EPA head Gorsuch speaks with President

By United Press International

WASHINGTON — Embattled Environmental Protection Agency chief Anne Gorsuch met with President Reagan Thursday while negotiations between the White House and Congress, for release of disputed agency files continued without final agreement.

The Oval Office meeting, at Mrs. Gorsuch's request, followed Reagan's declaration Wednesday that he could no longer claim executive privilege to block congressional access to the documents if the public suspects a cover-up.

Negotiations between House Public Works Committee chairman James Howard, D-N.J., and Public Works oversight chairman Elliott Levitas, D-Ga., and the administration for congressional access to the documents continued.

An administration source said the White House and congressional committees were in substantive agreement but still working out conditions for access to the contested documents.

Committee aides told reporters throughout the day the "final details" of an agreement allowing committee members to inspect the documents at EPA headquarters were being worked out and an announcement was expected Thursday.

But Levitas' office issued a statement in late afternoon saying the negotiations "are still going on. There will be no announcements or statements regarding those discussions from Congressman Levitas before 3 p.m. tomorrow."

A committee source said without elaboration "there are some problems," and efforts to reach agreement would continue.

The committees are investigating whether the agency cozied up to corporations and failed to bill them their fair share of the costs of cleaning up toxic waste dumps, and if politics was played in the program.

Mrs. Gorsuch, citing executive privilege and orders from Reagan, had refused to give the Levitas panel certain Superfund enforcement files. The House voted Dec. 16 to hold her in contempt of Congress.

In other developments, ousted EPA official Rita Lavelle for the second day snubbed a congressional committee investigating the $1.6 billion Superfund toxic waste cleanup program she headed until fired by Reagan 11 days ago.

She was warned by lawmakers to cooperate or face a possible contempt of Congress citation.

And sources disclosed Mrs. Gorsuch sent allegations of possible misconduct by Ms. Lavelle to the Justice Department for investigation within days of the aide's firing.

Mrs. Gorsuch met with Reagan and his chief of staff, James Baker, counsel Fred Fiedling, counselor Edwin Meese and a Meese aide, Craig Fuller. The 15-minute meeting was held in the Oval Office.

EPA spokesman Chris Rice said, "The meeting had been requested by Mrs. Gorsuch for the purpose of updating the president on the current situation involving all activities surrounding the EPA."

Reagan, in his nationally televised news conference Wednesday night, expressed continued confidence in Mrs. Gorsuch but said he would "never stand for" a cover-up of wrongdoing at the agency.

Reagan said he could "no longer insist on executive privilege if there's suspicion in the minds of the people that maybe it is being used to cover some wrongdoing."

PLO hardliner calls Reagan Middle East plan a 'bomb'

By BJORN EDLUND
United Press International

ALGIERS, Algeria — A hardline guerrilla leader Thursday blasted President Reagan's Middle East peace plan as a "bomb" aimed at shattering the Palestine Liberation Organization and he called for renewed attacks against Israel.

"The answer is no to Reagan, no to the United States, and no to all your plans," said George Habash in a 90-minute address to the Palestine National Council, the PLO's parliament-in-exile.

PLO chairman Yasser Arafat, who has fought to avert an outright rejection of the Reagan plan, was sparse with his applause during the hardliner's speech. He rested his hands in his lap when Habash attacked the U.S. plan, which calls for a Palestinian entity in the West Bank of the Jordan under Jordanian supervision, but he applauded heartily when Habash vowed not to allow the fragmentation of the PLO.

At the end of the speech, Arafat embraced Habash.

Habash, head of the Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and a member of the PLO "government," said the Reagan plan was a "survender" that rendered meaningless the 88-day resistance of Palestinian fighters during Israel's siege of Beirut last summer.

"We did not pay the price of blood in Beirut for the United States to score a diplomatic victory," Habash said, drawing loud applause from the 350-member council meeting in an Algerian government congress hall on the Mediterranean coast outside the capital.

"The Reagan plan is nothing but a conspiracy," Habash said. "Any dealing with this conspiracy will lead to the liquidation of the PLO, will lead to the revolution losing its voice."

Habash also rejected an Arab peace plan, launched at a heads of state summit last fall in Fez, Morocco. The plan included an implicit recognition of Israel. He also ruled out "the Jordanian option," envisaging King Hussein as a negotiator for the PLO in Middle East peace talks.

"They talk about the Reagan plan, the Fez plan, the Jordanian option and others," Habash said. "All these are nothing but bombs aimed at fragmenting the Palestinian revolution."

Committee to evaluate jail

By MARTY TRILLIHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A seven-member committee has been named to evaluate the adequacy of the Twin Falls County Jail and to explore possible improvements — up to and including construction of a new jail.

County officials announced the formation of the committee Thursday, two days after a sheriff's deputy foiled an escape attempt at the 71-year-old facility, located on the fourth floor of the county Courthouse.

Named to the panel are: William Hollifield, a former county prosecutor; lawyer Kristina Belto of Twin Falls; Twin Falls fire marshal Clare Harkins; Buhl businessman Dave Monroe; Castleford rancher Terry Kramer; Kimberly rancher Ron Ballard; and Ralph Breeding of Murtaugh.

"We want public input and public awareness, so the people in Twin Falls know: Do we have an adequate jail, or don't we have an adequate jail? Do we have an adequate staff, or don't we have an adequate staff," said

Sheriff Jim Munn, who was back at his post Thursday after bringing a prisoner back from Arizona.

How Munn would answer such questions is not secret.

In a letter to the county commissioners, dated Jan. 10, Munn wrote, it is "a common-known fact that the Twin Falls County Jail has become a liability."

"We have tried to maintain a constitutional facility. However, because of the original construction of the physical plant, it has almost become

Student rally protests cuts

BOISE (UPI) — About 500 university, high school and junior high students packed the windswept front steps of the Idaho Statehouse Thursday in a rally meant to deter legislators from slashing education funding.

The afternoon gathering, in which speakers urged fellow rally participants to let lawmakers know they care about the quality of education programs in the state, was organized by student leaders in the Boise area.

"We want to show them we're just not sitting still," said Clay Conner, Borah High School student president. "We're just not going to let this moment pass us by."

Another 17-year-old senior, Boise student president Walt Bilhelt, said participants hoped the demonstration would "make people aware about public education and that funding cuts may be very damaging."

The rally took place just as lawmakers inside the Statehouse were awaiting word on whether Democratic Gov. John Evans would veto $8 million to $10 million in education-funding cuts included in a $69.2 million budget-balancing plan.

A governor's spokesman said the measure arrived in the chief executive's office Wednesday. There was no word on when the governor would act on the measure, but he has threatened to line-item veto $7.7 million in school cuts.

Lawmakers also Thursday were looking at school funding alternatives for fiscal year 1984, which begins July 1. The current year's school appropriation was $215 million, but under the revenue projection for FY 1984, funding could fall well below $190 million.

High flying fun

Gabi Wikom, 8, and her sister, Lenora, 5, of Twin Falls, spent part of Thursday afternoon bouncing around on their trampoline at their Eighth Avenue

East home in Twin Falls. Today's weather may not be as conducive to outdoor activities, with occasional rain showers and possible snow forecast.

Khadafy says Libya will defend land

LONDON (UPI) — Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy defiantly reasserted Thursday his countrymen are ready to "fight to defend their lands, waters and skies," the official Libya Jamahiriya news agency reported.

"We will not permit any state to enter our territorial waters, and this includes the Soviet Union with which we are linked by a relationship of friendship," Khadafy told the General People's Congress in Tripoli.

"The Libyan people are ready to fight to defend their lands, waters and skies," Khadafy said.

Khadafy spoke as Sudanese President Gaafar Numeiry of Sudan met in Khartoum with Chad President Hissene Habre on a reported buildup of Libyan troops near the Libyan border with the two nations.

Washington officials said four AWACS early warning planes were sent to Egypt and the nuclear-powered aircraft-carrier USS Nimitz sailed near Libyan waters in a show of strength aimed at deterring the Libyan threat.

The carrier was in the Gulf of Sidra Wednesday morning but, by evening, it had moved back into the Mediterranean, the Washington officials said.

The state-run Jamahiriya International Report weekly in a Feb. 7 issue said the 8th Fleet has conducted "provocative maneuvers" of the Libya coast as part of an American effort to "destabilize" the Libyan regime. It said, "the maneuvers are viewed as part of the United States preparation for possible military intervention in Libya."

The gulf, about 280 miles wide in the Mediterranean Sea, encompasses the Libyan Tripoli to the west and the major Libyan military base at Benghazi to the east.

The gulf's waters first became the scene of conflict after Khadafy extended Libyan sovereignty to the area.

Two U.S. Air Force F-14 fighters aboard the Nimitz shot down two Soviet-built Libyan Sukhoi 22 fighters that fired missiles at them during U.S. Navy exercises in the gulf in August 1981.

Without mentioning Libya, the chief-of-staff of the Egyptian armed forces said his troops are ready to defend Egypt and Sudan but the decision rests with President Hosni Mubarak.

"Our armed forces are fully prepared to repel any aggression against Egypt's security," Lt. Gen. Abd-Rab-El-Nabi Hafez said.

The Libyans intervened in Chad at the end of 1980 and their troops assisted President Goukouni Weddeya win a civil war against Habre.

A year later, the Libyans withdrew under pressure from the Organization of African Unity. This led to Goukouni's defeat. He fled the country and Habre became president.

Bill against surrogate moms

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — A state senator who was once Michigan's "Mother of the Year" introduced a bill Thursday that would make it illegal for anyone to contract with a woman to bear a child then hand over the baby after birth.

Under the bill, conviction for hiring a surrogate mother, a misdemeanor, would carry a maximum 90-day jail term, a $10,000 fine or both.

Subsequent convictions would be felonies carrying five-year prison terms, $10,000 fines or both.

The bill says a man or a couple cannot contract with a woman "other than the man's wife" for the purpose of insemination "for the purpose of conceiving a child and shall not then assume physical custody of the child born to the woman regardless of whether the woman has executed a consent or release."

Toxic shock occurring in males

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Fifteen percent of the toxic shock syndrome cases now being reported occur in males and females of all ages and have nothing to do with women's use of tampons, a federal health specialist said Thursday.

Dr. Arthur L. Reingold of the national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta said it is now known the disease, primarily linked to menstruation and tampon use two years ago, can occur in any medical setting and even show up in babies.

He reported in the Feb. 18 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association that cases have been associated with surgical wound infections, deep and superficial abscesses, infected burns, abrasions, insect bites, shingles and a number of other conditions.

Lifers spearheaded strike

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (UPI) — Inmates serving life sentences appear to have spearheaded a San Quentin Prison strike protesting revised visitation and recreation schedules in which only about 120 inmates went to work Thursday.

Wednesday some 200 inmates were on the job in the strike that has cost the state's Correctional Industries about $10,000 a day since it began Monday.

The men unclear why led the strike, but Lt. Jim McCullough of San Quentin Prison said it appeared inmates serving life sentences spearheaded the protest against a law allowing time off for days worked.

"The work time law says essentially that if an inmate works one day he gets one day off," McCullough said. "San Quentin has an inordinate amount of inmates on lifer status and they are saying 'why should we change our schedule when it (the law) doesn't apply to us?'"

Smew visits Rhode Island

NORTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (UPI) — Bird watchers are sure to be all afwitter with the reported appearance of the rare smew in Rhode Island.

The black-and-white Siberian duck reportedly has only popped up twice in the United States, both times in Rhode Island.

The first view of the smew in the U.S. was reported in Newport in 1976, during more than 1,000 birders to the area. The appearance sparked the sale of wood replicas and the designation of the smew as Newport's "official bird."

Calvin Kenyon, 58, of North Kingstown, said he saw the rare duck two weeks on Bristol Cove. The sighting is still unofficial, since no one else has reported seeing the elusive creature.

Patch may have given way

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (UPI) — Heavy seas may have torn open a cement-and-plywood hull patch on a coal carrier ship that sank last Saturday with the loss of 31 lives, the vessel's chief mate told a board of inquiry Thursday.

Robert Cusick, 59, of Scituate, Mass., said the hole that had been patched on the 605-foot collier Marine Electric originally was large enough for him to stick his hand through, and could have been enlarged by the pounding finish.

The Marine Electric went down in gale-force winds and heavy seas off the Virginia coast. Of the 34 crewmen, only Cusick and two others survived the frigid waters.

Indian wins Empire dash

NEW YORK (UPI) — Al Waqui, an American Indian who chases deer to keep in shape, Thursday won the sixth race up the Empire State Building, a dash that its organizer calls "probably the most difficult and boring race in the world."

Burke Konecick, 29, of Oyster Bay, N.Y., won the women's race. The women got a 90-second head start.

The race up the landmark tower, first scaled by King Kong, attracted 23 men and 11 women who scrambled through the stalwart's lobby door and chugged up 86 of the building's 102 floors.

Waqui, 31, a Pueblo Indian who works as a forest ranger in Jemez Pueblo, N.M., bounded across the finish line on the building's observation deck for an easy first place finish.

"I couldn't hear the other runners," he said while catching his breath on the fog shrouded platform after completing the race in 11 minutes and 36 seconds.

The 5-foot-3, 108 pound runner, known as King of the Hills for his championship runs up Pike's Peak in 1981 and 1982, said he could have broken the record if he had not been held up for several floors by another runner.

Jail

Impossible," he continued. "The welfare and safety of the jail staff and inmates is in jeopardy."

Recognized deficiencies at the jail, according to the sheriff and other officials, include an inability to provide outdoor recreation for most inmates, a lack of a bona-fide law library and an inability to completely segregate various classes of prisoners, such as juveniles and adults.

Some of these deficiencies, primarily those pertaining to the separation of prisoners, may violate state law. Others may violate only recommended jail standards. But such violations leave the county vulnerable to civil-rights lawsuits.

The jail also provides some security problems, because deputies routinely are required to come in contact with inmates. Also, the jail's reliance on dormitory cells creates a potential for inmates to hide each other's actions, Munn said.

That factor alone contributed to this week's attempted jail break, Munn said. He credited new jail procedures, calling for inspections, as being responsible for the early detection.

"If the jail situation was as it was three years ago, that escape would possibly have been successful. Because of the new minimum jail standards — the full-time jail staff — because of that, it failed," Munn said. "We are still striving to improve our security situation. But the jail location as it is and its age makes it difficult."

Munn's proposal calls for the independent committee to make its own assessment of the physical plant, the staffing, jail policy and procedures, and the welfare and safety of the inmates and jail staff.

Once that assessment is made, the committee will be responsible for developing an "action plan," which would cover the following points:

- Whether to restore, remodel or replace the present jail.
- Determine proper staffing levels within the facility.
- Establish programs concerning inmate and staff welfare, such as safety codes, medical programs and security devices.

Munn says that the National Institute of Corrections will provide the committee with assistance.

"They will send an assessment group to help our people in advising on new directions and ways to go," he said Thursday.

The jail committee's report will be submitted to the county commissioners, who hope the program will generate more public awareness of the issue, as well as public support for the conclusions drawn by that committee.

"We would hope to correct the deficiencies, and this is a first step," county commission Chairman Ann Cover said Thursday.

Cover noted that school districts have used such private studies in the past to evaluate the need for repair and replacement of school buildings.

"You need public support for something like this, and it has worked well in the past for some of the schools," she said.

The one word not mentioned Thursday was money, which has been hard to come by for routine county programs, let alone construction of a new jail.

County officials spent $300,000 in the late 1970s to purchase the site of the former O'Leary Junior High School. They planned to build a jail at that site before the availability of federal funds became scarce. The county still owns the land, which remains a vacant lot.

Court finds four Israeli soldiers guilty

By GERALD NADLER
United Press International

TEI, AVIV, Israel — A military tribunal Thursday found four Israeli soldiers guilty of beating up Palestinians in 1982 riots that left 10 protesters dead, but the court upheld the army's strong-arm policy on the occupied West Bank.

Orders issued to beat up civilians were "clearly illegal even to an infant," the military tribunal said in handing out partially suspended one-year sentences to three of the four men. One soldier was not immediately sentenced.

The three-man panel also censured the former military commander of the West Bank, Col. Yaacov Hartabi, for issuing the orders for excessive brutality. It was not immediately clear what if any action would be taken against Hartabi.

But the three-man court exonerated Army Chief of Staff Raphael Eilan, acknowledging as necessary his "forceful strong arm policy of harassment, arrest and economic sanctions" against protesters on the West Bank.

Three other soldiers, who also had been accused of brutality, were acquitted at the end of the five-month trial.

The charges against the soldiers stem from the rock-throwing protests that erupted in April and May 1982 after Israel fired the elected Palestinian mayors of the major West Bank towns, including Ramallah and Nablus.

In quelling the protests, soldiers shot and killed at least 10 Palestinian demonstrators, shot out solar heating panels in refugee camps and took Palestinians out of their houses by force.

Eilan, in a rare court appearance defended his collective punishment of relatives, saying, "With Arabs, that works very well."

On the whole, the court stressed that the period was difficult and "soldiers could not be expected to use kid gloves" against rock throwers and the residents of the West Bank should realize protests put them in danger.

The soldiers' dilemma, the court said, was that disobeying a military order could lead to a court martial. But a soldier must also not carry out an order he thinks illegal, the court said.

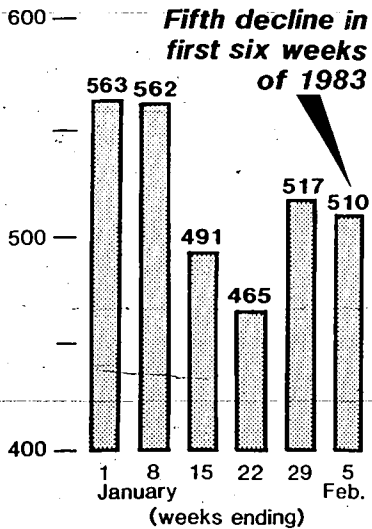

The three-man court acquitted Maj. David Moffaz and Master Sgts. David Ben-Zaken and Hussein Gedir, the Israel radio said.

Found guilty were Master Sgts. Fahal Tsalah and Baruch Meir, Corporal Aviv Ben-Eli and Private Shlomo Levi.

Meir's sentencing was deferred. Of the year's sentence given each of the other three, Tsalah will serve two months, Levi five months and Ben-Eli six months.

NEW CLAIMS

For Unemployment Insurance
(in thousands of claims)

Job claims go down for fifth week of this year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New claims for unemployment benefits dropped to 510,000 in the first week of February, the fifth decline in the first six weeks of 1983, the Labor Department reported Thursday.

A House subcommittee, meantime, voted Thursday to keep the special supplemental unemployment benefits program going six months beyond its scheduled March 31 expiration.

The number of initial claims to determine eligibility for state unemployment insurance dropped by 7,000 to 510,000 for the week ended Feb. 5, after seasonal adjustment, the report said.

The previous week had shown the only increase so far this year, a jump of 52,000 claims.

The initial claims identify about half of the newly unemployed, with the other half not eligible for state benefits and counted only in the monthly report on unemployment.

The latest monthly report for January showed a national unemployment rate of 10.4 percent. With military personnel counted as employed, the rate was 10.2 percent. February's unemployment rate will be announced on March 4. The rate of insured unemployment for the week ended Jan. 29 went to 4.6 percent from the week earlier's 4.4 percent, reflecting an increase of 138,000 people already receiving benefits, the latest report said.

The total number of people receiving benefits after seasonal adjustment and not including extended benefits was 4,023,000.

The number of actual initial claims before any seasonal adjustment also went down for the week ended Feb. 5, the report said.

It said the total number of people claiming unemployment insurance benefits — including federal employees, newly discharged veterans, railroad retirees and those on special extended benefits — was 6,526,900 during the week ended Jan. 29, before seasonal adjustment.

In recommending an extension of supplemental jobless benefits into September, the House Ways and Means subcommittee on public assistance and unemployment compensation added as many as 10 weeks to the 35-week maximum recipients can now get in states hardest hit by unemployment.

Estrogen may provide protection

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A national study suggests women over 40, who take the female hormone estrogen have a lower annual risk of dying from all causes than non-users, researchers reported Thursday.

But study director Trudy F. Bush of the Oklahoma Medical Research Foundation said "many questions remain and confirmation from more detailed research is needed before doctors consider changing their estrogen prescribing practices."

Nevertheless, Dr. Bush said, "I think this should be fairly comforting to women who are prescribed estrogens."

Because there have been reports linking estrogen use to increased risk of stroke and cardiovascular disease, Dr. Bush said that when she and her associates started the study they expected to find estrogen users would fare worse.

"What we found, much to our surprise, was that women using estrogens had a death rate about one-third that of women not using them," she said in an interview.

Differences were greater for women who had hysterectomies and even larger for those who had estrogen-producing ovaries removed.

Dr. Bush emphasized that this did not mean women who did not use estrogens had abnormally high death rates. It meant those who took the hormones had abnormally low death rates during the study period.

The study results, published in the Feb. 18 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, covered 2,269 white women between the ages of 40 and 69. They were examined at 10 clinics across the nation between 1971 and 1976. A total of 76 deaths from all causes occurred during this period.

The estrogens in the study were those of the type used to relieve post-menopausal symptoms. But researchers did not have information on estrogen dosage or duration of use.

The study report said the higher risk of death observed in estrogen non-users could not be accounted for by differences in age, education, smoking habits, body weight, blood pressure or by concentrations of the kind of cholesterol in the blood that is associated with increased heart disease risk.

Tax protester remains free

ASHLEY, N.D. (UPI) — A convoy of law officers descended Thursday on this bastion of anti-federalism but hit another dead end in the manhunt for elusive tax protester Gordon Kahl, accused in the machine gun slayings of two U.S. marshals.

Armed with rifles and handguns, officers partially sealed off the town of Ashley and its 1,200 residents and searched homes belonging to three right-wing sympathizers in search for the 63-year-old leader in the paramilitary "Posse Comitatus." The convoy of 16 cars and a mobile command post left the search command center in Jamestown at dawn for the 80-mile trip to Ashley near the South Dakota border — about 60 miles south of Medina where the marshals were shot in a "roar of gunfire" Sunday.

Richard Blay, agent in charge of the Minneapolis FBI office, confirmed officers had encountered a dead end after a search of several hours in which only the locals were allowed in and out of town.

"As far as I know he's not in town. I'm going back to Jamestown," said Blay, who did not elaborate on whether Kahl had been hiding there or why the officers thought he might be in Ashley.

"We'll look at other information, prioritize it. If we get information that we should go somewhere else, we'll go someplace else. We've fulfilled our mission here in the least destructive way."

"Most of us don't want to be associated with tax protesters or tax revolt," said Hank Hansen, editor of the Ashley Tribune newspaper.

"We've got a good basketball team and people are a lot more interested in seeing the team do well than they are in this thing (tax revolt)."

Officers searched the homes of Mike Phillips, a self-proclaimed non-licensed attorney and tax protester, veterinarian James Coleman and Len Martin, who publishes the radical newsletter "Monkey Business."

"Monkey Business" is opposed to such government creations as the Internal Revenue Service, the federal reserve system and the United Nations; has lashed out against bankers, lawyers and Jews, and is in favor of public hangings for criminals.

Blay said he was upset with broadcast reports "advertising" the convoy's route to Ashley. A convoy of reporters followed the officers, and one radio station gave detailed reports of its location as it approached Ashley.

"I would say our efforts were fruitless," Blay said, leaving some of the officers and the mobile command post behind in Ashley.

Sex-education class should win approval

A few months ago, we took the position that the Filer school board should approve a sex-education class proposed for the district.

We take the same position now with a similar proposal for Wendell, which was considered by the Wendell school board this week.

The board Monday turned down the proposal, pending further determination of how the community feels about the subject. We hope the reaction is favorable and that the board reverses its stand.

Like the programs in Filer and Buhl, the sex-education program is a thoroughly-professional one, sponsored by Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. Boys and girls would be separated, and every student would have to have parental permission to attend the class. Parents who don't want their children to get the information can decline to have them attend.

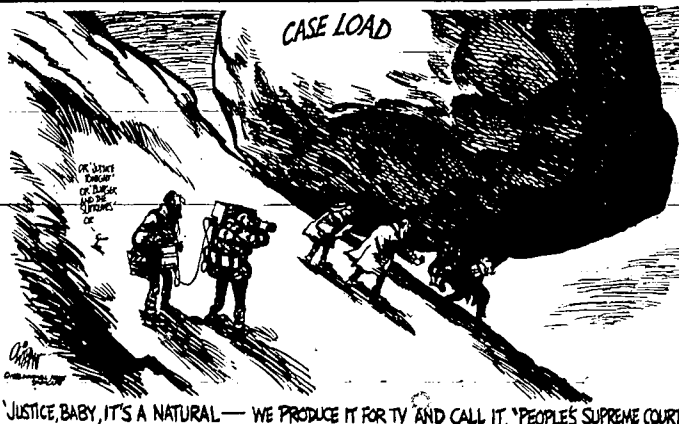

Given those guidelines, we see no reason why the program shouldn't be in widespread use in Magic Valley schools.

School board members may be concerned that such classes, in general, promote sexual promiscuity. It is a good question, but the answer, based on numerous national studies, is "no."

What a class like this does accomplish, says Sharon Fisher, a registered nurse who teaches the class, is to reduce teen pregnancy.

Wendell, like every community, has its share of those.

We hope Wendell parents endorse the program and let the board know they support it.

Snake is best used for low-cost power

Proposed legislative action concerning Snake River water could add millions of dollars to the power bills of southern Idaho residents. The result will be higher costs for existing farms and businesses as well as residential utility customers.

Water that flows down the Snake River turns generators at a series of dams. These are mostly older dams built when construction costs were low. If additional tracts of land are developed for irrigation in southern Idaho, water will be taken from the river. This reduces the river flow. It also lowers the output of low cost energy from those dams.

When that energy is lost, new power plants must be brought on line to replace the reduced energy production. These high priced new plants are paid for by all electricity users in their power bills.

A study by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission indicates that bringing another 200,000 acres of land under irrigation would result in a $54 million annual increase in electricity bills.

At current levels this amounts to a rate hike of about 34 percent which would be added to other rate increases which will soon be upon us as a result of plant capacity expansions that are now under construction.

Over a span of 20 years, the cost of adding 200,000 acres of irrigated land would be more than $1 billion. Most farms, businesses and residential consumers paying this $1 billion would get nothing back in return. It would simply be dollars out of their pockets.

In the recent past, most of the new irrigation developments have not been family farms. They have been giant high-lift projects that benefited very few people. All other residents of southern Idaho have had to pay huge amounts of money to finance the new power plants needed to make up the loss.

The Idaho Supreme Court recently ruled that Idaho Power Co. has a right to a flow of 8,400 cubic feet per second as a part of its license at Swan Falls on the Snake River.

This decision protects the existing flow of water in the river for power production. In addition it protects electricity users from having to pay the billion dollar subsidy which would be forced on them if water is diverted to new irrigation development projects. It also protects existing farms from loss of markets and the depressed farm commodity prices that occur when new land is brought into production.

For the present time the best use of the water is to produce low cost power for farm, business and residential electricity users.

However, a move is underway to nullify the effects of the state Supreme Court decision. Special interests that want to have more water taken from the river for new irrigation projects are pushing for a resolution in the state legislature.

Idaho Power is in the process of reviewing its license at Swan Falls. The renewal will be from the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC). The proposed legislation would ask FERC to issue a license that reduces the company's water rights at Swan Falls. This would open the door to irrigation of large tracts of land and to a stupendously high rate increase for southern Idaho electricity users.

The only reasons that such an economically disastrous measure might pass the state legislature are: 1. residents of southern Idaho don't know that the legislation is being brought up; and 2. people aren't fully aware of their financial stake in the issue.

If we are to head off this billion dollar boondoggle, people must contact their state legislators and the governor. Telephone messages can be placed to legislators at 334-2000. Letters can be sent to the governor and legislators at Statehouse, Boise 83720.

Letters/Kimberly councilman says recall "totally uncalled for."

Recall will hurt feelings

"Blessed are the peacemakers. . . I am the least of people to be quoting this, and yet it is time for all of us in Kimberly to do just that — make peace. There is nothing to gain and much to lose if we continue to do as we are doing now.

Please, all you who are passing petitions to recall our mayor and council, have the courage to discontinue the petition drive, and wait until November to let the regular election process solve the problems. At that time we should all be satisfied to let the majority rule.

A recall election is an expense we cannot afford, yes, but the worst thing about the current situation is what it is doing to people. It is not just our elected officials, but many others are being hurt deeply by the division and accusations: If allowed to continue for several months, the friendly relationships of people in this town will be ruined for years to come.

Councilman comments

I have been on the Kimberly city council for going on ten years. I don't think Kimberly would have to take the back seat for any city. The old saying is you can't please everybody. It is always the few individuals that sometimes make the job so hard.

Majority rules city councils, school boards and any other councils, and if a person in that position can't accept that, I don't think they should be in that position.

The ones that wanted to save taxpayers money go to the opposition and now want to have a recall election. This is totally uncalled for. I think that money could be well spent some place other than that.

How children understand the horror of nuclear war

First of two parts

BOSTON — It was Thursday of a long week of nuclear politics. George Bush was on his way home from explaining our policy to Europeans. The President was talking about our options and zero options. The newspapers were full of words about armaments and disarmaments.

But in Brookline, Mass., Roberta Snow had just arrived at the first grade of the Driscoll School with a film crew. She was there, as she had been in other classrooms in the Boston area, to find out what children knew about the nuclear world, when they knew it, how they felt about it.

As an educator, the director of one high school program, Decisions in the Nuclear Age, and principal investigator of a medical research program for the Study of Human Continuity, she is one of a number of people trying to understand how children grapple with the most ominous reality of their world.

As a grown-up she is also one of a number of people — parents, teachers, friends — trying to figure out how we do, how we should, how we can, talk to kids about the nuclear world when we can hardly talk to each other about it.

Snow didn't embark on this quest as part of some no-nukes politics. She was led to it by students. Over a year ago, a class of teen-aged students assigned to write letters to the Soviet Union had produced reams of copy that expressed their terror of nuclear warfare and their deep anxiety about the possibility that they wouldn't grow up.

For the past year, Snow, along with psychiatrist Eric Chivian, with funding from the International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War, followed that lead and focused questions and cameras directly on this terror. They found it among tenth-graders, seventh-graders, fifth-graders and even third-graders.

The fear, so close to the surface that the students rarely needed more prompting than a single word — nuclear — to begin talking, runs through a disturbing videotape Snow and Chivian made, a tape that has been seen now in schools and meetings across the country.

Its title comes from the words of an 11-year-old: "I Feel Like There's a Nuclear War Going on Inside Me."

The children in this film express the nuclear fear in different ways at different ages. The adolescents are angry and frustrated at the older generation. The 9- and 10-year-olds return to the theme of death and not growing up. The 7- and 2-year-olds focus on the fantasy that they would be left alone in a post-nuclear world.

But even the third-graders were aware of the possibility of nuclear war, far more aware than their parents knew — aware during the daytime and during their nightmares.

Snow and Chivian had come now to the first-grade curious to see if this perception went down to these children in small chairs, the children who wriggled in this semicircle, even to the boy whose shoes were led on the wrong feet.

parents, the television news. Most had assimilated "the nuclear" into the roll call of monsters accumulated by every first-grade television fan and into the cast of characters who filled their nightmare anxieties.

One boy, to accompanying giggles, talked about staying up at night imagining a war in his closet. Another overheard his parents talking and worried that "my street might get blown up." When the class laughed again, a little girl said, "That's not funny, because it might come true."

In two more years, they probably will be as sophisticated as the third-graders with a concept of mass annihilation and an image of the mushroom cloud. In six years, they probably will experience feelings of denial and hopelessness. But on this day, emotions among small, small children were clear: When you heard the word nuclear, what does it make you think about? "Dying." How does it make you feel? "Very, very scared."

Snow and Chivian have been making videotapes in part, as Snow said, "to get adults to understand that kids really do know,

A lot of parents don't accept this."

Many of us have — in fact, prefer — to believe that young children are unaware of the nuclear terrors of our world. To hear them struggling, as we struggle, with what it means to live in such a fragile world, is enormously difficult.

We feel, as parents, called upon to protect our own, called upon to comfort them. Yet we are often equally frightened, equally impotent in the face of the "Unthinkable." We cannot turn on the light, point the flashlight upon our children's beds or into their closet and make, their nuclear monster go away. We cannot make it all better.

But to deny this reality, to wrap this fear in family silence, is to leave children further abandoned in their own anxieties.

"Sometimes," said a boy in this classroom, "it really scares me." He was six years old.

NEXT: Can parents talk about the unthinkable?

New-job tax credit may be appealed

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — Despite objections from chambers of commerce, a House committee on Thursday introduced legislation to repeal Idaho's new-job tax credit.

"We have a large labor pool that is out of work," testified Pete Skanser, an attorney for the Boise Chamber of Commerce. "Creating new jobs is essential, and this law goes a long way in helping achieve that goal."

He said the job-credit legislation — which was sponsored by Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, and passed by the Legislature just last year — has helped attract hospital supply and electronics firms to Idaho, including E.F. Johnson's arrival in Twin Falls.

"People talk a lot about how this credit is being abused, but I say the IRS auditors are more than capable at finding those people out," Skanser said. "If it is abused, then amend it."

But he said a ban would signal out to business that we don't want them here in Idaho," he said. "Attracting these innovative, new industries is the key to diversifying our economy."

But opponents to the Peavey measure argue that it allows existing companies to gain the tax reduction when they simply are hiring back laid-off workers, during this year of recession.

In fact, Peavey himself objects to this possibility — a change that was made over his objections during amending procedures last year on the Senate floor.

But Russ Westerberg, of the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho, claimed Thursday that this abuse does not exist. Instead, he said he agrees with State Tax Commission officials, who say such manipulation of a company's work force, just to earn a few hundred dollars per employee in tax credits, "requires too much pre-meditation."

The repeal bill was introduced in the House Revenue and Taxation Committee by a special-subcommittee appointed by Chairman Rep.

Steven Antone, R-Rupert. That group did not recommend passage of the measure, but it said that the bill should be introduced and debated.

One controversial provision of the bill is that it would make denial of the tax credit retroactive, to Jan. 1, 1983.

"I'm not in love with the job tax credit, but I believe there are businesses that have made binding decisions based on this law," said Rep. Rachel Gilbert, R-Boise. "That Jan. 1 date really bothers me. I think if we repeal it, it should not be retroactive."

The proposed legislation would not, however, affect any tax credits claimed during calendar year 1982. The job tax-credit bill became law last March 24, but it was made retroactive to Jan. 1, 1982.

Evans wants reorganization

BOISE (UPI) — Democratic Gov. John Evans wants the Legislature to create a special commission in his office to come up with a plan to reorganize the state's executive branch.

The chief executive didn't send anyone upstairs to the Republican-controlled Legislature when lawmakers were given their first look at the proposal Thursday.

But the absence of a governor's spokesman didn't matter, because the House State Affairs Committee introduced the bill as a traditional courtesy to the state's top elected official.

mission expenses during fiscal year 1984.

The commission, whose members would serve without pay, would be comprised of the lieutenant governor, three members appointed by the Legislative Council, plus six members appointed by the governor — three of whom must not be affiliated with any state, federal or local government.

The commission would submit its findings to the 1984 Legislature and the governor and would be dissolved when next year's regular legislative session ends.

Committee approves additional funds

By ELLEN MARKS
United Press International

BOISE — A plea about unforeseen inmate expenses and a self-imposed budget request reduction prompted the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee to tentatively approve Thursday a Department of Corrections request to spend an additional $159,700 during the current fiscal year.

But committee members said they would withhold final action on the supplemental request until approval of a measure to balance the budget.

Committee Chairman KETTY Gurnsey, R-Boise, said members should wait until Gov. John Evans acts on a bill to overcome a $69 million shortfall before appropriating any money out of the state's general account.

Acting Corrections Director Mike Mitchell slashed an original supplemental request of $815,200 by deferring funding for a women's prison in Orofino, for six correctional officers at the penitentiary's farm dorm and several other items.

But he said the agency still needs nearly $160,000 from the general fund to pay unexpected costs such as medical expenses and the escape and subsequent shooting of a convicted rapist last year.

"We need this money to operate the facility," said Mitchell, a former JFAC member named to replace former Director C.W. Crowl, who resigned.

Rep. Lawrence Knigge, R-Fler, wholeheartedly supported the request, warning members he would "filibuster this cotton-picking place" until they gave approval.

Committee members overwhelmingly agreed to hold the request until Monday, with a unanimous show of hands indicating they would support the supplemental appropriation.

The agency agreed to delay a $408,300 request for the Idaho Women's Correctional Institution this year, but that move will not push back the planned July 1 opening, Mitchell said.

He said the department will ask the request be granted for fiscal year 1984, which begins in July. He said he hopes to bring down the overall funding request for the prison by not immediately filling the facility to its capacity of 60 prisoners.

But he told the committee he needs money for increasing inmate populations, medical costs and to cover the $6,000 expense associated with the escape last year of convicted Boise rapist David Thompson.

Thompson was shot several days later by officers who pursued him through the foothills north of Boise. He died soon after at a Boise hospital.

Mitchell said there has been an "unusual and unexpected" boom in the prisoner population, with a 17 percent increase at the state penitentiary over the past year.

"We are providing supervision, housing, food, clothing, medical, psychiatric and dental services to 136 more inmates at this time than we were a year ago," Mitchell said in a written statement.

He told the committee medical costs were $63,000 during the first six months of this year, compared to a total $68,000 spent all of last year.

"You can't predict these things," he said.

Ethnic persecution bill approved by Senate

BOISE (UPI) — A bill aimed at cracking down on racial and religious persecution in Idaho by setting penalties for acts of ethnic hatred cleared the state Senate Thursday.

Lawmakers voted 29-6 in favor of the measure offered by Sen. Norma Dobler, D-Moscow. It now goes to the House.

Those opposing the bill said they feared it could "backfire" by giving aiding protection to some groups the measure attempts to restrain and might prompt a wave of frivolous lawsuits.

"Idaho has a tradition of tolerance and neighborliness of which we can all be proud," Mrs. Dobler said. "But we have seen in recent years, increases in incidents of harassment."

The bill was initially recommended by the state Commission on Human Rights, which said the proposal would stem a tide of racism by white-supremacist organizations — which chiefly operate in North Idaho.

Under terms of the measure, anyone convicted of malicious harassment resulting from ethnic, racial or religious hatred could be ordered to serve up to five years in prison and fined $5,000. Such harassment would include injuring or threatening to injure someone or destroying their property.

In addition, victims of the persecution could seek civil damages not to exceed $10,000.

"It's a tough bill, but I think we need it," said Senate State Affairs Chairman Walt Yarbrough, R-Grand View.

Sen. Bill Moore, a Hayden Lake Republican who lives in the same town which serves as the headquarters for the white-supremacist Aryan Nations Church, said the bill has the wide support of law officers and prosecutors in Kootenai County.

Moore also reminded the Senate of a hoax letter mailed to lawmakers earlier in the session which claimed to be from a group eager to stamp out racism as a prelude to gun control.

He said he believes the letter actually came from a member of the Aryan Nations attempting to spur a backlash of resentment in the Legislature against civil rights groups.

Opponents including Sen. Alwell Parry, R-Boise, said they were concerned the bill might lead to protection of racist organizations.

"I come from an organization which has had 160 years of harassment," Parry said.

Consultant says there is no lottery mystery

BOISE (UPI) — An out-of-state consultant traveled to Idaho Thursday with assurances there is no "mystery" to a lottery system, which he said could reap the state as much as $18 million a year with few social and criminal consequences.

Paul Silvergeld, consultant to a lottery firm, sang the praises of lottery systems at the request of Sen. Vernon Lannen, D-Pinehurst, and Rep. James Golder, R-Boise, both of whom want lawmakers to give the public a chance to vote on the issue.

State Law Enforcement Director John Rooney also appeared at the morning-press-conference to say his agency would not oppose a lottery because other states have reported no trouble with organized crime or illegal gambling.

"We have no problem with it if (organizers) set it up properly so there's no tampering or counterfeiting" of tickets, Rooney said.

Silvergeld said Idahoans should be assured that any proposed lotteries might create already have been encountered and solved by the 17 other states that have such systems.

"There is no mystery or mystique to the lottery business," said Silvergeld, a consultant to Scientific Games Inc., a firm that creates and markets lottery systems.

The Connecticut consultant came armed with sample tickets, documents and studies to disprove what he said are misconceptions about lotteries.

He said the average family spends a fraction of one percent of its yearly income on lottery tickets, which generally cost about $1.

He said the bulk of the tickets are purchased by someone who earns $12,000 to $28,000 a year and who has at least a high school education, which disproves the myth that low-income people make up the largest number of participants.

He said if Idaho is typical of other states, it will gross $45 million a year on the games, with about $22 million of that amount paid in prize money to winners.

He said about 10 percent of total lottery revenues go to administration of the system.

He said lotteries are gaining support because of broad public support and overall increased experience at running the systems effectively.

"Lotteries are very popular. People want to play them," Silvergeld said. "They're well-accepted by the public, so state governments are leaning toward them."

Lannen said he will present a second bill to the Senate State Affairs Committee this week that would allocate lottery revenues to the general fund. An earlier bill appropriated the funds solely to education budgets.

Two additional lottery bills are being held in the House.

Lannen said he expects to hear the argument that adopting a lottery would sanction gambling, but he will counter the concern by reminding lawmakers a vote in favor of his bill will merely allow voters to decide the issue.

A lottery would require a simple majority by the public if lawmakers give two-thirds approval.

BLM limits Owyhee visitors

SILVER CITY (UPI) — The Bureau of Land Management has announced plans to keep a limit on the number of tourists and campers in the Silver City area in hopes of preserving the Owyhee County area.

BLM Bruneau Resource manager Oscar Anderson said this week the agency has scaled down earlier plans to develop campsites, visitor centers and scenic drives in the area.

"Basically, we've stated we don't want the area changed," said Clarence Orton, spokesman for the Silver City Taxpayers Association. "We don't want anybody to put in a gas station down the road or a big resort."

About 70 buildings still stand in what is left of the town born in 1864 during a gold and silver boom.

An estimated 10,000 to 15,000 people each year visit the area about 50 miles south of Boise.

As part of the new plans: two Owyhee county dirt roads to the town will stay unimproved to discourage overuse of the area, BLM officials said.

Orton said the rough roads, one south of Nampa and one in Oregon, have protected Silver City and preserved its backcountry atmosphere.

Anderson said earlier plans were changed because residents opposed increased recreation and the BLM lacked funding.

The new plans include one already developed campground and one or two small parking lots near the city.

If funding is approved, the agency would spend about $145,000 on out-houses, signs, a Silver City water system to fight fires and other small projects. Earlier plans would have cost $371,000.

"The key idea is to protect the historic districts and the town and still allow the public to see them, so to speak, their natural state," Anderson said.

Reagan continues Adelman support

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, adamant in his demand for a vote on his nomination of Kenneth Adelman as arms control director, prepared Thursday to fight the Senate "all the way" for confirmation.

Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., at first said he "probably" would provide the single vote Reagan needs in committee to clear the nomination for the Senate, but later backed off, claiming he had made a mistake.

Despite Pressler's turnaround, Senate Republican leader Howard Baker gave his full support to Adelman and told reporters, "I am confident we can get it to the floor."

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee put off a vote on Adelman for one week Wednesday to spare the president the embarrassment of a 98 defeat. Committee members asked Reagan to withdraw the nomination.

Speaking hours later at his nationally broadcast news conference Wednesday night, Reagan refused to back off the nomination.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Thursday Reagan "feels so strongly about the Adelman nomination that he will do whatever he can, whatever is necessary, to let the full Senate have an opportunity to vote on it."

Speakes said Reagan is "absolutely" prepared to fight for the nomination on the Senate floor and Adelman "will stick with it."

"The president will back Adelman all the way," Speakes said. "The president wants his nominee." He said Reagan "feels it would send a wrong signal" to America's allies if Adelman's nomination was rejected.

"The president couldn't be stronger for a nominee," Speakes said. "The president is as solidly behind this nominee as any he has sent to Congress."

Reagan chose Adelman, currently deputy U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, to succeed Eugene Rostow, whom he fired last month as director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

The agency, an advisory group within the State Department, provides the president, secretary of state and Congress with facts, proposals and manpower for disarmament discussions.

Several committee Democrats complained Adelman lacks experience in the arms control field and was "scornful" of past arms control efforts.

There are three ways for the nomination to reach the Senate. The committee can report the nomination with a recommendation of approval; the committee can report it unfavorably, or the Senate can vote to discharge the panel from further consideration and call up the nomination. Pressler, telephoning reporters, said he was mistaken when he said he would vote to report the nomination unfavorably, thereby allowing it to come to the entire Senate.

Pressler said he thought reporting unfavorably would kill the nomination, not clear it for Senate action.

"I have to eat crow," he conceded. Pressler said he would vote against the motion to discharge the nomination from the committee.

But his explanation conflicted with his earlier statements.

Ships which sank in 1812 appear ready for battle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An underwater robot carrying cameras and lights has produced ghostly pictures of two U.S. Navy schooners that sank in Lake Ontario during the War of 1812.

The National Geographic Society said Thursday the ships lie on the bottom 300 feet deep as though ready for action — upright with hulls on the bottom, cannons poised, cannonballs stacked nearby, cutlasses and boarding axes stowed in easy reach.

The images created by the cameras are perhaps the most detailed portraits ever made of ships that deep and foreshadow a new era in underwater exploration, the society said in a statement.

"What the portraits tell us is that the hulls are completely intact, with no visible damage to keels, frames or planking," said project director Daniel Nelson, who described the project in an article for the March issue of National Geographic.

"It is almost as though with a little retinting the two ships could sail again."

Discovery of the two armed sailing vessels, the 60-foot Scourge and the 75-foot Hamilton, was announced last year by the National Geographic Society.

The wreckage of the two vessels was found in 1975 about 500 feet apart in Canadian waters.

The schooners were overwhelmed by a violent squall on Aug. 8, 1813. Many of their crewmen went down with the ships.

The cameras were carried in what engineers call a remotely piloted vehicle.

Government to pursue prosecution

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department, with a new list of more than 5,000 names, said Thursday it intends to pursue prosecutions of men who have failed to register for the draft despite court rulings against the law.

Selective Service spokesman Joan Lamb said the agency had sent a list of 5,154 names to the Justice Department for possible criminal action. John Russell, Justice Department spokesman, said the agency had received the list and intends to pursue prosecutions, even though the government is now appealing two criminal cases in which U.S. District Court judges threw out draft indictments.

To date, there have been 14 indictments and six convictions for failure to register, a felony punishable by a fine of up to $10,000 and five years in prison. An estimated 500,000 eligible men have failed to sign up for possible conscription.

The draft prosecutions have been challenged on several points, including claims of selective prosecution. A federal judge in California has ruled that the government failed to follow proper procedures in setting up registration, and a draft indictment in an Iowa case also was tossed out.

President Carter reinstated draft registration in July 1980. Although Carter asked that women be included, Congress refused. Under the law, any male born Jan. 1, 1960, or later must register within 30 days of his 18th birthday.

Russell said the latest referrals come from 12 states, but he would not identify the states. He said it would be at least a month before any names are referred to U.S. Attorneys' offices for prosecution.

Mrs. Lamb said this is the first large list of names to be forwarded to the Justice Department and is the result of the agency's "active compliance" program.

Previously, Mrs. Lamb said, about 500 names had been sent to the Justice Department. Those names had been obtained through the agency's "passive compliance" program, which depended on names supplied by neighbors or relatives or men who made a point of informing the service they would not register.

The active campaign, she said, involves cross-referencing records with government lists such as Social Security and drivers' licenses.

At state hearing

Idaho Power draws no support on river use

By KELLY EVERITT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Power Co. has few friends in the Magic Valley regarding the controversy over its water rights at Swan Falls Dam.

More than 200 people crammed into a meeting room Wednesday night at the Canyon Springs Inn in Twin Falls to hear a presentation by the Idaho Water Resources Board and offer testimony on a recent state Idaho Supreme Court ruling, which granted Idaho Power 8,400 cubic feet per second of water flow for power generation at Swan Falls Dam. A show of hands midway through the meeting revealed that all but one member of the audience backed efforts by the IWRB to find a way to subordinate Idaho Power's Swan Falls Dam water rights to upstream development.

Reed Hansen, the chairman of the board, which has been conducting hearings across southern Idaho this week on the issue, said.

"In my eight years on the board, this is the most important issue we've ever addressed," Kenneth Dunn, the director of the Department of Water Resources, was even more blunt.

"Given no changes in the existing situation, this will mean a virtual halt to all development in the Snake River Plain.

"The economic impact will be devastating," he said.

The controversy goes back to 1977, when a suit was filed to affirm Idaho Power's rights to water that had not been used at Swan Falls Dam. With its present generation facilities, Idaho Power uses only 3,300 cubic feet of water per second.

But Idaho Power had applied to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission for permission to upgrade its 70-year-old generating facilities at Swan Falls.

In December, the FERC tentatively granted a 50 year license for that purpose. The expanded facilities would make use of all 8,400 cubic feet of water per second, at full-generation capacity. In November, the state Supreme Court had ruled that Idaho Power had a right to that amount of water, even though it had not used it in the past, and some of the water flow had been given to upstream users.

According to Dunn, the 8,400 cubic-foot right is unrealistic to begin with, because there are only 8,000 cubic feet available under the best of circumstances. If the Supreme Court decision stands, Dunn told those attending Thursday night's meeting that in all likelihood, persons with water rights above Swan Falls that were acquired after 1977, probably would not have access to any water during July and August of most years.

Dunn said that without successful litigation

YFCA adding hot tub

TWIN FALLS — In about three weeks, Magic Valley YFCA visitors will find the whirling and swirling of a new hot tub.

A 15-person Jacuzzi is being installed in the swimming pool area at the Y building, according to Y director John Eschenburg.

A "top-of-the-line" hot tub was added to the facility because the YFCA had received many requests for one, he says.

Also, because other fitness facilities offer tubs, YFCA officials felt it would help retain members and draw more interest to the Y and its programs, Eschenburg says.

"I thought it was another thing to offer to the community as part of a total package. It financially made sense."

The project will cost about $3,000. The 8-by-12-foot hot tub — or hydrotherapy spa as it is also called — will be made of the same type of tile material used in the swimming pool, Eschenburg says.

"Installing the hot tub was one of the items on the list of things to do since Y finances were going right," the Y director said Thursday.

The work began Thursday and probably will be completed in three weeks, he says.

Elkhorn complex sold to 'worldly' partners

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

ELKHORN — Details of an agreement to sell the Elkhorn Village Inn and related properties to a partnership of four businessmen from Colorado, Canada and Australia apparently have been finalized.

The price for the 146-room hotel, which has been closed since last summer, with its adjoining commercial mall, ice rink, ski lift, 18-hole golf course, and other incidental property is reported to be $5.5 million.

A March 31 closing date has been set for the deal, but an amount "in the mid six figures" already has been deposited with the current principle owner, the Manville Corp., according to Ed Lawson, a Ketchum attorney representing the buyers.

He said the deal will be an all-cash purchase when it closes.

The partners buying the property are: DeRoy Allen and Gary Couts of Calgary, Alberta, Jim Cunningham of Vail, Colo., and Australian Adam Adams.

Allen, a spokesman for the group, said Thursday that the four "pooled our mutual resources" to make the purchase. He stressed that the four were "equal partners" in the venture.

Allen said Couts and himself have been in business together for five to seven years, developing commercial real estate in Alberta. Most recently, they built eight apartment blocks in Calgary, he said. In addition, he said he has raised $100 million in venture capital in the past for various business projects.

The Alberta men were introduced to Cunningham, who has built and operated the Vahala and Lions Square lodges in Vail, by John-Manville officials in December, Allen said.

The fourth partner, Adams, who has been in the hotel business in Australia and who owns a condominium at Elkhorn, already had tendered an offer to Manville for the resort that had been rejected, he said. They met at Sun Valley.

The hotel and surrounding property is currently owned by Elkhorn at Sun Valley, whose major partner (85 percent) is John-Manville of Idaho Inc., a subsidiary of the Manville Corp., a Denver-based construction company, which filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 federal bankruptcy laws earlier this year. Dollar Mountain Co., a subsidiary of the Sun-Valley Co., is the minor partner.

Elkhorn at Sun Valley, which originally built the complex in 1975, had been trying to sell the hotel and other properties since it re-obtained them by foreclosure last year.

The company foreclosed on Elkhorn Associates Ltd., the partnership that had bought the hotel from Elkhorn at Sun Valley shortly after it was built. That partnership had never managed

Hailey airport doesn't qualify for control tower

By KELLY EVERITT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In the wake of Tuesday's crash of a Transwestern Airlines commuter plane, just south of Friedman Memorial Airport in Hailey, the question has arisen as to why the airport is not a "controlled" facility.

The presence of an air-traffic control tower at the airport would not have had any impact on the crash, but the airport has been reputed to be one of the busiest in the state — by some unofficial estimates, the second busiest.

The airport manager, Paschal Drake, has argued that for safety reasons, he would like to see a control tower — manned by air-traffic controllers — at the facility, but he also admits that it is unlikely the airport could obtain such a facility from the Federal Aviation Administration.

Officials at the FAA regional office in Seattle agreed Thursday with Drake's assessment.

Related story on Page A8

They said it is "highly unlikely" that a control tower would be built at the airport by the FAA "for some time."

According to Jerry Henebry, a planning specialist with the air-traffic division of the FAA's office in Seattle, the agency currently classifies Friedman Memorial as an "extremely low-activity" airport.

"It just doesn't meet our criteria" for consideration to construct a control tower, he said.

Henebry said an estimated air-traffic "ratio" value of at least 1.0 is required before the FAA will begin procedures to consider an airport for a control tower.

The ratio value is determined by taking the number of scheduled air-carrier operations at an airport and dividing by 15,000; plus the number of air-taxi operations divided by 25,000; plus all other takeoffs and landings by other types of aircraft and dividing by 200,000.

If an airport achieves a ratio value of 1.0 in three consecutive six-month evaluation periods, it becomes a candidate for consideration and an extensive cost-benefit review by the FAA's Washington, D.C. office.

According to Henebry, Friedman Memorial has an air-traffic ratio value of 0.58 for 1983 forecast data.

Henebry said the FAA was prepared to conduct a detailed on-site evaluation in 1980, but the airport's own study at that time indicated the facility would not come close to achieving the necessary level needed for consideration of an FAA-financed control tower.

He did say that should state or local funding be obtained to build and maintain a tower, and to pay the salaries of air-traffic controllers, the FAA would be glad to assist in helping them set up and obtain adequate personnel."

Henebry said that in addition to a tower, there are additional qualifications for radar-tracking facilities, and "I doubt if Hailey will ever meet those criteria."

In comparison, the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport is listed as a "low-activity tower" by the FAA, with an air-traffic ratio value of "somewhere between 0.6 and 0.7," Henebry said.

The existing control tower was built several years ago, but Henebry said that "if Twin Falls were to go for a new tower today, it would not meet the criteria" for FAA funding.

In fact, if an airport's ratio value falls below 0.65 for three consecutive six-month evaluation periods, it technically would be considered for discontinuance of FAA-financed tower operations, he said. But while Twin Falls "would be right on the borderline," Congress has mandated a freeze on discontinuance reviews Henebry said.

Work force is stable

E.F. Johnson chief likes small towns

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If welcome parties are indicative of a newly arrived business's prospects for success, Twin Falls and the E.F. Johnson Co. ought to be good for one another.

At least 500 people, each paying $16, showed up Thursday at the 63rd annual Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce banquet to meet Richard Horner, the E.F. Johnson board chairman.

"I can't imagine a more cordial way to welcome a new business to a community," Horner said. "It really bodes well for the commercial and industrial activity in this community, of which we hope to become a part."

Horner reaffirmed his company's commitment to

Twin Falls, saying its decision to open a manufacturing plant in the old Kellwood plant was based on location and the positive characteristics of the local work force.

Horner revealed that nine employees already are on the payroll and that 42 employees should be at the facility by March 1.

That number will top 50 by April 1, he said.

Beyond that, Horner gave no specifics. Noting consistent media questions concerning employment figures by the end of the decade, Horner said such answers would be mere speculation.

"I can throw darts as well as anyone else can," he said. But he added that it was "not unreasonable" to speculate that the firm might eventually employ 2,000 people.

The key to that kind of employment hinges on the firm's success in marketing its mobile telephone units, which E.F. Johnson will begin manufacturing at its facility, located at the southern edge of Twin Falls, later this year or early in 1984.

"Our bet is that the demand for those telephones is going to be high enough to set up mass production," he said.

The decision to purchase the old Kellwood facility was based, in part, on the company's successful record with small towns, Horner said.

"One of the major advantages that the Japanese have... is the stability of their work force and the commitment of their work force," Horner said. "This is the type of commitment we've found in small cities and small towns in the United States."

The Twin Falls area also has proven to be attractive to professionals, whom the company plans to recruit into the area, Horner said.

Boise BBB office warns Twin Falls residents of phone ticket sales

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls city attorney's office is investigating a current telephone solicitation by Denver and Boise-based companies, which claim to be raising funds for the blind.

Also, the Boise Better Business Bureau has issued a warning about the promotion, which seems to be focused on Twin Falls.

According to the bureau release, the American Blind Institute, which claims to be a non-profit fund-raising organization for the blind, is promoting the solicitation, in which carnival tickets are offered for sale. The carnival is scheduled for Twin Falls this summer.

But W. J. Davis Productions of Nampa, the "for-profit" company that is selling the tickets, does not meet bureau business-practice standards, according to the bureau statement.

"Consumers are told that the American Blind Institute is a large Denver organization, which has contributed to many organizations for the blind," said a BBB official. "In actuality, the American Blind Institute is a very small, new company, which may have never donated any money to an organization, for the blind."

According to the BBB statement, the institute will receive 20 cents for every dollar donated. Davis Productions would receive 80 cents.

Jack Davis, of Davis Productions, could not be contacted Thursday, because there is no such firm listed with Mountain Bell Information, Charles Young, of the American Blind Institute, also could not be reached for comment.

The Boise BBB released the information so that Twin Falls residents would be informed of the situation, said Patty Clark, of the Boise office.

The bureau wanted "to let people know that they are simply buying tickets to a carnival — period," said BBB director Ken Thornberg. The price of the tickets are not tax deductible, because the two-month-old institute has not received tax-exempt status yet in Colorado, he said.

The solicitation was brought to the bureau's attention by Nampa police, Clark said.

The police apparently received inquiries from Twin Falls residents who had been called by Thornberg said. Also, other residents had called the bureau inquiring about the promotion, he said.

According to the BBB office in Boise, Davis Productions failed to obtain a license in Boise during a past promotion, has failed to provide financial records to the BBB to substantiate fund-raising and promotional costs and has failed to eliminate misleading advertising practices.

Young even contacted the bureau on Thursday and requested more information on Davis Productions, Clark said.

Fritz Wonderlich, the new Twin Falls city attorney, says he was contacted by Twin Falls police Wednesday after they received some inquiries about the promotion.

Wonderlich, who is investigating the promotion along with police, said Thursday that he did not know if the institute had to be licensed to promote the carnival, under city laws.

Peavey wants state to buy dam

Vandals destroy 23 planes

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (UPI) — Vandals smashed a snowplow into 23 airplanes Thursday turning a small, private airport into a junkyard and destroying more than $500,000 in property.

A broken plow truck at the LaFleur Airport was used to ram the planes in the early morning hours, police said. It was discovered by an officer on routine patrol at 3 a.m. He had checked it 90 minutes before.

"They took every single one of our single-engine airplanes and hit every single one. They backed it up and went forward, backed it up and hit again," said a stunned Dick Giusto, the airport manager.

Airport officials left the keys in the truck because it was broken and wouldn't start, he said.

Giusto estimated the damage exceeded the $500,000 mark but was waiting for insurance inspectors to make a final estimate.

He said the vandals were single-engine, privately-owned crafts parked both inside and outside hangars near the landing strip. They were registered to people and businesses from Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Vermont.

Firefighters were on the scene Thursday cleaning fuel spills to prevent an explosion. Police investigated, collecting fingerprints and examining a single footprint in the mud next to the plow.

"We don't have any idea who did this. Somebody just showed up in the middle of the night," Giusto said, suggesting it was done by "somebody going for a joy ride, crazy fool."

Giusto estimated $200,000 in damage alone was in a hanger.

Gary Hart off and running on campaign trail

Hart joins presidential race

By United Press International

Gary Hart, who wears cowboy boots with his conservative business suits and hopes to build a Democratic base in the traditionally Republican western states, is the latest entry in the presidential sweepstakes.

Hart gained a national reputation managing George McGovern's 1972 presidential campaign. He made the formal announcement of his candidacy on the steps of Colorado's Capitol Thursday and starts his campaign Friday and Saturday with flying visits to Jackson, Miss., Milwaukee and Boston.

The 45-year-old practicing attorney and former divinity student may be the handsomest of his party's potential candidates, but he acknowledges he is not "the greatest public speaker," and is "less exciting" than some of his rivals for the nomination.

"I'll be more exciting after I win a few primaries," he promised recently.

Hart is a graduate of Bethany College in Bethany, Okla., Yale Divinity School and Yale University

Law School, and began his career as an attorney for the Justice Department in 1964.

After a stint as special assistant to Interior Secretary Stewart Udall, he returned to Colorado in 1967 to join a law firm. A year later he set up his own practice, and also was a member of Denver's Urban Renewal Board of Commissioners.

In addition to campaigning for John Kennedy in 1960 and Robert Kennedy in 1968, Hart managed McGovern's campaign and wrote about it in a book entitled "Right from the Start."

Hart was elected to the Senate in 1974 and re-elected by a small margin in 1980, with a record less liberal than the candidates he supported. According to ratings published by the Americans for Democratic Action, Hart has a career-long 79 liberal score, but that score was raised by his 95 rating last year.

In the Senate, he has been most active in issues involving energy, the environment and the military. He likes to make unannounced visits to military installations to see how they operate when they are not spruced up for visiting brass.

Colleagues from both parties consider him one of the most hard working, serious members of the Senate. He is issue oriented and has gained expertise on the military, where he has pushed hard for construction of small nuclear carriers with vertical takeoff aircraft.

Hart headed the investigation into the Three Mile Island accident when he was chairman of the environment and public works subcommittee on nuclear regulation. He urged the industry to bolster safety measures and come up with a permanent solution to nuclear waste disposal.

Hart also chaired the National Commission on Air Quality to study the effects of the Clean Air Act. The results of that study were incorporated into the review of that law during the current Congress, though they drew criticism from both environmentalists and business.

Hart was born Nov. 28, 1937, in Denver. He and his wife, Lee, have two children, Andrea and John.

Court gives police search rights

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The California Supreme Court expanded the rights of police to search the inside of an automobile Thursday, ruling that a warrant is not needed for officers to look inside a glove compartment.

The court, in an unanimous decision, followed a recent U.S. Supreme Court opinion, which said police officers searching a car also could search the glove compartment and the trunk without a search warrant.

While the court did not specifically rule whether a search of an automobile trunk was legal, it said the scope of a search should be based on the kinds of evidence the police believe is inside the car.

"Probable cause to search for a stolen television set, for example, would not justify a search of the glove compartment; probable cause to search for identification would extend to the glove compartment, but would not permit cutting open the car's seat cushions," the court said.

The court upheld the conviction of Michael Chavers for the 1979, 1979, armed robbery of a Lang Beach market and service station which netted a small amount of cash, a bag of potato chips and a six-pack of beer.

Chavers had challenged the right of the police officers to search the inside of his glove compartment after they stopped him near the scene of the crime.

During the search, officers found a bag of potato chips and several beer cans inside the car and proceeded to open the glove compartment where they found a zippered shaving kit.

The officer who took the kit out of the glove compartment felt a gun inside and opened the kit to find a blue-steel revolver. The suspects were then placed under arrest.

DeLoorean claims he was tricked

NEW YORK (UPI) — Automaker John DeLoorean, jailed on charges of dealing in cocaine, says he was lured into a drug "sting" operation by government agents and he and his children were threatened with death if he backed out of the deal.

In an interview to be published by Rolling Stone magazine March 1, the 58-year-old former General Motors boy wonder broke a four-month silence he has maintained since his arrest.

DeLoorean said he once tried to pull out of the cocaine deal designed to save his gleaming, stainless steel, gull-wing sports car, but death threats were made by convicted cocaine smuggler James Hoffman.

Hoffman, 41, has been identified as the government's informer in the case against DeLoorean and William Hetrick, 51, and Stephen Arrington, 34.

"You know all the players," Hoffman reportedly told DeLoorean. "You know the bank. You know this and that. You (profanely) around and your kids are going to get killed. It's going to be a bloody mess."

DeLoorean told Rolling Stone during a six-hour interview at his New Jersey estate that he was still afraid for his life.

In the interview, DeLoorean claimed that the FBI bugged his attorney's telephone. He said a bug had been found in a conference room. "My lawyer goes to a pay phone and I go to a pay phone," he is quoted as saying. "Now what kind of a (profanely) way to talk to your lawyer is that?"

When DeLoorean found a wealthy California insurance man (undertitled in the article) to invest $10 million in DeLoorean Motor Co., the British government rejected the offer and closed the plant under pressure.

Coast Guard searches for second ship

KODIAK, Alaska (UPI) — The Coast Guard took advantage of a break in the weather Thursday to hunt for a second crabbing ship missing in the Bering Sea and for seven crewmen from its sister ship.

Three Coast Guard planes, a helicopter, a cutter and a fleet of private fishing vessels tried to locate the Altair, out of Anacortes, Wash., which was overdue at the Pribilof Islands.

The searchers also scanned the Bering Sea off Dutch Harbor, Alaska, for crew members from the Americas, a 125-foot ship from Anacortes that capsized in heavy seas Monday night and sank Wednesday.

"The seas are down to four feet now," said Bill Boatman, U.S. Coast Guard spokesman in Juneau. "But a low ceiling and poor-visibility continue and will hamper the search."

Three C-130 planes and a helicopter hunted along the Altair's expected traveling path and efforts continued to raise the ship by radio. The Altair and its seven-member crew were expected to arrive in the Pribilof Islands Wednesday.

The Altair left Dutch Harbor four hours before the Americas on Monday morning, Boatman said.

"I can't imagine what caused it to happen," said Jeff Hendricks, owner of both boats, and brother-in-law of both ships' captains — George Nations of the Americas and Ron Bernes of the Altair.

Hendricks, Bernes and Nations are married to sisters, Nations' son, Jeff, is a crewman on the Americas.

"I've been aboard in seas and winds much worse than they were when this happened," Hendricks said in Anacortes. "The only thing I can think of is that there was some leak, or some breach," he said.

The icebreaker Polar Sea, which had called to assist with the Americas, resumed its voyage north towards the Bering Straits and Chukchi Sea where it will conduct marine mammal studies.

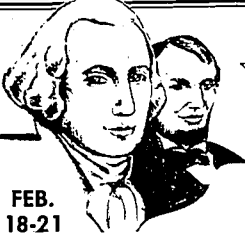

In Anacortes, the flag flew at half staff at the Seafarer's Memorial and townspeople grieved as they waited anxiously for news about the 14 men.

"We've had people die at sea before," said Sonny Hansen, 45, a crab fisherman. "But never something like this. You know it's dangerous when you go out. I went out this morning and a kind of had it in the back of my mind. I kind of backed off when the wind came up."

Almost everyone in Anacortes, population 9,280, is affected, according to Jim Mize, manager of Wyman's Wholesale Marine Supplies.

"Everyone knew someone who was aboard, or they had sons or daughters who went to school with them," he said.

Crewmen aboard a Soviet trawler in the area at the time the Americas capsized reported seeing what they thought was a body floating.

Killing blazes sweep across Australia, 69 reported dead

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) — More than 5,500 firefighters Thursday struggled in 100-degree heat to contain at least 50 blazes sweeping across southern Australia in the second day of a "holocaust" that killed 69 people and destroyed 2,155 homes.

Burned-out cars and the carcasses of animals littered the countryside. Hundreds of kangaroos, wallabies, cattle and sheep had to be shot after suffering serious burns. Ranchers reported staggering losses.

Officials said 26 people were killed in South Australia and 43 in Victoria, the two states where fires rushed across parched plains pushed by strong winds. Most were trapped in their homes by walls of fire or incinerated in their cars while trying to escape.

Hundreds more were injured in what opposition Labor Party leader Bob Hawke called "one of the greatest tragedies in our history."

Among the fatalities were 12 volunteer firefighters, including a woman, who were trapped in a ring of fire and burned to death in seconds near Beaconsfield in Victoria.

More than 5,500 firefighters, handling heavy equipment, were mobilized to fight the fires. Firefighters aided by rain appeared to have brought the blazes under control in the state of South Australia.

But more than 50 blazes raged on in neighboring Victoria, where seven small towns burned down.

"South Australia and Victoria have been devastated by a holocaust and I extend my sincerest sympathy," a stunned Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser said after surveying stricken areas from a helicopter.

Members of the Australian Insurance Assessors Association said 1,380 homes were destroyed. They estimated damage at $400 million.

The helplessness thousands felt was captured by radio reporter Murray Niool as he described the loss of his home on the outskirts of the South Australian capital of Adelaide. "Oh! God damn it, it's just beyond belief," he said in a choked voice in a live report. "There are fires burning all around me."

"The front section of my house is blazing, the roof section has fallen in.

My water tanks are useless, there is absolutely nothing I can do about it... The house is just going before my eyes."

More than 100 Adelaide Hills homes burned to the ground and residents said looters were moving into the area.

"People are coming up from nearby towns and they are taking clothes, baby clothes, axes, anything they can," one distraught woman reported.

"God help anyone who is found looting in the fire areas," warned Adelaide Police Inspector John Bevan.

Police said they were questioning three 14-year-old boys about a fire that destroyed 50 houses outside Melbourne, capital of Victoria. Another was being interrogated about blazes that destroyed Cockatoo and upper Beaconsfield, two of the seven burned-out townships.

In South Australia, unconfirmed reports cited arson as a factor in the blaze that virtually wiped out Mount Burr Pine forest, about 163 miles southeast of Adelaide.

Quebec teachers defy law

QUEBEC (UPI) — Most of Quebec's 80,000 teachers stayed off the job Thursday in a three-week walkout, defying a tough strike-breaking law that threatened them with dismissal.

Cabinet ministers in Premier Rene Levesque's government met to consider options which may include an election.

In Sainte-Anne-de-Beaupre, 25 miles northeast of Quebec City, six striking teachers were arrested for intimidating co-workers returning to their jobs.

"If we can't ever get these people to understand we'll have to take other measures and one of the measures which was mentioned — I think it's the ultimate one — is necessarily having elections," said Guy Chevrette, recreation, hunting and fishing minister.

But Transport Minister Michel Clair said Levesque was not contemplating ending the separatist government he has controlled since 1976.

Faced with a cumulative deficit expected to top $18 billion at the end of this fiscal year, Levesque's Parti Quebecois government unilaterally cut or reduced the wages of public employees for the first three months of 1983, sparking the strikes.

In Montreal, teachers stayed away from English-language schools but some at French-language schools turned up. In Quebec, about a quarter of the Catholic school teachers reported for work.

The strike-breaking law passed in an emergency session of the provincial legislature ordered teachers to return to work Thursday and empowers the government to fire or impose other strict disciplinary measures on those who refuse.

Under its provisions, striking teachers who ignore the deadline but eventually return to work would be docked a day's pay for each day off and lose three years' seniority for each day they remained on strike.

It would also permit the government to end automatic union dues deductions from paychecks for six months for each day the teachers stay out.

Levesque, visibly angry after learning teachers planned to defy the law, told the National Assembly late Wednesday: "We are ready to accept the judgment of the population and if necessary to seek it."

Tough contracts imposed on 300,000 government employees froze or cut salaries by up to 19.45 percent for the first three months of 1983 and increased work loads while reducing jobs security, touching off the strike which has halted classes for 1.4 million students from nursery to junior college for the past three weeks.

Suchitoto siege into 6th day

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Salvadoran helicopters airlifted troops into Suchitoto today in an attempt to break a six-day guerrilla siege of the key northern city and gateway to the capital.

Many Suchitoto residents were fleeing across Lake Suchitlana in small boats and canoes, national guardsmen said. They said the city is without potable water and electric power and food was running out.

Helicopters strafed rebel positions on outlying roads, as soldiers inside the city of 15,000 massed along the shores of the lake to secure the landing zone for helicopters flying in reinforcements, officials said.

A military official said six U.S.-supplied UH-1 "Huey" helicopters managed to airlift 250 troops into the town at dusk Wednesday after guerrilla fire drove off earlier helicopter sorties.

A civil servant at the mayor's office in Suchitoto, 30 miles north of San Salvador, Wednesday said guerrillas kept the 400 government troops garrisoned inside the town pinned down with constant gunfire.

An unspecified number of air force helicopters trying to resupply the beleaguered government troops were forced to abandon their missions Wednesday because of guerrilla gunfire, the civil servant said.

"The mayor spoke with officials in San Salvador and they promised to send us supplies... food... in another helicopter because we can't get out of Suchitoto," he said.

Suchitoto has been under siege since Saturday when rebels routed government troops defending the only highway into the city of 15,000 people. Insurgents control 5 miles of road leading northward into the city and have set up roadblocks in the area to prevent government resupply trucks from reaching the defenders inside Suchitoto, military officials said.

The city is considered strategically important because of its proximity and access to the capital, as well as to two hydroelectric dams which supply over 50 percent of the nation's power.

Rebels are deeply entrenched along the slopes of the Guazapa Volcano overlooking the town and the road.

Iran threatens to hit targets inside of Iraq

By United Press International

Iran threatened in a radio broadcast today to widen its 29-month war against Iraq by striking "strategic political, economic and military targets" on Iraqi soil.

The warning by Iranian parliament speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani came as Iraq claims Wednesday its forces had stopped a fresh Iranian attack at Shih on the Misan front, 200 miles southeast of Baghdad.

Rafsanjani, in the speech to the Supreme Defense Council in Tehran Wednesday, said the objectives of an 11-day offensive along the border with Iraq had been accomplished.

Rafsanjani said he could not reveal details of Iran's victories "because of security reasons."

"So far, the war was fought on our soil, but in future it will not be so," he said in the broadcast monitored in London.

"Iraq would find it difficult to face the situation" when the war is fought "on a wider scale and on the Iraqi soil, hitting strategic Iraqi political, economic and military targets," he said.

Iran has claimed that since launching the offensive Feb. 7, its forces have recaptured 120 square miles of territory lost to the Iraqis in the war. Iraq has not disputed the claim.

In Baghdad, President Saddam Hussein charged that Israel was "still providing Iran with weapons and spare parts" for its mainly U.S.-made war machine, the Iraqi news agency said.

Rafsanjani said as a result of the offensive, Iran's enemies "do not know what to do."

Referring to mediation attempts by Islamic states, particularly Algeria and Saudi Arabia, Rafsanjani said, "The mediators are welcome here only with new proposals."

"We want reparations and punishment of Saddam," Rafsanjani said. "The Iraqis have been thrown out of our territory except for a few border points, including Naji Shahr, a border town — in Iran's Kermanshahan province.

At the United Nations this week, Iran increased its demand for war reparations from $150 billion to $200 billion.

Rafsanjani said France had "taken a great risk" by deciding to support Iraq. Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson visited Baghdad this week to discuss deliveries of French warplanes and arms to Iraq.

Rafsanjani said Cheysson, in his trip to Syria, Iran's ally, also had tried to persuade Syria to reopen the Iraqi pipeline through that country but was "disappointed by Syria."

Iraq's crude oil exports through Syria and the Persian Gulf have been suspended during the war, with only about 600,000 barrels a day of its exports flowing through a pipeline to Turkey.

Is that Nessie on the screen?

LONDON (UPI) — The Loch Ness monster may have shown up on sonar tests, scientists searching for the elusive creature said Thursday, but they have no proof the blip on the screen was "Nessie."

The findings, reported in the magazine New Scientist, were another step in the 20-year scientific quest to establish whether the creature is myth or reality.

A total of 40 sonar contacts last year together with rock and marine samples provided "data consistent with the presence of large animals," in the loch in northern Scotland, said Adrian Shine, leader of the Loch Ness project.

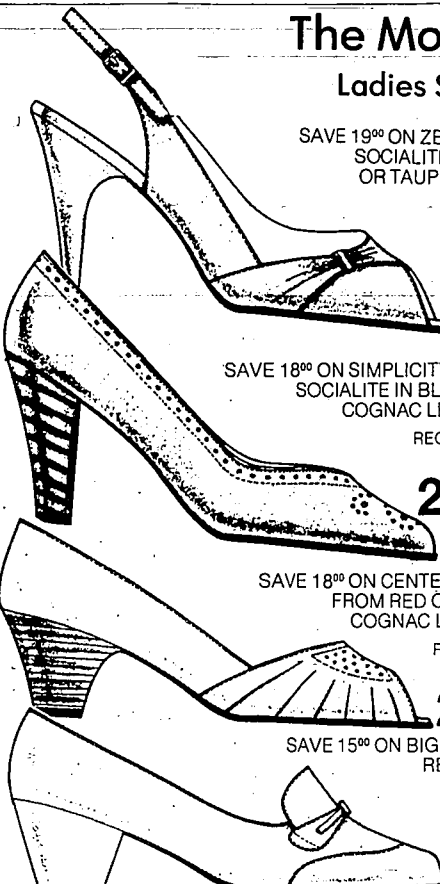

So far, whatever is in the loch merely shows up as a curve or a blip on a sonar chart. Scientists are making no rash predictions.

But Shine said scientists now "have a strong data base from which to operate" and find out what the signals mean — "perhaps to show that there are monsters, perhaps to find, at least beyond reasonable doubt, that their existence is too unlikely to warrant further study."

The sonar sightings showed something moving vertically in the depths of the loch in the Scottish Highlands. Sonar experts monitoring the search from May to August last year included personnel from Siraard of Norway, "who have the longest commercial experience of horizontal sonar in the world," Shine said.

Jerome overcomes Buhl stall, 10-8

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS -- The Buhl Indians took the air out of the basketball and, nearly, Jerome out of the winners' bracket Thursday night.

Facing a bigger, more talented Tiger team, Buhl Coach Ben Allen ordered his team to employ an spread-court offense and consume several minutes at a time before shooting, thus minimizing Jerome's chances to build an insurmountable lead.

Allen's strategy worked -- except that Buhl lost anyway. Gary Hulsey and Troy Prairie each sank last-minute free throws, enabling the Tigers to survive 10-8 and advance to the finals of the Fourth District A-2 Tournament at the College of Southern Idaho.

The other game was more conventional. After enduring a third-quarter challenge by pesky Wood River, Burley outmaneuvered and outgunned the Wolverines in the fourth quarter for a 61-44 victory. The decision eliminates Wood River from the tourney and sets up a Burley-Buhl confrontation to-night at 8:30 for the other berth in the finals.

Jerome 10, Buhl 8

Allen first considered using the stall nearly a month ago, after Jerome annihilated Buhl 88-56 in a regular-season game.

"We can play with Jerome for a quarter or two at a time, but after that they just wear us down physically," Allen explained after liberating a Tums from his wrapper. "Our plan was if we could start the fourth quarter six points down or better, we had an excellent chance to beat them. I didn't want to delay the game in the fourth quarter; Jerome played such good defense."

In the fourth quarter, Allen hoped the Indians could "just go out and attack them, hope they (the Tigers) had stood around a bit too much and maybe press and get some turnovers." For 31 minutes, action proceeded as Allen envisioned it. Baskets by Greg Bartholomew and Kevin Hulsey gave Jerome a 4-2 first-quarter lead; Buhl scored on Greg Meyer's two free throws with one second left in the period.

After Kevin Hulsey opened the second quarter by hitting a jumper from the right baseline, Buhl played pitch-and-catch for six minutes and 25 seconds before Meyer threw the ball out of bounds with 46 seconds left. Kevin Hulsey shot an air ball but 26 seconds to go, but Buhl's Charlie Carter also missed, preserving Jerome's 6-2 halftime lead.

Jerome fans, understandably, were angry with the Indians' tactics. But Tiger Coach Pat Hoke remained calm.

"With the four- to six-point lead we had, we weren't too concerned," Hoke said. "What you are concerned about is a momentum change in the second half."

That change occurred. Buhl took just three shots in the second half and made each one. Thus, Jerome's fortune in having the ball with the score tied and Buhl's failure to get a shot when it trailed, 9-8 were surely decisive factors.

Key turnover helps Bruins edge Minico

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS -- A double turnover on an inbound pass might end up being the big play of the 1983 District A-1 basketball tournament.

Andy Toolson, looking more like a loser of a prize fight than a basketball winner at this point, wound up with the ball and a cripple that blunted a late Minico bid and hoisted Twin Falls to a 58-52 decision Thursday night.

The crucial play began with 1:22 left in the game and Twin Falls trying to get the ball in bounds after John Miller's free throw had narrowed the gap to 52-47. Twice Minico slapped the ball back out of bounds and the third Bruin inbound pass simply bounced into an open court and headed for the mid-line. A Minico player had no trouble in retrieving it but made a key mistake by dribbling it with his back to the play. Meanwhile, Toolson came up on the outside to tap the ball away and went on in for the layin.

That play was the most visible key but there was another reason. In un-Minico-like fashion, the Spartans hit just 10 of 24 free throw attempts, allowing Twin Falls to win it there with a 20-26 effort. Minico won the field goal duel 21-19.

But both sides came up with big plays and solid individual efforts throughout the night. Minico threatened to bottle up Twin Falls totally with an "in-your-face" defense that restricted the Bruins to one field goal through the first quarter and the first 28 seconds of the second. However, because the Bruins had hit seven of eight free throws, they trailed only 12-11 at that time.

In the third period, when Twin Falls started making some penetration moves to ease the defensive pressure, the Bruins threatened to break it over. But Minico, despite being from battling the height disadvantage, found the reserve to put up one more streak, trimming three nine-point deficits to four points once and then five before Toolson went on his solo dash.

That Toolson could make that play looked very dim with 2:20 left in the second quarter. The 6-5 Junior became entangled with a Spartan on a rebound and wound up "crashing head first into the floor, his forehead taking the brunt of the fall.

"I wasn't worried at first," said Coach John Astorquia, "until I got out there and he rolled over. I couldn't believe the amount of blood on his face."

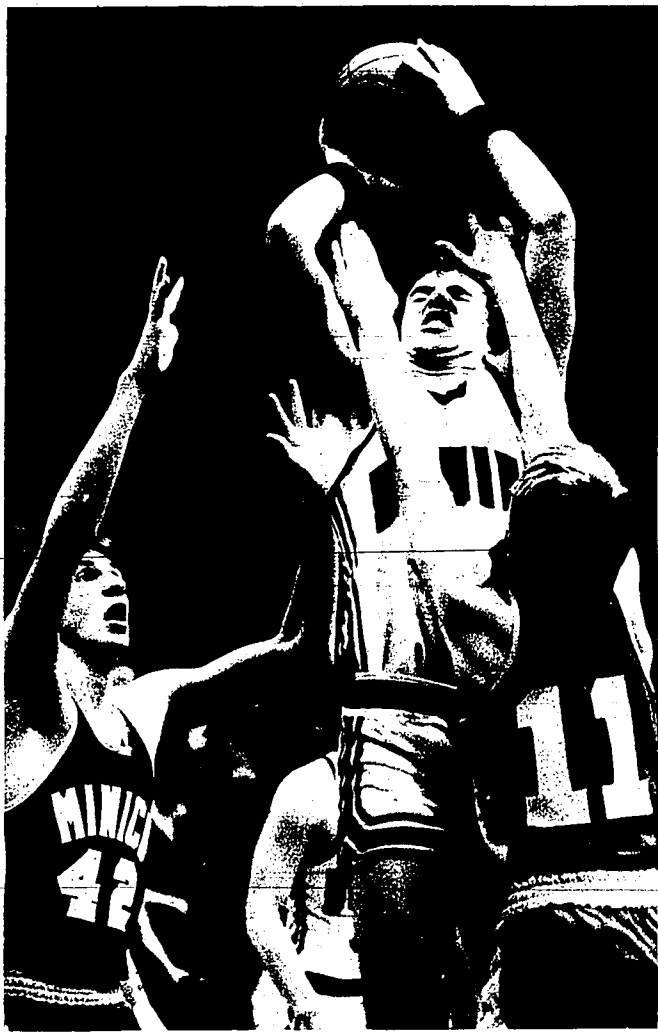

"I don't know," said Toolson when asked if he lost consciousness. "I was kinda spacey for a while."

Four doctors appeared out of the crowd to get the youngster back in play. Toolson reappeared with four staples holding his right eyebrow together as the second half began. He picked up seven points after that.

In the end, both coaches agreed the methodology of the game had been exactly as expected.

"I was really happy with our defense, especially in the first half," said Coach Craig Dexter. "We talk a lot about steps and stances and I was really pleased with our stances tonight. We had a lot of close five second counts which is an indicator of good defense."

Idaho drops Reno

MOSCOW -- Brian Kellerman's 17-point tear early in the second half broke University of Idaho's Vandals past Reno 88-78 Thursday night.

Trailing much of the late first half but rallying into a 36-36 halftime tie, the Vandals benefitted as their four-year starting guard hit seven straight field goal attempts and a free throw. Abetted by Peter Prigge's perfect shooting from the field, Kellerman shot Idaho into a 13-point lead at one point and Reno was never closer than six after that.

The result left Montana, a 69-55 winner over Idaho State, on top of the Big Sky Conference standings at 8-2 while Reno, Idaho and Weber State jammed into second place at 7-3. Boise State, which beat Northern Arizona, evened out at 5-5, followed by Idaho State at 3-7, Montana State 2-8 and Northern Arizona 1-9.

Idaho, which saw a 43-game home court win streak broken last Saturday by Montana, held an early six-point lead but that wilted in the closing eight minutes of the half and Reno moved ahead by as much as five.

Kellerman's first two field goals held the tie at 40-40 as the second half opened. Then, suddenly, as Idaho for the first time in years forsok its match-up zone for a man defense, blazed with steals and shooting, Kellerman made it 42-40 and then picked up a three-point play on a fast break. Prigge drilled one off the baseline and added a rebound shot to make it 51-40.

After that it was a torrid basket-matching duel. Reno turned to the three-point play to help narrow OB count to 76-70 with 2:40 to play but Prigge, who hit 20 points plus leading in rebounding with nine, then hit four straight free throws and four more closing points to take the Vandals to victory.

NBA union sets deadline

NEW YORK (UPI) -- Vowing his union is "willing to take whatever steps are necessary to reach an agreement," the executive vice president of the NBA Players Association confirmed Thursday that the league's players have set an April 2 deadline for conclusion of negotiations for a collective bargaining agreement.

"The player reps voted unanimously at the All-Star game meetings to set a deadline for April 2," said Charles Grantham, NBA's executive vice-president. "We are ready to continue to negotiate until that date, but we are willing to take whatever steps are necessary to reach an agreement."

The union has been without a contract since last summer but had publicly refused to set a timetable for a successful conclusion of talks. Some fear a walkout by pro basketball players would spell the end of the NBA.

According to a league spokesman, the average player salary in the NBA is $246,000 -- the highest in professional sports.

"A strike would be harmful and something that we have been trying to avoid," the spokesman said. "We were hoping to sticking to business instead of name calling."

"The players in our sport have it very, very well," the spokesman continued. "There has been more free agency, more movement... we'd like to develop a framework under which the league can survive and continue to grow. The average team loses more than $700,000. To keep on going the way we have leads to more instability."

But, Grantham said the union has been given the NBA more than enough time to reach a pact with the players.

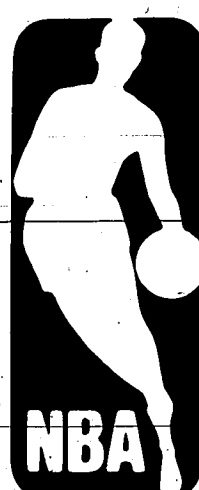

"We have been negotiating since last August," Grantham said. "This has not been inconsistent -- this is not the first time we entered into a season without an agreement."

Grantham, speaking for the union because NBAPA general counsel Larry Fleisher was said to be out of town until next week, said negotiations were ongoing about "once every week until ten days before the All-Star Game."

According to Grantham, though, the league submitted a proposal that was "an attempt to break the union."

The talks apparently sagged after the union rejected a revenue-sharing plan whereby player salaries would be tied to the success of the league. Team's

G. Ferry, Gooding survive

By MARV CLEMONS

WENDELL -- Glens Ferry and Gooding survived elimination in Thursday night's loser's bracket play in the Fourth District A-3 Boys Basketball Tournament at Wendell High.

Glens Ferry went to its veteran performer to edge Wendell 62-52 and Gooding cranked up its fast break to bounce Valley 65-52.

In Junior varsity play, Glens Ferry defeated Shoshone 64-33 and Gooding took Wendell 66-41.

G. Ferry 62, Wendell 52

Joe Rodriguez has been a starter for the Glens Ferry Pilots for three seasons, including his sophomore year when the Pilots won the 1981 state championship. He's faced some pressure games during his tenure.

Thursday night it was his soft touch at the free throw line under pressure that gave the Pilots a 62-52 win to send Wendell to the sidelines.

After Matt Bertagnoli hit from the wing to put the Trojans ahead 49-48, Rodriguez made his move.

The 5-10 senior dropped in a 15-footer by timing his jump to go up when a pair of Wendell defenders was coming down. The official said a Trojan nicked Rodriguez on the arm and he calmly added the free throw for a three-pointer and a 51-49 Glens Ferry lead.

Kelly Westendorf drove the baseline to put Wendell back into a temporary tie, but Pilot Dave Carpenter made a drive count for two and seconds later Rodriguez was fouled after stealing the ball. He made both ends of a one-and-one for a 55-51 Glens Ferry cushion.

Veteran Coach Gordon Brown put the Pilots into a delay less than a minute later. The Pilots worked the play to perfection for 62 seconds until Chris Anderson, all alone under the basket, got the pass and sank a layin for a 57-52 margin. Wendell was forced to foul and the Pilots added five free throws for the final margin.

"Joe is just an excellent player," Brown said. "He's tough in those situations. The spread did what we wanted it to do, it got that crucial basket."

Wendell, the first team ousted from the double-elimination affair, stayed with the Pilots despite falling behind by eight points early in the second quarter and six midway in the third.

Trailing 42-36, the Trojans hit a streak with 3:1 left in the third period. Westendorf made a free throw, missed the second and Brian Gough scored on the Trojans' third follow shot. Wendell trailed 42-39.

Gough's two free throws with 2:49 left cut the deficit to one and Todd Davis' layin with 1:55 to go gave the Trojans a 43-42 lead.

The furry got Brown's attention and he called a time out to get his player's attention -- a bit more than mildly.

"I had to tell them to get up on the boards and if nothing else, to kick the ball out of the key," he recalled. "Wendell was getting inside and getting too many shots and they were beating us down the court."

The Pilots corrected the errors and stayed within a point until Rodriguez provided the edge that allowed Brown to go to the spread.

Camas, Gooding State remain alive

GOODING — Camas County and Gooding State can breathe easier today, as they defeated their opponents Thursday night in the Northside District A-Basketball Tournament.

Camas fought back a second-half surge by Richfield to win the loser-out finale 49-39. That means the Musers will play Gooding State, a 45-36 winner over Bliss at 7 p.m. Saturday.

Camas 49, Richfield 39

Camas was up by as much as 18 points in the second period, thanks in large part to Shannon Wolf's game-leading 19 points.

However, the Tigers, fired up by the inside shooting of Jerry Robinson, reeled off a pair of back-to-back 14-point quarters to outscore the Musers by eight.

Richfield's Achilles' heel exposed itself over and over, as the Tigers allowed valuable layups, primarily from the inside, to go down the drain. Lonnie Funkhouser, who ended up with 10.

help wear down the Tigers. Bliss had only three players to help assist Bears Coach Jerry Couch's starting five.

About his must-win victory, Blankenship said, "We have to play better. We had our backs to the wall so it was either win or you'd be out. It's that simple."

Richfield came close to upsetting the team which was expected to do finally got them thinking of driving to the basket or back cutting and that took them back a little.

"But I thought the big thing was offensively we probably were a little tight. Our people were getting their shots but it wasn't going down."

Astorpula cited the play of Bowen Call for several blocked shots and five-of-six free throw shooting and Mike Rice, who was 9-of-10 from the field in the first half, but wound up with 12 and sparked a late third breakthrough.

"Mike forced three jump balls and picked up a couple of steals that were critical for us," the coach said.

Minico sophomore Brad Croft gave Twin Falls problems for four of his well in the tournament by nearly tying the game in the final period. Creeping up on the Musers with Robinson's inside shots and an occasional field goal by Darren Exon, Exon hit a high arching ball over a defender to put the Tigers within six.

Despite a pair of field goals by Richfield and a later bucket by Weber came through to hit a medium range basket. From that point Richfield didn't present itself as a serious threat.

Good. St. 45, Bliss 36

The nightcap was one of sweet revenge for Gooding State, as the school-owned Bliss, a team it had lost to twice during the regular season.

In fact, it wasn't hard to find a team the Redskins hadn't lost to twice in the season, as their record was 2-13 going into the contest.

Despite that, Redskins guard Sam Weber ignited his club with extremely accurate baseline shooting. That helped establish a 27-16 halftime lead.

The second half was different, as Weber cooled off, leaving the honors to Sam Wilding, Gooding State's center, who did everything but sweep the floor in the final period.

After suffering a bruising collision in the middle with two Bliss players, Wilding hit the first of three inside layups. Being in heavy traffic, the defender found himself trotting to the line twice, making three of four attempts.

Wilding's total came to 12, second to Weber's 17, while for Bliss, Ritchie Graves hit 10 of 17 free throws and 14 points.

Boise State handles Northern Arizona, evens record at 5-5

BOISE (UPI) — Vince Hinchen scored 22 points and Ramn Hayes added 14 points in the second half Thursday night to lead Boise State to a 68-62 Big Sky Conference victory over Northern Arizona.

Hayes and Hinchen repeatedly drove inside and drew fouls to help put the Broncos ahead with free throws.

Hayes missed his first five foul shots, but found the range late in the game as the Broncos gradually pulled away. He hit five free throws in the last two minutes after Northern Arizona's Rick Rodriguez pulled his team within 10.

Boise State improved to 10-13 and 5-5 in the Big Sky. The Lumberjacks dipped to 8-14 and 1-9.

MISSOULA, Mont. (UPI) — Derrick Pope scored 15 and Larry Krickowski added 12 to lead Montana past Idaho State 65-51 in a Big Sky conference game Thursday night.

The first-place Grizzlies improved to 20-4 overall and 8-2 in the league. Idaho State fell to 6-17 and 3-7.

Montana took a 22-10 lead, before the Bengals managed to cut the margin to 26-22 at the half. However, Montana then raced to a 47-30 advantage with 9:29 left in the game and coasted the rest of the way.

WYOMING 65, Utah 47

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Tony Martin and Mike Jackson scored 17 points each to lead Wyoming to a 65-47 triumph over Utah Thursday night in a Western Athletic Conference game.

Wyoming, 13-1 overall and 5-6 in the WAC, hit 68.3 percent from the floor while the Utes, 12-12 and 7-4, shot 30.5 percent.

The game was close in the first half, with the biggest lead being four points. Wyoming took a 23-24 lead at halftime.

Utah hit the first basket of the second half to cut the lead to 28-26, but then Wyoming outscored the Utes 10-2 to break the game open.

BYU 69, Colo. St. 58

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — Brett Applegate and Devin Durrant combined for 43 points to lead BYU to a 69-58 Western Athletic Conference win over Colorado State Thursday night in the Marriott Center.

The win gives the Cougars an 8-3 conference mark to tie them with UTPE for the league lead, while Colorado dropped to 4-8 in the WAC.

The Cougars were nursing a slim 3-point lead with just over five minutes to go when they caught fire and scored 12 straight points to seal the Rams' coffin.

Colorado's lead did not score again until just 18 seconds remained in the game.

The Bulldogs ran off 13 unanswered points midway through the first half to lead a 37-12 lead with 3:58 remaining in the first 20 minutes. The Gauchos went 8 minutes without a basket.

Fresno State held a 41-10 halftime lead.

The Bulldogs improved their record to 14-9 overall and 5-7 in the league, while the Gauchos, paced by Michael Russell's 19 points, dropped to 7-16 and 1-11.

LOGAN, Utah (UPI) — Freshman Greg Grant scored 21 points and grabbed 10 rebounds in leading Utah State to a 67-59 victory over Fullerton State in a Pacific Coast Athletic Association game Thursday night.

The Aggies took a 10-0 lead and were up 23-21 at halftime. Fullerton closed the gap to 5 points in the second half and came within 4 points with 50 seconds to play on guard Leon Wood's 3-point field goal, which cut the margin to 61-57.

But the Aggies hit 8-of-9 free throws in the last 80 seconds to put the victory away.

Grant also added five assists, four blocked shots and three steals in lifting the Aggies to an 18-5 overall record, and 8-4 in conference play. Utah State plays No. 2 Nevada-Las Vegas Saturday night. Fullerton is 17-5 overall and 8-3 in the conference.

Missouri 74, Kans. 69

COLUMBIA, Mo. (UPI) — Greg Cavenor scored 21 points and Jon Sundvold 18 to give 10th-rated Missouri a 74-69 Big Eight victory Thursday night over Kansas, securing the Tigers their fourth straight 20-win season.

Steve Stuparovich and Prince Bridges added 14 points apiece and Cavenor and Ron Jones turned in outstanding defensive efforts as Missouri improved its records to 20-4 overall and 8-1 in the conference. Cavenor held Kansas forward Kerry Boggs to 6 points, 9 for under his average, and Jones held Carl Herya to 10 points, 7 under his average.

SEATTLE (UPI) — Charlie Siltson scored 19 points and A.C. Green added 18 as Oregon State pulled away in the final minutes to post a 60-50 Pac-10 victory over Washington Thursday night.

The victory gives the Beavers' seventh straight win and raised OSU's record to 14-8 overall and 8-4 in the Pac-10. Washington fell to 13-12 and 4-8.

Oregon State won the game at the free throw line, hitting eight straight foul shots in the final two minutes and 20 of 22 for the game.

"But Toolson's play was maybe the big play of the night," he continued, "we were able to shoot lights out for the last few minutes. I felt if we could get faced up to the basket on that possession we would have scored again. But our guy made the mistake of dribbling it instead of picking it up and Toolson made the play."

The Wolverines reduced a 26-10 Burley lead to 28-18 by halftime, but still trailed 36-25 midway through the third period. Then Mike Williams hit a 17-footer. Bryan Ritter sank one of two free throws and Lee Ritza scored underneath following Don Karst's steal off Wood River's press. Ritter's basket came with 3:46 left and put Wood River within six, 36-30.

The varying zone alignments and the full-court press the Wolverines used spurred their resurgence.

"We got a little better defensively and forced some turnovers," Wood River Coach Dick Ritchie said.

"They (the Wolverines) switched their zone a couple of times, and we didn't quite make the adjustments we wanted to make," Burley Coach Gary Swan observed.

The third quarter began with Jerome again getting the opening tip. Bob Stone made a 15-foot jumper from the right side for an 8-2 Tiger advantage.

As the Indians resumed their game of keep-away, Jerome suited in the "pressers" section of newspapers and pretended to read them in mock boredom. They chose a good time to read; Buhl was in the process of throwing 212 passes without a shot. But No. 212 was to Meyer, who had cut up the left baseline as the quarter's end approached. Meyer sank a layup with four seconds left, bringing Buhl within 8-4.

After controlling the fourth-quarter tip, the Tigers were the ones to stall, pleasing their fans to no end. But Hoke later revealed that this maneuver was borne out of revenge, but necessarily.

"We wanted to get a good shot, and we wanted to do it by spreading their defense," he said. "We didn't want to play against their zone, which was pretty much packed in the middle of the key."

However, all Jerome could do was kill time, as Prairie's pass with six minutes left missed a teammate and went instead to Buhl's Darin Strickler. With 5:07 left, the 6-0 Carter wheeled and lofted the short jumper through the hoop over 6-5 Gary Hulse, narrowing the difference to because of Gooding's superior height, the Senators had no trouble running. Leon Anderson hit back-to-back fielders. Simis hit again from far out and Paul Childs hit a layup for a 20-8 lead.

The surge continued almost unabated in the second quarter and the Vikings were relegated to the bleachers.

Gooding faces Filer tonight and Fowler isn't expecting such an easy win.

"When we played a week ago tomorrow both teams played really good basketball," he said. "We both shot the ball well and I look for another close game. I don't think either team run away."

Fowler hopes the Senators are over their tummy flutters.

"We were playing real well the last part of the season and the first night against Shoshone we had 'turnover' written all across our foreheads," he hopefully we'll get to go next week.

"We always have to play uphill against them," Valley Coach Scott Tingey said. "They should be alright against Filer, but after that they've got a pretty tough row after that."

Gooding 65, Valley 52

Gooding used its height and running game to dispatch Valley 65-52 in the second game.

The crowd was decided midway in the second quarter as the Senators used Ken and Leon Anderson to clear the defensive boards and ignite the fast break. Gooding, ahead 20-10 after one quarter, streaked to a 39-19 lead with 1:02 remaining in the first half as rebounds, fast breaks and free throws put Valley in a position it couldn't recover from.

"We just played better basketball all the way around," Gooding Coach Don Fowler said. "We went to the boards at both ends which was encouraging to see."

Valley stayed with the taller Senators for the first four minutes, 8-3.

But Leon Anderson skied for a tip and seconds later Todd Simis poured one in from 20 feet. Gooding's charge was on.

With Valley just getting one shot

They're just too big for us."

Bonnett, Earnhardt triumph at close of qualifying races

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Nell Bonnett and Dale Earnhardt pooled some from behind last lap victories Thursday in a pair of qualifying races for Sunday's $1 million Daytona 500.

Both races were marked by spectacular accidents, and driver Bruce Jacobi was hospitalized in critical condition after one of them.

Bonnett passed Richard Petty on the final lap of the second 50-lap race. He held on for victory by a half-car length over Petty and a full length over hard-charging Cale Yarborough.

In the first 125-mile qualifying race, Earnhardt breezed by leader A.J. Foyt on the backstretch of the last lap and withstood challenges from Buddy Baker and Kyle Petty to take a car-length win in his Ford.

Both Bonnett and Earnhardt earned second-row starting positions for the 25th running of the 500 Sunday.

Earlier this week, Ricky Rudd won the pole and Geoff Bodine the second spot for the stock car classic.

The top 14 finishers — excluding Rudd and Bodine — in such races won starting positions for the 500. The remainder of the 42-car field (40 starters and two alternates) was determined by previous qualifying times this week.

Two of the sport's most successful racers were forced to rely on the latter method of qualifying. Durrell Waltrip, the two-time defending NASCAR points champion, and Bobby Allison each experienced mechanical problems and finished well back in the field in their respective races.

In the first race, Jacobi lost control of his Pontiac on the banked, 31-degree Turn 2 at the 2.5-mile Daytona International Speedway, spun down the bank and cartwheeled 200 feet before striking a dirt embankment in the infield.

Jacobi of Indianapolis, Ind., was carried from the wreckage and taken to nearby Halifax Hospital in critical condition with head injuries.

In the second race, Rusty Wallace lost control of his Buick in nearly the same spot where Jacobi's problems began and flipped into the muddy infield, landing on the car's roof. Wallace was treated in the speedway medical center for a possible neck injury and concussion.

Bonnett's victory was his second this week. He came from 15th in the 16-car field of Monday's Busch Clash.

Bonnett won Thursday's race, averaging a caution-slowed 122.183 mph. in his Chevrolet.

NFL drafting order decided

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Baltimore Colts will still select first in the 1983 National Football League draft on April 26-27 but the results of the post-season playoffs have forced a change in the selecting order of several other teams in the first round.

Miami, which was defeated 27-17 by NFC champion Washington in the Super Bowl, switched places with the Los Angeles Raiders and now drafts 27th and the Raiders 26th. Washington will have the 28th and last selection.

Among five teams tied with 5-4 records, only Minnesota won its first round game in the Super Bowl Tournament. Thus, the Vikings dropped from 17th place to 19th and St. Louis and Tampa advanced to 17th and 18th, respectively. San Diego, a first round winner, dropped to 22nd and Pittsburgh, a first round loser, advanced to 21st.

A list of the drafting order for the first round appears in Scoreboard on Page B2.

Ham retires after 12 seasons

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — After 12 seasons of excellence as an outside linebacker for the Pittsburgh Steelers, Jack Ham announced his retirement from professional football Thursday.

"Twelve years is a long time to play pro football," said Ham. "Every pro has to make this decision some time, and for me that time is now."

Ham's departure, coming just a few weeks after the retirement of wide receiver Lynn Swann, leaves just nine players on the Steeler roster who played on all four Super Bowl championship teams in the 1970s.

Ham was hampered in his last several seasons by the after-effects of a foot injury suffered in 1979. He said the decline in the level of his play was a factor in his decision to leave the game.

"He's probably the best player I've ever played at that position," said Steeler defensive coordinator Woody Widenhofer.

Ham, who intercepted 23 passes during his career, was a nine-time All-Pro and was named to the NFL's Team of the Decade for the '70s and the Steelers' All-Time team.

Cavaliers sale still awaited

RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI) — Cleveland Cavaliers Owner Ted Stepien remained in seclusion Thursday while real estate developer John Ferchill waited for him to sign over the National Basketball Association franchise.

Stepien's office said he would not be in until Friday and he was not answering his home phone. He and Ferchill last met Wednesday morning and Stepien later said the deal was "about 80 percent complete."

"Ted and I shook hands on the deal. . . I signed the documents and sent them to Ted," said Ferchill. "I assume he will sign them."

"We still have to get the final proposal," Stepien said late Wednesday. "I should get it Friday and I'll study it over the weekend." Ferchill will have to put the money in escrow. By Friday, the deal should be made.

Bamberger shows confidence

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — George Bamberger, manager of the New York Mets, said Thursday he has fewer question marks about his pitching staff at this year's spring training camp than he did last year and expressed confidence the team's pitching would improve.

Bamberger will open camp for an early squad of pitchers and catchers today, some of whom had physical problems last year.

"I'm not concerned about Tom Seaver or Nell Allen," said Bamberger. "Seaver has been throwing all winter and reports his shoulder is in good shape. Nell Allen has been throwing down here for more than a week and from what I've seen, I know he's okay."

Seaver had shoulder problems with Cincinnati last year and Allen missed the final half of the Mets' campaign with a sore elbow.

"Last year we had question mark pitchers like Craig Swan, Randy Jones, Pat Zachry and Mike Scott," said Bamberger. "We know now that Swan is healthy and the others are gone. We've got a proper blend of veteran pitchers, and kids with good arms, who improved everywhere they pitched."

Shriver wins; Hanika upset

CHICAGO (UPI) — Fourth-seeded Pam Shriver edged 6-foot-2 Claudia Kohde, 7-6, 6-3, but unseeded Eva Pfaff upset sixth-seeded Sylvia Hanika, 5-7, 6-4, 6-3 Thursday to advance to the quarterfinals of the $150,000 Chicago women's tennis tourney.

Shriver, ranked fifth in the world, continually upset her West German opponent by coming to the net and then forcing the 19-year-old into hitting several balls out of bounds.

Neither player could hold service in the first four games of the opening set but Kohde had a chance to win the first set when she led 40-15 in the 12th game. Shriver rallied to tie the game and then hit two straight winners to send it to a tie-breaker.

Kohde led 1-1 in the tie-breaker but Shriver relied on a strong serve to win four straight points and took the tie-breaker 7-5.

In a battle of West Germans, Pfaff, ranked 30th in the world, lost the opening set when Hanika broke service in the 11th game.

NYU revives cage program

NEW YORK (UPI) — New York University, once a powerhouse in college basketball, announced Thursday it would return to varsity competition next season in the modest surroundings of Division III.

"Division III offers us a group of colleges and universities with an attitude similar to that of NYU," said Dr. John Brademas, NYU's president. "Within these parameters NYU intends to be competitive on the basketball court."

Surrounded by such stars from the glittering past as Tom "Satch" Sanders, Mal Graham, Barry Kiser, Ray Lampo, Cal Ramsey and Donnie Forman, Brademas said the school would offer no athletic scholarships and that the basketball program would serve as just another aspect of a well-rounded college life.

Despite swift denials from Brademas and Coach Mike Muzio, there was repeated talk of the possibility that NYU eventually would raise its sights toward a more ambitious schedule.

Top-ranked North Carolina 'in a fog' Losses leave Tar Heels wondering

By DAN LOHWASSER
UPI sports writer

Mid-February rarely finds North Carolina's basketball team struggling, but after back-to-back losses the soul searching has begun for the once top-ranked Tar Heels.

"We're kind of solemn, kind of down and dumfounded," said Matt Doherty. "By now we should be clicking and we were, but in these last two games we've been in a fog."

Maryland butchered the Tar Heels' once-proud defense Wednesday night for a 106-94 victory after Villanova stopped an 18-game winning streak Sunday by defeating North Carolina, 56-53, in Chapel Hill, N.C.

The last time a North Carolina team lost two straight at this point of the season was in 1979 when Clemson and Furman delivered a pair of shockers. Prior to that, it had not happened since the 1973 season. It's been a trademark of Dean Smith teams to hit high gear during the stretch and Smith says that's the main objective this season.

After Wednesday night's loss, Smith said Maryland would have been a handful for any team in the nation, but the Tar Heels problems go back much farther than that.

"They really put one on us," said Smith, whose teams have lost to Maryland only three times in the last 17 games. "They outquicked and outthought us. In the second half, they got every loose ball. They certainly didn't miss many shots."

Maryland, which decked then No. 3 UCLA in similar fashion earlier this season, is capable of erratic bursts of brilliant play. But in recent weeks the Tar Heels have also lost some of the lustre that built that 18-game winning streak and brought them to the top of the college basketball heap after getting off to a 2-2 start.

Prior to beating Virginia last week, the Tar Heels had won their previous four games by margins of only two, three and seven points except for two blowouts over Southern Conference teams Furman and The Citadel. Against Virginia, the Cavaliers let a 16-point second-half lead slip away and North Carolina won by one point 64-63.

"I think the key to the ballgame was at halftime I asked the team 'Who can guard Michael Jordan?'" said Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell. "I was looking for somebody who could stop the guy. Herman Veal said he'd like to try, and he did a heckuva job on Jordan in the second half."

Jordan said a lack of crispness on defense seems to be a major problem lately.

"We were talking among ourselves when they were blowing it open, and we felt in our minds that we better do it now or it would be too late," Jordan said. "But that was in our minds — our bodies wouldn't do it, and I can't tell you why."

Getting deep in the hole has also been a common denominator for North Carolina in recent weeks.

"We can't let a team get 14 or 16 points up with eight minutes to go every game and expect to catch them," said Doherty.

It's Doherty who probably can help the defending national champions the most. Opponents have attacked North Carolina most successfully by applying most of the defensive pressure on Jordan and Sam Perkins, leaving Doherty with a lot of open shots that he has been unable to hit with any consistency. His shooting percentage of 42.1 percent is the lowest on the team.

The Tar Heels see action again Saturday on the road against North Carolina State.

Chaffee making bid to keep card

LA JOLLA, Calif. (UPI) — Jon Chaffee, faced with the possibility of losing a spot on the PGA Tour, fired a 7-under-par 65 Thursday for a one-stroke lead after the opening round of the $300,000 San Diego Open.

Tied for second place were Scott Simpson, Ben Crenshaw, Tom Jenkins and Bruce Fleisher.

Chaffee, 27, earned fees than $20,000 in his first two years on the tour, then lost his qualifying card and was unable to play last year. He turned pro in 1978.

"This is my fifth year," said the native of Austin, Minn. "I had better make the top 125 this year or find something else to do."

Thursday he found something else, blistering the par-72, 6,667-yard North course at the Torrey Pines Country Club with three birdies and two eagles.

Playing the back nine first, his first birdie came on No. 14 when he sank a four-foot putt. He birdied the 16th hole with an eight-foot putt and made the turn at 4-under-par 32 after carding an eagle at the par-5, 490-yard 18th hole. He drilled a 1-iron within three feet and stroked the ball into the cup for his three.

After a birdie at No. 1, he closed his brilliant round with another eagle at the ninth hole, ripping a 3-iron within 15 feet on his second shot and rolling in the putt.

"I did what everyone hopes to do on the North course, and that's play the par-5s well," Chaffee said. "I played them in 6-under-par with two eagles."

Shooting 6-under-par 65 were Simpson, Crenshaw, Jenkins and Fleisher.

Simpson, a San Diego native and winner of the 1980 Western Open, finished 24th on the money list in 1982 with $146,903.

Simpson carded six birdies and no bogeys, the longest birdie putt a 20-footer on the ninth hole.

"I've made all the cuts this year, I just haven't made any big paychecks yet," Simpson said. "Today was a very good day. It's always fun to play at home."

Crenshaw was one of the tour's rising stars after he won the first event he entered, the 1975 Texas Open. But after 1976, when he finished second on the money list, his career has fallen dramatically. Last year he struggled to the No. 83 spot on the earnings list with his best finish a tie for fourth in the Hawaiian Open.

Thursday, the man nicknamed Gentle Ben had six birdies.

"The last few years I haven't been pleased," Crenshaw said. "I was stagnant and didn't improve in some areas. Now I think I'm playing well. I've done a lot of work on my game since last fall."

Jenkins carded nine-hole totals of 33 for his 66 while Fleisher had a 32 on the front side and a 34 on the back.

Bob Gilder, Barry Jasekel and Gary McCord were tied at 67 while seven golfers, including Tom Kite, the No. 3 man on the money list last year, and 1982 Bob Hope Desert Classic winner Ed Flori, were tied at 68.

Baker leads PBA touney by 27 pins

FLORISSANT, Mo. (UPI) — Five-time champion Tom Baker of Buffalo, N.Y., averaged 229 for six games Thursday to take a 27-pin lead after three rounds of the $125,000 St. Louis Open.

Baker, a 28-year-old right-hander whose last victory came in the AMF Grand Prix tournament in Paris in September, rolled a round of 1,373 including a high game of 279. He totaled 4,151 for 18 games, a 231 average.

Baker leads second-place Brice Carter of Round Rock, Texas, the second-round leader, Carter bowled a third round of 1,281 and totaled 4,124.

Rounding out the top five were defending champion Bill Straub of Lincoln, Neb., who rolled the tournament's only 300 game, with 4,110; Pete McCordic of Houston, with 4,087, and Bob Handley of Fairway, Kan., with 4,082.

Drumming 16th was first-round leader Dave Turner of Alton, Ill., who totaled 4,073.

Connors advances

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Top-seeded Jimmy Connors advanced to the quarterfinals of the $15,000 U.S. National Indoor tennis championships Thursday with a methodical 6-3, 6-3 victory over Raul Ramirez of Mexico.

Connors' opponent today will be eighth-seeded Elliot Teltscher, who has never beaten him.

Connors' third-round victory over Ramirez lasted one hour, 34 minutes, but Connors was never in danger. Ramirez, however, struggled often on his serve.

Earlier in the day, Teltscher defeated Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia 6-4, 6-0; fifth-seeded Peter McNamara of Australia defeated Sandy Mayer 1-6, 7-5, 6-2, and 11th-seeded Brian Teacher beat Chip Hooper 7-6, 4-3, retired. Hooper had to quit because of tendinitis in his knee.

No. 3 seed Gene Mayer tripped Henri Leconte 1-6, 6-0, 6-0.

Chasing deer pays off for Indian who wins Empire State Run Up

NEW YORK (UPI) — Al Waquá, an American Indian who chases deer to keep in shape, Thursday won the Sixth Empire State Run Up, described by its organizer as "probably the most difficult and boring race in the world."

The second runner to cross the finish line was a woman, Burke Konecili.

The dash up the Manhattan skyscraper, first scaled by King Kong, attracted 23 men and 11 women who scrambled through the stairwell's lobby door and chugged up 86 of the building's 102 floors.

Waquá, a Pueblo Indian who works as a forest ranger in James Pueblo, N.M., leapt across the finish line on the building's observation deck for an easy first place finish.

"I couldn't bear the other runners," he said while catching his breath on the fog-shrouded platform after completing the race in 11 minutes and 36 seconds.

The 5-foot-3, 108-pound runner, known as King of the Hills for his championship runs up Pike's Peak in 1981 and 1982, said he could have broken the record if he had not been held up for several floors by another runner.

"It was a big guy. I tried to go under him. Otherwise, I would have broken the record," he said.

The record run of 10 minutes and 59 seconds was set in 1982 by James Ochoa, 28, of East Stroudsburg, Pa., who had the second best time Thursday, but came in third. The women started 90 seconds ahead of the men.

Waquá, 31, said he trains by racing forest animals back home in New Mexico.

"My favorites are the deer and the elk," he said.

The winners received gold colored statues of the Empire State Building while the other contestants got commemorative plates.

Fred LeBow, president of the city's Road Runners Club, which sponsored the race, described it as "probably the most difficult and boring run in the world."

But Konecili, 29, of Oyster Bay, N.Y., challenged LeBow's description, saying, "It's not the toughest thing I've ever done."

Holmes, Dokes set WBC title defenses

NEW YORK (UPI) — Larry Holmes and Michael Dokes will defend their respective World Boxing Council and World Boxing Association heavyweight titles on May 20. It was announced Thursday.

There was no indication, however, from either fighter or promoter Don King that a unification bout would be held in the near future.

"Michael Dokes does not fit into my plans for 1983," said the 33-year-old Holmes, who will defend his title against unbeaten Tim Witherspoon of Philadelphia.

"A fight with Larry is looking too far ahead," said Dokes. "I'll take things one step at a time."

Dokes will face former champion Mike Weaver in a rematch of their controversial fight of last December in which Dokes won the title in 63 seconds. Referee Joey Curtis was criticized severely for stopping the fight so quickly and the WBA ordered a rematch.

Dokes, who lives in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., is 25-0-1, with 15 knockouts. Weaver, from Los Angeles, is 24-10 with 16 knockouts.

"It is unrealistic that he would fight in 1983 because both have mandatory defenses," said King, who in conjunction with ABC Video Enterprises, Inc., and ESPN will promote the fight on pay per view and closed circuit.

The title bouts will take place from two yet undetermined sites.

In addition to the unprecedented double heavyweight title program, WBA cruiserweight champion Ossie Ocasio will defend his title against Randy Stephens and No. 1 and No. 2 contenders Greg Page and Rencaldo Snipes will meet in a 12-round heavyweight fight for the U.S. Boxing Association title and a shot at Holmes late in the year.

"It's not important to unify the title," added Holmes, who also said he would not fight unless the WBC makes an exception to its new rule that title fights go 12 rounds rather than 15.

"I'll ask them for 15 rounds. If someone wants my title, they can take it like I took it. If it's not 15 rounds, I'll resign."

The 33-year-old Holmes, who is 41-0 with 30 knockouts, will be making his 14th title defense when he meets Witherspoon. In his last bout, Holmes, of Easton, Pa., defeated Randall "Tex" Cobb on a unanimous 15-round decision last November. Witherspoon, of Philadelphia, is 15-0 with 11 knockouts. He outpointed Snipes in a 10-rounder last June.

Ocasio, of San Juan, Puerto Rico, will be making his second defense. He is 18-3-1 with 10 knockouts. Stephens has a 20-7 record with 16 knockouts.

Kingdome ramp claims 3rd life

SEATTLE (UPI) — A young man plunged 47 feet to his death from a ramp at the Kingdome Wednesday night while exiting from the Seattle SuperSonics basketball game, police said.

Witnesses at the scene reported the man, James Sandifer, 21, of Olympia, landed on his head. Police said the accident occurred as Sandifer was leaving via the "A Gate" on the south side of the stadium.

Sandifer was rushed to Harborview Medical Center, where he died shortly after 4 a.m. PST today.

Two similar incidences, both resulting in death, have occurred since the Kingdome opened in 1976. Last year then-King County Executive Ron Durlap ordered warning signs posted on the chest-level concrete ramps.

'Ghandi' leads field of Oscar hopefuls

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD — The epic "Gandhi" led the 1983 Oscars race Thursday with 11 nominations, followed by the comedy "Tootsie" with 10 and the fantasy "E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial," the biggest moneymaker in U.S. movie history, with nine.

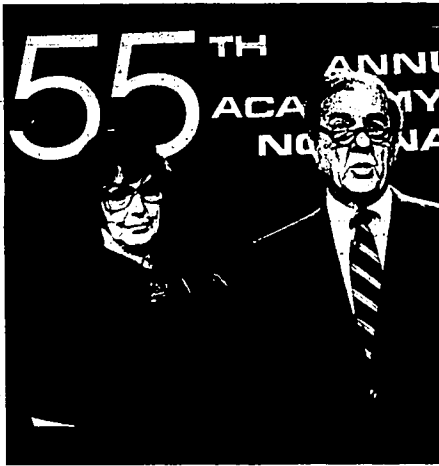

All three films were nominated as best picture of the year, along with "The Verdict" and "Missing."

Competing for best actor are Ben Kingsley, who portrayed the nonviolent Indian leader Gandhi; Dustin Hoffman, a man playing a woman in "Tootsie"; Paul Newman, an alcoholic attorney making a comeback in "The Verdict"; Jack Lemmon, a father searching for his journalist son in "Missing"; and Peter O'Toole, a fading actor in "My Favorite Year."

Nominated for best actress were Meryl Streep, a Nazi death camp survivor in "Sophie's Choice"; Julie Andrews, a woman playing a man playing a woman in "Victor-Victoria"; Jessica Lange, a tragic actress in "Frances"; Sissy Spacek, a terrified girlfriend in "Missing"; and Debra Winger, a factory worker who falls in love with a cadet in "An Officer and a Gentleman."

Miss Lange was also nominated for best supporting actress for her role in "Tootsie," along with Teri Garr in the same film. Other nominees in that category were Glenn Close for "The World According to Garp," Kim Stanley for "Frances" and Leslie Ann Warren for "Victor-Victoria."

Nominations for best supporting actor went to Charles Durning for "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," Louis Gossett Jr. for "An Officer and a Gentleman," John Lithgow for "The World According to Garp," James Mason for "The Verdict" and

Fay Kanin and Karl Malden announce the nominees

Robert Preston for "Victor-Victoria."

The best director nominees are Wolfgang Peterson for "Das Boot," Steven Spielberg for "E.T.," Richard Attenborough for "Gandhi," Sydney Pollack for "Tootsie" and Sidney Lumet for "The Verdict." None has previously won the Oscar.

Kingsley, a British stage actor whose real name is Krishna Bhanji and whose family came from the village where Gandhi was born, became the fifth actor nominated for best actor in his movie debut. He is competing against a group of veterans with 21 previous best acting nominations between them. Hoffman won, once before, for "Kramer Vs. Kramer." Lemmon won for "Save The Tiger" and also won best supporting actor for "Mr. Roberts."

Miss Andrews previously won best actress for "Mary Poppins" and Sissy Spacek won for "Coal Miner's Daughter," and each was also nominated one other time. Miss Streep was nominated twice before and won best supporting actress for "Kramer Vs. Kramer."

Eaton boosts Renaissance following

By WILLETTA WARBERG
Times-News arts critic

TWIN FALLS — An evening with three guitar- and banjo-strumming young men may well be the best guarantee of filling the Renaissance Academy.

We heard the Whitewater group there some weeks ago, and can proclaim the hall unbeatable acoustically.

The academy's following is greatly improving, and the audience at this Wednesday's late evening performance was surprisingly doubled. The head count came out at 52 listeners, clappers, hummers, singers and floor-stomper. The excitement was so high at one point in the program that a pew tumbled because its center strut broke off.

This performance of Idaho musicians Steve Eaton, Ernie Sites and Rob Harding, as with so many other concerts this season, was bagged with baby cries. Will young parents ever realize that there are many other ticket-buyers?

The first half of the performance seemed over-extended. In fact, it wasn't really necessary. Maybe Sites and Harding should have their own program and space, and not make a mistake again by allowing themselves to be butted against the nationally recognized and captivating Steve Eaton.

The pairing of Sites with Harding was equal. They use the same techniques and sound familiar to most Western music buffs, but they haven't developed their own personalities yet. Together, they make good voice and strumming. There is something missing, however, and the quietness of the audience was proof.

Steve Eaton's investment in the evening was tremendous. His rapport with the audience was astonishing. His ambidexterity — singing, harmonica, guitar-playing and crate-stomping — caused good audience participation.

The 36-year-old Pocatello man knows how to write and sing his music well, and his time spent in Nashville has influenced him favorably.

Eaton's performances imitating Ray Charles, Bob Dylan and Shel Silverstein were funny and convincing.

Top-drawer singing for the evening was his Idaho Power advertising jingle, which is one of many he has written. Other familiar jingles presently in use are for Keystone Pizza and Me & Eds.

Eaton has made several "sound tracks" for movies. Art Garfunkle and Ann Murray appreciate his 23 years of total involvement with music. It's so typical of a fine artist to be multi-faceted, and Eaton isn't without exception. He graduated from Idaho State University in Pocatello with an art major.

Probably the best-loved song of the evening was the song the Carpenters recorded that Eaton wrote, "All You Get From Love is a Love Song." Tall, slender and good-looking, Steve Eaton looks, talks and walks Idahoan. He already has, at his young age, made Idaho proud with his distinguished contributions to the music world. He is continuing to make contributions, and Wednesday's performance was one. He should come back soon, when the academy has its new light and sound system installed.

Larry Hill aiming for Idaho's best pictures

By WILLETTA WARBERG
Times-News arts critic

HAILEY — Larry Hill is slouched underneath a large black focusing cloth, peering through the ground glass of his 4-by-5 view camera, in his tidy studio-office, off Main Street in Hailey.

In a few minutes, he lifts his head. Hill is tired because the hour is 1 a.m., and he's been on the job since 8 the previous morning.

Hill scratches his beard and wonders if this photographic set-up of a deep-fat fried potato patty and trout fillet will please his clients.

The clients are local food companies that are working with an advertising agency from San Francisco. There must be at least 10 people around the set, making sure that the photographer, art director and food stylist represent the products properly for their national four-color advertisement, planned for June periodicals.

The air is thick; the nerves are taut. The day has been longer than it should, have been, especially for the photographer, art director and food stylist who've been on their feet literally for the entire session.

It is January and everyone has been the previous day, on location filming in the blizzard-struck hills around Bellevue. Here, they hauled with downed electric lines, snow drifts and whatever else could make the shooting more difficult.

What is a former professional motorcycle racer doing behind a camera composing still lifes for advertising or "doing" weddings?

"I'm planning on being the finest commercial photographer out in Idaho," Hill says, "and right now, it looks as if I'm headed in that direction if I keep working as hard."

Hill was born in Jerome in 1955, the third child of a California mother and an Oregon father. Asked why his parents came to Idaho, he replies, "my maternal grandparents lived in Hailey. In fact, my Grandfather Heagle was Hailey's mayor and a two-term state-senator at one time."

A graduate of Wood River High School in 1973, Hill went immediately into motorcycle racing for the American Motor Cycle Association.

"I couldn't make much money, and what I did make went for traveling and machinery. It was too costly to stay in that profession. I heard about a job with some logging firm. I took it and was a lumberjack for four years. Then, I made money but it was hard work."

Hill also loves to run the white waters of Idaho, and although he's been asked many times to function as a guide, he says he doesn't want the hassle.

"I love kayaking, and guiding white-water trips would eat into the time I have to do my favorite sport, besides hunting."

After lumberjacking, Hill got a job at the Alturas Laboratory in Ketchum. It was there that he became

"I found out that I was a creative artist, and that the camera was my tool. I wasn't making enough to do anything else but learn to process my own film. Now, with my national advertising and magazine assignments, I feel that I must be able to show them prints of what we are doing while we are doing it. It saves time for everyone concerned."

Some of Hill's clients are House Beautiful and Modern Maturity magazines, Clear-Springs-Troul-Co., Idaho Frozen Foods, King Manufacturing Co., Power Engineers, Specialty Electric, Carol Stevens Interiors and the Shore, Young and Toml advertising agency in California.

It used to be that the clients would have to wait a week or two before they saw anything. By having his own processing operation, Hill feels he has a calling card.

"I'm beginning to be accepted as a prophet in my own home state," Hill says, explaining how he got the background to build his own four-color, in-house film-processing operation.

At the moment, he can process and print most color film and all black and white film. "The only film I don't handle at this point is Kodachrome."

Hill has been on his own for two years and has managed to create a sophisticated photographic studio equal to any small New York City or Chicago operation — and he's only 28 and self-taught.

"I've got to get this hot-dog-label job done before 7 this evening, so please excuse me," he says, as he sticks his head underneath the focusing cloth again.

THE STORIES OF BREECE D'J PANCAKE.
By Breece D'J Pancake. Little, Brown. $13.50.

This slender volume is both a first collection and a posthumous collection. Perhaps that is why, despite the power and quality of the stories, two of the most interesting pieces in the book are those about rather than by the author.

Those pieces come in the form of a foreword by James Alan McPherson and an afterword by John Casey. McPherson and Casey both were teaching in the writing program at the University of Virginia when Pancake was a student there. In his early 20s, tall and rough-hewn in manner and physique, he had come from the hills of West Virginia. But, as his writing so clearly shows, he had not left that country behind.

"His name," says McPherson, "after I had asked it again, was still Breece Pancake." Pancake, he guesses, is a German name metamorphosed into Anglo-Saxon. "I was looking for the middle part of the odd name. Casey explains that when Pancake sold his first story to The Atlantic, the galley proofs came back with his middle initials punctuated D'J. The young writer decided to leave them that way.

Pancake had as haunting an effect on McPherson and Casey as Ferdinand R. Tertian did on the irresolute poet-professor Hows in Lionel Trilling's classic short story, "Of This Time, Of That Place." Like Tertian, Pancake was brilliant, talented and somewhat mad. Unfortunately, the dark side of his mind was not clearly enough seen by Pancake's friends to prevent the tragedy. In April, 1979, shortly before his 27th birthday, Breece D'J Pancake shot himself to death.

Violence was not foreign to Pancake: Hunting, drinking, brawling and whoring were part of the world he knew best, and the world he wrote about — the miners, scrub farmers, bootleggers, company townfolk and other "poor whites" of West Virginia.

It is not a pretty world. There are no heroes or heroines. The characters in the 12 stories collected here are both victim and victimizer. There is little humor. And hope, when it exists, is often in the form of some broken-down, rusted-out, dented-in heap of metal. If enough spare parts can be bought, borrowed or stolen to get it running, the owner can leave the mine-ravaged hills and hollows of West Virginia for, as one character puts it, "more interesting places like Ohio and Iowa."

Total escape is impossible, however. Even those who manage to transport themselves to Chicago or New York or Detroit carry the wounds of poverty and ignorance. And usually they come back, down, but not out.

Just as the hills, abused as they are, can still give root to a flowering dogwood, the people in Pancake's stories can still keep getting up in the morning. Rather than give in to despair, they learn to live with it. They have attained the wisdom of the narrator in "A Room Forever," a short story reminiscent of Stephen Crane's "Maggie: A Girl of the Streets." At the end of the story, the narrator says:

"I stop in front of the bus station, look in on the waiting people, and think about all the places they are going. But I know they can't run away from it or drink their way out of it or die to get rid of it. It's always there...."

One can only wish, after reading these stories, that Breece D'J Pancake could have learned to live with whatever it was that he could not get rid of. Despite an occasional unsteadiness of tone and descriptions that sometimes confuse the narrative rather than carry it forward, he clearly was in command of the sordid music he created from a language and people and place he knew well.

Perhaps we will see more of his work. John Casey notes that he has "Breece's novels and stories." Whether they are less accomplished in form than these stories would not matter. Breece D'J Pancake never, as he says of one of his characters, talked through his back. His voice came instead from "somewhere deep" in his chest. Readers surely will want to hear more of it.

Pianist Neiwirth wins competition

For concert pianist Mark Neiwirth of Kimberly, it's almost like horse racing these days.

Last Saturday, Mark traveled to Pocatello to enter the district Young Artist Competition of the National Federation of Music Clubs.

Neiwirth is the young man who gave a concert last month at the College of Southern Idaho, the proceeds from which were given to the Twin Falls chapter to use for its music scholarship programs.

In Pocatello, Neiwirth received top grades from each of the three judges and won the competition, which is the first step toward fulfilling his lifetime dream of a concert career.

Mark Neiwirth's next competition will be Feb. 26 in Salt Lake City for the regional event.

If Neiwirth wins the Salt Lake City competition, he will enter the national competition in Columbus, Ohio, which takes place in April.

A too-helpful husband big source of concern

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Four months ago my husband and I lost a very good friend and neighbor. Naturally we offered our condolences and help to this man's widow, who happens to be a very attractive woman about my age (middle 60s).

Now my husband gets calls quite often. Her faucet is dripping, her furnace is making a noise, her storm window needs fixing, etc.

His last visit to her house lasted 45 minutes. And there's always a freshly baked apple pie waiting for him over there. (His favorite.)

Tomorrow he is taking her to the dentist! That's where I put my foot down. But he said he had already promised to take her, so off they went. Of course, this is only the first of three appointments. Another neighbor made a little joke about how attentive my husband has been to this widow. I laughed it off, but I was burning up inside.

What now? I feel better just putting this down on paper.

— GOOD OLD JANE
DEAR JANE: Don't be too "good" or you'll be old before your time. Jane. Tell your helpful hubby that the neighbors are talking and enough is enough already. Then go along for the ride. And while you're sitting between them, get Jane's recipe for the apple pie. Three may be a crowd, but there's safety in numbers.

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to you, but here goes: I am dating a younger man I'll call Jimmy. I am deeply in love with him. The problem is that there is this girl at work who is after him. (Let's call her Shirley.)

Shirley is married, but she wants to have Jimmy's baby. She says she isn't in love with him, but her husband has a low sperm count and they can't seem to have a baby, which they want very much.

Jimmy tells me that he doesn't want to lose me but he would like to accommodate Shirley. He says he doesn't love her the way he loves me, but they have necked in his car a few times.

This hurts me, Abby, because Advice

Jimmy and I have talked about marriage and I was counting on maybe having a spring wedding.

Please tell me what to do.

DEAR JUST: You don't say how "young" Jimmy is, but he sounds immature and naive. A man who would consider fathering a child as an accommodation is not ready for marriage.

And the fact that he and Shirley have necked in his car a few times indicates that he has more than a casual interest in her. Wise up, and say goodbye to Jimmy.

DEAR ABBY: I recently read a verse in the letters to the editor column in the Youngstown (Ohio) Vindicator.

I don't know whether it's original, but I think it's worth passing on. I hope you agree.

— NEWCASTLE READER
DEAR READER: I do. And here it is:

IT ISN'T THE CAR, IT'S THE DRIVER

"Sir: It isn't the car that begins to whine when forced to stop for an old stop sign — it's the driver.

"It isn't the car that takes a drink, then quickly loses its power to think — it's the driver.

"It isn't the car that fails to heed the dangers of reckless, discourteous speed — it's the driver.

"It isn't the car that steps on the gas and causes an accident trying to pass — it's the driver.

"A car may be bent and twisted awry, but it isn't the car that will have to die — it's the driver."

Soaps dumped on an innocent world

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — If the State Department thinks it has problems now, wait until our soap opera exports work their culture shock or louse up the balance of payments.

We're pulling a dirty trick on the world by exporting one of America's most insidious and infectious forms of entertainment — the soap opera.

Hollywood's impact on older cultures has been ruinous enough with "Freaky Friday" and "Laverne & Shirley," but until recently the town has had the decency to keep our soaps at home.

True, "Dallas" has long been a favorite in England and elsewhere, but that series of greed and skullduggery in the oil business is at least prime time stuff.

Now we are shipping out to unsuspecting countries "the daily soaps, a strictly American invention that began with "Ma Perkins." "Our Gal

Sunday" and other snappers in the heyday of radio. Think of the international impact and outrage, especially among the intellectuals of Europe and Asia! What must they think of our taste?

There might be more sinister implications. "Days of Our Lives" was shown regularly in Iran before that country's revolution, the hostages and the anti-American stand. It could be coincidence, but who knows?

One thing is certain, the Ayotollahi Khomeini isn't having any part of it now.

"Days of Our Lives" also is shown in Italy. It is seen in Hong Kong as a minority program for the "pink elephant" (Caucasian) audience.

"The Young and the Restless" is being telecast, dubbed in various languages, in Europe.

Additionally, "The Guiding Light," "Search for Tomorrow" and "General Hospital" are making their inroads abroad.

While soaps are sifting into various parts of the world, Mother England, home of Shakespeare and Shaw, has drawn a firm line. No American daytime atrocities will be inflicted on the citizens of dear old Blighty.

Two of the stars of the venerable "Days of Our Lives," Bill and Susan Seaforth Hayes, visited Europe and were pleased with the reception of their show.

Bill and Susan are married in real life, as they are in the series where they are known as Doug and Julie Williams.

They went to Europe not to exploit or promote "Days of Our Lives" but to perform their club act in Germany for a group of junketing Australian grocers, if you follow. Their soap is popular Down Under.

The Hayes might well become goodwill ambassadors for all soaps. Their act is an olio of music, nonsense, vaudeville turns and a question and answer session about life in the soap operas, so-called because of the predominance of laundry soap sponsors in the old days.

'Lovesick' not without its charm

By ROGER EBERT
The Chicago Sun-Times

LOVESICK, starring Dudley Moore, Elizabeth McGovern, Alec Guinness, Wallace Shawn, Ron Silver, Larry Rivers and John Huston. 3 stars.

The notion of a psychiatrist falling in love with his patient is not exactly new, but there are whole moments at a time when it seems new in "Lovesick," a new comedy where the psychiatrist is played by Dudley Moore and his patient is Elizabeth McGovern. They should not fall in love. It is against all the rules. It is also in violation of all the ethics of Moore's profession.

But what is he to do when she turns those wide, grave eyes upon him and asks for his help? Moore actually hears about McGovern before he meets her. He gets a visit from a colleague (Wallace Shawn, who had dinner with Andre). Shawn needs help. He's head over heels with the woman and can't stop himself. Moore disapproves, until Shawn leaves the scene and he meets McGovern. Then he is instantly smitten.

The scene in which he is smitten illustrates some of the best and worst qualities of this movie. Dudley Moore is very good at what directors call "reaction shots" — shots where we watch an actor watching someone else. In "Lovesick," Moore's reactions as he gazes upon McGovern are comic and helpless. Her closeups are fun, too. We find ourselves in sympathy with them.

But the development of the scene is lightened by an annoying device used throughout the film by Marshall Brickman, the director. He stops everything for a fantasy sequence in which Moore imagines that he goes around his desk and kisses McGovern, and that she responds, and that Sigmund Freud magically appears to chastise him.

Brief reviews

From Times-News wire services

THE BEASTMASTER: A sword and sorcery tale with Marc Singer as a Conan-like warrior out to defeat the cruel Rip Torn and defend the slave girl Tanya Roberts. It's at least a half-hour too long with run-on battles and not enough close-up shots of the beautiful Roberts. PG. 2 stars.

BEST FRIENDS: Goldie Hawn and Burt Reynolds carp at each other for two hours in a depressing, unfunny tale of two Hollywood screenwriters in love who make the mistake of getting married. PG. 1/2 stars.

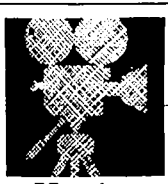

FIRST BLOOD: Sylvester Stallone's latest action-adventure is a familiar story of an honored Vietnam veteran going berserk when a Western sheriff busts him for vagrancy. The first half of the film is thrilling; the second half, in which Stallone destroys a complete town, is ludicrous. R. 2 stars.

48 HRS.: Eddie Murphy and Nick Nolte star as a con and a cop on the track of some counterfeiters in a hip-violent action picture that is a rousing cross between "The Defiant Ones" and "The French Connection." Directed by the talented Walter Hill, who makes gunfire seem more lively than it has in recent years. R. 3 1/2 stars.

MY FAVORITE YEAR: Peter Onorati gives a grand performance as a drunk old movie star akin to Errol Flynn in the story of a young TV comedy writer in the '50s trying to keep O'Toole sober for a guest shot on a live TV show. A marvelous celebration of stardom, youthful enthusiasm and the high energy of live TV. PG. 4 stars.

TOOTSIE: More than the year's funniest film, "Tootsie" also is a celebration of the actor's life and a sly comment on sexual role-playing with Dustin Hoffman in a brilliant double role as an actor so desperate for work he takes a job as actress without anyone on the soap opera knowing he's a man. Of all of the holiday pictures, this is the one to see first. PG. 4 stars.

THE VERDICT: Paul Newman stars as a down-and-out lawyer who bets one last chance to redeem himself in arguing on behalf of the victim-of-medical-mispractice. As good as Newman is in the role, the film really works because of David Mamet's cynical script and tough supporting performances by James Mason and Jack Warden as attorneys. A fine courtroom drama. R. 3 1/2 stars.

DUDLEY MOORE
Back where he belongs

Brickman, who has written for Woody Allen, may be developing a device here that was first used in "Annie Hall." (Remember the scene where Marshall McLuhan appeared in a theater lobby and answered a man's question?) Here, though, it doesn't work. Freud (played by Alec Guinness) appears several times during the movie, and although the gimmick no doubt seemed like a clever way to illustrate the subconscious, it brings everything grinding to a dead standstill.

It's not fatal, though, to a movie with a lot of other nice things in it. I really enjoyed the rapport between Moore and McGovern — she so limp in her understated sexuality; he so dreadfully serious about the burden of his love, as if the fact that he loves her is a cross he must bear. The movie is populated with a lot of interesting supporting performances, too. In fact, you can tell it's a New York film, and you can almost guess that it comes from someone in the Woody Allen orbit because of the fun it has with celebrity cameos; the actors, professional and not, who appear in this film include not only Shawn but Alan King, artist Larry Rivers, director Gene Saks, playwright Renee Taylor, director John Huston and several actual New York shrinks.

"Lovesick" isn't a great comedy but it's not a bad one. And it's a reminder that Dudley Moore is a gifted and very likable comic actor. I suppose that like all great comedians, he has urges to play serious roles, but after the dreadful "Six Weeks" (in which his principal mistake was to appear), here he is back again in the lovesick territory of "10" and "Arthur." It's where he belongs.

L.M. Boyd What's what

Up jumps another explanation of where we get that phrase "to bite the bullet." Surgeons operating without anesthetic during the Civil War put bullets in the mouths of their patients, and just before incision, said, "Now bite the bullet," or words to that effect.

Q. Who's the more jealous, usually, a man or a woman?
 A. A woman. Studies repeatedly prove that, particularly among lower animals, it's the male, not the female that reveals the jealous nature.

You can lose weight, too, by going south. A man who weighs 201 pounds at the North Pole will weigh 200 pounds at the Equator.

INSTALLMENT BUYING

Q. Who started installment buying?
 A. One Ed Clark. In partnership with I.M. Singer, he put sewing machines into households for $5 down and $3 a month. Credit Card also with that merchandising technique known as the trade-in allowance.

Of those expectant mothers who seek abortions, about 41 percent are married, and 61 percent, married or not, are under age 25.

Q. Where in the Bible does it say that God counts a wife's tears when taking the measure of a husband?
 A. That's in the Talmud. Some believers insist the Delly actually keeps an exact tally of those tears as though with beans in a jar. The weeping woman, they think, chalks up eternal demerits against her man.

TINY TREES

World's smallest tree, the dwarf willow, is so tiny you could use it for a boutonniere.

Q. What are "China beans"?
 A. Black-eyed peas. They're common in China under the Chinese name.

Call that dog a Great Dane. If you wish, but it's German.

Q. What's the fastest growing state now?
 A. Texas.

Halloween Isn't observed in England.

Stocks close mixed, late rally helps average

Profit taking, oil price decline behind day of lackluster trading

By GAIL COLLINS
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK — The stock market finished with mixed results Thursday in lackluster trading although a late rally trimmed some earlier losses.

The surge may have been triggered by a bond market rally and comments by chief White House economist Martin Feldstein that interest rates should continue to fall, according to Michael Metz, Oppenheimer & Co. vice president.

"This is the first respectable rebound in the bond market in weeks," Metz said. "The market was ready for a rally and Feldstein's remarks probably helped it out."

The Dow Jones industrial average, down nearly seven points at midsession after falling 5.67 Wednesday, wound up gaining 1.48 at 1,088.91, thanks to a late buying burst.

The New York Stock Exchange index shed 0.05 at 85.13 and the price of a share was down 2 cents. Declines led advances 914-678 among the 1,390 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index was up 0.01 to 147.44.

The Big Board volume amounted about 74,500,000 shares, down from 82,100,000 Wednesday.

Analysts attributed the market's aimlessness to profit-taking, concern over oil prices, and psychological factors.

"As a whole this pullback has nothing to do with fact," said Trude Latimer, vice president at Evans & Co.

Early this week the Dow Jones index hit a new all-time closing high and broke through the 1,100 level for only the second time in history. But stock prices quickly fell back.

"Usually when the market tries to support a certain level and doesn't do it you get the opposite happening for a few days," said Chester Pado of G. Tsai & Co. in Los Angeles.

"The 1,100 level has become a kind of psychological bugaboo for the market," said Alfred Harris of Stifel Nicolaus & Co. in St. Louis.

There was plenty of good economic news coming out of Washington, where the Federal Reserve reported the largest rise in the operating rate for industry in nearly a year, and the Labor Department said new claims for unemployment benefits were down for the fifth time in the last six weeks.

But investors have been anticipating the recession's end since the beginning of the Wall Street rally last summer, and the news did not appear dramatic enough to spur any excitement.

"The market moved up 80 points over the last three weeks," noted Pado. "Obviously they were looking at this good news that's coming out. The market has a way of anticipating news and once it does come out it tends to have the opposite effect over the short term."

Some analysts pointed to fear that dropping oil prices could put new pressure on both the oil industry and heavily indebted third world oil exporters. The British National Oil Company is expected to announce Friday it is reducing prices on its crude oil — a move that could trigger a price war.

"There is considerable apprehension concerning lower oil prices," Harris said. "A lot of money is staying on the sidelines."

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 84,048,600, down from 95,854,200 Wednesday.

The American Stock Exchange index dropped 1.24 to close at 382.54, and the price of a share declined 5 cents. Volume totaled 8,580,000 shares compared with 7,930,000 Wednesday.

The National Association of Security

Dealers NASDAQ Index of OTC stocks dropped 0.12 to close at 258.95.

On the trading floor, Beatrice Foods, which gained 1 1/4 Wednesday, was the most active NYSE-listed issue, up 1 at 22 1/2. The company recently announced a reorganization of its domestic operations including divestiture of some operations and a $280 million after-tax writedown.

IBM, which announced it was discussing a joint venture with Matsushita Electric, was the second most active issue, up 1/4 at 98 1/2. Some analysts said the movement of the blue-chip DJIA component has mirrored the uncertain activity of the Dow itself.

Allied Corp., another Dow component, climbed 1 1/4 to 36 1/2. An Allied subsidiary announced it had received a multi-million dollar contract to manufacture batteries for the Western Electric Co.

Exxon Corp. was third on the active list, down 1/4 at 29 1/2.

Metromedia, a big winner all week since it reported 1982 earnings of $3.11 a share vs. $1.34 a year ago, was ahead 19 to 33.

Warner Communications, tumbling since it predicted earnings for the first half of the year would be down sharply, was off 1/4 at 28 1/2.

For California plant

GM, Toyota sign joint production contract

By ROBERT A. MARTIN
United Press International

FREMONT, Calif. — The chairman of General Motors Corp. and Toyota Motor Co. signed a joint production agreement Thursday to build a Japanese-American car at the Idle GM plant in Fremont, creating 12,000 new jobs.

GM Chairman Roger Smith called the signing ceremony "a truly historical occasion."

"We're moving ahead rapidly with this joint venture," Smith said. "The plant... one of the largest, newest and potentially one of the most efficient we have in America today — is tragically idle at this period. But not for long."

He said the Idle assembly plant and a new stamping plant to be built outside the main plant will be "tooled, manned and producing quality cars within two years."

"I am quite hopeful that the venture will not only offer the high quality and fuel efficient small cars to American consumers, but also provide a very good employment opportunity and furthermore set an example of new industrial cooperation that may give a solution to the trade problem that exists between the two countries," Toyota Chairman Eiji Toyoda said.

The joint venture agreement by two of the world's auto manufacturing giants climaxed 11 months of secret international talks.

The $300 million pact provides for the manufacture of an American-Japanese hybrid car. About 3,000 workers will be needed at the Fremont plant and as many as another 9,000 jobs are expected to be created nationwide during the 12-year run of the agreement.

The pact calls for Toyota to put up $150 million in cash and for GM to put up $20 million in cash along with its $130 million plant.

The signing followed months of rumors that alternately raised and dashed the hopes of thousands of laid-off auto workers in the San Francisco Bay area.

GM officials in Washington, D.C., and Toyota officials in Tokyo announced the pact during simultaneous news conferences Monday.

The discussions began when Smith met with Toyota's president over dinner in March 1982, according to industry sources.

This Fremont, Calif., plant will be operated by GM and Toyota under an agreement signed Thursday

Factory output shows slight increase

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A slight but long-awaited improvement was reported among America's recession-slowed assembly lines and industrial plants last month after 17 months of nearly uninterrupted cutbacks, the government said Thursday.

The Federal Reserve Board said the operating rate for industry climbed to 67.8 percent of capacity in January from December's low point of the recession, 67.3 percent.

It was the largest improvement in nearly a year yet represented only a tiny beginning to any recovery process. The nation's factories were still using less than the historically low average of capacity for all of last year of 69.8 percent.

In more typical years not slowed down by recession the nation's factory operating rate can be in the low 80s and in 1973 averaged 88 percent.

The most recent monthly improvement that was bigger than January's occurred in February 1982. That period's 1.1 percentage point jump was generally regarded as a rebound from earlier severe weather effects that only masked continuing underlying deterioration.

In contrast, the latest improvement is accompanied by solid indications of a broad fundamental improvement, analysts said.

The sludge was set for the turnaround by a long period of severe inventory clearance. Now stocks must be rebuilt to meet the slow but steady demand that is at the heart of recovery hopes, analysts say.

But a sustained recovery depends on more than inventory rebuilding and economists are watching closely to see if new orders keep adding fuel to warm up the manufacturing sector of the economy.

Helping spread the warmth is a boom in housing construction, which can consume steel, glass, fuel, appliances and construction labor fast enough and in large enough quantities to send help deep into the economy.

Wednesday the Commerce Department reported January housing starts up a record 35.9 percent and building permits needed to keep the boom rolling were up nearly 16 percent.

The latest Fed report echoed Wednesday's encouraging measure of factory production which showed a watershed increase of 0.9 percent after a 0.1 percent gain in revised December figures.

The operating rate did not show a similar improvement in December, waiting until January to reflect a 0.5 percentage point increase.

The report demonstrated that the factory operating improvements had a broad base, from the auto industry to electrical machinery and instruments.

The operating rate for the auto industry was up 1.5 points to 53.7 percent.

But oil refiners were forced to keep cutting back, dropping 1 point to 66.1 percent of capacity. And producers of one of the largest categories of industrial products, non-electrical machinery, also cut back further.

Tylenol makers: quick action helped survival

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The maker of Tylenol told other manufacturers Thursday that speed, candor and concern for consumers are vital for corporate survival of product tampering.

Dr. Thomas Gates, medical director of McNeil Consumer Products Co., said his firm's open and swift response to the seven Tylenol-cyanide death last year in Chicago helped safeguard the public as well as the product.

"We turned a possible monumental product disaster into survival," Gates said in addressing the opening session of a two-day conference, "Product Survival and Revival: What to Do when Disaster Strikes."

McNeil, based in Fort Washington, Pa., along with its parent company, Johnson & Johnson, has been praised by the Food and Drug Administration for its response to the deaths that shocked the nation and set off a string of copycat incidents.

McNeil contacted the FDA within hours of being notified of the first two deaths on Sept. 30, cooperated with FDA investigators and voluntarily withdrew all Tylenol capsules nationwide by Oct. 8.

The popular aspirin substitute was reintroduced last Nov. 11 in new tamper-resistant containers, now federally required for over-the-counter drugs.

While McNeil had 35.3 percent of the $1.2 billion-a-year analgesic market prior to the Tylenol deaths, its share is now about 28 percent but climbing.

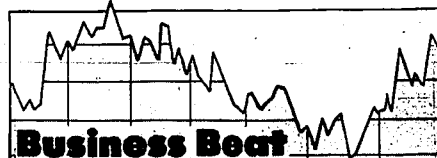

"It's going to be bigger and stronger than ever," Gates predicted.

The FDA concluded the Tylenol capsules were laced with cyanide after leaving company plants and probably after reaching retail stores. There have been no arrests for the tampering.

Dr. Mark Novitch, an FDA deputy director who worked on the Tylenol case, shared the podium with Gates as the leadoff speakers of the symposium sponsored by several newsletters that deal with the drug and food industry.

He said McNeil and Johnson & Johnson's prompt and straightforward response to the deaths "will, I believe, set a standard for the industry."

Feldstein: rates to stay high

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's chief economic adviser indicated Thursday interest rates will remain high, saying he does not think that even a change in monetary policy could bring them down now.

Martin Feldstein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, told the Senate Budget Committee the administration feels the Fed has been doing a good job of holding down inflation through its tight money policy despite its critics who claim the Fed is keeping interest rates high.

"I don't think the Fed can bring down and hold down interest rates now by changing monetary policy," Feldstein said.

"The financial markets are very nervous about inflation because of the large budget deficits in future years."

Gas prices getting lower

ROCHESTER, Wis. (UPI) — An international business consulting firm says gasoline prices at the end of January in the United States were at their lowest point in two years.

Ranchheimer & Co., Inc., surveys the monthly prices as part of its service to nationwide automotive fleets. It said the average prices for January were $1.311 a gallon for regular and $1.367 a gallon for unleaded.

Prices in January 1981 were $1.274 for regular and $1.316 for unleaded. They rose to $1.33.9 and $1.383 in February and continued to go up until April 1981 when they peaked at $1.404 for regular and $1.45 for unleaded.

Subaru to recall vehicles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said Thursday Subaru of America Inc., at the agency's urging, will recall 81,253 of its 1980 vehicles to replace the back frame in the driver's seat.

The agency said it was making the safety recall campaign announcement because the firm had declined to do so.

The seatback frames involved, a statement issued by the NHTSA said, have inadequate weld joints. When the welds break, the seatback can twist and bend backward, resulting in the possibility of the driver losing control of the vehicle, it said.

The agency said it started an engineering analysis of the problem last June after getting seven complaints. It said there was one report of an accident but no injuries or fatalities. The statement said Subaru has received almost 300 complaints.

Scotland's distillery business is on the rocks

LONDON (UPI) — Scotland's biggest distillers said they are closing 11 of their 45 malt whisky distilleries by June.

The distillers company announced the closures and cutbacks Wednesday resulting in more than 530 job losses.

One of the world's largest grain distilleries, Carsbridge, will be at the end of next month.

The closures are the result of a collapse in demand for Scotch whisky, particularly in Britain, over the past three years, stock market analysts said.

Malt stocks are laid down to mature for at least five years in advance.

Production accounts for $8.32 on every bottle of whisky sold in Britain. Japanese competition has also hit overseas sales.

With the fall in demand, distilleries throughout Scotland have been on short-time working for some time and already about 10 have closed.

"I believe that Distillers have genuinely tried to avoid these closures since 1980 but with the forecasts for demand for the future they have been forced into this decision," one stock analyst said.

"Even if there was a massive upturn in demand their remaining distilleries, which are all working at about 30 percent of their capacity, could meet it."
