Woman helped Cupid

Valentines flowed from attic shop

WORCESTER, Mass. (UPI) — Americans spent millions of dollars this year sending Valentine's Day cards to win or keep each others' hearts in an industry started in the 1800s by a money-minded woman in a Worcester attic.

Esther Howland was one year out of college when she decided to try to sell her own creations of the lacy mementos that before then were fashioned individually, by hand.

She was living at home with her father, a stationer, and asked her brother to take a few samples with him and seek orders as he traveled New England with the family business.

He deluged her with some $5,000 in orders that first year in 1847.

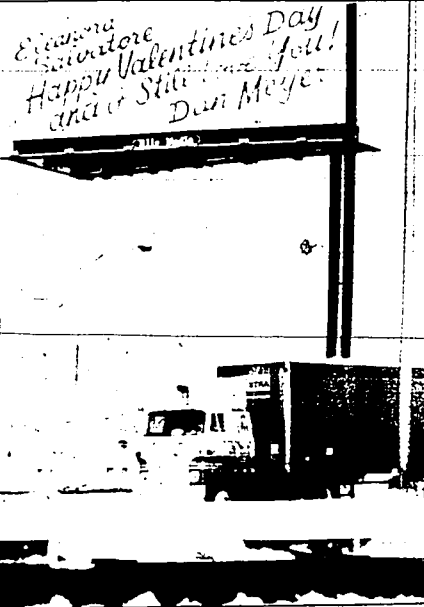

Valentines were made by hand then. Sultors snipped red paper and glued on lace, sometimes spending hours on the creations. They were an art and Miss Howland knew she couldn't fill the orders herself. So she dreamed up what was then considered a bright idea.

"Her system was assembly line. She started long before Henry Ford and she was the final inspector," says Irma Rabino of Mount Holyoke College. Miss Howland's alma mater, where they keep track of graduates' success stories.

"This business grew and grew so she became a major manufacturer," she said.

In fact, she is the industry's undisputed founder, according to Gary K. Smith of the National Association of Greeting Card Publishers.

"One often refers to an idea whose time has come. Esther Howland was a person with her own idea — her own personally designed valentine greeting cards.

Dan Meyer of Boise spent $6,000 to display this Valentine message to Eleanora Salvatore on a sign in Quincy, Mass.

Apparently the time had come. The Valentines Esther designed in the 1840s, the first in this country, were a smashing success," Smith said.

At the height of her business it earned more than $100,000 annually.

That's a mere pittance compared to today. Americans spent $2.4 billion on Valentine's Day gifts and cards last year, according to a study commissioned by the Omega Watch Co. The study found the holiday "recession proof" and estimated Americans would spend 7 percent more this year.

On cards alone, Americans will spend $900 million this year, Smith said.

But $100,000 in earnings — especially by a woman — was certainly nothing to laugh at in the 19th century. Miss Howland kept the business for four decades, finally selling out in 1888 to take care of her sick father.

Her creations are brought out for museum displays each year. Each was hand assembled, her own design of papers and lace, dollies and ribbon.

Miss Howland, who died in Quincy at the age of 78, managed to elude the effects of Cupid's arrows herself, for while she may have lost her heart a number of times, she never gave her hand in marriage.

Hinckley survives overdose of drugs

By FRANK T. CSONGOS United Press International

WASHINGTON — John W. Hinckley Jr., acquitted by reason of insanity of trying to kill President Reagan, took an overdose of drugs in his mental ward Sunday in a presumed third suicide attempt, officials said.

Doctors said the dose was potentially fatal, but they expect the presidential assailant to survive. It will be 24 hours before it is known whether he is "out of the woods," one doctor said.

Wayne Pines, a spokesman for St. Elizabeths Hospital, said Hinckley was found in his ward at the mental hospital at 6:15 a.m. MST and rushed to another hospital.

Dr. Jim Levy, president of Greater Southeast Community Hospital where Hinckley was taken, told reporters Hinckley was in "a serious but stable condition." At 8 p.m. MST, hospital spokesman Stephanie McNeill said Hinckley's condition was unchanged.

Asked whether Hinckley was in any danger of dying, Levy said, "Yes, he is."

But he added, "We have every reason to believe he is going to be all right. We think he is going to be all right. . . . (But) I will not be able to tell you until the next 24 hours whether he is out of the woods. He is still in serious condition."

"He is presently in stable but serious condition. He is on the respirator. His vital signs are stable. He is restrained somewhat," Levy said.

Hinckley twice before tried to kill himself, but hospital officials declined to call Sunday's incident a suicide attempt pending a full investigation. Pines said, however, it was a "reasonable assumption" that Hinckley had attempted to take his life.

Levy and Pines declined to say what drug Hinckley took or how he gained access to it. "Hinckley did take a substance. We have some ideas but would not want to characterize it," Levy said.

Pines said the presidential assailant was found on the floor in his room in semi-conscious condition, face up. There were indications he had fallen off his bed and there was vomit on the floor, he said.

Hospital officials said they expect Hinckley to be returned to St. Elizabeths when he recovers. They said Hinckley's parents, John and JoAnn Hinckley of Evergreen, Colo., had been notified. There was no word on whether they were at or en route to the hospital.

The movie "Taxi Driver," which Hinckley has said launched his infatuation with actress Jodie Foster, was shown in the Washington area Friday night. Levy said "my information is that he did not" see the movie.

Hinckley has said he shot Reagan to impress Miss Foster, who played a child prostitute in the movie that featured a loner stalking a political candidate.

In written responses to questions submitted by United Press International last fall, Hinckley said he had hopes of being released from the mental hospital and, "I am not suicidal."

A federal jury acquitted Hinckley June 21, 1982, of charges of attempting to kill Reagan and shooting three others. He was ordered confined at St. Elizabeths indefinitely.

Hinckley was overpowered by Secret Servicemen on March 30, 1981, outside a Washington hotel, moments after he fired explosive "Devastator" bullets that hit Reagan, White House Press Secretary James Brady, a Secret Service agent and a Washington policeman.

Hinckley, 28, a drifter when he shot Reagan, twice before attempted suicide while in police custody.

In the first, he secretly saved an undiscussed quantity of an aspirin substitute at the federal correctional facility at Butner, N.C., and took an overdose one afternoon. Law enforcement officials characterized the incident as an attempt to harm himself.

Social issues move to fore as legislators keep working

By MARK SHENEFFELT United Press International

BOISE — Social issues are likely to draw attention from Idaho legislators this week, now that the state's fiscal year 1983 budget problem appears to be largely out of the way.

The House and Senate last week narrowly approved a $83.2 million mix of budget cuts, tax increases and diversions of dedicated funds in an effort to prevent a deficit in the current budget year, which ends June 30.

The Republican-crafted package is to arrive on the desk of Gov. John Evans early this week. The legislature won't have to handle the issue again unless the Democratic governor uses his veto stamp.

Evans has been talking about using line-item vetoes to wipe out education spending cuts included in the budget-balancing package. If he does that, the GOP-dominated Legislature may get a chance to attempt to override his action this week.

While lawmakers keep an eye on the governor, they will be tackling some major non-budget issues. In the Senate, State Affairs Committee, a vote was scheduled this afternoon on a bill to outlaw malicious harassment. A hearing on the Idaho Human Rights Commission proposal last week drew a lot of support, but spokesmen for the Aryan Nations and Ku Klux Klan white-supremacy groups showed up to condemn it.

The same committee also might take its first look at a bill to raise Idaho's minimum legal drinking age from 19 to 21. The measure passed the House 39-30 last week, but sponsors fear their opponents might be able to rally sufficient support to kill it in the Senate.

House and Senate judiciary committees will continue their deliberations on how tough the state should get with drunken drivers. A composite bill molded from four drunken-driving crackdown proposals already introduced may emerge sometime this week, lawmakers said.

On the House floor, a vote will be taken on a bill to modify the controversial Little Davis-Bacon Act, which requires local governments to pay "public-works" construction employees "prevailing" wages at rates determined by the U.S. Labor Department largely based on union scales.

Rep. Dean Haagenson, R-Coeur d'Alene, a contractor, said the bill would allow contractors to reduce excessive wages on public works projects and cut project costs for local governments by 12 percent to 15 percent.

Haagenson said his bill contains a "floor" provision that would protect workers from unscrupulous contractors, but union officials have targeted the measure as a threat to fair pay rates.

The House State Affairs Committee this week is to consider a resolution ordering a wage freeze for state employees during fiscal year 1984.

Coast Guard ends search of sea

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (UPI) — The Coast Guard called off a futile search Sunday for nine missing crew members from a 605-foot coal ship that capsized and sank in a gale off the Virginia coast.

Only three of the ship's 36-man crew survived.

Coast Guard crews aboard rescue vessels spent the dark, early morning hours scanning the frigid waters with spotlights, then called in another helicopter at dawn.

"We are suspending the search," Petty Officer Barbara Smith said Sunday afternoon. "We haven't found anything."

Twenty-four bodies were recovered Saturday, but by Sunday rescuers had given up hope of finding survivors and were just looking for bodies floating in the choppy waters.

The 665-foot Marine Electric, loaded with 27,000 tons of coal and 147,000 gallons of fuel, was en route from Hampton Roads, Va., to Boston when it capsized about 1:30 a.m. MST Saturday off Chincoteague Island, a nature preserve famed for its annual pony swim and the setting for Marguerite Henry's book, "Misty."

Five of the dead crew members were identified after being taken with the three survivors to Peninsula General Hospital in Salisbury, Md. The remaining 19 victims were taken to the state medical examiner's office in Norfolk for identification.

But a spokesman for Marine Coal Transport Co. of Wilmington, Del., the company that owned the ship, said Sunday many of the victims' families still had not been located.

Company personnel were unable to determine why the ship capsized: the spokesman said.

"We're as much in the dark as anyone else as to how it all took place," he said.

One of the survivors said the ship floundered when water poured into the vessel through apparently faulty forward hatches. Gale-force winds had kicked up 12- to 15-foot seas.

A spokesman with the National Transportation Safety Board said the NTSB "would examine whether adequate precautions were taken to enable crew members to survive after being forced to abandon ship."

Smith said a Coast Guard board of inquiry will convene next week in Norfolk to investigate the accident.

Eastern cities start digging out after storm

Riders help woman across snow bank at bus stop on 42nd Street in New York City

By BRENDA W. ROTZOLI United Press International

With help from the sun, East Coast cities Sunday began the multi-million chore of clearing tons of snow from the region's worst storm in 40 years — a blizzard that killed at least 65 people and shut down transportation.

New York City braced for another onslaught of snow. Cleanup along the coast was aided by sunshine that slowly melted the top layer of snow, which stood up to 2 feet deep.

"The sun is doing a good job," said a state trooper in Harrisburg, Pa., where 2 feet of snow fell. "Things are moving along. Most of the roads are now open, but they're snow-covered."

The massive shoveling was expected to cost many millions of dollars, officials said. Hard-hit New York City prepared for yet another onslaught as the National Weather Service predicted a possible snowstorm for tonight.

In New Jersey, a 9-year-old boy died when he apparently slipped on a patch of ice and was plumed under an automatic garage door during the height of the blizzard, police said Sunday.

At least 14 other storm-related deaths were reported in the New York-New Jersey metropolitan area, many due to over-exertion from shoveling the heavy snow, the sixth-deepest snowfall in city history.

tracks the driver had mistaken for a snowbank, state police said.

At least three people were found dead in snowbound cars in West Virginia, authorities said, including a man and boy who apparently were asphyxiated when their car stalled in a snowbank.

The majority of the storm fatalities were caused by over-exertion, officials said. "Most of those who died were in their 60s or 70s and had a history of heart disease," said a spokesman for the New York medical examiner.

Airports closed by the storm slowly resumed operation Sunday, but flights remained severely limited — lengthening the difficulties for the thousands stranded by the storm.

"The airlines are having problems getting their planes here. They're scattered all over the eastern seaboard," said New York City Port Authority spokesman Mark Marchese. An estimated 8,000 travelers were stranded in New York City airports alone.

New York City shelters reported each night since the storm hit they provided housing for up to 5,000 people.

The storm saved one life — 26-month-old Ella Walker, who, clad only in a diaper, fell out a seventh-floor window in Jersey City, N.J. He landed in a 7-foot snowdrift, which cushioned his fall so that he was uninjured.

The National Weather Service called the storm the "worst in 40 years" for the East Coast, and said it broke a 50-year record for snowfall to date in New York.

Turin theatre fire kills 64
TURIN, Italy (UPI) — A blaze engulfed a crowded movie theater Sunday killing at least 64 people, many of them teenagers, and leading to death in a panic-stricken race to the exits, officials said.

Twenty victims were found dead of smoke inhalation, huddled in a balcony closet and bathroom which they apparently thought were stairwells, officials said. There were no fire exits on the second level, fire officials said.

At least 20 other people were reported injured.

The cause of the blaze was not immediately determined, but firefighters said it began on a first-floor corridor leading to the main gallery and quickly spread upward, blocking escape from the balcony.

Chief believes horse dead
DUBLIN, Ireland (UPI) — The police chief leading the search for kidnapped double derby winner Shergar admitted Sunday it was possible the racehorse, one of the most valuable thoroughbreds in the world, was dead.

"We have nothing to go on to suggest that the animal is still alive," said Chief Superintendent James Murphy. "I must now take seriously the possibility that Shergar is dead."

Murphy, heading the nationwide hunt for the armed gang that took Shergar from the Aga Khan's Ballymany Stud farm Tuesday night, said he was reconsidering his earlier judgment that a series of telephone calls to Northern Ireland last week was nothing more than an elaborate hoax.

Britain rejects control offer
LONDON (UPI) — Britain rejected a U.S. offer for joint launch control of U.S. Cruise missiles because it was costly and would require $1.6 billion in cuts in other defense projects, Defense Secretary Michael Heseltine said Sunday.

A new poll, however, showed 47 percent of Britons oppose testing the missiles in Britain and 49 percent want joint Anglo-American control of the firing button on the nuclear rocket.

Heseltine said Britain was offered joint physical control over firing through installation of a "dual key" launch system, but rejected it because the system costs $1.6 billion and would mean $1.6 billion of "defense equipment we could not have somewhere else."

Detroit police probe slayings
DETROIT (UPI) — Two men and two children were found shot to death Sunday in a southeast side home about six blocks from a motel where the body of the children's mother was discovered.

She also was the mother of four young children removed unharmed from the two-story flat, where police found the two dead children and two men, also shot to death.

Police refused to release the names of the victims.

No motive was determined in the slayings and no suspect was in custody.

Cable cars crash, 10 dead
CHAMPOUVEUX, Italy (UPI) — Three cable cars carrying skiers atop the Alps crashed more than 100 feet to the ground Sunday, killing 10 people and critically injuring two, police said.

By early evening, all the victims of the accident in the Val D'Aosta resort had been identified as Italians from northern Italy.

About 50 miles away in Modane, France, an avalanche overwhelped a group of skiers at the popular Alpine resort of Val Meiner, killing two of them, both French, police said. A third skier was hospitalized for frostbite.

Clouds bar volcano checks
VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Geologists Sunday wanted for the weather to clear around Mount St. Helens so they could go back inside the volcano to conduct tests.

"They are on stand-by," said A.B. Adams, a spokesman for the geophysics center at the University of Washington. "If the weather clears they'll go down."

Sharon leaves defense post
JERUSALEM (UPI) — Ariel Sharon formally stepped down as defense minister Sunday but retained a Cabinet seat and the Israeli government said the move fulfilled the recommendations of the Beirut massacre commission.

"I state again I will comply with the Cabinet's decision to transfer the portfolio of defense minister," Sharon wrote in a two-paragraph letter that pointedly avoided saying he was resigning from the post.

"I wish to state that I have no intention to resign from the government and I intend to continue to serve as a minister," the letter said.

McClure sees Soviet hand in nuclear freeze movement

BOISE (UPI) — Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said in an interview published Sunday he believes the Soviets are behind the nuclear freeze movement — although they are not the sole cause.

"When you say they are behind it, if you define that to mean they are involved in it, furthering it, supporting it, nurturing it, then I think it is true," McClure said in the interview, which was published in a Boise newspaper.

"If you say they are the exclusive reason this is happening and that nobody who is involved in the peace movement would be there except as being dupes of the Russians — then I think it would be false."

McClure said he has been classified evidence which proves direct financial support by the Soviet Union for the nuclear freeze movement but said he could not give any exact figures.

He said he cannot say how the Soviets are doing it because "that is the most sensitive part of it. If we say how they do it, then they know what our surveillance methods are."

The senator said he is "certainly interested" in seeking the post of Senate Republican leader if he wins re-election to a third term next year.

He does not expect former Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus to run against him in the Senate race, but does not rule the possibility out.

McClure said he believes President Reagan will run for another term, if Reagan should choose not to, George Bush, Howard Baker, Bob Packwood and Bob Dole would be likely Republican candidates, he said.

Salmon residents oppose wood rules
SALMON (UPI) — Over 1800 signatures were collected by Salmon residents to protest changes in Forest Service policies allowing free collection of firewood for personal use in the Salmon National Forest.

The petition was presented to forest supervisor Dick Hauff by John Prochko of Salmon.

Prochko said most of the signatures were from residents of Salmon, Pocatello, Stanley, May, Challis and Idaho Falls.

Hauff said the Forest Service is currently considering alternatives to decide whether it will continue charging for the firewood.

Almanac

Today is Monday, Feb. 14, the 43rd day of 1983 with 320 to follow.

This is Valentine's Day.

The moon is new.

The morning stars are Mercury, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening stars are Venus and Mars.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Aquarius.

They include Polish astronomer Nicolaus Copernicus, in 1473; English economist Thomas Malthus, in 1798; American suffrage leader, Anna Howard Shaw, in 1874; and comedian Jack Benny, in 1894.

On this date in history:

In 1886, the West Coast citrus industry was born as the first train load of oranges left Los Angeles for eastern markets.

In 1903, President Theodore Roosevelt signed a law creating a Department of Commerce and Labor.

In 1933, an eight-day bank holiday was declared in Michigan in a Depression-era move to avert a financial panic. Fifty million dollars was rushed to Detroit to bolster bank assets.

In 1979, Iranian guerrillas attacked the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and trapped Ambassador William Sullivan and 100 of his staff; forces of the Ayatollah Khomeini freed them.

A thought for the day: Entertainer Sophie Tucker said, "I have been poor and I have been rich. Rich is better."

Hearing Loss is not a sign of Old Age

Twin Falls • Electronic hearing tests will be given at the Beltone Hearing Aid Service office Monday and Tuesday from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Factory-trained Hearing Aid Specialists will be at our office at 239 Main Ave. W. to perform the tests.

Anyone who has trouble hearing is welcome to have a test using the latest electronic equipment to determine if his loss is one which may be helped. Some of the causes of hearing loss will be explained, and diagrams of how the ear works will be shown.

Everyone should have a hearing test at least once a year if there is any trouble at all hearing clearly. Even people now wearing hearing aids or those who have been told nothing could be done for them should have a hearing test and find out whether the latest methods of hearing correction can help them hear better.

The free hearing tests will be given Monday, February 14, and Tuesday, February 15 from 9:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. at 239 Main Ave. W. If you can't get there on Monday or Tuesday, call 733-0916 and arrange for an appointment at another time. In-home testing is also available.

Compromise on jobs bill welcome

By IRAR ALLEN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — With many states running out of unemployment benefits next month and Republicans unwilling to vote more austerity for the hungry and homeless, President Reagan's compromise jobs bill is welcome on Capitol Hill.

Jobs programs were being drafted by both parties in Congress when Reagan sent budget director David Stockman to House Speaker Thomas O'Neill's office late last week to present a possible compromise.

Reagan threatened last year to veto both parties' jobs programs on grounds they were too expensive and created "make-work" employment. The reported $4.3 billion White House initiative is priced well below the $5 billion to $7 billion measure O'Neill talked about the week before. But even O'Neill's projection was viewed by many House Democrats as too low. They were estimating $15 billion in jobs and relief.

Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., was drafting a $3 billion proposal, and Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., was putting together another, more expensive package.

Both the Reagan and Hatfield programs try to avoid creating too many new jobs. Instead, they would speed up the start of construction already in the $248.5 billion administration budget proposal for 1984.

Stockman and O'Neill were vague about specifics, and House Democrats, while happy about the prospect of quick action on a bipartisan proposal, cautioned that the administration program is only a "first step."

Reagan, asked if there is any new money in his package, replied, "There may be some, a little, but basically it is an acceleration of things that are already in the budget."

The apparent compromise "overjoyed" House Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas.

REP. PHIL GRAMM Sees 'certain irony'

Maverick returning to House

BRYAN, Texas (UPI) — Congressman-elect Phil Gramm said Sunday he will return to Washington today to take up the Republican banner on the House Budget Committee from which the Democratic leadership fired him.

Gramm said he is "looking forward" to being sworn in by his old political foe, Speaker Thomas O'Neill, but will not gloat.

The former "Boll Weevil" Democrat resigned his seat to run for it as a Republican after being removed from the Democratic-controlled budget committee for his strong support of President Reagan's economic policies.

In a special election Saturday he defeated nine Democratic challengers to win 53.1 percent of the vote and reclaim his seat without a runoff.

Gramm, 49, said the economic issues facing the nation will temper the irony of his being sworn in by O'Neill. "The seriousness of the business will dominate what personal life I might feel," said Gramm.

"I guess there's a certain irony to it," he said of the oath to be administered Tuesday or Wednesday. "I am looking forward to it."

Gramm defeated nine Democrats who had hoped to force a runoff in the traditionally Democratic district that stretches from near Dallas to near Houston.

Bush voices optimism on missile agreement

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President George Bush said Sunday there is a "distinct possibility" of reaching agreement with the Soviets on reducing nuclear missile deployments in Europe.

But Bush, who returned late last week from a trip to consult with allied leaders in Europe, said he does not know if it will happen in time to prevent the U.S. deployment of intermediate Pershing missiles.

Bush, interviewed on CBS' "Face the Nation," was asked if there is likely to be any new U.S. initiative to break the current deadlock at the Geneva negotiating table resulting from the Soviet rejection of President Reagan's "zero option" plan.

"Our position is that they should come forward with a new and reasonable proposal. I think their first position was not reasonable. I have reported to the president and he will decide whether something different is needed," he said.

Asked if he believes agreement can be reached in time to prevent the deployment of U.S. Pershings set for December, Bush said: "We are very serious about arms reduction and the negotiations that will lead to it. I cannot predict when, but there is a distinct possibility it will happen... Yes, it can happen."

If he were a betting man, he was asked, would he bet all 572 U.S. Pershings will be deployed or that some agreement will be reached before then?

"I wouldn't bet, but that negotiating track, our willingness to stay at the table long enough to achieve what we want — the elimination of an entire generation of these weapons — I believe will happen," he said.

Bush added, however, "Our deployment date is set and we are not going to vacillate or pull away from it. Our allies are together with us on that."

Under the zero option, the United States would forego scheduled deployment of 572 nuclear-tipped Pershing II and cruise missiles if the Soviets would dismantle the medium-range missiles they now have trained on Europe.

The Soviet counterproposal offered to cut back to 162 missiles — the combined force of the French and British missiles. The U.S. position is that weapons under the control of the Western allies should not be counted in the superpower negotiations.

Minor quake hits Wyoming

GOLDEN, Colo. (UPI) — A minor earthquake shook parts of southeast Wyoming between Laramie and Casper early Sunday.

The U.S. Geological Survey's National Earthquake Information Service said the tremor, which measured 4.0 on the Richter Scale, occurred about 65 miles north of Laramie and 30 miles southeast of Casper at 6:45 a.m.

Geophysicist John Minisch described the earthquake as "light" but said it may have been felt by residents of the few ranches in the area. He said a Wheatland, Wyo., radio station had received calls asking whether there had been an earthquake.

The earthquake was the third in Wyoming in recent weeks. Minisch said. He said light earthquakes were reported earlier in Yellowstone National Park in northeast Wyoming and southwest of Jackson near the Wyoming-Idaho border.

'Old ways' predate New Deal changes

The president says that his intent was deliberately misconstrued when he declared, in his State of the Union Address, that "we in government must take the lead in restoring the economy." He is "absolutely correct."

The Democrats in Congress who, by mischievous prearrangement, rose to give him a standing ovation when he uttered that sentence, knew full well they were "pulling his chain." The reality of the president's budget is that it contains no aggressive new actions either to restore the economy or ease the plight of those whose lives are adversely affected by it.

The president says some have interpreted his remark to mean "I was advocating a return to the old ways. I didn't mean anything of the kind."

Pardon our misinterpretation but it seems that the president is proposing, to the extent he can, nothing less than a return to "the old ways," very old ways.

There are, of course, many social programs now in place that did not exist 50 years ago; it is undeniable that because of those programs and because the current economic distress is substantially less severe than during the Depression, the resultant suffering overall now is not comparable. Yet, the president's essential response to the crisis, that there is little to do and the individual suffering of the unemployed must continue until the economy is cleansed, seems like pre-New Deal "old ways."

—The Boston Globe

Decontrol pays off

When President Reagan finally succeeded in abolishing price controls on domestic crude oil and gasoline on Jan. 28, 1981, critics in and out of the news media offered dire predictions concerning the effect on gasoline prices. The president, on the other hand, maintained that whatever gas price increases occurred would be temporary.

What happened, as reported in the Lundberg newsletter, is that gasoline prices jumped from $1.26 1/2 to an all-time high of $1.37.82 per gallon in March 1981 in the immediate aftermath of decontrol plus a steep oil price increase by OPEC.

But by January of this year, the average U.S. pump price had dropped back to $1.18.58 a gallon — 7.5 cents less than the January 1981 price.

Says Dan Lundberg, publisher of the newsletter, "When Reagan decontrolled crude oil, he in effect brought an end to OPEC's ability to hold up the world oil price. Decontrol has caused the subsequent failure on the part of OPEC to control its production and pricing."

Just thought we'd mention it. It's the kind of news you won't be hearing from the boob tube propagandists who persistently blame the president for all our economic woes.

—Manchester (N.H.) Union Leader

Tactic fails again

In terms of generating public support for their cause, independent truckers need to learn one thing. It is something that other labor groups, farm groups and civil rights groups as well need to consider.

That is, when you resort to violence, you lose your case.

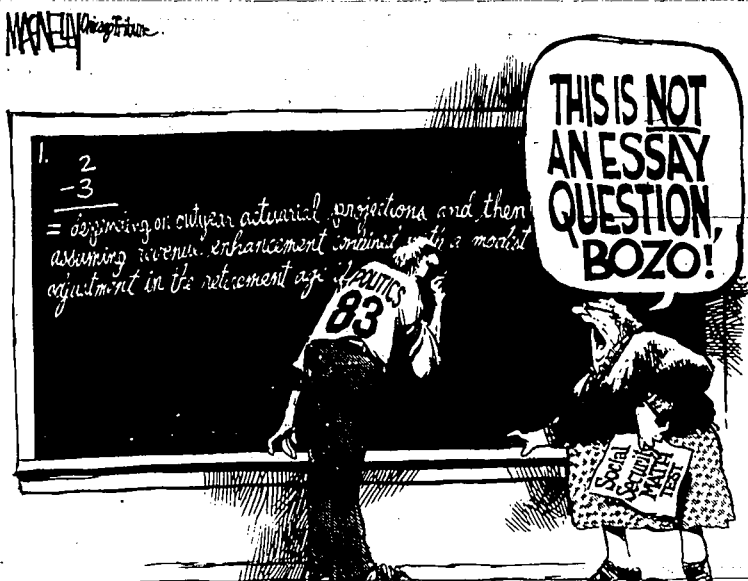

A trucker's strike that depends on truckers shooting to enforce is a failure the minute that happens.

It is a confession of weakness — in organization and unity certainly, and probably also in the basic rightness of the cause.

Congresses and presidents have shown many times that they will respond to significant public pressure, or to economic and political pressure when necessary, and have changed course on unpopular actions.

But no Congress and no president will change course for a movement that relies upon assassination and intimidation. Pray God they never do.

House chairman finds solid footing

WASHINGTON — Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., is not your ordinary, household-variety grouch.

Until the inexorable march of the seniority system brought him to the position of chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, he usually could be counted upon for a joke, a laugh, a pleasant word or a friendly slap on the back.

Yet here was his face on the front page — lips tightly pursed, bags under his eyes, unhappy lines running from his nose to the corners of his mouth, with the corners of that mouth turned way, way down.

It would be charitable to describe his expression as merely unhappy. He looked like Scrooge. The expression was appropriate, for Dan Rostenkowski wants to raise your taxes.

He wants to raise the tax on your future income. The taxes your estate will owe when you die, the taxes on the cigarettes that would help you die sooner, the taxes on your telephone calls and the taxes on interest income you may receive. That's not all, but it's most of it.

Smile, Danny, you're on the right track. First of all, you wouldn't feel any of this. What he is proposing is to repeal tax cuts that have yet to take effect. He does not propose repeal of the 10 percent income tax cut scheduled for July 1 — but after that, taxes would be frozen at then-current levels.

There isn't the slightest question that Congress, in the tax cuts enacted in July, 1981, cut revenues far below any cuts in spending it had the will to make. The inevitable result is massive deficits.

Last year, House Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., called President Reagan's proposed budget deficit of $91.5 billion for fiscal 1983 "mind-boggling." Now that budget's deficit has mushroomed to an estimated $208 billion. This year, Reagan's best friend in the Senate, Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., called Reagan's proposed deficit of $189 billion for fiscal 1984 "terrifying."

REP. DAN ROSTENKOWSKI Proposes repeal of tax cuts

Rostenkowski isn't proposing anything radical, like balancing the budget. He scowls as he tries to move the numbers from "terrifying" back to merely "mind-boggling."

There is much to scowl about. He will be asking a majority of the House and the Senate to admit they were wrong less than two years ago when they voted for all those tax breaks. Getting a congressman to admit he was wrong is like getting your child to love going to the dentist.

The problem will be worsened by the minority who voted against the 1981 package. There will be a mighty tendency to crow, "I told you so."

One of the people they will be crowing at is Rostenkowski himself, who voted for Reagan's proposals after his committee's recommendations had been defeated.

There won't be too many people crowing. In the Senate, the tax cut emotion was so high that only 11 senators voted against the final package. In the House the vote was 323-107.

Some of those who voted "no" have pretty good reasons to crow.

Rep. Donald J. Pease, D-Ohio, said in July 1981, "The truth is that [Reagan's proposal] will build in huge federal deficits in 1983, 1984 and on out."

Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., said, "We are guaranteeing the people — if all goes well, if every assumption goes through — that they are guaranteed three straight deficits in 1982, 1983 and 1984."

Being reminded of such warnings is enough to make anyone scowl.

Rostenkowski, however, is on solid ground. Congress went too far in 1981, and it has to get back to reality.

When the majority wouldn't go with Rostenkowski, he went with the majority. He would be a good man to lead Congress back from terrifying to mind-boggling even if he weren't the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. Since he is, he must.

Since he must, he might as well smile while he's doing it.

Otis Pike, a former congressman, writes his column for Newhouse News Service.

Hang on to Confederate money, boys

WASHINGTON — The old glut now seeping over the world has removed some of the urgency from recycling programs and other energy conservation measures. But I'm not taking any chances.

Rather than throw away the leaves from my desk and wall calendars as the months go by-by, I'm stashing them in a trunk in the attic along with some old ticker tape I've stored away in case there is another Lindbergh parade.

I already have January thus ensconced. On March 1, I'll pack away February, and so on for the rest of the year.

In 1994, by my reckoning, they'll all be back in sync and the entire 1983 calendar can be used again. I got the idea for this kind of recycling from the Sorg Printing Co., which has headquarters in New York's financial district and branch offices throughout the land.

Sorg sent its Wall Street clients replicas of an 1898 calendar rather than having a new one made. Chronologically, the two years are identical, 1983 being an echo of 1898.

Sorg was not necessarily being thrifty in its decision to replicate 1898, however. Calendars printed 85 years ago cost about 3 cents each, whereas reasonably accurate facsimiles run about $30 apiece.

The next opportunity for duplication will come in 1994. As to what 1983 calendars might cost 11 years hence, I am not prepared to say. But, what with inflation and all, I figure that reusing this year's calendars will save a tidy sum.

Even though calendars cost less than a nickel around the turn of the century, 1898 was, historically speaking, a really good year.

Feb. 15, for example, a Tuesday both then and now, was the day the battleship Maine was sunk in Havana harbor, thereby precipitating the Spanish-American War.

One thing that makes the 1898 calendar Sorg chose especially symbolic is its faded photograph of the Moose Creek Lodge, a ramshackle log cabin in the Yukon Territory that catered to prospectors during the Klondike gold rush.

Sorg, as you might have guessed, prints stock prospectuses. So the tie-in is apparent to one and all.

In 1985, perhaps, the company will distribute a 1923 calendar. Two years from now, we will observe the 56th anniversary of the "Black Thursday" stock market crash, and Oct. 24 again will fall on the fifth day of the week.

Dick West writes for United Press International.

Like it or not, newspapers must report some events

The word "fired" is something no employee wants to hear, but when the action comes in public, before peers and work colleagues, it can bring embarrassment and chagrin.

In the case of public officials, a newspaper has to report such actions, like them or not. If a school board decides not to renew the contract of a superintendent, that's news, and we're in the business of reporting news. No one expects us to ignore such an event in a community, and indeed, it would be irresponsible for us to do so.

But we can avoid sensationalizing such actions by headlines that do not reflect the sensitivity we try to apply to all our news coverage.

These issues have come up in our recent coverage of the decision by the Castleford school board not to renew the contract of Superintendent Ed Schenk.

In retrospect, we erred in using the word "fired" in the headline of the initial story reporting the board's action on Schenk, although no one disputes that the term is an essentially accurate description of the board's action.

But the headline, written by an editor, gave the story a sensational tone it didn't merit, and in retrospect, was in poor taste.

We've discussed the story and headline among the staff and recognize the need to be more careful with words of this kind, particularly when they carry a tone we don't intend. And we apologize for causing Schenk any embarrassment. That was not our intent, either.

A newspaper's job — and the one you expect us to do — is to report the news. It is a fact that Schenk's contract was not renewed. And it appears that the board took that action without appropriate notice or effort to provide reasons to either Schenk or the community.

There may have been a "disservice" to Schenk, and by implication an embarrassment to the Castleford community in the way the board handled Schenk's dismissal. That seemed to be one of the major themes that ran through a public meeting of the board this past week, but should criticism on these points be directed at the newspaper or at the board that took the action?

We don't mind taking our lumps when they're deserved, and we acknowledge an inappropriate headline, with a tone we didn't intend. But should a newspaper take criticism for publicizing an event in government in which every member of a community has an interest? I don't think so.

Did we humiliate Castleford by reporting its school board has dismissed the superintendent, apparently without an advance hearing? I don't think so.

It seems to me — aside from the inappropriate headline — that we've been doing a straight-forward job of reporting both the board's action and Schenk's response.

To the best of my knowledge, our reporting of the board's action is accurate. I have received no allegations that we have either mis-stated any facts in the board's dismissal of Schenk, or misquoted any of the participants.

In my mind, our reporter, Pat Marcantonio, has done a straightforward job in reporting the dismissal and its repercussions. That's our job.

In all reporting, we must weigh community sensitivity and concern for the effect of the reporting on the individuals involved against the right of people to know what's going on.

Neither is an absolute right, nor does one always prevail. Newspapers that always are pulling their punches because they are concerned about the "community" can soon become lap dogs to those in power.

On the other hand, no paper can run amok through a community, leaving apart people's lives and a community's sense of itself. That is as irresponsible as the other's cowardly.

In the case of the Castleford school board's action, we went to a public meeting — not an executive session — where any citizen has a right to be, and we reported what went on.

We apologize for the inappropriate headline. But beyond that, I think we handled the reporting as most of you would want us to.

Girl, 11, seeks new heart

ANDERSON, Ind. (UPI) — Every morning 11-year-old Sharon Stahler tells her parents to run and get the newspapers chronicling the fight to raise $140,000 for a transplant to save her from degenerative heart disease.

Doctors said Sharon needs a transplant operation, but the Stahlers don't know yet whether she qualifies for the procedure. If accepted, she would be the youngest candidate for a heart transplant in Stanford University's history.

The Stahlers learned their daughter suffered from cardiomyopathy, which affects the heart muscles, last November when a cold she suffered grew progressively worse.

Jarvik cited for invention

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Dr. Robert K. Jarvik, whose plastic and metal artificial heart is keeping Barney Clark alive in Utah, was named inventor of the year Sunday by a group representing inventors and copyright holders.

Intellectual Property Owners Inc. announced that its 10th annual inventor's award was going to Jarvik because of his development of the mechanical heart at the University of Utah.

"Invention has been called the last refuge of the rugged individualist," said Donald W. Banner, the organization's president and former U.S. Commissioner for Patents and Trademarks. "Dr. Jarvik certainly fits that mold.

Jarvik, who holds five U.S. patents, was to receive $1,000 and a certificate for being named inventor of the year for 1982.

RAJNEESHUPURAM, Ore. (UPI) — A financial adviser for a commune said it will spend $11 million to $12 million in Oregon this year.

Ma Prem Savita, an adviser for the commune set up by followers of an Indian guru, Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh, and $5 million will be spent in the first half of 1983 to prepare for the annual religious festival in July.

Service honors 4 chaplains

MCKEESPORT, Pa. (UPI) — A veterans group Sunday honored chaplains of four faiths who gave up their life jackets and died so four sailors could escape a ship sunk by a German submarine 40 years ago.

The four chaplains were among 600 servicemen who went down with the troopship S.S. Dorchester in the North Atlantic Feb. 3, 1943.

"It doesn't make any difference what faith you are or what denomination; it was all for one God," said Bill Soriano of the McKeesport AMVETS, American Veterans of World War II, Korea and Vietnam.

Fugitive nabbed at shower

MIAMI (UPI) — Martha Libya Cardona, the nation's No. 1 woman fugitive and the alleged matriarch of a major cocaine ring, was arrested at a festive baby shower in Miami's Little Havana district on information from her ex-boyfriend, officers said Sunday.

Cardona, 36, the object of a nationwide search since she jumped $1 million bail two years ago, was arrested Saturday. She was held Sunday in the Dade County Women's Detention Center and will be transferred to a federal prison today.

Women's legs are getting longer. About an inch and a half longer than their counterparts 40 years ago. And almost half an inch wider at the calf. What's causing this lengthening of the lady's liltlesome limb of late? Shrug.

LEG WARMERS

Q. What's your Love and War man's stand on leg warmers, those droopy socks affected of late by so many fashionable youngsters?

A. He's not much into clothing. Au contraire. Still, if the costume tends to turn off admirers, he must make it his business to frown on same. Leg

BLM, cattlemen almost set for land swap

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — One of the final steps prior to the closing a land-exchange agreement between the Thorn Creek Cattle Association and the federal Bureau of Land Management has been announced.

The BLM has issued a formal notice of its intent to exchange public land in Jerome County for land that the cattle association owns in Gooding, Lincoln and Camas counties.

Joe Aiken, a real-estate officer for the BLM district office in Shoshone, says that the public will have 45 days to comment on the proposed exchange from the time the notice is published in the Federal Registry. The notice was sent for publication two weeks ago.

"If we have a number of protests," he says, "we will have to take another look at the proposed exchange and perhaps make some revisions. If we do not have any protests, then we can go ahead with the exchange and hopefully have it consummated by early summer."

Aiken says that the proposal calls for giving the cattle organization 135 acres of public land near U.S. 93 and Interstate 84 in Jerome County, in exchange for 1,000 acres of private land in the vicinity of Thorn Creek Reservoir.

Aiken says the public land is zoned for commercial use and is being acquired for potential commercial development.

In a meeting recently with the Jerome County commissioners, association members Les Silman and Dan Sandy explained their long effort to achieve an exchange of land. Silman said that because all of the Jerome County commissioners are new, he and other member of the association wanted them to understand what the proposal involves.

"We have no concrete plans at this time for the development, but believe it (the BLM land in Jerome County) is ideal for commercial development and would add to the county tax base," he said.

Although no decision has been made as yet, both Silman and Sandy say that their personal feelings are that the land should be leased for development.

"We are just cattlemen, and we don't have a lot of money. You probably know what the cattle market is these days," Silman said.

The cattlemen do not anticipate opposition to the exchange plan, Sandy said, but he asked the commissioners to support them in the event that someone does oppose the commercial development.

The BLM, if it acquires the land in Gooding, Lincoln and Camas counties, would use the area for multiple-use purposes, including grazing, recreation and wildlife preservation, Aiken says. Thorn Creek Reservoir, covering 130 acres, is a popular fishing area.

Aiken says that if there are no major protests to the exchange, then a final appraisal will be conducted and possibly acreage adjustments made to make the exchange more equitable.

Falling gas prices bring smiles

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Falling gas prices in Twin Falls have brought smiles to motorists' faces in recent weeks.

But the new low prices, down 12 cents in some instances, pose a much more difficult situation for some gasoline dealers, who are locked in a price war and are selling at dangerously low margins, several service-station owners said Sunday.

And prices will continue to drop unless there is an increase in demand, most service-station owners believe.

The new low prices reflect a surplus in the amount of gas that is available in the Western portion of the United States, as well as the recent collapse of the world price of oil, says Gary Wignall, the owner of United Oil, an independent retailer and wholesaler based in Twin Falls.

The problem with this situation, Wignall says, is that there is currently "more gas than demand." Since competition is "keen" to retain volumes, some stations are selling at as little as a 3 to 4-cent margin, he says.

If this continues, "some stations are going to have to go out of business," he predicts.

"It will be a case of survival of the fittest. There is nothing wrong with good, keen competition, but good business sense is going to keep the ones that survive, surviving."

United Oil currently is selling its regular gasoline for $1.079, the prevailing low price among independents, such as Mr. Gas, V-1, B-Rite and Sinker.

Different problems face dealers representing the major oil companies, says Lew Sittles, the owner of Lew's Texaco, off Addison Avenue.

While the independents are locked in a price war, the major oil companies have yet to pass the price break along to their retail stations, he says.

As a result, Sittles is selling regular for $1.24. Snake River Chevron is selling regular for $1.19.

However, Blue Lakes 66 and Lynwood-Chevron have both cut their prices to compete with the independents. Both offer the cash price of $1.079 for regular.

Some stations now rely on services other than selling gas, Wignall observes.

Sittles agrees. "If we didn't have our service bays, we would have closed up a long time ago."

But Sittles predicts that the major companies will cut prices soon. He may not be able to compete with the independents, but he has cut his price 9 cents since the beginning of the year.

In the coming months, gas prices will "very likely" drop below $1, Wignall says.

"Of course, the whole thing can change overnight," he warns.

On the West Coast, gas prices are already in the 90-cent range.

But Wignall says that local dealers cannot match that price because crude oil is not as available here as it is in the Rocky Mountain states.

And when there is surplus situations, the major companies would rather cut their prices where oil is readily available, he says.

Wignall says the effects of a drop in world oil prices can take as long as a month to six weeks to reach the Magic Valley.

Sometimes, price reductions may be retroactive, however. In that case, the effects would be felt immediately, he says.

Pickup collision kills man

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A two-vehicle collision Saturday night near Twin Falls claimed one life and left one other person in critical condition.

Pronounced dead at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center was 30-year-old Burton Brian Johnson, who listed his address as the Western Motel in Twin Falls.

A passenger in Johnson's small pickup truck, 21-year-old Tammy Warr of Twin Falls, was in critical condition in the MVRMC intensive-care unit Sunday night.

Both Johnson and Warr suffered massive head injuries in the accident. According to an Idaho State Police officer, the accident occurred at 10:20 p.m., at the intersection of Idaho 74 and Grandview Drive, about three miles southwest of Twin Falls.

The officer said Johnson was southbound on Grandview Drive and apparently ran a stop sign, coming into the path of a westbound, full-size, four-wheel-drive pickup truck, driven by 19-year-old Alex Neal Kunkel of Twin Falls.

Kunkel was unable to stop his vehicle in time to avoid the collision, and his larger vehicle struck the left side of Johnson's smaller truck. Both vehicles went off the south side of the road.

The Johnson vehicle came to rest 155 feet from the point of impact. The Kunkel truck was found 145 feet from the point of impact.

Both Johnson and Warr were found partially ejected through the right side of the truck, the ISP officer said. They were rushed by ambulance to the hospital. Johnson was pronounced dead at 11:49 p.m.

Kunkel's wife, Lori Dawn Kunkel, was taken by private vehicle to the hospital, where she was treated and later released. Kunkel did not require treatment.

ISP Corporal Rick Wright said the Kunkels avoided serious injury because they were riding in a much larger vehicle.

Sunday rain puts roads under water

TWIN FALLS — Rainstorms produced some minor flooding along Magic Valley highways Sunday.

But state highway officials said only patches of highway were under water. The situation required the caution of motorists, but it did not force any road closures, they said.

Three points along regional highways were under water. The locations were reported as: U.S. 83, between milepost 174 and 175, south of Shoshone; U.S. 74, four miles north of Shoshone; and U.S. 93, east of Carey.

Precipitation-measuring devices showed that .35 of an inch of rain fell on the College of Southern Idaho campus between 7 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Sunday. The moisture collected along some Twin Falls city streets.

But street storm drains were functioning properly, and no problems were reported, said Bob Hildreth, the city's street superintendent.

Twin Falls council to scrutinize proposed airline lease agreement

TWIN FALLS — City officials will take advantage of a special meeting today to review a proposed airport lease agreement with Skywest Airlines.

Twin Falls City Council approval of the lease would allow the St. George, Utah-based commuter airline to begin moving into its office at the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport.

The commuter airline is scheduled to begin daily flight service between Twin Falls and Salt Lake City on March 1.

The special meeting has been called to allow City Council to consider the data of the Harmon Park pool; deterioration of the pool has reached a critical point, with some city officials questioning whether it will be economically possible to operate the facility this year.

Skywest's lease application was added to the meeting agenda because the session coincides with the airline's request for action sometime in mid-February, says City Manager Tom Courtney.

In a related matter, Twin Falls officials also are scheduled to consider next week a lease agreement with Transwestern Airlines, which would allow the Logan, Utah-based commuter to construct a maintenance hangar at the airport.

The airline plans to build a 13,000-square-foot hangar, designed to house three aircraft, an office and a sleeping area for employees.

Transwestern officials plan to maintain two aircraft at the facility on a regular basis. Maintenance crews, consisting of 10 to 15 employees, plus two flight crews, would be stationed at Twin Falls.

Courtney says that a tentative lease has been forwarded to Transwestern officials for their review.

"Tentatively, it will go to the council on the (Feb.) 22nd," Courtney says.

Bank plans advance

TWIN FALLS — Bids for the construction of a new branch of the Idaho First National Bank in downtown Twin Falls could be sought as early as April.

Bruce Kramer, the project director for Idaho First, said late last week that April is the target date if all goes according to plan.

However, Idaho First's board of directors still must give final approval to the funds needed to build the bank, which will occupy the former site of the Magel Automotive Co. and several other small businesses at Shoshone Street and Third Avenue West, Kramer said.

Technically, that would leave the building as a "proposed project," he said, but construction drawings are 50 percent complete.

The architect for the building is CSHQA of Boise, Kramer said. A building of just less than 16,000 square feet, with four drive-up windows is planned.

As planned, the project will include 70 parking spaces, Kramer said.

Construction documents should be prepared by the end of March. At that time, Kramer said he believes they will be placed on display in the lobby of the present Twin Falls branch.

Magic Valley Symphony better than ever in togetherness

By WILLETTA WARBERG
Times-News arts critic

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Symphony Orchestra may have performed better than ever at its concert Saturday evening, marking its 24th season.

While there have been this or that to quibble over a few times during the concert, the togetherness in music-making of the guest conductor, Carson Wong, and the instrumentalists rarely disappointed.

This concert was special for everyone of any age because of the broad programming, which made critical reservations — such as occasional flatness in the string section — unimportant.

However, it would seem a respectful gesture to the conductor, orchestra and audience if late-comers would wait in the entrance hall until the first movement or selection is finished, and if parents with noisy infants would leave the auditorium to quiet them.

Unfortunately, the exciting and rustled hush of Saturday's concert at the College of Southern Idaho was broken by these disturbances.

It takes a professional to make light of this sort of situation, and the conductor and orchestra did just that.

Wong's selection of symphonic works for the evening was staggering and complex. Could the Magic Valley musicians make it through such works as Dvorak's "Fifth Symphony," Mussorgsky's "A Night on Bald Mountain" and Prokofiev's "Peter and the Wolf," and end together on the same beat? All the orchestra members are most demanding for each orchestra member and especially for the conductor.

Wong is not a flashy conductor. His primary concern is the composer's notes and how to put them into the most expressive and meaningful context. This was quite evident at this concert, as well as the Magic Valley Choral's Christmas program of Bach's "Magnificat."

The three numbers on the program were sensibly shaped and stuffed with nourishing Middle European late 19th- and beginning 20th-century sounds.

The orchestra's Dvorak met the terms of the new-music realism era, which quite often entertained rather unconventional and primitive harmonies. The orchestra sounded rich and gutsy playing such sophisticated folk music.

Tony Mennen's narration of Prokofiev's "Peter and the Wolf" was entertaining. Mennen has a pleasantly mellow voice, beautiful diction for this sort of job, and he made no attempt to use the orchestra for self-advertising.

And the small ensemble of instrumentalists who played along with Mennen made exciting listening. Because of the lightness of this orchestra fairy tale, one forgets the extremely difficult orchestration. The group showed fine precision and nuances in its playing.

It is common practice in programming to schedule the piece of music that's the main drawing card last on the program. But because of the type of audience anticipated Saturday evening, perhaps consideration should have been given to performing "Peter and the Wolf" on the first half of the program, so that the youngest members of the audience could have gone home.

There would have been a risk of losing a large part of the audience, but maybe that would have been a good risk to take — until the classical music appetite of this area's young people is developed further.

This was a fine concert. Kudos to every member of the orchestra and the conductor.

The occasional blunders were easy to overlook when one remembers that the orchestra is composed of persons from all walks of life — writers, newspaper editors, schoolteachers, truckers, doctors, housewives, etc., who make a living doing something else.

When do they have time to practice to get so good?

Prosecutors prepared to file embezzlement case again

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County prosecutors this week will refile embezzlement charges against a former bookkeeper of The Sandpiper restaurant in Twin Falls.

The move follows Judge Douglas Kramer's decision to dismiss the charge against 26-year-old Susan Blake, of 285 Flatline Ave. in Twin Falls, because prosecutors failed to file the charge on time.

Kramer's ruling, made in Halley, was issued early last week.

Blake, who is free without bail, was arrested in early January and charged with embezzling more than $3,000 from the restaurant over a three-year period.

She waived her right to a preliminary hearing and was ordered, on Jan. 7, to answer to the charge in district court.

Following such an order, Idaho law gives prosecutors 14 days to formally file the charge in district court.

But prosecutors failed to meet the statutory deadline.

Deputy prosecutor Kandace Kemp said the lapse stemmed from confusion over which judge would hear the case.

Both district court judges in Twin Falls County were disqualified from the case. Defense lawyer Kathi Epedli exercised her right to disqualify Judge Theron Ward from the case, while she did on Jan. 25, Judge Daniel Meehl was disqualified the following day.

That left Kramer, who sits in Halley as the administrative judge for the Fifth District, to assign either himself or another judge to the case.

"As soon as the blind-over order is signed, we file the information in district court," Kemp said. "This time, we just didn't know which district court to file it in. Perhaps, we should have been more aggressive in finding out."

Kramer acted on his own to dismiss the case, rather than on a request for dismissal by the defense.

The defense sought a dismissal with prejudice, which would have required prosecutors to provide new reasons for refiling the charge. Kramer's decision to dismiss the case without prejudice allows prosecutors to refile the same charge, although they must start proceedings at the magistrate-court level.

"My understanding is that we will refile it," Kemp said.

On the agenda

Here's a list of governmental meetings that are scheduled to take place this week in the Magic Valley. This list is compiled from advance schedules. The Times-News suggests that you confirm the information by calling the appropriate clerk's office before attending one of these meetings.

Man facing 4 prison terms

TWIN FALLS — A 19-year-old Twin Falls man faces serving up to four 15-year prison terms, following a Fifth District Court hearing Friday.

The defendant, Jamie Wynia, of 744 Second Ave. W., pleaded guilty to four counts of first-degree burglary.

The charges stem from the Nov. 29 burglary of the Elks Lodge, 205 Shoshone St. N.; the Dec. 5 burglary of Freddie's Bar, 272 Main Ave. W.; the Dec. 19 burglary of Lincoln Elementary School, 238 Second St. N.; and the Dec. 28 burglary of the Golden Palace restaurant, 119 1/2 Ave. W. All of the burglaries took place in Twin Falls.

Judge Theron Ward ordered a presentence investigation and continued the defendant's release without bail.

In another case heard Friday, Ward ordered a 20-year-old Buhl man, who violated his year-old probation by committing two burglaries, to spend up to six years in prison.

Tony Kuntz, of Route 3, Buhl, admitted both violating his probation — imposed for a 1982 conviction for damaging property at the Mennonite Church near Buhl — and committing a first-degree burglary at the Dan Skeem property in Melon Valley on Jan. 2.

Ward could have ordered Kuntz, who also pleaded guilty to a first-degree burglary in Gooding, to serve up to 15 years in prison.

Ward also ordered a presentence investigation in the case of 24-year-old Robert G. Ambers, 145 Shoshone St. in Twin Falls, who pleaded guilty to burglarizing a neighbor's apartment.

Ambers faces serving up to 15 years in prison.

Drug case names Buhl man

TWIN FALLS — A Buhl man, who was released without bail last month after he confessed to burglarizing a drug store, has been arrested on charges that allege he tried to obtain prescription drugs illegally.

Leonard Ray Combs, 29, of Route 3, Buhl, remains in the Twin Falls County Jail, in lieu of $25,000 bail. Combs was arraigned Friday in Fifth District Magistrate Court on charges of obtaining a controlled substance by deception and second-degree burglary. Police allege that on Feb. 4, he submitted forged prescriptions to Kimberly Drug in Kimberly and to Crowley Drug, 144 Main Ave. S. in Twin Falls.

Combs has requested a preliminary hearing into the charges. The public defender has been appointed to represent him.

Combs pleaded guilty last month in Fifth District Court to the Dec. 15 burglary of Sav-Mor Drug, 139 Main Ave. W.

Following that plea, Judge Daniel Meehl released Combs on his own recognizance, pending a sentencing hearing.

Villanova upsets No. 1 Tar Heels

By United Press International

The University of Nevada-Las Vegas may have finally rolled a natural.
Nevada-Las Vegas, the nation's only undefeated team, became the favorite Sunday to take over the No. 1 spot in the United Press International's Board of Coaches ratings this week after the current top-ranked club, North Carolina, was upset by 14th-ranked Villanova, 56-53, at Chapel Hill, N.C.
The Tar Heels' loss paves the way for the third-ranked Runnin' Rebels to move into the No. 1 position since Virginia, ranked No. 2, lost to North Carolina earlier in the week.
Fourth-ranked Indiana and sixth-ranked Houston also can be expected to receive a lot of support from the coaches. Fifth-ranked UCLA missed its chance to make a sizeable gain in the ratings by losing to Oregon State, 69-65, at Corvallis, Ore., Saturday night.

Villanova's victory over North Carolina came despite some travel problems in getting to Raleigh. The Wildcats, 17-4, had to be routed through Atlantic City, N.J., to catch a special charter flight because of a blizzard that brought much of the northeast to a standstill. Villanova didn't arrive at its hotel until 10:30 a.m. MST late Saturday night.
"There is no question that this is one of the best wins we've ever had," said Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino. "There is no question that this was our best game of the year."
John Pinone scored 14 points and Ed

Pinckney added 11 for Villanova, but Massimino said rebounding, defense and turnovers were the real difference between the two teams.
"Offensive rebounding was a key," he said. "We were very active and that was also a key. The name of the game is turnovers and we didn't run into turnovers down the stretch like we did against (No. 7) St. John's (in a 81-80 loss)."
The Wildcats, led by Pinckney, won the rebounding battle by a 30-21 margin.
North Carolina, coming off a big victory Thursday night over Virginia, came out flat-footed and trailed almost the entire game.
"We started chasing with 7:22 left and that is a long time to chase somebody," said Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith. "We were disappointed but we know that any one of these games you lose in January and February aren't as important as the ones you lose in March (the NCAA playoffs). You don't want to lose in March."

North Carolina, 21-4, took the lead only once, with 16:34 left in the game, when Michael Jordan, who led all scorers with 20 points, hit a field goal to make it 31-30. But Pinone came back at 15:57 with a field goal to put the Wildcats ahead again.
North Carolina tied it 35-35 with 12:29 to go by on a shot by Jim Braddock. But the Wildcats outscored North Carolina 10-2 over the next five minutes to lead 45-37 with 7:23 remaining.

North Carolina pulled to within four points 49-45 with 1:48 to go on a basket by Sam Perkins, but Dwayne McCain hit three free throws to give the Wildcats some breathing room at 52-47, but two Pinone free throws and a basket by Mike Mulquin sealed the Villanova victory.
The Tar Heels went to a man-to-man defense to try and get back in the game in the final minutes, but Villanova refused to fold.
North Carolina came out flat after last Thursday's 64-63 emotional victory over second-ranked Virginia. Villanova scored the first seven points and the Tar Heels were held scoreless for more than four minutes.

Seventh-grade basketball program quells battles of sex, school rivalry

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A rarely demonstrated but beneficial side effect of athletics is its ability to unify people who usually wouldn't be brought together under other circumstances.
Such unions were formed by a new seventh-grade basketball program, which allowed two groups of apparent opposites — boys and girls, Stuart and O'Leary students — to go courtin'.
The venture's long-term beneficiaries will be the Twin Falls High School basketball teams, whose varsity coaches, John Astorquia (boys) and Paul Stover (girls), conducted the twice-a-week, two-hour sessions at O'Leary along with Stuart coordinator Lois Williams and O'Leary representative Clovis Johnson.
Learning the game's rudiments occupied two-thirds of each meeting; the 70-or-so youths involved — 65 percent were girls, Astorquia estimated — spent the remaining time playing games. Drills and games were supervised by members of Astorquia's varsity team. Astorquia and Stover firmly believe that, should the endeavor continue, they'll receive junior high graduates already fluent in basketball fundamentals three or four years hence.

But this year, the seventh graders themselves gained the most by spending their Thursday nights and Saturday mornings pivoting, passing and playing together.
"It enables kids to learn, feel good about themselves and then decide if they want to go into it competitively," Williams said.
"We learn to play with people better and meet more friends," said John Peavey, a seventh grader at Stuart.
"I really think they've gotten a lot more out of it than just basketball," Astorquia said.
That the project has succeeded should silence the inevitable skeptics, who considered the barriers sexuality and rivalry created and pronounced the project doomed even before it began last month.
"Before the program started — oh," Williams, a science teacher, groaned. "At Stuart, we had coaches and teachers thinking it would not work and telling the kids that boys and girls can't play together and that girls shouldn't be there... I told the seventh graders the program can't fail until they try it. So I had problems before it started, and that bugged me."
Nothing about the program, which ended Saturday, bugged Williams or anybody else associated with it. The potential problems of boys and girls participating together, for example, simply didn't materialize.

If anything, the meetings were more of a boon for the girls than the boys.
"The girls have improved not only in skills but also in attitude," Stover said. "They were tentative about being on the same floor with the boys. Once they got over their initial fright... some of them probably gained more from this program than the boys have."
At first, many boys were loathe to interact athletically with the fairer sex. "When we first came here, nobody liked passing to the girls," Peavey attested. Added Astorquia, "During the first two sessions, the girls were reluctant to 'mix it up,' while the boys were reluctant to pass them the ball. But they've evolved out of that."
Though the boys once feared that the girls' presence would lower the quality of their games, the latter group didn't prove to be at all burdensome. "It doesn't bring down the quality of the boys," Astorquia said. "They're all the same at this age."
Watching the seventh graders play games lends credence to Astorquia's comments. As the youths caper up and down the floor non-stop, it's hard to distinguish male from female. Action underneath

Carey favored at Northside

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

GOODING — The Carey Panthers will carry the overwhelming favorite's nod into the Fourth District Northside Boys Basketball Tournament opening at the Gooding High gymnasium tonight.
Carey, along with second seed Camas County, will be on the sidelines with byes as the other four members of the Northside Conference battle for a chance to knock off the rated teams and gain a place in the district and state playoffs.
Richfield will meet Bliss in the opener at 7 p.m. while Dietrich and Gooding State collide about 8:30 p.m. The winners will advance to Wednesday where Carey and Camas County will be waiting. Carey draws the Richfield-Bliss winner at 7 p.m. with Camas County playing the Dietrich-Gooding State winner.
The four teams with a loss apiece will play Thursday with those two survivors and the championship semifinals slated for Saturday. Saturday's nightcap winner will secure a spot in the final round at Jerome while the teams remaining in the loser bracket after Saturday's play will meet in a single game next Monday for the second Northside spot.
The district finals will pit the top team from the Northside against the southside's runner-up and visa-versa on Feb. 23. The first night winners at Jerome will secure spots in state by play Feb. 24 for the district title and seeding in the state tournament which is slated for College of Southern Idaho the following week.
Carey stormed through the Northside Conference schedule with just one loss but the man who accomplished that trick, Coach Ben Stroud of Dietrich, says doing it again isn't likely.

Northside Tournament

Today's Games
7 p.m. — Richfield vs. Bliss
8:30 p.m. — Dietrich vs. Gooding State

"I don't know if anyone can touch them," Stroud said of Carey.
However, there could be a battle for the second spot although Camas County is considered perhaps a step ahead of the other four. The Musers lost twice to Carey and once to Richfield, the latter two defeats coming in overtime.
The four who play tonight are considered fairly compatible, although Gooding State hasn't beaten a team in the field.
"Put Camas County maybe a step ahead of the rest of us and the rest of us at even-seven," Stroud said. "Maybe Bliss and Dietrich have better records than the other two but Gooding State and Richfield are capable of beating them."
Carey's overall record of 13-5 is tempered somewhat by an arm injury to 6-3 Andy O'Crowley. The Panthers lost two of their games after he left and won a couple others by a skin of their teeth.
But O'Crowley is getting healthier each day and that not only helps on the floor but on the bench. Coach Scott Peck hasn't a full complement of players and at one time this year wound up with three players on the floor.

Boise State roars past Montana State, 78-63

BOISE (UPI) — A 10-point burst late in the first half, cornered by forward Ron Grossart's three-point basket, gave Boise State a double-digit lead and powered the Broncos to a 78-63 victory over Montana State Sunday.
BSU, which secured its first home victory in Big Sky Conference play this year, was hanging to a 29-27 edge with four minutes remaining in the opening period when James McNorton sank two free throws. Soon afterward, Grossart arched in his long shot.
A free throw by Bruce Bolden and two free throws each by Rawn Hayes and Vince Hinchen then staked the Broncos to a 39-27 advantage, and the Bobcats never fully recovered.

Hinchin led four Broncos in double figures with 19 points. Hayes, who put Boise State ahead for good midway in the first half with three inside baskets, added 16 points, while Grossart ended up with 13 and guard Mike Hazel contributed 10.
Montana State, hampered by foul trouble and 35 percent shooting from the field in the second half, was paced by forward Chris Brazier with 16

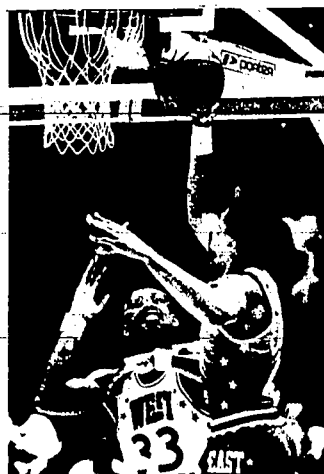

Dr. J collects MVP award

Erving, Thomas lead NBA East past West

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — For Julius Erving, most of the learning has been completed and now he's working on the details. For Isiah Thomas, a world of experience lies ahead.
On Sunday, the oldest player on the team and the youngest player combined for 41 points to lead the East to a 132-123 victory over the West in the 33rd NBA All-Star Game.
Erving, the 32-year-old star forward of the Philadelphia 76ers, was named the game's Most Valuable Player, recapturing the award he won in the 1977 All-Star Game. He finished with 25 points and helped shut down a West comeback bid in the closing minutes with a pair of typically dazzling baskets. Erving, appearing in his seventh All-Star Game in as many NBA seasons, also had six rebounds as the East won for the fourth consecutive year.
"At this point in my career, I'm just trying to master my game," said Erving. "There are guys in this league who can outrun me and who can outjump me, but I try to outthink them."
Erving said the showcase of the cream of the NBA crop should boost interest for the second half of the season.
"The NBA has taken a lot of knocks from people who don't know much about the game," he said. "This week, we made a concerted effort to put on a show so that the people who weren't here would wish they were."
Thomas, at 21 the youngest member of the East squad and at 6-feet, the shortest player in the game, added 19 points, all in the first three periods. The Detroit Pistons' flashy guard scored 10 points in the opening period as the East bolted to a 42-31 lead. It was Thomas' second All-Star appearance in his two NBA seasons.

"When I came to the game last year, it was just a thrill to be here and I got caught up in all the festivities," said Thomas. "This year, I came to play the game."
Thomas said much of what he's already learned about the game came from watching his family.
"I didn't really pattern myself after any NBA guards," he said. "I really copied my six brothers. They taught me a lot. I stole a little from this one and a little from that one and it's all added up."
Kareem Abdul-Jabbar led the West with 20 points while Los Angeles Lakers' teammate Magic Johnson added 17 points and 16 assists, breaking Oscar Robertson's All-Star Game record of 14 assists set in 1961.
"The record is OK, but I'm not into individual awards," Johnson said. "Winning is the thing, and we didn't win. I'm happy to have the record, but someone will come along, maybe next year, and break it."
The game opened erratically, with Johnson's first pass landing three rows deep and Bird's attempt to save a loose ball landing him in the second row of seats, all in the first minute. But the teams settled down and, with Thomas leading the way, the East jumped to an 11-point lead after one period. Bird added eight points and three assists for the East in the quarter.
After falling behind by 16 points 4:42 into the second period, the West surged back into the game, tying the score 60-60 with 2:30 remaining in the half on a bank shot by Denver's Alex English, the league's leading scorer. English scored eight of his 14 points in the period to pace the West attack.

The East held a 69-64 lead at halftime and increased the advantage to 69 points, 37-23, with 4:11 left on a pair of free throws by Philadelphia center Moses Malone, who finished with 10 points. The West cut its deficit to 103-90 after three quarters.
In the fourth period, the West made some more run, pulling to within 116-110 with 4:32 remaining on two baskets by Johnson. But the East, with Erving scoring on a spinning 10-footer and Milwaukee's Steve Nisic pumpling in three field goals in little more than a minute — including one off his forehead on a break bounce — regained control 124-110. Erving defused the final West charge with 1:23 remaining when he took a pass in the lane and slammed the ball home over a trio of defenders in his final points.
Boston's Robert Parish added 13 points and Bird, Parish's teammate and last year's All-Star MVP had 14. Moncrief, of Milwaukee, finished with 20 points for the East.
Portland's Jim Paxson had 11 points for the West and Jamal Wilkes of the Lakers added 10 for the West. Four-time NBA scoring leader George Gervin of San Antonio had just nine points for the West.

the basket gets spirited, as it does at high school, collegiate and professional levels, yet the girls usually aren't overpowered. As Williams noted, "The boys have to have some courtesy sometimes, but the girls aren't as aggressive as the boys."

They don't even know they're girls and boys here. They're all players!

Perhaps the most surprising — and refreshing — aspect of the program was the virtually total absence of animosity often generated by the competition between O'Leary and Stuart junior highs.

Thus, when Williams says, "There's absolutely no rivalry between Stuart and O'Leary students," she says so confidently.

It's understandable that the city's two major junior high schools would develop a rivalry, through interscholastic sports competition. It's also a counter-productive feud, since students at each school ultimately arrive together at Twin Falls High.

In fact, Astorquia invoked the future during a speech to the seventh graders, a talk which likely, contributed to the prevailing harmony.

"When we first got all the kids together, John Astorquia made it very clear to the kids that they're all future Bruins," Johnson recalled.

"Trouble had existed in the past with the seventh graders' relative inactivity in interscholastic sports, however, O'Leary and Stuart offer only track and field for their first-year students, though boys can participate in wrestling."

Whatever basketball local seventh graders played during school was strictly intramural, a boys-only affair, causing Twin Falls High basketball coaches to look askance on this sort of organization.

"Kids were feeling like they were left out — the girls didn't have anything," Williams said. "Now this makes the year go by a little better."

Local teens setting lifting marks

ONTARIO, Ore. — A team of teenagers from The Fitness Center in Twin Falls captured first-place team honors and, individually, set four state records and one national mark in a high school powerlifting tournament Saturday and Sunday.

Bob McLaughlin, 15, set a national record for the squat in the 161-pound class with a 445-pound effort. McLaughlin also set a state record with a 1,075 total that included a 230-pound bench press and a 400-pound deadlift.

Jeff Lambert, 16, established a state mark in the 198-pound class with a 1,140 total. He squatted 475 pounds, benched 215 and deadlifted 450.

Michelle Lucich, competing in the women's open division, set a state record with her 670 total, including a 270-pound squat, 115-pound bench press and 285-pound deadlift.

Giant slalom at Magic Mtn.

TWIN FALLS — Skiers braved blizzard conditions at Magic Mountain Sunday to compete in a giant slalom event.

Three age groups competed with the best time of the day turned by Dave Tierman, who won the 24-to-29 age group. His mother, Nancy Tierman, clocked the best time of the day for the female skiers.

On Saturday, the figure-3 event attracted only three teams after racers discovered the powder was hidden under a light crust, as a result of sunny weather Friday followed by cooler weather Saturday. The winner took all went to a couple of ski instructors, Bruce Gott and Tim Howard.

Agas 10 through 13: 1, Cory Howard, 2, Justin Kameron, 3, Amy Perkins. Agas 14 through 19: 1, Dave Tierman, 2, Rick Stenmark, 3, Tim Howard. Agas 20 and over: 1, Nancy Tierman, 2, Bonnie Jones.

Aoki wins Hawaiian Open

HONOLULU (UPI) — Isao Aoki holed out a 128-yard shot from the rough for an eagle on the 18th hole Sunday to win the $25,000 Hawaiian Open and become the first player from Japan to win a PGA Tour event.

Aoki, Japan's most consistent player on the Tour, faced a possible playoff when Jack Renner birdied the 18th to finish at 19-under 269.

Rain delays LPGA event

SARASOTA, Fla. (UPI) — Heavy rains, which almost turned Saturday's play in the $175,000 Sarasota Classic into a joke, continued through the night and into Sunday, forcing postponement of play until at least today.

They were to have completed their third round Sunday morning, with the fourth round to follow.

My partners and I don't agree on everything, but when it comes to seed corn, we go with what we know.

When you're in business with your sons, you have to justify every decision you make. One thing we all agree on though is our seed corn program. Pioneer brand seeds have always done well on our land, and that's why we're planting these hybrids for grain this spring.

3950 A rugged hybrid for grain that does a good job under a wide variety of soil and weather conditions. A good earlier companion to 3906 and 3901.

3906 A top notch early season hybrid that does a lot of things well. Besides showing great yield response to high planting rates, 3906 also displays strong stalks and roots and terrific ear retention.

3901 The proven yield leader for its maturity, 3901 also features profit-boosting fast drydown. This not only helps cut drying costs but also lets you start harvest early.

LEGAL NOTICE

NOTICE OF INTENDED RULE-MAKING

In compliance with Section 87-5203(a) (1), Idaho Code, notice is hereby given that the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, Division of Welfare, has initiated rule-making. The proposed action, which does not involve 0301-8301 and 0309-8301, involves the amendment of rules governing ELIGIBILITY, Title 3, Chapter 1, and MEDICAL ASSISTANCE, Title 3, Chapter 9, Rules and Regulations of the Department of Health and Welfare. The action is proposed under the authority granted in Sections 56-202(b) and 39-106(1), Idaho Code, for the purposes of compliance with the provisions of 42 CFR, Part 435, effective as soon as possible.

The following is a descriptive summary of the substance of the intended action and of the principal issues involved:

1. Extend the projected eligibility period for institutionalized persons who would otherwise be ineligible because they do not meet residence requirements;

2. Provide that assignment of third-party liability is automatic upon application for Medicaid Assistance by operation of state law;

3. Remove home and needy dependent maintenance costs as income deductions in determining financial eligibility for nursing home care;

4. Specify the basis for covering children in intermediate care facilities;

5. Modify the criteria applicable to "grandfathered" SSI recipients.

Extend coverage following successful appeal of an SSI denial for any reason to recipients;

7. Add provision of income for initial month of entry to long-term care;

8. Add conditions for a home maintenance income deduction in computing patient liability for costs of nursing home care; and

9. Remove exclusions for Veterans "unusual medical expense" allowances in computing patient liability for costs of nursing home care.

Within the time limits specified below, any person can review the proposed rules in the DRW Administrative Procedure Section or in any of the regional administrative offices of the Department. Copies of the proposed rules will be made available upon written request specifying the docket number cited above and at a rate of ten cents (10¢) per page. Checks must accompany the request and be made payable to the Department of Health and Welfare for the amount of one dollar and twenty cents ($1.20) for Docket Number 0301-8300. There is no charge for Docket Number 0309-8300.

Anyone can submit written comments regarding the proposed rules, and any individual or industry who may be affected by the proposed rules is encouraged to submit information concerning the anticipated economic impact of the proposed action. For assistance on technical questions concerning the proposed rules, contact

Pennie Bjornstad Department of Health and Welfare, Division of Welfare, Boise, all written comments and data concerning the proposed rules must be submitted to the undersigned and must be postmarked or delivered on or before February 25, 1983.

R u l e - m a k i n g hearing(s) will be held if signed, written requests for a hearing are submitted personally or addressed to the undersigned and postmarked on or before February 25, 1983. If twenty-five (25) or more interested persons or from an association presenting a petition with signatures of not less than twenty-five (25) members of the organization or from an environmental subdivision or agency hearing requests should include a statement of the direct interests of the petitioner(s) in the subject matter of the proposed rules. Any hearing site(s) will be accessible to the physically disabled, interpreters for persons with hearing impairments and brailled or taped information for persons with visual impairments can be provided upon five days notice. For arrangements, contact the undersigned at (208) 334-4393.
