Quake punishes Japan Worst tremor in 35 years causes heavy damage

By TODD R. EASTHAM
United Press International

TOKYO — The worst earthquake in 35 years rocked northeast Japan Thursday, toppling buildings, sparking fires and sweeping scores of people out to sea in giant tidal waves. At least 32 people died, 77 were injured and 70 missing.

The quake struck at noon and measured 7.8 on the open-ended Richter scale. Tall buildings in Tokyo swayed for several minutes, but no damage was reported in the capital.

"The world began jolting suddenly," said Shimi Okazaki, an employee of the agricultural cooperative in Akita, 200 miles north of Tokyo. "I took shelter under a desk but I was too scared to move any further. Everything on a shelf dropped and then the bookshelf fell."

The National Police Agency said 32 people were known dead, 77 injured and 70 missing. Severe damage was spread throughout three provinces, and extensive damage was reported throughout northern Japan.

The Japan Meteorological Agency reported 271 aftershocks in 11 hours after the initial jolt.

The quake was the most disastrous in Japan since 1948, when a quake of 7.3 on the Richter scale killed 5,131 people in Fukuoka.

The force of the quake knocked down the ceiling of a department store in Akita, killing one shopper and injuring four others. Concrete walls in the city toppled, crushing automobiles under their weight.

The quake touched off fires, opened fissures in highways, twisted railway tracks, wrecked homes and played havoc with electrical power and communications in the Aomori district of Japan's main Honshu island and southern Hokkaido island.

In Golden, Colo., John Minsch, geophysicist for the National Earthquake Information Service said the shock wave "took about 11 or 12 minutes ... to cross the ocean and move the seismograph nearly off the scale here."

The quake was centered in the Japan Sea about 280 miles northeast of Tokyo, and sent a series of tidal waves up to 12 feet high thundering onto the coast.

The first wall of water surprised a group of 43 fourth- and fifth-grade schoolchildren and five teachers picnicking on the tip of the scenic Oga Peninsula and swept dozens of them off their feet in seconds.

"It happened all of a sudden, and all I could do was grab some of them around my neck and keep them from being engulfed in the waves," one of the teachers said.

Two of the children were killed, and 11 others vanished in the waves, police said. Three of the 32 survivors were seriously injured.

Heavy seas also capsized a ship carrying breakwater construction workers. Five were killed and at least two dozen others were missing, authorities said.

The Maritime Agency dispatched 57 patrol boats and 17 planes to comb the coastal waters in search of survivors. They were recalled at nightfall and were to resume their search at dawn.

Maritime Safety Agency officials reported 155 ships, mostly fishing boats, capsized, damaged or run aground.

Rescuers planned to resume a search at daybreak for 27 workers ripped by a tidal wave from a construction site for an electric power plant. Seven of their co-workers were confirmed dead and 16 others injured.

Also among the dead was an unidentified Swiss woman on a sight-seeing tour of the scenic Oga Peninsula, who was engulfed by a tidal wave. Her husband managed to swim to safety.

Several fires were reported, including a major blaze at the Akita power plant, which cut power to several thousand homes. The blaze was extinguished after several hours, fire officials said.

Transportation and communications were disrupted by downed power lines, twisted railway tracks, and cracks severing highways. Police said roads were damaged at 122 places in seven different provinces.

Schaufelberger predicted Navy officers would be targets

Death blamed on leftists

By MICHAEL W. DRUDGE
United Press International

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — The first U.S. military officer killed in El Salvador predicted last week Americans would become rebel targets and U.S. Ambassador Deane Hinton said Thursday leftists most likely were behind the "terrorist act."

Witnesses said "calm and nerveless" killers shot dead Navy Lt. Col. in a car. A. H. B. E. Schaefelberger, 33, Wednesday as he waited outside the University of Central America for his Salvadoran girlfriend.

"Oh my love, oh my love," screamed Consuelo Escalante, 32, as she ran to the bullet-riddled car where Schaefelberger was shot through an open window.

One witness said Schaefelberger, a native of San Diego, Calif., shouted on his two-way car radio, "San Diego, Cincinnati." In apparent code to the U.S. Embassy as he lay dying. There was no explanation.

Edmundo Zelada, justice of the peace for the Sixth District of San Salvador, said the commander was shot three times in the head with .22 caliber explosive bullets.

Schaufelberger, whose body will be flown home Friday, had predicted just Friday that U.S. Navy advisers might become rebel targets because of the success U.S. Navy-trained Salvadoran troops had been having recently against guerrillas in maritime areas.

"When they (the rebels) figure out what has been happening to them, I expect they will come after the Navy," Schaufelberger told UPI in a taped interview.

At an embassy news conference, Hinton said he was not sure who killed Schaufelberger, but recent events led him to believe the gunman were leftists.

The ambassador cited an ambush last week in which two policemen were shot by leftists in downtown San Salvador and also said the embassy had evidence that "Salvadoran soldiers who surrendered at the Quebrada Seca Bridge (Wednesday) in San Vicente

Heavy runoff pushes Big Wood over banks

BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

HAILEY — The inevitable spring flooding in Blaine County began Thursday morning when Big Wood River passed the 6.5-foot flood stage.

Dick Oneida, manager of Big Wood Canal Co. in Shoshone, said the river level was 6.72 feet early Thursday morning and was running at 4,710 cubic feet per second, compared to 1,180 May 17.

Blaine County Sheriff Dennis Haynes said he knew of no flood damage in the county as of

Thursday evening, although the river was running over its banks at several locations.

Warm Springs Road, well beyond the Ketchum city limits, was closed by a washout and the Claridon Hot Springs Road was closed and under water in places. Deer Creek above Hailey and the road above Claridon Hot Springs were both closed by water.

Water was lapping at the floor of a bridge on Glendale Road, southwest of Bellevue, and predictions were for water to continue to rise during the night. Plans were made for hourly monitoring of the water level. Haynes said additional water could wash out the bridge abutments.

"County crews have been working around the clock the last few days, pulling debris and tree limbs from the river to prevent a buildup and flood/gat bridges and culverts," Haynes said.

The most serious flooding in the county Thursday appeared to be in the Broadford area and Poverty Flats, southwest of Bellevue, the sheriff said.

He added that people in Blaine County were pretty well organized for the flood potential.

"This isn't any sudden thing. Everybody knew it was coming and have been stocking up on sandbags, getting flood insurance in order and taking other precautions. You can't wait to sandbag until the flooding starts," he added.

Haynes said the county has sold about 2,000 sandbags this spring and another 2,000 would be coming in today.

Carey, which suffered severe flood damage last year when two small earth irrigation dams gave way, was in no apparent danger Thursday. Oneida said the Little Wood River flow is going into the reservoir but when that fills, there may still be a lot of water that will have to go somewhere.

Oneida and Joe Mallea, construction and maintenance foreman for the Sawtooth National Forest, agreed the conditions this year are "amazing." The snow pack was extremely heavy and the runoff that usually begins earlier in May was delayed by cold weather and even more snow.

"Now we are getting the early May runoff, the late May runoff and pretty soon we'll be in the early June runoff. The hot weather came so suddenly that it is taking the snow down in a hurry," Mallea said. "The first two weeks in June could be a real shock."

Voters must OK mergers

By ELLEN MARKS
United Press International

BOISE — A committee that met for the first time Thursday to discuss consolidation of school districts probably will have to submit its recommendation to voters for final approval. Superintendent of Schools Jerry Evans said.

"There's a long history of local control," Evans said. "It's difficult to see that any plan (would be implemented) without final approval of a local vote."

Evans is a member of the Committee on Organization of School Districts, which was set up by the Legislature this year to consider consolidating some of Idaho's 115 districts.

The Republican superintendent said during an interview that lawmakers may be more receptive next year to hikes in the public schools budget if the committee finds ways to make the statewide system more efficient.

"Without a doubt, when you look at Idaho districts, there's some merit to the argument some are too small to be an efficient and economical unit," he said.

The key question the committee faces is who will decide district mergers and what minimum standards the new entities must provide, he said.

He predicted different opinions among committee members, some of whom are from small school districts and believe "larger is not necessarily better."

"The toughest question of all is who will eventually decide," Evans said.

He said Idaho has had as many as 1,700 districts before the last major reorganization effort from 1947 through 1951.

Evans, who has served on similar committees in the past, said he is not sure how many districts would

Reagan: Allies have missile veto

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON — President Reagan said Thursday British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and the other European allies have "a sort of veto power" over any plans to start U.S. cruise missiles based on their soil.

In an interview in advance of this weekend's economic summit, Reagan also repeated that, barring an arms control agreement with Moscow, he will go ahead with plans to start deploying in December 572 nuclear-armed Pershing-2 and cruise missiles in Europe.

The president discussed arms control and other issues concerning the Western allies in an interview with a group of foreign correspondents arranged in conjunction with the summit, using Saturday at Williamsburg, Va.

Reagan also met with Italian Prime Minister Amintore Fanfani Thursday to preview the issues before the leaders of the industrial powers. While saying farewell to Fanfani, Reagan, who has been intensively courted for his role as chairman at Williamsburg, was asked if he is ready.

"As ready as I'll ever be," he replied with a smile.

During the interview in the East Room that was broadcast live to Canada and Japan, Reagan was asked who is in ultimate control of launching of the cruise missiles — an issue in the general election campaign in Britain.

"Let me say that ... I don't think either one of us will do anything independent of the other," he said. "I don't think it's a sort of veto power, doesn't it? But we have an understanding about this and would never act unilaterally with any of our allies on this."

Told the British people "are very concerned" about basing the missiles in their country, Reagan said, "They can rest assured." But he said he was reluctant to be any more explicit for fear of tipping off the foe.

Although the International recession, trade and monetary concerns will be the main focus of the summit, the visiting leaders — from Britain, France, West German, Italy, Japan, and Canada — are expected to air their views on nuclear arms negotiations with the Soviets.

Briefly

Drowning accident reported

BLISS - Officers from Twin Falls and Gooding counties continued reports late Thursday night of a drowning at Lower Salmon Falls on the Snake River... Identity of the victim was not released and officers were still investigating at press time.

Reports indicated several persons were floating the river in a raft... The body was recovered about an hour after officers reached the scene.

Brush fire still uncontrolled - PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) - A brush fire burned out of control for a second day Thursday, scorching more than 3,000 acres of rugged, remote desert.

Meteorologists predicted the blaze would be contained by Thursday and fully controlled by Saturday... More than 350 firefighters, with four water-dropping helicopters and three fixed-wing aircraft dropping fire retardant, tried to quell the flames in the mountains and isolated canyons five miles north of the desert resort community.

White's earthquake prompted the flames, a mild earthquake rattled Palm Springs and surrounding communities at 9:30 a.m. PDT, but no damage or injuries were reported.

Mayor won't seek re-election - BOSTON (UPI) - Mayor Kevin H. White, whose administration has been plagued by a federal investigation into alleged corruption, said Thursday night he will not seek re-election to an unexpired fifth term.

There will be no 'Last Hurrah' for this city," said White, a Democrat... White's announcement ended months of speculation and buoyed the hopes of 10 candidates hoping the indictment or conviction of 15 city officials in the U.S. attorney's probe would dull White's appetite for the office.

White, 53, had been city for months about whether he would seek another four-year term. Elected in 1978, White was one of a wave of big city mayors across the United States swept into office on promises of reform... The top two finishers in a Sept. 27 nonpartisan preliminary election will face each other in a runoff Nov. 8.

Unemployment claims decline - WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Labor Department reported Thursday that new claims for state unemployment benefits declined to 453,000 during the week ended May 20.

Seasonally adjusted data for the week ended May 14 reflected a 30,000 reduction in the number of initial claims for unemployment checks, according to the department's Employment and Training Administration... The department also reported that benefit recipients during the week ended May 7 dropped by 51,000 to 3,714,000.

Nearly 2 million other Americans who are receiving jobless checks from other programs are not included in the seasonally adjusted total number of unemployed under state programs.

France has productivity hike

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Manufacturing productivity increased at a greater pace in France than any other economic summit nation during 1982, the Labor Department reported Thursday, while the United States and Canada recorded declines... The department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said, however, that only the Japanese was productivity gains accompanied by a growth in output.

The bureau also released revised first quarter 1983 data for the non-farm business sector in the United States, showing a productivity increase of 4.7 percent, compared to preliminary figures that showed a 4.8 percent increase.

Orange campaign misleading

CALDELL (UPI) - Canyon County residents should be wary of a misleading door-to-door sales campaign by a group claiming its boxes of oranges are superior because they are "free ripened," says the Treasure Valley Better Business Bureau... "All oranges sold are tree ripened, and therefore there is nothing special about these oranges above those oranges being peddled door-to-door," Bureau Director Ken Thornburg said Thursday.

"The group selling these oranges for $30 a box actually purchases them in Namapa for under $50 - the same price a consumer would pay for them," he said... Thornburg also said, "It is the time of year that these types of schemes proliferate, so we want to warn consumers now before any more get ripped off."

Cable device brings lawsuit

BOISE (UPI) - An Ontario, Ont., man filed a federal court document Thursday in his defense against charges that he sold devices allowing hundreds of television viewers in the Payette area to illegally intercept a cable signal... Marvin Vaughan contended any devices that may have been sold were distributed before Home Entertainment Inc. began relaying the Movie Channel in the area. He said that means there's no basis for the $3.5 million complaint against him.

Vaughan also asserted his alleged actions fell outside the purview of the statutes of limitations covering such cases... Highest temperature in Idaho Thursday was 94 in Hagerman. Stanley again had the low temperature of 30 degrees.

Today's weather

Figures indicate 30 maximum temperature... National Weather Service Forecast for 7 p.m. EDT 5-27-83

Sunny today with highs in the mid 90s

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome... Today and Saturday, mostly sunny and warm. Highs 90 to 95, lows 50 to 55... The warm temperatures have created a rapid increase in the amount of snowmelt of the mountains. The runoff from this snowmelt has caused many rivers and streams in southern Idaho - to rise to near or above flood stage.

National Forecast for Nevada - show mostly fair with southwest winds to 15 mph. Saturday will be sunny with highs in the mid 90s to low 90s. Fair and warm over the weekend. Northern Utah calls for continued hot through Saturday.

High pressure over the western states is bringing another afternoon of very warm sunny weather to the Gem state. There is enough moisture in the atmosphere to allow for some afternoon clouds and thundershowers during these days over the mountains.

Tax protesters harass IRS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Internal Revenue Service Commissioner Roscoe Egger said Thursday harassment of IRS agents is increasing, and there have been more frequent assaults and a contract to kill an employee.

Over the past seven years, 3,647 cases of assaults and threats have been investigated by the agency's internal security division.

the home of a neighbor of the taxpayer or until authorities escorted him to safety.

"The harassment of IRS employees by tax protesters has become a serious problem," Egger told a Senate subcommittee hearing. "While this has been going on for many years, its frequency now seems to be increasing. And the tax protesters responsible for much of it appear to be becoming more organized and militant."

In another case, Egger said a taxpayer was arrested for spoiling by employee last year by striking him in the face and threatening him with a shotgun. The employee took refuge in

He also cited the increasing number of IRS employees personally sued by disgruntled taxpayers.

Last year, Egger said there were 513 incidents in which IRS employees were physically assaulted or threatened with physical assault. An increase of 60 cases over the previous year.

Currently, he said there are 647 civil suits charging violations of a citizen's civil rights.

Hatch defers drafting prayer bill

By WESLEY G. PIPPETT United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, angrily condemning right-wing groups, Thursday bowed again to "White House wishes" and delayed drafting a school prayer amendment for two weeks.

Both versions were designed to blunt the effect of the Supreme Court decisions of the early 1960s that banned prescribed classroom prayers. The White House plan is the stronger of the two.

Hatch said he preferred the White House amendment but added, "If you can't get everything, we better try to do the best we can."

It was the second time in seven days the Senate Judiciary Constitution subcommittee, which Hatch chairs, put off action so the White House could rally support for its proposal.

Hatch, saying he would support either version, said he was willing to give the White House the two weeks it requested but that he then would allow the panel to proceed with drafting an amendment.

Neither Millsap nor Kerr County District Attorney Ron Sutton would confirm reports that S. Jones belonged to a cult and that the McClellan girl's death was predetermined in a séance.

Reagan reveals spy photos, worries of Soviet expansion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House released aerial reconnaissance photographs Thursday night that administration officials said show Soviet vessels unloading military and other cargo at the Nicaraguan port of Corinto.

He criticized those who called the alternative version trivial.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., who favors the silent prayer-equal access amendment, said there were not enough votes in committee or in the full Senate to approve the White House version, which he called "a losing cause."

The pictures, taken May 20, were released several hours after President Reagan said in an interview to a group of foreign correspondents that the United States is concerned about "Soviet expansionism, and particularly when it comes into the Western Hemisphere."

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R.S.C., chairman of the parent Judiciary Committee, said he favored the White House version and that, if it could not pass, he would support the alternative version.

David Gergen, White House communications director, said the release of the photographs was not tied to the summit, where the world leaders are expected to discuss the status of arms control negotiations with the Soviets.

Vandalism repair deserves our thanks

Even dark clouds have silver linings. So it gives us a good deal of pleasure this week to note that groups and private citizens have come forward to help repair the vandalism damage at the popular Baumgartner Campground in the Sawtooth National Forest.

The contributors include the Burley Police Benevolent Association and Cpl. B.J. Hawkins, who has set up a repair fund at the Idaho Bank and Trust; Burley- and Gooding business owners Mary Brown and Jerry Freeman, who are donating materials and expertise to repair the damage to the campground's spring pool.

They are a far cry from the despicable scum (we can think of other terms we won't print) who would wantonly destroy a beautiful setting like this.

Who commits vandalism and why? The answers are complex. Some vandalism reflects conscious anger at society; at rules; at getting along; at authority. Some is born of restlessness and boredom. A fair amount is alcohol-related.

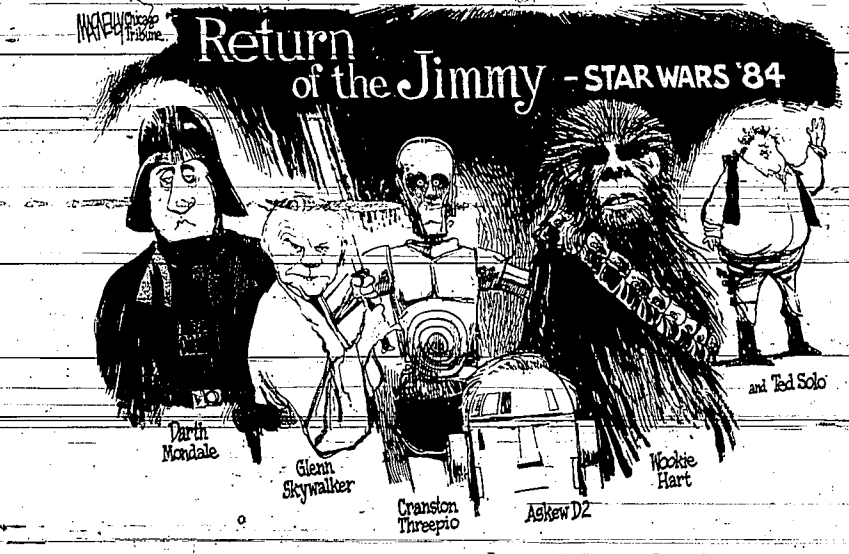

Some, we are learning, is at least in part induced by the structure and remoteness of certain sites. Park management study today often includes discussion on what park managers can do to lessen the problem, which is national in scope. But Forest Service officials, we would all agree, have better things to do with their time.

When vandalism comes close to home, we all shudder. The Magic Valley and its surrounding mountains is one of the more unspoiled areas left in America, perhaps because it has relatively few people.

But that means campsites and parks are often unattended and difficult to patrol. It is easy for vandals to work.

We don't expect to remove all of the anger in society, which sometimes spills out in violent acts. But we can all do something to stop vandalism by turning in those responsible when we see it happening.

We also can step forward to repair the damage. That sends a powerful message that the community won't just let it go: Hawkins, Brown, Freeman and those who are working with them deserve our thanks.

Beware of horses on roads

May I comment on something besides politics and school levies? Subject: Fast cars and people on horses.

School will soon be out, and we will see more and more young people on horses that are poorly trained and being ridden by inexperienced riders with no place to ride except the public road.

Horses are unpredictable, so drivers should use caution when passing them. Death can come so quickly if a horse spooks and jumps in front of a speeding car. A neighbor boy's horse did once, but fortunately, the car was going slow and little damage was done.

In 1929, I was a back-seat passenger in a car driven by a 16-year-old relative of mine. Just west of Eden, at 30 mph on a gravel road she passed only two feet from a man on a horse. I told her that was too close and too fast to pass, and was told that she knew how to drive and did not need my advice. Her boyfriend saved my day by telling her I was right.

I contacted my saddle man to the roadside clinic while working in the nearby field. She was not normally afraid of cars, but a semi load of hay came over the nearby little hill at high speed. To a horse, that looked like sudden death coming right at her. She panicked and broke her strap, and ran toward the road. I held my breath as the truck passed two feet in front of her. One jump sooner and there would have been a dead horse, a wrecked truck and quite probably, two truckers crushed under the hay.

I still ride some, near the center line till I hear a car slowing down, then I move to the barrow pit. I started handling horses well over 60 years ago, colts to big gentle and some not-so-gentle work horses. A number of saddle horses, including a couple of wild mustangs.

Again, I wish I were unpredictable, but the gentle, old family pet to kick me in the stomach. The only spot on a man where there are no bones to be broken, I made the mistake of working with her, on her gee side, when I should have been on her haw side.

So, kids, parents and drivers, let us all be careful instead of sorry.

NEA crosses line of opinion

The National Education Association has published a 144-page lesson plan to be used in the public schools. It's called "Choices... A Unit on Conflict and Nuclear War."

It is loaded with moving accounts of survivors of Hiroshima and Nagasaki; games are played intending to show the students that compromise and conciliation are the answers, with a philosophy of "better Red than dead"; second-, third- and fourth-graders are shown scary films; and the youngsters are urged to write their elected representatives about nuclear war; also to ascertain and publish the location of defense plants, research and development facilities and military bases in their area (why?) and to collect signatures to place a referendum question on the ballot concerning nuclear politics.

This is not teaching. It is political indoctrination. Teachers have a responsibility to be balanced and fair. They have a right to express their opinion, but expressing a viewpoint is very different from indoctrinating the children in it.

There are over 500 schools from Anchorage to Orlando engaged in this program. Everyone in his right mind wants to avert the horror and devastation of nuclear conflict. The issue is how we manage to do that, and on this controversial question the NEA wants the teachers to press one viewpoint. This latest action by the NEA only further undermines public confidence in public education.

Company heads, academics fire another shot at education

The newest challenge in education comes from a braintrust of corporate tycoons and college chieftains — the Business-Higher Education Forum.

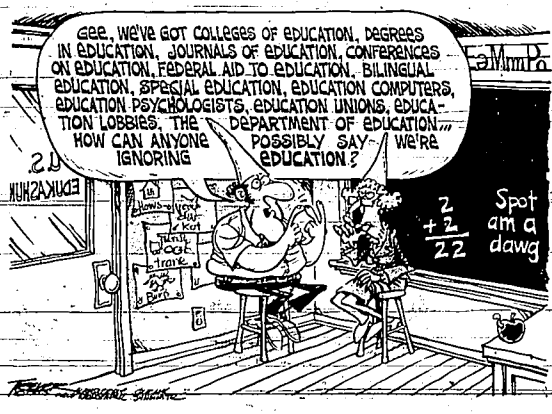

The forum, created under auspices of the American Council on Education, a few days ago put out the fifth major report in recent weeks on the way education's failures threaten the nation's future.

The council represents 1,600 colleges, universities and educational institutions. In its report, "America's Competitive Challenge: The Need for a National Response," the academic and business leaders recommended a coordinated effort by universities, the government and companies to rebuild the American economy and strengthen the educational system.

Previous reports this spring, also aiming at weak links in the education system and their negative effect on America's fortunes, came from the National Commission on Excellence in Education; the Twentieth Century Fund; the College Board; and The National Task Force on Education for Economic Growth.

Common themes in the reports include a call for hard track academic fare in grade schools, high schools and colleges, and various rescue plans to solve shortages of quality math, language and science teachers and programs.

The 16-member forum committee that prepared the report is headed by co-chairmen

Robert Anderson and David S. Saxton. Anderson is chairman of the board of Rockwell International Corp., and Saxton is president of the University of California. Among its education specifics, the forum called on industries to help replace obsolete research equipment and facilities in universities.

"Obsolete equipment and facilities, caused by many years of under-investment, is a major problem facing university researchers," the report said.

"A program of maintenance, replacement and additions is necessary to keep American basic research at the cutting edge of scientific advance."

"The health of American basic research is critical in an era where international competition increases industry's need for scientific advances," the report said. "Basic research must be made a high national priority."

Authors of the report warned, however, that economic problems in the universities have jeopardized the quality of research. More than half the nation's basic research is performed in the universities.

But more than research is threatened. A complaint among significant numbers of science graduates is that equipment they trained on in school is generations behind that in use in their jobs.

To overcome such failures, the forum report called for strengthening the education system.

"Unless we rebuild our economy and strengthen our educational system, it will be increasingly difficult — if not impossible — to maintain a just society, a high standard of living for all Americans, and a strong national defense," the report said.

Other key recommendations from the forum:

- Greater use of academicians as consultants in corporations
- Make engineering faculty salaries more competitive with market salaries.
- Create an Individual Training Account, similar to the Individual Retirement Account, to provide incentives for individuals to save for their own training and retraining needs.
- Provide loans to graduate engineering students who agree to teach. Loans would be forgiven at a specified amount for each teaching year.
- Provide additional support from the public and private sectors to train secondary school science and math teachers.

In the next decade, 15 million new workers will enter the work force. They, plus many of the 100 million now working, will need education and retraining to keep up with changes, the report said.

As this press release, the report warned that America's education institutions are not prepared for this challenge.

Mead's 'children' squabble

Samoa is caught in middle of anthropologists' infighting

WASHINGTON — There have been moments this spring when I thought we were all the jurors in an intellectual custody suit over Samoa. Every week someone else took the media witness stand to testify on behalf of either Margaret Mead's description of the island culture or Derek Freeman's vision.

The apparent issue — if you have been off on a tropical island these many weeks — has been which anthropologist portrayed the real Samoa. Was it Margaret Mead who, in 1925, saw a culture that was relatively peaceful with a guilt-free love under the palms? Was it Derek Freeman, who in the 1940s and 1960s saw a culture obsessed with virginity and rife with rape? Is it any wonder that an unrepentant Prime Minister of Samoa said this week, "To be frank, I think that both anthropologists were all wrong."

Having now waded my way through Mead's original "Coming of Age in Samoa" and Freeman's recent "Margaret Mead and Samoa," I have a somewhat different view of the controversy. This is not a custody suit over

Ellen Goodman

Samoa. It's a case of arrested rebellion. Derek Freeman has become the Gary Crosby or the Christina Crawford of the anthropological family.

It was daughter Christina who first told us that behind Joan lurked a Mommie Dearest. It is son Gary traveling about the country explaining how Great Guy Bing called him Bucket Britches and drove his mommy to drink. Now Derek Freeman is on the media circuit stating that the Founding Mother of modern anthropology was the dupe of a bunch of adolescent girls who led to her about their sex lives. Like the other descendants of superstar, Freeman is the master of the posthumous attack. Neither Joan nor Bing nor Margaret is around for a good solid "other side of the story." At no point in his book does Freeman explain why he wanted so long to publish research done in the 1940s and 1960s.

It's not that Freeman's critique of Mead's early work is entirely wrong. It's been clear for decades that Mead's work was limited by poor knowledge of the Samoan language, by the relatively short length of her visit, and her inexperience. She was young and so was her profession. Others, particularly Brad Shore of Emory University, have disagreed with her before. Their work was an advance on Mead's, not a repudiation.

But Freeman is also limited by his sources, and surely his prejudices. There is no proof for example that Mead was duped. As Anthropology Associate Professor Michael Lieber of the University of Illinois has noted, "Mead's conclusions were based on her observations of adolescent girls. Freeman's on his close association with the Samoan male power hierarchy. If a foreigner asked American high-school girls to describe American, he'd get a different picture from what corporate executives would present. This is the essence of the Mead-Freeman controversy."

As spring and the arguments wearied, Freeman's research is being contradicted point by point, article by article. But the tone of the book is more offensive than the details. It is just one academic shade short of nasty, full of the muckraker's delight in portraying Mead as a fraud, and more than a little patronizing.

He suggests among other things that Mead was also the pawn of her professor, sent out to prove his theory. This attitude prompted even Mead's first husband, anthropologist L.S. Crossman, to rise to her defense in a moving letter, calling this "utter nonsense."

"If Margaret, in going to Samoa, wanted to prove some preconceived idea, it certainly was not the nature of adolescence in a Samoan village... but that a woman, like Margaret Mead, could be a professional anthropological field-worker as well as any man."

Freeman poses as a brave man willing to take on the Mead myth for the sake of truth. Gary Crosby has said the same thing: "But in fact, there's nothing brave about it. The public loves a good un-masking.

What is behind all this is not an intellectual argument about Samoa or even human behavior, unless it's a roven human behavior. There's a touch too much for the sake of truth, people watch the great of their pedestals.

There's an added edge, I fear, when the towering figure is a woman. After one lengthy article on the controversy, Mead's daughter, Amberly College anthropologist Mary Catherine Bateson, noted that the New York Times had referred to "Professor" Freeman and "Miss" Mead.

Indeed Professor Bateson has been one of her mother's greatest defenders this spring. Margat of Mead was at least lucky with her real child. Too bad about Bing.

BOISE (UPI) — Studies indicate natural gas customers in Idaho would pocket a 19 percent hike in their monthly bills if Congress approves a deregulation plan, a Northwest Energy Co. executive says.

"If that bill goes through, it would have disastrous consequences all across the country and certainly in this state," Joe Vallejo, Northwest Energy Co. vice-president.

The Salt Lake City-based firm is the parent company of Northwest Pipeline Corp., a supplier for Intermountain-Gas Co. and other utilities throughout the region.

Vallejo said the Northwest would be particularly affected by deregulation of gas because prices in the region have been falling during the past year.

Congress is considering lifting controls on the price of gas discovered before April 1977. If approved, deregulation would occur in 1985.

The Northwest in recent years has been increasing its reliance on that "old" gas tapped earlier than 1977 to offset increases in its Canadian supply, Vallejo said.

The supplier cut its proportion of Canadian gas from about 65 percent to 38 percent of its total amount this year when prices skyrocketed, he said.

As a result, Northwest Pipeline has been able to cut its rates four times since April 1982, he said.

"We've in the Northwest while they've been going up through the country," he said. "We want to maintain that."

"If deregulation is approved by Congress, there won't be any low-cost domestic gas coming into this area, so we wouldn't be able to supply gas mix to offset Canadian mix."

He said he did not have exact figures on price increases, but studies show Northwest Pipeline would have to pay an additional $303 million for its gas supply if producers raised their costs to be competitive with fuel oil.

The result would be a "windfall" for the 17 petroleum companies that control 75 percent of the nation's natural gas production, he said.

Forty percent of the gas those firms sell is "old" gas, much of which was developed decades ago, he said.

Under deregulation, the companies could set their own prices and abrogate contracts with suppliers, who did not want to pay the increased costs.

Evans fears closed doors at INEL

BLACKFOOT (UPI) — Gov. John Evans stepped up his criticism Thursday of a federal proposal he fears would unfairly restrict state access to information about nuclear operations, saying citizens would be subject to the "whim" of the Energy secretary.

The proposal by Donald Hodel, secretary of the Energy Department, would allow officials to withhold certain kinds of non-classified information on nuclear defense programs and facilities, including weapons systems.

At a Blackfoot news conference, Evans said the rule would go too far in keeping information not only from Idaho residents, but also from the governor of the state.

His specific fear is that the state might be shut out of any say in operations of the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, a major federal nuclear research site west of Idaho Falls.

"It's a matter of the whim of the secretary," Evans said, calling the rule "too broad."

The federal agency has set a June 1 deadline for comment on the "non-classified nuclear information rule."

Evans said the alleged "vagueness" of the rule "creates some apprehension on my part, and I'm concerned about the openness in government part."

Symms' criticism supported

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. George Hansen, rising in defense of fellow Idaho lawmaker Sen. Steve Symms, says he doubts the story of a 10-year-old immigrant official that an illegal alien who died of a heart attack in a field near Glenns Ferry was not being chased by federal agents.

Hansen said Thursday that Symms may have "reacted to an over-expression of emotion by complaining citizens" when he told the Senate last week that Benjamin Tellez Sanchez died May 16 while agents pursued the 29-year-old Hispanic.

Harry Rhodes, supervisor of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Idaho, denied Symms' account of the incident.

Rhodes and Elmore County Chief Deputy Sheriff Larry Olson said INS agents were in the area when the illegal alien died, but did not chase the heart attack victim at any time.

Rhodes said his agents did not even know Sanchez was in their patrol area.

Hansen said Rhodes' account of the incident, as reported last week by UPI, is "highly suspect."

"Apparently, Mr. Rhodes wants people to believe undocumented, and even documented, workers run to the point of exhaustion and death without being chased," the GOP congressman said.

"It is possible that Sen. Symms, like this rest of us in Congress, reacted to an over-expression of emotion by complaining citizens, but I can say for a certainty that Mr. Rhodes is not credible if he wants us to think the INS was in the next county on a coffee break when a young Mexican citizen died while fleeing from an illegal INS raid," Hansen said.

Drug hotline offers reward

BOISE (UPI) — Officials said Thursday they hope to remove Idaho from the list of the nation's top marijuana-producing states by training government employees to zero in on the crop and urging citizens to report pot growers on a toll-free hotline.

Idahoans who call the telephone hotline with information about commercial marijuana-growing operations may qualify for rewards of up to $1,000, said Bill Overton, spokesman for the state Department of Law Enforcement.

Modeled after the successful anti-potting hotline that has snared Fish and Game law violators, the pot program is designed to protect citizens' identities while helping law enforcement agents cope with the state's flourishing marijuana trade, he said.

"The hotline's telephones were installed about two weeks ago, a switchboard operator said. To report pot-growing, citizens may call 1-800-327-2777, which translates to 1-800-32-GROW."

Bob Dunne, agent-in-charge of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration's office in Boise, said the DEA has provided about $30,000 this year to initiate the hotline and training programs. A second allotment later this year will be based on the success of the program, he said.

Air fight renews fear of war

By JEFFREY HELLER
United Press International

Israel warned Syria "not to play with fire" and said it viewed a Syrian aerial attack on Israeli jets over Lebanon "with great severity" in messages conveyed by the United States, Israeli officials said Thursday.

Syria, in its first comment on Wednesday's encounter, said its warplanes confronted the Israeli jets because they violated its airspace.

The encounter — the first between Syrian and Israeli warplanes since last summer — sharpened fears of a new war and came amid a rising tension over Syria's rejection of the Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal agreement.

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens is worried that Syrian military exercises expected within days inside

Syria, the Golan and Lebanon's Bekaa Valley could turn into an attack on Israeli forces, Israel Television said.

An Israeli military source said the Syrians had increased the number of its emplacements for SAM missiles in eastern Lebanon, but he said the new emplacements "did not contain missiles."

Pentagon sources reported earlier a 1000-man Syrian tank brigade apparently had been dispatched to the Bekaa and there were indications missile sites destroyed at the start of the Israeli invasion last June were being refitted for long-range SAM-5 missiles now based in Syria.

In a separate incident, the military command in Tel Aviv said one Israeli soldier was killed and 14 wounded when a roadside explosion hit a bus they were riding in eastern Lebanon.

Since the June 6 invasion, 485 Israelis have been killed in Lebanon.

Damascus Radio quoted Defense Minister Mustafa Tlas as saying the Israeli warplanes that came under attack Wednesday violated Syrian airspace, but he did not specify whether they were flying over Syria or over Syrian-controlled parts of Lebanon.

"There was no dogfight in the full meaning of the word," Tlas was quoted in the broadcast monitored in Beirut. "What happened was simply that our planes confronted the Israeli air force when it violated our airspace."

Tlas did not elaborate on the confrontation, but Israel said that Syrian planes fired two air-to-air missiles at Israeli jets on routine reconnaissance flights over Lebanon Wednesday.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Two West German journalists and a doctor who were injured in an attack on their boat by rebels on the Nicaraguan border were safe in a Costa Rican hospital Thursday, a West German Embassy spokesman said.

The three were traveling on the San Juan River between Nicaragua and Costa Rica Wednesday morning when anti-Sandinista rebels attacked them, the Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry said. The exact location of the attack was not specified.

A West German Embassy official in San Jose identified the three as Walter Schuetz, a doctor, and Valentin Schwab and Heidem Lotz, both freelance journalists.

Rebels belonging to Eden Pastora's Democratic Revolutionary Alliance attacked the boat with U.S.-made M-79 hand-held grenade launchers and automatic assault rifles, the ministry said.

Pastora, the famous "Commander Zero" who fought along the same river to topple Anastasio Somoza's National Guard, defected from the Sandinista government over its drift toward Marxism and has taken up arms against them in his old hideout.

The West German Embassy spokeswoman in San Jose said the Red Cross notified them Wednesday evening the three had been turned over to them and were taken to a local hospital.

Gas blamed for steamer disaster

ABU SIMBEL, Egypt (UPI) — Rescuers pulled 14 more bodies from Nile waters Thursday, bringing to 187 the number of confirmed dead in an explosion and fire aboard a steamer and two barges. Another 130 people were missing and presumed dead.

The steamer Tenth of Ramadan and the two barges it was towing were reduced to hulks of twisted metal by the fire Wednesday in Africa's largest man-made lake behind the towering Aswan Dam.

A government announcement said 325 people, including seven injured, were rescued. Many of them swam ashore and were picked up by helicopters.

Officials and survivors blamed the disaster on a mix of gas bottles and gasoline. "The passengers, who are mostly Sudanese, were taking to Sudan where fuel is expensive and in short supply.

The fire erupted about 170 miles south of Aswan while the crew was making tea and most of the passengers were asleep.

Survivor Ali Seddik said someone spotted smoke coming out of a storage room door.

"The crew broke the door and horrible explosions of the gas bottles and the gasoline cans followed in succession. In ten minutes, the ship was engulfed by flames," he said.

"It was a tragedy, the ship and the barges were linked together," said Brig. Gen. Youssri Dawood, who supervised the rescue effort. "I saw a large number of gas bottles and gasoline cans which the passengers apparently brought with them. That is why the fire destroyed everything."

Survivors said the disaster was compounded by the lack of fire-extinguishing equipment aboard the vessel.

The government has launched an official investigation into the Middle East's worst maritime tragedy since December 1976, when the Egyptian vessel Petra sank in the Red Sea, drowning 100 people.

Sheriff: Drunken drivers might overrun jail

By MARTY TRILLIHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The state's new drunken driving law may put so many more people behind bars in Twin Falls County that the jail won't hold them all, says Sheriff Jim Munn.

The law, which calls for mandatory minimum jail sentences for repeat drunken driving offenders, could increase by 50 percent an inmate population that is already approaching the 72-year-old jail's capacity.

Faced with that dilemma, the Twin Falls County commissioners are looking into the feasibility of transforming the now-vacated three-story original hospital building, located east of Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, into a minimum-security facility. The county-owned structure, served as the county's hospital until 1950.

"What we're trying to do is decide how the building and the area should be used," said Commissioner Judy Felton. "We are considering applying for a grant to rehabilitate the building. But it's in the very preliminary stages."

That plan got a significant boost Wednesday when engineers determined the building's foundation was structurally sound. Initially, county officials feared that water was seeping through the foundation into the structure's basement.

The engineering firm that looked at the building, J-U-B Engineers Inc., will submit a preliminary report next week, Felton said. At the same time, county officials will decide whether to pursue grant funding for the project, she said.

Munn's concern stems from a review of Fifth District Magistrate Court records showing 528 drunken driving charges filed in Twin Falls County during 1982.

Of those cases, 213 resulted in a judgment of conviction and 190 resulted in withheld judgments. As a general rule, first-time offenders have been granted withheld judgments, while drivers convicted of multiple drunken driving offenses have been convicted, although not necessarily jailed.

All that is about to change.

As of July 1, a new state law will require a minimum jail sentence of 10 days for anyone convicted of a second drunken driving offense within a five-year period.

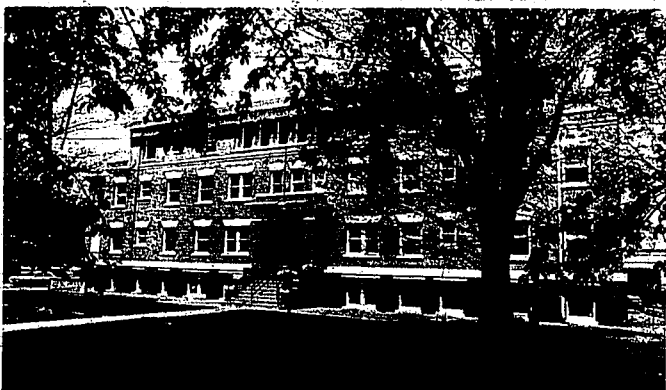

The law does not require jail sentences in the case of first-time offenders. But lawmakers who passed it earlier this year included language stating jailing first-time offenders would serve to deter drunken driving.

"Even with half of those people being second-time offenders, and a portion of them being sentenced to less than 20 days, it would give us an average of 20 to 25 DUI (driving under the influence) convictions per month," Munn said.

On average, the jail, which is located on the fourth floor of the county courthouse, has 45 inmates each day. At times, the jail population approaches 50.

Munn says he can't hold many more inmates without increasing risks to the safety of his deputies and the inmates.

Farmer pinned, escapes with life

By HAL BERTON
Times-News writer

BELLEVEUE — Jay Swanson had a narrow escape from injury Thursday morning when his tractor slipped out of gear and pinned him against his irrigation system mover.

The incident occurred about a half-mile south of Bellevue in an alfalfa field bordering Idaho 23. Swanson was trapped for nearly a quarter of an hour before his hand waving attracted and flagged down Carey resident Scott Peck.

Peck stopped his car, ran over to the tractor and then pulled the machine away.

Except for a few black and blue marks, Swanson, who farms some 800 acres of land, says that he escaped without injury.

began when he unhooked a three-point hitch from the irrigation system mover and pulled his tractor some 15 feet away.

Swanson then went over to the moving machine and, with his back to the tractor, tried to start the machine's mover.

Suddenly the tractor began rolling toward Swanson and he was roughly pinned against the mover by the three-point hitch.

Swanson says he figures the tractor was either not fully put into park, or somehow slipped out of gear.

"It seemed like I spent a long time standing there, and my leg started to go numb," recalls Swanson.

"I was just lucky. I guess I'm glad I wasn't hurt any worse," he says. "You can never be too careful."

CSI offers only lab technician course

By HARRIET GUTHERTZ
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Starting next fall, the College of Southern Idaho will offer the only two-year medical laboratory technician training program in the state.

Students who complete the program will receive an associate of science degree. They will be eligible to take a state certifying exam.

Graduates will be eligible to work in a hospital lab, a doctor's office or a pharmaceutical lab. They also will be qualified to enter a four-year medical technology program for advanced training.

The program is the first phase of a plan to expand CSI's nursing program to include allied health professions. Says Karine Siplon, the department chairman.

The program will be limited to 10 students. Interested candidates should contact Siplon immediately. Applicants must have a high-school diploma and high-school biology and algebra. Chemistry also is suggested.

Lab work at CSI and in a clinical setting will be mixed with course work during each of the four semesters, says Fran-Golding, the medical technology program director.

Classes in anatomy and physiology, microbiology, and chemistry are included. Magic Valley Regional Medical Center has agreed to supervise an internship for each of the 10 students in the program. Students will not be paid for their hospital work, but they will receive college credit.

Graduates will not have any trouble finding work, Golding says, although they may have to leave the Magic Valley.

Golding, who is an associate professor of biology, says she has been thinking about putting together a medical-technology program for years. She got approval when the Northern Idaho Community College at Coeur d'Alene dropped its program.

All three state universities and the College of Idaho have four-year medical technology programs, but it is not always financially possible for students to get the advanced degree, Golding says.

"A four-year degree is necessary for a management position, but graduates of the CSI program will be qualified to do routine lab work. With a two-year degree, they can work while completing a four-year program, she says.

Only six persons graduated from a four-year Idaho medical technology program in the past two years, she says. The CSI program hopes to fill that hole in the Idaho job market.

Coping with stress can thwart disease

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "Stress is the difference between what you would like to have happen and what the world can deliver."

That's the definition of Dr. Robert Elliot, an expert on the relationship between stress and heart disorders. Elliot presented his views on the subject at a Tuesday meeting of the South Central Medical Society. The society is made up of Magic Valley physicians.

Elliot is chairman of the Preventive and Stress Medicine Department of the University of Nebraska Medical Center. He has authored six books and many articles on stress-related diseases. He also is an American College of Cardiology officer and an advisor to the U.S. Senate on Preventive Medicine.

Elliot's presentation wasn't the staid medical lecture you'd expect. Instead, through the use of jokes, foreign accents and a slide show containing cartoons, charts and photos, the Omaha physician showed how stress can kill.

In the early 1970s, he and other researchers were asked to find out why NASA workers at Cape Kennedy were dropping dead. Through their study, they found that the deaths were related to stress.

"In Congress' infinite wisdom, every time they'd fire a rocket, their fire is 15 percent of the people who worked on it."

In this society, "you are what you work." So, the NASA technicians lost their identity.

Stress begins with a feeling of loss of control, that "you're not the master of your fate." Then, there's a loss of identity and self-esteem.

In Finland, he found lumberjacks who worked near the Russian border were dying at a high rate. The men were going to work each day in a harsh climate, away from their families for weeks at a time and facing Soviet barbed wire and machine guns.

Studies show that when animals are placed in a cage, separated, but in view of their natural enemy, the weaker of the two will die from chronic stress.

He reported that of the stress-how stress can kill.

Boys dress like girls to protest school rule

By HARRIET GUTHERTZ
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Fifteen boys at O'Leary Junior High School celebrated the spring weather Wednesday by wearing mini-skirts to class.

They were protesting a rule that prohibits males from wearing shorts but allows females to wear short skirts and dresses.

However, Principal Carl Snow didn't think it was funny. He sent the masqueraders home for their jeans. Some of the Dustin Hoffman imitators were prepared. They brought a clothing change with them.

Snow said the prank was no big deal and has happened before. He required the boys to serve a detention period after school.

Snow could hardly blame the boys for wanting to wear shorts on a sunny day, but said he wouldn't allow students to wear clothing that disrupted the classroom routine.

If shorts were allowed in school, the boys would spend too much time looking at the girls, said Douglas Cresswell, the principal of Coeur d'Alene High School. A handful of Cresswell's students also wore mini-skirts to school Wednesday, but he kept them in costume the whole day.

Students can wear almost anything they want, as long as it's in good taste, Snow said. It can't be too revealing, he said.

But some O'Leary students still will get a chance to wear shorts to school legally this year.

Following a school tradition, the ninth graders can wear "wild" things to class on the last day of school, Snow said. They have earned it, he said.

"It probably won't be as hot on that day," said Steve Clapton, a ninth grader who participated in the mini-skirt escapade.

City audit shows retention of financial health

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city of Twin Falls maintained its sound financial health last fiscal year, according to its annual audit.

And no serious malaises should develop in the near future, according to Mark Holmstead, a Twin Falls accountant, who presented the report this week to Twin Falls City Council.

The report — of where city accounts stood as of Sept. 30 — showed healthy surpluses in almost all areas. For example, the surplus in the city's general fund grew by almost $300,000.

But even though surpluses are "a luxury" many governments may wish they could share, they do not mean the city has a lot of money, city finance director Bryce King said Tuesday.

Instead, they indicate the continuing tradition of fiscal conservatism that dominates Twin Falls city government, he says.

"The city of Twin Falls has always been very conservative. We only spend money we have, if we don't have money, we cut back services, or we cut back positions."

Generally, this means the city likes to maintain close to a 20 percent surplus in each of its accounts, King says.

"It is easier to overbudget and reallocate a surplus than to underbudget and be forced to borrow the extra money, as the state is now thinking of doing, he says. The surplus also provides a cushion against unforeseen expenses.

As an indication of the city's strength on the balance sheet last year, its general-fund balance stood at $1.55 million on Sept. 30, 1982. The general fund is the city's largest source of operating money for all government functions except those that have a special purpose or a special funding source.

The 1982 budget had planned to decrease this surplus slightly.

However, an unexpected increase in the fund resulted in 1982. This was due to projected costs amounting to $208,872 less than estimated, and city revenues bringing in $246,341 more than was expected.

A large portion of the additional revenue came from the investment of city money, King says. The city bid out its banking services to Idaho First National Bank last year at a guaranteed 11.5 percent rate of return.

Since the balance in the general fund exceeded the 20 percent target, some of the money was reallocated to street improvement projects this year, King says.

Other special funds remained close to the 20 percent target as well, King says. The city has special funds to cover the operation of its sewer and water departments, as well as a variety of other more restricted areas.

The audit did not show anything King or City Manager Tom Courtney did not already know. A sound financial bill of health still is important, King says. Unqualified approval means the city will continue to be eligible for federal grants.

Mouse loses race, eaten by gambler

OWEGO, N.Y. (UPI) — A Toga County sheriff's deputy has been suspended for three days without pay for eating a live racing mouse in an Owego bar.

Arnold Crealey was betting on a recent mouse race in the Rainbow Trail tavern, which features mouse racing over a 22-foot track. He announced he would eat the mouse if it failed to win.

"Arnie told the mouse if it didn't win he was going to eat it," said tavern owner Donald Wheeland.

"The mouse lost."

"A guy dared him to do it," Wheeland said. "He said, 'You're on.'"

"He said the tail was wiggling in his throat," Wheeland said. "It took him two swallows."

Sheriff James Ayers says he suspended Crealey because the incident brought discredit to the department.

"It was misconduct. It was sick. I've been in the business for more than 30 years. I thought I had seen everything," Ayers said.

Lakers are healthy; 76ers are robust

By DAN SHAUHNESSY
The Boston Globe

PHILADELPHIA — Commissioner Larry O'Brien and the NBA operate at the mercy of CBS, which answers to a higher God — the ratings sweeps period. Accordingly, the Lakers-Sixers and basketball fans across America endured an interminable 3½ day wait for Game 2 of the NBA championship series.

They finally played the game Thursday night, and not much had changed. True, this time the Lakers weren't running on empty, and they had Bob McAdoo. But in the end, it was same old Philadelphia story.

The 76ers played their best ball when it mattered most, held the Lakers to 12 points in the first 10:30 of the final period, and ground out a 103-83 victory to take a 2-0 series lead to Hollywood.

By now it shouldn't surprise anyone that the 1982-83 Sixers were able to turn a game around without the services of Moses Malone. This Sixer team

(10-1 in the playoffs, and 75-18 since October) has been able to do whatever it takes all season. Thursday night, they trailed most of the first half, took a third quarter lead and blew it open with a foul-plagued Malone on the pine late in the fourth.

"Give them credit," said Lakers Coach Pat Riley, who admitted being amazed that his team took only five free throws. "We got a seven- or eight-point lead and they came back and did it the same way they did Sunday. They did it in the fourth quarter, and the irony was that they did it with Moses sitting on his bum."

Maurice Cheeks (19 points, eight assists) summed it up: "The key to tonight's game was our defense and rebounding in the second half." The Sixers held the Lakers to 38 points and 14 rebounds in the final 24 minutes.

Philadelphia led, 79-75, after three, and each team's Main Man — LA's Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Philly's Malone — started the fourth quarter with four fouls. Malone picked up his fifth with 7:58 left and was replaced by Earl Cureton. Not coincidentally, Jabbar (23 points, only four rebounds for the second straight game) scored six straight for the Lakers.

But the 76ers were able to hold their lead. The Lakers pulled to within two four times, the last coming when Abdul-Jabbar jammed with 6:20 left to make it 85-83.

With Malone (24 points, 12 rebounds) on the bench, the Sixers went on an 10-4 run to take a 95-87 lead with 2:24 left. The final two baskets of the run came on an unlikely "take-that" hook by Cureton and a fast-break jam by Bobby Jones.

Riley called time after Jones' dunk. Malone came back after the pause and hit three of four free throws to make it 98-87. That was enough for Lakers' superfan Jack Nicholson, who'd probably never seen a game in which Norm Nixon and Magic Johnson (13 assists) failed to score in the fourth quarter.

Racing drivers' wives must learn to live with quiet terror

By SALLY WILSON

Dallas Morning News

FORT WORTH — A three-week introductory course to auto racing:

Week One: The 1981 Indianapolis 500. Two drivers were killed in a 12-car crash.

Week Two: At Milwaukee. One driver crashed and was severely burned.

Week Three: Terre Haute Sprint Car race. A driver crashed and broke his neck, paralyzing him for life.

"After those three weeks, it was very difficult not to think, 'Who's going to get it this time?'" said Betty Rutherford, wife of Fort Worth Indy car driver Johnny "Big Boy" Rutherford. "It's a terrible feeling to think that way."

It is a feeling that, after 20 years of marriage to a world-class Indy driver, Rutherford has forced out of her mind. Last week, in a time trial for the year's Indy 500, her husband crashed and broke his foot and eight weeks in a cast.

Her reaction has become so formulated over the years it's almost instinctive: Get to the crash site, or hospital area, listen for his voice, and barricade the emotions that are trying to break out.

About three weeks ago, Betty Rutherford is playing the role of suburban housewife in River Oaks, a northwestern town inside the boundaries of Fort Worth.

She and her 45-year-old husband have two children, a boy who plays tennis, a girl who swims. The house is large, the pool inviting, and the Audi in fine shape in the garage.

She wears a Polo shirt and breezy skirt. Her hair has been done that morning. The only danger that could touch this life seems like a fender-bender at the stop sign down the tree-lined street.

But this isn't the way Betty Rutherford lives about three of every four weekends. Since meeting her future husband at Indianapolis International Speedway 20 years ago, the 44-year-old has spent more hours in the pits than in a kitchen.

Instead of making outsize "the faces" of the fast-paced, high-powered world of racing, Betty Rutherford literally has gone into the pits of it. Since 1973 — "when they finally decided women could grace the pits" — she has been part of Rutherford's crew. No polo shirts, no "Big Boy" sunglasses, no "Big Boy" brown ankle, a broken foot and eight weeks in a cast.

On race, and, qualifying days, Betty Rutherford, dressed in a fire-retardant jumpsuit with headphones strapped across her head, sits in a box five feet off the greasy concrete of the pits. There she unpacks her suitcase, which contains a computer used to monitor times. The headphones keep her informed about happenings — crashes, fires — on the course.

"I felt awkward the first few times I went down there," she said. "I'd make Johnny go in with me, so they'd know he felt it was all right. I actually think it was a macho thing, why they didn't want us in. It's nice to have the wives around to run errands, carry paraphernalia and all, talk to reporters. I've been keeping the times since we've been married, the minimum spreads, who's running the fastest times. I just used to do it in the stands.

"Before I couldn't even talk to him. Why can't I give him a kiss before he gets in the car, instead of having to do it an hour ahead of time?"

Two years ago, Rick Mears' car caught fire in the pits during re-fueling. Betty Rutherford saw the fire starting to spread down the row of pits. She cleared out quickly.

But her involvement somehow neutralizes the ever-present danger her husband faces every time he turns onto a track. After watching two "spectacular crashes" of Johnny's, she "adopted" several ground rules for her survival.

"Not to worry about anything that hasn't happened yet," she said. "Ninety-nine percent of the time it's not going to. And you have to learn to live with the element of danger. It's always there, but you don't dwell on it. The time I felt most helpless was when he was on a Vietnam tour and called me. There was mortar fire in the background, and I had no way of knowing if he was in danger or not. I think Indy

'(Don't) worry about something that hasn't happened yet — there's a 99 percent chance that it won't.'

car racing is terribly safe."

The first racing lesson came in 1964 during the Indianapolis crash. After two cars collided, a black funnel of smoke and fire clouded visibility. Betty Rutherford married less than a year, knew her husband was involved. She had been counting each car.

Still, there are difficult times. After Gordon Smiley was killed in a crash at Indy last year, she tried to help his wife, Barbara, through it. Two years ago, she formed an organization called Championship Auto Racing Auxiliary, which aids wives or newcomers to the sport.

"It was very sad," she said. "But you learn not to picture that happening to your husband."

Cubs put a damper on Braves

Moskou and Bill Campbell scattered 11 hits and Larry Bowa scored three runs Thursday night to pace the Chicago Cubs to a 5-1 victory over the Braves.

Moskou, 3-2, struck out five and walked one in allowing nine hits over seven innings. Campbell went the final two innings, allowing one hit. Bill Nickerson fell to 1-4.

The Cubs went ahead 1-0 in the first. With one out, Bowa and Bill Buckner singled. After Leon Durham walked to load the bases, Keith Moreland lofted a sacrifice fly to center, scoring Bowa.

Chicago took a 2-0 lead in the sixth. Bowa led off with a walk and went to third on a single to center by Buckner. Durham then followed with an RBI groundout. The Cubs added two runs in the seventh. With two out, Ryan Sandberg and Bowa singled. Buckner then delivered a two-run double to right. Chicago scored in the eighth when Jay Johnstone belted a 2-2 pitch over the right-center field fence for his second home run of the year.

The Braves scored in the eighth. Brett Butler tripled off the right-field fence, knocking out Moskou. Rafael Ramirez then welcomed Campbell with an RBI single to left.

Pittsburgh 6, Cincinnati 4

At Cincinnati, Mike Easler hit a homer and knocked in three runs and rookie right-hander Leo Tunnell combined with Manny Sarmiento and Kent Telvick to pitch the Pirates to victory.

St. Louis 5, Houston 3

At Houston, George Hendrick drove in three runs with a double and rookie Dave Von Ohlen hurried 5 1/2 innings of solid relief to lead the Cardinals.

Boston 7, Toronto 2

Carl Yastrzemski, in the autumn of his career, put a damper on Dave Slib's springtime.

Yastrzemski and Jim Rice cracked two-run homers and Dwight Evans added a solo blast Thursday night to power the Boston Red Sox to a 7-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays and hand right-hander Slib his first loss in May.

Kansas City 6, Baltimore 2

At Kansas City, Mo., Frank White backed the combined seven-hit pitching of Steve Renko and Mike Armstrong with a three-run homer in the third, sending Baltimore to its seventh straight loss. Renko scattered six singles, walked one and struck out over seven innings to improve his record to 4-3.

Texas 3, Chicago 1

At Chicago, Rick Honeycutt, 6-3, permitted two hits over eight innings to help the Rangers snap a four-game losing streak.

Hits abound in city loop softball play

TWIN FALLS — High-scoring games characterized Thursday night's city softball action.

In the men's play, First National Bank dumped Idaho Frozen Foods 20-5. Coors beat Sna's River Pool and Spa 15-0. Superior Chain edged Hawkins and Young 8-4. Northwest 2-1 won a 10-0 game at The Pocket/Petersen's. Merchants defeated Elsing Well Drilling 10-5. Mambo's whipped Diamond International 12-8. Leonard's beat Blue Lakes 66-0-5. Hawkins-Kawasaki dumped The Windbreak 6-4 and GS routed Twin Falls White and Brako 9-3.

In women's competition, North's defeated Taco Bandito 9-5. Donnelly's beat Elsing's 11-8 and Hobco outlasted Falls Brand/The Windbreak 19-10.

Teo Fabi raises ante again in final dress rehearsal for Sunday's Indy 500

By GARY KALE
United Press International

INDIANAPOLIS — Pole-sitter Teo Fabi relentlessly pursued a dream of winning the Indianapolis 500 in his first attempt by posting a top speed of 201.795 miles an hour Thursday in carburetor testing, the final workout before Sunday's race.

Bearing and using a stock answer of "it was a good one" to most questions, the Italian road racer was at least a mile faster than any other driver. Fabi put his Skoal March-Cosworth on the pole last Saturday with an average four lap time of 207.395 mph for the 2-1/2 mile Indianapolis Motor Speedway circuit.

Only three other drivers, each a relative newcomer to Indy, reached the 200 mph plateau. Veteran drivers preferred to drive more conservatively to protect their engines and avoid visits to the concrete wall.

Derek Daly, the Irish Formula One driver, registered 200.67; Bobby Rahal, who won two CART races in his 1982 rookie year, fashioned a 200.522, while Kevin Cogan was clocked at 200.490. All are driving March-Cosworths.

Everybody remembers May 30, 1973

It was the most tragic, most bizarre of any race ever. There was fire and rain and days that seemed would never end.

"It seems to go in cycles," said Jerry Grant, who watched in horror from his cockpit at the tragedy. "We go so many years when it is safe. Then everything catches up. That's why I have a bad feeling about this year. It's just like 1973. I'm glad I'm on the outside looking in."

More than a dozen accidents and three days of rain during this year's time trials have created a feeling of déjà vu in the 40th anniversary of that infamous "three days in May."

The '73 race could have been the final of that one, in order that the Veteran Art Pollard was killed in a fiery practice crash.

On Monday, race day back that it rained on and off, postponing the start of the race for four hours.

When the green flag finally fell, a first-lap crash—very similar to last year's when Kevin Cogan went across the track, left, Walther scurried for the life, Walther slammed into the outside wall, spewing flames and parts into the audience. More than a dozen spectators were injured, and 10 cars were damaged. Walther was burned over 40 percent of his body.

"The race was postponed until Tuesday, but more rain that day showed it back to Wednesday."

On a dark and threatening Wednesday, the race was begun again before just a few thousand fans. But on the 200 lap, Swedish driver Jim McPherson, who was leading, crashed into the outside wall, spewing flames and parts into the audience. More than a dozen spectators were injured, and 10 cars were damaged. McPherson was burned over 40 percent of his body.

Today ran light, near empty fuel tanks and that's why they didn't mind getting up to race speed. We're being a little cautious."

Mike Mosley, sitting next to Fabi in the first row, hit the timer at 199.219 mph and Rick Meares, on the outside of the front row, came in at 199.199.

Other decent speeds were achieved by Johnny Parsons, 199.814; A.J. Foyt, 198.631; Al Unser Sr., 195.016; Al Unser Jr., 194.091, and Howdy Holmes, 196.371.

Cogan said Fabi would be wise to make the first few laps a learning experience and "if he does that, he may have a good chance to win. As for myself, I think a couple of caution flags in the first 200 miles would be to my advantage."

Al Unser Jr., another rookie driver but like Fabi with experience on the Can-Am circuit, has a unique situation in Sunday's race as he competes against his father.

Mario Andretti, striving for an extra few miles of speed, had a 196.631 in a Lola-Cosworth. He's not discouraged, but disappointed that he couldn't hit the magic 200 in qualifying.

"We ran on a full tank today, trying to get the feel and be fully prepared for race day," Andretti said after the two-hour testing session. "We wanted to simulate race conditions. Maybe some of those guys who ran 200 millers

Wadkins, Crenshaw share lead

DUBLIN, Ohio (UPI) — Veterans Ben Crenshaw and Lanny Wadkins, both already winners this year on the PGA Tour, carved out 3-under-par 67s Thursday to take the lead after the first round of the $400,000 Memorial Tournament.

Crenshaw and Wadkins both carded 34s on the front side and 33s on the back nine to take a two-stroke lead over Jim Nelford, Andy Bean and Gary Koch.

Three shots back at 2-under-par 70 were Payne Stewart, Peter Jacobsen, Gary Hallberg, Tom Weiskopf, Lu Liang, Luan, John Fought and Vance Heafner.

A large group was bunched at 1-under par 71, including former U.S. Open champ Hale Irwin and Johnny Miller.

Crenshaw, who captured the Byron Nelson Classic a month ago after suffering one of his worst years in 1982, credited new-found optimism and more accurate shot making for his improved play.

"Life seems rosy again," said Crenshaw, who birdied three holes in a row after shaving par with a 10-foot putt on the 10th hole. "I haven't thought of mistakes one time this year and you can't believe what a burden that was last year."

Crenshaw said the advice given by his numerous friends on the tour last year only complicated his attempt to get back in the right groove.

"I'm trying not to be so hard on myself, just hit the ball, go find it and hit it again," he said.

Wadkins, who is the leading money winner on tour thanks to victories in the Tournament of Champions and the Greater Greensboro Open, said he loves playing golf courses in such good condition.

Both he and Crenshaw praised the 7,116-yard Muirfield Village Golf Club course as one of the best on tour. Crenshaw said he was amazed the greens are in such excellent shape despite being replaced just 10 months ago due to disease.

"I do like faster greens," said Wadkins, who noted that the putting surfaces had speeded up considerably since Wednesday's practice round.

Jack Nicklaus, who designed and owns the Muirfield layout, struggled to a 76. Defending champion Raymond Floyd carded a 72 and Tom Watson, also a former Memorial winner, shot a 73.

Hite tops Corning first round

CORNING, N.Y. (UPI) — Kathy Hite, who captured the Corning Classic two years ago but hasn't won anything since, shot a 6-under-par 68 Thursday to grab the first round lead in the LPGA tournament.

"Something about this place is magic to me," she said.

Four were tied at 2-under-par 70 — Cindy Hill, Jerilyn Britz, Suzanne Howe and Patsy Sheehan, who has been frustrated at Corning the last two years.

Sheehan has lost leads on the last two holes at Corning in the last two years. She lost to Hite in 1981 and to Sandra Spuzich in a play last year.

There was a team of nine players at 1-under 71, including Spuzich and Hall of Famer JoAnne Carner.

The weather was sunny but unseasonably cool but the chill in the air didn't seem to cool Hite, who sank seven birdies. Hite, who is just 65th on this year's money list with $8,164 in earnings, carded three bogeys in her round, all on the front nine.

Bruins win GSC sweepstakes

TWIN FALLS—Twin Falls High School has won the Gem State Conference Sweepstakes Award for the second year in the past three years.

The award is designed to encourage the eight conference schools to have a complete activity program. The winner, determined on a point system, receives the best total program in the league.

The Bruins finished first with 80 points, followed by Idaho Falls with 79, Highland with 74, Pocatello with 65, Blackfoot with 36, Skyline with 32, Minico with 28 and Bonneville with 22.

The first five places in each activity are awarded points on a 10-0-4-2 basis. In case of a tie, the points of the two corresponding places are split between the tying schools. The league member accumulating the most points during the year in conference activities wins the award.

Twin Falls won the GSC girls' track, baseball, boys' basketball and girls' cross country championships this year, and finished second in debate and football.

The Bruins also won the award for 1980-81, the first year it was given. Highland High School won the trophy last year.

Gooding softball tourney set

GOODING—The Blinco men's and women's softball teams will hold their annual Blinco Softball Tournament here June 10-12.

The tournament, sanctioned by the American Softball Association, will have both "B" and "C" divisions. Sixteen men's teams and 12 women's teams will participate.

There will be a $100 entry fee for men's teams and a $75 fee for women's teams. Interested teams should contact Ron Adamson at 934-5193 or Shari Braga at 934-5866.

BSU alums' tourney today

TWIN FALLS—All Magic Valley alumni, boosters and friends of Boise State University are invited to participate in the Seventh Annual Magic Valley BSU Alumni wide-open golf tournament today.

The tournament will be held at Blue Lakes Country Club. The cost is $30 per person and includes all golf fees, carts, BSU golf hats and dinner.

Horse show planned Saturday

TWIN FALLS—The All-Breed Idaho Horse Show will be held Saturday at Silver Tree Farms.

There will be competition in four age groups: 11-and-under, 12-14, 15-18 and 19-and-over.

The show, sponsored by the Magic Valley Appaloosa Youth Club, will start at 9 a.m. and will be judged by Don Depeu.

Further information may be obtained by phoning 324-2101 or 733-8308.

Buhl youth rodeo called off

BUHL—The annual Little Buckaroo Rodeo, sponsored by the Buhl Knight Riders and the Oasis Shrine Club for the past 10 years, has been canceled this year.

According to Knight Riders President Ken Cramer, the group did not have an arena available for the event and decided against moving out of the community.

According to Cramer, more than half of the proceeds from the rodeo have gone to the Shriners' Children's Hospital in Salt Lake City.

BSU girls' cage camp planned

BOISE—The Boise State University women's basketball program will hold its annual girls' basketball camp at the BSU Pavilion July 10-15.

The camp will be directed by BSU women's basketball Coach Connie Thorngren, assisted by other Boise State coaches and players.

The camp is limited to girls aged 10 and older. The cost is $165, which includes room and board, or $120 for day campers.

Further information can be obtained by phoning Thorngren at BSU, 385-1760.

High waters close roads

JEROME—The Idaho Department of Fish and Game has announced the closure of several roads in Blaine and Camas counties due to flooding by the Big Wood River.

Closures are Warm Springs Road 15 miles west of Ketchum, the Croy Creek Road and the main road along the west side of Mormon Reservoir.

Hansen in state competition

TWIN FALLS—Mark Hansen of Twin Falls will compete Saturday to become Mr. Idaho.

Hansen, who has been active in competitive body-building for the past 3 1/2 years, will be among 10 to 15 competitors vying for the honor at the contest, which will be held in Boise. The winner will move on to the Mr. America contest.

The Idaho competition will be part of the northwest regional contest, which will be held at the same time. In all, some 60 participants are expected to take part.

Hansen took second place in his first competition, the Teen-age Northwest, in 1980, and was sixth in the Inland Empire contest last year.

Pair share horseshoe honors

TWIN FALLS—Doc Thackeray and Fred Miller took the top honors in the Third Annual Spring Ringer Horseshoe Tournament held last weekend.

Taking second place were Keith and Angie Burgess, while Lou L. Goss and Don Searow were third.

Mike Nelson won the Runaway Shoe Award.

Cyclist second in Logan race

TWIN FALLS—Cyclist Rich Nystrom of Twin Falls took second place in the Logan Road Race, held last weekend in Logan, Utah.

Nystrom was the runner-up in the veteran's division. Racers were required to complete a 16-mile loop circuit a designated number of times, depending on their division. Nystrom had to run the course three times; or 48 miles.

Other Magic Valley participants included Dennis Bolkin and Mike Edwards.

Bowers to be honored

BOISE—Floyd Bowers of Castleford will be among the inductees in the Idaho High School Activities Association Hall of Fame at the organization's annual banquet here June 8.

Bowers will be among three inductees, including Carl "Cotton" Baird of Sandpoint and Jeff "The Lipman" Beckwith, a baseball service awards will be presented to Bob Hoover of Caldwell, Bow Dean of Challis, Al Dalley of Driggs, Gaylen Harris of Arimo, Con Bertin of Blackfoot and Robert McConaha of Ontario, Ore.

The banquet is open to the public, but reservations should be made by June 6 by contacting the ISAAA office at 344-1271. Tickets are $8.50 each.

Turner's litigant testifies

ATLANTA (UPI)—Bucky Woy testified Thursday in his $17 million defamation suit against Ted Turner that he felt the Atlanta Braves owner tried to destroy his career as a sports agent.

Woy is suing Turner because Turner accused him of being responsible for the 1979 death of Braves general manager Bill Lucas who suffered a ruptured aneurysm that resulted in brain hemorrhage and heart failure.

"There is no question he damaged my reputation," Woy said when he took the witness stand in U.S. District Court on the fourth day of the trial.

"He accused me of being a liar and wanted Ted to take these statements back," the heavyset, 46-year-old agent continued. "I wanted to clear my name."

McEnroe stays alive—barely

PARIS (UPI)—Second-seeded John McEnroe continued his stormy passage through the $1.1 million French Open Tennis Championship Thursday, while the other major contenders slithered through their second round matches.

The 24-year-old New Yorker struggled nearly three hours on center court before defeating Spain's Alberto Toms, 6-3, 7-6 (10-8), 6-3, never really managing to string together his shots.

However, there were no problems for the next four players in the seeding order— Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, Argentinian Guillermo Vilas, Sweden's defending champion Mats Wilander, and French-hope Yannick Noah.

Lendl raced to a 6-3, 6-2, 6-2 victory over Spain's Sergio Casale, Vilas overwhelmed South African Mike Wyburg, 6-1, 6-2, 6-1, Wilander hammered Frenchman Christophe Bernelle, 6-1, 6-1, 6-3, and Noah outclassed Paraguayan Victor Pecci, 6-4, 6-3, 6-3.

Top-seeded American Jimmy Connors had a rest day after winning his second round match Wednesday.

In the women's event, Martina Navratilova demonstrated why she is the odds-on favorite to retain her title, outclassing U.S. compatriot Wendy White, 6-0, 6-3. Navratilova has conceded only seven games in her three matches here.

French Open

She was joined in the fourth round by fourth-seeded Tracy Austin, an easy 6-2, 6-1 winner against fellow American Petr Dinkovic, while second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd, a four-time champion here, beat Christine Jolissaint, 6-4, 6-2, in a second round match.

Three women's seeds were eliminated in third round action. Fifth-ranked Pam Shriver of the United States retired with an injured ankle after losing the first set 6-2 against Britain's Jo Durie, Yugoslavia's Mima Jausovec upset seventh-seeded West German Sylvia Hanika, 6-7, 6-4, 6-4, and Kathy Tanvier of France dumped ninth-seeded Romanian Virginia Ruzici, 6-3, 6-4.

McEnroe, whose fiery temper earned him a $350 fine in Wednesday's first-round action, pently ran into further trouble, asking for umpire Patrick Floodros to be replaced following an exchange of words at the end of the first set.

Floodros, a karate expert, claimed McEnroe accused him of arguing with him and then challenged the official to meet him in his hotel room.

"I didn't accept the offer," Floodros said.

McEnroe's request to have Floodros switched was rejected by supervisor Roy Dance, who was also present during the American's first-round clash against compatriot Ben Testerman when McEnroe hurled insults at officials and also kicked a photographer's camera.

Explaining his opposition to Floodros, McEnroe said later, "I don't like him. I asked him a perfectly legitimate question and he got angry. I have had trouble with him many times during the past five years and he has obviously not forgotten."

"I thought it would be better if he left the court if he was going to get angry every time I asked a question," McEnroe, who also showed his frustrations during the match by hurling away his racket, said he needed to sharpen up to stand a chance of winning the French Open crown for the first time.

"I am struggling a bit here and the crowd doesn't help," he said. "They hiss me and they don't even know what's going on."

Toms, ranked 13rd on the computer, proved a determined opponent and McEnroe was forced to stay at the baseline after being frequently passed or lobbed whenever he tried to attack at the net.

The American dropped his opening serve, but then broke back immediately to race through the first set.

His service was continually giving him problems, however, and his anger showed when he hurled away his racket after failing to clinch the second set when serving at 6-4.

He eventually won the tie-breaker 10-8, but only after missing three set points.

McEnroe again showed a lack of the killer instinct in the fourth set when he lost his serve after breaking for a 2-0 lead.

He later allowed Toms to pull up from love-40, to defeat in the sixth game, but managed to reel off the next two points with cross-court passes and then hold on to the one-break advantage for victory.

Although there were no upsets among the men Thursday, 12th-seeded American Brian Gottfried came perilously close to becoming the fifth seeded casualty in Connors' half of the draw.

Fellow-American Mark Dickson looked well on the way to a surprise win after capturing the first two sets and holding a 5-1 lead in the third, but Gottfried staged an amazing recovery to squeeze home, 4-6, 2-4, 7-6, 6-3, 6-1.

Martin: I didn't punch that dogie

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI)—In the past, Billy Martin has been fired and traded because of barroom brawls, but he says he never left his seat during a rough night Wednesday and denied punching out a real estate salesman.

The incident occurred shortly after midnight in the Anaheim Hyatt, adjacent to Anaheim Stadium, where Martin's Yankees had lost a game in extra innings to the California Angels just hours earlier.

The salesman, Robin Wayne Olson, 27, from nearby El Toro, told police Martin assaulted him in the hotel bar.

Witnesses said the man bought Martin a beer—the same brand as he plugs in TV commercials—as a joke, but Martin didn't see the humor in it. The incident escalated and Martin said the man began bothering him.

Olson told police Martin punched him and changed his story later when questioned by reporters. He said he had not been hit.

Martin denied he threw any punches.

BILLY MARTIN
—Trouble in Anaheim

Anaheim police said the fight was under investigation, and detectives spoke to Martin before Wednesday night's game, which his team also lost to the Angels.

"I told them nothing happened," Martin said. "I didn't touch the guy."

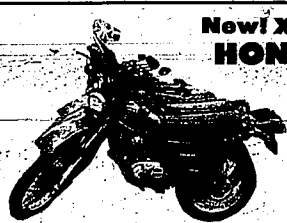

He came over four or five times and was being a wise guy. He just kept coming back. Then he threw something behind me, an ashtray, I think. He claims I hit him and he's a liar. I never left my chair.

"He's just a guy looking for publicity, and that's what he getting," Martin said.

Witnesses said a wrestling match ensued between Olson and Yankee bullpen catcher Dom Scala, who was seated at the table with Martin. Scala pinned the man to the carpet and security guards then ushered Olson out.

STAR WARS RETURN OF THE JEDI

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Downing pop and ice cream, they sat outside the downtown theater Wednesday in what little shade there was to buy tickets for the movie.

Kids and grownups waited for hours in the heat and in anticipation of the first showing in Twin Falls of "Return of the Jedi."

Opening across the country this week, "Jedi" is the long-awaited conclusion to a film trilogy that began with "Star Wars," creator George Lucas' smash hit. Released in 1977, "Star Wars" created a new genre of space fantasy that mixed technological wizardry, romance, adventure and humor in a feat of movie magic. That magic continued in the sequel, "The Empire Strikes Back," and is back for a final bow.

To some, "Return of the Jedi" may be just another space movie. To a "Star Wars" fan, it's the return of a prodigal son. Only an enthusiast would wait the year or so it took to complete the film and then wait in line to find out the fate of Luke Skywalker, Han Solo, Darth Vader, Princess Leia and the Empire.

As the crowd waited for tickets, they speculated about the final episode: A group of 13-year-olds thought Darth Vader, the evil lord and galactic bad guy, would meet his doom.

An older face in the mostly young crowd said he wanted to see the movie "to feel young again."

"Star Wars" movies, he said seriously, "make me feel 8000."

"Return of the Jedi" will do no less for you. The film takes up where "Empire" left off. On the desert planet of Tatooine, daring pilot Han Solo (Harrison Ford) still is frozen in carbonite. He hangs on a wall in the grizzly lair of Jabba the Hutt, a space gangster, who looks like a giant slug with cat eyes.

Solo's friends have come to the rescue. There's Leia (Carrie Fisher), who loves Han; Lando Calrissian (Billy Dee Williams), Han's old buddy; and of course, Luke (Mark Hamill), a little wiser and more powerful in the ways of "The Force," the mysterious power in the galaxy.

Also to the rescue is Han's co-pilot, Chewbacca, the seven-foot-plus hairy Wookiee; See-Threepio, a tall golden robot or droid as they are now called; and the beepingly emotional Artoo-Detoo.

The band of heroes must take Han from Jabba's mottled crew of aliens, who are a make-up man's dream or nightmare, depending how you like strange creatures.

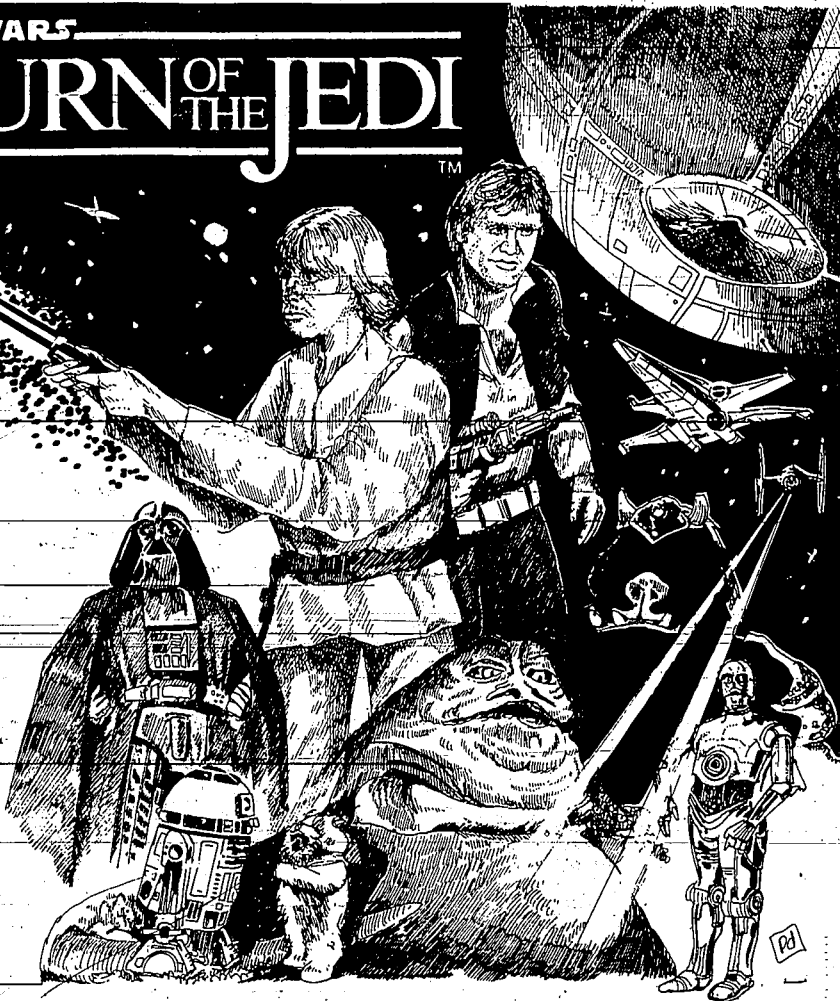

After that fight, the rebels return to their primary battle against the malevolent Emperor, who comes complete with a villain's crackle. The rebels are not only up against a whole Imperial fleet, but the remains of the dilapidated, but still functional space-station, the Death Star.

Luke, meanwhile, returns to Yoda to complete his training as a Jedi Knight, the former peacekeepers of the universe. Jedi-master Yoda, a green munchkin full of the force, tells Luke his destiny is in a confrontation with Vader. In "Empire," the dark lord told a disbelieving Luke that he was his father.

The rest of the action, and there's plenty of it, takes place on a forest-covered moon that houses a screening device for the Death Star. There, the rebels befriend the primitive and Teddy bear-like Ewoks. They are so cute, you'll probably be seeing Ewok costumes for Halloween.

"Jedi" is all eye candy. Battles scenes are interspersed at the speed of light. A dazzling space fight has you whizzing among the stars shooting at Empire opponents.

Dulcimer concert performed before full house

By WILLETTA WARBERG
Times-News arts critic

TWIN FALLS — It was thrilling to see a packed hall at a unique concert Wednesday evening at the Renaissance Academy in Twin Falls. Coloradans Bonnie Carol and Randy Kelly gave a gleaming concert on a few, seldom heard of, as well as familiar, musical instruments. The instruments were the lap (mountain) and standing hammered dulcimers, guitar, maracas, fiddle and African kalimba.

The two performers clearly displayed their astounding knowledge of all types of folk and country music from many parts of the world, dating from present times back a few centuries. And, the immaculate way they handled their many musical instruments displayed their thorough understanding of what they were doing.

Bonnie Carol opened the program with "Santa Ana's Retreat," on her lap dulcimer. The instrument was one she had made herself. It was incredulous how she handled the characteristically wide distances between frets on this stringed instrument.

Carol's fingers flew with great ease across the many strings, making exquisite sounds. Kelly backed her up with good rhythmic maracas. It was an exciting beginning.

The pair's sensitive rendition of "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" was one of the most dramatic numbers on the program. Carol and Kelly seemed to tap all emotional, technical and artistic resources possible. Also, exciting was their hammered dulcimer and mandolin duet of "Tree Song."

The musical program was varied in styles, including bluegrass, bluegrass, jigs, reels and country dance, and employed several kinds of instruments.

Despite this, the program got a bit monotonous and long-term at several points. Not unless one is prepared for the very distinct dulcimer minor, wailing sounds, is it honestly comfortable sitting and listening to this type of music for almost two hours.

The hammered dulcimer sounds similar to a harpsichord. But because it is without pedals and the metal strings, its sound doesn't change much except from loud to medium-loud to soft. It might be in this pair's best interest if Carol changed back and forth on the two dulcimer types. Or, maybe they should simply shorten the program.

Randy Kelly's songs "In the Still of the Evening" and "There's a Surprise Every Morning" were highly original and poetic compositions.

Local musician Tenley Stevens' voice and guitar collaborations with Kelly were unexpected highlights of the evening. She sang "Custom-made Woman Blues" and "Paradise."

The 'great American clown' performs in Boise

Red Skelton, composer, artist, writer and "one of America's great clowns," is performing Saturday in Boise at 8 p.m. at the Boise State University Pavilion.

His appearance is a benefit for the Miss Boise Scholarship Pageant.

Skelton, who has been on stage since he was 10, has performed in every form of show business except the Broadway legitimate theater and grand opera.

For 19 years, his show was rated among the top 10 television shows in the country. Skelton, soon to be 71, took his first steps toward fame by joining up with an unglamorous medicine show in Indiana when he was only 10 years old.

"I joined the show because I was hungry," he says, noting that he also needed to help his widowed mother and brothers.

From the medicine show, the young performer advanced to minstrel shows, showboats, Tom Shows (productions of "Uncle Tom's Cabin"), the circus, resort hotels, burlesque, walkathons (he was the master of ceremonies), vaudeville, state fairs, night clubs, movies, radio and finally television.

His first big success came through a doughnut-dunking routine, which he perfected after watching a man dunk a cake. Skelton made his radio debut in 1936 on "The Rudy Vallee Program," then starred in his own show in 1938.

He made 36 motion pictures for MGM during his 15 years with them.

Along the way, Skelton took to education, creating his own method of learning.

One thing he worked hard to improve was his memory. He felt this was necessary for him to succeed in show business.

Today, Skelton, completely self-educated, has a fine appreciation of literature and the arts. (He paints in oil, writes stories and composes music. He has written 8,000 musical selections which are copyrighted.)

Skelton has never been one afraid to display his love for his country. His interpretation of the Pledge of Allegiance, which he insisted on reciting on his television program, sparked phenomenal public reaction. Switchboards across the country lit up with requests for a copy of the pledge.

Columbia records issued a single record and it hit the best selling chart — right up there with the rock 'n' roll favorites.

Skelton was once asked by Ben Hecht, "How come you're so nice to everyone you meet?"

The comedian responded by saying "I have been told that man was made in God's image. Now I've never met God, and the next person just might be him."

Although Skelton admits to being a religious person, he seldom talks about it.

"Two ways," he says, "to lose not only respect, but sanity, is to try to change someone's beliefs or get in argument about yours. Don't ask a man if he believes in God, he will show it. If he doesn't, no use making him embarrass himself more."

Outwardly calm, Skelton never rests. If he is not creating, then he is absorbing — reading, studying, learning, growing. And you'll always find him with a cigar, unlighted, in his hand or mouth.

Daily he writes, paints, composes, gardens.

His honors have been many.

If you travel from Illinois to Indiana, not only do you cross the Wabash River at Vincennes (Skelton's hometown), but you pass over the red Skelton Bridge. It is a four double-lane highway, 35-span construction and having such a bridge named after him is an honor that has never been given to any other living celebrity.

Saturday, Idahoans will have the opportunity to be bombarded with the energy and drive of Skelton's clowning, to see him create his characterizations which have been presented before presidents and their guests.

The hungry little boy has traveled quite a road from the first day he swapped an empty belly for a belly laugh.

5th Dimension rolling on

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD—The great rock groups of the 1960s and 1970s for the most part have gone aglimmering. Defunct are The Byrds, The Iron Butterfly, Cream, The Mamas and Papas, Blood, Sweat and Tears, Led Zeppelin, Sly and the Family Stone. Scores of others have disappeared with only an echo of their albums to be heard now and then.

Some groups continue to find large audiences, the Rolling Stones, Kiss, the Grateful Dead among them.

One of the longest-lived groups never sang rock at all. The 5th Dimension, which soared on the wings of "Up, Up and Away," may be the most successful group of them all. Like two other all-black musical congregations, The Ink Spots and The Mills Brothers, the 5th Dimension has become an American institution.

Eighteen years ago Florence LaRue, Lamont McLemore, Ron Townson, Marilyn McCoo and Billy Davis Jr. put together the sweet sounds of "Go Where You Want To Go," a single that became a hit, and the 5th Dimension was off and rolling. Accused of sounding too much like the Mamas and Papas in the early days, the group found its own identity with Jim Webb's "Up, Up and Away."

Along the way Miss McCoo and Davis were married and left the group, to be replaced by Michael Procter and Joyce Wright—and the beat went on.

Today the five members of the 5th Dimension are many things: certified by six Grammy awards and 17 gold records, is assured by the release of a new single this spring. "Surrender" is due out in three weeks to be followed by an album this year, the group's first in four years.

The 5th Dimension, moreover, is booked for concerts and appearances well into 1984.

Florence LaRue, spokesman and leader of the group, knows why the group continues to roll along while many groups that emerged 15 or 20 years ago have disappeared.

"We were never trendy and we never went into rock," said the big-eyed, soft-voiced beauty.

The crash of the retail record business doubtless contributed to the downfall of many groups who fell apart economically when sales of their records plunged.

Jedi

While on land, there are crazy air cycles and space hardware. Yet, the film isn't perfect. The plot is too convenient at times and the ending is syrupy. It lacks the spontaneity of "Star Wars" and "Empire's" depth. But on the whole, the flaws are swept under the rug in this ambitious and well-made tale.

And on the Death Star, Luke and Vader crash over slinging light sabers—the Jedi swords of light—under the vigilance of the Emperor, who plans to make Luke his follower.

Every cent spent on "Jedi"—all $32.5 million—is up there on the screen. It's apparent in every dazzling special effect.

The movie also succeeds on the human level. The actors and characters have matured from the comic-book belings of "Star Wars." Hamill, particularly, turns in a sensitive performance amid the space hardware. Yet, the film isn't perfect. The plot is too convenient at times and the ending is syrupy. It lacks the spontaneity of "Star Wars" and "Empire's" depth. But on the whole, the flaws are swept under the rug in this ambitious and well-made tale.

As for outcomes of the epic, what happens when Luke meets Vader? Do Han and Leia live together happily every after? Only a Darth Vader would tell.

Others may even ask, what's all the fuss over a movie that has people running around in funny clothes, waving flashlights and talking about "the Force."

There's plenty to fuss about. After all, it isn't every movie that could sweep you off for two hours to a time long ago and a galaxy far away.

Military recruits dogs for rewarding career

DEAR READERS: Just when I think I've heard everything, I get a letter from the Department of Defense Dog Center at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, asking me to help recruit dogs for a rewarding career in the military!

Dogs are needed to be trained for guard duty, narcotic detection, and explosive detection work.

Some facts: The dog must be between 14 and 18 weeks of age, weigh a minimum of 50 pounds and can be either male or female. German shepherds and Rottweilers breeds are desired. The dog does not have to be purebred or registered, but it must have the predominant features of the breed it represents.

The Defense Department will pay $250 per dog. If you have a dog that you think qualifies, write to: D.O.D. Dog Center, Detachment 37, Lackland Air Force Base, Texas 78236.

You will receive a form to fill out. If your dog qualifies, take it to a local military veterinarian to be evaluated and examined. The examination is free. If you use a private veterinarian, YOU must pay the charges.

If your dog passes his physical, a large metal crate will be provided for shipping purposes. All you have to do is take the dog to the airport and put it in the crate. It is then flown to Texas at government expense.

So if you want to do something patriotic for your country, send your dog.

Dear Abby

DEAR FRIEND: Your friend's behavior is typical of one who has a serious hearing loss. If you "really care for her," tell her in a kind and gentle way what you have observed.

Urge her to have her hearing checked. And if she is hard of hearing, encourage her to get the help she needs immediately.

DEAR ABBY: I am the wife of a clergyman (please, don't say which denomination or what town). My husband visits members of his congregation for a variety of reasons. It's part of his job. He is a very busy man who is well-respected in the community. As a matter of policy he never telephones in advance to make an appointment for his visits. He doesn't want anyone to fuss or go to any special trouble for him, so he just drops in unexpectedly.

A few women have told me that while they appreciate his husband's visit, they would prefer that he call in advance to let them know he is coming.

—MINISTER'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I think everyone has the right to know when a visitor is coming regardless of who the visitor is.

A visitor is always more welcome when the host or hostess has had an opportunity to prepare. I could be wrong. And if I am, I'm sure to hear from those who take an opposing view.

(If you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long-stamped $37 cents, self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38823, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Jamie Lee Curtis curtains horror flicks

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD—A relieved-Jamie Lee Curtis has finally broken out. She no longer bears the label "Queen of the horror flicks."

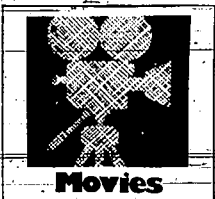

Jamie's 1978 movie debut was in "Halloween," one of the most successful horror films ever produced.

At 19, Jamie made the perfect victim. She was beautiful, slender, wide-eyed and vulnerable. Moreover, she came by her role honestly. Her mother, Janet Leigh, was the shower victim in Alfred Hitchcock's "Psycho."

She quickly was cast in such other thrillers as "From Night," "Terror Train" and "Road Games," and plunged into malfeasance, violence and gore.

Jamie became so identified with her roles she could not read her name unless it was followed by some reference to the fact that she was a throw-back to Pearl White of the old "Perils of Pauline" silent cliff-hanger flicks.

"As pigen holes go, this was not a bad one. Look at Boris Karloff, Jamie.

However, she was aware of its limitations. At least her type casting spared her an even greater burden, inevitable identification as the daughter of Miss Leigh and Tony Curtis.

Two years ago Jamie took the pledge. She was sick and tired of facing dismemberment or death in every picture. Jamie announced formally that "Halloween II" would be her last horror film; so help her God.

Sure—the cynics agreed. Just let somebody offer her more money and Jamie would be right back up to her shapely hips in mayhem and murder. But Jamie stuck to her guns.

She starred in "Death of a Centerfold," a TV movie in which she again played a victim, this time murdered by her husband. But it was pure drama, not wholesale bloodletting.

Jamie will soon be seen in "Trading Places," a comedy with Dan Aykroyd and Eddie Murphy. She is delighted to be playing a wacky hooker named Ophelia.

In "My Love Letters" due for release this fall, Jamie stars in a romantic story without a single scream or ax murder.

"I had to make the decision to stay with horror films or walk away from them and take my chances on doing other things," Jamie said the other day.

"I might not have made the decision if I'd been 35 years old—I might have chosen to play out the string and make a career of doing nothing but horror pictures for the rest of my professional life."

"But I was 22 and confident I could do other things. It was important that I kept my word about not doing more horror pictures. If I'd done more, people would have lost confidence in me."

"If it took some courage because horror pictures were my meal ticket and security, I was too young to bail out and I had to believe I could please an audience in other ways. Like making them laugh."

"The characters I played in blood and guts and slash movies weren't just terrified women. They had substance. It was vital for them to win the audience to their side so people cared what happened to them."

"They had to be sympathetic or the movies wouldn't have succeeded."

Jamie's timing could hardly be improved. The horror picture genre is fading fast. They degenerated into a series of lopped heads, limbs and spilled viscera.

Jamie thinks her best film was "Halloween," which did not show a drop of blood, a knife or other deadly instrument penetrating flesh.

Rising swing interest gets Elgart some gold

By JEFF WILSON
United Press International

LOS ANGELES—Legendary band leader Larry Elgart had cut 49 albums during his four decades in the music business and album No. 50, "Hooked on Swing," is the most successful with more than 2 million copies sold.

Elgart, who just celebrated his 61st birthday in addition to his first gold and platinum album, is thrilled about the revival of dance music.

"I feel very good about the renewed interest in swing," Elgart said, adding that he's "tried to make the music of the swing era something today's young people can relate to."

"The music was fun then and should be now."

"If you give them material that they can assimilate on their own level — good songs and in a form that is not foreign to them — then you've got the key to why they can accept it. I am delighted at the resurgence in swing."

Elgart said you can't just drag out the old swing records. They just don't sound contemporary," he said. "The equipment and technology today is infinitely superior. You have to have material that will stand up to playback."

It was the television media-blitz by Ktel Records that sold "Hooked on Swing," perhaps only surpassed in similar sales techniques by "Hooked on Classics" and K-tel's phenomenal success with Slim Whitman recordings.

"I find them far ahead on marketing, much better than the record companies," Elgart said. "We sold 2 million copies of 'Hooked on Swing' on K-tel packaging. And the new record, 'Hooked on Swing II,' is already going great."

Who buys the records?

"The demographics show a range (in age) from 15 to 70," he said. "You can't sell a million records in this rotten record market unless you appeal to a wide cross-section of people."

Elgart said he's not into nostalgia. "Swing has always been my thing. I make my living at it. I feel most comfortable with it. I think it is a very valid form of music."

Crosby says he knows how not to raise a kid

By MICHAEL HUDSON
United Press International

SAN FRANCISCO—Gary Crosby, whose revelations that father Bing beat him regularly with a metal studded belt drew national headlines, thinks he learned from his father how NOT to raise a kid.

In a San Francisco stop-over to plug his "Going My Own Way" (Doubleday), the eldest son of the famous singer discussed what he thought he had done right in rearing his stepson, now a 27-year-old successful businessman and aspiring lawyer.

"I always gave him a chance to tell his side of the story when it appeared he had misbehaved," said Gary Crosby. "I sometimes punished him, but only by spanking."

"Sure, I criticized him, but I always balanced it out with about as equal amount of praise as criticism."

"I talked over any problems, even booze and drugs — and I believe me I knew about them — and I think he listened to me."

Gary Crosby and his three brothers were part of what was hailed in the 1940s as an ideal Hollywood family. The boys were depicted in countless articles as mischievous, fun-loving rascals — members of the perfect family. Bing Crosby even won several "Father of the Year" Awards.

But in his book, written with Ross Firestone, Gary Crosby revealed that his life growing up in a 20-room Hollywood "house of terror" included signs that at the dinner table harsh summers in the "salt mines" at his dad's Nevada ranch, constant goading to lose weight and regular physical beatings.

Bing's harsh discipline met with little resistance from his insecure wife, who was an alcoholic who died in 1952.

Gary Crosby, now 50, is the first to concede that the happy-go-lucky, relaxed air that Bing Crosby projected in public and in performances was as genuine as the silent, icy father Gary knew at home.

"He had two sides. Maybe we all do," Gary Crosby said.

The four-oldest Crosby sons have failed to hold regular jobs as adults. They have accumulated 11 wives, at least five drunken driving arrests, two affiliations with Alcoholics Anonymous and a paternity suit.

The young Gary Crosby first dreamed of a career as a professional athlete and then in show business. A nightclub act with his three brothers broke up in 1959 after a brawl erupted in a Montreal dressing room.

Gary Crosby turned to barroom fighting and booze, which further turned promoters against hiring him. They could never be sure he would show up to perform, or if he did, whether he would end up insulting customers and stomping off stage.

Gary Crosby now lives largely on a trust fund from his mother. The four boys will not get their share of Bing's estate until they reach age 65. But Gary Crosby has a stable home life with his second wife, actress Andrea Claudio, 31. He says he is in good shape despite recent triple bypass heart surgery.

He also attends Alcoholics Anonymous meetings four times a week.

"I tried to fight the (liquor) problem alone for 19 years and ended up in the same outhouse where I started," he says. "I urge anyone with a problem like mine to turn to this group."

Gary thinks that Bing got his hard-line child-rearing ideas from the singer's mother. Her husband, Gary's grandfather, he says, was a "lovable Munchkin" and Gary adds that his uncle Bob, himself a famed musician, is the older Crosby most like his grandfather.

"But the other (older Crosby) brothers toed the mark well into their 50s when their mother was around. She was tough," he said.

Bing and Gary had a reconciliation of sorts before the entertainer died on a golf course in October 1977 at the age of 73. It came after an interview in which Bing Crosby conceded for the first time in public that he made mistakes in rearing his boys.

What's what

Q. If most people hear better with the right ear, as you said, how come most people put the telephone receiver to the left ear?

A. Can only surmise it's to keep the right hand free to take notes or whatever. Most people do indeed hear better with the right ear. Watch a car mechanic. Chances are about 86 to one that he'll cock his right ear toward the engine to pick up the sounds.

Q. I claim more home remedies have been devised to cure the common cold than any other ailment...?

A. Pretty close. The sore throat is said to merit that distinction.

Q. What do Africans want when they ask for "meatles"?

A. Corn. That's over most of Africa. In Egypt, corn is known as Syrian durra.

MARCO'S DISH
Chinese rice fritters smothered in honey; that was Marco Polo's favorite dish, according to the written record.

Romans hung their kerchiefs from their belts, the English hung theirs from their sleeves. It was the "hang" of those kerchiefs that gave us the pronunciation of "handkerchief." But some opinionated scribe long ago changed the spelling of the word on the theory it should be so named because it's used in the "hand."

Only one in five airline pilots smokes.

PURPLE MUSTARD
The mustard plants in the Arabian deserts are purple, not yellow as hereabouts.

Q. Why do some orchard operators whitewash their tree trunks? To repel insects?

A. Not primarily, I'm told. The idea got started by one theorist who thought the white color would reflect the winter sun which tended to crack the bark of the trees.

Between 1887 and 1900, any man condemned to death there could save his life by proving he could read the first verse of the 51st Psalm.

Minnesota residents see the northern lights about 25 times a year. If they look.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are in a state of mind that could lead to a confrontation with an associate, but you would be wise to maintain a peaceful attitude. Make plans to have more abundance.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Use tact instead of forcefulness with others and accomplish a lot more. Discuss the future with financial experts.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't waste time with the wrong persons today. Go to the right source for valuable information you need.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A financial arrangement may be annoying in the morning but solve it wisely and make better plans for the future.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take steps to improve your health and appearance, and then go after your most cherished desires.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A secret worry should be forgotten now and later, you can easily resolve the matter. Adopt a logical outlook on life.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Contact friends you have not seen in a long time—and deepen the relationships. Enjoy the social side of life tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Strive to have increased harmony with family members. Bring your talents to the attention of influential persons.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You may find it hard to step out of that convenient rut you are in early in the day, but later you can do so easily.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't neglect duties you've assumed and discharge them with true efficiency. Be careful of outsiders.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study what close ties expect of you during the day and then try to please them in the evening. Avoid trouble.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Try to enlist the help of loyal friends for a new project you have in mind. Avoid one who is a gossip.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Contact congenials for recreational purposes since you are in need of fun. The evening can be especially happy for you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY, he or she will have great capability for solving problems of others, so be sure to give the right education to make the most of this ability. Direct it toward salesmanship for best results. A good family person in this chart.
