under the Social Security Administration, has provided a "safety net" for those who can no longer work to support themselves.

About 3.3 million adults receive disability checks, according to Social Security figures. These persons range from the 47-year-old salesman with a wife and two kids who had a severe heart attack, to the 23-year-old secularly who has been disabled for more than a year by an auto accident, to the mentally retarded adult son of a deceased worker insured under Social Security, to the widow with advanced arthritis and diabetes.

In 1965, $1.7 billion was paid to disabled workers. In 1979, $14.2 billion was paid. And the estimated bill for 1993 is $21.8 billion.

Unlike the Social Security retirement program, recent projections show the disability program "is financially sound," according to a 1982 report by a special U.S. Senate committee on aging.

Disability insurance was initiated by Congress to help disabled workers more than 50 years old. Since then, the requirement gradually has been liberalized to include benefits for younger workers and their families.

At first, only those severely and permanently disabled by catastrophic illness or injury could qualify for benefits. Vocational factors, that is, a person's age, schooling and work experience, could be taken into consideration.

In 1965, Congress liberalized the definition of disability, by replacing the permanent disability requirement with the stipulation that the disability must be expected to last for 12 months or end in death.

In the late 1960s, new rules modified the vocational factors, to stipulate that a person not only must be incapable of doing previous work, but must not be able to engage in any kind of "substantial gainful employment" that exists in the national economy, regardless of whether such work exists in the person's area.

Since 1970, only about 30 percent of those who have applied for disability insurance have been granted benefits.

In 1980, Congress passed disability-reform legislation, including the stipulation that all cases be reviewed every three years. The process was accelerated by a 1981 General Accounting Office study that found that as many as 30 percent of disability insurance recipients no longer met eligibility criteria.

Nationally, about 45 percent of those reviewed under this process have been terminated, according to the 1982 committee report. But about half of those who appeal have had the decision reversed by a federal administrative law judge.

Hangar lease before council Disability

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls City Council will review a lease for the construction of a general aviation hangar at the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport when it meets today.

The proposed lease, with Shewmaker Brothers, is for a period of 10 years, at an annual base fee of $163.80. The fee will be adjusted annually according to increases in the Consumer Price Index.

The lease has been approved by the airport board and Twin Falls County commissioners. The hangar will be used for personal aircraft.

Also at Monday's meeting, council will:

- Formally appoint Fritz Wonderlich as city attorney.
- Consider an appointment to the city's building code board of appeals.
- Consider bids for the purchase of asphalt-repair equipment.

A low bid of $22,775 has been submitted by Arrowhead Machine Co., but city staff members have determined the bid did not conform to specifications. A bid of $24,600 was submitted by the Highway Equipment Co. of Boise. However, only $23,000 in federal revenue-sharing funds has been budgeted for the purchase.

The city staff recommends that council accept the bid of Highway Equipment Co. and authorize the expenditure of $1,600 from revenue-sharing contingency funds to pay the balance.

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. at City Hall. A public work session will be held at City Hall at 4 p.m.

a recipient has improved in order to cut benefits.

As of last June, 8,945 Idahoans were receiving disability payments, according to Bill Kooreman, a regional Social Security official.

In the Magic Valley area, as of Sept. 30, about 1,000 persons were receiving disability benefits, for a total monthly cost of $31,000, according to James Fritziey, the Twin Falls district Social Security manager.

Idaho's average monthly award is $425 for a single person and $551 for a family with two children, according to Kooreman.

Along with the tales of unfair cut-offs, social workers and officials also have stories of physically active persons living off disability benefits because of "back pain" or other supposed problems. Some "disabled" persons even return to work without telling the Social Security office, they say.

Fritziey tells of going to the home of a man who was receiving disability for a back injury, only to find the man had left on a rigorous mountain hiking trip.

"I was so upset over that I almost quit," he says.

A 1982 report on disability insurance by a special U.S. Senate committee on aging, said: "In the past, the tendency was to encourage people, albeit inadvertently, to go on the disability rolls and stay on them, without attempting to make full use of the individual's capacity" to return to work.

Fritziey says the recent rise in terminations is not due to harsher examiners. Rather, a larger number of cases are being investigated, including cases that never have been reviewed before.

"I don't think we have been heartless in performing CDIs. It should have been done a long time ago," says Lee Ann Emerson, a Social Security employee.

A paraplegic as the result of a traffic accident, Emerson could qualify for assistance. She has chosen to work full-time.

She feels the CDI reviews have been fair, but "there are some people who don't care, who want checks from the government for the rest of their life."

The problem, she and Fritziey note, are the "in-betweens" — the persons with disabilities that might be overcome if they were as motivated as Emerson.

But many disabled clients, with their background, education and mental states, are not superachievers — only average persons trying to get by, Emerson says.

Social Security regulations prevent the determination office from considering local unemployment rates, age discrimination or similar factors in determining whether someone is capable of working. And while someone who cannot return to his former job probably considers himself disabled, if there is a job anywhere in the country that he is capable of doing, he is not disabled by federal standards.

"I have no doubt they (terminated recipients) truly believe they are disabled," Fritziey says. "We're not faceless bureaucrats. We don't want to cut off anyone who helps help."

"We're here to help people, but there are limitations. You can only help to a certain degree," says assistant district manager Wenden Nye.

Medical innovations also have affected recent decisions. Epileptics were once almost automatically awarded benefits. But that disease is now controllable with medicine. Thus, epileptics are being denied benefits, a terrifying prospect for someone who has come to depend on that monthly disability check, Nye says.

The Social Security Administration has "come to the conclusion we... have to go back to the (program's) original intent, which is to help the truly needy." Some people are caught in the middle," Fritziey says.

Yet, an estimated 90 percent of those denied disability benefits never return to sustained employment, the special committee report said.

Defining disability is itself a difficult task.

"Two reasonable people, with the same standards of evaluating disability and the same medical evidence, can, and do, disagree about what constitutes an incapacitating physical or mental illness," the 1982 committee report said.

A lot of doctors can't even do it (determine disability). How do you measure pain?" Nye wonders.

The disability determination office, composed of specially trained personnel assisted by a consulting physician, relies on Social Security regulations, classified into 13 body systems.

Administrative law judges, Fritziey notes, are not bound by these rules. In view cases more leniently, he says.

Fritziey says that the Social Security Administration has taken steps to proceed more cautiously and reduce errors.

A recently approved change allows a person to continue to receive benefits while his case is under appeal. If the administrative law judge rules against him, the person would be required to pay those benefits back to the government.

Another new procedure grants local officials the option of interviewing a person stated by the national office for CDI review. If an official feels the person is so handicapped that a CDI is unnecessary, they may halt the process there.

"My basic opinion is that there are people getting cut off who, in today's job market and with their ailments... there's no way on God's green earth they are going to get a job," Krass, the state director, says.

"There are people who were jilted when the criteria was more lenient, who have got better and have spent their time sitting on their hands, lecturing benefits when they could have been out there earning a living."

"Yet, I would not be a compassionate human being," Krass says. "If I did not realize there are people caught between a rock and a hard place."

Ruptured Men Get $9.95 gift for trying this!

Kansas City, Mo.—Here is an improved means of holding trousers that has benefited thousands of men in the last year...

Inconspicuous, without leg straps, elastic belts, body encircling springs or harsh pads, it has caused many to say, "I don't see how it holds so easy. I would not have believed, had I not tried it."

So comfortable — so easy to wear — it could show you the way to joyous freedom from your rupture trouble.

Dear Abby

Hotline for runaways aids parents

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN/
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: The Saturday after Thanksgiving our 16-year-old daughter walked out of our home. A few days later she phoned a friend and told him she had too many problems to face so she was leaving town. We haven't heard from her since.

We felt very close to our daughter and knew she had some emotional problems for which she was receiving professional help. The pain we felt through Christmas and New Year's was almost unbearable. We love her very much and pray each day for her safe return.

Abby, please publish our message to runaways and the Runaway Hotline number as you have done so often in the past. Our daughter read your column every day in the Las Cruces (N.M.) Sun-News. Maybe she will find it today wherever she is.

—THE SHAW'S

DEAR SHAW'S: With pleasure. Runaways call this toll-free number: 1-800-231-6946. If in Texas, use this number: 1-800-392-3332.

An operator will take your call and telephone your parents anywhere in the United States with a message from you. There will be no lecturing or recriminations. Your call will not be traced. And only one question will be asked: "Do you need anything?" If you do, you will be told where you can get it. free. I repeat, no attempt will be made to contact you or bring you back — regardless of your age.

If you are a runaway, I beg you to forget the past and send a message to your parents now. They will sleep better tonight and so will you. God bless you.

—ABBY

P.S. Runaway Hotline was established in September 1973 by a handful of public-spirited volunteers with the support of the governor of Texas. To date, it has placed over 500,000 calls from runaways, assuring their families that they are OK. Beautiful!

DEAR ABBY: I have a son named Brad. He is 7 years old and deaf. Like most kids, Brad was very excited about Christmas, and he prepared his "want" list.

I am enclosing his letter. The words are his, but I took the liberty of correcting the spelling and punctuation. Being a mother yourself, I think you will understand how this made me feel.

Abby, please print this. It might call attention to what deaf people must face every day.

—JANE GALLAGHER,
YORBA LINDA, CALIF.

"Dear Santa: My wish is to have no voice on TV because our TV station doesn't have C.C. (closed captions) very much. I want no voice at all on TV for the hearing people until they give up and let ALL shows be C.C.

Then everyone can watch TV at the same time and enjoy it. OK?" —BRAD

DEAR ABBY: For Christmas I received several "gifts" that were not my idea of what a gift should be. I was simply notified that since I didn't need anything, a "gift" had been sent in my name to a charity of the giver's choice.

I think it's very generous to give to charity at Christmas time, but what it really amounts to is a tax-deductible gift.

Now, who gets the deduction? The generous biggest who decided to make a donation in lieu of giving me a present? Or, since the "gift" was made in MY name, do I get the deduction?

What sayest thou, fair oracle?

GIFT HORSE

DEAR HORSE: Whoo! The person who makes the contribution gets the deduction.

At Wit's End Many loves, but he has one chair

BY ERMA BOMBECK
Field Enterprise, Inc.

I've learned a thing or two about men in my time.

One of the things I've learned is that a man may love several wives embrace several cars, be true to more than one political philosophy and be equally committed to several careers, but he will have only one comfortable chair in his lifetime.

It will be an ugly chair. Count on it. It will match nothing in the entire house.

It will never wear out.

Separate him from it and his heart will stop beating.

I have seen men who couldn't care less how you decorate a house. They don't care if the sofa is covered with spit-up green chins. If the bed revolves on an axis, or if the walls are covered in AstroTurf, just give them their comfortable chair with a light beside it and they'll be happy for the rest of their lives.

I have one of the few marriages in North America that has survived getting rid of her husband's favorite chair. Maybe survived is too strong a word. Flourished is better. The chair, in my vernacular, had "stayed too long at the fair." When it was young it had been gold brocade.

Now it was faded and dull. The arms were threadbare. When you pushed a lever on the side, a footrest slid out to the center of the room and the back hit the wall. Traffic in the room always had to accommodate the chair. It was like walking around someone who was "laid out."

I gave the chair away.

My husband looked at me like the dog after we had him spayed.

I won't bore you with the arguments and the trial separation that ensued. It is sufficient to say that we eventually got together to shop for a new "favorite chair." There was no pleasing the man.

He wanted one that was soft, supported his back, had a head rest, arms big enough to relax his arms, a stool to stretch his feet out and material that didn't scratch. "You have just described your bed!" I said.

I felt it was reasonable. I wanted a Louis XIV antique with a seat measuring no more than 14 inches with a hot pink satin cushion. "You'll love it," I said. "You've always made new friends easily."

We bought the chair. I don't know how I'm going to tell him if he sits on it, he has to sit in the spare bedroom and wear beige.

What's what

L.M. Boyd

"Games played with a bill, and others of that nature, are too violent for the body and stand no character on the mind."

Q. The Princess telephone. I've seen. But no Princess telephone. Why not?

A. It's the teenage girls who make their marks with that instrument. Boys leave footprints, and fingerprints. But no Prince. chucky. Nevertheless, point is the conversation girls make up a far larger market than the less talkative boys. Still, our Chief Prognosticator expects the makers soon to market phones for boys especially. Possibly in the shapes of model cars.

LOVE AND WAR

Q. Credit a razorblade maker with this calculation, sir: If all your beard growth were confined to one whisker, it would be about 50 feet long within 24 hours.

A. An estimated 20 percent of the grownup population nationwide at any given time is dieting.

SUPER BOWL

Q. Why shouldn't the 'Super Bowl' be played in honor of famous American? Like Thomas Jefferson, for instance?

A. You picked a dilly. By all means, let it be in honor of Jefferson. In his writings is the line: "I have loved you since the first day I saw you."

Notes writer Bob Leoffelbein: "If you crossed a rabbit with a lollypop, what would you get? Probably a sucker born every minute."

You might want to alert your next obituary caller with this line: "Yes, officer, this is the call I want traced."

Get in touch with as many friends as you possibly can and come to a better understanding with them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Find a better system for handling your mounting financial affairs. Sidestep a foe who keeps annoying you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Find the right way to gain your fondest aims and don't let others stop you. Be sure to improve your appearance.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Find when you can use more imagination and get excellent results in career activities. Strive for increased happiness.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those fascinating young persons who will have a great interest in social activities and would do well in humanitarian work. Be sure to prepare a good education that will help bring this about.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day of mixed influences as the early day brings you some unexpected benefits, so be alert to accept them. Much patience on your part is required now to gain your true aims.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Your hunches are good early in the day, so be sure to follow them. Handle all duties painstakingly and get excellent results.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A charming person can be very helpful to you early in the day. Take extra time to improve your appearance. Express confidence.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A good deal of work can be accomplished today by making proper plans. Rid yourself of whatever detours progress.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Try to be more helpful in your relationship with co-workers. Study reports and make sure they are accurate.

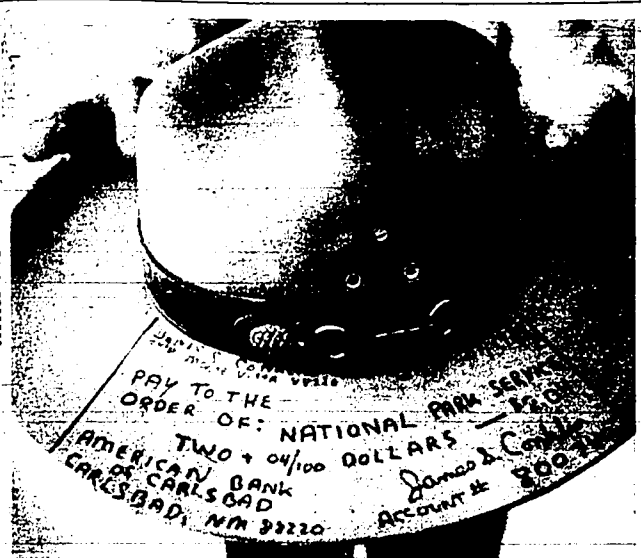

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Go to the proper sources for the information you need. Financial affairs are best handled later in the day. Be more optimistic!

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You could get a pleasant surprise early in the day, but could become frustrated over a minor matter later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are able to reach a personal aim early in the day, but later unexpected difficulties arise. Relax at home tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You are able to gain some aim that means much to you today. Avoid one who could harm you in some way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)

Hat-check pays off

James R. Conklin of Carlsbad, N.M., a former ranger with the National Park Service, wrote this check on the brim of his hat and mailed it to service officials after he received a dun for return of $2.04 he had been overpaid for night differential hours. It cost Conklin, now a news photographer, $4.15 to mail the hat-check to the NPS in San Francisco.

President marks birthday with party, 'scads of gifts'

By FRANK T. CSONGOS United Press International WASHINGTON — President Reagan celebrated his 72nd birthday quietly Sunday with a private party at the White House and said he got "scads" of gifts. Reagan and his wife Nancy returned from the Camp David, Md., presidential retreat earlier than scheduled because of a snowstorm. Light snow was falling when they stepped down from a helicopter on the South Lawn at mid-morning. Reagan, wearing brown slacks, boots and a shearling jacket, was asked by reporters what he got for his birthday. "Scads of things," he replied. "Happy birthday. How do you feel, Mr. President?" a reporter called. "Thank you. Thank you very much. Fine," the president replied. Sheila Tate, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, said six people were included in the private dinner party in the White House family quarters. The names of the guests were not disclosed, but Mrs. Tate said they were from the Washington area. Asked what birthday gift Mrs. Reagan gave to the president, Mrs. Tate said, "It's always practical. Usually something for the ranch." She said the White House chef had baked a birthday cake for Reagan. If Reagan seeks and wins a second term, he would be inaugurated two weeks before his 74th birthday. He would leave office just before turning 78. Aides say Reagan does not plan to announce his re-election plans until at least Labor Day and age is not a factor in the decision. The president is healthy and vigorous. Today, Reagan plans to mark the entry of the first woman Cabinet officer, Elizabeth Dole, who will begin her new job as secretary of transportation in the midst of a nationwide truckers' strike marked by violence. It was her predecessor, Drew Lewis, who led administration efforts for the gasoline tax hike that spawned the strike by independent truckers who claim it will ruin them. Mrs. Dole, wife of Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., will be sworn in at the White House by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, the first woman member of the Supreme Court, also a Reagan appointee. Mrs. Dole is to be joined in the Cabinet soon by former Rep. Margaret Heckler of Massachusetts, named to succeed Richard Schweiker as secretary of health and human services. The president's calendar for the week includes no travel, for the first time in a month. His next scheduled out-of-town trip is to California at the end of the month to meet Queen Elizabeth.

Nazi war criminal held in cell in familiar fortress in France

LYON, France (UPI) — Nazi war criminal Klaus Barbie was locked up Sunday in the fortress prison where, as the head of the Gestapo in Lyon 40 years ago, he allegedly tortured and killed World War II resistance fighters. Barbie, 69, was taken to Montluc fortress immediately after being flown Saturday to France from Bolivia, where he had lived 30 years as "Klaus Altmann." The Bolivian government expelled him late Friday after his arrest for defrauding the state mining company. "The 'Butcher of Lyon' was charged with 'crimes against humanity'" in a two-hour hearing with investigating magistrate Christian

Riss, who had reopened the case and issued an international arrest warrant three months ago. Justice Minister Robert Badinter personally ordered that Barbie should be incarcerated in the fortress where thousands of people were interned during the war and where many died at the hands of Gestapo torturers. Barbie was judged by military tribunals after the war to have been responsible for some 4,000 killings, the deportation of 7,500 resistance fighters and Jews to concentration or forced labor camps and the arrest of more than 15,000 people while he was head of the German secret police in Lyon from 1942 to 1944. He was found guilty of involvement of the murder of France's leading Resistance organizer, Jean Moulin, and it is this case which is likely to form a major part of a civilian re-trial of Barbie. The trial, in which Barbie would face a maximum sentence of life imprisonment, could be the biggest re-examination of Nazi war crimes since Adolf Eichmann, who organized the deportation and gassing of European Jews in death camps, was tried and hanged in Israel in 1962.

Defense plans its final strategy in trial of bigamist in Arizona

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Defense attorneys plotted their final moves Sunday in the sixth week of the bigamy and fraud trial of Giovanni Vigliotto, the admitted husband of 105 women. Vigliotto testified for three days last week. Public defender Richard Steiner had said Vigliotto would be the last defense witness, but the attorney did not rest his case when trial recessed for the weekend. Observers expect the trial to continue this week with prosecution rebuttal witnesses and closing arguments. Vigliotto, 53, is charged with bigamy and fraud in connection with his Nov. 16, 1981, marriage to Patricia Gardiner, 43, a Mesa real estate agent.

Also testifying was Sharon Clark-Ray, Ind., who tracked Vigliotto to Panama City, Fla., in December 1981 and had him arrested. She contended Vigliotto married her June 13, 1981, then abandoned her about three weeks later, taking $51,000 in cash and antiques. Joan Bacarella, 45, Manalapan, N.J., told jurors she was engaged to Vigliotto when he took her van and stranded her and her three children at a Florida motel. She said $40,000 worth of clothing inventory from her New Jersey store disappeared about the same time. Vigliotto testified he really is Nikolai Peruskov, a Sicilian world traveler who did "contractual" work for the CIA in the 1950s. He presented a list of 105 women he said he has married since 1949, as well as a list of 50 of his aliases.

The defendant said he never swindled his wives. Specifically, he said he told Gardiner he was leaving because things weren't working out and that he took none of her things. He also testified he took nothing from Clark. Regarding Bacarella, he said the truckload of clothing apparently was taken by two young men he trusted as sons. "I'll always feel responsible for what happened," Vigliotto said of the incident. He said when he left Bacarella, he went to search for the truck but no clothing two weeks later, he contacted Bacarella to let her know the whereabouts of the truck and her van. Bacarella testified she never heard from Vigliotto after he left her at the motel.

Open funeral service for singer on Tuesday

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An open funeral service for Grammy Award-winning pop singer Karen Carpenter will be held Tuesday with subsequent burial limited strictly to her immediate family, a spokesman said. The entombment at Forest Lawn Memorial Park will follow funeral services at 1 p.m. at United Methodist Church in Downey, a suburb about 10 miles southeast of Los Angeles. Miss Carpenter, 32, who combined with her brother Richard to record a string of soft-rock hits as The Carpenters, died in a hospital Friday of heart failure shortly after collapsing in her parents' Downey home. "The unfortunate death took us all by surprise," Paul Bloch, the singer's longtime agent, said. "The family is holding up the best they can, but everyone is in shock right now — as are the friends around them." An autopsy performed Friday afternoon failed to determine what killed Miss Carpenter, who was being treated for "anorexia nervosa," a compulsive dieting disease in which victims sometimes starve themselves to death. Donald Messerle, senior investigator for the coroner's office, said the department will begin studying blood and tissue samples Monday to pinpoint the cause of death, a process expected to take several weeks. Miss Carpenter, who was divorced last year from real estate developer Thomas Burris last year after a brief marriage, is survived by her brother Richard, 37, and her parents.

Lottery agency to get 40 illegible tickets

LYNNWOOD, Wash. (UPI) — An unemployed man, who spent two days sorting through 5 tons of trash looking for a $10,000 lottery ticket, said Sunday he would send more than 40 illegible tickets to lottery officials in hopes they can determine whether one of them is the winner. Don Temple finished looking through the bags of smelly garbage Saturday. The tickets, badly stained by soft drinks and coffee, were among many discarded tickets he found. Temple said lottery officials should be able to determine if any of the soiled tickets was the winning one. — Paul Mack, chairman of the lottery commission, said it would be technically possible to check the verification number of a ticket to see if it was a winner. Temple, 33, dropped the ticket into an ashtray at a local Fred Meyer store where he bought it Jan. 23 for $1, not realizing until later that two $5,000 boxes and a green shamrock added up to a big win. Temple traced the store's garbage to a Northwest Garbage Co. dumpster. The company brought the five-ton load to the home of Temple's father-in-law and dumped it in the driveway.

Clark watches football, exercises

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Ailing heart patient Barney Clark spent Sunday resting, watching football and continuing a mild exercise program, officials at the University of Utah Medical Center said. Clark, 62, was listed in "serious but stable" condition, the same status as during the past few weeks. — Lisa Anderson, nursing supervisor, described Sunday as a "mellow kick-back kind of day" for the recipient of the Jarvik-7 plastic heart, which was implanted Dec. 2. It was Clark's 67th day since the historic operation. Anderson said the retired Seattle-area dentist continued to exercise with a pedaling machine. He has been using the device for 10 minutes a session, twice a day.

President Alfredo Stroessner casts his ballot in Asuncion

Paraguay retains leader Stroessner

By GERI SMITH
United Press International

ASUNCION, Paraguay — President Alfredo Stroessner won reelection as expected Sunday to a seventh term as Latin America's longest-reigning leader, officials of the army general's ruling party said.

The Colorado Party said Stroessner would capture about 90 percent of the vote. Liberal Radical Party candidate Enzo Doldan, 57 percent, and Liberal Party candidate Hugo Celaura 3.2 percent.

An official count of the electoral commission will not be available until Wednesday or Thursday.

Polls opened at 7 a.m. and Stroessner, 70, voted two hours later at an Asuncion high school before being whisked away in a bullet-proof automobile, escorted by two green police jeeps carrying 16 soldiers totalling M-16 rifles.

Asked if he would follow up his expected victory with another presidential bid in 1988, the 70-year-old general laughed and used a Paraguayan expression to say that it is too early to tell: "My dear, you want me to be able to see all the way across the Atlantic, do you?"

Eight exiled opponents of Stroessner flew to Asuncion from Buenos Aires in defiance of a government ban on their return, seeking to take advantage of an election-day lifting of the 25-year-old state of siege.

But Interior Minister Sabino Montanaro said they would be forced to return to Buenos Aires on the same plane.

Stroessner, the son of a Bavarian immigrant, has ruled Paraguay with an iron hand since a 1954 military coup. He has been elected six times to the presidency, backed by the official Colorado Party, which controls all aspects of military and civilian life.

Lebanon sects trade shellfire

By DAVID ZENIAN
United Press International

Druze and Christian militiamen fought artillery and mortar battles in the Israeli-occupied mountains southeast of Beirut Sunday, following a week of bloody terrorist attacks in and around the Lebanese capital.

Twenty-six people were killed and more than 100 others wounded in a spate of terrorist attacks against the Palestinian, Israeli and French targets in the internationally policed capital, Lebanese police said.

The Christian-Druze fighting in the Israeli-occupied Aley Mountains escalated after a night of sniper fire and rapidly engulfed a string of snow-covered villages and towns.

"The fighting is heavy and shells are crashing at the rate of six per minute," the rightist

Phalangist-owned Voice of Lebanon radio said. But independent sources said the fighting was far less heavy.

Lebanese army units deployed in the Aley foothills cut the main highway leading to the region in a bid to avoid "outsiders from being trapped in crossfire," state-run Beirut Radio said.

The fighting was most intense between the Druze village of Ailat and the nearby Christian militia-controlled village of Souk El Gharb.

Beirut radio said efforts were under way to check the violence, which twice last week triggered a Druze artillery barrage against the Christian half of Beirut, killing five.

In Israeli, military sources confirmed a newspaper report that Lt. Col. Rafi, the tank commander involved in last week's encounter with U.S. Marines in Beirut, said he "smelled alcohol on the breath" of Marine Capt. Charles Johnson, who drew his pistol to prevent three Israeli tanks passing U.S. lines.

The front page article in the respected Ha'aretz newspaper also said the Lebanese have 800 "large quantities" of hashish to Marine peace-keeping troops in Beirut.

A Marine spokesman in Beirut, Capt. Dale Duff, called the Ha'aretz report "absolute nonsense."

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin dismissed the report as "superfluous" and introduced to the main issue of reducing friction between Israeli and U.S. forces, Israel Radio reported.

Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, starting a three-nation European visit in Bonn, said he hoped recent Marine-Israeli confrontations would "not change the special character of our friendly relations with the United States."

Rafi himself — last names are withheld for security — was slightly wounded Sunday by a bomb detonated along a road south of Beirut as his vehicle was passing by, the Israeli army said.

Shultz reiterates U.S. commitment to Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — Secretary of State George Shultz arrived in Seoul Sunday and reassured South Korean leaders that Washington "prized" its defense commitment to the nation where nearly 40,000 U.S. troops are stationed.

Shultz met with Foreign Minister Lee Bum-suk soon after arriving and told him the United States "prized and valued its relationship with South Korea," State Department spokesman John Hughes said.

Lee in turn provided Shultz with a "fairly extensive survey of the situation in North Korea, including North Korean military strength," Hughes said.

Shultz told Lee the Reagan administration "would be working hard to get the additional funds for South Korea" to buy U.S. weapons with U.S.-provided loans, Hughes said.

Congress cut the administration's

$210 million request to $140 million.

"The primary objective" of the visit to South Korea "of course is to reaffirm and support our security arrangements with Korea and also to pay my respects to the American troops who are stationed here," Shultz told reporters aboard the plane bringing him from China to Seoul.

"Beyond that, there are points of encouragement in the direction of liberalization" of the South Korean political situation, Shultz said.

South Korean officials put their strength at 600,000 military personnel, to 800,000 for the North Koreans, despite the communist nation's smaller population.

Shultz scheduled a visit today to U.S. troops stationed near the demilitarized zone that has separated the two countries since the Korean War ended in 1953.

Abortion plan upsets Spain

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — A socialist government reform allowing abortion in certain cases triggered a political row Sunday in Roman Catholic Spain, with the nation's bishops branding the new law "a degradation of public morals."

Conservative opposition leader Manuel Fraga Iribarne, a former minister under Gen. Francisco Franco, pledged to ban the law if his party was voted into power.

"From now, we are telling our party members to collect signatures in order to demand a referendum," Fraga said at a news conference. Half a million names are required.

Fraga's statement and a passionate attack from the bishops drew the battle lines in what the Tiempo weekly magazine called "Spain's Abortion War."

"Living is the foremost of human rights," said a statement issued by the Bishops' Conference Saturday. In many churches throughout the nation, priests included the bishops' message in their Sunday sermons.

Pope planning visit to Central America

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II announced Sunday he will visit eight countries in strife-torn Central America and the Caribbean March 2-9 — his 17th trip abroad since elected leader of the Roman Catholic church in 1978.

Speaking at his Sunday noon blessing, the pope also appealed for help for the hundreds of thousands of refugees deported from Nigeria whose plight filled his soul with "profound sadness and great apprehension."

"It is my joy to tell you that in the first ten days of the coming month of March... I will go for a pastoral visit to the Christian communities of Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Panama, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Belize and Haiti," John Paul said from the window of his apartments overlooking St. Peter's Square.

The pope's announcement was the first official confirmation of the dates of the visit. Several Central American bishops have already announced that the pope would be visiting their countries.

The trip will be John Paul's fourth to Latin America. He visited Santo Domingo and Mexico in January, 1979, Brazil in July, 1980, and Argentina last June during the Falkland Islands conflict.

Although John Paul did not say exactly what day he would be leaving Vatican City, he said that on the first day of his visit, March 2, he would be meeting the Central American bishops conference in San Jose, Costa Rica.

He said that on the last day, March 9, he would be in Haiti for a meeting with the Latin American bishops conference in Port-au-Prince, capital of the Caribbean island.

John Paul said the countries on his itinerary were close to his heart and said some of them had been "very tried" by recent events in the war-torn region.

Bush takes a breather from European visits

ROME (UPI) — Vice President George Bush Sunday took a break from his hectic seven-nation tour of Europe, enjoying a mostly private day before meeting several Italian political leaders.

A U.S. embassy spokesman said most of Bush's day was "private time." He said he did not know whether Bush left the Villa Taverna estate — the U.S. ambassador's residence — to go sightseeing.

Sunday afternoon, Bush met separately at the ambassador's residence with Pietro Longo, secretary of the Social-Democratic Party, and Giovanni Malagodi, president of the Liberal Party.

He then met jointly with Carlo Ciampi, governor of the Bank of Italy, and Treasury Minister Giovanni Goria. His last meeting before a private dinner was with former Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini, secretary of the Republican Party.

The U.S. embassy spokesman said no details of the meetings would be released. Bush and the Italian leaders were expected to discuss the NATO plan to deploy nuclear missiles in Europe, the Western Alliance and economic matters.

Italy is Bush's fifth stop on his mission to promote U.S. disarmament policy among the NATO allies. He has visited West Germany, the Netherlands, Belgium and Switzerland and is scheduled to go to France and Britain.

In Moscow, the official Soviet news agency Tass said Bush's mission "was doomed to failure from the very beginning" because the European public doubts Washington's sincerity.

Soon after his arrival in Rome, Bush met with Prime Minister Amintore Fanfani at Fanfani's Palazzo Chigi office.

Bush brought Fanfani a personal message from President Reagan that sources said underscored the importance Reagan attaches to the Italian leg of Bush's tour.

Today, Bush will meet with Italian President Sandro Pertini and with Pope John Paul II at the Vatican.

McEnroe ends Lendl's indoor streak

John McEnroe raises arms in jubilation after ending Ivan Lendl's indoor streak

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — John McEnroe returned to his roots Sunday and ended more than two years of frustration suffered at the hands of Ivan Lendl.

The top-seeded McEnroe ended a personal seven-match losing streak to Lendl, the No. 2 seed, with a 4-6, 7-6, 6-4, 6-3 victory for his second straight title in the $375,000 U.S. Pro Indoor Tennis Championships.

In ending the 66-match indoor winning streak of Lendl, McEnroe changed his strategy against the 22-year-old Czechoslovakian by being more aggressive, rushing the net at every opportunity.

"That's the game that deep down I want to play," McEnroe said. "I was going to try that type of game this time. I got a lot of advice over the last seven matches but I guess I needed some people telling me over and over. "I was stubborn trying to play him in the backcourt and mixing up my shots. That gave him more time, and the more time you give him, the worse it is."

McEnroe, who picked up a first-prize check of $54,000 and retained his No. 1 computer ranking, last defeated Lendl in the quarterfinals of the 1980 U.S. Open. In their next seven matches, McEnroe only was able to win one of 20 sets against his hard-hitting rival.

For that reason, the 23-year-old McEnroe could not stress enough the importance of Sunday's victory.

"This is a step in the right direction," he said. "It was important for me mentally to get over that. This was an important win for me. I'm not going to say that it wasn't. I don't want to lose to anybody 10 times in a row."

McEnroe began turning the tide during the three-hour match in the second set when he posted a dramatic 9-7 win in a stormy tie-breaker.

Lendl, who last lost an indoor match in April 1981, said he was disappointed that his serve was not up to par. He said that was the difference in the match.

"My serve let me down a lot," he said. "He could not have played so well against me if I had served better. I was very upset with losing the tie-breaker. I didn't concentrate too well after that."

Exhorting himself often and backed by most in the crowd of 13,391 at the Spectrum, McEnroe seemed to get stronger as the match wore on. He attacked the net and volleyed with more confidence and his serve grew stronger. He did not lose his serve in the final two sets and Lendl only forced two break points.

McEnroe broke Lendl's serve in the third game of the final set and rolled to victory from that point as Lendl was unable to muster a rally. The Douglass, N.Y., left-hander captured the match on the third match point when Lendl hit a long forehand.

When the match ended, McEnroe threw his racket into the air and raised both fists over his head to a standing ovation.

The turning point of the match appeared to be the second set tie-breaker. McEnroe took a 4-3 lead with a backhand passing shot down the line after he somehow managed to return Lendl's bullet overhead.

But Lendl came back and squared the tie-breaker at 7-7 with a service winner that sent McEnroe raging toward the umpire, screaming that his opponent's serve should have been ruled a fault. McEnroe made it 9-7 after a Lendl error and squared the match when Lendl was long with a passing shot.

The set seemed to refresh McEnroe. After fighting off two break points in the eighth game of the third set, McEnroe picked up the key service break in the ninth game. Lendl netted a backhand volley to set up break point and then saw his forehand passing shot go wide to give McEnroe a 5-4 lead.

McEnroe fell behind 0-15 in the next game but won the next four points and took a 2-1 advantage in sets when Lendl netted a service return.

In the fourth set, McEnroe went on a tear of 12 straight points to take control. He broke Lendl's serve at love in the third game, hitting a backhand volley and forcing his opponent deep with another volley that Lendl netted. McEnroe took a 2-1 lead when Lendl netted a forehand.

McEnroe later came back for the doubles final, but he and partner Peter Fleming lost to the second-seeded team of Kevin Curren and Steve Denton, 6-4, 7-6 (7-2). McEnroe and Fleming were seeded No. 1.

Kite holds on to nip Caldwell, Peete in Crosby

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Tom Kite's name is right up there among golf's biggest money winners of all time, but the quiet, soft-spoken little Texan says he has a long way to go before he is satisfied he belongs with the best.

On Sunday, battling his own concentration, a wet golf course and a belated challenge by perennial runnerup Rex Caldwell and Calvin Peete, he hung on for a 73 that gave him the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am title by two strokes.

Kite, winner of the Vardon Trophy for the lowest score average on the PGA Tour the last two years, shot a Pebble Beach course record 62 in the third round Saturday and took a two-shot lead into the final 18 holes.

He started out with three birdies in his first six holes and after eight holes, he was on top by six shots.

But then he faltered, giving Caldwell, Peete and Bob Gilder a shot at him. Three consecutive bogys from the 15th through the 17th holes threw a big scare into Kite, but then Gilder fell back and so did Caldwell, and the title went to Kite.

"I'm awfully glad to get the win," said a relieved Kite. "I got a little complacent. I got a little carried away. I guess I was a little anxious to get my name on the trophy."

Kite's 72-hole score was 12-under-par 276 and it won him $58,500, pushing his career earnings to $1,723,715 and into ninth place on the all-time list. Caldwell and Peete tied for second and won $28,600 each, making it the third straight tournament in which Caldwell has wound up second. Their score was 10-under 278.

Then came Danny Edwards and Gilder, who beat Caldwell in a dramatic eight-hole playoff at Phoenix last week, followed by Jack Nicklaus. The one-time Golden Bear finished four shots behind Kite and won $11,700 to become the first golfer ever to top the $4 million mark.

Kite said winning a Crosby title always has been one of his goals because he rates Pebble Beach as his favorite golf course.

"This is one tournament you see your sights on," he said. "There's always a strong field so if you win you know you did something worth remembering. Also, winning this tournament is a stepping stone, but I have a long way to go to complete my goals for this year."

Kite said he didn't feel secure about winning the Crosby until his third shot on the final hole landed on the green.

"It was that kind of day, and we all know what this golf course can do to you," he said. "When you beat Peete, in my mind you have accomplished something. Now I know how Tom Watson felt last June."

Watson won the U.S. Open at Pebble last year and rates it as his greatest accomplishment, even though he has taken two Crosby titles along the way.

This time, Watson finished five shots behind Kite at 281, along with young Ken Green. Defending champion Jim Simons didn't make the cut for the final round.

NFC edges AFC

HONOLULU (UPI) — Danny White of the Dallas Cowboys hit Green Bay's John Jefferson on an 11-yard touchdown pass with 31 seconds remaining Sunday to rally the NFC to a 20-19 victory over the AFC in the Pro Bowl.

With the NFC trailing by six points with 2:12 to go and the ball on his own 20, White marched his team the distance by completing six passes, including a critical 13-yard pass on third down to Jefferson, who made a diving catch at the 11.

The march was helped along by a 15-yard puntsmanship conduct penalty and a 1-yard pass interference call against the AFC.

The NFC trailed 19-10 after three quarters, but Mark Moseley of the Redskins, who earlier missed four field goal attempts, connected from 42 yards out to cut the margin to 19-13 and set the stage for the White-Jefferson hook-up.

The NFC history, its eighth in the 13-game series, offset a record-breaking performance by Dan Fouts of the San Diego Chargers, who passed for 241 yards and one touchdown. Fouts' yardage topped the mark of 173 set by Steve Bartkowski of Atlanta two years ago.

Fouts got the AFC off to a lead by teaming up with Wesley Walker of the New York Jets on a 34-yard scoring aerial in the first quarter. The AFC increased the margin to 9-0 when defensive end Art Sullivan of Kansas City tackled Washington quarterback Joe Theismann in the end zone.

But the NFC moved into the lead in the second period on a 3-yard run by Atlanta's William Andrews and Moseley's 35-yard field goal.

A 29-yard field goal with four seconds remaining by San Diego's Rolfe Benirschke gave the AFC a 12-10 halftime lead.

Los Angeles Raiders' rookie running back Marcus Allen increased the AFC's lead to 19-10 on a 1-yard run in the third quarter.

Miller No. 1 bowler

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Mark Miller made a sweep of the individual awards as the Twin Falls Men's Bowling Association City Tournament came to a close Sunday at the Bowldrome Ltd.

Miller won the all-events handicap (2,262) and scratch (2,073) titles as well as the high scratch series (775) and teamed with Eddie Chappell to win the handicap doubles (1,533) and scratch doubles (1,366) crowns.

Larry Smith had the high single game of the tourney, a 288.

The team scratch and handicap title went to the Bowldrome Travelers. The team is composed of Chappell, Ron Dawson, Fred Ott, Wayne Parsons and Arne DePaal. The team's scores were 3,486-handicap and 3,000-scratch. Smith's Roofing took second place.

Parsons rolled the high handicap singles, a 778, while Charlie Gill was second with a 770. Miller had a 686 scratch singles total.

Ted Bear Sr. and Ted Bear Jr. finished second to Chappell and Miller in the handicap doubles with a 1,478-point total.

Sun Valley skiers triumph

By TED DYER Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — It was a banner performance for Sun Valley racers in the final round of the sixth annual Allan Patterson Memorial Ski Race Sunday.

Both first-round leaders, Jeff Sarchett and Abbi Fisher of the Sun Valley Ski Team, triumphed convincingly in the slalom competition. Sarchett, who led by only one tenthr of a second after Saturday's giant slalom runs, prevailed by more than two seconds with a time of 73.91 seconds to become the first member of the Sun Valley team to win the men's combined trophy.

"There were a couple of good guys, but they fell down," said the 18-year-old Sarchett. "I had an above average day."

Aldo Stansauljevic of Park City

Utah, who was hot on Sarchett's tail after the first round, took a spill five gates from the finish of his first slalom run, ending his bid for combined honors.

Stansauljevic was unavailable for comment, but Sun Valley Coach Lane Monroe said, "He knew he could put some pressure on Jeff with a good run, and he just got going too fast."

In addition to the fact that 49 of 100 boys and 24 of 48 girls fell, the men's field was further thinned by the absence of four members of the Sun Valley team who left after Saturday's runs to compete in the U.S. Nationals at Copper Mountain, Colo.

Matt Luhn and Dan Stelma, who finished third and fourth in giant slalom competition, were among those who fell.

Fisher, 25, dominated women's action for different reasons. She won Saturday's giant slalom in convincing fashion and followed that with an equally strong performance in the slalom Sunday.

Fisher posted a time of 72.88 seconds to beat Yvette Pelletier of Bogus Basin by almost three seconds.

A member of the U.S. Ski Team, Fisher admitted she had an edge over her competition: "I'm ahead of all of them age-wise and skill-wise. It was fun, but I had to put out to win. I wasn't skiing well (with the U.S. Ski Team) in December; so I didn't go to Europe, but I'll join them in a week."

Big Sky cage race going as expected

By United Press International

The 1983 Big Sky Conference season reached the halfway mark this weekend, and thus far the league is living up to its pre-season billing.

Last November a poll of the coaches picked defending champion Idaho, Montana, Nevada-Reno and Weber State to be the Big Sky's top four teams and advance into the league's post-season playoffs.

And, as of Saturday night, that's exactly what is happening in the Big Sky as Montana leads the standings with a 6-1 league record, while Idaho, Nevada-Reno and Weber State are all tied for second with 5-2 marks.

The Grizzlies took over sole possession of first place this past week, handing Nevada-Reno its second league loss of the season with an 84-56 Montana victory Thursday night in Missoula, and Montana then beat Northern Arizona 54-50 on Saturday night to stay ahead of the pack.

The only two things that appear to be changing in the Big Sky are: 1. Weber State's new offense; and 2. Nevada-Reno's recent lack of scoring.

The Wildcats had been struggling on an offense since early December, winning games by rebounding and defense. But last Monday night Weber State demolished

Jerry Miller wins ISBA event

POCATELLO — Twin Falls bowler Jerry Miller won first place and $300 in the monthly Idaho Scratch Bowlers Association Tournament held Sunday at Tough Guy Lanes. Miller was the No. 4 qualifier for the five-man finals with a 1,676-pin total. He defeated Idaho Falls' Tom Welch 192-154 in his first match, defeated No. 3 Bob Harvey of Boise 192-173 in his second match, took No. 2 Orrin Woodbury of Burley 209-164 and then topped Boise's Ray Schler 192-172 in the finals. Schler was the No. 1 qualifier at 1,732. Paul Miller had the high game of the tourney, a 277, and finished with a 1,572-pin total.

Sage gymnasts take 3rd, 4th

POCATELLO — Teams from Sage Gymnastics placed third and fourth Saturday in an eight-team meet held at Sports World. Sage's Class I team took third while the Class II team placed fourth. Melissa Butcher was the top scorer for the Class I gymnasts while Shawna Stutzman paced the Class II girls. Teams from Montana, Utah, Idaho and Oregon competed in the meet.

Lloyd triumphs in 1st event

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (UPI) — Chris Evert Lloyd, playing her first tournament of the year, defeated Andrea Jaeger, 6-3, 6-3, Sunday to win a $150,000 women's tennis tournament. "I'm happy the way I played because I don't think I lost much from the way I was playing at the end of last year," said Evert, the top seed. The match was played in a strong wind that hindered both players.

Lopez plays 26th tour victory

MIAMI (UPI) — Nancy Lopez, overcoming a shaky start, settled down and shot a 73 Sunday to win the second event of the LPGA schedule, her 26th tour victory. The 1-over-par round over the 6,211-yard Turnberry Country Club course gave her a 72-hole 263, three strokes under par, and good enough for a one-shot margin over four other golfers. Ted for second place were defending champion JoAnne Carner with a 71, Pat Bradley with a 71, Stephanie Farwig with a 73 and Betsy King with a 71. Lopez' first prize of $22,500 upped her career earnings to $376,660 as she begins her sixth year in the LPGA tour. That leaves her $23,340 short of joining Carner, Whitworth and Dorina Caponi in the exclusive millionaires club.

Cardinals want Junior back

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The St. Louis Cardinals want linebacker F.J. Junior back next year but say a decision on whether or not he will be allowed to play is up to NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle. Junior, a starter for the Cardinals in his only two years in the league, pleaded guilty Friday to possession of cocaine, a felony, in Tuscaloosa, Ala. He was sentenced to two years in prison and fined $200. Junior immediately applied for probation, and a court hearing on that request was set for March 17. He remains free on a $1,000 appearance bond. "I would like to have him back and I anticipate Coach (Jim) Hanifan would, too," St. Louis owner Bill Bidwill said. "But it's Commissioner Rozelle's call."

Mancini wins unanimously

SAINT VINCENT, Italy (UPI) — World Boxing Association lightweight champion Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini of the United States Sunday won a unanimous decision over George Feeney of Britain in a 10-round non-title bout. "I needed a tough fight, and this certainly was one," Mancini said in the ring immediately after the fight in which both fighters drew blood.

Foyt helps Wollek win Daytona 24-hour race

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Pole-sitter Bob Wollek, with an unexpected helping hand from veteran A.J. Foyt, survived engine problems and monsoon-like conditions Sunday to capture the 24 Hours of Daytona. Frenchman Wollek's Porsche Turbo 935 took the lead at 5 a.m. and held on until the checkered flag fell at 1:30 p.m. MST for an eight-lap victory. Wollek completed 618 laps on the 3.84-mile road course at the Daytona International Speedway. The Porsche averaged 2,373 miles with an average speed of 98.888 miles per hour in the 21st running of America's only 24-hour sports car endurance test. The Wollek team — car manager Preston Henn, Claude Ballot-Lena and Foyt — earned $38,000 for the victory. Foyt, a four-time Indianapolis 500 winner, joined the Wollek team after the Aston Martin he was co-driving with Darrell Waltrip was forced to the sidelines Saturday night with engine trouble. Foyt and Waltrip were sixth when they retired from the race. Wollek had been displeased when he learned that Henn had invited Foyt to join his Porsche driving team. "He doesn't know the car and he doesn't know the race," Wollek said. "We've been working very hard. Now all you hear is that A.J. Foyt is driving the car." By race's end, Wollek had changed his tune. "I was concerned because we had had problems with our engine," Wollek said. "But he's a fantastic driver. Everybody knows that. It was nice to have A.J. with us." A team of Floridians — Randy Lanier, Terry Wolters and Marty Hinz — took second in a Chevrolet March. Third, six laps further back, went to a Mazda driven by Peter Hansler, Robert Reed and Rick Knopp. Wollek's victory marked the sixth consecutive year that a Porsche has won the event. High winds and rain, which fell during most of the race's final eight hours, brought out the yellow caution flag several times and actually halted the race for nearly an hour at midday.

Steve Mahre wins slalom, brother Phil leads Cup

ST. ANTON, Austria (UPI) — Steve Mahre of Yakima, Wash., won his second World Ski Cup slalom of the season Sunday, while his brother Phil, third on the day, took the lead in the overall World Cup standings as he stepped up his bid to win the trophy for the third straight season. Steve Mahre clocked 1 minute 51.44 seconds for his two runs to win from Andreas Zenzl of Liechtenstein, who was fastest on the first run but had an aggregate time of 1:51.49, with Phil Mahre finishing third in 1:51.61. That third place gave Phil Mahre victory in the combined event, which linked Sunday's performance to those in Saturday's St. Anton downhill. The 1981 and 1982 World Cup winner, who Saturday claimed his best downhill finish — fifth — picked up 51 points for his weekend's work to move to 146 points overall. He is followed by a trio of Swiss skiers — Peter Luescher, 135 points.

Peter Mueller, 123, and Pirmin Zurbriggen, 118. The Mahre twins benefited Sunday from the second successive withdrawal by Swedish slalom specialist Ingemar Stenmark, who booked a tip on his second run, just a week after dropping out of the Kranjska Gora slalom. Michel Canac of France took fourth place Sunday in 1:51.82. Ivano Edalini of Italy was fifth in 1:52.06, and Paul Frommelt of Liechtenstein was sixth in 1:52.27. "I won the race on the final part of the course where I skied extremely aggressively," Steve Mahre said. "I knew I was behind midway so I had to take all possible chances to win the race." Steve Mahre, who also won the World Cup slalom at Parpan, Switzerland, early last month, said he still felt some pain in his left shoulder, which he injured in an exhibition race at Parpan just after his earlier slalom win. "It still hurts, but it didn't bother me too much," he said.

the rebounding." In both ways last week, Weber State had five players in double-figure scoring to produce its most balanced offensive performances of the season. Montana's Derrick Pope was the big man for the Grizzlies in both their wins. Pope scored 20 points against Nevada-Reno and 17 against Northern Arizona, and he had 21 rebounds in the two victories. Idaho was also a double winner last week, beating Idaho State 87-70 on Tuesday night and knocking off Boise State 67-56 Saturday night. Phil Hopson led the Vandals with 17 points against the Bengals and 22 at Boise State.

In other games last week, Montana State beat Northern Arizona 71-59 Thursday night, but the Bobcats lost 63-61 to Nevada-Reno on Saturday night. Idaho State is in fifth place in the league standings at 3-4, while Boise State and Montana State are both 2-5, and Northern Arizona is winless in seven league games.

Sunday's action concluded the tourney. The Twin Falls Women's Bowling Association City Tournament, with three more days of competition left, is being paced by Deolne Moore. Moore's 1,636 total is good for first place in the all-events scratch total and she also has the high game of the tourney, a 246, as well as first and second place in the handicap singles with series of 501 and 574. A team sponsored by Magic Bowl is first in place in both team scratch and team handicap events, at 2,495 and 3,156. Minil Lube is second in both categories at 2,489 and 3,065. Seeks more coverage of bowling

First of all, many thanks to the sports editor for using from two to five pages of news print and pictures to cover sports such as football, basketball, baseball, prize fights, etc. A job well done. Now, since we have bowling in Twin Falls and Magic Valley, which is a sport all members of a family can participate in, from Bantams to Seniors of 90 years or older, why don't we rate a bit of coverage? There is hardly ever any news about the pro bowlers who are qualifiers for the Pro Bowlers Tour. We have men in Twin Falls who do participate quite often. I doubt that many people know this. In Twin Falls alone, we have 1,290 registered WIBC Women Bowlers. Approximately 250 or more Junior Bowlers and 1,140 men who are registered ABC bowlers. In Magic Valley, we have bowling in Shoshone, Bellevue, Jerome, Weippe, Bluff, Filer, Mini-Cassia, all of which is a part of your newspaper coverage. This past week, we had both a Men's and Women's City Tournament going on. You did manage to get a little item in for the women, thanks to Ellen Day for taking it down to your office. I didn't find a thing about what the men did over the weekend. I heard there was a game of 280 rolled by someone. (280 is a perfect game). Could this be gossip or did he really bowl this score? At the state level, the State Women's Tournament is being held at Nampa. A total of 886 five-woman teams of 4-130 women bowlers competing. About 250 of these teams are going from our Magic Valley area — 80 of these teams are from Twin Falls. (Still no interest bowling.) I have written this letter just to justify that there is a great interest here in Magic Valley for bowling and I think the sports editor ought to make a little effort to get a bowling column and see that there are some correspondents to see that it gets the paper and printed after they make the effort to send it to the paper. The weekly scores are great, but there again, if you can't make the top 10 high scores, your name is never mentioned. I'm sure our neighboring towns would appreciate getting a little publicity, also.

LET'S TALK
FEBRUARY 6th & 7th

For 80 years, HARLEY-DAVIDSON has been a name synonymous with quality and dependability, power and performance. Now that we've again independently owned, our leadership role as America's only motorcycle manufacturer is stronger than ever, reflected in our excellent profit margins.

If you're interested in learning about the dealership opportunities in your area, we'd like to meet with you informally to talk about our sales and profit projections, company programs, etc., and answer your questions. You'll find HARLEY-DAVIDSON extremely supportive of its dealership network, or if you're interested in selling our 100cc to 1340cc heavyweight motorcycles and genuine HARLEY-DAVIDSON parts, accessories, oil and clothing.

We also train our dealers and their mechanics to become service experts through our continuing program of factory service schools and clinics. In addition, we back our dealers with sales aids and training, management guidance, factory warranties, high profit margins, intensive financing, insurance programs and our intense multi-million dollar national advertising campaign.

No franchise fee is required, but working capital of $40,000 is necessary for a new business. Lesser investment may be possible for existing businesses.

Find out more about this challenging and rewarding business venture by meeting with HARLEY-DAVIDSON representative, Chuck Brix, who will be available Sunday and Monday, February 6th & 7th, at the Cottonree Inn, 1415 Bench Rd., Pocatello, Idaho. Pimm says Utah team lucky to defeat BYU for league tie

By United Press International

Utah Coach Jerry Pimm, whose team shares first place in the Western Athletic Conference as a result of beating Brigham Young 75-72, was happy with the end result but less than satisfied with the means of getting there.

"We were damn lucky to win," Pimm said after Saturday's game in Salt Lake City. "Our lack of rebounding and missed free throws in the second half almost cost us the game."

He said Utah missed "a potential 15 points" at the free throw line. The Utes nearly lost the game in the final five minutes, hitting just six of 14 free throws down the stretch as BYU narrowed a deficit that reached 11 points in the second half.

"We're pleased to be in a tie for first place, but we got to play like we did in the first half to be a good team," Pimm said. "The way we played in the second half, we should have got beat."

WAC

BYU Coach Frank Arnold, meanwhile, had his troubles in the first half.

"We lost the game in the first half," he said. "We made more than a few defensive mistakes in the first half."

Both teams were 6-2 in league play after Saturday's contest, sharing the conference lead with Texas-El Paso. Utah's overall record rose to 11-10, while BYU's fell to 10-11.

UTEP preserved its share of the WAC lead by downing San Diego State 52-50 Saturday after being upset by Hawaii 56-55 on Thursday.

The Rainbow Warriors, fourth place in the WAC at 5-3 and 13-7 overall, beat Colorado State 60-57 Monday en route to the victory at UTEP, but they fell to New Mexico 90-83 in a Saturday game. The Lobos maintained their 11th-place league standing, but they found themselves sharing the spot with San Diego State after suffering an embarrassing 61-37 defeat at the hands of the Aztecs on Thursday. SDSU defeated Air Force 71-47 earlier in the week.

New Mexico and SDSU both were 4-4 in the WAC. The Lobos' overall record was 12-4, while SDSU improved its overall standing to 13-6.

Colorado State moved up from the cellar to seventh in the league after beating Air Force and Wyoming in a pair of close games.

The Rams, after their loss to Hawaii, downed Air Force 48-47 on Thursday and beat Wyoming 50-48 Saturday to improve their record to 3-6 in the league and 7-13 overall.

Wyoming, at 1-6 in WAC play and 9-11 overall, was eighth in the standings, while Air Force occupied the cellar with a 1-7 conference mark and an 8-10 overall record.

Tulane ends Memphis' win streak; Smith sets mark for 20-win years

By LOGAN HOBSON UPI sports writer

Memphis State Coach Dana Kirk will not want the next dance to be with Tulane.

"Today was a tough waltz," Kirk said after his 11th-ranked team upset 58-56 at home by Tulane Saturday. "Things have been really good to us this year, and we had a tough time today. We'll have a tough time Monday (against Wichita State)."

"Good teams bounce back, and we'll bounce back."

Tulane Coach Ned Fowler said the victory could mark a turning point for the Green Wave.

"We started the year off right here," Fowler said. "This is the type game we need to win. The guys played very good defense."

Kirk said his team could not afford to worry about the loss, which ended a 29-game winning streak in the Mid-South Coliseum, and added the outcome would have been different if Tulane was able to control the pace of the game and "had enough patience to secure the thing."

"We had several chances to win," he said. "I thought when we stole the ball at halftime that it was history."

Paul Thompson hit for 18 points to lead Tulane in the Metro Conference battle.

Tulane took a 29-24 halftime lead and retained its composure in the second half, leading by as many as seven points.

Tulane controlled the tempo with a patient offense that helped the Green Wave shoot 58.1 percent from the field. Memphis State shot 43.1 percent.

John Williams collected 13 points and seven rebounds for Tulane, which bettered its record to 11-8 overall and 3-3 in the conference.

Memphis State, 17-2 and 4-2, was led by Andre Turner's 16 points. Keith Lee, the Tigers' high-scoring forward, was held to 14. Lee hit on seven of 17 shots from the field and did not attempt a free throw.

In other games involving Top 10 teams, No. 1 North Carolina, walloped Furman 78-43, No. 2 Virginia trounced Duke 105-84, No. 3 Nevada-Las Vegas escaped past Cal-Irvine 70-68, No. 4 St. John's clobbered Seton Hall 82-57, No. 6 Indiana toppled No. 18 Minnesota 76-51, No. 7 UCLA outspurred Washington 84-65, No. 8 Houston downed Texas A&M 86-66, and No. 10 Missouri beat Kansas State 82-50. No. 9 Arkansas was idle.

In the second 10, it was Boston College 76, No. 11 Villanova 70; No. 12 Louisville 85, Lamar 60; Purdue 60, No. 13 Iowa 57; New Mexico State 66, No. 14 Illinois State 50; No. 15 Kentucky 76, Alabama 70; Southern Cal 56, No. 17 Washington State 49; No. 19 Oklahoma 102, Iowa State 74; and No. 20 Auburn 62, Florida 51.

On Sunday, Patrick Fwing scored 20 points and pulled down 11 rebounds and David Wingate added 19 points to lead No. 16 Georgetown to a 71-65 victory over DePaul at Landover, Md.

The Hoyas built a 17-point lead in the first five minutes of the second half but the Blue Demons pulled within six points, at 55-49, causing Georgetown Coach John Thompson to order his team into its four-corners offense. The Hoyas stalled most of the final nine minutes away to win improve to 16-6 with their seventh win in their last eight games. Freshman Tony Jackson had 22 points, 16 in the second half, for the Blue Demons, who had a five-game winning streak snapped and fell to 12-7.

At Charlotte, N.C., the Tar Heels' easy victory enabled Dean Smith to become the first major college coach to record 13 straight 20-victory seasons. Sam Perkins and Michael Jordan led a balanced attack with 13 points each as North Carolina rolled to its 17th straight triumph.

At Charlottesville, Va., Virginia won a top for Thursday's showdown with top-ranked North Carolina by demolishing Duke as Tim Mullen powered the Cavaliers with a career-high 23 points. Mullen scored 20 points in the first half as Virginia ran its record to 19-2, 7-1 in Atlantic

College basketball

Coast Conference play, North Carolina, 7-0 in the ACC, handed Virginia its only conference setback 101-95 on Jan. 15.

At Las Vegas, Nev., freshman Eldridge Hudson hit two free throws with five seconds left to help Nevada-Las Vegas escape Cal Irvine. With the score tied at 68, UCI's George Turner fouled Hudson, who made two free throws to give the Rebels a 70-68 lead.

At New York, David Russell scored 21 points and Chris Mullin added 18 to enable St. John's to move back into first place in the Big East conference. St. John's, 19-2, raised its Big East record to 8-2. Seton Hall is winless in 10 conference games and is 4-16 overall.

At Bloomington, Ind., Ted Kitchel scored 20 points and Uwe Blab added 15 to power Indiana in a Big Ten matchup. The victory gave Indiana sole possession of first place in the Big Ten with a 7-2 conference record and raised its overall mark to 17-2.

At Los Angeles, forward Kenny Fields scored 14 of his 22 points in the second half, leading UCLA. The Bruins squandered a 13-point, first-half lead and fell behind by a point when Fields and reserves Gary Maloncon and Nigel Miguel sparked a 22-8 rally that put the game out of reach. At College Station, Texas, Michael Young, Clyde Drexler and Benny Anders fought off a Texas A&M rally late in the first half as Houston coasted to its 13th straight triumph. The Cougars are unbeaten in nine Southwest Conference games and raised their overall record to 18-2.

At Columbia, Mo., Steve Stipanovich scored 21 points and Greg Cavanaugh added 16 to spark Missouri to a Big Eight victory. Ron Jones also finished in double figures with 10 as Missouri gave Kansas State the biggest whipping in the 72-year history of the series, topping a 30-point triumph (48-18) in 1921.

At Boston, Michael Adams scored 18 points and John Garris had 19 to enable Boston College to atone for a 79-72 defeat suffered at the hands of the Big East rival last month. The Eagles, who scored their final 18 points from the foul line, improved to 15-4 and 6-3 in the Big East.

At West Lafayette, Ind., Steve Reid, the smallest player in the Big Ten, made a 25-foot, three-point shot from beyond the top of the key with two seconds left to lift Purdue to its upset.

At Normal, Ill., guard Ernest Patterson scored 22 points to help New Mexico State snap ISU's 11-game winning streak and produce its first loss in the Missouri Valley Conference.

At Los Angeles, Ron Holmes poured in a career-high 18 points and Jacque Hill added 15 to boost Southern Cal to an upset victory.

Spring training to begin Feb. 17

By ERED McMANE
UPI sports writer

NEW YORK — Even though football won't go away, major league baseball is ready to start.

In only 10 days the first batch of spring training camps will open in Florida and Arizona, but this year baseball may have some competition for the sports fans' attention.

Football, in the form of the new United States Football League, will be around all spring and part of the summer. The league's 12 teams are currently in training at sites in Florida, Arizona and California and the league's regular season will begin on March 7 — only three days after the start of baseball's exhibition season.

However, once the regular USFL season starts only two clubs — the Tampa Bay Bandits and the Arizona Wranglers — are likely to compete with baseball for entertainment dollars during the spring training exhibition season. All the other teams will have left Florida and Arizona by the first week in March.

Baseball's spring training camps will open as early as Feb. 17 when Baltimore, Detroit, Minnesota, Oakland, Seattle and the New York Yankees welcome their batterymen. While no player can be forced to report before March 1 under terms of the basic agreement, most clubs will have held their first full squad workouts before that date.

The regular season opens April 4. Eight managers will be greeting their teams for the first time in spring training, although two of them — Bob Lillis of Houston and Russ Nixon of Cincinnati — took over their respective club during last season. Another manager, Billy Martin of the New York Yankees, is returning to a club he managed twice previously.

The new managerial faces belong to Steve Boros of Oakland, Doug Rader of Philadelphia, Mike Ferraro of Cleveland, John McNamara of California, Bill Virdon of Montreal and Joe Altobelli of Baltimore also are among new teams, although all three have managed previously in the major leagues.

Martin and Altobelli will undergo the most severe scrutiny. Many baseball people don't understand why he last year he under volatile owner George Steinbrenner, who has

Among the familiar faces who will be reporting to new spring training camps this year are Steve Garvey, Ron Cey, Carney Lansford, Tony Armas, Floyd Banister, Steve Kemp, Don Baylor and Manny Trillo.

Garvey, Kemp, Baylor and Banister all played out their options and signed with new teams while Cey, Lansford, Armas and Trillo were key figures in off-season trades.

NHL goalie suffers punctured ear drum

TORONTO (UPI) — Vancouver Canucks' all-star goaltender Richard Brodeur will be sidelined for two to three weeks with a punctured ear drum sustained Saturday night in a hockey game against the Toronto Maple Leafs, Canucks' Coach Roger Neilson said Sunday.

Brodeur was struck in the head and his face mask shattered from a hard slapshot by Toronto's Dan Daoust in the third period. The Vancouver goalie fell writhing to the ice, bleeding profusely, and was rushed to a hospital.

Doctors at Wellesley Hospital performed minor plastic surgery on Brodeur shortly after his arrival. A hospital spokesman said the net hospital was released Sunday so he could return to Vancouver and consult his doctors there.

"He had some plastic surgery to repair some damage around his ear," said Neilson. "His ear drum was punctured, and his ear was ripped pretty badly by the shot."

Neilson said the team would suffer badly from the absence of the netminder who anchored the Canucks' drive to the Stanley Cup final last year, and was to have been starting goalie in Tuesday's NHL all-star game.

But he said doctors had reassured him Brodeur would not suffer from any permanent hearing loss. "We expect he will be back with us in 100 percent condition," the Canucks' coach said.

NOTICE OF INTENDED RULE-MAKING

In compliance with Section 67-5203(a) (1), Idaho Code, notice is hereby given that the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, Division of Welfare, has initiated rule-making. The proposed amendments to the Code Book Numbers 0301-8301 and 0308-8301, involves the amendment of rules governing ELIGIBILITY, TITLE Chapter 1, and MEDICAL ASSISTANCE, Title 3, Chapter 9, Rules and Regulations of the Department of Health and Welfare. The action is proposed under the authority granted in Sections 56-20(2) and 39-106(1), Idaho code, for the purposes of complying with the provisions of 42 CFR, Part 435, effective as soon as possible.

The following is a descriptive summary of the intended action and of the principal issues involved:

Rule changes are proposed relating to Medical Assistance eligibility and coverage to:

1. Extend the protected eligibility period for institutionalized persons who would otherwise be ineligible because they do not meet residence requirements;
2. Provide that assignment of third-party liability is automatic upon application for Medicaid Assistance by operation of state law;
3. Add conditions for needy dependent and needy dependent maintenance costs as income deductions in determining financial eligibility for nursing home care;
4. Specify the basis for covering children in intermediate care facilities;
5. Modify the criteria applicable to "grandfathered" SSI recipients for determining whether the proposed amendment will be adopted as stated above, and persons or groups interested in the matter may submit oral or written testimony to the undersigned on or before February 28, 1983, at the aforesaid address. This department shall fully review and consider all written and oral submissions concerning this amendment received on or before this date. Unless twenty-five (25) or more persons or governmental subdivision or agency, or an association presenting a petition signed by not less than twenty-five (25) members of the organization, make a written request for a general hearing on the proposed amendment on or before February 28, 1983, no such general hearing shall be convened.

Dated this 13th day of January, 1983.

MAX HANSSON
Director, Idaho Department of Agriculture
PUBLISH: Monday, January 24, 31, and February 7, 1983.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

Notice is hereby given by the Planning and Zoning Commission for the City of Twin Falls, Idaho, that a Public Hearing will be held at the hour of 7:30 o'clock, P.M., on the 23rd day of February, 1983, at the City of Twin Falls, Idaho, on the application of STATEWIDE COLLECTIONS, INC. for such portion of the BUILDING EXPANSION PERMIT. If granted, the permit would allow the applicant to construct a 24'x28' addition to the existing building, on property located at 311 Falls Avenue North, Twin Falls, Idaho, and a legally described as:

Lot 7 of Block 42, Twin Falls Townsite

Notice is hereby given that any persons desiring to comment may appear and be heard at the appointed time and place.

The Commission will reduce its recommendations to writing and consider all written and oral submissions concerning this amendment received on or before this date. Unless twenty-five (25) or more persons or governmental subdivision or agency, or an association presenting a petition signed by not less than twenty-five (25) members of the organization, make a written request for a general hearing on the proposed amendment on or before February 28, 1983, no such general hearing shall be convened.

In the Matter of the Amendment of the Rules and Regulations Concerning Noxious Weeds.

NOTICE OF INTENDED AGENCY ACTION

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE, that the undersigned proposes to amend the regulations of the Department of Agriculture concerning Noxious Weeds pursuant to the procedure prescribed by Section 67-5203, Idaho Code, and that the authority for amending such regulations is provided by Section 22-2443, Idaho Code.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE, that the undersigned proposes to update the Noxious Weed Rules and Regulations and bring them into compliance with the changes in the Noxious Weed Law (Chapter 24, Title 22) made during the 1981 Legislative Session. This proposal adds "common cuprina" and "yellow toad flax" to the list of noxious weeds and substitutes "Skeletron burgrass (Franseria discolor Nutt.)" and "Rush skeleton (Chondrilla juncea) L." for "Creeping rag weed (Franseria discolor Nutt.)" and "Yellow flowered skeleton weed (Chondrilla juncea) L." respectively, which are different names for the same weeds. In addition, these changes allow the director to request that action be taken by the Attorney General to re-
