Evans to call extra session

Budgets for public schools, universities will top agenda

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — Just a day after the Legislature adjourned, Gov. John Evans announced Friday that he will call the lawmakers back to Boise for a special session, beginning May 9.

At the top of his agenda will be appropriations for public schools and universities — two measures that Evans says he will veto as soon as they reach his desk.

"In the meantime, we'll also be reviewing budgets for vocational programs, our community colleges, the deaf and blind school in Gooding, and the budget for agricultural research," Evans said. "If some of those are deemed too low, then they may appear on the special-session agenda as well."

The only non-educational item the governor expects to require legislators to re-examine during the special session is the Swan Falls water-right dispute.

Evans advocates that the state should subordinate Idaho Power's water right at the Snake River dam, south of Kuna, to other upstream development, as a way of retaining state control over the river.

He charges that the Legislature

"caved in" to the utility's lobbyists, and that by not passing subordination, lawmakers may have caused "the loss of industry and development above Swan Falls."

Republican leaders responded harshly to Evans' call for a special session. They said Friday that the session may be pointless, a waste of taxpayers' dollars and "certainly too soon."

While the legislators have no choice but to obey Evans' call to return to Boise, they are not committed to any specific outcome.

"If a special session is unavoidable, I'd think that the vacation season, perhaps July, may be more fruitful," said House Speaker Tom Silvers, R-Twin Falls.

"To call legislators back this soon is only going to anger them. It's right at the start of farming and right when they're getting back to their businesses and families. I don't see any of the budgets being increased by one penny," he said.

But Evans believes that the legislators will need only three weeks at home to be swayed by a public outcry for more educational funding. In that period, the governor plans to

Board proposes state purchase Swan Falls

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — A plan for the state to buy the Idaho Power Co.'s Swan Falls Dam was proposed Friday in a well-prepared action by the Idaho Water Resources Board.

"What we've done is ask our staff to present, at our next meeting, the mechanics it will take to buy Swan Falls Dam," said Donald Kramer, the water board chairman, "whether that means issuing revenue bonds or whatever."

"The board has agreed unanimously that if we can, we'll buy it," the Castleford farmer said. "That is the preferred course for us under the state water plan."

When asked if the water board has the Council names committee to study water rights - A9

authority on its own to buy the dam for the state, Kramer said he is "certain the board has the authority, but who would run the facility, I don't know."

The board's action caught Idaho Power officials by surprise, but utility President Robert O'Connor warned that electrical rates in Idaho will increase if the state buys or condemns Swan Falls Dam.

The water board's action is the latest development in the long-running Swan Falls water-right dispute. It began with a 1977 lawsuit brought by Idaho Power customers.

The suit charged that Idaho Power had abandoned its water right at Swan Falls by encouraging upstream farming development, which subsequently depleted the Snake River.

The utility has a right to a water flow of 6,400 cubic feet per second, as determined recently by the state Supreme Court. But during the summer months, the average flow drops as low as 5,400 cubic feet per second.

But the real complication came from the Supreme Court ruling that Idaho Power's water right takes precedence over future upstream development. Apparently, this means the utility owns the right to all water remaining in the Snake River today.

Fearing that this will mean that the state no longer controls future uses of the Snake River — and therefore, the future growth of southern Idaho —, the water board earlier had endorsed subordinating the utility's water right to upstream uses.

However, that option was twice defeated in the state Senate, although Gov. John Evans now says that it will be re-examined in the Legislature's special session, which will begin May 9.

The state water plan mandates that the water board will encourage agricultural, municipal and industrial growth along the Snake River. Kramer says, "But any future growth depends on the water, and if Idaho Power controls the water, then the water board can no longer manage that resource."

Kramer acknowledged that if subordination ultimately is approved, the board no longer will have to pursue the buying of Swan Falls dam, because future uses of the water would be assured. But unless the public changes the state water plan, via public hearings, Kramer says that the water board must seek ways of ensuring state control of the Snake River.

Just hours after the water board's action, however, opposition to the state purchasing or condemning the dam began erupting.

"The last thing I want to see is the state of Idaho getting into the power production business," said House Speaker Tom Silvers, R-Twin Falls.

"It smacks of pure socialism to me," said Silvers, who opposed subordination on the House floor. "Who in state government is going to manage the thing if we buy it?"

Americans get a double dose of good news

By DENIS G. GULINO
United Press International

WASHINGTON — In a double dose of good news for the nation's economic recovery, the government reported Friday that wholesale prices dropped 0.1 percent and factory production made a strong 1.1 percent gain in March.

The decline in wholesale prices from January to March, as measured by the government's Producer Price Index, was the steepest for any quarter in more than three decades, the Labor Department said.

At the same time, a sharp surge in factory production of construction supplies, and even furniture and carpeting, was triggered by a housing boom that lifted February's housing starts 30 percent above the level of a year earlier.

"It's just the kind of recovery we were hoping for," Martin Feldstein, the president's chief economic adviser, told reporters at the White House.

"It's continuing increase in output that leads to greater hires and declines in unemployment," he added. "We're very pleased with the way the recovery is progressing."

Economist Allen Sinai, of the private analysis firm Data Resources Inc., echoed the optimism.

Economic recovery not enjoyed by all

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Part of the Capitol became a soup kitchen Friday, and scores of poor people came in out of the rain to eat beans and chicken wings and drink coffee drawn from a silver urn.

There was, of course, politics involved. Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee, had planned a news conference outside the Capitol with 37 carts loaded with $3,550 in groceries to show what he called the hard effects of the Democratic House-approved 1984 budget.

Vander Jagt said a family of four earning $30,000 would suffer a $3,550 tax increase under the Democratic budget.

Retorting, Mitch Snyder, a leader of the Community for Creative Non-Violence, arranged to juxtapose a food kitchen next to Vander Jagt's grocery carts. It would have been impossible to photograph the grocery carts and the Capitol without including the food lines as well.

Early Friday, Vander Jagt postponed his news conference until Monday because, a spokesman said, he was snowed in back home in Michigan and it started to rain in Washington. Then House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., sent word inviting the people lining up for the food kitchen to come inside.

One person called it "Tip's soup kitchen." About 200 to 250 people of all ages filled three tables and the huge semicircular desk in a borrowed committee room and spilled over into the corridor, precariously balancing heaped paper plates and cups.

"Pass me a loaf of bread," shouted one waitress, standing next to a huge pot that held perhaps 20 gallons of bean soup.

A young beauty, La Toya Gordon, 9, who didn't have to go to school Friday, waited tables.

Most of the guests were black and several were youngsters.

An old man with a long gray beard, wearing a stocking cap and a long coat, delicately drew coffee for himself from the silver urn, one little finger stuck out.

"We felt it (Vander Jagt's news conference) was deceptive," Snyder said. "The average family doesn't earn $30,000. It was a taunt and a jeer in the face of millions of unemployed and elderly desperately afraid of their future."

"CONV is concerned with feeding America," a spokesman for Vander Jagt responded. "This (the food kitchen) is the sort of a thing we're trying to prevent."

Hansen arraigned; June 20 trial set

Accused congressman pledges to fight government charges

By JUDI HASSON
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Rep. George V. Hansen, R-Idaho, saying he intends to fight the government, pleaded innocent Friday to charges he filed false financial disclosure statements, including concealing loans from Texas billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt.

The seven-term congressman entered his plea before U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green, who released him and set a June 20 trial date.

Frank Campbell, Hansen's lawyer, said the maverick Republican intends to file motions to dismiss the indictment, raising questions about the separation of governmental powers.

He told Judge Green that Hansen will present "complex and novel" issues of law to challenge the four-count indictment charging he filed false financial disclosure statements in 1978, 1979, 1980 and 1981.

Outside the courthouse, Hansen told reporters he is innocent and will fight the charges. He said he accurately filed his financial disclosure statements each year as required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978.

"We've done things right," he said. "The Justice Department is dead wrong."

executive intrusion into the affairs of Congress just as on many occasions have tried to draw the line against government intrusion into the lives of our citizens," he said in a statement.

Hansen's statement also said the government brought charges against him under a "defective theory" of law that attempts to criminalize the financial reporting system.

"Many of my colleagues agree that in trying to apply the criminal law here beyond its legitimate bounds, the Justice Department is attempting to intimidate Congress itself," he said.

Hansen said it has "fallen to my hands to defend the constitutionally based independence of Congress from this attack by the executive (branch)."

In brief

Angry uncle burns house

KENDLETON, Texas (UPI) — Police charged a man with arson for burning down a house where rats bit his 7-week-old nephew so severely the infant had to undergo plastic surgery.

Robert Lee Williams was arrested Friday and charged with burning the one-bedroom house. Police Sgt. Clifford Thompson said Williams, 33, admitted torching the structure out of rage after health authorities condemned it.

He was mad because the house was condemned, Thompson said.

The house burned shortly after the family was evicted Friday.

"It was terrible," Thompson said. "I saw lot of rats coming out of there."

Mighty King Kong defeated

NEW YORK (UPI) — King Kong reigned over the Empire State Building for less than a day before being battered into submission early Friday by a gust of wind.

Kong's handlers have given up hope of attaching the crippled 10-story vinyl and nylon ape to the skyscraper he dominated 50 years ago, but hope to be able to display Kong — on his back — in Central Park.

Kong, who thrilled New Yorkers Thursday by finally topping the 102-story building after a week of "gorilla" warfare with a team of riggers, popped a hole in his back early Friday morning and died.

"He got hit by a hand wind and deflated," said a spokesman for the Empire State Building. "He's got a hole in his back."

She said the riggers had to wait until the winds died down before taking Kong's limp 2,500-pound form off the building's peak.

Military cargo truck explodes

QUARTZSITE, Ariz. (UPI) — A truck hauling military cargo automobiles believed included rocket fuel and possibly bombs exploded and burned Friday in an accident on Interstate 10. A passenger in the truck was killed.

Police, fearing more explosions, closed a long stretch of the highway for more than four hours while the truck burned.

DPS spokesman Allan Schmidt said there were conflicting reports aboard the flatbed.

He said the military load was thought to contain 41,000 pounds of solid rocket fuel, rocket engines — and possibly bombs or "some other type of explosives."

Officials said a few people sought medical treatment in Blythe, Calif. for minor irritation from fumes from the fire. However, there was no immediate danger from toxic fumes, officials said.

Quake shakes central Alaska

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (UPI) — A moderate earthquake shook the central Alaska Friday, cracking wall board in basements and toppling items off shelves but causing no injuries or major damage.

The seismology lab at the University of Alaska Fairbanks reported a rash of calls after the quake at 8:31 a.m. AST (1:31 p.m. EST). One resident 15 miles away reported the walls in his basement had cracked.

The lab reported the quake lasted eight minutes, but the portion felt was only about five seconds.

The Alaska Tsunami Warning Center at Palmer said the quake registered 4.8 on the Richter scale and was centered in the Badger Road area on the outskirts of Fairbanks.

"It was very impressive evidence that we had a solid recovery going," he said.

Federal Reserve Board economists said manufacturing output measured alone was up 1.3 percent, with steel, furniture and lumber contributing the most improvement. Coal, oil and gas wells were off almost 2 percent.

Overall, the March factory figures returned to the vigorous upward trend that erupted with January's 1.5 percent improvement that first convinced many economists the recession was ending. Production was up only 0.3 percent in February. Before December, it had gone up only once in 17 months.

Jerry Jasnowski, the chief economist of the National Association of Manufacturers, called the factories report "another sign of the recovery in manufacturing. The depressed durable goods industries — autos, primary metals and construction — look somewhat stronger than I expected."

The decline in wholesale prices was higher in the January/February quarter than in any three-month period since the end of 1982. Labor Department economists said Friday. It was the first quarterly decline of any size since 1976.

The recovery reached through the supply pipeline to raise raw materials prices by 0.6 percent. But the combination of bustier factories and declining business prices overall was especially favorable, economist Sinal said.

"It's a double dose of good news" that typically only happens "in the early stages of the recovery," he said. Later, however, heavier economic demand is bound to push prices up somewhat, he said.

The decline in the overall energy index of 3.2 percent, despite a 2.5 percent increase in natural gas prices, more than canceled the 0.5 percent increase in food prices led by skyrocketing vegetable prices.

"The good behavior of producer prices on the oil and energy area will really go away in about two months," Sinal said.

The March Producer Price Index was 233.4, equivalent to a cost of $2.83 for the same goods that cost business $1.00 in 1967.

Earlier in the week, the White House gave Congress a more optimistic set of economic assumptions about 1983 that foresaw a 4.7 percent annual rate of growth in the nation's broadest measure of the economy, the gross national product.

Both the price and factory figures were adjusted to eliminate the influence of routine patterns that occur at certain times of the year regardless of the shape of the economy. The Producer Price Index measures the prices of more than 3,400 commodities from food to factory equipment.

Swan Falls

O'Connor says that Idaho Power has no plans to sell the dam, and is, in fact, expanding it from 12 megawatts of capacity to 25 megawatts.

But O'Connor's main objection to selling the dam to state government is that he believes it will increase electrical rates significantly.

"Right now, we're producing power there for about one cent per kilowatt," he said. "Replacement cost (for a new power plant) right now is 5 to 7 cents per kilowatt."

And even if the state simply sells the same amount of power back to the utility, O'Connor warns that Idaho Power probably would have to purchase that power at the 7.5-cent-per-kilowatt rate now granted "low-head" and co-generation projects by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission. Swan Falls Dam does qualify as a low-head (height) facility.

"We really would encourage the state to continue with the study of Swan Falls," ordered this week by the Legislature, so that we can come to a calm resolution," O'Connor said.

"We need to all meet over a table and decide what Idaho should do with the Snake River," he said. "Do we want higher electrical rates and more farm development, or lower rates and less agricultural expansion?"

Meanwhile, the governor supported the water board's move as an alternative to subordination. But he reiterated his desire for the Legislature to pass subordination, rather than having the state enter the power business."

four the state, seeking support for his plans.

"I'm realistic enough to know they (Republicans) may not change their minds on these budgets, but if there is enough public pressure, they may be convinced to do so," he said.

"I'm realistic enough to know they (Republicans) may not change their minds on these budgets, but if there is enough public pressure, they may be convinced to do so," he said.

that would have subordinated Idaho Power's water right at Swan Falls to future upstream development for industry, cities and irrigation. Twice, it failed the House, but both times, it passed in the Senate.

Evans disagrees, however. He insists that a few key votes can be won to pass subordination during the three weeks before the special session.

"A few people were tied into their votes because of previous commitments," he said Friday. "Those commitments have now been met, and I believe we can get enough votes to properly settle this crisis."

The Swan Falls dispute evolved from a state Supreme Court ruling, which said the utility's water right at the dam is not subordinated, as it is at most other Idaho dams. And since less water flows over the dam than Idaho Power has a right to, the utility essentially has a right to all water remaining in the river.

Evans argues that the future growth of southern Idaho should not be dependent on buying water from Idaho Power. But opponents charge that subordination would be the taking of private property without compensation.

further delaying the return of some evacuees.

The new flooding will return water to about 30 homes and keep it in about 300, said St. Tammany Parish deputy Capt. Bill Dobson.

"The general effect is going to be that the areas that are flooded now will remain flooded," said Jim Belville, a NWS hydrologist and meteorologist. "The areas that the water has just receded in the past few days may get more water."

The cold that stung the southern Plains produced a 27-degree reading at Fort Smith, Ark., and a 33-degree reading at Waco, Texas — all-time records for so late April.

Crews work to rebuild damaged sections of rail and road in Spanish Fork Canyon

Mudslide blocking Zephyr

THISTLE JUNCTION, Utah (UPI) — A giant mud slide that knocked out roads and railroad tracks in Spanish Fork Canyon may block the last private long-distance train in the nation from making its historic final run.

The mud slide caused about $1 million in damage Friday by damming up the Spanish Fork River, washing out the Rio Grande Railroad tracks and U.S. Highway 89.

Denver & Rio Grande Railroad Co. spokesman Leonard Bernstein said he was unsure how long the Rio Grande Zephyr's Salt Lake City-to-Denver route will be postponed.

But he said he hopes it will be running before Amtrak takes over the service April 25. State Geologist Bruce Kalliser, however, was not as optimistic.

"The problem looks horrendous," he said at the site. "The highway probably won't be open for at least another week. I'd be surprised if the railroad line can be rebuilt so that the final train can go through next weekend."

Amtrak decided to include the Rio Grande Zephyr route in its Chicago-to-San Francisco run after the Denver-based railroad company announced it could no longer afford to keep the passenger service going.

The Zephyr has been the only privately-owned major passenger service since the mid 1970s. Its last run under private ownership -- scheduled for April 24 -- has been sold out for months, said Bernstein. He said the company has had to turn hundreds of railroad buys away for the historical ride.

But it was uncertain Friday if even the lucky patrons who got tickets will realize their prospective place in history.

"There is no way to stop the mountain from moving," said Kalliser. He was referring to the movement in Spanish Fork Canyon that has moved ground water underneath the highway and railroad tracks, raising the tracks several feet and snapping them like twigs.

"Our crews and railroad and independent contractors are now working 24 hours a day trying to dig out the stream. It will be a problem we will have to deal with for decades," Kalliser said.

"The moisture in the ground has remobilized an ancient landslide. There's nothing we can do but let nature take its course."

Three tornadoes touched down in central Florida Friday, overturning a barn and small building as a cold front lingered on the East Coast, producing as much as 1 inch of rain at New York City and Washington, D.C.

In the South, Louisiana Gov. Dave Treen asked President Reagan late Friday to declare 11 flood-ravaged south Louisiana parishes disaster areas and provide nearly $123 million in emergency aid.

Elsewhere, the southern Plains shivered from the coldest cold ever so late in the spring while the Midwest dug out from Thursday's wild snowstorm, which dumped as much as 15 inches of snow between Nebraska to northern Wisconsin.

Officials in Bloomington, Minn., worked feverishly Friday to re-inflate the Metrodome in time for the Minnesota Twins' game against the California Angels. The dome, which collapsed late Thursday night under more than 13 inches of snow, has deflated three times in the past 18 months from similar conditions.

In central Florida, heavy thunderstorms produced three tornadoes -- one just west of Orlando and two others near Daytona Beach, said Duke Nolan, a meteorologist for the National Weather Service.

One of the tornadoes near Daytona Beach lifted a small building from the ground and overturned a barn. Nolan said, adding that trees and power lines were downed near Daytona Beach in the heavy thunderstorms.

Thunderstorms also pounded Georgia Friday, but spared Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, where residents cleaned up from the region's worst flooding in history.

Swollen by recent rains, the Pearl River reversed its steady fall from last weekend's record levels and rose a few inches, but officials said it posed no major threat.

However, officials said the river should continue to rise slightly at Sildell, La., throughout the weekend, hampering cleanup efforts and

Vermonters find way to 'lick' the recession

ST. ALBANS, Vt. (UPI) — Thousands of squealing schoolchildren descended on a downtown park Friday to "lick" the recession by devouring the world's largest ice cream sundae and donating tons of canned goods to the needy.

The focus of the festive occasion was a dream come true for children and a dentist's delight; a veritable mountain of ice cream, constructed in a swimming pool and towering over the crowd.

Jim Hilton, town recreation director, said he came up with the idea to promote agriculture, kick off the 16th annual Vermont Maple Festival, take a swipe at recession-born gloom and rally community spirit.

"Dreams aren't made of something you sleep on," he told the massive crowd assembled for the feast on his sundae which Hilton said was twice as large as the one listed in the Guinness Book of World Records. "This is a dream."

Hilton's dream was 16-feet across, 12-feet high, and was concocted from 12 1/2 tons of donated ice cream and assorted sweets — including a truckload of peaches and a plane-load of pineapples.

"Oh God! Look at that," said a wide-eyed boy of about eight as he stood in a line winding every closer to the mountainous sundae.

Hilton estimated the crowd at about 15,000, and said dozens of schools closed for the day and dispatched their students in about 190 buses.

In keeping with the theme — "Recession 83: Learn to lick it!" — those who came were asked to donate a can of food to stock foodshelves for the needy around Vermont and across the country.

As the sundae shrunk, the stack of food nearby grew. Hilton said the food could exceed 25,000 pounds, some to be sent to six recession-plagued areas as Hadley, Mass., Ironwood, Mich., Albany, N.Y., and Allentown, Pa.

An estimated 1,500 people worked on the project.

The pit was lined with dry ice, with 500 three-gallon boxes of ice cream providing the foundation. Loose ice cream was shaped into a giant sundae so high workers had to finish it off from a cherry picker.

A tree grows where?

Postman Wayne Prouty of Milwaukie, Ore., enjoys a laugh as he drives the mail truck around a pothole in a city street that has had a tree planted in it. A mystery gardener placed the tree in the pothole and posted an appropriate sign: "Save the potholes, we need trees."

Congress urged to approve gold and silver coin minting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress was urged Friday to approve the minting of a gold coin to compete with South Africa's Kruggerand and the Canadian Maple Leaf, which many Americans buy as a hedge against any weakening of the dollar.

'The government would get more for silver if it is sold as coins...'

— William Griffith

Backers also urged it to authorize the minting of silver coins, including Morgan design silver dollars last minted 62 years ago.

But Walter Frankland Jr., executive vice president of the Silver Users Association, disputed that argument, saying it would merely add to the government's selling costs.

Griffith said "a vast majority" of silver producers agree the best way to dispose of the surplus government silver was through coinage.

Passage of the two bills was urged by conservative members of Congress, the mining industry, coin collectors and dealers and Treasury Department officials in testimony before the Senate Banking Committee.

But a spokesman for silver-using industries strongly opposed the second bill allowing silver now stored in the nation's strategic reserve to be sold in the form of coins.

First to testify was Rep. Ron Paul, R-Texas, who was a member of the Gold Commission when it voted 15-2 to recommend issuing gold coins weighing one troy ounce, the same weight as the South African and Canadian coins.

Paul urged approval of a bill introduced by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. to authorize minting of the "American Golden Eagle" along with a half-ounce gold coin as well.

The coins would not be subject to sales tax or to capital gains taxes if buyers later sell them at a profit. Paul, who has offered a similar bill in the House, said Americans seeking to hedge against "irresponsible monetary policy" would rather buy U.S. coins than South African or other foreign gold coins if given the chance.

Prisoners continue to hold hostages

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — A pair of gun-toting inmates holding two hostages at a maximum-security state prison renewed contact with negotiators Friday after eight hours of silence, and officials called the move "a positive sign."

But there was still no hint what the inmates, a convicted murderer and a murder suspect, wanted in exchange for release of the guard and civilian employee taken captive at Western Penitentiary Thursday in a botched escape plot.

A lockdown imposed on the facility's 1,300 other inmates shortly after the siege began prompted a minor disturbance by about 200 prisoners over their loss of commissary privileges.

Federal marshals also were sent to protect two judges involved in cases against one of the hostage-takers, Richard Henkel. Officials took the precaution because the whereabouts of Henkel's brother, Robert, were unknown.

Negotiators held an "active discession" by telephone with the inmates and the hostages twice during the afternoon, ending a breakdown in communications that began after a 7:30 a.m. conversation, officials said.

State corrections bureau spokesman Ken Robinson said initially the inmates provided "no actual demands or statements" but later added, "they are asking for things I can't go into."

He said the two again asked for food, a request refused since guard Daniel Kohut, 39, and data supervisor Kostas Mastro, 51, were taken hostage in a basement identification room at 8:30 a.m. Thursday.

"We don't have yet the thing we need to resolve it," Robinson said. "It's a positive sign that they are talking."

Robinson said the talks primarily were with the second inmate, Louis Covello, and Mastro. The hostages were unharmed, he said.

Robinson said about 200 inmates took part in a noisy protest over their loss of commissary privileges ordered as part of the lockdown and state of emergency at the prison.

President and First Lady pay IRS $292,616

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, earned almost three quarters of a million dollars last year and had to pay $292,616 in federal taxes, their tax return showed Friday.

Reagan had to write out a hefty $124,582 check to the Internal Revenue Service this week to complete the first family's tax payments.

The Reagans filed a joint return Thursday and the president, like millions of other Americans, included the personal check to cover the difference between the amount owed and the $168,034 that already had been paid.

"The family's income soared over the previous year, mainly because the Reagans sold their Pacific Palisades house in California for more than $1 million. Reagan built the home in 1956 for $25,000 and sold it for $1,000,100.

In 1981, the Reagans paid $165,305 in federal taxes on a reported gross income of $412,730. They got a $14 refund.

The Reagans' joint return for 1982, prepared by their personal lawyer Roy D. Miller of Los Angeles, listed their occupations as "U.S. President" and "First Lady."

Neither contributed the optional $1 to the presidential election campaign fund and deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan "does not feel the federal government should be in that business."

A breakdown of the Reagans' 1982 total adjusted gross income of $741,253 showed a salary of $200,000, interest income of $247,061, dividends of $4,910, capital gains — the house — of $256,978, pensions and annuities of $24,769, royalties and trusts of $3,600, and other income of $3,015.

The Reagans claimed itemized deductions of $127,519 and claimed three exemptions — one for each of themselves and one for the president's being older than 65. He is 72.

Schoessling takes over Teamsters temporarily

Chicago Sun-Times

CHICAGO — An ailing Roy L. Williams agreed Friday to immediately cease all duties as president of the Teamsters union to stay out of prison while appealing his bribery-conspiracy conviction.

Williams, 67, was hospitalized in Kansas City, Mo., as a judge here signed an order ending a two-year tenure as top Teamster. He will hold his title until the resignation takes effect Wednesday during a union board meeting in Scottsdale, Ariz. When it takes hold, Chicagoan Ray Schoessling, the union's secretary-treasurer, will become interim leader. Within 15 days, the union must pick a board member, possibly Schoessling, to fill the remaining three years of Williams' five-year term. U.S. District Court Judge Prentice

H. Marshall signed the order after lawyers for Williams and the government quibbled about its effective date.

Police arrest Turkish jetliner hijacker

ATHENS, Greece (UPI) — Police stormed the cockpit of a hijacked Turkish Airlines jetliner at Athens airport Saturday and arrested the Turkish leftist who was holding the plane's crew at knife-point, authorities said.

Police said no gunshots were fired when they overpowered the Turk, Mehmet Kalkan, who hijacked the plane Friday while it was on a domestic flight over Turkey.

No further details were immediately available on the police assault.

Earlier, Kalkan, whom police described as a member of the Turkish leftist group Dev Sol, released all 112 passengers.

He continued to hold the pilot, co-pilot and flight engineer in the cockpit at knife-point, airport officials said. Those released included six Americans and several other non-Turkish passengers.

Three armored cars, six police patrol cars and two trucks with 50 police officers surrounded the plane.

Kalkan, 25, threatened to blow up the plane with a bottle he said contained explosives if police entered the aircraft, said Menkos Koutsogorgas, an aide to Prime Minister Andreas Papandreu.

Marshall Lewis Johnston, Australian ambassador to Greece, arrived at the airport for negotiations with the hijacker after Kalkan demanded the plane be refueled for a flight to Sydney, Australia.

Police said Kalkan did not say why he wanted to be flown to Australia.

The hijacker allowed the flight engineer to get off the plane for talks to Greek authorities, then summoned him back on the plane, Koutsogorgas said.

Authorities said the Boeing 727 with 115 passengers and crew members was hijacked shortly after takeoff from Istanbul on a domestic flight to the Mediterranean city of Izmir, Turkey.

Two Turkish flight attendants who were released said the hijacker entered the cockpit wielding a knife and a bottle he said contained explosives.

Broadcast asks help for Solidarity activists

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — A radio broadcast by the Solidarity underground Friday asked labor unions around the world to send help to activists in Poland.

Radio Solidarity reported news of a series of trials of former union activists and other people accused of marital-law violations and ideological offenses. The broadcast said the Communist state's policies were violating the human rights of millions of supporters of the banned independent trade union.

"We appeal to unions worldwide for help," it said. "They are trying to put all of us on trial, and to scare all of us."

"But Solidarity lives. It will not allow itself to be divided or liquidated. It will not allow itself to be jammed."

Loud disco music obscured the signal used by the Radio Solidarity transmitter in many parts of Warsaw.

The government routinely tries to smother underground broadcasts with such signals.

The Solidarity radio message, which was advertised in advance on handbills distributed around the city, followed a report earlier in the day in the Communist Party newspaper Trybuna Ludu that police seized a high-power transmitter used for clandestine broadcasts.

Filipinos protest U.S.

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Some 300 people demonstrated outside the U.S. Embassy in Manila Friday to demand that American bases in the Philippines be dismantled.

U.S. Ambassador Michael Armacost expelled.

Police reported no arrests. The demonstration, held on a small square across from the embassy, broke up without incident about two hours after it began.

Filipino economist Alejandro Lichauco, a critic of President Ferdinand Marcos, read a statement accusing Armacost and Malin of interfering in the Philippines' domestic politics.

The statement said published comments by Armacost and Malin defending the presence of U.S. bases in the Philippines violated accepted diplomatic conduct.

Armacost recently was interviewed by a Manila daily newspaper and discussed several issues involving the controversial U.S. bases.

Malin's comments were contained in a pamphlet sent by the U.S. Information Service to local newspapers. Several Manila dailies published Malin's defense of the bases, extracted from an earlier speech to a local service club.

"No representative of a foreign government has any right to involve himself in a debate among Filipinos about what is good for us or what we should do," said the petition circulated Friday.

Organizers collected signatures from representatives of 27 opposition groups for a petition and embassy political counselor Herb Malin.

"If the present regime had a shred of self-respect left, it should immediately make two demands on the U.S.," said the petition. "First, to remove the bases immediately. Second, to recall Ambassador Armacost and political counselor Malin as persons non grates."

Armacost has been in the Philippines a little over a year. Malin is scheduled to be transferred soon, an embassy spokesman said.

Tass blasts appointment

MOSCOW (UPI) — Kenneth Adelman's appointment as chief of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency is part of a Reagan plan to paralyze the agency and accelerate the arms race, the official Tass news agency said Friday.

In the past two years the leading posts in the agency were held by former military who gained Reagan's favors by their militarist utterances, Tass said.

The latest blow to the agency was the appointment to the post of its director of Kenneth Adelman, an incompetent man of the hawks who says that any talks on arms limitation and reductions are a swindle, Tass said.

"The Reagan administration has totally paralyzed the work of a government agency whose tasks include presenting Congress with assessments of the Pentagon's military programs and drawing up recommendations for the pursuit of talks on arms limitations and reductions," it said.

The agency called Adelman an "outright hawk and opponent of measures to curb the arms race."

Tass said the White House is resolved to suppress opposition to its militarist course and that "Reagan and his entourage are after an accelerated arms race rather than seeking progress at the Soviet-American talks in Geneva."

SAILOR TALK

"Son of a gun" is another common expression, you can trace back to the high seas. Years ago, women were permitted passage aboard warships. Some engaged in amorous activity. It's overrated, particularly in those hidden places in the ships' cannon wells. Offspring resulting therefrom sometimes were of uncertain paternity. In allusion, old sailors referred to one unfortunate fellow or another as a "son of a gun."

Many a fifth son has been named Quintus, but rarely do you hear of a fifth daughter with the female equivalent name, Quinta.

Jones seeking consolidation

By MARK SHENEFELT
United Press International

state agencies, efficiency would improve and department directors would receive "better" legal advice, Jones said.

In his veto message Thursday, Evans said the consolidation measure "will neither save money nor result in improved management of legal services."

The chief executive said most of his agency directors believe consolidation would "interfere with the attorney-client relationship and strip administrators of hiring and firing authority."

It was the fourth time Evans had killed a consolidation bill. Jones' predecessor, Republican David Leroy, now the state's lieutenant governor, tried it twice and Leroy's forerunner, Wayne Kidwell, attempted the move once.

"We're going to look into an initiative," Jones said. "We believe the people would support it."

Because of a court ruling two decades ago that said state agencies should be allowed to hire and fire their own lawyers, the power of the attorney general's office has "eroded," Jones said.

Five years ago, the attorney general employed 20 deputies while agencies had 30, he said. Now, the split is 14 lawyers in Jones' office and 44 among the agencies, he said.

He said he might "go to the Supreme Court and get a different ruling" from the "distorted" decision of 20 years ago. The governor's veto, Jones said, "strikes a blow against important governmental checks and balances. Lawyers who advise state government should be free to give sound, non-biased legal advice."

Agency lawyers often alert their opinions in favor of their employer out of self interest, Jones said, claiming those attorneys would be more removed from political situations if they were under his control.

"If there is a (political) evil in the central (attorney general's) office, it is a lesser evil than in the agencies," Jones said.

He said agency lawyers take "an advocacy-type approach" in giving advice to their directors.

"If you tell him what he wants to hear, you can get him into all kinds of trouble," the Republican said.

Woman named judge

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho has its first-ever woman district court judge. Deborah Bail was sworn in Friday as a Fourth District Court judge in Ada County during ceremonies at the state Supreme Court.

Ms. Bail, 33, had been an assistant U.S. attorney in Boise since 1978. The 1974 graduate of North Western Law School in Portland, Ore., was sworn in by Chief Justice Charles R. Donaldson.

Evans to sign half-cent sales-tax hike

Law goes into effect June 1 and will provide $27 million in extra revenue

BOISE (UPI) — Democratic Gov. John Evans said Friday he will sign into law the half-cent sales-tax increase approved by the Idaho Legislature.

The increase — to 4½ cents per dollar — is expected to raise $27 million in fiscal 1984. The boost was a main ingredient in the Legislature's drive to provide sufficient revenue to set a state general-account budget of $451.6 million.

The increase is to go into effect June 1, 1983. It is set to be rescinded June 30, 1984, along with the Legislature's earlier hike of the sales tax from 3 cents to 4 cents.

Many lawmakers expect that the 1984

Legislature will face revenue problems again during budget preparations for fiscal 1985 and will be forced to delete the "sunset" clauses on the two-stage, 1½-cent increase.

On another topic, Evans said he had not yet decided whether he would sign a bill that weakens the so-called "50-50" property-tax exemption.

The bill, which received final legislative approval in the Senate Thursday, would restrict the exemption to owner-occupied residential property.

The exemption, as it was put into law by the voters last November, extended the exemption to all classifications of residential property, including rental units and vacation homes.

Under the voter-passed initiative, the market value of residential property up to 50 percent of $50,000, whichever is less, is exempt from taxation.

The Legislature earlier this year passed a measure limiting the exemption to 50 percent of $15,000, but Evans vetoed it. He said it violated the will of the people.

While the initiative as written adds an estimated $24 million in property taxes away from residences onto other types of property — such as farmland, businesses, industrial sites and utility land holdings — the "50-15" bill would have cut the shift to about $11 million. The House revision would trim the shift to about $10 million.

Council forms Swan Falls study panel

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Legislative Council named a 10-member committee of lawmakers Friday to study the Swan Falls water rights battle and other Snake River water issues.

A co-chairman of the committee said he hoped the panel would be able to "counter 'scares' stories told by those who persuaded lawmakers to scuttle a state Water Resources Department proposal to subordinate Idaho Power Co.'s water rights at Swan Falls Dam.

The Legislative Council, which governs legislative business when the Legislature is not in session, was convening the morning after the 183 regular session adjourned.

The special study panel was ordered created by the Legislature after the Senate earlier in the week torpedoed a plan to subordinate Idaho Power Co.'s water rights at Swan Falls Dam.

The committee, which was told to report back to the 1984 Legislature, consists of six House members and four senators. The co-chairmen will be Rep. Vard Chaburn, R-Albion, and Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly.

To the chagrin of Senate leaders, the committee was "packed" with House members because some Senate members of the Legislative Council were absent from the Friday meeting.

The panel includes the two chairmen, plus Sens. David Little, R-Emmett, John Peavey, D-Carey, and Terry Relly, D-Nampa, as well as Reps. Walter Little, R-New Plymouth, Eugene Stuckl, R-Paris, Dean Haagenson, R-Coeur d'Alene, Albert Johnson, D-Pocatello, and Claud Judd, D-Orofino.

After the council meeting broke up, Chaburn said utility officials and their supporters in the Legislature may have given inflated figures about potential power-rate increases resulting from subordination.

"We heard so much scare information," Chaburn said. "We need to really get to the bottom of it."

Chaburn, who heads the House Resources and Conservation Committee, said power-rate figures given by Idaho Power in connection with the subordination question "were based on the highest costs they could conceive."

The legislative study was proposed by Idaho Power and overwhelmingly approved by the House and Senate this week after senators scuttled the subordination move, which was aimed at allowing continued and expanded irrigation and culinary water use upstream from Swan Falls on the Snake River.

Noh said the study panel would branch into other issues as well, such as "threats from other states to claim Idaho's water."

The concurrent resolution mandating the study ordered the committee to examine the hydroelectric power base as it affects electricity users and agriculture and industrial developments.

Senator McClure favors Alaska hunting proposal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Idaho Sen. James McClure says he favors a proposal to expand hunting on 12 million acres of national parkland in Alaska.

McClure testified Friday in favor of legislation to reclassify the land from national park status to that of a park preserve.

"The legislation will not in any way endanger the pristine quality of the land," said McClure, chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee who co-sponsored the measure soon after it was introduced.

"It will simply permit licensed sportsmen in Alaska to hunt on land that local residents can already hunt on," he said.

McClure said regulated hunting poses no threat to the wildlife population or the environment.

"Hunting is completely compatible with the wilderness characteristics of the lands in question," he said.

Two brothers released

ST. MARIES, Idaho (UPI) — Two brothers facing jail sentences in Washington's Stevens County for assaulting a school principal have been released by Benewah County authorities because of a 1979 change in Idaho law.

Mike Jacobson, 22, and his 25-year-old brother, Frank, were released Friday after being arrested at a gunpoint in Plummer, Idaho, the night before.

Authorities said the release was required by a change in Idaho law that prohibits law enforcement officers from arresting fugitives named in out-of-state misdemeanor warrants.

Benewah County authorities reused to discuss the matter, but Stevens County Prosecutor Jerry Welle said in order to legally return the brothers to his jurisdiction, he would have had to obtain a warrant from the governor of Washington.

Welle said by then, the brothers would be long gone from Idaho and he would have to repeat the process should they be apprehended in yet another state.

The Jacobson brothers pleaded guilty last month to assaulting Neal Powell, the principal of the high school in Springdale, Wash., during a basketball game in January.

The brothers failed to appear later for sentencing after being released on their own recognizance.

Judge rules family denied rights

BOISE (UPI) — A federal judge has ruled the family of a boy from Salmon "was denied its rights" when Lemhi County commissioners refused to pay medical costs after a bottle of homemade root beer exploded in the youth's mouth.

U.S. District Court Judge Marion Callister issued the ruling recently against the Lemhi County commissioners, who had denied medical indemnity benefits to the family of Karl Forshee in the 1981 accident.

Forshee's treatment at the Intermountain Health Care hosp. in Salt Lake City cost $15,000, the judge said. The hospital had joined Forshee's family as a plaintiff in the case.

The commissioners' decision violated the family's due process rights because the board failed to show it had followed proper procedures in denying benefits, Callister said.

Callister ordered the commissioners to reconsider the family's plea for help.

The judge said procedures followed by Lemhi County and guidelines established by the Idaho Association of Counties fail to protect the due process rights of patients who claim to be indigent.

Under Idaho law, counties are required to pay medical costs for people who cannot afford them.

Callister outlined several procedures which must be followed when counties decide such cases. He said they must:

- Post public notices of benefits available under Idaho Medical Indemnity statutes;

- Establish written eligibility standards based on such factors as family size, income, assets and debt levels;

- Provide written findings of fact and conclusions of law to patients, health care institutions and others;

- Notify patients they have a right to appeal adverse rulings; and

- Include in appeals hearings the rights to counsel and presentation of evidence, as well as cross-examination of witnesses.

Religion

Religious culture helps hold lives together, study finds

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI religion writer

WASHINGTON — Ethnic, religious and racial identities still exert a profound influence on people and should play a more central role in psychological and psychiatric therapy.

That is the conclusion of a growing number of ethnic experts and psychologists who are developing an experimental group-therapy technique they call "ethnotherapy."

The basic idea of the movement is that there is a strong connection between ethnicity and emotional stability.

"Ethnicity remains a vital force in this country, a major form of group identification and an important determinant of family patterns and belief systems," according to Monica Goldgrind of the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey.

"There is increasing evidence that ethnic values and identification are retained for many generations as people in family life and play a significant role in family life and cultural development throughout the life cycle."

Until recently, however, most therapists paid little attention to either the positive or negative elements of group identification.

'Only by an acceptance of one's ethnic identity can you feel better about yourself'

—Joe Giordana

"But every group has a historical memory of prejudice that is evident in all immigrant experiences," says Joe Giordana of the Jewish Committee's Louis Caplan Center on Group Identity and Mental Health.

"This memory is such that even second- and third-generation members never quite feel comfortable with the main group. And because of their shared group memory, ethnic minority members, no matter how much they achieve, never feel that they have quite made it, or feel that they are not really deserving of it when they have."

"Only by an acceptance of one's ethnic identity can you feel better about yourself and enhance your self-esteem."

The American Jewish Committee has pioneered in the development of "ethnotherapy," a theory first developed in the early 1970s by Dr. Price Cobbs for work among black youth.

Cobbs, the co-author of the widely read 1972 study "Black Rage," argued that the toll of racism among blacks showed up in unresolved anxiety and suppressed rage.

Recently, the Jewish Committee shared in the preparation of the book "Ethnicity and Family Therapy" (Guilford Press), which looks at both the theory of ethnotherapy and its application to more than 20 ethnic groups, including American Indians, Jews, blacks, British, Irish, Italians, Germans, Puerto Ricans, Mexicans and Scandinavians.

Goldgrind, Giordana and Dr. John K. Pearce of the Cambridge Family Institute in Cambridge, Mass., edited the 600-page study.

The AJEC also has developed a videotape of an experimental group-therapy session, using the techniques of ethnotherapy with a group of young Jewish adults under the supervision of Dr. Judith Weinstein-Klein, a clinical psychologist.

The film shows dramatic group encounters concerning a host of ethnic and religiously related problems such as body image, sexual and mating patterns, feelings of oppression, powerlessness and confusion brought on by ambivalent parental and personal attitudes toward Jewishness.

Klein, in summarizing the sessions, said: "For minority group members, group pride and self-pride are inextricably bound. Struggling with and resolving conflicts in Jewish identity releases tremendous energy formerly stifled by ambivalence and disaffiliation."

She found the ethnotherapy sessions helped participants in a number of ways:

- The dominant culture's influence on shaping attitudes and feelings about oneself are exposed and re-evaluated.
- Personal problems are seen in a social-historical context that can lead to more effective problem-solving.
- The positive feelings toward members in the ethnotherapy group get generalized to include the larger ethnic group, which increases self-acceptance and also broadens the ability to empathize with other ethnic groups.

She says that for the participants of the filmed therapy sessions, "there were as many different outcomes as people in the group."

"For example, some people made new efforts to reconnect to parents. Others renewed an interest in taking Jewish partners, new appreciation for the struggles of other ethnic minorities, or a desire to start one's own Jewish family without repeating inherited negative messages."

"Some members connected their feelings to social achievement — campaigning for Soviet Jewry, starting an educational and therapeutic group for children of Holocaust survivors in the area, or founding a single-parent group."

Critical to the process is the therapist's sensitivity to ethnic differences, as well as an understanding of his own ethnicity.

According to Giordana, a therapist's own ethnic background can be a problem.

He cites his own background and clinical work as an example.

"As a third-generation Italian-American growing up in a Roman Catholic working-class family, I remember experiencing 'cultural shock' when first working with ethnic families," he says.

"The point is that ethnicity counts." Giordana says. "It counts as a positive; it counts as a way to understand the conflicts people have."

Our church news guidelines

The Times-News encourages any church in the Magic Valley area to submit information for our listing of church services, which appears each Saturday.

To ensure your information is used, follow these guidelines:

- The deadline for church news is Thursday noon.
- Typewritten or plainly printed information is best; it helps eliminate errors.
- Provide full information — complete names, times, locations, day and date. Include the name of the community — we serve many — and a phone number to call if more information is needed.
- If you have questions about church news, call 733-9331 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., and ask for Glenda May or Jon Kinney.

Roth suffered heart attack

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Tad Roth, the man considering a race against Rep. George Hansen in 1984, was dangerously ill at the time of his death, medical investigators revealed Friday.

Officials said they could not issue a final conclusion in the case. But as of Friday, all signs pointed to a heart attack as the cause of the 29-year-old Buhl man's death.

"There were several contributory factors, but the main cause was heart attack," said county Coroner Cloyce Edwards. "At this time, it just looks like natural causes. But this is just the initial determination. We'll still continue the investigation, and I don't know how long it will take."

Thursday, Edwards ruled out foul play in the death, saying that no signs of trauma or violence to the victim had been found.

Roth had grabbed local headlines recently by announcing that he was contemplating a race against Hansen. He had been in the 1984 Republican primary. In December, he had announced formation of an exploratory committee that would assess his chances against the veteran congressman.

Roth's body was found Wednesday afternoon near his Buhl home. According to Buhl police, the Buhl businessman had been reported missing the night before.

Dr. John Gray, the pathologist who conducted the autopsy, said Friday that Roth was suffering from cirrhosis of the liver, hepatitis and pneumonia.

"He's got an abundance of natural diseases that could cause his death," Gray said. "It's more than likely that the combination of these things would have likely caused his death."

No investigation into Roth's health history had been conducted as of Friday. And Gray said he will spend up to another week studying body tissues before he can determine the severity of the illnesses, particularly the pneumonia.

STEWART UDALL: Painstaking development undone

Warning shouted Udall criticizes environmental policies

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — A burglar alarm accidentally sounded an ear-piercing shriek as former Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall stepped to the microphone Friday night in Ketchum.

But the warning was no louder, nor more alarming, than Udall's outspoken comments. He took the current secretary of the Interior Department to task for the Reagan administration's environmental policies.

James Watt's efforts to sell off public lands, particularly those in national forests, are an "appalling reversal of a 60-year bipartisan trend toward conservation by the federal government," Udall said.

No previous secretary — Republican or Democrat — since the early 1900s has advocated such a policy, he told an overflow crowd of more than 150 at the Sun Valley Center Gallery in a 40-minute address.

It was the same viewpoint he had expressed earlier in the day in a Times-News interview: "The idea of just putting land up for sale and selling it to pay the national debt is a really staggering notion."

"You're going to see a whole spectrum of opposition from cattlemen to sportsmen," he had said earlier.

Udall, 63, presided over the U.S. Department of the Interior from 1961 to 1969, during the administrations of two presidents, John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson.

"During those years, eight national seashores and many national parks were designated, he said. And three major pieces of environmental legislation — the National Wilderness Act, the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act and the National Land and Water Conservation Act — became law.

An ardent conservationist, Udall, in his speech, struck at the current administration's record in a number of environmental areas.

He said the most disturbing aspect is what he calls the "national bipartisan consensus" on environmental protection. Until now — under secretaries from both political parties — "I felt they were carrying on the work we had started, and we were passing on the baton."

However, under Watt, this painstaking development is being undone, Udall said. Former secretaries had been willing to trade or give public lands to the states, with the provision that they be kept for the public as state parks or wildlife refuges.

But now, "we find the secretary of the Interior selling off tracts of even national forests, formerly considered a permanent national treasure, to private parties for financial reasons," he said.

"If they get away with this, they could carry it up to the national parks," Udall said, in his earlier interview. "You could probably have a nice geothermal-project at Yellowstone."

Besides the loss of the lands themselves from the national estate, the sales could have important, detrimental side effects, Udall said. A major one might be the effect in the West on water supplies. That issue alone should send ranchers and farmers scurrying to the side of conservationists, Udall told the sunnanned faces in the crowd.

But conservationists who are waiting for Watt to fall out of favor and be ousted by Reagan should not be counting on that, he said. Watt is likely to be a fixture.

Udall said he reads Watt as being Reagan's favorite Cabinet member.

"I think Watt is doing what Reagan would be doing if he were secretary of the Interior."

Future of WPPSS to be discussed

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

SEATTLE — Representatives from cities and utilities in Idaho that own shares in the two terminated WPPSS nuclear-power plants are meeting in Seattle today.

They will attend a conference on the possible reorganization of the Washington Public Power Supply System under federal Chapter 9 bankruptcy laws.

The purpose of the conference is informational, it will feature legal and financial experts from around the nation.

The experts will discuss the implications of a WPPSS reorganization and the impact of the WPPSS debt on the economy of the Northwest.

George Hansen, Idaho's embattled Republican congressman, and who has been an outspoken critic of the WPPSS problem, is scheduled to make a featured presentation at lunch.

The Idaho contingent is expected to include representatives from the cities of Burley, Rupert and Heyburn. These cities are served by municipally owned utilities.

Representatives of the Prairie Power, Raft River and Lost River electrical cooperatives also are expected to attend.

All of these entities own shares in the two nuclear plants, which have been terminated at a cost of $7 billion in capital and interest. A tangle of litigation currently is pending as to who ultimately must pay for the plants, which may never produce any revenue.

In a related WPPSS event, closed-door negotiations with top utility executives, being held by Washington Gov. John Spellman, collapsed Friday night. Spellman was seeking to avert a default on bond payments by WPPSS.

Spellman was attempting to work out a deal to buy time for the supply system. Most of the 88 utilities involved in the two "mothballed" WPPSS plants have refused to make bond payments on them. Without the payments, WPPSS will be unable to meet its obligations on the bonds, which were sold to build the power plants.

Cal Halvorson, the WPPSS board chairman, said that default would occur quickly if the utilities participating in the two plants do not make the payments by Monday.

Security for the closed session was so tight that Don Chisholm, the attorney for the city of Rupert, said he and several other Idaho representatives were barred from the meeting. Chisholm said they were told to leave because they were "not invited guests."

Several of the representatives for the Idaho utilities met Friday morning with lawyers from the Seattle firm of Riddell, Williams, Bullitt and Walkinshaw. The firm is representing 21 utilities in the Northwest that have similar interests in the legal tangle generated by the demise of the two nuclear-power plants.

Chisholm reported the meeting was held to discuss legal strategy.

The meeting today will feature experts in the areas of municipal bankruptcy law and public finance. They have come to Seattle from as far away as Los Angeles, Chicago and Washington, D.C.

Reorganization of WPPSS under Chapter 9 bankruptcy laws would give Idaho utilities a middle course — between paying for, or refusing to pay for, the terminated plants. Reorganization possibly would allow new terms for the repayment of the WPPSS debt to be negotiated between the 88 participants and the bondholders, the Idaho representatives believe.

The situation of some of the Idaho participants, including the cities of Burley, Rupert and Heyburn, currently rests on a legal case being reviewed by the Idaho Supreme Court. That case resulted from a suit filed by customers, who have challenged the legal authority of those cities to make payments on the WPPSS debt.

Things to do today

Rod and Custom Show

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Rod and Custom show will open at 10 a.m. today in the College of Southern Idaho Expo Center. The show, which is sponsored by the Magic Valley Early Iron car club, will feature 165 cars, boats and motorcycles, says John Mason, one of the organizers. The entries will include antique cars, customized touring motorcycles, a super-charged drag boat, and a rear-engine sprint car, he says. Visitors will get to vote on their favorite entry. The winning vehicle will receive a "people's choice" trophy Sunday afternoon. Admission will be $3.50 for adults and $1.50 for children under 12. The show will close at 10 p.m. Saturday and continue from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Sunday.

Scout-o-rama

TWIN FALLS — Ever wonder what Boy Scouts are doing these days? Those who buy tickets to attend the Scout-o-rama today from 1 to 4:30 p.m. at O'Leary Junior High School in Twin Falls will find out. This year, the event is being held to celebrate the 60th year of Scouting in the Magic Valley. Scout-o-rama will kick off with a 12:30 p.m. Boy Scout parade from the First Security Bank, off Addison Avenue, to O'Leary. The parade will be followed by the exhibits. In the past, these exhibits have covered the full range of Scouting activities. Each exhibit will be the work of a single Boy Scout unit. Wasden says he hopes there will be 60 exhibits in all. Tickets will cost $2. They may be purchased at the door. Proceeds from Scout-o-rama go to support Scouting in the Magic Valley. One-third goes to the Scouting units here, one-third to the central organization and one-third to the boys themselves, through prizes for the exhibits, he says.

Fashion Show and Home Fair

BUHL — A fashion show and home fair will be held today at the Poplewell Elementary School in Buhl, starting at 1 p.m. Sponsored by the Buhl Chamber of Commerce, the event will be geared to the "young homemaker," says chamber secretary Orpha Denney. The home fair will have booths full of "new clothes and new things for the home," she says. Local residents will model in a fashion show from 2 to 3 p.m. The show will feature both new outfits and jewelry from local stores, and clothing from areas past. In addition to the fashion show, 14 businesses, from department stores to markets, will have household goods on display. "Something for a new home or gadgets for the bride," will be exhibited, Denney says. Admission to the event will be free. Refreshments will be served and door prizes will be awarded.

Doggie vision problems

TWIN FALLS — Does your dog have trouble reading fine print? Owners of dogs with eye problems should plan to attend a slide show today in Twin Falls. It will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Twin Falls County Courthouse Annex. Dr. David Lipton of Richmond, Calif., will conduct the slide show, which is being sponsored by the Snake River Canyon Kennel Club. The slide show will show the various diseases that can affect the eyes of dogs. Lipton will explain each slide as it is shown and will discuss various eye problems and how they are detected.

NO thank you!

Apparently, some people simply don't care to receive free literature. However, there were plenty of brochures to pick from Friday afternoon, as members of the Magic Valley Fellowship of Reconciliation, the Snake River Alliance and TRIM — Tax Reform Immediately — handed out protest leaflets to persons mailing their income-tax returns at the Twin Falls post office.

Lumber yard proposal wins approval

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Backers of a proposed lumber yard near Filer have won an important recommendation from the Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission. Thursday night, zoning board members unanimously recommended changing the zoning of a 3.3-acre residential parcel to a commercial designation. That recommendation now will go to the county commissioners, who will hold another public hearing and issue a final decision. The property, owned by LeLand Alexander, is located at the southwest edge of Filer, off U.S. 30, between property owned by Ron Stokesberry and Paul Shelter.

Alexander leases the property to Gary Lyda, who operates a sawmill at the site. Last year, Lyda obtained a conditional-use permit for the operation. But that permit, issued by the Woman 'critical' after accident

HAILEY — A Hailey woman, injured earlier this week in an automobile accident, was listed in critical condition Friday at Boise's St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center.

The victim, 41-year-old Phyllis E. Wells, was being treated in the hospital's intensive care unit. A hospital spokesman said the woman is suffering from injuries to her chest and neck.

According to the Idaho State Police, the woman's car crashed into lava rocks, about a half-mile south of the ice caves, off Idaho 75, at about 4:12 p.m. Wednesday.

Wells was rushed to Blaine County Memorial Hospital, where she was treated for multiple fractures, including a broken spine and ribs.

Wells later was transferred to the Boise hospital.

Studded tires no longer legal

BOISE — The Idaho Transportation Department reminds motorists that the use of studded tires now are prohibited on Idaho's public highways. The last day for legal use was Friday. Studded tires are legal in Idaho between Sept. 30 and April 15.

A survey of surrounding states shows the following studded tire-removal dates: Washington, April 15; Oregon, April 30; Nevada, April 30; Utah, April 15; Wyoming, no restrictions; and Montana, May 31.

Burley girl injured in mishap

BURLEY — A 9-year-old girl was injured in a traffic accident Wednesday afternoon at Overland Avenue and 21st Street in Burley.

According to Burley police, William R. Babbitt, 67, of Burley, was driving south on Overland at about 4:29 p.m., when Charles Priest of Burley walked into the crosswalk and into the path of the vehicle, which ran over her foot.

The girl was treated and released at Cassia Memorial Hospital.

Valley plans kindergarten sign-up

EDEN — Kindergarten registration for the Valley School District has been set for this Wednesday, April 20, at Eden Elementary School.

Parents may register children, who will be 5 on or before Oct. 15, from 1 to 4 p.m. and from 5 to 7 p.m. Parents should bring the child's birth certificate and immunization records to the registration. An immunization clinic will be held during registration for those children that have not received their required shots.

Correction

TWIN FALLS — The Times-News in its Friday edition gave the wrong address for a man acquitted earlier this week of cocaine trafficking charges — much to the chagrin of the people whose address appeared in print.

The story concerned a jury's decision Wednesday to acquit a 31-year-old man of a 3-year-old cocaine-delivery charge. In identifying the defendant, Richard Lee Galley, the story referred to a Twin Falls address given in the court file.

It turns out that Galley since has moved to the Portland area.

Judge gives woman second try

TWIN FALLS — A Fifth District Judge on Friday gave the benefit of the doubt to a 26-year-old Twin Falls woman who turned herself in for violating her probation.

Stacie Hall had been held in the county jail since Wednesday, when she surrendered under an outstanding $3,000 bench warrant. That warrant, issued by Judge Theron Ward, was intended for use only within the state. Hall returned to Idaho on April 8.

Hall, who was serving a two-year probation for a 1982 bad-check conviction, went to North Carolina — after she had arranged to serve her probation in Texas.

Friday, Hall said her father had thrown her out of his Glendale, Texas, home.

Following the brief session, Ward decided to reinstate the woman's probation, which runs through July 1984. Ward based his decision on the fact that the woman had paid the victim restitution in full, had not violated any laws and voluntarily had returned to the state.

In other district court matters Friday, a 31-year-old Twin Falls man pleaded guilty to burglarizing a Twin Falls electronics store earlier this year.

Verniu Diaz, of 319 Main Ave. E., now faces serving up to 15 years in prison, the maximum penalty for first-degree burglary.

Diaz was charged with the Jan. 23 burglary of Precision Electronics, 681 Filer Ave.

Ward ordered a presentence investigation and continued the defendant's release without bail.

Zoning

zoning board, prohibits him from increasing the scope of the business.

Lyda plans to buy two acres of the parcel and lease the remainder in order to operate an expanded lumber yard. But, as he told the board, he cannot do that unless the zoning of the property is changed.

The requested zoning change was supported by the Filer Planning and Zoning Commission and, to a lesser extent, by Filer City Council. Council members supported a more restrictive commercial zone.

At Thursday's public hearing, several of Lyda's neighbors protested the move, complaining that the sawmill operation already has created a dust problem.

But Lyda contended that his operation is not responsible for most of the dust in the area. And some efforts had been made toward bringing the dust under control, he said. But paving his road would be unpractical and expensive unless he could develop having more advantageous zoning in the area, he said.

Zoning board members counseled the residents that they could take action against Lyda if the operation can be shown to constitute a nuisance.

Also at Thursday's meeting, the zoning board approved:

- Wayne B. Carte's request to divide 2.8 acres from a 20-acre parcel located three miles east and one mile south of Buhl. Carte said he will sell the smaller parcel and his homestead. He does not plan to build on the remaining property, he said.
- Roy L. Wright's request to divide 1.26 acres from a 280-acre parcel, located two-and-a-half miles south of U.S. 30, near the west end of Filer. Wright plans to sell the smaller parcel to his cousin, Norman Wright, who plans to build a home.

Zoning Board Chairman Herbert

Pettygrove of Hansen cast the tie-breaking vote in favor of the request.

- Jerry Staley's request for a conditional-use permit, that would allow him to operate a welding and small-engine repair shop on property that is located two miles south and a quarter-mile east of the U.S. 93-U.S. 93 intersection. Zoning board approval was required before the commercial enterprise could be operated on agriculturally zoned land.

Still unknown is whether any chemicals played a role in the death. Samples of body tissues and liquids have been forwarded to the University of Utah's medical center at Salt Lake City.

No conclusion can be drawn until these tests are completed. Test results could be a month away.

"Until we can exclude toxicology problems, we're left without it absolutely settled," Gray said.

Roth recently returned to his native Twin Falls area, following seven years in the Washington, D.C. area, where he attended college and worked as a staff member for several Republican congressional committees.

As late as last week, Roth had called a press conference, at which he indicated that a decision to run against Hansen would be made by August.

Records set at Andrus track

Eiman excels in jumping events

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

HAZELETON — Steve Eiman and Hansen set a pair of records and the Flier girls and Valley boys took team honors in the fifth annual Monte Andrus Invitational track and field meet Friday.

Eiman, a junior, stretched the triple jump record to 42-8 and the high jump mark to 6-2 1/4. Immediately leading Coach Sam Wiseman to predict the youngster might well be showing up in the long jump in the near future.

His were only two of several records and good individual performances turned in on one of the few good weather days of the spring.

On a sentimental note, Valley senior Tammy Andrus, whose father this event is named for, won her third 100-meter dash championship and put a strong anchor leg on Valley's 400-meter relay to pull the baton from third to first. She also ran second in the 200-meter dash.

Another girl sprinter of note was Kimberly's Teresa Wright to grab the long sprints and was similarly as impressive on the anchor of two relays.

In the biggest denial of a double, Susie Vincent of Flier, after running in the half and the last leg of the medley, held off Dory Whitaker of Kimberly by a scant couple of inches to win the 1,600. Whitaker was seeking that prize to go with her 3,200 cross-country.

In the boys division, Murtaugh's Roy Nebeker claimed the short sprints with the 100-meter dash being a blanket finish from first to sixth. The only certain thing in that finish was Nebeker was about a foot ahead. But the next five burst across almost

In unison, second through fifth being awarded the same times.

Valley's long sprint relay strength again was apparent, the Viking 800-meter quartet turning in a 1:37 and virtually the same alignment winning the mile in 3:40.7, both records for this meet.

In the team chases, Valley won by 18 points but Coach Forrest Fonesbeck wasn't glazing.

"It looked to me like Declo and Flier have some pretty good athletes and with the other coming in, I look for the (Canyon) conference championships to be tight," he said.

Valley's girls' 1600-relay team finished ahead of Kimberly to win second place by two points over the Bulldogs. But there was no catching Flier which showed off some long sprint strength.

First-round co-leader Mudd disqualified

Novice pro vaults into spotlight at Heritage golf

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (UPI) — Mac O'Grady, a first-year tour pro, overcame wet weather and the normally difficult Harbour Town course with a 6-under-par 65 Friday to take a one-stroke lead in the Heritage Golf Classic before second-round play was suspended due to darkness.

Heavy rain held up play for two hours Friday, and five groups remained on the par-71, 5,650-yard course when the round was halted. The second round was scheduled to be completed today.

Among those still on the course when darkness fell, the only player with a chance for the lead was Larry Mize, who had an opening-round 67 and was at 8-under for the tournament through 14 holes.

While O'Grady was putting together the low round of the tournament to go 9-under 133 and stand one shot ahead of Bob Eastwood—first-round co-leader—Jodie Mudd was attracting most of the attention. Mudd, who had a 66 Thursday, was disqualified Friday when he showed up on the fourth tee after the rain delay without his golf clubs and caddy.

It was a continuation of a run of bad luck for Mudd, who earlier this week shot a final-round 86 in the Masters after beginning the day two strokes off the lead.

"O'Grady, who spent 10 years trying to earn a tour card, had eight birdies on the course that was made easier by rain-softened greens and light winds.

"If the greens had been dry, I had six or seven putts that slipped and wouldn't have gone in," said O'Grady, 31, who has earned only $8,966 so far this year.

Eastwood took sole command of second place with a 67 that left him at 134, eight shots under par.

First-round co-leader Mark McNulty had a 69 and was at 135 along with Scott Simpson. At 136 was two-time Heritage winner Hale Irwin with a 66 and Jim Nelford after a 68. Lee Trevino, who was at the top of the leader board after the first round, fired a 2-over 72 but was still in the hunt at 138, along with Peter Jacobsen who shot a 67.

Defending champion Tom Watson soared to a 76 after an opening-round 74 and will not make the cut when all the scores are in Saturday.

O'Grady sank four putts of 15 feet or more for birdies and talked of his "long, tumultuous, tedious journey to be here at this moment."

O'Grady, who played in Europe last year, said he tried the PGA qualifying school 17 times before earning his card.

Japanese golfer enjoys best effort, leads LPGA tourney

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Japan's Ayako Okamoto equaled the best round of her American professional career Friday — a 5-under-par 67 — to take a two-stroke lead after the first round of the $150,000 Orlando Classic.

Okamoto, who owns one victory since joining the LPGA tour in 1981, led Debbie Massey, Myra Van Hoose, Kathy Postelwait and Janet Anderson, all with 68s.

Veteran Jane Blalock and JoAnne Carner led a group of players at 2-under-par 70. Defending champion Patty Sheehan bogeyed her last hole and finished at par-72.

Although an afternoon thunderstorm interrupted the play for more than an hour, all but six players were able to finish their rounds. They will complete their rounds today.

Okamoto, 32, started her round on the back nine and promptly began trimming strokes on the Cypress Creek Country Club course that had been touted as one of the most difficult on the women's tour.

She birdied her first hole and collected an eagle on the next. She made the turn at 4-under and completed her round with eight pars and a birdie.

The 5-foot-6 Tokyo native, who speaks no English, won the Arizona Classic last year. Her best finish this season has been a third at the Phoenix Classic. Okamoto's best previous tournament round was a 69 in Japan four years ago.

No player challenged Okamoto's 5-under total, although Massey stood at 4-under with two holes left in her round. But Massey bogeyed her 17th hole and finished in the four-way deadlock at 69.

Amy Alcott, the tour's leading money-winner this season, fell six strokes off the pace with a 1-over 73. Alcott needs only $11,610 to become the LPGA's—sixth—millionaire in career earnings.

The field that started with 123 players will be cut to the low 70 scores following Saturday's second round.

The 54-hole tournament is scheduled to conclude Sunday. First prize is worth $22,500.

CSI dominates double-header with Utah St., 12-2 & 12-0

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — All the College of Southern Idaho could gain from its unchallenging double-header Friday afternoon against Utah State was points on its batting average and a more impressive winning percentage.

While few of the Golden Eagles accomplished the first goal, the entire team reached the second, sweeping the Aggies' 12-0 in seven, 12-2 in five innings and 12-0 in seven.

It took the Eagles a short while to realize that the dozen or so players Utah State brought to Frontier Field couldn't offer them decent competition. In each of the first three innings of the opener, CSI scored four runs.

To the Eagles' credit, they refrained from excessive sloppiness throughout the rest of the afternoon, committing no errors and holding the Aggies scoreless during the final 10 innings while improving their overall record to 15-6.

But though CSI amassed 24 runs and 23 hits, the performances of several hitters concerned Coach Jim Walker, who realized that the Eagles' offense came from relatively few sources.

Utah State's pitchers weren't exactly flamethrowers, but Walker felt, his hitters didn't react accordingly.

"They're not the smartest hitters," Walker said. "You get somebody who's not gonna follow it by you; but there's no adjustment in the box."

One Eagle spared from Walker's criticism was first baseman Mike Duncan, who appeared incapable of making anything less than solid contact. Duncan went five-for-five in the twinning, smacking an RBI single in each of the first three innings of the opener before adding a double and RBI triple in the second game.

The first of Duncan's singles, a sharp grounder past first base, left Walker incredulous. "By the time the first baseman got his glove down, (the ball) was already past him," Walker marveled.

Other productive Eagles included Jim Kolkas (home, double, four RBI in first game), Lynn VanFvry (three-for-three, five RBI in first game) and Jeff Shov (solo home run in nightcap).

The double-header provided the Eagles with another chance to develop their second-line pitching — CSI requested that the 10-run, five-inning

"slaughter" rule be waived in the second game so another hurler could receive work — and the results were positive.

Winner Tony Gonzales pitched a strong three-innings in the opener, striking out the first three batters he faced before finishing with five hits. Brian Osberg blanked the Aggies the final two innings. In the second game, Dave Korzen breezed through the first three innings, yielding two shutout innings apiece.

"That's our game plan — get everybody innings," Walker said. "Because if we have to depend on three or four guys going to be in the regional tourney, we're going to be in trouble."

The Eagles will try to stay out of trouble Friday when they meet Brigham Young's junior varsity in a p.m. double-header.

Tigers' Wilcox misses perfect game by one out

By United Press International

So close, and yet so far. Veteran right-hander Mill Wilcox, rebounding from his injury-riddled 1982 season, came within one out of pitching the AL's second, perfect game in the last three years Friday night, allowing only a two-out single in the ninth inning by pinch hitter Jerry Hairston in the Detroit Tigers' 6-0 victory over the White Sox at Chicago.

Wilcox, who threw a one-hitter last April 20, appeared ready to record the first no-hitter as well as the first perfect game in the league since May 5, 1981, when Cleveland's Len Barker blanked the Toronto Blue Jays. The last no-hitter in the majors was by Wilcox, who will be 33 next Wednesday, was 12-10 last year despite a series of shoulder, back and hand injuries and pitched a one-hitter on his birthday, defeating Kansas City 8-0. His best year was during the strike-short season of 1981, when he had a 3.03 ERA with a 12-9 record.

During the 1982 season, Wilcox was plagued by a sore pitching shoulder, muscle pulls and lower back pain and was placed on the 21-day disabled list from July 19 to August 13.

The crowd of 18,455 gave Wilcox a standing ovation as he walked out to the mound for the ninth inning. Wilcox got Carlton Fisk to fly out to left for the first out and then induced pinch hitter Mike Squires to ground out to first. Hairston then ended Wilcox' bid for the perfect game and the pro-White Sox crowd boomed their own player.

Garvey ties NL mark, but Padres lose

By United Press International

Steve Sax and Ken Landreaux hit consecutive doubles in the first inning to start the Los Angeles Dodgers on Diego Friday night in a game highlighted by the return of Steve Garvey to Los Angeles as a member of the Padres.

Garvey, the long-time Dodgers' first-baseman, tied the National League record of 1,117 consecutive games held by Billy Williams.

Fernando Valenzuela ran his record to 2-0 despite giving up 11 hits over 8 2/3 innings. Joe Beckwith came out for Valenzuela, who allowed two hits in the ninth, to get the final out. Ed Whitson, 0-2, gave up seven hits and five runs in his losing three-inning stint.

Although Garvey received a two-minute ovation the first time he came to bat, he failed to get a hit in four at-bats.

In the first inning, Sax led off with a double and scored on Landreaux's double with Landreaux coming home on an error.

The Dodgers added two more runs in the second. Derrell Thomas led off with a single, the first of his three hits, advanced to third on Mike Scola's double and scored on Valenzuela's groundout. Scola then scored on Dusty Baker's single. The Dodgers moved it 5-0 in the third when Greg Brock led off with a homer, his fourth of the season. Brock also scored in the seventh when he singled, stole second and came around to score on Thomas' single.

The Padres picked up a run in the first when Juan Bonilla singled with one out and scored on Sixto Lezcano's double.

In the fourth inning, the Padres added a run as Kurt Bevacqua singled, took second on Garry Templeton's single and scored on Luis Salazar's pinch single.

At Houston, Craig Reynolds singled home Phil Garner with one out in the bottom of the 10th inning to give Houston its victory and allow the Astros to avoid the worst start in modern major-league history.

Entering the contest at Houston, the Astros had lost their first nine games to the 1918 Brooklyn Dodgers, the 1919 Boston Braves and 1962 New York Mets for most losses to start a season. The all-time record for consecutive losses at the start of a season was set by Detroit in 1884.

Garner led off the inning with a single to left off loser Ray Burris, 0-1. He moved to second when Jose Cruz grounded out to short. Pitcher Alton Ashby was intentionally walked and Reynolds followed with a line-drive single to center as the Astros spoiled the return to Houston of former manager Bill Virdon, who now manages the Expos.

At St. Louis, John Stuper scattered seven hits over eight innings and drove in the first two runs of his major-league career to lead the Cardinals to their fifth straight victory and hand the Mets their fifth consecutive loss.

Reds 3, Giants 1

At San Francisco, Dan Driscoll hit a two-run home run and three Cincinnati pitchers held San Francisco to five hits as the Reds posted their triumph.

Bruce Berenyi, who allowed one hit over the first three innings, left the game because of a sore pitching arm. Rich Gale allowed four hits and the Giants' only run in going the nine innings before Tom Hume pitched the ninth to earn his second save.

Boston tops Buffalo, evens series

By United Press International

Nobody on the Boston Bruins was upset that Pete Peeters allowed three goals over a 3:42 span Friday — since the goals came during the final 7:41 of their playoff battle against the Buffalo Sabres and the Bruins had a 4-0 lead until the stroke.

Peeters stopped 37 shots in Boston's 5-3 victory that evened the teams' best-of-seven Stanley Cup play-off series at one game each. The Adams Division final shifts to Buffalo, N.Y., for Game 3 today.

Peeters, who was ineffective in Buffalo's 7-4 victory Thursday night, lost his shutout Friday on a goal by Buffalo's Phil Housley. But he set the stage early with big saves on Tony McKegney and Paul Cyr.

The Bruins scored in the game's opening minute when Barry Pederson set up Mike Krushelnyski for the first of his two goals. Krushelnyski beat Sabres goaltender Bob Savee from 15 feet out on the first shot of the game to set the tone.

Rick Middleton, Keith Crowder and Ray Bourque added goals for Boston, which scored twice in each of the first two periods for a 4-0 lead. Middleton and Pederson have at least one point in all six of Boston's playoff games. The line of Krushelnyski, Middleton and Pederson combined for nine points.

After Housley's goal, Krushelnyski scored for Boston and Buffalo's Mike Ramsey and Mike Polignio scored 58 seconds apart later in the third period.

Chicago will take a 2-0 lead in the Norris Division final series into Minnesota for Sunday's third game.

Denis Savard added two three-period goals and had two assists in the first period. Steve Larmer, Doug Crossman, Bob Murray and Tom Lysiak also scored for Chicago. Craig Hartsburg, Al MacAdam, Dino Ciccarelli and Willie Plett scored for Minnesota.

Ciccarelli's goal brought the North Stars to within 5-3 at 3:47 of the third period. But Savard came back with two quick goals, his fifth and sixth of the playoffs, to put the game out of reach.

New York Islanders 5, New York Rangers 0

At Uniondale, N.Y., Duane Sutter scored his first NHL, nat trick and Billy Smith recorded his fourth career-playoff shutout, helping the Islanders take a two-game lead. Sutter and Smith received help from Bob Bourne, The Rangers — in a switch from Game 1 — started Glen Hanlon in goal instead of Ed Mio.

Edmonton, Alberta, Jarl Kurry, Randy Gregg, and Don Jackson scored in the first period to power the Oilers. Edmonton's superior speed and surprisingly strong defensive play established a 3-1 lead in the first period as the Flames again struggled to get organized in their own zone, finishing with 26 shots against the Oilers. Wayne Gretzky went scoreless for the second straight game.

Wendell, Glenns Ferry triumph in 6-way meet

GLENN'S FERRY — Mike LaRue picked up three firsts and Randy Berry added two more to give the Wendell boys victory in a six-way track meet Friday afternoon.

In the girls division, Glenns Ferry unleashed its strength and depth to win by 82 points.

LaRue picked up both hurdles and the 100-meter dash and anchored the 400-meter mile relay. Berry locked in a tight duel with Glenns Ferry's Rick Gerhardl, winning by the width of less than a yard to spare.

Kristy Stimpson took the distances to place Glenns Ferry to its victory.
