Governor uses veto to kill educational cuts

By MARK SHENEFELT
United Press International

BOISE — Gov. John Evans vetoed about $10 million in education- and state-agency cuts Friday, then signed into the law the rest of the Legislature's budget-balancing package.

Republican House Speaker T.W. Silvers — chief architect of the omnibus bill — sat grim-faced alongside as the smiling governor took a ruler and pen to the measure before a throng of legislators, newsmen, teachers and mothers with small children.

The Democratic chief executive let stand $59 million worth of funding diversions and increases in the state sales tax, but deleted a $7.7 million public-school funding reduction and about $2.3 million in other cuts.

Evans, in his five-page message to Silvers and Senate President Pro Tem James Risch, R-Boise, said the items he vetoed "would be unreasonably damaging to education and state government."

'It's unfortunate that so much of this (bill) has fallen prey to a rabble-rousing minority...Public education would not have been hurt, contrary to some reports.'

—Tom Stivers

At the veto and signing ceremony, however, Silvers took the chance to assail the Idaho Education Association for building a public protest against the funding cuts.

He indicated education programs would have been safeguarded because of an automatic safety net of property-tax increases for public school funding.

And the GOP leader from Twin Falls said a backlash was growing in the Legislature against critics of the now-vetoed reduction in the state's appropriation to public schools.

"In my opinion, the Idaho Education Association is not serving the needs of education today," Silvers said, adding that "tremendous resistance" was building among lawmakers to pleas for more education money in fiscal year 1984.

"It's unfortunate that so much of this (bill) has fallen prey to a rabble-rousing minority," he said, referring to the IEA. "Public education would not have been hurt, contrary to some reports."

Later, at a news conference in the House Republican caucus room, Silvers ribbed the governor for his action and stepped up his assault on the IEA.

"It's easy to be a hero to respond to all these clacking minorities," Silvers said. "I understand the governor was in a spot, but if it hadn't been for the IEA, the bill would have been signed, or become law without his signature. He let himself be backed into a corner."

In the days leading up to the line-item veto, legislators and the governor were besieged by rallies and letters protesting the $7.7 million reduction.

The surviving portions of the bill call for several million dollars in transfers of state dedicated funds into the general account, plus a one-cent sales-tax increase effective March 1, 1983, through June 30, 1984.

Republican leaders had planned on the state treasurer's office issuing about $32 million in state tax-anticipation notes to provide revenue this year that would be replaced by added sales-tax revenue in FY 1984. But because of Evans' veto, the note issuance may have to be increased to more than $40 million.

Evans said revenue from tax-anticipation notes will be sufficient to cover the additional $10 million needed to balance the 1983 budget, which ends June 30 and was projected to be nearly $70 million in the red before lawmakers passed the omnibus bill.

The line-item veto was the first in several years by an Idaho governor. Evans said he used it once early in his gubernatorial career.

All general-fund agencies were saved from budget cuts by the governor's line-item veto of a 1.5 percent across-the-board reduction.

In his message, Evans also objected to the Legislature's order to the Board of Examiners to reduce appropriations, which he said could have better been done by a straight reduction in appropriations by lawmakers. The governor said a legislative order to the board may be in violation of the separation-of-powers doctrine.

Silvers said House Republicans would caucus Monday to plan their next move, but he said he expected no further legislation on the fiscal 1983 problem. He said the Legislature must now step up action on fiscal year 1984 matters.

Sudan claims Libya buildup

KHARTOUM, Sudan (UPI) — Sudan charged Friday Libyan leader Moammar Khadafi was massing troops and warplanes along the Libyan-Sudanese border and announced the arrest of a group of Libyan-backed conspirators.

Khadafi said in an interview with CBS News, however, that Libya "had no intention" of going to war with its neighbors in North Africa.

"Our relations are good now with Tunisia," he said. "And it is good after the death of (President Anwar) Sadat with Egypt. And we hope to improve with Sudan."

In a broadcast quoted by the Cairo-based Middle East News Agency, Sudan's state-run Omduram Radio said, "Sudanese troops and security forces were, and still are, fully prepared to confront any aggression that may be carried out by the Libyan regime against Sudan."

The announcement was the first Sudanese confirmation of U.S. reports earlier in the week of a Libyan build-up against Sudan, and came as Sudanese President Gaafar Numery and Chadani President Hissene Habre declared they were ready to combat "subversive" acts by neighboring African regimes.

Habre said Thursday he was determined to expel Libyan troops occupying his nation's northern territory.

Assistant Secretary of Defense Francis West arrived in Egypt, where he will be joined Saturday by Lt. Gen. Robert Kingdon, the commander of the United States' Rapid Deployment Force which is designed to protect U.S. oil supplies and allies in the Middle East.

The United States has dispatched four AWACS surveillance planes to Egypt and the aircraft carrier Nimitz to Mediterranean waters off Libya, Egypt and Sudan, which share a common border, are strong U.S. allies.

Two Libyan aircraft approached the Nimitz earlier this week but turned back when the aircraft carrier launched F-14 fighters to intercept them, a Pentagon official said.

In the CBS interview, Khadafi threatened war with the United States if the Nimitz enters the Gulf of Sidra, which Libya claims as its own but the

Access given to EPA files

By PAULA SCHWED
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration agreed Friday night to give House subcommittee members full access to toxic waste enforcement files Environmental Protection Agency chief Anne Gorsuch had withheld.

Under a compromise announced by administration and congressional negotiators, contempt of Congress proceedings against Mrs. Gorsuch will be dropped and House Public Works oversight subcommittee members will be given access to the EPA documents on Capitol Hill, ending the most serious constitutional clash over executive privilege since Watergate.

"We have just signed a memorandum of understanding which I think is an historic document," Rep. Elliott Levitas, D-Ga., chairman of the subcommittee, told reporters after a four-hour negotiating session.

President Reagan issued a statement saying he was "very pleased" with the terms of the agreement that came after weeks of negotiations.

The subcommittee is one of six investigating whether the EPA showed political favoritism and mismanaged the $1.6 billion Superfund program charged with cleaning up the nation's worst toxic waste dumps.

The House voted to hold Mrs. Gorsuch in contempt of Congress Dec. 16 for refusing to comply with a Levitas subcommittee subpoena to turn over the documents. Mrs. Gorsuch cited executive privilege and orders from Reagan in not turning over the case files.

Said Reagan: "The agreement strikes an appropriate balance in that it is consistent with the doctrine of executive privilege, while it also assures that necessary information is made available to the Congress in the legitimate pursuit of its responsibilities."

Social Security future more bleak

By D'VERA COHN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Social Security will be deeper in debt over the next 75 years than previously predicted, partly because a lower birth rate will produce fewer taxpaying workers.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform estimated its proposed plan would collect two-thirds of Social Security's 75-year debt, estimated at 1.8 percent of the nation's taxable payroll.

But Social Security Commissioner John Svahn, in new economic projections to be sent to Capitol Hill, said the long-term debt is 2.09 percent — 16 percent higher.

The new projections show Social Security deeper in the hole partly because of lower fertility forecasts. The commission said 2.1 babies would be born per 1,000 women of childbearing age; the new figures put the number at two.

Social Security's actuaries said if Congress stops state and local workers from dropping out of the retirement system that is now optional for them — which the commission recommended — the debt will drop to 1.96 percent of taxable payroll. The commission's $165 billion packages would raise payroll taxes, freeze benefits for six months, tax checks of well-to-do pensioners and require new federal workers to join Social Security next January.

Svahn sent projections to Congress last week showing the plan would keep Social Security afloat through 1990 under moderate economic conditions and with speedier tax collections. Under grimmer projections, it would fall short.

Britain, Norway slash crude oil price

By SAJID RIZVI
United Press International

Britain and Norway slashed their crude oil prices Friday, Arab oil producers called an emergency meeting to discuss what was expected to be a new round of global oil price reductions.

The state-run British National Oil Corporation cut the price of Britain's crude exports, which average 2.2 million barrels a day, by $3 to $30.50 a barrel.

The new rates mean Britain's North Sea oil is $3.50 a barrel cheaper than the OPEC benchmark price of $4 a barrel and $5 cheaper than the $3.50 price of certain brands of African crude oil — a crude similar in quality to North Sea oil.

Within hours of the British price cut, the Norwegian state oil company Statoil slashed prices for its 500,000 barrels a day of North Sea crudes by between $3 and $3.50 a barrel, making prices $30.50 to $31 effective Feb. 1.

A spokesman for Statoil said he was told

Nigeria had also cut its prices to remain competitive with North Sea oil, but the report could not be immediately confirmed.

The United States, Egypt and the Soviet Union had already cut their prices after OPEC's summit meeting failed to agree on pricing schedules and quotas in Geneva, Switzerland, last month.

In the Middle East, the Qatar news agency said Arab nations would hold "important" consultations under the auspices of the Gulf Cooperation Council within the next few days to discuss the price cuts.

The Council, set up in Abu Dhabi in May 1981, groups Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Bahrain and the Sultanate of Oman. The first four are members in the 13-nation OPEC oil cartel.

In Caracas, Energy and Mines Minister Humberto Calderón Bertl denied reports Venezuela, an OPEC member, had reduced its oil prices and criticized Britain for its price reduction.

"I want to categorically deny that Venezuela has reduced its oil price," he said, adding that his country "will not modify its price unless OPEC takes a decision in that respect."

Calderón Bertl said high-level Venezuelan government missions would depart next week for talks with OPEC members and non-members to seek a solution to the crisis on the world oil market.

Britain's price cut had been expected for some three weeks in view of the worldwide oil glut and the continuing failure of OPEC to agree on prices.

The British government had warned, however, such a cut could lead to plunging world oil prices and precipitate an international banking collapse because oil producers would no longer be able to meet payments on their borrowings.

Banks are worried because some of the heaviest world borrowers are oil producing nations like Nigeria, Mexico and Venezuela.

"There is no cheering while the prices plummet," an oil industry executive said.

Utility rate hike unacceptable

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The Bonneville Power Administration will cut a projected 45 percent rate hike because it is "simply unacceptable" for recession-hit customers, Administrator Peter T. Johnson said Friday.

The power agency also said it would end all but critical transmission line construction, cut its operating costs by more than $15 million and slash expenditures on conservation measures while challenging the Washington Public Power Supply System to cut its cash requirements in the period through 1985.

"Previous assumptions indicated the need for a priority-firm rate increase of up to 45 percent in November. A wholesale rate increase of this magnitude is simply unacceptable under present economic conditions," Johnson said.

"Ratepayers in the Northwest are feeling the pinch of higher electricity rates at a time of high regional unemployment and other effects of a deep recession. Bonneville will execute responsible cost reductions to hold down rates."

Commission gets more time

WASHINGTON (UP) — President Reagan signed an executive order Friday extending to April 15 the life of his Commission on Strategic Forces, which is looking into development and deployment of the MX missile system.

The president acted after the commission, originally ordered to report to Reagan by Friday, said it needed more time to consider technical issues and to consult with members of Congress.

Reagan named the commission in December when Congress rejected his request for production funds for the MX intercontinental ballistic missile because of doubts about his "dense pack" deployment plans.

The administration had proposed placing 100 missiles in clusters of five in a 20-square-mile area of Wyoming. The main job of the commission, headed by Ford Administration national security adviser Brent Scowcroft, is to find a bipartisan agreement on basing that would clear the way for production of the missiles.

NASA announces shuttle crew

HOUSTON (UPI) — The National Aeronautics and Space Administration Friday announced several crew members for upcoming shuttle flights, including two of the oldest astronauts scheduled to fly for the first time.

Lawmaker protests spending

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A lawmaker protested Friday against plans by federal agencies to spend $99 million on the 1984 Olympics, suggesting athletes be charged $450 a day to repay the government.

"I see no reason for the U.S. taxpayer to subsidize the travels of Soviet athletes," said Rep. Bobb Flesler, R-Call., who represents a district in suburban Los Angeles, site of the 1984 games.

Mrs. Flesler's comments revived the issue of government involvement in Olympic spending, a simmering political controversy two years ago. The controversy was thought ended by pledges the Games would be financed entirely by private sources through the private Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee.

Obscenity law questioned

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Several dancers accused of lewd behavior and the owner of a lounge shut down by police asked a federal judge Friday to declare Louisiana's obscenity law unconstitutional, saying it discriminated against women.

The statute under attack outlawed forms of sexual behavior in bars, as well as "drinking," the practice of paying women to entice male customers to buy them drinks.

"Plaintiffs have been and are being prosecuted for allegedly allowing a police officer to place a tip down the front of her top and for accepting a drink when offered by the undercover police officer," wrote lawyer Robert Belknap for Dirty Dan's Bar.

"The same acts performed by a man would not be proscribed by law. Therefore, plaintiffs are being discriminated against based upon their sex."

10 accused as slave traders

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Ten accused slave traders convicted separately in one instance used violence to keep 16 Indonesians as involuntary servants in wealthy households, federal prosecutors said Friday.

Prosecutors made the allegations in papers filed in U.S. District Court in response to doubts expressed by a federal judge earlier this month that slavery can exist without violence or coercion.

U.S. District Judge Richard Gadbis Jr. told prosecutors he had "some very distinct problems with the government's position... I'm still not sure exactly what this case is about in regard to the slavery charges."

"But last night, and the night before, it was near our waters. Not in the Gulf of Sidra. Otherwise if it is there, that means war took place." At the United Nations, Libyan Ambassador Ali Treki denied his nation was threatening Egypt or Sudan militarily and accused the United States of using the CIA to stir up trouble in north Africa so U.S. forces could intervene in the region.

ABC World News Tonight quoting U.S. officials, said Khadafi planned to send guerrillas and troops to Khartoum to assassinate Numeiry, seize the country and set up a new government. The Middle East News Agency quoted a Sudanese official as saying the Libyan build-up included mechanized infantry units, fighter planes and long-range bombers "directed against Sudan." The Sudanese official said the build-up was taking place along the Sudanese border and at the Al-Rufra oases, north of the Libyan-Sudanese border about 100 miles from Egypt. The Omdurman Radio broadcast said Sudanese authorities uncovered an "organization of revolutionary committees, whose members were trained in the theories of the Green Book and in subversive operations." The "Green Book" is a pamphlet authored by Khadafi expounding his theory of government.

investigators will begin reviewing the documents Tuesday morning. He said all 16 members of the subcommittee and two staff members will be able to see the files. "Make no mistake about it. This is a major victory for the House," Howard said in a statement. The agreement was reached by Levitas. White House counsel Fred Felding, Deputy Attorney General

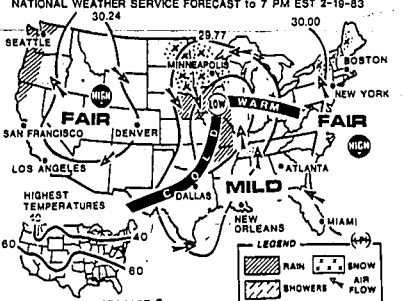

Edward Schmults and Assistant Attorney General Carol Dinkins and was approved by Reagan. The document released on Capitol Hill said "an essential and nonseparable condition of this agreement" is that the House will adopt a resolution certifying that the subpoena issued by Levitas' subcommittee has been complied with and "that the House finds no reason for further proceedings" against Mrs. Gorsuch.

Said Levitas, "It would make further proceedings under the contempt citation unnecessary." The memorandum of understanding, binding on the Levitas subcommittee only, said panel members must keep confidential all information gleaned from what EPA determines are sensitive documents. The agency can censor what it considers to be sensitive portions of the documents.

White House tried to kill ABC report

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON — The White House unsuccessfully sought to delay a network report that President Reagan had dispatched an aircraft carrier and four AWACS radar planes to discourage a Libyan attack on Sudan, officials said Friday.

National security adviser William Clark called Ed Foubly, chief of the ABC News Washington bureau, Wednesday after learning the network was about to broadcast the exclusive report, which he considered "inaccurate," a White House official said.

Clark told Foubly he would "appreciate it if the network would hold off for 24 hours," the official said.

The official said Clark believed his request "was in the national interest" but "made it clear it was making no demand." He "merely asked them to consider the sensitivity of the information, the official said.

Administration officials have since indicated that the Airborne Warning And Control System planes were dispatched to Egypt and the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Nimitz left its position off Lebanon to make a pass near the Gulf of Sidra off Libya because of reports that Libyan leader Moammar Khadafi had massed troops near the Sudanese border.

Despite what one network source described as the "full-court press" by the administration, ABC executives decided to go ahead with the report.

The White House official said ABC called Clark's deputy, Robert McFarlane "to say that someone else had it and that they had considered the sensitivity and would go with it."

ABC said it already had delayed broadcasting its story one day at the request of Pentagon correspondent John McWehly's sources.

McWehly gave the report on the network's 6:30 p.m. "EST News Wednesday" and CBS and NBC matched it in newscasts later Wednesday night.

Reagan, asked about the ABC report at his nationally broadcast news conference 90 minutes later, said there had been "no naval movement" by U.S. forces off Libya's coast but that the United States and Egypt regularly conduct joint military exercises. An aide said later the Nimitz was on a separate exercise.

Foubly said Clark called him after failing to reach ABC News President Roone Arledge. "The White House was unhappy with the story and... he asked us to delay it. Not cancel it, delay it," Foubly said.

"They came in with a full court press to get (ABC) to stop it," a network source said. "They were extremely upset."

Knowledgeable sources suggested the administration might have wanted to delay the report to give the Nimitz time to move away from the area. The Nimitz left the area late Wednesday.

In his report, McWehly said, "ABC News has learned that the United States has secretly deployed four early warning AWACS planes to Egypt on short notice and has rushed the aircraft carrier Nimitz and three escort ships from the coast of Lebanon to Libya."

Personal income shows scant increase

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Farm income plunged while factory pay rose last month to produce a scant $800 million improvement in the nation's overall personal income, the Commerce Department reported Friday.

The increase to an annual income rate of $2.639 trillion amounted to only three-hundredths of a percent, the report said. It was the weakest monthly performance since the nation's personal income declined in December 1981 by 0.1 percent.

Personal spending, considered vital to build economic recovery, also was flat in January and December after revision.

A positive sign in the report was that income in the form of unemployment benefits dropped in January by 7.4 percent or $2.4 billion at an annual rate, the report said, the first decline since January 1982.

Farm income dove 32.1 percent, or $9.9 billion, from December to January to an annual rate of $124.4 billion, about equal to 1981's average.

The category covering wages and salaries of factory workers, distributors, service industry employees and government workers, nearly 13 times as large as farm income, was up 1 percent or $16.5 billion in January.

Personal interest income, from sources like savings deposits and money funds, continued its slippage, dropping 0.2 percent or $800 million. This category of American income has been dropping since October as interest rates have declined.

Dividend income went up slightly and income from rents jumped 8.3 percent in the single month.

The main reason farm income showed such a steep drop in January was that December's figure was inflated by annual government crop price support payments, the report said.

For all of last year, the nation's overall personal income went up only 0.4 percent, the smallest increase since 1963's 5.1 percent.

But spending power still made a slight advance, since prices went up less than income.

The most encouraging aspect of the latest report — the factory pay rise — reflected the increases in factory production already reported by a Federal Reserve System economist, a 0.9 percent jump that was cited as the best proof yet the recession is fading.

Manufacturing payrolls were up at an annual rate of $3.8 billion in January compared to a decline of $700 million in December.

"The payroll gains were mainly in the durable goods industries, with motor vehicles having the largest gain," the government report said.

Mental patient snowplows parked airplanes

By CAROL ROSENBERG
United Press International

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. — A two-time mental patient described as "psychotic," Friday pleaded innocent to charges he used a four-ton airport snowplow to destroy or seriously damage 23 single-engine airplanes.

Police said Robert A. Borucki, 35, of Northampton slipped into a private, deserted airport late Wednesday, started a disabled snowplow and sliced through row after row of the planes, reducing many to scrap metal.

Damage was put at more than $500,000.

Borucki was charged with two counts of malicious damage over $100. As many as 23 similar counts may be brought because each plane was separately owned. He was ordered to undergo 20 days psychiatric observation.

"He is a total stranger. He has had no flying lessons and has had no experience with us in any way, shape or form," said Dick Guisto, manager of the LaFleur Airport.

"Evidently this is just strictly some insane mischief," he said.

Borucki was unemployed and living in a Northampton lodging house, police said.

In an interview after Borucki's arraignment, court psychiatrist Kendall Brell said Borucki was "psychotic with violent behavior background patterns."

Borucki has twice been in Northampton State Hospital and was released from the mental institution last June, said Brell. He said Borucki was "not responsible for his actions and is not competent to stand trial."

Borucki is the son of Edward Borucki of Southampton, a veteran of the Pearl Harbor attack. Reached at his father's home in Southampton, Edward Borucki Jr. said the family had no comment.

Guisto, astounded at the damage, said a police officer found row after row of the planes demolished Thursday morning just 90 minutes after he had been through the airport on a routine patrol.

"They took every single one of our single-engine airplanes and hit every single one. They backed it up and went forward, backed it up and hit again," he said.

Some were destroyed, others had wings and propellers pulled off. The truck belonged to the airport, but officials thought it could not be started, he said. It was parked near a hangar repair.

Hampshire County Prosecutor William O'Neill said Borucki was sent to Bridgewater State Hospital after a preliminary examination by a court-appointed psychiatrist. His case was continued to March 10.

Police said the investigation was continuing.

Insurance adjusters were on the scene Friday examining the mess.

The planes belonged to owners from Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Vermont. Seventy other planes were left untouched, including those belonging to Guisto, of Hamden, Conn., and his partner Russ Benjamin of Cheshire, Conn.

Australian brush fires brought under control

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) — Thousands of firefighters Friday brought under control most of the brushfires that roared through southern Australian towns and villages for two days, killing 69 people and leaving thousands homeless.

But authorities in the two stricken states, South Australia and Victoria, added weekend temperatures expected to reach 100 and the possibility of winds raised the danger of new flare-ups.

A spokesman for the Country Fire Authority said 8,000 firefighters had been pressed into service against the blazes that destroyed more than 1,300 homes in Victoria, where 43 people perished.

Twenty-six more deaths were recorded in South Australia, where another 700 homes were gutted by fire.

Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser Friday called for a national weekend of mourning and called the loss of life and an estimated $400 million in damage one of the "greatest disasters in our history."

Only one major blaze was reported still out of control Friday — in the area of Warburton, about 40 miles northeast of Melbourne, the Victoria state capital.

No new blazes were reported except one near Mount Macedon, just north of Melbourne.

At Yarra Dam near Warburton 83 people survived a huge fire Thursday by hiding in a tunnel near the dam as flames raced through their tiny country town.

Those in the tunnel included three pregnant women, 20 children and 15 dogs.

Funded clinics can't squeal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — States receiving federal family planning money cannot require parental permission before providing birth control devices to teenage girls, a federal appeals court ruled Friday.

Acting in a Utah case, the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington ruled states must at least provide an alternate way for minors to get the contraceptives, such as referring them to federally funded clinics that do not now require parental consent.

The court's order could discourage other states from experimenting with requirements of parental consent or notification when minors request birth control.

U.S. regulations now in effect require federally funded clinics to provide birth control services regardless of age.

However, the Reagan administration is battling in the courts to try to change the regulations to require such clinics to tell parents if their teenage daughters ask for birth control pills or devices.

The new regulation — branded a "squeal rule" by opponents — was to take effect Feb. 25. But a federal judge in New York earlier this week blocked it from going into effect nationwide.

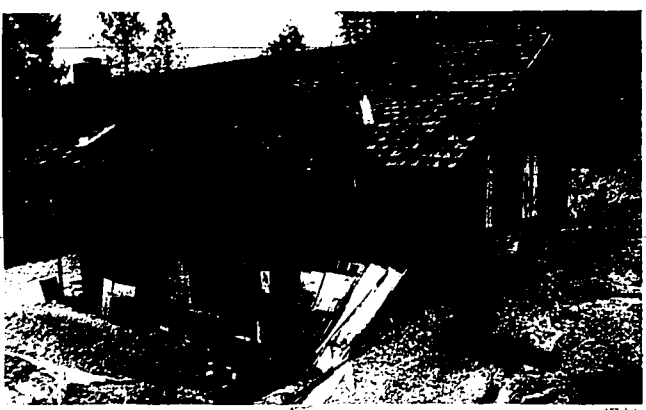

Friday, U.S. District Judge Thomas Flannery in Washington issued a second preliminary injunction against the regulation, saying it is "inconsistent with congressional intent" on government family planning and threatens to increase the numbers of unwanted pregnancies and abortions among teenagers.

The Utah suit was filed by Planned Parenthood to challenge the Health and Human Services Department's award of 1983 federal family planning funds to the Utah health department. Utah has its own law requiring parental consent before clinics can provide birth control devices or abortions to minors.

Although the appeals court refused to invalidate the state's grant, it ruled the state health department is obligated to give "unmarried minors who lack parental consent access" to birth control services, even if that means referring minors to private clinics that receive federal funds.

"We agree with Planned Parenthood," senior Judge Carl McGowan wrote, "that (federal) regulations in their present form forbid a project from refusing to service minors whose parents do not first consent, at least when the minors are not referred to some other project receiving Title X funds that does not impose such a requirement."

The court put Utah on its honor to fulfill its promise to HHS that "the Utah Department of Health can and will provide family planning services to the approximately 12,000 women currently served" by the state and two clinics that had been receiving federal funds.

Grants Pass couple's home destroyed by Friday mudslide

Storm rakes Northwest

By United Press International

A storm raked the Northwest Friday with heavy rain and winds that triggered a "major mudslide," flooded rivers and forced dozens from their bottomland homes. A freak funnel cloud caused heavy damage in northern California.

Light snow and freezing drizzle glazed the Upper Midwest, but conditions generally were tame for mid-February.

A sleet storm that dumped nearly an inch of rain on southern New England glazed roads with a thin coat of "black ice," causing at least one death in Lunenburg, Mass., and cutting power to more than 4,000 homes in Boston.

The ice, which gets its name because it cannot be seen, produced a rash of minor accidents.

A second day of relentless downpours in southwest Oregon forced residents to flee homes in low-lying areas along the Rogue and South Umpqua rivers — the state's second and third largest tributaries.

Up to 18 homes in Eagle Point were hit by Rogue River flood waters. Flooding of several other homes was prevented by sandbags. A handful of residents in the town of Rogue River were forced to flee as shallow water lapped into "four or five" houses, a sheriff's spokesman said.

"A few people have had to evacuate their residences in low-lying areas" along the South Umpqua River, a spokesman said.

A house slitting on a hill 2 miles west of Grants Pass, Ore., was heavily damaged by what what a Josephine County sheriff's officer termed a "major mudslide" — the second to hit the house in three weeks.

Newark tops poverty list

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nearly one of every three people in Newark, N.J., had incomes at or below the poverty level in 1979, giving it the worst poverty record of any large city, Census Bureau experts reported Friday.

At the other end of the income scale — among cities with 100,000 or more people living inside the corporate limits — was Livonia, Mich., reporting just over two people in 100 at or under the poverty line for that year.

According to census data taken in April 1980, 32.8 percent of Newark's 335,105 population reported incomes at the poverty level or lower the previous year.

A decade earlier, the rate in Newark was 22.5 percent. However, the agency said it had not had a chance yet to match all the latest figures against those from the previous census.

The readings for 1979 showed Livonia with only 2.2 percent of its 103,424 people at or under the poverty figure.

The population figures for the cities used to develop the list are fractionally smaller than total populations for the city reported by the Census Bureau, a division expert said, because in calculating the rates, people in institutions, college dormitories, and military barracks were excluded.

The bureau used a sliding scale of poverty rates to determine the figures, with a figure of $3,686 for an individual living alone or with an unrelated person, $7,412 for a family of four and $14,812 for a family of nine or more.

Ranking next to Newark was Atlanta, where 27.5 percent of the city's 1980 population of 409,424 reported 1979 income at or under the poverty level.

Libyan smuggler gets 17-year sentence

HOUSTON (UPI) — A federal judge Friday sentenced convicted Libyan explosives smuggler Edwin Wilson to 17 years in prison and assessed the former CIA agent a $145,000 fine.

U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling sentenced Wilson after hearing testimony from witnesses called by the prosecution in an attempt to show the former spy should get the maximum 17 years plus another eight years as a "special dangerous offender." Sterling rejected the additional penalty.

Wilson made no comment when Sterling announced the sentence.

Prosecutors called three witnesses, including Assistant U.S. Attorney Larry Barcella, who said there are several investigations of Wilson across the country. Others are in Washington, D.C., Virginia, California and Colorado.

Also testifying were Peter Goulding, a former employee of Wilson, who said Wilson threatened to kill Goulding's wife if he returned to the United States from Geneva, Switzerland, and caused Wilson trouble.

Prosecutors sought the special sentencing because they said Wilson had plotted last December to kill eight people, including two federal prosecutors.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Powers said testimony in the weeklong trial showed that the October 1977 deal between Wilson and the Libyans was only part of a continuing conspiracy

Navy says Soviet jets intercepted U.S. planes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two missile-armed Soviet jump jets from the aircraft carrier Minsk intercepted two U.S. planes operating off the carrier Enterprise in the north Arabian sea in December, the Navy said Friday.

"It marked the first time Soviet jump jets intercepted American planes while armed with missiles, the Navy said.

Navy Secretary John Lehman made the disclosure in passing during testimony before the House Armed Services Committee Thursday, but gave no details. The Navy provided additional information on request.

Both the Minsk, a 37,000-ton Kiev class carrier, and the nuclear-powered Enterprise were operating in the northern quadrant of the Arabian Sea when the incident occurred Dec. 16, the Navy said. The Enterprise is more than double the size of the Minsk.

Two Yak-38 Forgers from the Minsk intercepted an A-7 Corsair attack plane and an F-14 Tomcat fighter from the Enterprise, the Navy said. The Navy would not say how close the planes of both sides came to each other or how far apart were the carriers.

No reason was given for the intercept.

"Although unarmed, Forgers have previously intercepted U.S. aircraft," the Navy said in a terse statement. "This represents the first time that U.S. naval aircraft have been intercepted by missile-equipped Forgers."

The Minsk, the second carrier of its class, carries 15 Forgers and about 20 Hornet helicopters. The Forger and the British-designed Harriers are the only two types of jump jets in service.

The planes are capable of taking off vertically, which is why the Minsk — unlike the bigger U.S. carriers — does not need catapults and arresting gear for aircraft to take off and land.

"In another 'first' that occurred Sept. 30 and Oct. 1, Lehman acknowledged that Soviet Backfire bombers staged exercises against U.S. carrier battle groups.

U.S. intelligence sources said Nov. 8 eight of the long-range bombers made mock attacks against the Enterprise and the conventionally powered headed by Wilson.

The 54-year-old graying multimillionaire was sentenced to 15 years in prison in December and fined $200,000 for supplying Libyan intelligence agents with arms. The latest sentence is to start after he finishes the first sentence.

Wilson was indicted Wednesday on charges of plotting from his New York jail cell to hire a man to kill two federal prosecutors, four witnesses against him and two former business associates.

Friday's sentencing was for his conviction Feb. 5 on charges that he conspired to ship more than 20 tons of plastic explosives to Libyan terrorists in 1977. He was also convicted for illegally transporting the C-4 munitions on a cargo plane without a license and filing a false customs document.

Wilson insisted through his lawyers that he was working with high-ranking CIA agents on a secret mission at the time. However, no federal official testified that they knew Wilson made the deal with Libyan dictator Col. Moammar Khadafi.

Wilson is expected to go to trial March 1 in Washington, D.C., on charges of exporting explosives to Libya and conspiring to murder a Libyan official.

Farmer must repay grain

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — A federal judge Friday upheld a contempt citation against Missouri farmer Wayne Cryts and said he must repay the cost of 31,000 bushels of soybeans he took to protest federal bankruptcy laws.

U.S. District Judge G. Thomas Eisele's order upheld a civil contempt ruling by a federal bankruptcy judge in which Cryts, his wife and father and two other farmers were ordered to pay $287,000.

Cryts, of Puxico, Mo., and other farmers took the beans on Feb. 16, 1981 from a grain elevator in Ristline, Mo., after the elevator had been declared bankrupt.

Federal Bankruptcy Judge Charles Baker of Little Rock found Cryts in contempt, but Eisele vacated that ruling, saying a bankruptcy judge did not have the power to levy so large a fine.

Cryts, 36, contended bankruptcy proceedings were hurting farmers by tying up grain at a time when it was selling for high prices. Testimony showed Cryts did not have legal title to the grain, and Eisele ordered Cryts to pay for the beans he took.

The judge ordered the money paid to the trustees of the bankrupt Ristline elevator. The money will be used to repay farmers and other grain owners who lost money in the bankruptcy.

Eisele said he understood "the frustrations and apprehensions of Mr. Cryts," but concluded Baker was

Hollifield submits teacher contract bill

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — Legislation to allow school boards to alter teachers' contracts in cases of financial emergencies was re-introduced successfully Friday in the House by a Magic Valley delegate.

The plan was killed earlier this week by the House Revenue and Taxation Committee because it did not specify how much changing of contracts school boards could do. But sponsor Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Jernome, had the legislation amended and brought it back to committee Friday, resulting in its introduction.

The bill originally was developed by Rep. Lawrence Knigge, R-Filer, who asked Hollifield to sponsor the bill in committee.

"This bill would allow school boards to reduce a district's work force for not more than 30 days of a current year," Hollifield said, in explaining the refinement. "The only time when contracts could be reduced is when there simply isn't any more money to run the programs," he said. "It's a tool boards could use if they didn't get money from the state that had been appropriated and budgeted for them."

The bill is meant to accompany another measure introduced this week by Hollifield, which would allow school boards to reduce the school year from the present 180 days.

But before contracts could be altered under Hollifield's bill, a school board would have to hold public hearings to prove that the district was out of money, and it would have to notify district residents of the crisis. "I'm not sure how this will be interpreted under the recent Supreme Court ruling on equal education," said committee Chairman Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert. "If one district cuts its contracts and school year by 30 days, while the other 114 do not, is that really equal education?"

Rep. Harold Reid, D-Craigmont, also questioned whether school boards could get away with altering the number of days of student attendance, without upsetting equity throughout the state.

Also opposing the measure was Robert Day of the Idaho Education Association, which represents teachers. He argued that it violated the state constitution, which he claims provides for continuous contracts and tenure.

"In addition, this bill would apply only to new employees, people just coming on board," Day said. "Existing teachers under continuous contracts could not be affected, thereby limiting how much effect school boards could have by using this measure."

But support for the measure outweighed the opposition, and the bill was introduced on voice vote in the committee.

"Personally, I admire Mr. Hollifield's courage in bringing these types of bills before us, despite all the fights it gets him into," said Rep. Dwight Horsch, D-Aberdeen. "He's about to get into a good wreck with this bill."

The measure would give school boards the ability to cope with unexpected financial shortages — a fact that the supporters of strong local government should endorse, said Rep. Rachel Gilbert, R-Boise.

"This gives our local officials a tool to solve their own problems, without having to jump along to the tune of state officials sitting in Boise," she said.

Bill would ease county indigent burden

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — Counties may not have to carry the full burden of paying the medical bills of the poor if legislation introduced Friday becomes law.

"In many cases, a medically indigent person can pay some part of the bills," said Chuck Holden, executive director of the Idaho Association of Counties. "We believe they should be allowed to pay what they can."

Under present law, county governments — as a last resort — are liable for all medical expenses of a person who cannot pay his bills without destroying his ability to continue buying groceries and other essentials, such as utility bills.

The counties' plan, however, would require indigents to pay what they can afford, as determined by the county commissioners. The measure also would require hospitals to charge counties only 85 percent of their bills, while absorbing the rest.

This latter provision brought an outcry from the Idaho Hospital Association, which otherwise supports most of the measure.

"What the state and federal government fail to pay through Medicaid and Medicare, the other patients and the county taxpayers (would) have to pick up through higher medical costs," said John Hutchison, representing the hospital association.

"If you discount from hospital charges, then who will be next wanting discounts — Blue Cross, worker's compensation insurance, private payers?" he asked.

"About 60 percent of a hospital's budget goes to salaries," Hutchison said. "We can't discount salaries."

But even the county association wasn't completely happy with the bill that was introduced by the House Health and Welfare Committee on Friday, even though it originally was drafted by that group.

That's because committee Chairman Rep. Chris Hooper, R-Boise, rewrote one section of the bill that would provide for the joint payment of bills by indigents and the county commissioners.

"I saw a lot of problems and court actions over that passage," Hooper said.

Consequently, the measure introduced would require indigents to reimburse counties to whatever extent they can.

"But that forces us to collect the payment," Holden said. "Counties are not set up for that kind of administration. We can't afford to take their (hospitals') collections and add it to our workload."

But the hospital association was equally opposed to its group having to collect bad debts from indigents.

However, Rep. Donna Scott, R-Twin Falls, said that hospitals already have the staff to collect outstanding bills.

"It seems that hospitals should be responsible for collecting their bad debts, rather than turning them over to the counties," she said.

Other legislation pending before the committee includes a second medically indigent-care bill that would allow counties to tax beyond the One Percent Initiative law, strictly as a way of paying indigents' bills.

That measure has met with lukewarm response, primarily because it could cause property-tax increases and because at least four counties have no type of indigent account.

State may handle its calls

By ELLEN MARKS
United Press International

BOISE — A legislative audit presented Friday endorses a plan to transfer 28 percent of the state's long-distance phone calls over a microwave system rather than Mountain Bell lines, despite objections by the utility.

The Legislative Auditor's office study said the Department of Administration plan would be cost-effective as long as personnel were trained or hired to run the system.

The Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee is considering a request from the agency to spend $32,000 during the next fiscal year to upgrade the state's microwave system, which currently is used mainly for police communication.

The money would come from an annual $1.4 million in-state phone bill agencies currently pay to Mountain Bell, General Services administrator John Luthy said.

He estimated the state could save about $461,000 a year in phone bills — money which would be used instead to maintain the expanded microwave system.

The audit said, "We have concluded that the state's microwave system is a cost-effective alternative to the public telephone system, provided that additional technical support is available to the users."

The document noted "There is no one within the Bureau of Communications at this time who has had experience with these newer data communications devices."

Auditors suggested someone with technical background be hired or that a current worker be trained to run the current system.

On Thursday, a separate legislative audit presented to the committee recommended an increase in the cost of teacher license fees to fully cover the expense of certification programs. Mountain Bell officials met with JFAC members last month to say they oppose the plan because the utility already provides a reliable service to the state.

Luthy said the agency wants to decrease reliance on Mountain Bell because the utility may end its discount to the state next year, hiking the yearly phone bill by $2 million.

Even if the discount is not immediately ended, the state exceeds the number of calls it must make to receive the reduced rates, Luthy said. The current discount applies to 10,000 hours worth of in-state calls per month, but the state averages 13,900 hours. The plan would route the additional 3,900 hours over a beefed up and reliable statewide system.

"The state's microwave system is the only existing statewide distribution network in Idaho," the Administration Department said in commenting on the audit. "No telephone company has one statewide transmission system that matches the state's, due to the fragmented nature of telephone company coverage in Idaho."

Legislators mull '50-50' changes

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Legislature is still talking about watering down the people-passed "50-50" property-tax initiative, but political dangers apparently are frightening off some sponsors of amendment proposals.

Five-member subcommittee assigned to study implementation of the law held yet another meeting Friday morning, and the same thing happened as the day before — only a handful of people showed up and no proposals were offered.

The voters last November approved an initiative giving owners of residential property a tax exemption on the value of their property up to 50 percent of $50,000.

The measure, which took effect because the voters approved it, was designed by its proponents to shift much of the property-tax burden away from homeowners onto owners of utility, business and other types of property.

But opponents say the law puts an unfair burden on commercial property and poses a threat to school district tax revenue, and discussion about amending or repealing the law has swirled through the legislative corridors all session.

Members of the subcommittee were perturbed Friday that legislators weren't surfacing with their ideas, now that the session is approaching its latter stages.

"They're just scared for their neck," said Rep. Claud Judd, D-Orofino.

Rep. Rachel Gilbert, R-Boise, said tinkering with the Initiative could be like playing with dynamite for some legislators — especially if the change would totally repeal the initiative.

"An outright repeal in an urban area would be nuts if they (repeal supporters) want to get re-elected in two years," she said.

For the second day in a row, Subcommittee Chairman Gordon Hollifield, R-Jernome, vented a little steam because of the nearly nonexistent attendances at the panel's meetings.

"Everyone wants to change it, but no one wants to come in here with anything," he said.

Nevertheless, Hollifield said, the dry run may get off the ground next week, when Tax Commission officials may have information on what would happen if the monetary exemption were reduced to $15,000 or $25,000 from $50,000.

He said there are several more dramatic proposals in the wings.

Idaho

Supremacist vows to test proposal

COEUR D'ALENE (UPI) — If the Legislature adopts a tough anti-discrimination bill, a Post Falls man says he may file suit against Kootenai County on the grounds local officials are illegally denying tax-exempt status to the white-supremacist Aryan Nations Church.

Keith Gilbert said he would use such a law to file a felony criminal complaint against the county commissioners and some members of the county assessor's office staff for not granting a religious tax exemption to the Hayden Lake church.

"The county's refusal to grant the tax exemption is an act of harassment," said Gilbert.

"The county is singling out one group, which is a church, and that's discriminating because of race or religion," Gilbert said.

County Commission chairman Glenn Jackson said Friday said he was not surprised by Gilbert's plans, announced Wednesday, to "bury (the law) with legal maneuvering."

"A group that opposes an anti-harassment bill would be the first to try to use it to prove it unworthy," Jackson said. "I would expect nothing less."

The proposed law, which the Senate approved 29-6 Thursday, would impose felony penalties on persons who inflict physical injury, damage to property or threats designed to intimidate or harass others on the basis of race, religion or ethnic background.

The measure will take effect July 1 if it is approved by the House of Representatives and signed into law by Gov. John Evans.

Sunshine law resurrected

BOISE (UPI) — Legislation to toughen Idaho's Open Meetings Law resurrected and signed into law Friday, but this time it doesn't call for imposition of fines against public officials convicted of knowingly violating the statute.

However, the bill would set up a process by which an official who participated in a meeting he realized was being conducted illegally could be sued for civil damages. Such a defendant would be liable for any damages awarded against his public employer.

The House State Affairs Committee sent the bill to the printer on a voice vote after the sponsor, Rep. Lyman Winchester, R-Kuna, said he believed he had worked out differences that arose when an earlier version was proposed and killed several weeks ago.

A bill allowing a judge to impose a $100 fine against a public official found guilty of breaking the meetings law was killed on the House floor in 1982.

The bill is supported by the Idaho Newspaper Association and the Idaho Press Club.

Prince's land visit will be kept secret

MAYPORT, Fla. (UPI) — Britain's Prince Andrew steamed into Mayport aboard the aircraft carrier HMS Invincible Friday, and with princely charm declined to say whether his visit would include a rendezvous with soft-porn movie actress Kathleen "Koo" Stark.

Smiling for photographers on the deck of the Invincible, Andrew, 22, was asked how he planned to spend his five-day stay at Mayport. "I don't think I'm getting any leave here. Someone's got to work," he replied.

Another reporter noted that Saturday was his 23rd birthday and asked the second son of Queen Elizabeth II how he planned to celebrate.

"It's difficult with your lot around," he joked.

If he does go ashore, said the prince, who is a sub-lieutenant in the British Royal Navy, "I should keep it very secret."

When the Invincible steamed into the docking area of the Mayport Naval Station at midmorning, more than 50 reporters and photographers, many from Britain, and as many spectators crowded the pier.

One homemade sign said, "Welcome Prince Andrew. Happy Birthday (One day early)." From Christina, Aaron and Linda.

The Invincible, flagship of the Royal Navy's Second Flotilla, fired a 21-gun salute, which was answered by a U.S. Navy frigate. Two tugboats escorted the 600-foot vessel to the pier.

Last month, London tabloids reported that Andrew, a helicopter pilot on the Invincible, and Ms. Stark, whose mother lives in Venice, Fla., planned to spend "a romantic five days together" during his Mayport visit.

The 10-ship British flotilla left England Jan. 31. It is bound for a series of goodwill stops in the Caribbean.

Record broken

Brooke Knapp broke an around-the-world speed record in a commercial jet Friday, landing in San Francisco slightly more than 50 hours after she took off on her 23,500-mile journey. Her husband, Charles Knapp, gave her a bouquet of roses when she emerged from the Lear 35 business jet "The American Dream," which she flew for an unofficial 50 hours, 32 minutes and 45 seconds.

Danny Kaye in good condition after bypass

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Actor-comedian Danny Kaye, hospitalized for nearly two weeks by irregular heart rhythms and chest pains, underwent a quadruple heart bypass operation Friday and was reported recovering well.

"The condition of anyone in coronary intensive care is critical, but I'd say he's in very good condition," said Larry Baum, a spokesman at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center.

Kaye, 70, known for his fast-talking comedy style, entered the 335-bed facility, dubbed the "hospital to the stars" because so many celebrities are treated there, on Feb. 6.

Virginia Bohannon said Kaye's non-emergency surgery began shortly after 10 a.m. and concluded shortly after 3 p.m.

"It was a successful quadruple bypass. He's doing very well," she said.

"He's been in good spirits," Miss Bohannon said when asked if he had entertained any of the other patients. "but I guess we've kept him too busy with tests to do that."

"He's very lovable and he's been very cheerful," she said, adding that his wife and other family members have visited him daily.

Kaye, whose 40-year career spans movies, television, Broadway and nightclub performances, has served as a goodwill ambassador for UNICEF for the past quarter century and represented the group at the 1965 Nobel Peace Prize awards in Stockholm.

Hooker tax proposal made

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — Nevada's Assembly Taxation Committee wants to tap a new source — the world's oldest profession.

A bill introduced Friday would require prostitutes' customers to pay sales tax on services rendered.

In testimony on the measure, Chairman Paul May, D-North Las Vegas, asked legislative counsel Frank Daykin if the tax would affect the world's oldest profession, which is legal in some Nevada counties.

"The Internal Revenue Service taxes them, if it can catch them," he said.

So why should Nevada be any different?

Rumor is King Hassan is buying N.J. estate

JOAN HANAUER
Quinted Press International

The hills around Peapack, N.J., are alive with the sound of rumor — that King Hassan II of Morocco is about to buy a 490-acre estate. "It (the deal) is almost finalized," said Abdelaziz Jaidi, the Moroccan consul general in New York. The asking price for the property was said to be $8.5 million. Hassan's immediate neighbors would include Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis and former Secretary of State Cyrus Vance. Other neighbors include John Z. Delorean and Malcolm Forbes Jr.

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is relaxing in the resort town of La Romana in the Dominican Republic this week, staying at the summer home of Dominican-born designer Oscar De La Renta. Kissinger was not too relaxed to talk to local reporters, warning that the International Monetary Fund must use care in forcing austerity programs on third world countries so as to improve their finances without causing political upheavals.

Rock musician Sly Stone won't be facing an unlawful weapons charge in Paxton, Ill. A grand jury voted not to indict him after he was arrested Feb. 7 in a friend's van in which police found a sawed-off shotgun. The van's owner, John Paterson, 50, of Denver, faces trial on the weapons violation. Stone had posted $10,000 before being released from the county jail Feb. 8.

Ohio's Fremont Community Theatre is trying to solve its debt problem by advertising for a patron in a national business publication. "For $30,000, we'll name the theater after you," Ben Wurzel, the theater's president, said. This week, an anonymous donor covered the cost of the ad.

"We're trying to keep ourselves afloat, and it's crazy enough that it might work," Wurzel said. The offer has had no takers so far.

Germans capture key Soviet agent

By JOSEPH B. FLEMING
United Press International

Interior Ministry spokesman said. Agents were put on his trail because he was believed to be the head of all Soviet KGB agents in West Germany, the spokesman said.

BONN, West Germany — Police arrested the suspected head of the Soviet KGB spy network in West Germany, snaring him as he tried to buy a decoding machine used by West German intelligence, authorities said Friday.

Gennady Batsachev, 42, a Soviet trade official, was arrested Thursday as he met a West German double agent in the crowded square in front of the cathedral in Cologne, 15 miles northwest of Bonn.

West German agents moved in and grabbed Batsachev after the double agent handed him "technological information in the field of electronics" — secret information on the decoding machine used by West German agents, a Justice ministry spokesman said.

Batsachev had been tailed by agents of the Federal Criminal Office, West Germany's equivalent of the FBI, since he joined the 85-member Soviet trade mission in Cologne in mid-1981 as a computer expert, an

A Foreign Ministry official said Batsachev, who was under "investigative arrest," had no diplomatic immunity and would be subject to West German criminal law.

The Cologne arrest came less than a week after Italian officials arrested an official of the Soviet airline Aeroflot in Rome on charges of conducting "political and military" espionage.

Batsachev walked into a trap set by police after his contact "sang" and told authorities of the deal for the decoding machine, a Justice Ministry spokesman said.

The two met five times since October 1981, the spokesman said. "Batsachev" had promised the German 5,000 marks ($2,080) for a decoding machine. He was to get half the money on delivery of the machine and the other half when it turned out the machine could do the job.

Marines agree to peacekeeping patrols

By JACK REDDEN
United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The U.S. Marines announced Friday they would join other peacekeepers in supporting the Lebanese army in east Beirut, but violent clashes flared elsewhere in the country.

Gunmen fired a rocket-propelled grenade at an Israeli column 10 miles east of the capital on the main Beirut to Damascus highway, touching off hours of shooting in the mountainous area.

In the south near Sidon, Lebanon's third largest city, unknown assailants killed one man and kidnapped his wife and daughter. Israeli troops who arrived later clashed with irate villagers and a strict curfew was imposed on the village.

The U.S. Marines announced they would undertake patrols through east Beirut in support of the Lebanese army starting Saturday morning, but still declined to man fixed positions in the Christian half of the capital.

The Italian and French members of the peace force moved into east Beirut on Wednesday, a day after the Lebanese army had deployed across the capital in a pre-dawn maneuver. The French took two permanent positions in the area.

Lebanese military sources were reported in the local press to have said that plans were under discussion to deploy peacekeepers along the lines between the Israelis and Lebanese army to prevent more disputes between their forces.

The new fighting came as the Independent Lebanese Central news agency reported that "high level" sources said U.S. envoy Philip Habib is discussing a simultaneous 10 mile withdrawal of Syrian and Lebanese troops from their present positions.

Habib was in Israel for talks Friday and was expected in Beirut Saturday before carrying the proposal on to Damascus early next week.

"The proposed withdrawals will be part of an overall plan and will be carried out simultaneously in Beirut suburbs and the mountains," the agency quoted officials saying. "The Israeli and Syrian forces will pull back 15 kilometers to the east and the south from their present positions."

The fighting on the Beirut to Damascus highway was in an area that would be cleared of Israeli troops under the plan reported by the Lebanese news agency.

Indian violence claims 21 more victims

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Rioters and security forces killed another 21 people Friday in the northeastern state of Assam where an 18-day wave of election violence has killed 349 people.

Officials said riots flared in several rural areas near the Assamese capital of Gauhati, 900 miles east of New Delhi, with the bloodiest clashes leaving 17 dead and scores of homes in flames in the village of Mangadoll.

Police said hundreds were homeless as a result of the arson attack in Mangadoll, 30 miles north of Gauhati.

Riot police in the curfew-bound area shot and killed four other people, who were not immediately identified, officials said.

Violence and arson erupted in several other villages on the Brahmaputra River, forcing people to seek shelter in railway stations or nearby towns, officials said.

The riots erupted Feb. 1 amid angry protests by native Assamese over Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's decision to grant immigrant Bengalis the right to vote in this week's state elections.

Since then the region has been rocked by riots, arson attacks and political killings including the massacre of at least 150 villagers earlier this week in 15 remote villages.

Vowing to stop the voting, Assamese militants have called for a boycott of the elections to 36 state assembly seats and 11 national parliament seats. The voting began Monday, resumed Thursday and will end with a final round Sunday.

Salvador rebels receive help from foreigners

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Leftist guerrillas Friday boasted that foreigners had been fighting alongside their forces but said there were far fewer than the number of U.S. military advisers aiding the Salvadoran army.

"It makes us proud to have the heroic show of support of nations with our fight," the rebels' clandestine Radio Venceremos said.

Venceremos noted the Defense Ministry last week displayed foreign passports and other documents captured when a 6,000-man army of offensive last month overran a rebel stronghold about 75 miles northeast of San Salvador.

The ministry's list included a West German and a Venezuelan journalist, doctors from Honduras, Venezuela and Spain, and nine other Latin Americans.

"The high command has published a sad list of 14 foreigners who are in the northeastern (rebel) front," Venceremos said. "We ask the high command what it has to say about 100 U.S. advisers directing the war."

About 50 U.S. military advisers currently are working with the Salvadoran army.

Funding alternatives looked at for city pool

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city of Twin Falls has been contacted concerning the possibility of a community-wide effort to raise funds for a new city pool.

And the option of establishing a trust fund for that purpose has been raised. Mayor Chris Talkington said Friday.

But a "public consensus" on how the city should proceed must be arrived at first, and more discussion of fundamental issues involved is needed before that can occur, the mayor said.

Talkington declined to identify the individuals who have approached him and other members of City Council. He did say that those people had indicated it would be no problem for "several service groups" to raise several thousand dollars each.

But first, Twin Falls residents must decide whether they want a new pool, then what kind of pool they want, then how to pay for it, Talkington says.

None of these questions are easy, especially the last. But Talkington says one logical way might be to establish a trust fund and then "take off on a United Way-type drive."

The alternative to such a drive may be a bond issue, he says.

The issue came to a head earlier this week, when City Council decided that the city's main swimming pool, the Harmon Park pool, would cost too much to renovate and more than likely will not be opened this summer. Speculation of involving the Twin Falls School District in a joint effort to build a new pool is premature, however, considering the school bond-levy campaign that currently is under way, the mayor says.

But in the long run "it is more logical that several entities would be involved," he says.

In a related event, the city submitted a grant proposal to the state on Friday for federal Land and Water Conservation matching funds to make improvements to the city beach at Dierkes Lake.

The city is seeking $22,000 for renovation of existing docks, the installation of an additional 150 feet of floating docks, anchor placements and restroom repairs at the lake.

City staff members, however, have decided not to seek any funding for improvements to Harry Barry pool. City Manager Tom Courtney said Friday that the building housing that small pool is in "extremely poor condition."

"It would be of little long-term value to the community to put any more money into it," he says. The key factors are its extremely small size, which limits its use as a general recreation facility, and the indication that it, too, may have to be abandoned in the near future.

But that pool, located in Barry Park in the western section of the city, will open this summer as a swimming-lesson facility, according to a plan set forth by City Council last Monday, Courtney says.

The city originally had planned to apply the federal grant money to the rehabilitation of the Harmon Park pool.

Should the city not receive the grant money, Talkington indicated that it might be possible to draw from a city contingency fund to make improvements at Dierkes Lake.

But, he says, the city should not forget that private swimming areas do exist, and they will accommodate some of the demand.

Bridge building plans inch forward

By MARTY TRILLHAASE

TWIN FALLS — Plans to construct a new Milner Bridge appear to have moved a small step forward, but area officials still are examining the proposal.

Representatives of Twin Falls, Jerome and Cassia counties, as well as the Murtaugh and Hillsdale highway districts, appeared receptive to the idea during a recent meeting.

"We discussed the program in general, the schedule of the project, the local costs by various alternatives, and the conclusion of the meeting was each individual member was going to go back and review the project and discuss it with various groups that would be affected by the bridge," says Gerald Martens, a Jerome engineer who has been working with area officials on the project.

Martens says that officials will meet again on March 9 to "get into more of the specifics and probably make a more firm commitment whether to proceed or to set the project aside."

Earlier this month, the Idaho Department of Transportation, which administers federal highway dollars, announced that federal funds would be available to cover about 80 percent of the cost of replacing the 70-year-old bridge.

The one-lane, 240-foot-long bridge, which was built in 1915, links Twin Falls and Jerome counties across the Snake River, about a half-mile downstream from Milner Dam and about a half-mile from the Cassia County line.

Deterioration of the bridge has led to a 10-ton load limit, forcing some traffic to take a 15-mile detour. The bridge also is impassable during high-water times of the year.

Replacement costs are unknown at present, but they are anticipated to be about $350,000 to $400,000. As part of the local matching funds required for the federal grant, area governments would have the option of providing cash or an equal value in labor.

"I'm optimistic that the capability to fund this project exists within the group, and the cooperation is definitely there," Martens said Friday. "The shortcoming, if there is one, is going to be the financial restrictions of the counties and their priorities."

Assessment feud spawns legislation

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — Three Magic Valley counties' dispute with the State Tax Commission over property assessments last year has spawned legislation for broadening counties' rights for appeal.

"The problem was that when we appealed the Tax Commission's orders, the (Idaho) Supreme Court could only review procedure, not the facts leading to the dispute," says Twin Falls County Assessor Dorothy Hamby.

Existing law only allows appeals in cases where the Tax Commission has bypassed due process or has committed fraud in its orders.

But that wasn't the case when six Idaho counties tried to refuse to increase property-tax assessments, as ordered by the Tax Commission, which claimed some residential and rural properties were undervalued for tax purposes.

"There was disagreement over the level of market value, and the assessors and county commissioners feared that by raising assessments according to the Tax Commission's ratios, many properties would be undervalued," says Chuck Holden, of the Idaho Association of Counties.

Involved in the appeal to the Supreme Court were Twin Falls, Blaine and Gooding counties, plus Bonneville, Canyon and Caribou counties.

But under existing law, the counties could not appeal the Tax Commission's property-value figures, even though the assessors contended that they were higher than Idaho's depressed housing market could support.

It was part of the Supreme Court's Nov. 29 ruling — which went in favor of the Tax Commission — that noted the limitation of appeals available to counties.

Consequently, the House Revenue and Taxation Committee introduced legislation Friday to allow the Tax Commission's calculations to be appealed, as well as its procedure.

In separate action, the committee also introduced a bill to install a half-cent sales-tax increase, that would begin July 1, 1984, to fund city and county governments.

This second bill is a take-off on an earlier bill, supported by the Association of Idaho Cities, for a 1-cent sales-tax increase, with half going to counties and cities, and half dedicated to the schools.

Concerning the assessors' bill, Tax Commissioner Morgan Munger says that his group will not oppose the bill. "Frankly, we like the law the way it is," Munger says. "But if the Legislature is going to change the law, then this bill is a good way to go."

Munger notes that the county officials did work with the Tax Commission in developing the measure, which was written by a deputy attorney general assigned to the commission.

Narcotic thieves find a new source, area veterinarians

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Burglars, intent on stealing drugs, apparently are hitting on a new victim — veterinarians.

During the past week, Twin Falls police have received two reports of burglarized veterinarians.

And one veterinarian indicated Friday that his colleagues in the community all have been burglarized recently.

"They know what they're looking for," says Dr. Martin Becker, the co-owner of the Twin Falls Veterinarian Hospital and Green Acres Pet Hospital, both in Twin Falls.

Becker says he "got talking around, and all the veterinarian clinics got hit recently."

What burglars are looking for is narcotics, which veterinarians use to treat animals. But such drugs can be equally effective on humans.

Narcotics were taken from the Twin Falls Veterinarian Hospital in a burglary that occurred between 7 p.m. Wednesday and 6:20 a.m. Thursday. According to police, a large quantity of drugs was taken.

Ironically, Becker says that he had just discovered that the Green Acres facility had been burglarized during the past two weeks.

In all, $1,500 worth of drugs were taken, he says.

"We started to look for the narcotics, and they were no longer there," he says. "Every place they went, they only thing they took was narcotics. They took the good ones. They left the bad ones, except for a few that they didn't know what they were getting into."

Becker says that about half of the missing drugs "would be very rough on a human," but he declined to identify the drugs.

Police Chief Tim Qualls said Friday that his department has implemented new procedures to deal with the problem. But he declined to identify those procedures.

Becker says he's somewhat spooked after the burglary, but he's satisfied with the way police have handled the matter so far.

"Definitely, I am a lot more cautious now," he says. "It makes you more cautious on night calls, for sure, especially with people you don't know."

Becker says he intends to place guard dogs at his clinics and seek some additional help from police when he makes night calls on new clients.

"It's going to be a little extra trouble, but it's worth it," he says.

Twin Falls murderer, 'found' after 8 years, faces escape charge

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — A convicted Twin Falls murderer was bound over Friday to Fourth District Court in Boise, on a charge of escape.

But Donald Schoonover's preliminary hearing was far from usual, since Schoonover walked away from authorities eight-and-a-half years ago and had been living peacefully near Seattle until his recapture last month.

Schoonover, 58, was convicted of killing his mother-in-law, Veran Turner, in Twin Falls on Dec. 31, 1959. According to court records, the dispute that led to the killing was over custody of a child. Schoonover was having with his wife over their two children.

Turner reportedly was strangled by Schoonover while she was babysitting for the youngsters.

Friday, his preliminary hearing at the magistrate-court level turned into a unique — and often heated — debate of events that occurred in 1974.

"The unexpected issue the defense brought up was whether Mr. Schoonover was in custody when he walked away and left Idaho," said Ada County deputy prosecutor Michael Flanagan.

"That's because Schoonover was not under official supervision when he walked away from an Alcoholic Anonymous meeting in Boise. He had gone to the meeting with several other inmates, but without accompanying guards. The rest of the group returned to the state prison — Schoonover did not.

Despite arguments to the contrary by defense attorney Kenal Power, it was ruled that Schoonover technically was in custody at the time of his disappearance, since he was serving a life sentence. Consequently, he was bound over to district court on the escape charge.

If found guilty, Schoonover could face an additional five years in prison. Flanagan expects Schoonover to be arraigned in Fourth District Court in Boise within 10 to 14 days.

Meanwhile, the Idaho Board on Pardons and Parole will not review Schoonover's life-sentence conviction until the escape charge is processed. After serving 14 years in prison, Schoonover was paroled in 1974. But he was returned to the penitentiary shortly after violating that parole by allegedly fighting with his wife.

During his eight-and-a-half years of freedom, Schoonover lived in Seattle suburb of Burien, where he used the name Jose Rodriguez, worked odd jobs and remarried. Upon his recapture, he told authorities he was relieved to again face his sentence, rather than continuing to hide. He said he had continually become more fearful of his fugitive status.

His second wife, Ruth Cole, (Schoonover's first wife died in 1965, while he was in prison) told police that she knew her husband had a criminal record, but she did not know he was an escaped convict.

Engine problem not cause of plane crash, says co-pilot

By KELLY EVERITT
Times-News writer

HAILEY — The co-pilot of the Transwestern Airlines flight that crashed Tuesday between Bellevue and Hailey has told investigators that there were no problems with the aircraft's engines prior to the crash.

Eric Thorarud, of Tucson, Ariz., "reported no difficulties with engine power, with either engine" of the twin-engine prop jet, according to Steve Corrie, the man in charge of the investigation for the National Transportation Safety Board.

Corrie's debriefing interview with Thorarud, who was released Thursday from Blaine County Medical Center, refuted some initial news reports that the left engine of the aircraft had failed, forcing pilot Don Molino of Boise to attempt an emergency landing on Idaho 75.

Corrie refused to speculate Friday on the cause of the crash, however. The aircraft, with two crew members and six passengers aboard, was on its final approach to Friedman Memorial Airport in Hailey, when the pilot reported he was making an emergency landing. The plane hit the highway on its nose-gear, skidded for about 150 yards, hit a snowbank on the side of the road and ripped itself apart as it cartwheeled in the snow alongside the highway. All eight people aboard survived.

A field west of the highway might have served as a potential landing site, but according to Corrie, "If you have a choice between an open field and a hard-surface highway, you try and put it on the highway. I think the pilot did the right thing."

Thursday, Corrie's investigating team moved the wreckage from the highway to a hanger at the airport, where the pieces of the craft were laid out to determine what components of the plane may have failed prior to impact, and what failed after impact.

"In the normal course of our investigation, we'll go over the evidence to determine if there are any structural or component defects, Corrie said. But, he added, only those parts of the plane suspected of contributing to the cause and severity of the crash will be examined in detail later in a lab.

Corrie said his team would be at the Hailey airport "another couple of days" before returning to Washington, D.C. to do a lab analysis and finish its report to the National Transportation Safety Board. The NTSB board will issue a final report on the crash later this year.

Meanwhile, the condition of the five victims of the crash still in hospitals on Friday was unchanged. Molino and Joan Hohl, of Bellevue, Wash., were listed in fair and serious condition, respectively, at St. Alphonsus Medical Center in Boise, where they were transferred after the crash.

At the Blaine County hospital, Cheryl Sorie of Sun Valley, Bernie Ryan of Melbourne, Australia, and Sarah Houser of Larkspur, Calif., remained in stable condition.

Courts and cops

Suspect pleads innocent

TWIN FALLS — Murder suspect Jon Sjogren pleaded innocent Friday to one charge and requested a preliminary hearing into the second charge filed against him, following Tuesday's aborted escape attempt from the county jail.

The 30-year-old Sjogren is the only man named by Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies in the escape attempt. But deputies say charges are pending against other inmates.

Sjogren remained in the county jail Friday, where he has been held without bond, awaiting trial on a first-degree murder charge, filed against him in connection with the May 1981 death of 61-year-old Donna Hartley Smith of Twin Falls. Sjogren has pleaded innocent to the charge and is scheduled to go on trial in April.

Deputies reported Tuesday that they had uncovered an escape attempt during an early morning search of the jail. Inmates had used a hacksaw blade to cut out bars and iron mesh in the dormitory-style cells.

The discovery led to the temporary transfer of 14 inmates to the Jerome and Gooding county jails, while work crews repaired the cells. In all, 17 inmates were in the two cells at the time of the aborted escape. Sjogren remained in the Twin Falls jail, one inmate was released and another was transferred to Ada County authorities, on a warrant.

One charge filed against Sjogren — petty theft by possession of stolen property — dates back before the escape attempt. Deputies allege that Sjogren knowingly possessed a stolen handgun key on Dec. 8. The charge is a misdemeanor.

During his arraignment in Fifth District Magistrate Court, the defendant pleaded innocent to the misdemeanor, and he demanded to be tried by a six-member jury.

The more serious charge, attempted escape, is a felony and would be tried in the district court. The defendant has requested a preliminary hearing on that charge.

Rape suspect in jail

TWIN FALLS — A 34-year-old Pasadena, Calif., man remains in the county jail, in lieu of $20,000 bail, following his arraignment on attempted rape charges in Fifth District Magistrate Court.

John Howard Johnson was arrested Wednesday and charged with aggravated battery and attempted rape. Twin Falls police said the victim reported the incident Tuesday and gave a description of her assailant.

The public defender has been appointed to represent Johnson, whose local address was given as the Country View Trailer Park, west of Filer.

Documents filed with the magistrate court Thursday revealed new details about the alleged incident.

According to those documents, the victim told police that Johnson took her to a vacant house in the northwest part of the city, on the pretense that he would pay her to clean the house.

Once inside the building, the victim said that Johnson allegedly struck her with a metal pipe and attempted to rape her. The victim said that she escaped by convincing her assailant to allow her to go into the bathroom.

Four persons injured

TWIN FALLS — Four persons were treated for minor injuries Friday afternoon, following a two-car crash at Shoshone Street and 11th Avenue East in Twin Falls.

Twin Falls police have cited Mary Lou Achuff, 21, of Wickensburg, Ariz., for failure to yield at a stop sign. Officers say that she drove from 11th Avenue onto Shoshone Street and was struck by a car driven by Karen Elizabeth Sobotka 20, of Jerome. The accident occurred at 2:17 p.m.

Achuff and her passengers — Paul Achuff Jr., 2, and Ginger Lloyd, 18 — and a passenger in the other vehicle, Kathy Sobotka, 22, were all treated for cuts, bruises and other minor injuries at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and released.

Buhl man arraigned

TWIN FALLS — A 25-year-old Buhl man has been arraigned on charges that he burglarized a Buhl drugstore last week.

Kelth Nevil has been released from the Twin Falls County Jail, after posting a $1,500 bond.

Buhl police arrested Nevil and accused him of burglarizing Buhl Pharmacy late Friday. Police allege that Nevil caused extensive damage to the store and attempted to steal $30.

The public defender was appointed to represent him, during a Fifth District Magistrate Court hearing Tuesday. The date of the hearing has not been set.

No record of treatment

JACKPOT — Luis Avila of Jackpot, age unknown, was treated and released Wednesday night at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls, after he was found lying on the road earlier that evening in front of Barton's Club 93 in Jackpot.

Elko County sheriff's deputies say they suspect that Avila was the victim of an assault and battery, but the investigation is continuing.

Although Avila had been treated for head injuries Wednesday night and released, on Thursday, hospital officials requested that the Elko County sheriff's office contact Avila and ask him to return to the hospital for more tests. The sheriff's office contacted Avila, but the hospital had no record of his being treated Thursday.

Weed taken in bust stolen

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two men, who pleaded guilty Friday to charges filed in connection with the largest marijuana bust in the history of the Twin Falls Police Department, had stolen the marijuana in the first place.

The disclosure was made during a Fifth District Court hearing and was confirmed by Twin Falls police.

Police Chief Tim Qualls said his department does not know the identity of the original owner, who lost an estimated $90,000 worth of marijuana in the deal. Of course, so far, he also has escaped prosecution.

The two defendants in the case — 21-year-old Richard Jones and 25-year-old Tom Holliday, both of 319

Third Ave. N. in Twin Falls — each face sentences up to three years in prison, following their guilty pleas to a single count of possession of more than three ounces of marijuana.

Prosecutors reduced the charge from the more serious offense of drug trafficking, which originally was filed against the two men.

Judge Theron Ward ordered presentence investigations and continued both defendants' release without bail.

Police arrested the defendants in early December. Following a tip that marijuana was on the premises, police conducted a search of the defendants' home.

What they found was a substantial amount of reportedly high-grade marijuana. Police have declined to say how much marijuana was found.

But they said it was the largest amount of marijuana ever confiscated in a single bust.

At the close of Holliday's district court hearing, Ward observed the neatly dressed defendant did not appear to have been heavily involved with drugs. When Ward asked how he got involved in the offense, Holliday's lawyer, Paul Smith, responded, "He was intoxicated, and he stole the marijuana."

Qualls confirmed reports that the marijuana was stolen from a mini-warehouse in Twin Falls.

"We don't know who owned it," he said. "The warehouse was locked, and there was no record of who owned it. We never did have a record as far as the burglary."

Charges of bull semen theft were dismissed

JEROME — Charges have been dismissed against one man and another is awaiting trial in connection with the theft of bull semen from a Jerome dairy last March.

Dave Sommers, now a resident of Wendell, had pleaded innocent to the charge and had agreed to take a polygraph test, which he passed, according to court files. On the recommendation of Prosecutor William Dauling, charges against Sommers there were dismissed.

Before the charges were dismissed, however, Sommers had appeared with his attorney and had asked to change his plea to guilty. Sommers told the court that he was innocent, but he wanted to plead guilty because he thought the evidence against him was too great. But the court refused to accept the plea, and the prosecutor recommended the lie-detector test.

Mark Reunide of Jerome also has entered a plea of innocent in the case, and he has been bound over to district court on a grand-theft charge. A trial date has been set.

On March 21, a stainless steel tank — containing 500 units of dairy bull semen — was stolen from the Ted Miller dairy near Jerome, where Sommers and Reunide had been employed. The tank was valued at $400 and the semen at $7,500, officers said.

Jerome County Sheriff Etza Hall said the tank later was recovered. It had been hidden, he said, but the tank had not been opened, and it had been kept relatively cool, which helped preserve the contents.

Hall said that when his officers learned the whereabouts of the tank, they pressed the investigation as rapidly as possible to save the $7,500 product.

At the time the theft was committed, Jerome County officers said it was the first bull-semen theft on record in the county.

Farm Bureau offers help

JEROME — Farmers suffer stress, too, and the Jerome County Farm Bureau wants to help.

Dr. Whitman Jones will conduct a workshop today at 1 p.m. for Farm Bureau members in the Jerome High School auditorium. He also will address the annual Jerome County Farm Bureau banquet tonight at the Moose Lodge hall in Jerome. A social hour will begin at 6, and dinner will be served at 7.

Jones is a clinical psychologist who has been involved with stress-related problems for a number of years. He has conducted workshops for numerous groups around the country. Farm Bureau officials say that the current costs of operation, the high interest on loans and machinery costs, plus the gamble on weather to which farmers are subject, create more than the usual amount of stress.

Admission to the workshop is $1. A current Farm Bureau membership card will be required.

Cruisers cancel meeting

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Cruising Assn.'s "cruising night," planned for tonight, has been canceled because of the weather, according to Patrick Montgomery of Twin Falls, the president of the group.

Winter driving tip

When driving on surfaces likely to be slippery, and where roads are icy or snowpacked, use tire chains. This reminder from the Idaho State Police.

When your view is limited, you have to see danger to react to it, and reduced visibility from darkness, weather, traffic, road or even a dirty windshield can cut your perception time drastically. Regardless of how you look at it, stopping in winter takes more time. Plan on it. This reminder from the Idaho State Police.

Be aware when driving on seemingly clear Idaho roads this winter. Frost or patches of ice tend to settle in shady spots, at intersections surrounded by tall buildings or trees, on the north and west sides of hills, on bridge floors, around underpasses and at the bottom of banked curves and crowned roads. Prevent potential accidents by being a winter-wise driver. This reminder from the Idaho State Police.

Auditors criticize Jerome County accounting procedures

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — The auditors who reviewed Jerome County's books for fiscal years 1979 through 1981 have charged in their final report that the county maintained a "typical internal control system for keeping track of receipts and expenses."

The long-awaited audit, prompted by a bribery investigation last year, offers 42 recommendations for improving the county's accounting procedures. The final cost of the audit will be well over $20,000, according to the chairman of the county commission, Carl Butler.

Antonio Messuri and Jo Bolen, of the firm of Messuri, Bates and Gibbons of Caldwell, presented the report Friday to the Jerome County commissioners and other county department heads. None of the present commissioners or the current county clerk held public office during the period of time covered by the report.

Messuri told the commissioners that the county had maintained inadequate documentation to support expenditures. He also listed a number of problems and errors in accounting practices that the audit had unearthed.

The Caldwell firm's audit was authorized by the Fifth District Court, upon the request of Special Prosecutor Harry DeHaan of Twin Falls. DeHaan, the Twin Falls County prosecutor, had been appointed to investigate allegations that then county clerk Glenda Belk had accepted bribes from a California office-supply firm in connection with several large purchases.

While the report shows that purchases made by the county "appeared to be excessive" in both volume and cost, it mentioned no evidence of bribes.

DeHaan's investigation resulted in the filing of several bribery charges, all felonies, against Belk, along with a charge of filing a false mileage voucher. Belk later pleaded guilty to the voucher charge, a misdemeanor, and resigned from office in a plea bargain agreement in which the bribery charges were dropped.

Calling for a better definition of travel expenses, the accountants said in their report that many travel vouchers in the clerk's office appeared excessive and on many others, insufficient explanations were provided.

DeHaan's probe also resulted in charges being filed against Jesse Wilson, who served as the Extension Service agent for the county until the end of last year. Wilson has been charged with the misuse of funds, a felony, relating to checks that he allegedly issued to himself from the county's rodent-control fund, without adequate receipts. He is currently awaiting trial in district court on those charges.

The auditor's report says that from Jan. 1, 1980, until June 30, 1981, Wilson's office did not keep receipts and none were written for money received until July 22, 1981. Receipts issued subsequent to that date did not always show the source of the money and none were remitted to the county treasurer.

The auditors also noted that several checks of a personal nature had been

GLENDIA BELK Bribe probe triggered audit

Issued on the county agent's accounts, including some to Safeway, Jerome Floral, Easley's at Ketchum, the Baskin-Robbins ice-cream store and one to the China Village, a Jerome restaurant.

None were supported by invoices, the auditors said, adding that two checks processed by the bank were missing from the bank statements. Both were written to Wilson from the rodent-control fund.

The report also stated that a Dec. 16, 1981, check for $35 was written to the Idaho Fertilizer and Chemical Conference, as a registration fee for Wilson. The amount was refunded March 11, 1982, and processed March 19, 1982. Personnel at the county agent's office said, however, that they did not receive the refund in that office.

Auditors also were critical of the former county commissioners, saying they had not checked adequately all claims before authorizing payment and had not supervised adequately all county departments.

During all three years, the report said, county budgets were increased for various reasons, including funding shortages in the budget for the refuse account, the assessor's office, the county planning and zoning office, the public defender's office and the county agent and clerk's offices.

The auditors warned that such increases do not comply with state law and do not constitute emergency funding, as defined by state law.

In 1980, Messuri said, it was not necessary to amend the budget, as was done by the commissioners. Instead, the county could, and should, have used the general-reserve appropriation to satisfy the shortages.

By 1981, however, the report states, the reserve fund had been depleted. But the auditors said that while state law provides specific procedures for budget adjustments, those procedures were not followed properly.

Messuri said — in a cover letter accompanying the audit presentation — that because of the inadequate documentation to support the financial statements made by the county's record-keepers, his firm was unable to apply adequate alternative accounting procedures to doublecheck the records, and thus, could not express an opinion on the truthfulness of the county's financial statements.

As an example, the auditors commented on "payroll advances" that appeared on a regular basis and which were listed on a "scratch-pad sheet" and then discarded at the end of the month. The offices where the practice occurred were not identified. Messuri criticized that as an "informal manner" of accounting.

The auditors were especially critical of accounting practices in the weed-control department, and they recommended that the separate bank account of the weed-control program be closed and all accounts handled by the county treasurer in the future.

As for the treasurer's office, the report said that poor communication existed between the departments of the treasurer and the auditor.

Messuri strongly recommended that money received by the treasurer be accompanied by an auditor's certificate, and that the money be deposited on a timely basis and in sequence in which the certificates are issued," the report states.

Auditor's certificates are used to verify the amount of funds turned over to the treasurer by various departments.

The report states that the treasurer's cash account as of Sept. 30, 1979, was overstated by about $28,238, and also was overstated at the close of subsequent years.

The audit report cited numerous incidents of funds being shown on the cash balances, when the books were closed at the end of each year, but some deposits actually were not made until some time in October. The county's fiscal year ends Sept. 30. In addition, the report says that at times, the late deposits were made in order to bring the accounts into balance with the auditor's certificates.

The auditors also questioned the propriety of where some purchases were listed in the various county accounts. As an example, the report showed that in April 1981, the clerk's office ordered 432 rolls of frosted tape, at a cost of $3.28 per roll, and the office charged the purchase to the election account.

"In our opinion this is not correct," the report said.

Among the recommendations in the report to correct the problems cited by the auditors were:

- The county should establish a change fund for departments handling money "over the counter" to avoid having to juggle receipts to make change.

- The county should comply with closure dates for county accounts, according to Idaho law as it relates to the beginning of a fiscal year. Any funds received after the cut-off date should be attributed to the following year's records.

- The county commissioners should become familiar with laws regarding transfer of funds within the budget and follow them closely.

- If county personnel have questions about fund procedures, they should contact the Idaho Association of Counties for guidance. The auditors noted that the form was unused for one year, apparently due to a lack of understanding about how to use it.

- That all employees be more specific when filing vouchers for travel expenses.

- That an invoice accompany each claim filed with the county.

- A better system to increase control over receipts in the auto-licensing department should be implemented, such as using a cash register with a tape printout.

- A monthly budget report for each county department head should be prepared to show the current status of revenues and expenditures.
- A purchase-order system should be implemented.

- Federal revenue-sharing regulations and the proper use of the funds as required by the federal government should be reviewed.

"Any errors in this area might require that you lose your revenue-sharing and even that you have to repay any that was not properly spent," Messuri warned.

Butler, the county commission chairman, said Friday that after going over the report it wasn't as "grim" as it might appear.

Most of the recommendations would be easy to implement, he said, and some already have been put into effect by the new county administration.

"We are being much more careful with approval of claims and are working closely with department heads. I think if the audit had been made five years ago, it would have been quite different. The county was in good condition during the time Virginia Ricketts served as our clerk-auditor," he said.

Butler said that he considered the major problems to be those in the clerk's and county agent's departments, the transferring of budget funds and the need to close the county books on time, with the exact figures as of the closing date shown on the records.

The audit, which was begun last July, included one general report, plus audit reports on each of the individual years of 1979, 1980 and 1981.

The report totaled four books and about 50 pages.

Butler said following the meeting with the auditors that the county issued a payment of $20,000 on Friday toward the total cost of the audit.

"I (the billing) was considerably more than that, but we asked the auditors to give us some relief if possible, and to let us know what could be done," he said.

"I don't think it would be appropriate to release the total billing until we see what terms can be negotiated, probably within a week," Butler said.

Jerome waits for funds

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — The city of Jerome is ready to accept funds to purchase the old Jerome Cooperative Creamery property, but officials have found that the money isn't available.

Mayor Ralph Peters told Jerome City Council this week that the federal grant for the project, which was approved some time ago, has not reached the state yet, for distribution to Jerome.

Peters said the funds were designated for Idaho, with a portion to cover the Jerome project. On Dec. 31, Jerome filed a formal request for release of the money.

"Last week, we thought we had the money. This week, we find out we don't have it. There's apparently a delay," Peters said. "We know it is approved and has been distributed to our region, but regional authorities have not yet sent it to Idaho."

The funds will be accepted by the city for transfer to the Jerome Development Corp., which in turn will purchase the building for resale to Ed-Da-How Specialties. The company will use the building to expand its cheese-processing facilities in Jerome.

The two-pronged program will put the long-vacant creamery building back in use and eventually provide several new jobs for Jerome.

An agreement covering the transfer of the property and other necessary transactions was approved by council Tuesday night. Peters said the city and the development corporation tentatively have set Feb. 28 as the date for the transactions to take place.

The federal funds can be awarded only to a municipality or other governmental agency, so the city has acted as a sponsor in the application. For the grant money, which will be used by the development corporation,

Creamery-purchase grant delayed

In addition to $400,000 for purchase of the old creamery building, the city has gained approval for a second block grant of $563,000 to purchase a well and several lots included in the creamery property. The new well facility would be used for improvement of the city water system.

Catholic priest finds his parishioners among the prostitutes

By DAVIDSMOTHERS
UPI senior editor

CHICAGO — It was 10 p.m. and there wasn't much action at the No Name Saloon, although the narrow slab of barroom, off North Clark Street in Chicago, was jammed with hookers and Johns. Nicole, a lissome black girl of about 20, decided to make a play for the quiet, heavyset man sitting against the wall.

She slipped onto a stool next to him and said, "Hi." He gave her an easy, relaxed smile. "How were your holidays?" he said. "Good. It's pretty nice weather we're having. At least we don't have any snow."

"Are you from Chicago? (she is). You go to high school? (she's from Jones Commercial High). So you've got typing and all that?"

Nicole gave a deprecatory shrug of assent. The guy looked like an amiable truck driver and was obviously an expert picker-upper. Better than her, maybe. He invited confidences and friendship, but he was a bit nosy.

"What do you do?" she said. "Father DePaul Genka signed and stretched his legs along the beer-soaked floor."

"I'm a teacher," he said. "I can be a strain. I tell you sometimes."

Nicole gave an understanding smile and drifted off down the bar.

"They are pros, most of them, in here," said the Roman Catholic priest, a Franciscan. "The ones who aren't, like her, are here to see what they can get."

"I'm waiting for Carmela. She's a pro, works out of here. Maybe she's working now."

Genka was among his congregation, waiting and seeking to minister to his red-light parish. It might seem he doesn't have much to give:

friendship, a bit of talk and caring; the willingness to pour stiff beer in any old glass, nursing a can of light beer, to deal gently with crazy drunka, perverts, bopheads, die cops and crazy to bear the glare of the jukebox next to his ear, to wait for someone who needs a helping hand.

"I operate however people maintain and tolerate friendship," he says. "To make some contact; to make them feel someone cares."

He does not claim to save many fallen women. "In 10-and-a-half years at this," he says, "I've managed to get maybe four or five girls off the street. And most of them were getting too old anyway."

"The trouble is there's not too much that's better for them off the street."

"Take Carmela. She's a music major at a university here. Voice and music. Wants to sing opera. That's one reason she does it here. The money. To go to school. To be independent."

There she is!

A heavy, amply padded blonde in a fussy white blouse and a long looped checked skirt was wedged between two men down the bar. She talked amiably to one man, while the other busied himself at squeezing her substantial thighs and bottom.

"Yes, she's a big girl," the priest conceded. "No sex object. No Raquel Welch."

Carmela's friends wandered off, as people do in this world, and Genka was at her side in an instant.

The play was a Christmas card he had received from a mutual friend — another prostitute. They talked of her for a minute, and then the conversation went elsewhere.

Carmela spoke of spending Christmas with her mother — who knows what her daughter is doing but does not know what to do about it. She reminded about old days and old friends at St. Isadora High School. She talked about her music.

"Next year I've got to start learning Italian," she said. "You can't sing these things if you don't know what they mean."

Then, out of the blue, she asked, "How did you become a priest, Paul?"

"I guess back where I grew up, it seemed a good thing to do," he told her.

Carma thought that over, nodded, and was gone.

"She's got to get back to work," Genka says. He stood on the broken sidewalk in front of the No Name Saloon, which Genka has so designated because if it ever had a name, no one has ever mentioned it.

He is a 52-year-old native of Syracuse, N.Y. He has made the dark streets and the dark side of life his life ever since the night a Manhattan hooker propositioned him and wound up letting him buy her a cup of coffee.

He is on a first-name basis with the bartenders and knows when to have across three or four extra bucks. Half the denizens of a place like the No Name know that he is a celibate priest and some of them have tried to change the celibate part. The other hookers and Johns know him as a friendly guy who just hangs around and doesn't make trouble.

For the woman of the streets — the "working girl" of North Clark Street, South Stony Island or Calumet City down among the steel mills — he is their Lancelot, their man for all seasons.

Father Genka is a regular in Chicago's red-light district

Trouble ahead for Walker?

Paper: Star signed with USFL then changed mind; could be ineligible.

By WILL McDONOUGH
The Boston Globe

Herschel Walker, who announced Friday that he would remain at the University of Georgia for his final year of athletic eligibility, signed a contract with the United States Football League Thursday night, according to two sources close to the negotiations.

Both sources told The Boston Globe that Walker, represented by attorney Jack Manton, had signed a contract with the New Jersey Generals, with the agreement that he would have a 24-hour grace period to change his mind. A few hours later, Walker apparently did just that, and he and Manton called off the deal.

If the scenario took place as told to The Globe, Walker would be ineligible to play for Georgia again.

"Signing a contract would be in violation of our rules," NCAA President John Toner said Friday, "and that would make any student athlete ineligible. The student athlete could appeal."

Toner, of the University of Connecticut, said he did not know much about the Walker episode but stated, "If there is reason for an investigation it will go forward. There is no inquiry at this time that I know of. But there are many ways for an inquiry to get started. Some have been started by newspaper stories."

Officials at the Generals' training camp in Orlando, Fla., refused comment late Friday night.

Manton was at the running back's meetings with the Generals.

"I have no knowledge that Herschel Walker signed any contract," said Manton. "I was not present or participated or advised in the signing of any contract. Herschel Walker has stated he did not sign a contract. I serve Herschel as an attorney and adviser and have acted in accordance with NCAA guidelines. I will have no further comment."

Walker himself could not be reached Friday night to respond to the story. Georgia Coach Vince Dooley said he had asked Walker flatly if he had done anything to jeopardize his eligibility and Walker told him "No, absolutely not."

"I just can't believe this is true."

At a news conference Friday in Athens, Ga., Walker admitted that he had met with J. Walter Duncan, owner of the New Jersey franchise, "and there was really no offer. I've heard $16.5 million, $15.9 million, but there never was an offer. I met with Mr. Duncan, yes. There's no doubt if I were interested in playing they would take me."

According to Walker, he told Duncan early in the conversation that he would not play professional football until next year (1984) "and that was all he had to hear."

The Walker version is quite different from the one given The Globe. While the Walker version would keep the senior running back eligible under NCAA guidelines, the second version would not.

The Globe was told:

"About 10 days ago Walker's agent (Manton) contacted the New Jersey club and said he wanted to talk contract for Walker. He said that Walker wanted to play in the New York area, and this was the way he could guarantee it because there was no way he could be sure that either New York team in the NFL could get a chance to draft him."

Kennedy, CSI defeat NIC; need 1 victory

COEUR D'ALENE — Sore-legged Gerald Kennedy and the wounded CSI Golden Eagles moved their magic number to one in their quest for the regional tournament.

Kennedy, nursing a calf bruise that held him out of practice and a couple of games, provided the points and the rebounds that held the Eagles together well enough to collect a 67-65 decision over the North Idaho Cardinals Friday night.

The victory means that CSI's regional schedule is now down to next Saturday's game at Treasure Valley. A win at Ontario, Ore., would give CSI a 5-1 regional mark. North Idaho appeared to have dropped out of regional contention at 2-3 but could get back into a playoff situation by beating Ricks at Rexburg next week. If Ricks wins and CSI loses, Ricks would host the tournament.

Although CSI trailed roughly 60 percent Friday's game, once the Eagles got the lead they went to a spread and executed it flawlessly. "We went up one (on Dewey Haley's cripple off a steal) and got the ball back and they called a timeout," CSI Coach Dave Campbell said. "I'd told the guys at halftime if we got into the lead we'd win the game because we were going to spread and North Idaho isn't quick enough to chase us."

That's how it worked out as CSI controlled the ball and the clock for the last 9:45, getting three cripples to pad the lead to as much as seven points at one stage. With 1:44 left, however, North Idaho began fouling and CSI couldn't answer the call at the foul line.

Ralph Barreras hit two free throws to make it 64-57. But then CSI's charity pitching went to pot. The Eagles managed just two out of nine over the closing 90 seconds and that allowed North Idaho to come back within three with 17 seconds left. Haley then hit one free throw to move CSI up by four and the Eagles led North Idaho have the final points.

"If we could have made our free throws, it would have been a blowout," Campbell said of his team's 9-19 shooting at the line. Campbell said several things were impressive about the game.

"Gerald just took the game in hand and led us through it," he said. "He had great intensity. He got 23 points—all of them when the rest of the guys were struggling with their shooting—and 15 rebounds. His calf (bruise) didn't appear to hamper him any but late in the game he was chasing a loose ball and caught the corner of the bleachers on his thigh. He'll probably have another bruise with that."

With Rohr, who scored 28 against North Idaho in the first meeting, back in the motel with flu, Eddie Farmer was pressed into starting service. Although Farmer had a poor shooting night from the line, he came up with a 7-13 effort from the field to help offset Rohr's absence.

Haley played well, getting two of the cripples out of the spread and the clinching free throw, despite a groin pull.

"And Haley and a couple of other guys weren't feeling good after the game. The flu may be going through us right now," Campbell said.

The other impressive thing in the game was Cardinal center Dave Randa who scored 23 points in the first half despite all CSI's efforts.

"He just got the ball and he beat every guy we tried on him. He just took the ball and made the shot. (Ralph) Barreras held him well (to two points) in the second half," the coach said.

CSI fell behind in the opening four minutes but pulled back into a couple of ties and then took its first lead on two straight Kennedy field goals that made it 18-14. Twice after that CSI held four-point advantages but North Idaho caught up at 24 and the lead changed hands five times and was tied three more before Greg Gooding and Kevin Corby shot North Idaho into its 43-38 halftime lead.

Mark Simon expanded that to 45-38 as the second half opened before Kennedy reeled off six straight points that pulled CSI back into contention. North Idaho held one to three-point leads, the last time with 10 minutes left. Then Farmer hit a field goal and Haley came up with the steal and layup that signalled the start of the spread.

Haley made it 58-55 before Atwood replied with a follow shot that left the lead at one. Then Haley and Ron Beach picked up cripples off the spread and Barreras hit his two free throws to make it 64-57.

Kennedy also managed one more solid play with the score at 65-61 when Barreras missed a free throw. Kennedy grabbed the rebound and that set up a charity point for the South Carolina sophomore.

CSI meets Walla Walla at 6:15 p.m. (MST) today at the University of Idaho Kibbie Dome.

Buhl's Mark Laing reaches through his legs to recover as loose ball before Burley's Scott Barrett can gain possession

Burley gets even with Buhl

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Burley junior Greg Boyd turned the tables on Buhl, staying an outside shooting display that carried the Bobcats past the Indians 63-38 and into the finals of the Fourth District A2 Basketball Tournament.

The Bobcats will return to the CSI gymnasium Tuesday night to meet Jerome. The Tigers are undefeated and would have to lose twice to Burley to lose the crown and automatic trip to the state tournament in Boise in two weeks. However, the runner-up from this tournament will have a second chance to make state, meeting the second-district champion in a one-game playoff at 4 p.m. Feb. 26 in Cascade.

Boyd hit six of Burley's first eight points as the Bobcats jumped ahead 8-0 and never let Buhl closer than five thereafter.

"He's a shooter, no doubt about it," said Burley Coach Gary Swan. "For Buhl it was a bitter taste of its own medicine."

"We went away from our perimeter shooters in the second half and that's where we live," said Coach Ben Allen. "Although Boyd deserved the laurels with his early shooting, Swan said for the first time in a while he was pleased with the overall team effort."

"It's nice to see them come to play for a change. We haven't been that intense lately," Swan said.

Looking at Jerome, the coach added "sure, we can beat them but they've proven they can beat us. They've got us 2-1 so far this season and we'd love to see it go the full five." While Burley had its shooting rolling from the start, Buhl struggled through the first four minutes without a point and trailed 14-4 at the end of the first quarter. That jumped to 20-7 early in the second quarter when Randy Austin scored inside and Boyd added two howitzers while Buhl could muster only a three-point play by Randy Bostock.

The lead stayed at 13 points until Buhl hit a spark and threatened to make a contest of it. Bostock scored on a put back and inside shot and Charlie Carter connected on a pair of jumpers to reduce the deficit to 23-18. But that's where the Indians' night crested. Boyd replied with a field goal and Mark Williams hit a free throw to start Burley away again.

The third quarter was nearly a repeat of the first. The teams traded early field goals and then Williams and Dan Egbert picked up four apiece to shove Burley ahead 36-22. By the end of the quarter Burley had mounted a 46-26 advantage and coasted in.

Allen declined to assign any mental letdown to the game although Buhl had opened the meet with a surprise win over Burley and then used a slowdown to force Jerome to tie the first second to collect a 10-8 decision Thursday night.

"I don't think so," he answered the question. "Burley just played super."

The reaction of Jerome and its fans to Buhl's slowdown Thursday indicated the possibility of a second might work on the Tigers mentally. Swan was offering no solace on that score.

"No, we won't slow it down," he said and then added with a grin, "unless we get ahead."

WENDELL — Knowing they had to play their best to defeat Gooding Friday night, the Filer Wildcats simply did it.

Each Filer starter made significant contributions to the Wildcats' 76-58 triumph over the Senators, who won the No. 2 seeds in the Fourth District A-3 Boys Basketball Tournament.

Tonight in the losers' bracket semifinal Filer faces another formidable opponent — Glenns Ferry, which received clutch scoring from David Johannek and Robbie Johnson to prevail over the Shoshone Indians, 66-56. After the Filer-Glenns Ferry confrontation, Kimberly will duel Declo in the winners' bracket semifinal.

Filer 76, Gooding 58

Entering Friday night's game, Filer Coach Louie Carey had in mind a few tasks his Wildcats must accomplish to have success against Gooding:

• The Wildcats couldn't allow themselves to be dominated by the Senators' twin towers, 6-8 Ken Anderson and his 6-6 brother Leon. That didn't happen.

• Filer would have to shoot 50 percent from the floor. That virtually came to pass, as the Wildcats converted 29 of 59 field-goal attempts.

• Finally, in Garey's words, "I knew it would take a good ballgame from all five guys." Bingo.

While they didn't shut down the Andersons underneath the basket, Dennis Fix and Elmer Peters definitely negated their effectiveness.

Fix, a 6-6 senior, gave what might have been his best performance ever, collecting 19 points and 11 rebounds. Fifteen of Fix's points came in the first half.

"I certainly think Dennis Fix has been one of those guys who has just been waiting for his time, and he showed it tonight," Garey said.

Peters also helped Filer gain its 33-22 rebounding edge, grabbing eight to complement his 10 points. Despite picking up his fourth foul with 2:04 left in the third quarter, Greg Hall never stopped hustling, finishing with 11 points for the Wildcats. Scott Dunlap was the only Filer starter who failed to reach double figures, but his eight-assist, eight-point effort made that distinction meaningless.

Then there was Ben Sackett, the Wildcats' 5-11 point guard. The remarkable aplomb Filer displayed stemmed primarily from their re-dedicated junior as he calmly directed the offense and led the fast break. Sackett scored 22 points, constantly letting jumpers over his taller foes.

"If he's not the best point guard in the conference, there's no doubt he's going to be," Garey said of Sackett. "He has really matured, in the last three weeks."

All this added up to an output that the Senators, 12-11, tried hard but failed to match.

"They played a super ballgame tonight," praised Gooding Coach Don

Weaver busy playing golf as Orioles begin spring training

By JIM HENNEMAN
The Baltimore Evening Sun

MIAMI — For the first time since he left high school 30 years ago, Earl Weaver wasn't in uniform when spring training opened Friday.

Instead of supervising the first workout for the Orioles' pitchers and catchers at Miami Stadium, Weaver was preparing for his daily round of golf at the Country Club of Miami, about 15 miles to the north. In this surrounding, with a house sitting just off a fairway, and with friends who are only casually interested in his career, it is easy for him to put baseball out of his mind.

But it isn't the same, and slowly the realization is being driven home that this is really the beginning of a new life.

"In 1961 I told Marianna (his wife) that baseball came first and she was second," said Weaver. "That's the way it was because it was my livelihood, and when I left my house last Oct. 3 (for the Orioles' final, division-deciding game against Milwaukee) baseball was still No. 1.

EARL WEAVER
Will he stay away?

Now, Marianna is No. 1. The roles are reversed. Weaver will be around the ball clubs during the course to dry out from the latest monsoon. The wait was not profitable, because he lost $20, despite "playing pretty good." He doesn't like to lose, but took an hour to settle the bet", and he says the competitive spark, as much as anything, influenced his decision to retire at the age of 52.

"I don't have to have that intense desire to win this year, and believe me that is a great relief," he said. "I want to see the Orioles win as much as anybody else, but that's somebody else's responsibility now. I don't have to worry about it."

During the 14½ years he managed the Orioles, Weaver was considered a brilliant decision maker during the course of a game, and that is the part he will miss the least.

"The decisions that had to be made pitch-hitting for Brooks Robinson and Lee May and Boog Powell, and telling Don Buford he'd be better off to take a job in Japan. But they were things that had to be done. I didn't mind doing them because I had to make a living.

"I didn't ever want sentiment entering my train of thought, and I'm proud of myself that I made decisions that had to be made. Last year I had to pitch-hit for Ken Singleton, and it tore me up. Maybe I did it one at-bat too late, or maybe I did it one at-bat too soon. Who knows? But for the other 24 people on the club, and I remember thinking, 'Next year I'm not going to have to do this, somebody else will be making these decisions.'

"But those are things that had to be done. I never wanted to get to the point where I avoided them, so I didn't. I'm proud of the fact I went out doing it right - I was just as big a jerk the last year as I was the first."

The big question is whether or not Weaver will be satisfied living a life of retirement on the golf course. "I know what Ralph Houk said - he got tired of watching ladies' fortunes go through while he was looking for his ball in the woods," Weaver said.

But the fact his handicap has gone from a seven to a nine this winter doesn't deter Weaver in his belief that he can find satisfaction on the golf course.

"I really haven't had enough time to practice," he said. "I accepted a lot more appearances this winter than I would have otherwise. And if it wasn't for the fact that I know I'm going to be off this summer, I'd be cursing because of all the golf time I've lost because of the rain we've had."

If Las Vegas had a line on Weaver's future, the odds would be heavy that he'll be back in uniform by 1984. He has a stock response: "There's one thing we know - I'm employed by the Orioles (as a scout-consultant) for the next two years, and I will never think of anything else during that time. And I want the people of Baltimore to know that because of the way they have treated me."

His wife doesn't think Weaver will return, and only a few members of his country club give it much thought. "They don't care," he said. "To them, this is Earl Weaver. He plays golf and he's a member of the country club. They don't talk baseball to me, none whatsoever, and never have. And I love it."

Seaver slightly injures right calf during first workout with Mets

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — Tom Seaver put on a Mets uniform for the first time in 5½ years Friday but was forced to cut short his running at the conclusion of the workout when he suffered a slight pull in his right calf.

Seaver later worked 15 minutes on a clubhouse exercise machine following treatment.

The 38-year-old three-time Cy Young Award winner said his shoulder felt great following weeks of throwing under the stands at Shea Stadium. He threw for seven minutes with New York Manager George Bamberger observing Friday and both agreed that poor mechanics were a factor last year when Seaver has his first losing season. He was 5-13 with Cincinnati.

"At no time last year did I feel I was throwing as I should," the right-hander said. "I developed the flu in spring training, came back too soon and had no stamina. I messed up my mechanics and never got them back together."

Asked what he would consider a successful season in 1983, Seaver suggested 15 wins and 250 innings.

"If I can pitch 250 innings, it will mean that I'm healthy," he said. "I feel that I can."

Seaver, who was traded to the Reds on June 15, 1977 following squabbling with the Mets' previous owners, said his return is not particularly emotional.

"The one emotional day for me will come when I pitch opening day," Seaver said, "or whenever I pitch my first game."

The Mets announced the signings Friday of pitchers Jesse Orosco and Tom Gorman and shortstop Ron Gardenhire.

Connors holds off Teltscher

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Top-ranked Jimmy Connors held off Elliot Teltscher Friday night 4-6, 6-1, 7-6 (7-5) and advanced to the semifinals of the U.S. National indoor tennis tournament.

Third-seed Gene Mayer was to play Brian Teacher in the last quarterfinal match late Friday.

TV viewers never saw anything like that. Connors said after the 2-hour, 44-minute match. "I hope I never see anything like that again."

Connors started off slowly, losing the first set 6-4 to his right-handed opponent from Florida.

Connors came back strong in the second set, easily dropping Teltscher, the No. 8 seed, 6-1. But it was the third and decisive set where both players reached their peaks.

The No. 1 seed said when he fell behind in the final set, he didn't think about playing defensive tennis.

"You can't go into the prevent defense. That stinks," he said.

Connors said he didn't expect Teltscher to be so strong in the third set. "Usually at 6-1, my game is on the way up and his game should be coming down. It didn't work that way."

Teltscher zoomed to a 5-3 advantage, but Connors won the next three games to go ahead 6-5. Teltscher, however, did not wilt and served up a win to knot the score at 6 games apiece.

The tie-breaker was just as hard-fought as the third set. Teltscher held a 3-1 advantage, but couldn't put the feisty Connors away.

Connors called up all his reserve strength and powered his way to take the tie-breaker 7-5 to secure the victory.

Despite matching Connors stroke-for-stroke until the very end, Teltscher was disappointed in his play. "The last three shots of the match were the worst I've seen," he said.

"It's just how you play when it counts," he added. "Those were three horrendous points. That's basically what counts. I played terrible."

Connors faces fifth-seeded Peter McNamara in semifinals tomorrow.

In other quarterfinal action, Brian Gottfried scored a 7-6, (9-7), 6-3 victory over Paul McNamee of Australia to advance to the semifinals. Gottfried fought back from a 1-5 deficit in the first set and then breezed through the second set to advance.

In an earlier match in the $315,000 tournament, McNamara of Australia, No. 10 in the world, went on the attack in the third set to edge fourth-seeded Yannick Noah of France 6-3, 3-6, 7-6.

"I played a little more aggressively in the third set," said McNamara, who reached the singles final of five events in 1982, but failed to win a championship. "That probably was one of the best matches I've played in a while."

Top four women seeds gain Chicago semis

CHICAGO (UPI) — Third-seeded Tracy Austin needed two seven-point tiebreakers to beat fifth-seeded Wendy Turnbull 7-6, 7-6 Friday night to advance to the semifinals round of a $150,000 tennis tournament.

Earlier, second-seeded Andrea Jaeger overcame several changed calls by officials to score a 6-4, 6-4 victory over Eva Pfaff.

Fourth-seeded Pam Shriver overcame a first-set deficit to score a 6-7, 6-1, 6-1 victory over Bettina Bunge.

Top-seeded Martina Navratilova also advanced to the semifinals with a 6-2, 6-2 victory over Marcella Meeker.

In the Austin-Turnbull match, each player scored a service break. Austin in the opening game, and Turnbull coming back to break Austin's service in the sixth game.

After the set was squared at six games apiece to force a seven-point tiebreaker, Turnbull won the first point off her service but Austin scored six consecutive points before Turnbull could register again.

Austin closed out the set when she placed a drop-shot just out of Turnbull's reach in the second set.

Austin grabbed a 3-0 advantage before Turnbull could win a game. Austin lost her service in the fifth game but Turnbull failed to hold her service in the sixth.

Turnbull stayed close, breaking Austin's service in the seventh game to cut Austin's lead to 4-3.

Each player held service through the 10th game as they were tied up at five games apiece. In the 11th game, Austin lost her service when Turnbull connected on a well-placed drop-shot.

Austin turned the tables on Turnbull in the final game when she broke Turnbull's service, forcing the second tiebreaker of the match.

Like the first tiebreaker, Turnbull was unable to keep the ball in play and Austin wound up scoring a 7-3 decision.

Nevada rookie paces St. Louis qualifying

FLORRISSANT, Mo. (UPI) — Joe Salvemini averaged 242 in winning six of eight matches Friday night to lead the field of five qualifiers for the title of the $125,000 St. Louis stop of the Pro Bowlers Tour.

Salvemini, a 27-year-old left-hander from Reno, Nev., bowling in his first match-play final, won 18-of-24 matches in three rounds. He led second-place qualifier Johnny Petraglia, of Manalapan, N.J., by 239 pins.

Salvemini totaled 10,271 for 42 games and averaged 231 for the tournament. Petraglia, a 17-year veteran, is attempting to win his first championship since the PBA National Championship of 1980.

Completing the top five are Marshall Holman, Bedford, Ore., with 9,813; defending champion Bill Sear, of Lincoln, Neb., with 9,504; and Bruce Carter, of Round Rock, Texas, with 9,843.

The five bowlers will roll off this afternoon for the $20,000 title.

Waltrip's success does not include Daytona 500 win

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — With apologies to Richard Petty, Darrell Waltrip has been king of the Grand National racing circuit for the past two years.

During those two seasons, Waltrip won 24 races, $1.5 million and two NASCAR championships.

Of the 15 tracks on this season's 30-race NASCAR schedule, Waltrip has triumphed on 14 of them.

There is one glaring deficiency, however.

Waltrip has never won the Daytona 500 — the pinnacle of stock car racing. For that matter, he has never won at Daytona International Speedway during his 11-year career.

DARRELL WALTRIP
Only track he hasn't won at Waltrip and others Friday continued their preparation for Sunday's running of the $1-million 500.

Several miles away in Halifax Hospital, fellow driver Bruce Jacobl was in critical condition from head injuries received in a spectacular accident during a qualifying race Thursday.

Doctors said Friday Jacobl suffered a contusion of the brain stem but that his vital signs were stable. The 47-year-old Jacobl was competing in his first Grand National event since 1976.

Back on the track, Waltrip tried to finger the bugaboo that has bothered him about the 2.5-mile tri-oval.

"Everybody seems to have a track that is not especially good to them," said Waltrip. "I believe this team can win anywhere it goes, but not one race has eluded us like this one."

"It's been my hard luck."

Waltrip has his work cut out again in the 25th running of the classic. An ignition failure in his Chevrolet during a qualifying race Thursday pushed Waltrip back in

Kite charges to 3-shot San Diego lead

LA JOLLA, Calif. (UPI) — Tom Kite, playing with the confidence that vaulted him to the top of the PGA Tour, blistered the Torrey Pines Country Club with a 7-under-par 65 Friday for a three-stroke lead midway through the $300,000 San Diego Open.

Kite's 65 on the North course, combined with his opening-round 68 on the much tougher South course, left him at 133, 11-under-par after two rounds.

Ben Crenshaw, considered the tour's brightest star after winning the first tournament he entered 10 years ago, continued his resurgence, carding a 2-under 70 on the difficult South course.

He was tied for second place at 8-under-par 136 with John Cook, who matched Kite's 65, and Gary Hallberg, who shot a 67. Both scores came on the North course.

Tied for third at 7-under were Gil Morgan, winner of the first two tournaments this year, with a 6-under-par 66, Dave Eichelberger, who equalled Kite's 65, little-known Mike Gove, who had a 3-under-par 69 on the South course, Lon Hinkle and Dan Pooley.

Kite, Morgan and Eichelberger were matched together and combined for 21 birdies.

"Our threesome was lighting up the place like a pinball machine," said Kite, who birdied all four par-5 holes Thursday. "We just kept shooting birdie after birdie. The lady keeping the scores barely kept up with us."

Kite birdied the first hole, two-putting from 20 feet on the 522-yard, par-5 hole. He ripped a 7-iron within six feet of the cup on the fourth hole and sank that birdie putt and followed with a brilliant 8-iron shot on No. 6, dropping the ball within a foot of the pin. He sank that putt to move to 7-under.

He continued his assault on the course on the ninth hole, chipping within four feet and sinking his fourth birdie putt on the front side for a 32.

On the back, Kite birdied No. 14, 16 and 18, the last one on a twisting 18-foot putt, his longest birdie putt of the day.

"I'm having a ball out there," the 32-year-old from Austin, Texas said. "I feel like I'm swinging the club as well as I ever have in my life. I'm just riding a wave right now. I hope the wave lasts the rest of my life, but I'll settle for the next two rounds."

Kite was the tour's top money winner in 1981, earning $375,099. He fell slightly, to No. 3 on the list last year but this year he was so unsure of his game he skipped the first two tournaments, the Tucson and Los Angeles Opens.

When he made his 1983 debut, he played "so-so" in the Bob Hope Desert Classic then missed the cut in the Phoenix Open.

But he rebounded from that poor two-day showing to win the Bing Crosby tournament two weeks ago.

Crenshaw, 31, turned in one of the best rounds of the day, shooting his 70 on the dreaded South course.

Meridian reinstates O'Mera

BOISE (UPI) — The Meridian School Board has unanimously agreed to reinstate high school football Coach Bob O'Mera, who was fired by board members on a 3-2 vote earlier this week.

School Board chairman Roger Lewis said board members — "10 encountered a wave of protest from students, parents, administrators and other coaches following the firing on Monday — changed their minds Thursday after O'Mera clarified remarks he made during the earlier meeting."

Lewis said there had been an apparent lack of communication between board members and O'Mera over basic issues, which led to concern that he had an attitude problem.

O'Mera, who coached the Warriors to an 8-3 record and a state tournament berth last fall, said he will return to his job in part because of the massive outpouring of support from the community.

Several Boise-area coaches said they were shocked when O'Mera was fired.

Bishop Kelly High School Athletic Director and basketball Coach Mike Fritz said earlier this week O'Mera's success made the news even harder to accept.

"It makes you wonder what a guy has to do to stay in the profession," Fritz said. "He's done a lot out there. He's taken them from a dorm to a respected program."

Flores earns UPI honor for AFC

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tom Flores, whose Raiders coupled a 1982 move to Los Angeles with a rise to the top of the AFC Western Division standings, Friday was named UPI's AFC Coach of the Year.

Flores, who completed his fourth season with the Raiders, received 24 votes in balloting from 56 writers, four from each AFC city. The former Raiders quarterback finished ahead of Miami's Don Shula, who had 16 votes.

Walt Michaels of the New York Jets was third with 10 votes and Ron Meyer of New England fourth with four votes.

In 1981, the Raiders suffered their first losing season (7-9) since 1964, but, under Flores, Los Angeles lost only one game in 1982's strike-shortened nine-game season. The only loss suffered by Flores and the Raiders, transplanted from Oakland, was against the Cincinnati Bengals.

Stocks register minor gains

By FRANK W. SLUSSER
United Press International

NEW YORK — A late surge of buying sent stocks slightly higher Friday in sluggish pre-holiday trading.

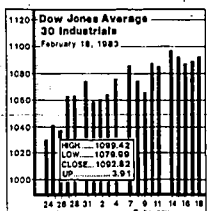

The market advanced although investors were uncertain what a major oil price cut will do to the international monetary system.

The Dow Jones industrial average, down four points at the outset after adding 1.48 Thursday, tacked on 3.91 to 1,052.62. The DJIA, which briefly crossed the 1,000 line Monday, rose 6.32 for the week overall.

The New York Stock Exchange index gained 0.31 to 85.44 and the price of an average share increased 13 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index up 0.56 to 148.00. Advances topped declines 920-635 among the 1,326 issues traded at 4 p.m. EST.

Big Board volume amounted to about 74,420,000 shares compared with 74,930,000 traded Thursday.

Brokers attributed the late rebound to some investors replacing borrowed shares sold earlier prior to the holiday weekend. The market will be closed Monday for George Washington's birthday.

Monday for George Washington's birthday.

Also, several stocks were bolstered by investors buying shares to cover options that expired during the day.

Investors were encouraged the bond market sustained a rally began late Thursday on hopes real interest rates would fall from the present 6 percent level above the inflation rate.

Analysts said investors were not surprised by Britain's proposal to reduce its North Sea oil prices by $3 to $30.50 a barrel. Several experts predicted OPEC would hold an emergency meeting soon to try to iron out pricing and production policies they failed to achieve last month in Geneva.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. totaled 88,459,410 compared with 84,048,600 Thursday.

The American Stock Exchange Index jumped 1.45 to 383.99 and the price of a share added five cents. Advances topped declines 363-273 among the 800 issues traded. Volume totaled 8,440,000 shares compared with 8,580,000 Thursday.

The National Association of Security Dealers NASDAQ Index of OTC stocks gained 2.25 to an all-time high of 261.25.

On the trading floor, American Telephone & Telegraph was the most active NYSE-listed issue, up 1/4 to 67 1/8.

Long Island Lighting was second, off 3/4 to 16 1/4. New York Gov. Mario Cuomo has blocked a start-up of Lilco's $3.2 billion Shoreham, Long Island, nuclear power plant because of a flap over emergency evacuation plans in case of a disaster.

Mesa Offshore Trust was the third most active issue, unchanged at 2 1/4. Sperry Corp. shed 1 1/2 to 36 1/2 after an analyst cut his earnings estimates for the company.

Allied Corp. advanced 1/4 to 38 1/8. The company agreed to sell four European seat-belt firms to Nike Finanziaria S.P.A. and its Dorinda GMBH subsidiary. Terms were not disclosed.

On the Amex, Dome Petroleum led the actives, up 3/16 to 3 1/4 with blocks of 174,400 shares and 910,900 shares, both at 3. Instruments Systems followed, up 1/8 to 3 1/2. Wang Laboratories class B was third, up 1/4 to 36 1/4.

Grkam Manufacturing climbed 2 1/4 to 12 1/4 after the company reported its fourth-quarter earnings soared to $1.01 a share from 51 cents a year ago.

Resorts International class A lost 1 1/2 to 23 1/4 after the company reported its fourth-quarter operating net dropped to 59 cents a share from $1.01 a year ago.

Money fund assets drop but yields up

NEW YORK (UPI) — Assets of money market funds fell $2.6 billion in the week ended Feb. 16, but assets of tax-free money market funds grew sharply.

Assets of tax-free money market funds grew sharply.

Total assets of 300 money market funds that report to the Investment Company Institute, Washington-based industry association, were $192.3 billion, down from the record $222.6 billion in the week ended Dec. 1, 1982.

The ICI said all categories of funds, the ICI said. General purpose and broker-dealer funds were down $86 million and $1.2 billion, respectively. Institutional funds lost $59 million.

Donoghue's Money Fund Report, Holliston, Mass., said average seven-day yields rose slightly in the last week, from 7.82 percent from 7.77 percent.

Three-day yields, however, notched down to 7.80 percent from 7.85 percent.

Donoghue's also said tax-exempt money market funds continued to post gains — $193.5 million to a total of $16 billion. A spokeswoman for the fund said the average seven-day yield on the tax-free funds was 4.56 percent, which translates to 9.12 percent for investors in the 50 percent tax bracket.

Donoghue's reported the average maturity on fund portfolios was 37 days compared to 35 days last week. The shortening maturity could either represent a move to position for higher yields or to keep portfolios more liquid to handle withdrawals.

The ICI, which represents all types of mutual funds, said reports from their members show that "a 50+ percent portion of the money coming from investors in money funds is going into other types of funds, such as the tax-exempt, equity and bond funds."

Interest rates won't rise

Fed says U.S. money supply up $2.8 billion

NEW YORK (UPI) — The narrow measure of money supply known as M1 jumped $2.8 billion in the latest week.

Analysis, measured by recent comments of the Federal Reserve chairman, said the jump should not result in higher interest rates.

William V. Sullivan Jr., senior vice president at the Bank of New York, said in view of Fed Chairman Paul Volcker's testimony to Congress this week the continued surge in M1 "should have very little policy overtones."

David M. Jones, economist at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., also believes the Fed will "hold to a stable posture while it awaits further evidence on the economy and money data."

The bond market, which had rallied sharply following Volcker's testimony Wednesday, held on to its gains despite the M1 report. The benchmark Treasury long-bond, the 10% of 2012, was trading at 96 1/4 just after the report.

Sullivan said the market was helped by a lower federal funds rate, which traded at 8 1/4-9% percent Friday.

M1, composed of cash, checking accounts and NOW accounts — or money that is available for immediate spending — was a seasonally adjusted average of $498.3 billion in the week ended Feb. 9 compared with $488 billion the previous week.

In the latest 13 weeks, M1 averaged a 12.8 percent rate of gain.

Separately, the Fed revised upward by $1.4 billion to $2,007 trillion its January M2 estimate.

The Fed also reported that money market deposit accounts at banks averaged $254.4 billion in the week ended Feb. 9, up from $228.7 billion a week earlier. Super-NOW accounts averaged $20.7 billion, up from $19.5 billion.

Commercial and industrial loans at the nation's major banks fell $456 million in the latest week, compared to a gain of $1.416 billion the previous week.

Key interest rates were mixed in the banking week ended Wednesday. The federal funds rate averaged 8.62 percent, up from 8.50 percent a week earlier.

The rate on three-month Treasury bills eased to 8.20 percent from 8.24 percent. The rate on three-month certificates of deposit averaged 8.57 percent, down from 8.68 percent the week before.

Drop in farm exports forecast in fiscal '83

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. agricultural exports will drop by 8 percent in fiscal 1983 and yield $36 billion, the government predicts.

The Agriculture Department has released an export outlook, which projects the volume of agricultural exports will decrease from the 158.2 million tons recorded in fiscal 1982.

"The economic recession, the high-valued U.S. dollar, foreign exchange constraints and debt problems in many importing countries are reducing exports despite low U.S. farm prices," the report said.

The department forecast the United States will export $110 billion in agricultural products, with the agricultural trade surplus likely to exceed $20 billion.

U.S. sales to developed countries alone may drop from $30 billion to $18 billion in fiscal 1983, the report said.

The decline is likely because of improved crop production in most other countries, weak consumer demand and lower export prices, it said.

Export prices of wheat and corn are expected to drop to the lowest levels in five years, the department said.

The department predicted the volume of American wheat and flour exports will drop, largely because of reduced sales to the Soviet Union, China and Western Europe.

The U.S. share of the world wheat market also is expected to fall, said the department, blaming the anticipated decline largely on increased overseas sales by Argentina, Canada and the Western European Common Market.

A slight increase is likely in U.S. exports of coarse grains — and the United States may also increase its share of the world market, the report said.

The report forecast a 6 percent decrease in the value of U.S. exports of soybeans and other oilseeds and other agricultural products, but the volume of soybean and meal exports is likely to reach record heights.

The United States is expected to export about 25 percent less cotton this year because of lower world demand, the report said, adding that the U.S. share of the cotton market also is likely to drop.

Tobacco exports are expected to remain at last year's levels in both volume and value.

U.S. dairy, livestock and poultry exports probably will increase slightly to $4.2 billion, the report said.

Both the volume of shipments and the prices of beef and cattle hide exports are likely to climb above last year's levels, the report added.

Reporting dividends, interest

Ninth in a series

Whether the interest or dividends were reported on income tax returns.

Most of us are certain to be affected in one way or another by the new changes.

Your post-June 1983 dividends and interest will be subject to withholding by the paying corporations, banks, Treasury, etc., at a 10 percent rate, somewhat like the way your employer withholds income tax from your paycheck.

The millions of you who have funds on deposit with banks, money market funds or similar mediums or who own stocks, mutual funds and the like can expect your interest and dividends to be cut 10 percent by your bank, broker, etc., when you are paid or credited with interest and dividends after June 1983.

This will apply unless you fall into one of the specific categories of persons who are exempt from withholding. These exemptions, however, are strictly limited.

The withheld 10 percent on interest and dividends is not a complete loss, because like the income taxes withheld by your employer from your paycheck, you will credit the withheld amount as a payment on your 1983 tax return (when you file your '83 return in April '84).

Your withholding bank, broker, etc., will have to give you a statement somewhat similar to the Form W-2 you now receive from your employer for wage-salary withholding. These statements will show how much was withheld so you can credit that total properly against your 1983 taxes.

There will be no withholding, of course, from tax-exempt interest. But there will be withholding when you deposit or cash coupons clipped from Treasury or corporate bearer bonds.

If you own bearer bonds, be warned that while withholding doesn't start until July 1, 1983, any coupons paid or deposited after Dec. 31, 1982, will have to be reported to the IRS by the bank, broker, etc.

You are exempt from the new withholding rules described above if you fall into either one of the two following categories:

- 1) Your income tax for 1982 was not more than $1,000 (if married filing jointly or $500 if single).
- 2) You are 65 years or older and your 1982 tax was not more than $2,500 on a joint return, or $1,500 on a single return.

Under the new tax law, all notes and bonds with a maturity of more than one year issued after 1982 by the Treasury and by corporations must be in registered form and not in bearer form. State and municipal bonds issued after June 30, 1983, also must be in registered form.

When all such notes and bonds are in registered form, the IRS will find it much easier to identify who owns these obligations and whether the owners are properly reporting any taxable interest.

The implications of this tightening on reporting and withholding go way beyond the IRS' convenience. This will make policing of would-be gypsters simpler across-the-board.
