Ruckelshaus takes control of EPA

By DONALD A. DAVIS
United Press International

WASHINGTON — William Ruckelshaus took over the controversial Environmental Protection Agency Wednesday, with marching orders from President Reagan to vigorously enforce the nation's environmental laws as "Mr. Clean."

Ruckelshaus was sworn in by Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist in a ceremony Reagan said marked a "new beginning" for the agency.

Ruckelshaus, confirmed by the Senate Feb. 2 Tuesday, succeeded Anne Burford, who resigned amid allegations that the EPA's Superfund toxic waste cleanup operations were mismanaged and politicized.

"Too much time has already been wasted in fault-finding, recrimination and innuendo," said Reagan. "Today we mark a new beginning."

Said Ruckelshaus, "Hopefully, we at EPA can regain the trust of Congress and achieve the administrative flexibility that I and others before me believe is essential if the public interest is to be served."

Reagan, smiling, stood nearby as Ruckelshaus placed his left hand on the family Bible held by his daughter, Kathy, a Princeton senior who performed the same duty 13 years ago when she was a fifth grader and her father was sworn in as the fledgling agency's first administrator.

Ruckelshaus was the EPA's first administrator when it was created in 1970 during the Nixon administration. Reagan said he "performed with dedication, integrity, and a balanced understanding of the nation's needs."

"He soon became known... as Mr. Clean," Reagan said. "Today, at a time when we are opening a new chapter in the history of this agency, I cannot imagine anyone who is more qualified or better suited to be at the helm again than 'Mr. Clean' Bill Ruckelshaus."

"Ruckelshaus '50, noted the president was governor of California in 1970 when he first held the EPA position and said Reagan at that time "provided the spur to the federal government and got the whole country moving toward coping with environmental degradation."

"Since 1970 the highlighted problems of EPA have changed, but its basic mission is the same — protect the public health and the natural environment," Ruckelshaus said.

He said Reagan has given him "the basic tools for success" and the instruction to "operate in the sunlight so all can understand and participate in EPA's policy formation and de-

House votes 413-0 to charge Lavelle with contempt

RITA LAVELLE Promises to testify

By PAUL ASCHWED
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The House voted 413-0 Wednesday to hold Rita Lavelle in contempt of Congress for refusing to testify about allegations of politicking and mismanagement in the Environmental Protection Agency's hazardous waste cleanup program.

"Ms. Lavelle's refusal to honor a duly authorized subpoena is an act of defiance to the legitimate authority of the Congress," Rep. Al Gore, D-Tenn., said of the former top EPA official. "No one person can be above the law."

The citation for Mrs. Lavelle's refusal to testify before a House subcommittee, was approved without dissent, but Rep. George Wortley, R-N.Y., voted "present." The total vote included 255 Democrats and 158 Republicans.

A Wortley spokesman said the congressman felt the citation was unnecessary and amounted to "selective prosecution" because she had testified before other panels.

Ms. Lavelle, fired as assistant EPA administrator Feb. 7 by President Reagan, was the second top agency official cited for contempt as part of congressional investigations of the Superfund toxic waste cleanup program. Anne Burford, who resigned as EPA administrator March 9, remains under a contempt citation the House voted in December.

"The citation against Ms. Lavelle will be forwarded to the Justice Department for presentation to a grand jury. Contempt of Congress is a misdemeanor punishable upon conviction by a maximum fine of up to $1,000 and as much as a year in jail.

Justice Department officials said the department would review the House action against Ms. Lavelle and decide its next step.

But a department source noted the department does not have the same conflict as when put in the position of representing Mrs. Burford as a sitting official at the same time it was asked to prosecute her. The department did not present the case against Mrs. Burford to a grand jury.

James Bierbower, Ms. Lavelle's attorney, said Ms. Lavelle would testify before the subcommittee in question.

"The decision has been made," he said. "She's going to testify."

clations."

"Ruckelshaus' wife Jill, an outspoken supporter of the Equal Rights Amendment, was at the family home in Seattle preparing for the move to Washington and did not attend the ceremony in the Executive Office Building, Reagan, an opponent of the ERA, failed last year in an attempt to have her removed from the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

Ruckelshaus was senior vice president of the Weyerhaeuser Co., of Seattle, a giant forest products firm that has come under from some environmental groups, before being nominated by Reagan for his old post.

Leda Duck, a spokesman for the Audubon Society, said the environmental community welcomes the appointment of Ruckelshaus, but will remain wary of administration policies.

"Anne Gorsuch (Burford) was not the problem and Bill Ruckelshaus is not the solution," he said. "The American people have lost faith in the EPA and it would require a change in this administration's environmental policies to restore public confidence in it."

Man beats father

In school vote

DIETRICH — Incumbent Wallace Bingham Sr., who was unopposed on the ballot, received only two votes in Tuesday's Dietrich school board election.

He was defeated by five write-in votes for his son, Wallace Bingham Jr.

"I thought it was a little stinky," the senior Bingham said Wednesday.

Bingham said he was surprised by the outcome of the election. He had not been aware of any effort to unseat him from his position as the zone 2 representative on the board.

The outcome apparently was a surprise to his son, too.

"Some people had talked to me about it, but I told them I really wasn't interested. They did it on their own. I didn't run for it."

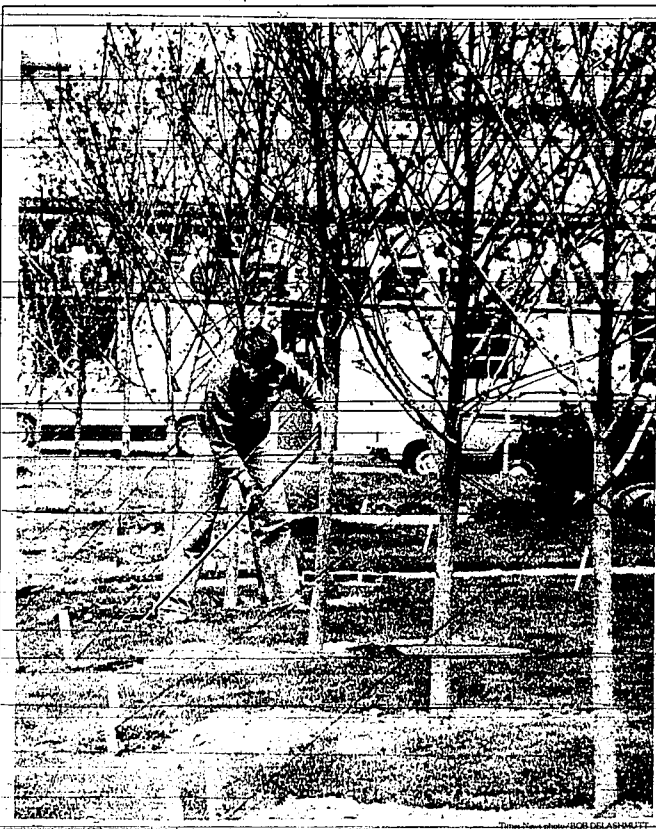

"It was a surprise to me," the younger Bingham said Wednesday, indicating that he did not have any specific objections to his father's policies on the board. He did not say how, or if, he voted in the election.

The junior Bingham, like his father, is a farmer in the Norland area. He is 31 and has three children, two of whom will be in the school system next fall.

His father served two full terms on the board and had been appointed originally to finish an uncompleted term.

"I guess the people just didn't want me in," the elder Bingham said. "But I kind of expected that if they had a complaint, they'd come to the board. Course, I spend a lot of time working on the farm here, so I didn't have time to go around asking people what they thought."

In the other Dietrich School District race, for the position representing Zone 1, Randy McCowan won election to his first public office, receiving 12 votes. There were no write-ins.

Syrians vow retribution

Won't meet with negotiators

By JACK REDDEN
United Press International

Syria Wednesday vowed to take revenge on Lebanon for signing the U.S.-mediated troop withdrawal accord with Israel and slammed the door on President Reagan's envoy Philip Habib saying it had nothing to discuss with him.

"Syria and the Lebanese National Front will not let the agreement go without retribution," the newspaper of the ruling Baath Party said in Damascus.

Other newspapers in Syria's controlled media echoed the message, warning that Lebanon would not have "a moment of stability" because of internal divisions to the accord it signed with Israel Tuesday to secure withdrawal of 30,000 Israeli troops.

In order for the withdrawal pact to take effect, Syria must agree to simultaneously pull its 40,000 troops out of Lebanon along with 10,000 Palestine Liberation Organization forces.

But the official Syrian News Agency quoted a government spokesman as rejecting any visit by Habib to Damascus for talks on a Syrian pullout.

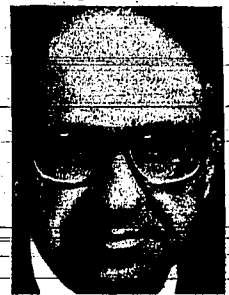

"It has been decided not to receive Habib in Syria because we have nothing to say or discuss," the Syrian spokesman said. "He is one of the American politicians most opposed to the Arabs and their cause."

Habib flew into Beirut from Rome in the evening and immediately went to the presidential palace in suburban Baabda to meet with Lebanese President Amin Gemayel.

The White House expressed "obvious regret" over the Syrian decision but deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said, "We'll keep trying."

"It's our opinion that dialogue is the best way to advance the cause of peace," he said, adding that the talks with Habib would have been "the logical first step in moving ahead the president's peace plan."

Lebanon's official National News

PHILIP HABIB Not welcome

Agency reported that Gemayel met in Beirut with envoys he had dispatched to the Gulf and North Africa to gain backing for the pact with Israel.

The agency said their mission won the understanding of other Arab countries. But it also said the leaders stressed to the Lebanese envoys that "good relations should be maintained between Lebanon and Syria."

Syria's attack on the U.S.-mediated withdrawal agreement came as a witness reported Syrian-backed leftist gunmen were kidnapping Christians traveling along the main Beirut-Damascus mountain highway.

Syrian troops closed the highway and another mountain route connecting Beirut with the Syrian-controlled Bekaa Valley Tuesday, shortly after the Lebanon-Israel accord was signed.

While the roads were reported open Wednesday, a transport company official, who requested anonymity, said Moslems were safe but Christians should take roundabout coastal routes.

Senate panel resurrects Reagan budget plan

By ROBERT MACKAY
United Press International

WASHINGTON — In a surprise move, the GOP-led Senate Budget Committee Wednesday rejected a bipartisan compromise and adopted a revised version of a low-tax, high-deficit 1984 budget backed by President Reagan.

The original White House-backed budget proposal, drafted by Senate Republican leaders, was rejected by the Senate just last week. The modified version, framed in a renewed effort to break a two-week deadlock, contains slightly lower defense spending than the original.

With the Republicans taking advantage of two Democratic absences, the committee voted 11-9 for the $849 billion budget plan, which goes to the full Senate for a vote Thursday.

The new budget blueprint calls for raising only $2.6 billion in new taxes next year, virtually the same as Reagan requested in his 1983 spending proposal. Reagan vowed Tuesday night to veto any bill raising taxes significantly.

It would increase defense spending 7.1 percent next year, compared to the 10 percent Reagan wanted, and would spend $11 billion more on non-defense domestic programs than Reagan sought. The plan projects a record deficit of about $181 billion in 1984.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the White House was "reserving judgment" on the proposal until the outcome of debate by the full Senate. But he said Reagan would "like to do better" than the 7.1 percent military increase and still opposes the additional domestic spending approved by the committee.

A similar budget plan by Senate Budget Committee Pete Domenici, R-N.M., and Senate Republican leader Howard Baker was defeated by the full Senate on a 52-48 vote last Thursday.

Although it was backed by Reagan, seven moderate Republicans who want higher taxes to shrink huge budget deficits voted against it. The only difference between it and the new, modified version is that the defeated proposal called for a defense spending increase of 7.5 percent.

The Republicans, who hold a 54-46 majority in the Senate, have been unable to pass a budget for two weeks. Conservatives want only nominal tax increases the next two years and higher defense spending, while moderates want higher tax increases and lower defense spending to achieve smaller deficits.

It learned that Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., planned to amend the Domenici budget plan on the Senate floor Thursday so that it resembles the bipartisan compromise the Budget Committee rejected Wednesday.

The Budget Committee voted 11-9 to adopt the modified Baker-Domenici plan, with only one of the 12 committee Republicans, Sen. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., — joining the Democrats to vote against it.

Two Democratic members of the committee, presidential candidates Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., and Gary Hart, D-Colo., were absent and did not vote.

Plan offered on WPPSS debt
SEATTLE (UPI) — A Seattle law firm has drafted a plan that could help solve the growing financing and legal problems facing the Washington Public Power Supply System.

The copyright paper, titled "A Formula for WPPSS," was prepared by the firm of Garvey, Schubert, Adams and Barrer. The firm reportedly has distributed copies of the paper to key Northwest energy officials, although some major figures in the WPPSS disputes say they have not received it.

"We're trying to touch as many bases as possible," A. Daniel O'Neal, a lawyer involved in the effort, said Tuesday. He said the firm is trying to determine whether the plan might have sufficient support to pave the way for congressional action needed to make it work.

The plan would involve establishment of a forum to resolve the various legal disputes over financial responsibility for the multibillion-dollar debt from terminated WPPSS plants 4 and 5.

The United States initially sought an explanation for the action because, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said: "As far as we know, they were well outside the 12-mile (territorial) limit."

"Christians are being kidnapped by leftist-militiamen on the mountain roads," he said.

Despite growing Arab support for the Israeli-Lebanese pact, which ends the 35-year state of war between them, Damascus stood firm on its bitter rejection.

"The agreement quite clearly makes Lebanon one of the most important American bases in the region, and will establish advanced warning stations and observation points from which to watch the Syrian army," said the Damascus radio commentary monitored in Beirut.

The radio said the agreement would open borders between Israel and Lebanon, turning Israel's northern neighbor into "U.S.-Israeli colony."

The commentary attacked Reagan's remarks Tuesday that Syria would not "want to be alone" in refusing to withdraw its troops from Lebanon.

"He talked about the Middle East as if it was California or the Nevada desert, as though he could make decisions for Syria," it said. "No one but Syria makes its decisions."

In Beirut, government sources said Lebanon asked Libya to recall its ambassador in retaliation for a similar measure by Libyan leader Col. Muammar Khadafi against the Lebanese ambassador in Tripoli.

Libya last week threatened to sever diplomatic ties if the pact with Israel were signed.

Senate passes immigration reform bill

By IRAR ALIEN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The Senate Wednesday overwhelmingly passed a sweeping immigration reform bill, despite conservative opposition to amnesty for millions of illegal aliens and liberal concerns about a new national identification system.

The Senate passed the bill, after defeating most substantive amendments, 76-18 eight months after it approved virtually the same legislation on an 80-9 vote.

The House Judiciary Committee has approved a similar bill, but House action is not expected until mid-summer.

If it seeks to control legal immigration by setting a cap of 425,000 immigrants a year, strengthening border enforcement and giving amnesty to illegal aliens who have lived in the United States at least three years.

The amnesty provision would give permanent resident status to anyone in the United States before Jan. 1, 1977, and temporary status to persons in the country before Jan. 1, 1980. Persons in each category later could apply through normal channels to become citizens if they learn English.

The bill also would penalize employers who hire new illegal aliens, mandate an identification system for everyone seeking employment — alien or citizen — and phase out over three years the use of illegal for temporary farm work.

The emotional nature of the subject flared during debate on the last of four days of Senate consideration — a debate managed by Sens. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., and Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

Simpson, defending the humanitarian aspects of the compromise proposal, said he grew up with Mexican "braceros" in Wyoming and then next door to a Japanese relocation camp where "American citizens were held behind barbed wire, wearing the same Boy Scout uniform I wore."

Because of the sensitivity in legislating a new lock on the doors of a country founded and populated by immigrants, Simpson at one point banned references in debate to the Statue of Liberty.

"But he often quoted the maxim: 'The first duty of a sovereign nation is to control its borders.'"

Kennedy, the Senate's archliberal, and assistant Democratic leader Alan Cranston of California, the most liberal of the 1984 presidential candidates, said they were voting against the bill on civil rights grounds.

Earlier, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., attacked the amnesty provision as a step toward "legalized chaos." "When we lose control of our borders," he said, "we jeopardize the national security of the U.S."

'Star Wars' part of arms policy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's call for developing space weapons to protect the United States against enemy missiles should be considered part of his policy of arms control, a top Pentagon official said Wednesday.

Fred Ikle, undersecretary of defense for policy, told a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee the Defense Department is making a two-pronged effort to explore the technologies for anti-satellite systems and develop a policy and strategy options.

Reagan called in March for an intensive, long-term research and development program to create a futuristic defensive system. He said nuclear missiles obsolete, but opponents have denounced the proposal as an escalation of the move toward putting weapons in space and called it a "star wars" plan.

"Our strategic planning has been restricted far too much by the idea that defensive missile systems are bad and that we can and must indefinitely remain locked into a confrontation of all-powerful offensive missile forces," Ikle said. "We owe it to the next generation to make a determined search for better alternatives."

Kenneth Adelman, the new director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, defended the administration's progress on arms control by saying it would be worse to negotiate a bad treaty than none at all.

"The president has decided in the past not to go into arms control directions that are not well thought out, that are not well kept up, that the United States does not have a good hard position on and a reasonable position," Adelman said in his first appearance before a Senate panel since his stormy confirmation hearings earlier this year.

Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., chairman of the arms control subcommittee, asked Adelman whether he would support Pressler's proposed resolution calling on the United States to speed up negotiations to ban weapons in space.

"Time is marching on, and we have private companies hesitating to put up commercial weather satellites because they don't know what will happen to them," Pressler said.

But Adelman said first the United States must solve "the major problems" of advancement in technology and verification "so that we have a good idea of what we would like to come out of this negotiation."

Mayoral election winners start campaigns

By United Press International

Democratic mayoral nominee W. Wilson Goode in Philadelphia and the two contenders forced into a June 21 runoff for the top job in Denver waited little time Wednesday in beginning their next campaigns.

Philadelphia managing director Goode is favored to become the first black mayor of the nation's fourth largest city. His primary opponent, former House Minority Leader Federico Pena and former District Attorney Dale Tooley in the city's non-partisan municipal election.

With all of the city's precincts counted Wednesday, Pena had 48,102 votes or 35.4 percent, Tooley 40,733 or 30.8 percent and McNichols 25,217 or 18.9 percent. Four other candidates split the remaining vote.

Goode, a shareholder's son, won all but 1 percent of black voters who make up 44 percent of the city's registered Democrats, to defeat ex-policeman Rizzo by nearly 50,000 votes. Goode won 34 percent of the white vote.

Rizzo, whose flamboyant political career likely drew to a finale with the primary loss, issued a statement saying he conceded defeat and had telephoned congratulations to Goode.

"It's tough to lose," he said, "but we must bow to the will of the majority. That's what this great nation is all about."

He said the hard-fought campaign, which did not have any of the racial divisiveness so apparent in the recent Chicago election, "demonstrated to the nation that Philadelphia is the city of brotherly love."

Goode echoed the remark, telling a news conference: "I'll say that in Philadelphia we can do it differently. We can put race aside."

and Detroit already have black mayors.

In Denver, 63 percent of registered voters braved a freak spring blizzard to oust Mayor William McNichols Jr. and set up a June 21 runoff between former House Minority Leader Federico Pena and former District Attorney Dale Tooley in the city's non-partisan municipal election.

With all of the city's precincts counted Wednesday, Pena had 48,102 votes or 35.4 percent, Tooley 40,733 or 30.8 percent and McNichols 25,217 or 18.9 percent. Four other candidates split the remaining vote.

Peterman murder brings some good

A year after the torture slaying of 17-year-old Christopher Peterman in the Ada County Jail, the last of the five defendants in the case has been sentenced.

The jail slaying shocked the state and the nation, as details of the brutal murder became known last spring. Peterman was being held in the jail because he failed to pay a traffic ticket.

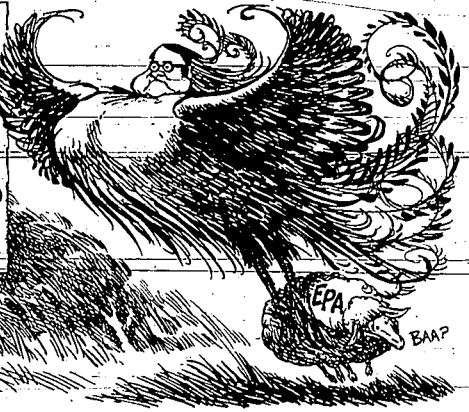

The wheels of justice have run their course. Two of the defendants pleaded guilty to second-degree murder, the third pleaded guilty to a lesser offense and the fourth was found guilty of first-degree murder. Charges were dropped against the fifth because of insufficient evidence.

The boys responsible for Peterman's murder have been sentenced to spend from seven years to life in prison. That provides for the punishment and retribution that society expects when a crime of this nature is committed.

But the most important change that has been brought about by Peterman's murder is an action the Legislature took this year. Starting July 1, it no longer will be legal in Idaho to jail persons who cannot pay traffic fines.

It's a sad commentary that it took a murder and the resulting outpouring of rage to bring this change about. But, at least, it should prevent similar tragedies in the future.

Playing right into their hands

It's time the people in Idaho were made aware of the insidious "it" being carried out in their midst by subversive elements of the Communist Party.

Parveyors of Soviet ideology have infiltrated the seat of our state government and are undermining the very pillars of our free society. The Soviets have vowed to destroy our society from within and the battle rages over "it" write.

The National Commission on Excellence in Education has stated the U.S. lags behind the Soviets in training young people to fill the technology gap. The commission has stated we need more money for schools and better pay for teachers. Public education is in a crisis not seen since the pre-Sputnik days when public outcry turned the tide for schools and the U.S. far outstripped the Soviets in the race for space.

Do you think it's an accident that in this critical time for education our own legislature is the loneliest threat to schools? I don't know which legislators are card-carrying Communists or which are Communist dupes, but consider the facts:

- The Communists have vowed to take over our country.
- The real strength of any country is its young people.

•Americans have long held world power because we love education and have always been ambitious for our children. The best way to bring down a great power is to deprive its children of the education they need to survive and prosper in today's complex world.

•Our legislators have sought to cripple schools even though teachers, students, parents, business, corporate leaders and our governor have begged them not to.

•Even when an extra $19 million was found (Why was it lost?), legislators vowed not a penny would go to schools.

I know that some legislators are hard working, loyal Americans like the rest of us. How do we glean the facts from the rhetoric? How can we discern those agents of the Red Menace around the state?

View suspiciously those who say that schools are overfunded; those who say our children should bear the brunt of economic bad times. Shun those who seek to demean the importance or quality of our educators. Cast out those who think teachers ought to identify themselves as teachers when they write letters or call legislators, as if teachers lose their rights as citizens when they seek to serve the public good. Refuse those who treat school funding as some ego-feeding chess game between themselves and the governor, in which our children are the pawns.

Real Americans love a fight, and this one is for the minds of children. Awaken, Idaho! Don't let this crafty enemy menace that which so many have died to preserve. Let not America go the way of the Roman Empire and fill some dusty footnote in global history. If we fail to educate our children, those who come after us will do the job. If these traitors in the capitol have their way, then, when schools are properly funded at last, they will teach that Lenin: not Washington, was the father of our country.

We're ruining our own schools

The other evening while watching the television show "60," I was startled to realize that we don't need to have soldiers from outer space to ruin our society. They knew they had to get rid of the scientists and mathematicians first. We don't need anyone from outer space to do this. We are doing it right now, by not acknowledging the importance of education.

The tremendously high cost of higher education is making it impossible for very bright students to go to a college that teaches high technology courses.

Our local schools need to prepare our children with more advanced mathematics and physics so they can compete with students from other areas.

To cover advanced physics and math we need more teachers. There is no way the local schools can hire these specialists with their present budgets.

Why the legislators keep their heads in the sand is hard to understand.

Ultimate way to assist Pam

The Pam Allen Fund has swelled impressively. The community should be proud. But of us—the organizers, the givers of time, money and energy as well as the organizers and bystanders—have we done what really needs to be done? A liver can not be bought.

Since the early 60's when kidney transplants became more of less routine treatment for end-stage renal disease patients, our technology has far outdistanced our human and social capacity to respond. Hemodialysis keeps most kidney transplant patients alive indefinitely until a suitable kidney is found. Sophisticated tissue typing techniques can label the genetic codes which must be compatible, allowing a donor kidney to be compared to a computerized international index of waiting patients. Special pumps keep a kidney "alive" during transcontinental flights to a lucky recipient.

Still, there have never been enough kidneys. Thousands of trauma victims die daily in the emergency rooms of our country without the thought of organ donation crossing the right minds.

So even if you have been one of those generous people who have given money for Pam, skated for Pam, danced for Pam or recycled trash for Pam, do what needs to be done for all the Pam Allens of the world. First, accept the reality that when your time on earth is up, you won't need your body or its parts. Who knows what someone else needs? What will doctors then know how to recycle? The corner of the eyes can now give some blind persons sight; cadaver skin can now save a burn victim from "drying to death"; perhaps some day transplanted joints will relieve arthritis. Mark your driver's license "organ donor." Tell your family now that you want to be an organ donor. When tragedy strikes near your family, take courage and ask a timely question: "Have you discussed organ donation with your doctor?"

Do these things for Pam, because a new liver can't be bought—it must be given.

Truck drivers' testimony boosts bill for the working guy

Two workaday truck drivers, Frank Greco of New Jersey and Jerry Bliss of Michigan, testified in March before the Senate Labor Committee.

Partly because of their sobering testimony, the committee last week voted unanimously to try again on a Labor-Management Racketeering Act. The idea is to do a little something to protect the working stiff.

The pending bill is sorely needed. Over the past 30 years, and especially since 1974, industrial pension funds have mounted into billions of dollars. Most such funds are honestly administered, usually by joint labor-management trustees, but examples abound of collusion and abuse. During the 97th Congress, the Senate twice passed a bill intended to address the problem, but the bill died in an indifferent House. Now the principal sponsors, Orrin Hatch of Utah and Sam Nunn of Georgia, are pressing for action on a schedule that will lay the House no excuse for inaction. The bill would make it a felony, punishable by up to five years in prison, for officials of either labor or management to abuse the trust reposed in them. Other provisions would increase penalties for buying and selling labor peace. Under this bill, an official convicted of corrupt conduct would be suspended from office the moment a guilty verdict were returned; he could not continue to influence pension decisions while his conviction languished on appeal.

Corruption on the waterfront, centered in the International Longshoremen's Association, sparked the interest of Senate investigators 30 years ago, but nothing much happened until the Justice Department cracked down in 1974. As a result of the Pension Fund were inviting congressional attention.

The Employees Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) in 1974 had created new oceans of pension money, and the sharks were swarming in.

Frank's name? "Archie Danoff, sir."

"Well, what you hope for is that one of the people you talk to will call up a friend and say, 'A small group of us met with Archie Danoff last night and he thinks the way we do.'"

"How do they know I think the way they do?"

"Because you told them the night before. Suppose you met with the sulfur burning coal guys. Before the meeting your political manager would brief you on where you stand on coal, so your position squares with theirs."

"Suppose I felt different than they did?"

"Then you shouldn't meet with them in the first place, because you can't waste valuable time trying to get money from people you don't agree with. You've got just so much time to raise the dough, and if you agree to meet with the coal people you have the choice of either telling them that you support their position, or at least making them think you do.

"When do I talk to the voters?"

"Much later, after you've raised the money from the political action committees. They're becoming more and more important, because they cannot only give you money from their pockets, but they can also put out the word to their supporters to send you checks on their own. PAC money is now becoming the infant formula of politics."

"After I get the money from the PAC people do I talk about the things I believe in?"

"No, you still have to wait until you do a large direct mail advertising campaign—asking for funds."

"How do I do that?"

"You take the money you raised from the fat cats and political action committees and turn it over to a direct mail house, who

As Bliss remarked in his testimony, the crooks "would have had far pending and shorter union careers" if the pending bill had been in effect at the time of their convictions.

The bill would get the bad apples out of the barrel before extended damage could be done. It is hard to understand the unwillingness of the House to act on this legislation. Lane Kirkland, president of the AFL-CIO, has endorsed it. Such Senate liberals as Kennedy of Massachusetts have urged its adoption. The only persons who would benefit by defeat of the bill are the criminal manipulators who have their hands on ERISA trusts. Millions of wage-earners, both union and non-union, would be given some small measure of protection against abuse of their money.

This is not to be a pen and ink bill, but it is a good bill. Let's get it on the books.

James J. Kilpatrick writes his column, "A Conservative View," from Washington.

Anyone can be president — if he can raise the money

A young man asked me an interesting question the other day.

"Do you think anyone born in the United States can grow up and be president of the United States?"

"Yes, son," I replied. "Providing he can raise enough money to run in the primaries."

"Do you need lots of money?"

"You need lots of money just to run for Congress. But you need millions of dollars to sever for the Rose Garden."

"How do you get the money?" he asked.

dollars for his wife. But so many guys are splitting up these days, that you can't count on the thousand from the wife."

"If each person can only give a thousand dollars, doesn't the person who wants to be president have to see a lot of people?"

"You're not meeting in hotel suites, and corporate board rooms and golf courses to get a thousand dollars. You're talking to people who will make a lot of telephone calls to other people who have a thousand dollars. And you're hoping he or she can get those people to make calls to their friends and so on."

"What does the person who makes the calls say to his friends?"

"What's your name?"

"Archie Danoff, sir."

"Well, what you hope for is that one of the people you talk to will call up a friend and say, 'A small group of us met with Archie Danoff last night and he thinks the way we do.'" specializes in political fund raising."

"What do I say in the letter?"

"You say you are the best qualified person to be president of the United States. But you can't do it right. The mailing could cost you $2 million. But with any luck you'll get back $5 million, which will then make you eligible for matching funds from the government to give your campaign underway."

"Are you sure any young person can grow up to be president of the United States?"

"Of course, Archie, as long as you have the stomach for raising the money."

Art Buchwald writes for the Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

GOV. JOHN EVANS
Endorses funding

Evans applauds public for passing overrides

IDAHO FALLS (UPI) — Gov. John Evans says the overwhelming success of property-tax override elections across Idaho this week shows state residents are committed to higher funding for education.

Evans, in Idaho Falls for a speech to the State Conference on Aging, said Wednesday the nearly universal support for tax overrides lends credence to his contention that Idahoans want more money spent on elementary and secondary schooling.

"It certainly gives us an indication of the commitment the people have to education," he said.

"That's what I tried to tell the Legislature during the special session: If we did not fund these programs from the extra general account monies we have available, school trustees would be forced to seek support from local property taxpayers," the Democratic chief executive said.

A survey of 23 override and long-term capital improvement elections in Idaho Tuesday showed only two of the issues failed.

Wildlife study set for rivers

BOISE (UPI) — The framework for a project designed to assess the overall impact of hydroelectric development on fish and wildlife in large segments of the Columbia River system should be in place next month, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission officials say.

Quentin Edson, the FERC official in charge of hydroelectric licensing, said Wednesday the project will include studies of the Salmon River Basin in Idaho and the Snohomish and Yakima River basins in Washington.

Edson addressed members of the Northwest Power Planning Council's Fish and Wildlife Committee during the first segment of a two-day council meeting in Boise.

Edson said the Salmon River Basin was chosen for the first study because 50 license applications are pending for hydro projects in the central Idaho river basin.

"This is the first time in our history that we've had 50 applications on one river at one time," he said.

Many of the proposals are for small-scale projects on the Little Salmon River near Riggins, while others are for hydro developments on the South and East forks of Salmon, county officials said.

Once the framework for the Salmon River study has been determined, the outline will be applied to similar examinations of the Snohomish and Yakima River basins, Edson said.

Evans blasts aging policy of Reagan

IDAHO FALLS (UPI) — The Reagan administration has neglected the nation's elderly people, Idaho Gov. John Evans said Wednesday to open the 14th annual State Conference on Aging.

Evans, a Democrat, complained that the Republican president's administration and its backers in Congress are attempting to turn the federal "Medicare" program into nothing more than a backstop for catastrophic illness.

He said he would use the influence of his office to attempt to persuade Congress to shoot down proposals that he said are detrimental to senior citizens.

"A national administration having so little concern for the well-being of the nation's elderly must not want us to enjoy our age," Evans told delegates.

Evans said he was concerned about trends to curb aid for senior citizens, such as federal action to raise the retirement age to 67 from 65.

"My greatest disappointment in the treatment of senior citizens is what is happening to your security, bought out by the actions of the current federal administration," the governor said.

Hansen given extension on fiscal report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, has been given an extension to June 1 on the deadline for filing his financial disclosure statement for 1982.

Similar reports were due from other congressmen earlier this week, as prescribed under federal law.

Hansen was indicted April 7 by a federal grand jury in Washington on charges he made false statements on his financial disclosure forms for four years from 1978 to 1981.

Financial disclosure statements of Reps. Les AuCoin, D-Ore., and Don Bonker, D-Wash., were delayed a day because of a Congressional paperwork overflow — eventually were released Wednesday.

AuCoin reported 1982 income and assets in the range of $45,000 to $150,000 for the sale of a summer cabin and a partnership with his wife in two businesses.

He listed $2,500 for making two speeches and reported four free trips to speak to organizations in Portland, Las Vegas and Newport, R.I.

Bonker listed 16 speech fees totaling $10,800 and no other outside income or assets.

Director: Prison money misused

BOISE (UPI) — The new director of Idaho's Corrections Department said Wednesday the agency has been wasting money, and his top priority is to determine the scope of the problem and root it out.

Operations under previous administrators were wasteful because programs were run with lump-sum appropriations, resulting in poor accountability and waste, Al Murphy said.

"The first thing I'm doing is trying to get a hold on the budget, and there are problems," Murphy said at a news conference. "They don't identify where the money goes, and it makes for waste."

"We're not breaking it down and projecting our costs, and we're wasting money," he said. "I know we can do better with the money we've got."

Murphy, who resigned as warden of Oklahoma's maximum-security prison last month to accept the Idaho job, said blame for past inefficiencies in the Corrections Department should be spread throughout the agency, not put on any individual.

"I'm going to do some trouble-shooting and then get back down to some solutions," he said.

Murphy said he doesn't expect the Legislature to appropriate large sums in the near future to pay for major expansion and renovation programs. Therefore, he said, the prison system will probably have to get by for a while with stop-gap projects.

He said his immediate objective is to improve prison conditions and security to protect the department from federal lawsuits and riots.

St. Helens now monument

By MAX GUTIERREZ
United Press International

CHEHALIS—Wash.—Officials declared the slopes and surroundings of Mt. St. Helens a national monument Wednesday, the third anniversary of the violent eruption that reshaped the peak and claimed 57 lives.

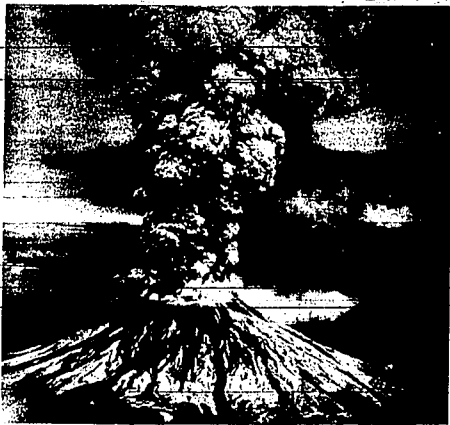

The 110,000-acre rectangular area includes the inside of the shattered peak that tumbled while a high school band played and dignitaries spoke at the simple dedication ceremony attended by about 400 people.

"People say that time heals, and I know one thing, it's not three years—it must take longer than that," said Tom Johnston, whose son, David, perished while observing the peak for the U.S. Geological Survey.

"We still miss David terribly," Johnston said of his son, who sent a last radio message to colleagues — "Vancouver! Vancouver! This is it!" — as the mountain blew its top. A U.S. Geological Survey observatory in Vancouver has been named in his honor.

Burlington Northern Inc. formally donated the summit of the volcano a gaping crater since the big blast that devastated 150 square miles — to the federal government during the dedication ceremonies.

Richard Bressler, chairman and chief executive officer of the company, symbolically completed the donation process by presenting Forest Service Chief Max Peterson with a chunk of lava from the volcano's crater. Creation of the national monument, to be managed by the Forest Service, was approved by Congress and signed into law by President Reagan last August.

Seismic activity at the volcano has been at slightly elevated levels for the past several weeks. A 71-story mound of hardened, gray lava on the crater floor still was expanding when U.S. Geological Survey crews visited the volcano Tuesday. No such visits were planned on Wednesday's anniversary.

Denver shoveling out following spring storm

By United Press International

Denver commuters struggled to work on slush-slick streets Wednesday and thousands huddled up in headless homes but warmer temperatures began to melt up to 2 feet of snow that buried parts of Colorado and Wyoming in a freak May blizzard.

"This is one of the worst storms I can remember because of the heavy ice," said Gary Dobberstine of the Rocky Mountain Regional Emergency Agency in northern Colorado, which numbered 2,500 customers in rural areas still without power.

"The ice would build up on the lines and then the high winds would knock 'em down. People seemed to bear up fairly by using fireplaces, or just going someplace else to stay."

Thousands of people in northern Colorado and southeast Wyoming were left without power — and some faced days in the cold until utility crews could fix lines snapped by the ice, snow and winds gusting to 80 mph. Another 8 inches of snow was forecast for the northern Rockies, but sunshine and low temperatures inching to the 40s and 50s melted snow on highways and in Denver and Cheyenne, Wyo.

Record-cold temperatures chilled the Eastern Seaboard from New England to the Mid-Atlantic, but Gunnison, Colo., was the nation's freshest with an early morning 19-degree reading.

Heavy rains pounded the Plains south of the blizzard's path. More than 1 1/2 inches fell in the Kansas towns of Smith Center and Burr Oak and at McAlester, Okla.

Flash flood watches were posted for Mississippi and most of central Texas.

Panel wants 'senile' banned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The word "senility" should be banned, because it discriminates against the elderly, a House Select Committee on Aging study said Wednesday.

"The study released by chairman Edward Roybal, D-Calif., said one of the reasons is the old myth that 'senility' is a natural consequence of aging."

"The word should be banned on the grounds that it is ageist, and encourages discrimination against the elderly," it said.

In opening a hearing at which the report was presented, Roybal said: "The stereotype of old age as toothless, sexless and useless" is disappearing.

"But one stereotype — that old people are senile — still lingers," he said. Roybal and committee witnesses argued that what often is described as senility is in fact the result of both curable and incurable diseases — chiefly Alzheimer's Disease, the fourth leading cause of death in the United States. It is, so far, incurable.

Dr. William Meyer, head of the Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration, said Alzheimer's, which deprives its victims of memory and the ability to care for themselves, is "one of the most frightening diseases threatening older Americans."

It is, Meyer said, a disease of "catastrophic proportions" that strikes at least one of every 20 people between the ages of 65 and 75 and two of every 10 over 80.

Rural folk face huge rate hikes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Talk will not be cheap for people living in rural areas under a Federal Communications Commission move toward deregulation in connection with the coming breakup of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. House testimony indicated Wednesday.

Rural Electrification Administrator Harold Hunter told a House subcommittee long-distance "access charges" the FCC is proposing will be highest in rural areas.

Under the proposal, he said, such charges for rural areas could be up to 50 percent higher than the national average.

While the question of higher toll rates was not addressed by the FCC, Hunter told a House government operations subcommittee AT&T plans to handle toll rates in a manner that would increase rural rates.

"Higher rural toll rates are a serious question that affects universal service in rural areas," he said.

Hunter suggested REA can do little to help. The agency, he said, helps finance the extension and improvement of telephone services in rural areas but "does not finance operating losses or operating expenses."

In his testimony to the House panel, Hunter also submitted projections made by an economic research firm for the FCC indicating how rural households might be affected by rate increases.

According to the study, the estimated 74 percent of "very poor" rural households that now have basic telephone service would drop to about 66 percent if prices increase by 50 percent and to 57 percent if prices double.

If rates go up 200 percent, the study said, the number of rural households with service would drop to an estimated 33 percent.

Gary Epstein, the head of the FCC's Common Carrier Bureau, said the commission's highly complex plan was designed "to ensure the continued availability of quality telephone service in high-cost and rural areas."

In opening the first day of hearings on the issue, subcommittee Chairman Glenn English, D-Okla., said it was intended chiefly to let panel members learn how the system works. Those "most affected" by the program will be allowed to testify later, he said.

No cover-up in drug case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite shuffling of records and conflicting testimony, there is no evidence of a cover-up in a Capitol Police investigation of congressional drug use, the House ethics committee said Wednesday.

A report by Joseph Califano, special counsel to the ethics panel, also said the Capitol Police investigation did not produce any evidence of illicit drug activity by House members.

Califano said a separate investigation of all allegations of illegal drug activity in Capitol Hill got just the 8-month probe by the congressional police force — is continuing by the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct but he does not know when it will be finished.

Another probe of charges of illicit sexual activity involving congressmen and pages is to be completed in a few weeks, Califano said.

Committee Chairman Louis Stokes, Ohio, and Califano held a news conference to release a report on allegations that a Capitol Police investigation of "illegal" drug use was cut short last summer to protect members of Congress.

"There is no evidence that implicates, in any way, any member of the House of Representatives in any investigation conducted by the Capitol Police between January, 1980 and July 1982, the period covered by this aspect of the special counsel's inquiry," Califano's report said.

However, some records suggesting the members of the Capitol Police had been implicated in drug dealing were shredded by police and there was conflicting testimony by high-ranking officers, including the chief, about whether they knew of the destruction.

Debt boosted without fuss

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House, with only a few members present, agreed by voice vote Wednesday to increase the national debt limit to nearly $1.4 trillion — more than $6,000 for every American.

The nearly $99 billion increase, to $1.4 trillion, is needed by the end of the month to assure a continuing flow of federal benefits to the elderly and press and paychecks to government workers and the armed forces.

The dispatch with which the House acted came as a surprise to leaders of 19-D parties who had forecast the usual caustic debate and possible failure on initial consideration.

Traditionally, conservative Republicans vote against debt ceiling extensions, arguing that it is a symbolic vote against big spending.

Closed session proposed on covert aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A split over whether to go into closed session delayed action by the House Foreign Affairs Committee Wednesday on a bill that would force an end to covert U.S. support for Nicaraguan rebels.

After debating the question briefly, the committee put the bill aside temporarily and moved on to other business. Chairman Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., said he did not expect an agreement before Thursday.

The committee received its top secret briefing last week from State Department and CIA officials on U.S. operations in Central America.

Committee Democrats, who generally favor the cutoff bill, said they want to use the classified information while considering it, but Republicans argued for a public session.

"I'm against covert actions in this committee," said Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., a strong supporter of President Reagan's Central America policy.

The bill before the committee came from the House Intelligence Committee, whose Democratic majority approved it on a straight 9-5 party-line vote May 3. It would set a deadline for the administration to stop support of anti-Sandinista insurgents operating in Nicaragua and Honduras. President Reagan has said U.S. aid is aimed at stopping Nicaragua from supplying arms to leftist guerrillas in El Salvador.

In place of the covert operations, the bill would provide $80 million for friendly governments in the region to use in trying to block the arms flow. "I don't know of an issue that's more important to the national security of the United States than the future of Central America," said Rep. William Broomfield of Michigan, the ranking Republican on the Foreign Affairs committee.

Q. Do many people have two stomachs?
 A. No; not many. Fewer of record, in fact, than 100 in the last 350 years.

 A. They died together, all five of them: Joseph Francis, Albert, Madison and George. On Nov. 13, 1942, their light cruiser USS Juneau, was sunk by Japanese submarine I-26 near Guadalcanal. The U.S. Navy had given them special permission to serve on the same ship. After that, it didn't give such permission anymore.

Officer Mike Young, left, Capt. Britt Goodroe and Fred Klyman examine new wrap restraint

Memphis police all ready to wrap up unruly suspects

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — A piece of sturdy vinyl that looks like a collapsed pump vent will soon help Memphis police apprehend violent mental patients, unruly drug cases and just plain mean suspects.

The Taser-Restraint Wrap System consists of an electric stun gun and a modified straight jacket.

The restraint wrap was developed over the past year by officer Mike Young and Fred Klyman, a civilian employee at the Memphis Police Training Academy.

The victim is often the victim of injury due to the effort to subdue him and take him into custody. Officers can also be hurt. This is a safe, humane and non-lethal approach.

Klyman said the device, unveiled this past week, "Basically what we've done is take existing technology and link it with a restraint wrap." Klyman said. "It's a combination old and new."

Police in Los Angeles have studied the Memphis restraint wrap and have decided to implement the system with Taser guns already in use.

The Taser, which looks like a flashlight with two 2-foot-long antennae, is already being used by 100 police departments across the country. It can immobilize a subject with a millisecond jolt of 25,000 volts of electricity.

Officers using the Memphis restraint device can move in with the heavy-duty vinyl wrap and use Velcro straps to cinch up the victim in a restraint cocoon for transport.

The new system of handling violent, unruly suspects is not meant to replace an officer's pistol. Instead, it is another option to using hand-to-hand combat or a night stick when dealing with violence-prone subjects, said Capt. Britt Goodroe, director of the training academy.

marvelled city Community Development Director Robert Smith Jr.

"They pounded and they pounded and they pounded and you can't see where they accomplished anything."

But Smith said he has no doubt the demolition contractor, Miller Construction of Windsor, will eventually triumph.

"He's been in business for 50 years and he's never walked away from a job yet," he said. "It's their own pride that's at stake now."

Smith said crews will probably try to destroy one building with explosives, then pull down the other with bulldozers.

"By the end of this week, we should know what's going to happen," he said.

Man's new job rips family apart

CASTRO VALLEY, Calif. (UPI) — Fred Bobbitt, who has been out of work since the General Motors plant at Fremont closed last year, has been rehired — 1,600 miles away from his family.

Bobbitt is one of 230 laid off at the plant to accept work at the GM plant in Oklahoma City. While he's grateful for the work, his heart — and the hearts of his wife and four teenaged children — are hurting.

Bobbitt's family remains in Castro Valley, Calif., while he spray paints door frames for 12 an hour, hoping to prove himself in the three-month probation period GM has given him.

"I'm still in a state of shock," said Dorothy Bobbitt, who accompanied her husband to Oklahoma City to help him set up housekeeping.

Mrs. Bobbitt, who took a bus home last weekend to be with her children, said she's relieved her husband has found work again, but she cries because of the forced separation and the family having to "uproot" to survive.

"Two months ago we ran out of GM's Supplementary Unemployment Benefits," she said. "We've been struggling to hang on to our house, buy our food, pay our bills. Our dealer even repossessed the braces off my daughter's teeth."

Mrs. Bobbitt said her husband is suffering from a case of history repeating itself. His father's company tried to relocate him away from his family.

"He (Bobbitt's father) was working for International Harvester, but they laid him off after 27 years on the job," she said. "They wanted to relocate him from Oakland to Detroit, move him around like a piece of furniture. But he was too sick to move."

Mrs. Bobbitt said she doesn't want the same thing to happen to her children.

"But we'll make it," she vowed.

University seeks cash through staff patents

SOUTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (UPI) — The University of Rhode Island, continually strapped for money, is turning its ideas into cash by encouraging faculty members to apply for patents on inventions created through staff research.

The first success in the year-old program came when the Barry Wright Corp., of Watertown, Mass., agreed to purchase production and sales rights to a robot "hand" invented in the Electrical Engineering Department.

For the rights to the device, which can pluck industrial parts out of a bin for transfer elsewhere, Wright paid

$2,500 up front, agreed to pay another $7,500 at the end of the first year, and 5 percent of net sales over the 17-year life of the patent.

Since the agreement is non-exclusive, the university can sell elsewhere the five-use device, an aluminum tube with a rubber vacuum cup on one end.

The university has sold rights to a second robot machine which has been patented, and has high hopes for other filings, including an anti-pollution device.

James W. Leslie, a university vice president, said the key to the program is the school's willingness to help inventors through the patent application process and to share one-third of the profits with the inventor.

Another third goes to support research in the inventor's individual college.

Soviets in scrap over stuck metal

MOSCOW (UPI) — Some 50,000 tons of scrap metal collected by schoolchildren for recycling is riding around the Soviet Union in the bottoms of rail cars that cannot be properly emptied, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda said Wednesday.

On the average, 660 pounds of metal scraps remain in each of thousands of rail cars that are built to unload automatically. But the equipment has never worked properly, the newspaper said.

The Ferrous Metals Ministry and Rail Ministry argue about whose fault it is "while metal which remains in the cars is being carried around the country," Pravda said.

Wreckers trail, 3-0, as building undented

ST. ALBANS, Vt. (UPI) — Chalk up another one for old-time workmanship.

The score in the great St. Albans demolition derby now is Building 3, Wrecking Crew 0.

The city wants to tear down the 65-year-old former Withmore grain plant to make way for a new industrial park.

But two weeks ago, the two old buildings, weighing 350,000 pounds of steel and two attempts to level them, forcing officials Tuesday to resort to a 75-foot crane and a wrecking ball.

When the dust cleared, however, the buildings were still standing and the crane operator was shaking his head in frustration.

"It doesn't have any effect on it," he said.

But Smith said he has no doubt the demolition contractor, Miller Construction of Windsor, will eventually triumph.

"He's been in business for 50 years and he's never walked away from a job yet," he said. "It's their own pride that's at stake now."

Smith said crews will probably try to destroy one building with explosives, then pull down the other with bulldozers.

"By the end of this week, we should know what's going to happen," he said.

Rare falcon seeks mate in far north

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Phineas, a rare peregrine falcon that spent the winter atop the Travelers Tower high above the Hartford skyline, apparently has intentions to level in its native arctic Canada.

The falcon showed up on a window ledge in December and was named in a contest by an employee of The Travelers Insurance Co., whose choice of Phineas beat suggestions such as E.T., Bogle and King Kong.

But Phineas has not been seen since early March, two days after the company provided a man-made nest on the 21st floor of the tower in hopes the endangered bird would make Hartford its permanent home.

Experts said the bird — they still do not know whether Phineas is male or female — probably decided to head north.

"People were talking about it all over town," said Karl Wagener, director of the Connecticut Audubon Environmental Center in Hartford.

"It helps give a better name to an endangered species. They aren't something just observed and desired for an exotic few. It's a wildlife that creates a great bit of excitement," he said.

Birdwatchers and Travelers officials say Phineas always will have a nest in Hartford and they hope the bird will return next winter.

Poland won't negotiate with Walesa

LECH WALESA
Blasted in story

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Authorities accused Lech Walesa Wednesday of allying himself with fugitives attempting to overthrow the political system and rejected his call for negotiations because of his "twisted line of conduct."

The charge came in a lengthy article in the government newspaper Rzeczpospolita and it also was carried by other dailies in abridged form.

"Walesa must be told a resolute no because his whole twisted line of conduct runs counter to the present conciliatory declarations and because he has not dissociated himself from what has allied himself with the Solidarity underground which is busy inciting street-riots," the newspaper said.

"The political extremists operating in the underground or legally are striving to change the socio-political system in Poland or even the alignment of forces in Europe to transport Poland into another alliance," Rzeczpospolita said.

It was the first official reaction to the letter leaders of the banned labor organizations — Solidarity as well as various branch unions, autonomous unions and teachers' unions — sent to Poland's Parliament after a secret meeting in Warsaw two weeks ago that was attended by Walesa.

The letter appealed for the reinstatement of the independent labor unions that were outlawed by the Parliament last October, as well as the release of political prisoners and the rehiring of workers who had been fired because of their political beliefs.

The newspaper accused the United States of supporting underground alms that were "downright adventurist and anti-national," "unreal" and could lead to "a civil war or even a conflict on a wider scale."

Rzeczpospolita also accused the U.S. administration of exploiting the name of Walesa in its "anti-Polish campaign" and dismissed the former Solidarity chiefs' call for negotiations.

"The owner of this name (Walesa) cannot be a partner of the socialist authority," the newspaper said. "He himself has crossed out the value of his name in the public life in Poland... and he already lacks credibility now."

The article said Walesa was being hypocritical by now allying himself with leaders of the branch unions — which once represented some 4.5 million members of various professions — because their unions used to compete for membership.

Alleged forger of Hitler diaries is high roller

HAMBURG, West Germany (UPI) — The suspected forger of the Hitler diaries — strutted through bars and clubs in Nazi Germany more squaring more than $600,000 of the multimillion dollar payment Stern magazine gave him on women and champagne, the magazine said Wednesday.

Stern in a report to its 1.8 million readers on how it had spent $4.33 million for "the dearest wastepaper in the world," also charged for the first time Konrad Kujaw himself probably forged the diaries he sold the magazine.

The purported diaries of German dictator Adolf Hitler have been declared fakes by the West German government.

Kujaw, 44, a Nazi relics dealer who is under investigative arrest on suspicion of fraud, was by reputation an anti-Semite, con-man and poseur, Stern said.

Stern said he often would spend $6,070 a night on German champagne for hostesses in such Stuttgart nightspots as the Sissy-Bar, the Piggalle, the Bier Bar, the Melodie and the Corso.

Stuttgart bar owners estimated in the last two years he spent between $607,280 and $810,000 in their nightspots, the magazine said.

"When Conny (Kujaw) showed up all the girls had to line up for him and he picked one out," Stern said. "He would take the woman of his choice to his luxuriously furnished shop to what he called his 'operation room.'"

Thatcher kicks off campaign

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, promising to reduce taxes, inflation and unemployment, launched her election campaign Wednesday with a sharp denunciation of the opposition Labor Party's economic policies.

Flanked by her chief advisers at a news conference to unveil the Conservative Party manifesto, Mrs. Thatcher warned Britons not to let an "irresponsible, short-sighted government into power June 9 with a policy of 'borrow, borrow, borrow; spend, spend, spend.'"

"The choice before the nation is stark: either to continue our present staid progress towards recovery, or to follow policies more extreme and more damaging than those ever put forward by any previous opposition," the prime minister wrote in the manifesto.

The manifesto blasted as "reckless and naive" Labor's plan to close U.S. bases in Britain and eliminate the nation's nuclear defense, saying it would "shatter the NATO alliance and put our safety in the greatest jeopardy."

Mrs. Thatcher has been riding high in popularity polls, but a new Gallup poll to be published Thursday showed the Conservative lead had fallen from 17.5 percent to 13 percent.

The poll of 946 voters, conducted last week for the Daily Telegraph, showed 46 percent were still behind the Tories, with 33 percent for Labor and 19 percent for the Liberal-Social Democratic Alliance.

The Conservative platform supports negotiations with the Soviets to end the war in Cambodia by both East and West but promises to begin deploying U.S. cruise missiles at the end of this year if Moscow refuses to cooperate.

The Conservatives said unemployment — currently at a record 13.3 percent — was the most intractable problem facing the world but dismissed Labor's plan to pump $7.6 million into Britain's economy to create 2.5 million jobs.

Mexico hit by drought

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — A prolonged drought in Mexico is threatening crucial crops at the start of the planting season and forcing ranchers to drive their cattle north to keep them from starving, officials said Wednesday.

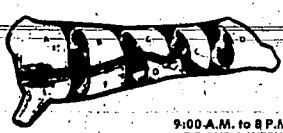

The drought began during the middle of last year's rainy season, devastating agricultural output and forcing Mexico to import food from the United States.

Agricultural experts cautioned it is still too early to predict whether Mexico's summer corn, wheat and bean crops will wither before they can be harvested.

"If it does not rain in another month, then there could be real problems," a Western agricultural expert said, explaining that the farmers plant in April and May in time for the rainy season that normally starts in May or early June.

Dr. Raul Hidalgo, a veterinarian with the Agriculture Ministry in Hermosillo, Sonora, said ranchers in the drought-stricken states of Tamaulipas, Coahuila and San Luis Potosi were driving their cattle to Sonora to save them.

"They are bringing a large part of their cattle here to fatten them in Sonora," Hidalgo said, noting the state had plentiful water and full dams because of heavy winter rains in north Mexico and California.

Buhl receives $350,000 to build reservoir

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Because of a government re-evaluation, Buhl will receive a $350,000 federal community development block grant to build a new water reservoir.

Buhl Mayor Jim Barker recently signed the contract for the grant awarded through the governor's office.

Buhl originally applied for the Housing and Urban Development grant in September 1982 along with 62 other Idaho towns seeking money for community and economic development projects.

But the west end city ended up 16th in line after the first 15 applicants were awarded a total of $6.2 million in October.

However, the government later re-considered the size of the allotment to Idaho based on the state's population, said Orlin Clements of J-U-B Engineers of Twin Falls which is overseeing the Buhl project.

The total amount of money granted to Idaho cities in October was based on 1970 census figures, Clements said. But when the state was re-evaluated according to the 1980 census, the grant funds were increased by half a million dollars which covered Buhl's request for money, he said.

Buhl will match the single-year, single-purpose grant with approximately $100,000 generated through a city water rate increase which went into effect last June.

A new municipal reservoir is needed because the existing reservoir southeast of the city is open, Clements said.

Most of the reservoirs in the area are closed, Buhl will be the only one that is not, Clements said.

The problem with having an open reservoir is that it is often contaminated by animals, Clements said. Since it is adjacent to farmland, cattle break the fence to drink the water leaving behind feces. Dead muskrats have been found in the water and waterfowl are attracted to the area, he said.

In addition, chlorination to purify the water burns off in the sunlight and loses its effectiveness, he said.

Because the reservoir has been so vulnerable to contamination, Clements said residents have been required to boil their water in several instances over the years.

The city has considered simply enclosing the existing reservoir, but it was determined in a 1977 engineering report that building a cover would be "like putting a Band-Aid over something that is really not repairable," Clements said.

Clements is currently developing a master plan for the Buhl water system through a computer terminal connected to Utah State in Logan.

The analysis should be completed within 30 days so the project can go forward in July and construction of a new reservoir may start in August, he said.

The municipal reservoir will be built above ground, either out of welded steel or concrete, and a different location is being considered, Clements said.

"It's been a long time coming and I think it's a very worthy project," he said.

City OKs store change

PAUL — The Paul City Council tabled a proposal to convert a former laundromat in the city's commercial zone into a small potato processing plant.

The proposal was made at the regular city council meeting by Tony Hart and Ed Burgel who said the operation would be quite small.

They would be processing about 20-25 pounds of potatoes into French fries and hash browns for local restaurants on a daily basis, they said.

The men told the council they would not block the alley, which is used by John's Market, or cause excess litter and waste in the area.

Council President Jean Hansen said there were two major problems with the proposal.

The first problem is the discharge of waste in the city sewer. Another problem is the location of the old laundromat which is in the city commercial zone.

Debate on whether or not the business venture could be considered industrial, which is not allowed in the commercial zone, or light manufacturing, which is allowed in the commercial zone, followed.

Ralph Walquist of the city's zoning board said a plan of that type should be located on the outskirts of the city to eliminate zoning problems. There are already plans of this type along the city border, he said.

The council agreed to table the proposal until more information could be obtained.

Walquist said he will report at the next meeting of the council after the zoning board meeting.

In other business, it was reported that an old irrigation pump, which the council has installed in a city alley, has been fulfilling its purpose. The pump serves several residents with irrigation water for their yards and gardens.

The council noted that it was pleased with the decision to have the pump installed and its continued benefit to city residents.

The council received new bids for certified public accountant services.

After comparing the fees and other bids, the council decided to renew its contract with Lavonna Cannon.

It was brought before the council that the city garbage truck needs renovation costing from $1,500 to $2,000. The council voted to find the lowest renovation cost and approved purchase of "necessary" equipment items for the truck.

A letter of resignation from Paul city law enforcement officer Jeff Saceral, was read. The resignation was approved by the council with a vote of thanks for the officer's "honorable services."

Students gather around Virginia Savage, a very popular teacher in Murtaugh MURTAUGH — The woman walking down the school hall didn't fit the expectations.

Forty-two years of teaching would earn a person the right to be a little tired and even more gray, after having to be patient for so many years.

But Virginia Savage clearly has more energy than someone many years her junior.

She is the kind of person you would expect to win the camel races in Virginia City, or to expound on the techniques of raising a champion to enter in the annual Frog-Jumping Contest in Calaveras County. Of course, she would bring home blue ribbons for her efforts.

All her years of teaching and shaping young minds — she admits it's closer to 44 than 42 — hasn't aged her at all — not her skin, her hair or her thoughts.

"I really do have to say I've loved it," she said, grinning in between sips of coffee.

— somewhere that statistics show 90 percent of the working people hate to go to work in the morning, I don't think that's true of the staff here in Murtaugh. I've always enjoyed coming to work."

"I started here as a first-grade teacher in 1939. After two years, I went to Twin to teach fifth and sixth, but came back to the first grade shortly after. I've been here ever since."

Savage currently teaches social science to Murtaugh's seventh- and eighth-graders.

"I couldn't believe 20 years ago the change in students," she said as the conversation moved on to the difference between the children of her early days and those of today.

"We've got quite a sophisticated group today," she said. "It takes quite a teacher to compete with Sesame Street. When I started you could tell a fable and they wouldn't take their eyes off you. If you really wanted to WOW them you flipped the book around and showed them the pictures.

"This is the electronic child today," Savage said, sinking back in an overstuffed chair as she thought about the right words to continue.

"He might not write as well, and we know he doesn't read as well, but to say he's not as smart — that tube does teach! They've been out in space on that tube. They go to the bottom of the ocean — he's a very sophisticated child."

"She's been a super person to work with," someone said from across the lounge. — This is LaVera Bennett.

Savage said, smiling. Word had gotten out that Savage was being interviewed, and friends had to come to pay their respects.

"And it doesn't matter if it's a wedding or a funeral," added Patty Silvers. "She always brings a nice gift or a beautiful roast. You can't do anything for her that she doesn't pay you back 10 times for."

Savage was beginning to get uncomfortable. Her hands combed the ends of her short, dark hair.

"I'll tell you something she's done that no one has ever done," said Devon Anderson from a comfortable position in the corner. With all the heads in the room turned, he stared at the pack of cigarettes in his hands and slowly drew one into his fingers.

GLENN'S FERRY — What's so great about Glenn's Ferry?

Jim Reed, the Glenn's Ferry school superintendent, says plenty. "We've got a good bunch of kids here, and that means the parents and people of Glenn's Ferry are the best. We've got an abundant water supply and live right on the Snake River with access to the Interstate and the railroad."

Janice Heath, vice president of Health Electronics, says "The people in Glenn's Ferry still believe in the work ethic. We live in a banana belt with mild winters and warm summers, and we can boast an average of 290 days of sunshine."

Mayor Dale Messery also feels Glenn's Ferry is a great place to live, and so he formally signed a proclamation making this week "Glenn's Ferry IS GREAT Week."

Dave Skyberg, president of the merchants' committee, said the "Glenn's Ferry IS Great" idea originated when KPTL radio station from Mountain Home called and offered advertising and live radio coverage as a promotional tool for the businesses of Glenn's Ferry.

"Messery then made his proclamation, expanding the concept to Glenn's Ferry — Great Week — and an essay contest was initiated in all grades of the school, titled, "Why Glenn's Ferry IS Great."

"We decided to make this proclamation over a full week in the hopes that people will stop and meditate some about what a nice place Glenn's Ferry is to live in," says Messery.

"This week would be a good time to drop by the school and see what's happening there, or visit the senior citizens, or stop by the City Hall."

Decline in enrollment costs teacher her job

By KELLY EVERITT

MURTAUGH — The special-education instructor in the Murtaugh School District has worked herself out of a job.

And her dismissal has caught the attention of the Magic Valley branch of the Idaho Education Association, which is concerned about the Reduction in Force (RIF) policy of the district.

Elizabeth Leigh received a dismissal notice last week after Superintendent Florin Hulse determined there were not enough students remaining in the program to justify her approximately $16,000 salary.

An instructor for 20 years, the last three in the Murtaugh schools, Leigh was responsible this year for one third-grade and three eighth-grade students in the district who have learning disabilities.

But both the district and Leigh have made extensive, and successful, efforts to "mainstream" the students — placing them in classes with the rest of the student population.

None of the four students suffered from severe disabilities and all four now will receive the special assistance they need from the Title I remedial math and reading program, rather than the special education program.

"They're only a little behind" the other students, Hulse said. "And because we're a small school, we can still give them a lot of individual instruction and attention."

"The district already has a Title I instructor, and with 'no kids in the (special education) program, I just couldn't see paying $16,000 for a person to do nothing," Hulse said.

Not even Leigh has objected to that move.

"If that's success (mainstreaming), that's fine." But she added, "Of course, as a special education instructor, I am concerned any time a program like that is dropped."

Leigh, who is qualified to teach a number of areas of the primary-education level, still wants to teach in the Murtaugh school district next fall.

Because of that, Terry Gilbert, the local IEA representative, has intervened in her case and requested an informal meeting with the school board asking for a review of her dismissal.

"Our basic question is the RIF policy," Gilbert said, being careful not to describe his specific objections to the district policy while negotiations are under way.

The date of the meeting between Gilbert and the school board has not been announced yet.

Farmwife unhappily discovers weight-watching

Last week I was ill, so figuring I needed the strength and could afford to pamper myself, I ate three full meals plus dessert every day and gained five pounds. You'd have thought cake and cookies had some sort of medicinal value.

"You'll lose it," I told myself. "No one stays fat on the farm." But even with all the chore gardening, cow-chasing and kid-chasing, I couldn't lose one of those unwanted pounds.

What a phenomenon.

Always though the only thing farm and fat had in common was the "a" at the front of the word. After thinking about the situation on the farm today, I realize this just wasn't so.

Most of the time we farmwives prepare meals at home. And, as everyone knows, all good cooks taste-leaf. I dutifully taste-test everything. One evening my husband strolled into the kitchen after I had taste-tested several spoonfuls of cookie dough and side-swiped the greasy bowl.

"Now that you've had your appetizer, do you suppose we could have some dinner?" he asked. I was caught sticky-fingered and guilty.

We farmwives are also famous for our homemade goodies, like homemade bread, homemade pies and home-canned fruits and jams. The smell of a farm kitchen used to be synonymous with love. Now it's synonymous with loveable — as in rotund, as in farm wife, as in me.

Diana Hooley
Country neighbors

But the farmwives aren't the only ones battling the bulge. Our farm husbands are, too.

Remember the late, great Farmer's Breakfast? Today's health gurus have translated it into a bowl of bran flakes. But there are still some farmers who believe in life the way it used to be.

They're the ones who remember mama wearing a red kerchief bandana and a bib apron serving hotcakes to her big Swedish farmboys (they're always Swedish) and saying, "Eat, eat, you need your strength for da work!"

That was when pork meant work. Now work means lick. Add a spoon, knife, two eggs over easy, hash browns and steak and you have the famous Farmer's Breakfast.

So here we are on the farm, blessed and bountiful. I think the problem is somewhere in all that bounty. For the first time in history, we're going to have to think about having too much, instead of too little.

What a phenomenon.

Jerome school sponsors fair

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

JEROME — The Jerome Junior High School building was converted into a county fair Monday night, complete with exhibits and food concessions. The event followed an achievement day program Friday in which students were honored for academic achievements.

The activities are all part of the school's effort to project "a new image."

The junior high school fair offered almost everything the annual county fair has — except livestock and the Ferris wheel. A steady crowd moved through the classrooms and hallways, which were decorated to project a genuine fair atmosphere.

The event started out to be just a book fair, but as plans became more elaborate, the thing grew into a full scale fair. Exhibits were set up to show parents and other community adults the accomplishments of the students during the school year.

Blue, red, white and yellow ribbons were attached to students' winning exhibits, giving the classrooms the appearance of the county fair following judging day.

Exhibits ranged from castles constructed of sugar cubes to a miniature Indiana Joe's — and stained-glass window hangings made of cellophane.

The home economics department looked much like the 4-H projects building at the fairgrounds where some of the same youngsters will be showing their sewing projects in the fall.

A highlight of the fair was the visit of noted children's writer, Walt Morey of Wilsonville, Ore.

Morey emphasized the importance of reading and composition.

"About 95 percent of all we learn is learned from reading. If you don't read, you don't learn and you're dumb," he warned. "I want to get children started writing stories, poems or whatever — just learning to write and enjoy it."

Free popcorn and balloons set the pace for the event Monday night. Also available were cotton candy, a potato bar, concessions selling hotdogs, candy, soft drinks and other fair foods.

On Friday night, 158 seventh and eighth graders received academic recognition. Students and teachers converted the gymnasium of the aging building into a first-class dining facility seating more than 300 students and parents. Refreshments included fresh strawberry shortcake for the entire group with punch and coffee.

Students with a 3.0, or better, grade point average received small medallions. The gathering was entertained by speaker, Earl Rumm, coordinator of school activities in Jefferson County, Colo.

A humorous talk, punctuated by magic rope tricks and a small fire, ended on a serious note as he narrated the film of the lone climber struggling to the top of the Grand Teton against almost impossible odds.

Rumm's running dialogue with the film emphasized the student's effort for achievement in education and life.

Dance slated to aid man

RICHFIELD — A benefit dance and cake auction will be held from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Friday at the Richfield American Legion Hall. The "Good Old Boys" will provide music.

Proceeds from the event will be used to help with the medical expenses for Lloyd Spencer of Richfield.

School signs contracts

HANSEN — School board officials in Hansen have issued 22 teacher contracts and accepted the resignation of one teacher.

The board released the information Monday.

Clerk Jan Annala says the district has three openings. "We need a high school math teacher, a second grade teacher because Cathy Stonebraker is moving to Canada, and a new teacher who will probably teach a first and second grade combination."

"We had an extra large kindergarten this year," Annala said.

Negotiations between teachers and the district have already begun, said Annala. The next negotiations meeting will be held Monday at 8 p.m.

"Until then, the school superintendent really can't finish the budget," she said.

Annala said the district is hoping negotiations will conclude at the next meeting because "we have to have the budget in by next month anyway."

Teacher

"I organized everything... for a 230 people."

"Now that's something I'm really proud of," said Savage, relieved that the subject had changed. She jumped up to refill her coffee cup.

"It was April 7, I believe, and it rained like the proverbial cow on the flat rock! It was Ol' Grampa Johnson's 100th birthday."

The room quieted a few seconds as Savage and Anderson relived the day 83 years before.

"I'm most proud of it because it implied the community," Savage said, looking at Anderson. "This community built a gym due to that. They had refused bond previously, but that day..." Savage said, remembering a sequence of events and feelings. "That day the community said the school was a mess, and that we needed better facilities. I'm proud of that."

"I, Gov. Drevlow was here," added Anderson, "and U.S. Rep. Ralph Harding..."

"And we brought in the Fort Hall Indians, and the Appaloosa Horse Club," said Savage laughing. "I had on an Indian costume at 5 in the morning and no one recognized me."

"We thought she was a Fort Hall Indian!" said Anderson, grinning as the smoke from his cigarette traveled toward the ceiling of the room.

"We had it in this high school," Savage excitedly went on. "We had a parade with the school kids in it — a pageant of the Oregon Trail. The Oregon Trail went right through here, you know, so we pretended the football field was the Oregon Trail."

"We had a frontier style show in the afternoon, and only antique clothing, some 100 years old, was worn. Someone made the old lard cookies... everyone used to make lard cookies, and Geraldine (Anderson) made a produce cake of Idaho. The forests, streams, towns, and produce from each section of the state... just about everything was on it."

Anderson smiled as he thought of his wife's efforts. "It was pretty good, too," he said.

"That night," Savage continued, unwilling to let the memories fade, "we had a wild dance. A lot was donated. We paid our bills on that dance."

The kids didn't have a chance on the dance floor, so they watched the adults, uninhibited, from the balcony. "That's really one of the nicest things I can remember about this community — they weren't hateful. Everyone just wanted to get together. Everyone had their place in the sun."

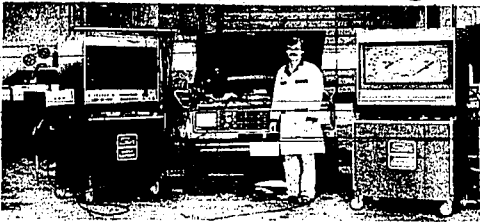

"We ought to do it again," said Anderson. "Before everyone forgets what it's like. We're having a small open house for her," he said pointing at Savage. "The 21st from 7-10 p.m., by the way."

The school bell rang.

Kindergarten set to open

JEROME—The kindergarten program is back in the Jerome School District after a year's absence, but only as a summer program.
 Jerome pre-schoolers will begin a 40-day kindergarten program June 9. Because of continuing lack of classroom space during regular school sessions, the kindergarten program will only be offered during the summer.

The children will have a holiday vacation July 4 and 5, and will resume classes July 6, continuing through Aug. 5.
 All classes will be in the Jerome Senior High School building with two sessions for each student. A choice of morning or afternoon classes will be available. Hours are 9 to 11:45 a.m. and 1 to 3:45 p.m.
 Health screening for kindergarten classes and first graders who have not already had screening tests will be May 25, 26 and 27 at the First Baptist Church in Jerome.

School officials want all youngsters entering kindergarten or first grade to have the screening for hearing, eyesight and other health needs.
 Currently 115 students are registered for the summer kindergarten classes and first graders.

Retiring Twin Falls principal goes in style

Limo takes Mr. Parker to meeting

By HARRIET GUTHRIE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Clarence Parker, the principal of Morningside Elementary, left school a little after 9 a.m. Wednesday for a meeting downtown with the other Twin Falls School District principals.

Although it was going to be his last meeting before his June retirement, he did not expect anything unusual — just a routine discussion of budgets and class sizes.

But when Parker stepped outside to get in his pickup, more than 800 students, who were "waiting" on the lawn, joined in a mass chorus of "We're going to miss you, Mr. Parker. Yes, we will."

School board member Gary Fay led the stunned Parker to a waiting limousine and sped off to the administration building.

For about 10 minutes, Parker got to enjoy the black velvet upholstery, color television and stereo. However, the mobile telephone stayed on the hook.

The stunt was the latest in a four-week-long series of farewells to the departing principal.

On different days, Parker has found a bunch of balloons, a box of chocolates and a bouquet of flowers in his office. One day, there was a miniature golf course — made of small pipes and paper — sprawled across the floor for Parker, a golf fan.

Last week, students and teachers even set a place in the cafeteria with linen, china and sterling silver for Parker. Ernie Moss, the music teacher, pulled out his violin for a lunch-time serenade.

Parker appreciates all of the attention, but he says that one or two memorials would have been enough. "This morning was overwhelming."

After 35 years in education, Parker will leave June 17 to play golf and go fishing. When he's not improving his putting or casting, Parker expects to help his wife in her philanthropic activities.

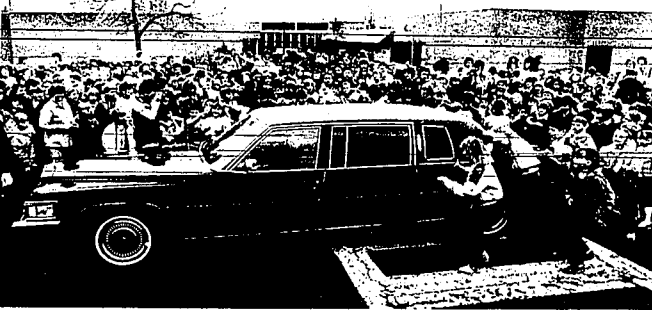

Parker joined the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce.

Concert and barbecue may get second life

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Western Days country music jamboree and barbecue may not be dead.

The event was scuttled by Western Days organizers at a City Council meeting Monday night, after a representative of the Twin Falls Ministerial Association read a letter objecting to the sale of beer at the event.

But now, a movement is afoot that may lead to its resurrection in a modified form, one that may prove acceptable to the association and City Council.

Meetings will be held today, and perhaps on Friday and Monday, to determine if this will be possible.

The jamboree and barbecue were to have been the culminating event of the five-day Western Days celebration, which is being sponsored for the first time this year by the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce.

It was to have been held on Sunday, June 5, in City Park. Seven country music bands, including the Braun Brothers, had agreed to perform.

The Twin Falls United Way was the prime sponsor. It was to have sold food and provided volunteer labor, using the event as a fundraiser and a way to "show we care about the community," said director Sandy Thomas.

And there was to have been a beer concession. The city has no ordinance against drinking alcohol in its parks — only against the use of glass containers. In fact, the city sells alcohol on Sundays at its municipal golf course, said Councilman Gale Kleinkopf.

In the original plan, the chamber was to handle the beer sales. Some of the proceeds would have paid for security men. And some would have gone into a "seed" account for next year's celebration, says Jerry Benton, one of this year's Western Days co-chairmen. But after several members of the ministerial organization voted last Friday to write a letter to City Council, objecting to the sale of beer in a city park, and after the Rev. Don Nienuhs of the Twin Falls Reformed Church read the letter at the council meeting Monday, the chamber withdrew its request to hold the event.

Without the money from the sale of beer, the chamber was unwilling to take responsibility for sponsoring the event. Its executive director, Mike Dalton, explained afterwards, "People would bring their own beer, he said, and this would provide a far less-controlled environment than if sales were regulated. The chamber also did not want to anger the churches.

This was where the situation stood until Wednesday, when members of the Western Days committee met with United Way officials.

Margo Reitz, the jamboree and barbecue organizer, said the meeting eliminated the doubts she had about the full support of the United Way for the event, which she predicted would draw at least 1,000 families.

To resurrect the event, the United Way may agree to sponsor it without the beer concession, Thomas says. This is not a certainty since it will take a vote by the organization's officers, who were out of town until today.

If they approve, City Council then will have to be convinced that the event has the support of the community and can be brought off without incident, she said. And the ministerial organization must throw in its support.

But Thomas says there was a good chance these problems can be worked out. The impetus should be that "Twin Falls needs a day to say, 'We're great,'" she says.

Reitz was even more optimistic that the event is back on track.

Agreements already have been reached for food, soda, signs and other services to be donated, she says. The Boy Scouts have agreed to handle parking, and senior citizens have agreed to bring homemade pies.

In a sense, it would be easier to go ahead with the event than to cancel all of the commitments that have been made.

"Definitely, all systems are go again," she says.

Involving Deep Creek

Buhl residents oppose hydro proposal

By HAL BERTON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Some 14 Buhl-area residents testified Wednesday against a Twin Falls Canal Co. plan to divert water from Deep Creek to a proposed Salmon Falls Creek hydroelectric plant.

The state Department of Water Resources hearing was prompted by a protest filed by Doris and Roy Couch, Buhl ranchers who own land adjacent to Deep Creek.

The backers of the Deep Creek diversion project, which includes the canal company and Co-Generation Inc., want to obtain permission from the state Department of Water Resources to divert an additional 10 cubic feet of water per second from Deep Creek. The water would travel through two irrigation laterals to the proposed hydroelectric plant.

The Couches want to use the same Deep Creek waters to power a hydroelectric project on their property, but they claim their plan would have a less adverse impact on the environment.

The Couches claim that the diversion will harm fish and wildlife, and diminish down-stream water rights. The canal company maintains that downstream water rights will be respected and all environmental regulations strictly followed.

At the hearing, Mrs. Couch, acting as her own counsel, called more than a dozen Buhl-area residents to the witness stand to testify against the proposed diversion. Some of the witnesses owned property along Deep Creek, a few owned property along Salmon Falls Creek and a few said they simply like to hunt and fish in the area.

Attorney John Reebol, representing the Twin Falls Canal Co., called only one witness to the stand, a J.U.B. engineer, who is working to develop the hydroelectric project.

The Deep Creek project already has been approved by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. And earlier this month, the developers worked out a minimum stream-flow agreement with the state Department of Fish and Game.

This agreement calls for the developers to leave a 20-cubic-foot-per-second minimum stream flow below the diversion point from Oct. 1 to Feb. 15, and a 15-cubic-foot-per-second stream flow during the rest of the year.

Write-in candidates beat two incumbents

TWIN FALLS — Two incumbents, one from District 1 and one from Jerome, who were not challenged on the ballot in Tuesday's school board elections, fell to write-in candidates — one from his own son.

Those losses bring to six the number of incumbents who were replaced by voters in Tuesday's elections in the 22 school districts in The Times-News coverage area. Races that had not been contested on the ballot were not checked by The Times-News until Wednesday.

Meanwhile, the Glenns Ferry School District continues to withhold a judgment on who won the race in Zone 3, where incumbent Janice Heath was being challenged by Bob Dehas and John Isenhardt. District officials hope to issue a decision today on several disputed ballots in that contest. They were expected to meet with legal counsel Wednesday night to discuss the matter.

In District 2 incumbent Wallace Bingham Sr. received only two votes, and was turned out of office by his son, Wallace Bingham Jr., who received five

And in Jerome, Zone 1 incumbent Alvin Chojnicky was defeated, 22-9, by write-in candidate Walter Delo Thueson.

In the Jerome School District race for the position representing Zone 5, incumbent Nancy Churchman retained 12 votes. There were no write-ins opposing her.

In other uncontested school board races not reported Wednesday by The Times-News, the vote totals were: • RICHFIELD — Zone 3 incumbent Maxine Siron received 54 votes, and Zone 1 incumbent Pete Appell received seven. There were no write-ins.

• CAMAS — Zone 1 incumbent Davenport received 19 votes, with one write-in opposing her, and newcomer Bruce Robbins garnered 43 votes against two write-ins.

• CASTLEFORD — John Wells won his first public office representing Zone 3, 19 1/2 votes. There were no write-ins.

TWIN FALLS — An anonymous telephone call Wednesday led to the arrest of four persons for Monday's armed robbery of a Hansen grocery store.

One individual, 29-year-old Jerry Traxler, whose last address is listed as Fort Lupton, Colo., has been charged with the armed robbery of Daw's IGA.

Three others — 21-year-old Robert Climer of Kimberly, 20-year-old Joby Ellis, of 128 Harrison St. in Twin Falls, and 19-year-old Wes Peterson, of Route 5, Jerome, have been charged as accessories to the crime.

All four remained in jail late Wednesday. They will be arraigned today in Fifth District Magistrate Court in Twin Falls. Bail will be set at that time.

Traxler is alleged to be the man who, at gunpoint, ordered two store employees to remove an undetermined amount of cash from a locked drawer. The robber, described as a man in his 20s, was last seen leaving the store on foot.

Later reports indicated that Traxler used a car to leave the Hansen area.

Sheriff Jim Munn declined to elaborate Wednesday on what role the three allegedly played in the robbery.

Munn said some of the stolen money has been recovered, but the exact amount had not been determined. Police got a break at about 7:30 a.m. Wednesday when a caller advised Twin Falls police that the robber could be found at 519 Third Ave. W. in Twin Falls.

Upon arriving at the address, police arrested Traxler and Climer. Police records indicate that Ellis and Peterson formally were arrested at the police station.

Munn credited officers in Twin Falls and Jerome for assisting in the arrests.

Wood River's Lisa Bernhagen sets new high jump record at last year's state track meet.

Bernhagen Wood River junior six feet high and rising

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

HAILEY—Lisa Bernhagen still thinks her high jumping is fun. That's remarkable, because most of the world thinks her high jumping is deadly serious.

"Yeah, I still enjoy it," says the tall, dark-haired Wood River High School junior, probably the most widely recognized prep track athlete in Idaho's history. "Up until this year, I really didn't work that much on it. The sprints, or at least getting ready for them, are the hard part for me. That's what takes the work."

Bernhagen will enter this weekend's Idaho High School Track and Field Championships in Boise with a 6-foot high jump to her credit. The winning mark in the Mountain West Athletic Conference (collegiate) championships earlier this month was 5-8.

"Right now, Lisa Bernhagen is probably one of the top 10 junior women's high jumpers—ever—in the United States," says Idaho State University women's track coach Ron Jensen. "As to what the possibilities are for her, well, they're unlimited."

"Right now, Bernhagen is perhaps one inch, perhaps an inch and a half shy of what will be the qualifying mark for the U.S. Olympic trials in 1984. There are four or five women with better high jump marks in the United States this year, but all of them are older than Lisa."

"It's hard to tell how good she can be," says her high school coach, John Hopkins. "She's getting stronger, and I think I'm getting to be a better coach. The most important factor is that the Idaho Olympic Committee is providing some support so she can get some better training and competition. Basically by the end of the summer she should be a 6-1 high jumper, and a year from June maybe she'll have the opportunity to go to the Olympic trials."

Bernhagen, a low-keyed straight-A student who prefers volleyball to track, got the attention of the general public when, as a rail-thin youngster, she sailed over the crossbar at 5-8 then 5-8. Last year, as a sophomore, she high jumped 5-10 1/2 to win the title at state, as well as the open 200- and 400-meter runs. She finished second in the 100 by one-tenth of a second.

Going into this year's state meet, Bernhagen is the favorite in the 200- and 400, and has the best qualifying time in the 100. But more importantly, she has broken the 6-foot barrier, a long-elusive goal.

"Lisa's success is a combination of a lot of things," says Hopkins. "She's a 4.0 (grade point average) student, which certainly helps, and she's very competitive. I remember when she was in junior high we went to a meet down in Twin Falls. On her first jump her foot slipped—she was jumping in flats then, she didn't have jumping spikes—and the second time she slipped again. The last time she knew she had to make it, and she did. You can almost date her success from that day."

Hopkins, who headed an obscure A-2 track program with nine girls seven years ago, has been almost as much of a success story as Bernhagen. The two of them learned the finer points of high jumping together.

"That's got to be an advantage for Lisa," says Jensen. "If you have one coach that you've grown up with, that you've learned the event from, you can accomplish more with a word or two than any outside coach could do by trying to explain it to you."

"She hasn't mastered the techniques of high jumping yet, and neither have I," says Hopkins, who attended the U.S. Olympic Committee's training session with Bernhagen last summer in Colorado Springs, Colo. "But then neither did former U.S. Olympic medalist Dwight Stones. I think we are getting smarter though; last summer (at Colorado Springs), we learned about the importance of videotaping, and it's helped a lot to be able to analyze the technical aspects that way."

Hopkins and Bernhagen have also been able to call upon a fellow named Dick Fosbury, who lives in nearby Ketchum. Fosbury, an Olympic gold medal winner, invented the "Fosbury flop" technique used universally by high jumpers.

Spurs edge Los Angeles

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI)—Mike Mitchell had 26 points and Artis Gilmore had 25 and the Spurs held off a furious closing surge by the Los Angeles Lakers for a 117-112 victory Wednesday night, sending the Western Conference championship series back to San Antonio for Game 6.

The defending NBA champion Lakers lead the series 3-2. The sixth game will be played Friday night. San Antonio led 107-100 with 6:56 remaining when George Gervin drilled a 15-foot jumper, capped an 8-0 San Antonio spurt during which Los Angeles missed seven consecutive shots.

But Los Angeles, behind the inspired play of 35-year-old Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, began its final run with 6:05 left. Abdul-Jabbar hit a free throw to make it 107-101 and, after Johnny Moore hit a short jumper for the Spurs, Abdul-Jabbar hit another free throw and followed it with a layup to cut the gap to 109-104.

After Gilmore was called for traveling, Abdul-Jabbar hit a sky hook, but Mitchell and Moore then hit field goals 22 seconds apart to boost San Antonio's lead to 115-106.

Abdul-Jabbar led one more surge, scoring on a dunk with 3:01 remaining and then blocking two consecutive shots by Gilmore, the second leading to a fastbreak layup by Norm Nixon that put the margin at 115-110.

But Gilmore then hit a pair of free throws and Mitchell hit another to clinch the victory for the Spurs.

NBA West

Moore finished with 23 points for the Spurs while Gervin added 20.

Abdul-Jabbar led the Lakers with 30 points while Jamaal Wilkes added 27 and Magic Johnson finished with 16 points, 19 assists and 11 rebounds. His 19 assists tied a Los Angeles playoff record set by Jerry West and equaled by Norm Nixon.

The 76ers jumped to a 12-8 lead, but San Antonio, in what was to become a trend in the game, took advantage of Abdul-Jabbar's absence to run off six straight points midway through the first period. The Lakers, with Abdul-Jabbar and Wilkes scoring 12 points each, led 34-31 after one period.

Los Angeles built its biggest lead of the game, 45-35, by running off nine straight points early in the second period. But, again, the Spurs, with Abdul-Jabbar on the bench taking a breather, came back with 11 straight points in a 3-23 span midway through the period to take a 46-45 lead. Los Angeles scored the last two baskets of the half to take a 63-62 lead at halftime.

At the end of the third period, Abdul-Jabbar again came out for a brief rest and the Spurs reeled off 10 unanswered points to take a 93-87 lead. San Antonio led 95-91 entering the final quarter.

Milwaukee's Bob Lanier turns Wednesday's loss to 76ers.

76ers make NBA finals

By JOE JULIANO
UPI Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—If the Philadelphia 76ers didn't convince anyone else of their chances of grabbing the elusive NBA title, they certainly convinced Dan Nelson.

"They're the best team I've seen in 10 years, without any question," the Milwaukee coach said Wednesday night after the 76ers got 82 points from their All-Star trio of Andrew Toney, Moses Malone and Julius Erving for a 115-113 victory over the Bucks that clinched the Eastern Conference championship series.

"They are the next world champions as far as I'm concerned," Nelson said. "They play a different style in the West, but I don't think anybody can beat them."

Toney scored 30 points—20 in the first half and 10 in the fourth quarter. Malone added 28 plus 17 rebounds and Erving chipped in with 24. "I'm in the third quarter when Philadelphia gained control of a tight game and rode that momentum to its second straight appearance in the NBA Championship Series.

"The 76ers, 8-1 in the playoffs, are going to the finals on a high note. "Our main goal is to win four more," Malone said. "We got this far, so we might as well win it all. We're going to be tough. We had some close games where we didn't get any breaks, so the only way we can win is to get the ball off the boards and run."

The 76ers got their running game going in the third quarter. Leading 63-62, they scored 9 straight points with Erving sparking the surge with an alley-oop dunk and two free throws and Malone closing it out with a 3-point play. A dunk by Erving brought the Philadelphia advantage to 74-62 with 5:26 left in the period.

Charlie Criss hit eight points in a three-minute span, enabling Milwaukee to cut the deficit to 91-76 with 1:51 left in the period. The 76ers ran up the next 7 points to restore their 12-point advantage—and Milwaukee never got closer than 7 of the way.

"I thought it was the best we played in the playoffs with our one flaw being on the offensive end," Philadelphia coach Billy Cunningham said. "We controlled the tempo as well as we have in the course of the playoffs. I thought Milwaukee battled all the way. I always felt they were in the game."

After the Bucks closed the deficit to 92-85 on two free throws by Sidney Moncrief with 9:36 remaining, Toney sparked the 76ers on a surge that ended with Philadelphia leading 108-92 on a Malone tap-in with 3:57 left.

"I don't know if we can play that much better," Nelson said. "We went through a stretch when we were missing good shots and they capitalized on everything."

Malone scored 21 points and the Bucks with 21 points. Junior Bridgeman added 20, and Alton Lister 16.

The Bucks' play on the offensive board kept them in the game in the first half. The 76ers shot 66.5 percent from the field and got 20 points from Toney but led by only 59-54.

Milwaukee held a 14-8 advantage in offensive rebounding in an overall 26-16 edge on the boards.

Philadelphia re-established itself in the third quarter, outbounding the Bucks 18-11 with Erving pulling down six.

The Bucks defeated the Boston Celtics in four games of their NBA quarterfinal series, much to the surprise of most observers. Milwaukee had been strong through the end of the season, but finished with a worse record than the Sixers, who destroyed the New York Knicks in the playoffs.

Milwaukee was beset by many problems in the semifinal series, ranging from injuries to inability to get the ball to key personnel in crucial situations. The performers who had done well in the quarterfinals had trouble against the Sixers, who performed almost flawlessly.

Rams' quarterback Jones ready to retire

RUSTON, La. (UPI)—Bert Jones, one of the premier quarterbacks during his 10-year NFL career with Baltimore and Los Angeles, Thursday will announce his retirement from football.

A serious neck injury sustained late last season is forcing Jones to resign one year after his controversial trade from the Colts to the Rams; he told the Ruston Daily Leader, the newspaper in his native town.

"(I am) physically unable to play in the future," he said. "Doctors have advised me that I shouldn't play any football in the future because of the possible seriousness which may result from it."

Elementary track records fall

TWIN FALLS — Eight city record falls Wednesday at the annual elementary schools track and field championships. More than 2,000 fourth, fifth and sixth graders participated in the trials for the all-city meet. The finals of which was held at Bruin Stadium.

Lisa Bollinger of Sawtooth Elementary tied it in 1980.

The wind-aided records were set by Karla Boesel, a fourth grader at Sawtooth, 2.4 seconds in the 60-meter dash; Tiffany Smith, a fourth grader at Sawtooth, 16.0 in the 100; Steven Black, a fourth grader at Morningside Elementary, 13.5 in the 90; Sylvia Sandmark, a fifth grader at Morningside, 7.7 in the 50; Torrey Bollinger, a fifth grader at Sawtooth, 8.6 in the 60; Jason Pearson, a fifth grader Harrison Elementary, 8.6 in the 60; and Ronny Marsh, a sixth-grader at Sawtooth, 12.1 in the 90.

The meet's sportsmanship trophy went to Harrison.

Brewers signee can play football

HOUSTON (UPI) — A federal judge Wednesday refused to bar a Dallas athlete from playing football for Texas A&M University because he signed an exclusive baseball contract with the Milwaukee Brewers last year.

U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald ruled only on the Brewers' request for a temporary injunction against Kevin Murray, 18. The Brewers' lawsuit against Murray, Texas A&M and football coach Jackie Sherrill awaits full scale trial.

"Even though baseball is exempt from antitrust law, it is not exempt from the 13th Amendment," the judge said, noting the Constitutional amendment that forbids involuntary servitude.

She said that by trying to block Murray from playing football the Brewers in effect were trying to force him to play baseball for them.

The judge ruled Murray breached his contract with the Brewers but the breach rendered irrelevant the contract clause that forbade football to protect the Brewers' interest in keeping him from hurting himself.

Orioles' Flanagan sidelined

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Baltimore left-hander Mike Flanagan will be sidelined for 3-to-10 weeks because of an injury to his left knee. Orioles' general manager Hank Peters said Wednesday.

The Orioles placed Flanagan on the 21-day disabled list and purchased the contract of left-handed reliever Dan Morogello from Rochester of the International League. Morogello was to be in uniform for Wednesday night's game with Chicago.

Flanagan, who was injured in the first inning of Tuesday night's double-header opener with Chicago, was examined by club doctors at Union Memorial Hospital, Wednesday. He will not have to undergo surgery, Peters said.

Results of an arthrogram, a test to determine ligament damage, indicated that he had suffered some damage to the medial collateral ligament.

Flanagan, 31, will have the knee immobilized for the next two weeks before a special brace is applied to enable him to start therapy. The brace will be on for several weeks before Flanagan begins a full rehabilitation program.

Flanagan, 6-0 with a 2.7 ERA in eight starts prior to Tuesday night, apparently cut his spike on the mound while attempting to field a ball hit by Chicago's Tony Bernazard, causing his knee to twist.

Benitez makes comeback

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Former three-time world champion Wilfred Benitez made a successful debut in the middleweight ranks Wednesday night with a unanimous 10-round decision over Tony Corda.

Benitez, 24, one of only six men to hold titles in three separate divisions, started slowly in order to conserve energy in the 90-degree temperatures at an outdoor arena. But he scored often and heavily with right-hand leads in the middle rounds.

There were no knockdowns in the bout.

Benitez, who held the World Boxing Association junior welterweight title, the World Boxing Council welterweight crown and the WBC super-welterweight title, weighed 158 pounds and ran his record to 44-2-1. The Puerto Rican only losses were to Sugar Ray Leonard for the welterweight championship in 1981 and against Thomas Hearns for the WBC super-welterweight crown.

Filer subs football for soccer

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News Correspondent

FILER — The Filer school board will decide next month if soccer should replace football in the junior high school.

Junior high principal Bill Heaps recommended to the school board that football be dropped for seventh- and eighth graders because of the cost of equipment and the danger of the sport.

Football helmets must now pass nationally approved requirements and can run up to $75 a piece, in addition to the other equipment needed, he said.

"We're only talking about a soccer ball and two nets," he said of soccer. "And we'd be a lot safer (with soccer)." "I'm not sure that (soccer) will hurt our (football) program a bit," he said.

Burley in tough company at A-2 tourney

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

REXBURG — Burley High School baseball coach Dean Satterfield figures youth will be his team's biggest handicap in the Idaho Class A-2 Baseball Tournament, which opens here Thursday. But he obviously hasn't talked with the coach of Burley's first-round opponent yet.

The Bobcats will go into the tournament with one senior, right-handed pitcher Jim McCord. But Weiser Coach Terry Mooney just has three seniors — and on a team that won the District 3 championship.

Weiser, 13-7, and Burley, 9-13, will get together at 2 p.m. at Madison High School in the third game of the tournament. In the tournament opener, District 1/2 champion Orofino (18-4) will face Valluave (16-5) at 9 a.m., while eastern district champion Madison (18-6) will meet Kuna (11-15). In the nighttime, Rigby (10-15) will take on defending state champion Moscow (10-15) at 7 p.m.

"We're so young, we're going to be at the real disadvantage," says Satterfield, whose team will be playing in its first state A-2 tournament after dropping from Class A-1 last year. "Weiser is both the district and the Snake River Valley Conference champion, so we know they'll be good."

McCord, who finished the season with a .381 batting average, nine home runs, 27 runs batted in and a 2-1 pitching record, is scheduled to start the opener, with Satterfield planning to call upon freshman right-hander

Eric Rodriguez on Friday. Rodriguez, who finished the season with a 6-6 record, is typical of Satterfield's young ballclub this season: occasionally sharp, but full of young mistakes.

"I saw the tournament when they held it up in Ontario (Ore.) last year, so I know there are some good teams (in this year's competition)," says the Burley coach. "I just hope we can be competitive."

In addition to McCord and Rodriguez, the Bobcats will be counting heavily upon freshman center fielder Scott Asson, who finished the season with a .348 batting average, and junior Darren Wood, who hit .250

The Bobcats, who finished third in the eastern district tournament behind Madison and Rigby, have also gotten strong part-time help from sophomore Cory Knapp, who finished the season with a .336 batting average.

Weiser, which lost its first two games of the state tournament last year after winning the district and SRVC championships, will counter with the conference's pitcher and player of the year, respectively: seniors Cory Haun and Eberto Reyes. Haun, a right-hander, finished the season with a 9-4 record, while Reyes, also a right-hander, posted a 3-3 pitching record and a .360 batting average. Haun is scheduled to pitch this afternoon's opener.

"The Wolverines' leading hitter is Junior Ritch Wood, who batted .400 this year, followed by senior James Buchine (.394) and Junior Kent Smith (.350). Weiser had a .301 team batting average, with 11 home runs.

The pre-tournament favorites are the Moscow and Orofino, who played for the state championship last year, and most Madison, which finished third last season. The Bears will have, perhaps the most dominating pitcher in the tournament, senior right-hander Greg Adelsbach, but the Mantles will counter with a team that compiled a .318 batting average this spring.

The tournament, which is not sanctioned by the Idaho High School Activities Association (it is sponsored by the coaches), will be making its first appearance in eastern Idaho in four years. Last year's event was played on the campus of Treasure Valley Community College in Ontario, and the year before it was held on the University of Idaho campus in Moscow.

All games will be played on Madison's home field, conditions permitting. If the Madison field is too wet, the tournament will be moved to the Ricks College diamond in Rexburg or to McDermott Field in Idaho Falls.

Glenns Ferry won't pay for accident

By DIANA HOOLEY
Times-News correspondent

GLENN'S FERRY — The Glenns Ferry school board declined to pay medical expenses for an eighth grader injured during an athletic event. Instead, the trustees opted to sue the money and purchase a regulation-size track mat which should prevent similar injuries in the future.

The eighth grader, Frahm Junior High student Carey Bradshaw, received minor injuries during a high jump event at the Glenns Ferry Junior High School track meet.

Ten parents at Glenns Ferry Junior High School principal, told the school board during its regular session that the accident occurred because Bradshaw had forgotten to ask that the mat be moved back before her jump. The request is "standard procedure" for schools which don't have regulation-size mats.

Bradshaw received immediate medical treatment from a local emergency medical technician, Julie King, and was then moved by ambulance to a Gooding hospital where she was treated for cuts and abrasions.

"Gary Bradshaw, the father of the girl called me," said Penner, "and said that we were negligent for not providing proper athletic facilities and doctors fees he should pay the hospital and doctor fees. I think we'll be opening up a can of worms if we allow ourselves to be liable for this sort of thing."

Reed, school superintendent, agreed. He said the school claims examiner had determined that the school was not negligent because the event was properly supervised and because it was the responsibility of the participants to ask that the mat be moved.

To pay damages, said Reed, would be admitting guilt and could possibly discourage future athletic competition between schools.

"Instead," said Reed, "I think we should sue that $20,000 we'd have to pay for damages and purchase the regulation-size mats. That's pretty cheap liability insurance."

The regulation-size mat suggested by the Idaho High School Activities Association is 8 feet by 16 feet. Like other small schools, Glenns Ferry uses a smaller mat (9-by-5) which requires moving during the event to provide proper protection.

A motion was made and seconded to purchase regulation-size mats for future track meets to insure a similar incident does not occur again.

high school), so the skill doesn't need to be developed in junior high."

Besides, more students can participate in soccer games, said school superintendent Shelton Kovarsky. "This is the up-and-coming sport," he said.

In other business, the board agreed to vote next month on increasing the price of activity cards, fees to students to play in athletics, and family admission fees to games. To raise money for the athletic budget.

This year the receipts from athletic events, activity cards, the sports' fee and season passes totaled $10,197 and the projected expenses will come to $10,770.

The cost for operating athletic events in the 1983-84 season is $14,848.

"We have to raise some more revenue one way or another," said high school principal Larry Roberts. "We have to get some more money someplace."

Heaps announced that junior high school athletic awards will be presented on May 26 at 6 p.m.

Area deer, elk seasons similar to last year

By LARRY HOWY
 Times-News Writer

JEROME — The Idaho Fish and Game Commission kept things pretty familiar for Magic Valley's big game hunting units this fall.

The commission adopted the final regulations at their quarterly meeting last week and the printed matter should be available to hunters sometime in the first week of June.

Craig Kvale, game biologist for the department's regional office in Jerome, said the game managers of the various districts will converge on Boise next week to proof read the regulations under their jurisdiction. After that has been accomplished, the printing presses will be cranked up. The only difference in the final product will be that the controlled and general hunts this year will be combined into one pamphlet.

The commission essentially accepted the recommendations of the department for lengths of seasons and harvest in Magic Valley's elk and deer units. Those recommendations were explained to area sportsmen in a public meeting two weeks ago and encountered little opposition.

Overall, there is little change in the number of permits being offered in this area. However, there are a couple of deviations in elk hunts which will allow for some taking of cows and calves as the department tries to stabilize some herds.

U.S. will buy out gillnetters

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The state will begin offering to buy some salmon vessel permits from Columbia River commercial gillnetters, whose harvests have fallen in recent years due to season limits.

The program was delayed for several months until federal funds were released. It is designed to retire part of the fleet to conserve salmon and compensate permit holders for losses resulting from a 1977 federal court decision on treaty Indian fishing rights.

The state Department of Fish and Wildlife will mail information, including forms to buy boat permits, to Oregon and Washington gillnetters who held about 517 permits in 1981 or 1982, said Barbara Milburn, program director for the department.

Fishermen will have until June 15 to return sealed bids. The department will accept the bids beginning with the lowest.

There are no limits on minimum or maximum bids, but the Fish and Wildlife Commission may set a price ceiling when it reviews the bids at a June 22 meeting, she said.

"We're asking fishermen to sell permits at the price they think they are worth," she said. "We aren't going to buy boats."

Jack Marinovich of Astoria, executive director of the Columbia River Fishermen's Protective Union, said he thinks about 400 fishermen are eligible to participate.

The Jerome High School Biology Club, led by Dick Jordan, is now installing a bluebird nest box on the Patrick Koehn Ranch on Rock Creek. This is part of a long-range program to increase Idaho's state bird and is financed by state taxpayers and administered by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

Fish fillet lesson set Saturday

TWIN FALLS — A chance to learn how to fillet trout will be offered to area anglers Saturday through the auspices of the Twin Falls Fish Wildlife Conservation, Inc.

Offering its third year of filleting lessons, the corporation has moved into a real — the chance to catch the fish you will be practicing on.

This is accomplished in agreement with the Blue Lakes Trout Hatchery which will provide the professional fish catchers and the site.

The session will run from 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday at the hatchery, located on the northside of Snake River in the canyon and immediately west of Blue Lakes Country Club.

"Those attending may catch their fish (a $1 per pound fee will be charged) and then use them to learn the art under the trained eye of the professionals."

"Usually, it takes two fish," said a spokesman for the sponsoring sportsmen club. "The first one comes out pretty bad but it is surprising how quickly some of the people, especially the girls, catch on to it. The second one usually look pretty good. Not professional, by any mean, but palatable."

One reason the group moved to the Blue Lakes Hatchery was the overwhelming response of last year.

"We tried it down at the little (Twin Falls) hatchery and we had people parking cars everywhere including on See FILLET on Page E2

CAP may try reward plan to curb private land abuse

Each year, Idaho's outdoor hostility hatch gets greater as landowners give up trying to cooperate and post their lands.

Since I was gone for eight years, the situation may have made a greater impression on me than if I'd lived through what is obviously a gradually-worsening situation in Idaho.

At least three major favors are causing the current crop of "no trespassing" signs, although there may be other, less obvious currents under the surface.

First, there is the problem of population. The number of human bodies inside the state's borders increased by about 30 percent during the last 10 years. Most of those people settled in the Boise, Twin Falls, Pocatello or Idaho Falls vicinities.

If everything remained constant, that would indicate a 30 percent rise in snob hunters, yuck fishermen and irresponsible shooters.

Although the number of responsible outdoorsmen and women may be slightly increased by a third, that probably doesn't matter very much.

We tend not to notice who they catch and release fish or the family who picks up a campsite.

Instead, we notice the fisherman who left plastic lure packages and worm cans on the stream bank. We notice the hunter who jumps out of his car, ground-swags a pheasant while shooting illegally from the road and then leaves without ever having asked permission to hunt.

We notice the campers who use the outdoors to drink and ride noisy motorcycles in campgrounds, then leave garbage strewn around.

And we notice where hunters have been if they fail to pick up spent cartridges, believing that no one will notice them in the 3,000 years it will take them to erode away into soil.

Second, there used to be a kind of uneasy peace between outdoorsmen and landowners in Idaho.

For the most part, we sportsmen haven't really been much of a credit to ourselves but we didn't create as many problems as the last.

Landowners used to feel it was better to put up with hunters and fishermen than to upset them by denying permission to use private land.

These days, ranchers and farmers actively fear sportsmen and whisper about vandalism and livestock shooting. Do these things just happen, or would they increase if country residents turned in poachers?

The result is that signs are posted to warn people away from private land. But in the event of trespass, charges are seldom filed. Signing a complaint might bring revenge from a trespasser with a criminal mind.

Meanwhile, rattling continues at a high level. In one recent Magic Valley case, rustlers cut the throats of calves, then hauled the animals away to dress them.

So don't be surprised if Farmer Brown doesn't greet strangers bearing guns or fishing rods with open arms.

The fewer people he has around, the fewer he'll have to worry about.

Landowners may have changed things by moving to Idaho.

One couple moved here from a large metropolitan area and considered their farm to be a reserve of private hunting rights.

Mike Harrop
 Outdoors

Not only do they refuse entry to those who asked, but they disregarded game laws themselves: Imagine the frustration of hunters denied access to a farm where they chance to see the landowner shooting geese with a rifle.

Finally, outdoor education is an almost non-existent thing in Idaho. Instead of using our schools to create a responsible generation of outdoor users, we've allowed family patterns to continue.

A well-known poacher once told me that poachers had larger families than sportsmen and took extra game because they needed the meat.

He pointed out that the poacher had a good job and suggested that he practice birth control rather than stealing game from the state.

The point of this is that many poachers do have large families. They teach their kids that it is okay to take extra game if you need it. And who couldn't use an extra 100 pounds of steak or chops?

Sportsmen limit their kill to what the resources can stand, rather than what they can eat. They have fewer children, as a group.

Guess which group is increasing as a percentage of our population.

The Magic Valley Committee of Citizens Against Poaching (CAP) has decided to ask the board of directors for a new reward aimed at improving landowner-sportsman relations.

Rather than put the landowner on the spot, CAP will be asked to pay a reward for the arrest of outdoorsmen who damage property or steal from landowners and tenant farmers while hunting, fishing, poaching or masquerading as hunters or fishermen.

This would offer a reward for rustlers or for information leading to arrests for cutting fences, shooting irrigation pipe or shooting livestock.

Naturally, CAP won't pay a reward for the victim to report the crime. He's expected to report it anyway and CAP wants to reduce crime, not give away money needlessly.

Since an informant must be present to turn in wrongdoers, it would be a mistake for landowners to post their land.

Thus, the move may buy outdoorsmen additional places to hunt and fish while benefiting the landowners.

There are problems with the proposal however. For example, CAP is barely breaking even despite the generous efforts of sportsmen who contributed some $32,000 last year.

Will there be enough money to pay for an additional reward?

I'll be taking the proposal to the annual CAP meeting later this month. If anyone has ideas on the proposal's workability or knows of a source for funds, I'd like to hear from them as soon as possible.

Bird harvest reflects poor brood weather

Only geese gain

BOISE — Upland game and waterfowl harvests, except for Canada geese, dropped off as expected last year following cold, wet spring weather that cut into brood production, said Dick Norell, Department of Fish and Game.

Results from the department's annual survey of hunters showed a 34 percent decline in pheasant harvest — from a record 502,500 in 1981 to 329,700, the state game bird manager said.

Harvest of Canada geese registered the one gain in the survey with an increase to 55,200, compared to 50,000 last year.

"Production of resident Canada geese has improved and we extended the 1981 season a bit, but we must continue to watch the balance between harvest and production," Norell said.

Sharp drops were listed for chukar and Hungarian partridge. The chukar harvest fell off from 21,900 to 72,500 and the latter were down from 174,000 to 83,200, according to the survey.

Hunting pressure also decreased. "About seven percent more hunters than usual said they didn't try for birds in 1982," Norell said.

"But give us clear skies and warm weather and we can look for a strong comeback in upland game populations. Brood stock usually remains stable but poor production means reduced harvests," he added.

"Extended cold, wet weather can be fatal to young birds if they haven't had time to grow the feathers that provide insulation and warmth but even in a normal year, most populations have a 70-80 percent natural turnover," he explained.

Other harvests with 1981 totals in parentheses, include sage groups 39,500 (70,300); quail, 64,300 (155,000); dove, 224,500 (425,000); forest grouse, 118,100 (125,000); sharpshalls, 7,200 (8,500); and ducks, 425,600 (537,600).

Concession permit sought at dam site

Got some good news and/or some bad news, depending on how you feel about a concession facility at Salmon Falls Reservoir.

The county has two applications for a concession-type facility at this popular reservoir.

Let me try and set you straight about Salmon Falls Reservoir and the Lud Drexler Park near the dam.

The park was developed by the federal government (BLM) and Twin Falls County oversees this park. It is the county that makes sure the docks are pulled in high water and pushes them out in the fall.

It is the BLM that pumps out the sanitary facilities.

At any rate, "Is the county that will have the say-so about the facility that may be at Salmon Falls Reservoir?"

Many questions come up for those who must make the approval of sanitary facilities, should there be an anti-bottle law, what department will police the operation, what insurance should be carried and on and on.

When I finally answered in the news media you can see — I read about that in Swen's column a few months back.

On the 16th of April of this year, my wife discovered the first tick of the 1983 season.

The fishing areas that most Magic Valley fishermen frequent have ticks and they are a fact of the outdoor fun we love.

If you were like my wife, you asked "what is this bug?" not knowing just what a tick looks like.

The tick of our area has an oval body, usually brown, tiny head. It attaches itself to skin and sucks blood. Can cause infection after removal if head is left buried in skin.

The greatest danger is some can transmit potentially fatal Rocky Mountain spotted fever and other diseases.

The best method for removal I have found is do not kill the tick while it is attached to the skin. Take the lightest line you have and make a slip knot. Put the opening of the knot over the tick between the skin and the tick and gently pull the knot closed. The tick will back out and you can then apply an antiseptic to the bit.

It will take a little time so don't rush it.

If illness with fever occurs, see your doctor.

Prevention from ticks should include wearing long pants, not the wool type. Spray arms and legs with repellent containing diethyltoluamide. If you take your dog with you, bathe it in a tick bath with Ialathion.

Jack Kitchin and Vernon Smith were among many who let me know that my prediction of C.J.'s Strike crapple fishing was too early.

"It will be near the end of May," I was Vernon's prediction before the crapple are on the spawning beds.

Jack Kitchin, Twin Falls, offered advice on how he and his wife catch the large channel catfish from these waters.

Jack uses his small boat that he launches in the Jack Creek area and proceeds across the backwaters of the Bruneau River to the point he describes as a pump house and near a duck blind.

Jack and wife then fish from the bank in this area.

"Use a No. 2 hook with cut bait," was Jack's suggestion. "Probably the hardest thing is getting the trash fish to cut up."

He suggests the person going there stop at the Snake River first and catch the perchmouth of box mouth and cut them into one-inch chunks or strips.

Jack uses 12-pound line and after the cast, just leaves it alone for a period of time.

Jack and wife had tremendous success last year and told me that the largest caught (by Jack's wife) was a 12-pounder.

"We caught several in the four to six-pound range last year," was their encouragement.

Vern had the fish story so far this year. He was trolling C.J. Strike two weeks ago and hooked into a tremendous trout. To make this story short, he lost it right at the boat.

Department introduces new insignia

BOISE — Snow-capped peaks, forests, water, elk and a trout — look for them on the new Idaho Department of Fish and Game insignia.

"They make up a picture of a very large part of Idaho and represent a blend of the wildlife and habitat that are concerns of the department each day," said Bill Goodright, chief of the information and education bureau.

"The design is meant to show the significance of our efforts to maintain fish and game and the land and water that support them," he said. "We believe the new insignia will convey a more meaningful image to the public we serve."

The insignia — or logo — has remained "virtually unchanged since 1945."

To keep changeover costs to a minimum, the logo will be phased in as uniform items are reordered to maintain inventory and as other equipment and supplies are depleted, Goodright said.

In place of the familiar black and gold emblem, the new insignia will show a variety of color — the peaks topped with snow, green mountains and trees and blue water. The brown elk and silver fish are in the foreground.

On uniform shoulder patches and vehicle decals, "Idaho Fish and Game" will be in dark blue lettering on a gold background, Goodright said.

Ernst plans clinic for area archers

TWIN FALLS — Ron Lenz of Twin Falls will present a free clinic on archery for all interested from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

The clinic will be conducted at Ernst Home Center, 870 Blue Lakes Boulevard, North, and will cover bow to fine tune bows, upkeep and bow care, shooting instructions, trick shooting and elk bugle demonstrations.

The clinic will feature demonstrations by the top shooters of the Magic Valley Bow Hunters Club, Bob Jones, author and guide, will offer free chronograph analyses to test the velocity of arrows.

Another guest, Bob Jackson, Twin Falls, inventor of the Viper broadhead, will be present to give away 50 sample packs of Viper broadheads. Dick Vall, northwest regional representative from Golden Eagle manufacturers, also will participate in the clinic.

Additional information may be obtained by calling the store at 734-7300.

Derby guess misses total

SANDPOINT, Idaho (UPI) — Dave Hupp was one ounce short of perfect when he submitted his prediction for the total amount of fish to be caught in the annual derby in Sandpoint.

When the last fish was weighed last week, the scales tipped at a total 1,575 pounds, five ounces — one ounce less than Hupp had predicted at the start of the Kamloops and Kokanee fishing derby.

Hupp, a part-time Sandpoint resident, jumped over the weekend his nearly accurate guess won him a trip to Mexico — one of the more expensive gifts made during the 38th annual derby, which ran from April 30 to May 8.

Money raised during the derby and auction went to the Lake Pend Oreille Idaho Club, which sponsored the events.

Americans' income leaps in April

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Healthy increases in wages and salaries helped boost the nation's personal income 0.8 percent in April. That is the biggest increase since July, the Commerce Department said Wednesday. Personal spending vital to keep the recovery growing, went up 1 percent in April, the first time since September spending has improved that much. The level of income surged $20.2 billion when figured on a yearly basis, to an annual rate of $2,879.1 trillion, the department said. Wages and salaries were up $12.8 billion, including a $5.1 billion improvement in factory payrolls, the largest step up since August 1980.

Wages and salaries were up $12.8 billion, including a $5.1 billion improvement in factory payrolls, the largest step up since August 1980. Robert Dederick, Commerce undersecretary for economic affairs, said the report shows "the economic upturn is becoming a cumulative, self-reinforcing process, where higher spending leads to higher production and then again to higher spending." The expansion of personal income "reflected increases in employment, weekly hours and hourly earnings," the report said. Among the factory employers, the auto and rubber industries had the biggest gains. Disposable income, after income taxes, went up 1 percent in April. All figures were seasonally adjusted. The report provided more encouragement for economists counting the pillars of strength of the recovery. Additional income can fuel the consumer spending necessary to keep the cycle of improvement growing. Personal income had gained 0.6 percent in March after a 0.1 percent plus in February.

The improvement across the board in sources of income allowed spending to improve without cutting much into savings. The savings rate was 5.7 percent in April, down just half a percentage point from March. The overall level of personal income in April amounted to $11.460 for every man, woman and child in the country. After tax disposable income available to be spent would amount to $9.741 a year per capita. Farm income was up for the first time this year in April, by $1.4 billion. Interest income went up by an annual $2 billion, less than the $2.4 billion in March.

reflecting a slight decline in interest rates. The figures were also helped by a decline of $1.5 billion in taxes and government fees. On the spending side the improvements were largest for nondurable goods, food and items intended for immediate use. The nondurables saw a $5.2 billion jump while durable goods compared to a $1.1 billion increase the month before. Durable goods purchases, including automobiles and "big ticket" appliances, were up $3.9 billion, slightly more than in March.

Rumor spoils rally

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, which got off to a roaring start, finished mixed Wednesday following reports an unidentified institution placed an order to sell $100 million worth of securities. According to one floor trader, Merrill Lynch received the order shortly after 11 a.m. MDT and the market began a retreat. It slipped blue-chip issues such as IBM, General Motors and General Electric.

Merrill Lynch officials were not immediately available for comment. But rumors about the order created uncertainty and caused some selling, analysts said.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which had been ahead 14.12 at 1 p.m., wound up losing 2.23 to 2,033.56 for the day. It had gained 2.81 Tuesday.

The New York Stock Exchange index eased 0.09 to 94.39 and the price of an average share decreased four cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index slid 0.44 to 163.27. But advances topped declines, 599-553 among the 1,594 issues traded.

Big Board volume swelled to 99,780,000 shares from 79,510,000 traded Tuesday.

Analysts also attributed some of the late selling to weakness in the bond market. Higher interest rates were uncertain about the course of interest rates despite predictions by President Reagan the charges would go down soon.

Financial markets also nervous about the prospects of the Washington Public Power Supply System's defaulting later this month on $2.25 billion in bonds. Congressional leaders said there was little chance a bailout bill could be enacted.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 115,911,410 shares compared with 92,625,870 traded Tuesday.

The American Stock Exchange index rose 2.82 to a record high 452.67 and the price of a share added 11 cents. Advances topped declines 420-267 among the 382 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 14,518,400 shares compared with 10,164,500 Tuesday.

The National Association of Securities Dealers index of OTC stocks gained 2.49 to 303.51.

Idaho building activity increases

TWIN FALLS — The number of building permits issued in Idaho during April was more than double the number issued in the same month in 1982.

That is according to First Security Bank's Idaho Construction Report, said Kenneth J. Newman, vice president and manager of the bank's Twin Falls office.

The number of residential building permits issued in Idaho during April was essentially unchanged from March, but the geographic distribution of building permits for dwelling units showed improved activity in areas other than Ada County.

Total construction value for authorized building permit construction in 54 major Idaho locations during April was $36.88 million, up 14.7 percent from the 1982 level. New residential construction for 378 dwelling units amounted to $14.6 million, an increase of 12.4 percent in number and an increase of 126.3 percent in value, compared with a year ago. Non-residential construction, valued at $12.66 million, was down 29.6 percent from April, 1982. Alterations and repairs totaling $7.41 million were up 9.8 percent.

For the first four months of 1983, residential building permits across Idaho were double the number recorded in the same period in 1982. With FHA/VA mortgage rates lowering to 11 1/2 percent and conventional mortgage rates being quoted near 12 1/2 percent, mortgage demand is expected to strengthen, according to the report.

Sears keeps emphasis on improving retailing

By KENNETH A. SOO United Press International

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Despite plans to offer comprehensive financial and real estate services to business and consumers, Sears, Roebuck & Co. will continue to emphasize improvements in retail merchandising, Chairman Edward R. Telling said.

"The historical strength of Sears — its position as the country's largest merchandiser — will be just as important to the future of Sears," Telling said during the company's annual stockholders' meeting.

During the meeting, Telling explained plans for Sears' emerging Financial Network area, a world trade program. He said expanded in-store financial and real estate services are based on the firm's regard for "the well-being and the good sense of the American consumer."

"The Financial Network consists of Sears subsidiaries: Dean Witter, Financial Services Group, Coldwell Banker Real Estate Group and Allstate Insurance Group, which will be grouped together in Sears stores. "The success of the financial centers in a test program that we have conducted in eight stores has been so dramatic that we now have an aggressive expansion program," he said. "By the end of 1984, we expect to have 250 financial centers fully operational all across the country."

Telling said the centers will offer automatic teller machines, in-home banking and real estate services.

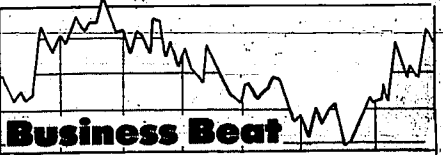

Telling said Dean Witter will market a tax-exempt investment trust later this year. He said Sears also will offer a homebuyers' savings program to provide discounts on Sears products when the home is purchased from Coldwell.

Telling, while discussing the financial services with the estimated 300 shareholders, stressed Sears will continue to base its efforts in the merchandising business.

Following the meeting, Edward A. Brennan, chairman of Sears Merchandise Group, said the philosophy of Sears' continued marketing will be embodied in the Sears "Store of the Future."

A prototype store already is open in Vernon Hills, Ill., a suburb of Chicago. Brennan said the store contains new departments.

H-P sales, earnings gain

PAULO ALTO, Calif. (UPI) — Hewlett-Packard Co. had a 16 percent gain in earnings on a 13 percent rise in sales in its second quarter ended April 30.

Net income was $109 million or 86 cents a share on sales of $1.17 billion compared with $94 million or 76 cents a share, a year ago on sales of $1.04 billion.

First half profit also was up 16 percent on a 13 percent rise in sales. Net income was $194 million or $1.53 a share on sales of $2.23 billion compared with $167 million or $1.35 a share a year earlier on sales of $1.97 billion. There were 2 million more shares outstanding this year than last year.

President John A. Young said the improvement was spread over all the company's operations, computer products, medical electronics, test and measurement instruments and analytical instrumentation.

Scott plans stock offering

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Scott Paper Co. Wednesday announced it has filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission for the sale of 3,750,000 common shares.

The company currently has approximately 42,700,000 shares outstanding. The company also announced that Brascan Ltd., which currently owns about 23.5 percent of Scott's outstanding common shares, has agreed to purchase from the company between 1,151,960 and 1,250,000 common shares, at a price per share equal to the price to the public.

Proceeds from the sale will be used to support Scott's capital spending program.

Mixed showing for car firms

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan's top two automakers Wednesday reported mixed performances for April, with Toyota showing a decline in output while Nissan posted a new monthly production record.

Toyota Motor Corp. said its output in all categories of motor vehicles last month dropped 8.9 percent to 255,694 units for the first monthly decline this year. Output in March hit a record monthly high of 320,058 units.

Toyota attributed the fall to a "persistent tough export environment" coupled with one less working day in April this year.

Nissan Motor Co. reported its April output climbed 6.7 percent to 214,056 units. In the export sector, Nissan also outperformed its chief rival.

Toyota's overall exports in April totaled 148,417 units, or 9.8 percent for the second consecutive monthly decline. March exports were off 5.5 percent.

In contrast, Nissan said its exports last month rose 11.5 percent to a record April peak of 132,478 units. The company attributed the growth primarily to a sharp increase in the shipment of pickup trucks to the United States.

Automated fuel system set

CANTON, Ohio (UPI) — Diebold Inc. Wednesday introduced a new automated fuel dispensing system that initially will accept debit or credit cards at the gasoline pump and then cash by year-end.

Under the so-called debit system, the motorist pays for gasoline at a service station with a debit card that is inserted in the terminal and deducts the amount of the purchase from his bank account. The motorist also can use a credit card.

Diebold said the fuel system is the latest addition to the line of its electronic funds transfer systems.

Nicaragua finds sugar buyer

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Nicaragua's agriculture minister said Wednesday that the country has found new markets for 50,000 tons of sugar that the United States refused to buy. He did not identify the countries.

Agriculture Minister Jaime Wheelock Roman said the new markets agreed to buy the sugar at $17 a quintal, or $340 a ton, the same price as the United States was going to spend. There are 20 quintals in a ton.

Here's how the new Social Security law can affect you

Terming it "a happy day for America," President Reagan signed the bipartisan Social Security Reform bill into law late last month and added that the law demonstrated "for all time" our nation's "ironclad commitment to Social Security."

The president's "ironclad commitment" came late — after a long, vicious campaign to undermine our faith in the system. Now, we have to fight hard to reclaim our faith. It won't be easy.

If you are now on Social Security, your benefits will not be cut, but as I reported in the first column in this series, you will have to wait until next January for the cost-of-living increase.

The 116 million of us still in the work force will be paying higher taxes and part of the increase that would have gone into effect in 1990 becomes payable starting in 1988. Next year — 1984 — if you work for wages, you and your employer will owe an SS tax of 7 percent on your covered wages up to a maximum of $37,500.

However, in 1984 only, you — but not your employer — will get an income tax credit for the increase of 0.9 percent over this year's rate of 6.7 percent.

You won't have to fiddle with the tax credit on your income tax return, though. Your employer will deduct SS taxes at the old rate of 6.7 percent in 1984 and when the Internal Revenue Service receives the employer's tax return, it will automatically credit an additional 0.9 percent to SS trust funds.

If you work for yourself in a trade or business, your tax rate will rise, starting in 1984, to 14 percent — an amount equal to the full combined employer-employee rate. — But the impact will be softened by granting you an income tax credit of 2.7 percent in 1984; 2.3 percent in 1985; and 2 percent in 1986-89. From 1990 on, the self-employed will get an income tax credit equal to one-half the self-employment tax rate (in effect, getting the same break as employees).

The law includes two significant changes to make it more appealing for older people to continue working — both effective in 1990: 1) The delayed retirement credit will be gradually increased — an addition of 3 percent a year added to benefits, now granted to workers who delay retirement past age 65. Starting in 1990, the amount of the delayed retirement credit will be increased by 1/2 of 1 percent every other year until it reaches 8 percent per year for workers reaching 65 after 2007. No delayed retirement credits are given after age 70.

It's been much-criticized "retirement" has been liberalized. Under present law, an SS beneficiary 65 to 69 who works and earns more than $5,000 a year gives up $1.00 of benefits for every $2 of earnings over $5,000. Starting in 1990, a technically accurate, however, it will be confirmed soon by the Social Security Administration.

under Social Security law. Remember and bonus: If you are age 70 to 72 and still working full or part time, under legislation enacted in 1981, you can collect full SS benefits for all months beginning with the month of your birthday.

As a Social Security beneficiary, this applies no matter how much you earn. The retirement test goes off age 70. Until this year, the retirement test applied up until age 72. None of this information is yet available to you officially in book form. It's a technically accurate, however, it will be confirmed soon by the Social Security Administration.

UNAS REGLAS EL CAMPESINO DEBE SEGUIR.

Las líneas eléctricas pueden ser mortales. Las líneas peligrosas donde Usted estará trabajando llevan 69,000 voltios de electricidad. Suficientes para alumbrar una ciudad de 5,000 personas... o para matar a un campesino que no se cuida.

Si Usted trabaja en un rancho y se encuentra cerca de las líneas eléctricas, acuérdesse de estas simples reglas.

No suba un poste eléctrico.
Dos cosas le pueden pasar. Primero, puede caerse. Segundo, puede tocar un alambre. Ninguna cosa es buena, pero es más probable que sobreviva la caída.

No levante un tubo de riego en posición recta.
Levante los tubos de riego y otros tubos en posición horizontal, paralela a la tierra. Levántarlos en posición recta puede ponerlos en contacto con una línea eléctrica dando paso libre entre Usted y los 69,000 voltios.

Mire bien antes de levantar equipo.
Confirmar arriba que no hay líneas eléctricas alrededor, antes de elevar un taladro, barrena u otra máquina. Como un tubo, son buenos conductores.

No mueva un transportador de heno cuando está en posición elevada.
Las circunstancias pueden ser distintas de las ya mencionadas, pero las consecuencias son las mismas.

En general, esté tan cuidadoso alrededor de las líneas eléctricas como sería alrededor cualquier máquina ranchera. Porque si Usted no hace, puede recibir el choque de su vida.

Hand model may take off her gloves

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my fiancée's mother. She's an outdoor-type woman who has spent most of her married life on a ranch. It happens to be a professional "hand" model and must take good care of my hands and fingernails to keep working.

When I visit the ranch with my fiancée, his mother ridicules me for protecting my "precious" hands. Recently when she and her daughter were canning beets, my fiancée volunteered my help (thanks a lot, Richard!) I'm sure he meant well, but when I asked "Mother" for a pair of rubber gloves so I wouldn't stain my hands, she said, "If common household duties are too much for you, Richard will surely starve, and his home will be a pigpen after you two are married."

I wanted for Richard to say something in my defense. Nothing. Later, all he would say about his mother's insult to me was, "Well, Mother always says what's on her mind." What can I do?

HANDS DOWN IN DENVER DEAR HANDS: You can stop expecting Richard to fight your battles. And you can start telling your future mother-in-law what's on your mind. For openers: "Your put-downs hurt me and make me feel un-welcome."

And for the grand finale, tell her that you want very much to have a good relationship with her, but if she continues to insult you, you are going to be very hard to find.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been divorced for two years now, but there's something I need to know. Does he have the right to hit the children if he's not supporting them?

JUST ASKING DEAR JUST: In my book, whether he's supporting them or not, he has no right to hit the children.

DEAR ABBY: I am 18 and I've had this problem since eighth grade. In gym one day, a girl said to me, "Hey, do you know that one of your breasts is bigger than the other?" At first it didn't bother me because I thought every girl had one bigger than the other. But, the older I got, the more noticeable it became to me and to others.

When I go shopping, I have to be very careful not to buy anything that fits me too tight. I can't even wear a bathing suit or T-shirt without stuffing my left side to match my right side.

I can't take it any longer. I was thinking of plastic surgery, but I can't afford it and neither can my mother. Please help me, Abby. I am tired of crying so much over this. I hate my body, and the older I get, the worse I feel about it. Sign me...

—LOP-SIDED AND MISERABLE DEAR MISERABLE: Please don't give up on the idea of plastic surgery. Perhaps you can find a generous surgeon who will help you, pay, and let you pay over time. (You never know until you try.)

UNTIL then, go to a hospital supply store that sells prostheses. Foam rubber "cups" can be purchased to insert into your bra. They look (and feel) like the real thing.

If you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (17 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif.
