Eastern Utah oil boom town latest to be menaced by water

By MICHAEL WHITNEY
United Press International

SALT LAKE CITY — A Forest Service official examined a new spring Sunday and quelled fears the sodden earth would slide into roaring Ashley Creek, which flooded homes in the oil boom town of Vernal.

Meanwhile, flooding on that creek stabilized after sandbagging crews worked to save several homes in the town of 6,000 people 135 miles east and slightly south of Salt Lake City.

Utah County Sheriff Arden Stewart said of the suddenly appearing spring that gushed more than a hundred gallons a minute, "It's bubbling up right alongside the road and flowing down the road and across."

"It's so wet up there, you can stand in the middle, jump up and down and the whole thing will shake."

He said a Forest Service official examined the site. "He says that he's not really that concerned at this time," Stewart said.

"Right up above it is an old crack where the mountain slipped a couple of years ago," Stewart said.

"Whether it will give way or not, I don't know."

But he added that the canyon is wide and he doesn't think a slide would block Ashley Creek, which flooded two homes and threatened several others in Vernal.

The creek was being fed by huge amounts of water from a burgeoning dam, which Saturday night began emptying as much runoff as it received from the melting snowpack in the Uinta Mountains — three times normal — to avoid overflowing.

snowpack in the Uinta Mountains to avoid overflowing.

Adding to the problem, said Cheryl England, a dispatcher in the sheriff's office, was a growing crowd of spectators.

"We've got people walking back and forth on bridges that are threatened, looking down into the water boiling beneath them," she said. "Motorists, looking at the creek, are nearly hitting pedestrians. The officers are very frightened."

Other mudslides in Utah backed up creeks this spring. One slide in Spanish Fork Canyon created a 3-mile-long lake, and another earlier this month burst in Bountiful, 15 miles north of Salt Lake City, forcing the evacuation of 1,100 people. It destroyed several homes and heavily damaged others.

Boise River may rise higher

By ELLEN MARKS
United Press International

BOISE — Officials continued a "flood quarrel" with the Boise River Sunday by hiking the water level again.

"That may be the last planned release if cooler temperatures succeed in slowing the melting of a dangerous snowpack."

An unexpected temperature drop allowed officials to delay by three hours Sunday the release of an additional 500 cubic feet per second to prevent a backup in the already filled reservoir system.

The cooler weather "improves the outlook for slowing this runoff process as the outflows may might catch up with the output of the reservoir," said Jack Blake, Ada County Disaster Services coordinator.

"I would call this a flood quarrel that will last 10 days. It's a gamble on the weather."

A meeting is scheduled today to decide whether an additional 500 cfs will have to be pumped into the river in a move that would further aggravate flooding problems experienced by residents in low-lying areas since last week.

"It will be cool the next several days, and that is a good indicator," National Weather Service hydrologist Lee Krogh said. "But it still appears there's a lot of moisture in the mountains to come down."

Releases from Lucky Peak Dam were increased at 9 a.m. rather than 6 a.m. because those monitoring reservoir levels had hoped they could escape hiking levels at all Sunday, Krogh said.

But studies of remaining snowpack in higher elevations showed at least one more increase in the river level would be needed, he said.

The additional hike brings the river surface to 9,500 cfs — a 35-year record that has forced Eagle Island and some Canyon County residents from their drenched homes.

Boise firefighters and Canyon County authorities continued their close watch on the river, but neither received calls about serious flooding problems.

Blake said water continues to spread over the flat Eagle Island grasslands, but Garden City residents west of Boise appear to be out of danger until the next release.

He predicted, however, a floodwatch would continue to be necessary for the next 10 days as the melting snowpack continues to send its contents rushing downstream.

Krogh said the Bureau of Reclamation and Army Corps of Engineers originally had called for a possible water level hike today, but that release will not take place.

Violent crime, theft strike 25 million American homes

By JUDI HASSON
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Nearly 25 million American households experienced a violent crime or a theft in 1982.

Wealthy, urban and black households were the most vulnerable, the Justice Department said Sunday.

The 29 percent of U.S. households touched by crime in 1982 was 1 percent lower than in 1981 and nearly 3 percent less than in 1975, the department's Bureau of Justice Statistics said in its annual report. The figures did not include murder.

"In 1982, households with high incomes, those in central cities, and those headed by blacks continued to be most vulnerable to crime," the report said.

In a separate report, the FBI said the number of bombings in the United States, including Puerto Rico, dropped by 30 percent in 1982, but still caused 16 deaths and property damage estimated at $7 million.

The bureau said there were 795 bombings in 1982, down from the previous year's total of 1,142. The number of deaths and injuries was down 29 percent from the 1981 total: Bombings attributed by the FBI to terrorist groups rose from 33 in 1981 to 38 in 1982.

The rich and the poor were found more likely to suffer property-crimes than middle income families, while rural households were the most crime-free, the Justice Department report said.

One-fifth of the nation's households were victimized by theft, the most common crime, and 7 percent were victims of an attempted or completed burglary. Theft is generally defined as the simple act of stealing another's property, while burglary is characterized by breaking and entering.

The overall decline from 1975 to 1982 occurred mainly because of a drop in the percentage of households with a member who had personal property stolen while away from home. The rate for this crime fell from 15.9 percent to 13.3 percent during the seven-year period, the report said.

The number of households touched by other crimes did not change enough to show a trend.

In other findings, the report said: Ten percent of all black households and six percent of all white households were victims of at least one burglary or attempted burglary in 1982.

"Families with low incomes were the most likely to have been victims of burglary. But the higher the income, the more likely a family was to have been a victim of theft."

At least one-third of all urban households were touched by crime. Rural households were the least likely to be affected.

The statistics are derived from the Bureau of Justice Statistics National Crime Survey, which measures the number of rapes, personal robberies, assaults, household burglaries, larcenies and motor vehicle thefts.

National debt at $7 trillion?

By IRAR ALLEN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The real national debt may be closer to $7 trillion than to the $1.4 trillion ceiling recently approved by Congress, a congressional staff study said Sunday.

The higher figure is arrived at by including "off-budget" federal obligations such as farm, housing and corporate loan guarantees, said the study by Joint Economic Committee staff director Bruce Bartlett, a Republican.

The statutory debt of $1.4 trillion is the difference between revenues and expenditures, and 30 percent of that could be wiped out by the stroke of a pen, the study said.

The study differentiated between what the debt would be on paper — close to $7 trillion — and what the taxpayers are likely to owe. The latter amount would be $3.5 trillion, the study said.

Because the government has authority to tax, print money and wipe out a large portion of debts it owes to itself, "the possibility that the U.S. government could, in some meaningful sense, actually go bankrupt is quite remote," the study said.

"Nevertheless, it is disturbing that the federal government is accumulating liabilities of such massive proportion."

"We may be imposing on unborn generations enormous tax burdens, inflation or at the very least political dilemmas of great size, as hard choices must be made between the cancellation of implied promises and contracts made years earlier and the threat of taxes or monetary policies which could destroy the economy."

Since much of the statutory debt of $1.4 trillion represents money owed by the government itself — mostly by the Federal Reserve System and the Social Security Trust Fund — "we could wipe out over 30 percent of the federal debt overnight, simply by canceling bonds already owned by government agencies."

"This would have no economic effect and might make people feel that the debts is less of a burden than they thought it was," the study said.

Committee chairman Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, said, "The common sense advice of this study is for the government to stop exaggerating the statutory debt, but to do a better job of keeping track of the rest of the debt."

School consolidation issue returns to Idaho

By HARRIET GUTHERTZ
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In 1945, Idaho had about 1,000 school districts. It now has 115.

Sparked by complaints that schools in Idaho waste money and operate inefficiently, the Legislature has picked up the subject of consolidation once again.

A committee of 10 legislators and 25 citizens will spend the next six months studying a further reduction. The committee will look at district boundaries, transportation routes and administrative structure before making recommendations on possible mergers.

Related story — A5

willing to bet that any districts will disappear as a result of the study.

"If took until 1962 to fully implement the recommendations of a 1946 consolidation plan, completed by the Rocky Institute of Education in Nashville, Tenn."

In 1968, the state Department of Education commissioned another school-district reorganization study. After five years of talk and nothing came of it, says Held-Bishop, the associate state superintendent.

"School-district reorganization has been studied to death," said Gus Hein, the superintendent of the Meridian schools. In a letter to Rep. Lydia Edwards, R-Donnelly,

"Major universities and other states have already conducted valid research on school size, and there is no need to re-study the issue except to apply this information to Idaho," Hein went on to say.

"Although consolidation may improve the quality and variety of courses, it has been unpopular in the districts scheduled for merger. Residents of towns such as Bliss or Dietrich do not want to lose their schools."

Consolidation "will probably be the political death knell of legislators from areas that are forced to consolidate," Hein said.

The real question is who will decide which districts should consolidate, says Jerry Evans, the state superintendent of public instruction. Should the legislature tell the amount of state aid that can be used for school administration, or should the people in the district decide themselves, Evans asks.

"The only way consolidation will work is if it starts at the local level," Evans says.

However, Ivan Hopkins, the chairman of the Shoshone school board, says the Legislature will have to step in. Hopkins favors the consolidation of the Shoshone, Dietrich and Richfield school districts, but he says the decision cannot be left to local politics.

Rep. J.F. "Chad" Chahband, R-Idaho Falls, and Hein want the Legislature to build elements of local control into any consolidation plan. Both have suggested laws that would give districts an incentive to consolidate. Chahband, a member of the legislative committee that will study consolidation, says that he might revive a proposal to limit the amount of state aid that can be used for school administration. If a district wants to operate at an inefficient size, it should pay for it locally, he says.

Hein says the Legislature should mandate a minimum enrollment of at least 250 students for secondary schools. Then, "the individual districts should figure out how to assemble the required number of students; he says."

The legislature would like to get local input, Chahband says. It does not want a "knock-down, drag-out fight like 1947." But there has to be some direction from the state, he also believes.

After holding its first meeting late last month, the legislative committee studying consolidation decided to hold a series of public hearings on the subject, Chahband says. However, a schedule has not been set yet. The committee is scheduled to report back to the full legislature in January.

Officials probe engine fire

CHICAGO (UPI) — Federal transportation officials Sunday were trying to find out what caused a fire aboard a United Airlines jet that forced the pilot to abort takeoff on a runway amid the plane of 141 passengers.

Nineteen passengers were injured going down emergency chutes or jumping from a wing of the 727 jet in the evacuation Saturday at O'Hare International Airport.

The Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board were investigating. A Federal Aviation Administration deputy said Sunday "it will be some time before we get results back from the investigation."

Passengers evacuate big jet

NEW YORK (UPI) — A vehicle used to pull large aircraft out of the runway at a Panam jet jolted at Kennedy Airport, filling the plane with smoke and forcing up to 300 of passengers to use emergency chutes to get off.

At least two people suffered minor injuries when officials evacuated between 12 and 30 passengers from the 747 jet, which had arrived from Rome at 1:32 p.m. MDT, said Port Authority officer James Finley.

The rest of the passengers had already begun getting off the plane when the fire erupted, Finley said.

OAS looks into repression

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — The Inter-American Human Rights Commission is investigating reported repression in Nicaragua, including the alleged disappearance of 18 Miskito Indians, a commission member said Sunday.

Nicaraguans accused of "counter-revolutionary" activity, meanwhile, will go on trial in special People's Tribunals beginning Monday, a government spokesman said.

Two members of the Inter-American Human Rights Commission, part of the Organization of American States, met with six of the 18 Miskito Indians who had been reported killed or missing, said Leonie Herdocha, head of the government's human rights group.

U.S. envoy reaches Mexico

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Special U.S. envoy Richard Stone reached the last stop in his Latin American tour — Mexico — following a Sunday visit in El Belize that he said was of strategic importance to the United States.

Earlier in Guatemala, Stone charged that U.S.-backed Honduras, Costa Rica, Guatemala and El Salvador are threatened by a "foreign axis" referring to Soviet and Cuban influence in Nicaragua.

Stone was met by Mexican protocol official Miryra Tull and U.S. Deputy Chief of Mission George High on his arrival in Mexico, completing his visits to the four Central American group nations that also include Colombia, Panama and Venezuela.

Guerrillas claiming victory

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — A guerrilla radio broadcast Sunday claimed that 80 government soldiers in a northeastern province that will become the "tomb" of a crack U.S.-trained battalion.

The guerrillas Radio Venceremos claimed 80 soldiers of the Alacal battalion, a crack fighting unit trained by American military advisers, were dead or wounded in two days of fighting in the rugged mountains of northeastern Morazan province.

The rebels' claim could not be independently confirmed.

Israelis shoot fleeing inmate

By United Press International

Israeli guards shot and killed a prisoner trying to escape the Anzar detention camp in south Lebanon Sunday and a new bomb blast wounded two more Israelis in a stepped-up guerrilla campaign to drive Israel out of Lebanon.

The military command in Tel Aviv said it was the first attempted escape from the Anzar camp, where 4,000 suspected guerrillas were rounded up following the Israeli invasion last June 6.

Ansar is located 14 miles from Israel's northern border and about 7 miles from the former PLO stronghold of Nabatiyeh.

The command said a commission of inquiry would investigate the killing. It said guards ordered the unidentified prisoner to halt but "he did not comply... and was killed."

Earlier, Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens ruled out a unilateral Israeli troop withdrawal from the country despite mounting casualties from guerrilla attacks.

Police examine stolen auto

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — A car stolen from a ranch home where four people were brutally stabbed was examined for clues Sunday while investigators fanned out over hundreds of square miles looking for an escaped mental patient charged in the killings.

The white 1977 Buick station wagon was found Saturday morning in the parking lot of St. Anthony's Catholic Church, about 50 miles from the community of Chino where the victims were slain six days earlier.

Foot to quit his party post

LONDON (UPI) — Just three days after the Labor Party's crushing defeat in general elections, party leader Michael Foot said he will quit in October, a union leader revealed Sunday.

Although party leaders had expected Foot to resign after Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservatives romped to a landslide victory in Thursday's election, they were angered by the surprise announcement. Foot declined all comment until Wednesday, when he was to meet with party leaders.

Storms sweep across plains states as Midwest simmers

Thunderstorms plying the Plains Sunday, spraying western Texas with large hailstones and sweeping southern Wyoming with 60 mph winds.

Two people were killed in the crash of a plane that tried to fly out of a storm in Iowa.

Forecast watch was posted over central Nebraska and eastern South Dakota. Light snow dusted the higher elevations of Yellowstone and Teton Parks.

Summertime temperatures previewed across most of the nation — ranging the Midwest and parts of the East with mid-80 to 90-degree highs.

Alpena, Mich., reached a high of 89 degrees to tie its 1961 record and Marquette, Mich., had an 83 degree high to snap its 1971 record of 81.

After 14 consecutive soggy weekends, New Yorkers got a steamy taste of summer with 90-degree temperatures and clear, blue skies.

Synopsis:

Warmer, lighter winds and showers tapering off.

That's the outlook for the Magic Valley and most of Idaho today.

As a cold upper level low pressure system moves eastward, a strong ridge of high pressure moving inland off the Pacific Ocean will replace it. As a result, temperatures will rise and shower activity prevalent over Idaho Sunday will taper off.

On Sunday, satellite and surface reports indicated widespread showers over and near the state's mountains. Temperature readings remained cool despite sunshine and were in the 50s and low 60s. Strong, gusty westerly winds of 10 to 20 mph were general, with gusts near 30 mph occurring in the Magic Valley and Treasure Valley.

The warmest temperature reported was 69 degrees at Hagerman. Stanley, 31 was the coldest morning low, as minimum readings were generally in the 30s and 40s.

The agricultural outlook calls for a chance of late afternoon showers over the mountains Wednesday through Friday, but valley areas should remain dry. Temperatures will be a little above normal by midweek.

Total precipitation in southern Idaho today through Friday will be near zero in the valleys. Daily evaporation rates will be around .25 inch today and Tuesday, rising to near .42 inch Wednesday through Friday. Winds will be generally less than 10 mph today and Tuesday, except this afternoon when velocities will reach 10 to 15 mph.

Elsewhere in the nation Sunday, the hottest temperature reported was 100 degrees at Bullhead City, and Lake Havasu City, both in Arizona, and the coolest was 33 at Burns, Ore.

Troop involvement not likely

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Reagan administration does not see "any contingency" that could lead to American soldiers fighting in Central America, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said Sunday.

While insisting the United States must act to prevent "a nest of communist" states in the region, Weinberger asserted that goal is being pursued simply through assisting El Salvador, Honduras and other friendly governments with money and expertise.

The defense chief, interviewed on CBS' "Face the Nation," also said further cuts in the military budget would "dangerously" delay needed weapons systems and make them "infinitely more expensive."

Shuttle wows 'em in capital

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Space shuttles don't fly overhead in Omaha," Eric Kirchman said Sunday as the prototype spacecraft Enterprise, lashed to a Boeing 747, made a lazy pass up the Potomac past the Washington Monument.

Kirchman, 14, was one of about 300 tourists standing in line at the obelisk who got a bonus sight when the Enterprise cruised at an excruciatingly slow speed up the river along the eastern edge of the capital city.

The Enterprise, the original test model of the reusable space craft, circled Washington and then flew the river route on its way to a daylong display at Dulles International Airport, 25 miles outside the capital in the Virginia countryside.

Bell backs education policy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Education Secretary Terrel Bell said Sunday the Reagan administration is providing an equal amount of federal aid to education for less money, and argued cash alone will not solve the nation's school woes.

With education being pushed by the White House into the political limelight for the 1984 campaign, Bell restated President Reagan's view that states and local school boards must take up the challenge of improving the schools.

"There must be a dramatic change in our way of managing schools," he said, on NBC's "Meet the Press." "Until we change the management and raise the standards and do other necessary things," Bell said, spending more money is not the answer.

Budget accord seems nearer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate-House budget leaders, who resume work today on a compromise 1984 spending plan, are optimistic about reaching agreement, perhaps because they are putting major policy disagreements aside.

The joint conference committee is trying to blend the Senate-passed $550.1 billion budget for fiscal 1984, which begins Oct. 1, and the House-passed $551 billion plan into a single compromise Congress will pass.

President Reagan opposes both, but has no veto power over the final resolution. He can, however, veto the individual bills that adhere to its provisions.

Shultz seeks Europe balance

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — In a "report card" on his recent international meetings, Secretary of State George Shultz told 15,000 people at Stanford University Sunday that America cannot "take peace for granted."

Shultz told graduates and their families at a commencement address that the "unprecedented expansion of Soviet power over the past two decades cannot be ignored or rationalized away."

"Any President, any administration, would be forced to respond. We have seen too often that an imbalance of power is an invitation to conflict," he said.

Wisconsin delights Cranston

BOSTON (UPI) — Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., buoyed by his upset victory in the Wisconsin straw poll over the weekend, said Sunday he considers himself among the top three contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Cranston told a news conference at Logan International Airport he is "delighted" with Saturday's victory over former Vice President Walter Mondale.

White House benefit fete draws throng

By NORMAN D. SANDLER
United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Reagan put politics aside Sunday to welcome Hollywood stars, politicians and hundreds of other guests to the White House to help raise money for the Special Olympics for handicapped youngsters.

A marching band played the Olympics theme and a symbolic torch was lit as the crowd of 800 to 900 Special Olympics supporters and contributors gathered on the South Lawn with young competitors from the United States, Japan, Kenya, Chile and Greece.

The Special Olympics program, founded in 1968 by the Kennedy family, now boasts participation by more than 1 million young people in 50 countries. Reagan hailed it as a shining example of private initiative and said if the organizers had waited for federal support, "We'd still be at the starting gate."

"By training and competing in these events—you're realizing your hopes for a fuller, more productive life," Reagan said, "and you're kindling in the rest of us the hope that through individual effort, we can make this a more caring world."

The dress was informal and the spirit warm as the president and his wife, Nancy, joined in nearly two hours of festivities, brought to a musical finale with the soft rock of the Beach Boys.

The reception followed the benefit premiere of "Superman III," and the honor guests included Superman himself—actor Christopher Reeve—his coach of the 1983 Special Olympics.

Political differences were buried for the moment. Reagan had a warm welcome for Reeve, who has accused the president of "raping the poor people of this country," and praise for Eunice Shriver — sister of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. — who founded the Special Olympics.

Mrs. Shriver recalled that another brother, John Kennedy, had stood on the South Lawn during his own presidency 20 years ago and said, "We, as a nation, will be judged by our caring for our less powerful citizens."

"This house is the symbolic home of all those who lead, who discover, who transcend," she said. "It is right and good that our Special Olympians are here."

The senator kept a low profile, along with several other members of the Kennedy and Shriver clans, calling the Special Olympics "very, very special."

Kennedy's name was not on the guest list, although his son Teddy was listed. Pressed for an explanation, a White House aide said the senator was invited, but "may have been late in responding."

The program included a demonstration of soccer ball juggling, gymnastics and a relay race around the South Lawn — three of the 16 events in the Special Olympics, which will be held next month in Louisiana.

As Reagan addressed the crowd, 21-year-old Ralph Crossan Jr., a Special Olympics contestant from Maryland, pushed his way past security guards, saying, "I want to see the president." Minutes later, Reagan gestured him forward and he embraced the president, Mrs. Reagan and Reeve.

A huge tent covered scores of tables decked out with bottles of chilled white wine and picnic baskets containing chicken dinners.

The White House was only one of three stops for the Beach Boys during a whirlwind Sunday in Washington, sandwiched between a concert at RFK Stadium and a birthday party for Bush.

Interior Secretary James Watt, who said in April he was certain he would like the Beach Boys once he had the opportunity to meet them, was not expected to attend. Aides said he had conflicting speaking engagements.

The Beach Boys' brief performance was a fitting followup to a much-publicized flap in April that ended when Watt, ridiculed in the press and rebuked in the Oval Office, quickly altered his view of their music and rescinded an edict against rock concerts on federal park land in the capital.

Reagan, Hawke to confer today

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Australian Prime Minister Robert Hawke meets with President Reagan today to reaffirm the close ties between his country and the United States and review global economics and mutual security interests.

During two hours of meetings, including a working lunch, the two leaders will concentrate on areas of general agreement that attest to what one senior U.S. official called the solid relationship between the two nations.

Central America important to U.S.

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The United States cannot "throw up its hands and walk away" from Central America, which is of "greater" strategic importance to the nation than was Vietnam, former President Gerald Ford said Sunday.

If the United States were to cut out economic and military aid to Central American nations, it could open the door for establishment of a threatening Soviet or Cuban military presence, Ford told a news conference.

Reaction is good news

The most interesting thing about Averell Harriman's get-together with Yuri Andropov is that it was the first time since the former KGB chief took charge of the USSR that any American has spent serious time talking to him. Andropov is a stranger — and a mystery — to U.S. leaders at a time when knowledge and insight are enormously important.

It's good news, therefore, that the White House's initial reaction to Andropov's let's-be-friends comments — were positive. A willingness to listen and respond to signals doesn't cost the U.S. anything — and it could lead to better relations.

Soviet conduct in many fields is totally repugnant — the invasion of Afghanistan, the bullying of Poland, the adventurism in Latin America. But there are other areas where self-interest brings us together — trade, grain sales, arms reductions. President Reagan has tended to forget that, what with his cold war-ish outbursts about "the evil empire."

End of an era at sea

The Navy's plans for the destroyers USS Mullinix and USS Hull signal the end of an era. They are evidence of how times, needs and military hardware have so very drastically changed.

The Mullinix and Hull are the last of the "traditional" tin cans, vessels which were completely armed with guns rather than missiles. Both will be deactivated in the next three months.

Their day is gone, it seems; a new breed of destroyers — larger, equipped with the most sophisticated electronic gear and bristling with missiles for use against enemy planes, surface and undersea ships and other missiles, is here.

They are nearly twice the size of the Mullinix and Hull, are considerably faster, can cruise 6,000 miles without refueling and some can even carry helicopters. Thus, while the Navy might be shrinking in number of vessels, it is developing impressive muscle in the size, tonnage, speed and power of its fleet.

Except for guided-missile frigates, smaller warships, corvettes, PT boats and destroyer escorts are fast becoming ghosts of a storied and glorious past. And — very soon, now — the last of the conventional destroyers will join them.

Good use for a quarter

Even though parents and politicians across the country got exercised about damnation when video games became popular, it never did make sense that video games would be any more harmful to American morals and mores than baseball or billiards.

And now there is evidence, with all the panoply of science, to suggest that, indeed, video games do not necessarily spell the end of civilization.

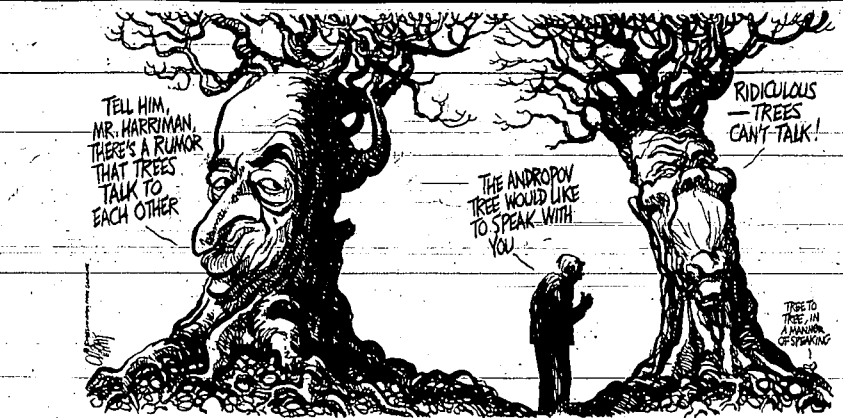

Researchers at a convention in Boston reported preliminary findings that video game arcades are not ruining families, are not seducing hordes of children from the classroom, are not gobbling up children's lunch money and are not turning them into mindless automatons.

Although there are some negatives, such as the overemphasis on violence in many games, the general consensus seems to be that the machines are harmless. They may even have some positive impacts by improving motor skills and spatial perception abilities of some aficionados.

In light of the evidence, it is puzzling that so many elders surround the subject with moralistic bombast, while trying to ban or severely restrict the establishment of video arcades in their communities.

Those parents who don't want to be left in the dustardst too soon might consider the possibility of investing a quarter to find out what their children are up to.

On careers, life in the 'goldfish bowl'

Last week's mail brought a fascinating survey, a lengthy questionnaire on "editors and stress." It arrived in two parts, one for me to answer and one for my spouse, Jan.

The sponsoring Associated Press Managing Editors is a national organization which does some of the best research in the field on daily newspaper management.

This particular survey probes that, and more. It asks questions about family life, how editing a newspaper affects our personal lives and how we handle the stress of deadline pressures and public visibility.

It asks what it is like to live in the "goldfish bowl" of a highly visible job, and it asks that of Jan as well as of me.

Well, let me tell you. Jan took to the opportunity to express her views on this subject like a Richfield Canal trout to a woolly worm fly — with relish and enthusiasm. "I might give you a few tidbits," she said as I left her with her copy.

How, the survey asks, do the demands of being a newspaper editor cut into family life? How do family members feel about the "public nature" of my work as editor? How do Jan and I balance our separate work commitments outside the home (Jan teaches at Morningside School) with the mutual task of homemaking and raising a family?

Jan's perspective on these and other questions isn't exactly the same as mine. She feels, for example, that my job as an editor limits to some degree the range of activities in which she could become involved, such as party politics and other political activism.

To some extent, she's right. A newspaper, in my view, needs to be as neutral and fair as is possible in its coverage of sensitive subjects. Highly visible involvement by a staff member or a spouse can be interpreted as a veiled expression of the newspaper's "opinion."

As with a public official, a newspaper should not only be above suspicion, it should avoid even the appearance of bias.

But that high goal can run counter to another: any citizen, whether a newspaper employee or spouse, has a right to express a view. A person doesn't give up his or her civil rights by working in the media or marrying someone who does.

As with other tough questions, this one isn't black or white, but gray.

In Seattle last month, the spouse of one Seattle Times editor turned down a position on the mayor's staff rather than risk the appearance of favoritism.

But in Portland, Ore., the newspaper's long-time editor has been married to the city mayor, with no apparent difficulties between the paper and city government.

What it comes down to is that each case is different. I would guess that in Twin Falls, people, for the most part, understand such distinctions, whether the people involved are public officials or not.

Jan says people generally understand that she doesn't represent The Times-News, nor do its opinions correspond always with hers.

Nor should they. Along that line, we've had some "interesting" discussions in the Hartgen household in the past few months over some of the editorials I've written on education and education funding.

Potential conflicts probably can be found in many career paths and are certainly not limited to journalism. The trick, it seems to me, is to separate those areas from the overall dynamics at work in a family. From my perspective, that has as much to do with handling the natural stress of journalism as anything else.

Letters

They should show true colors

Some friends of mine are calling what is happening in this country that is being helped along by our own elected government officials.

The holding of meetings behind closed doors with environmental groups to make Idaho into a recreational paradise for people who have no concern for those of us who have a living off the natural resources of the land. This with the blessing of our state government officials, the Federal government included, makes me wonder, has the Feds taken over our state's rights along with the land?

I'm glad I'm writing this letter now because pretty soon it's going to be against the law to criticize the federal bureaucrats. After all, isn't that how it is in "Russia."

Never before has a state been forced to turn over to the Federal government its land and natural resources on which it depends for a living; this with the help of their own state government.

Oh, yes, the Idaho Conservation League didn't forget to mention that this little outfit had a hand in ending Cecil Andrus, which didn't hurt anyone's feelings when he left office either, but this only shows how far down a politician will stoop to get a few votes.

If I was a man running for office, I'd surely not want the support of a group of people that has stood in the way of progress of an industrialized nation, to stop the development of nuclear power plants, open pit coal mining, drilling for oil, cutting of timber in the forest.

In fact, I don't think there is anything they didn't stand against. No sir, I wouldn't want their vote at all.

If by chance there are any politicians who doubt my word as to what the Forest Service is doing to us mining people come up to Salmon and I'll show you that is if any of the gates are open leading to the forest.

Oh, yes, no one in Lemhi County gave them permission to dig up gates. They did it on their own. Does this sound like we have any state rights? Seems like Germany before the war.

So when you think of the rights of people of El Salvador and Poland, also think of your rights that are going down the drain here at home.

Why don't the bureaucrats take down "Old Glory" off the buildings and fly their true colors? JIM NASH

Smoker segregation a puzzling move

I gave up smoking those nasty cigarettes about 20 years ago. I reckon they're hard on your health; and they're an irritant to non-smokers.

I still puff on a stogie now and then, which is even more obnoxious, but I try not to offend others. I certainly have no objection to non-smoking sections in public facilities and usually take that option if there's a choice.

Nonebess, it left me breathless when the San Francisco City Council decreed that private office facilities must be segregated between smokers and non-smokers. I doubt that much of a problem existed, except for a handful of cases. Those could surely have been ameliorated under existing labor-safety laws without adding the expense and turmoil that will result from the ordinance.

The strangest part of the episode is that it occurred in San Francisco. That city, sometimes known as Baghdad by the Bay, has been stubbornly tolerant of every kind of human excess that can be dreamed up by its ever-changing populace.

San Francisco is a diamond among the fake gemstones that make up most large cities. Its unique bay, set against redwoods and lush greenery, gives it an almost world-class beauty. The climate is stimulating, but comfortable. The whole setting breeds creativity.

But some of this creative thinking has resulted in pain and degradation. I walked through Haight-Ashbury when the drug culture was enjoying its most favorable publicity. The toll on those pitiful young people was incalculable, but there were some notable artistic accomplishments by members of the "dropout society," but many paid a high price and some are still paying.

The city looked the other way, exhibiting its determination to accommodate any and all life styles.

Homosexuals found San Francisco's tolerance to their liking. Persecuted elsewhere, they have concentrated in the city. Approximately one in four San Franciscans now admits to being gay.

The effect on city government has been pronounced, and by most accounts, not healthy. Gays have gone beyond legitimate demands, to enforcing their wishes on a wide variety of issues.

Crime has taken a frightening leap in the Bay City. You can find and join every kind of weird sect or cabal known to mankind but, by golly, you'd better not fire up a cigarette next to someone who doesn't have that vice.

I can just see the hardware miners, fur traders and pirates who walked that ground a few generations ago. They're rolling over in their graves.

"The city has gone to hell," they'd say. "Just wait until the next earthquake. That'll straighten 'em out!"

Former U. Gov. Phil Batt writes a column from his onion farm at Wilder.

Guiltily consciences are not prevalent in the city. Doing one's own thing seems to include a wide variety of subjects, both legal and illegal.

When Mayor Mosconi was gunned down in his office by a former city supervisor, the jury found the killer innocent of murder. They convicted him of manslaughter and put him on parole. The reason? He had been eating too much junk food and was, therefore, not responsible for his actions.

Law-and-order candidates regularly aspire to City Council and to become mayor. They are defeated just as regularly.

That's why it seems incongruous that San Francisco, of all places, should segregate smokers in private facilities. You can do about anything you want in that town. You can go see dozens of square blocks of strippers, with no limit on outlandish sex acts. You can find and join every kind of weird sect or cabal known to mankind but, by golly, you'd better not fire up a cigarette next to someone who doesn't have that vice.

I can just see the hardware miners, fur traders and pirates who walked that ground a few generations ago. They're rolling over in their graves.

"The city has gone to hell," they'd say. "Just wait until the next earthquake. That'll straighten 'em out!"

Former U. Gov. Phil Batt writes a column from his onion farm at Wilder.

Gospel according to St. Tip: You're rich, you shall pay

House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., laid out the official party line for the Democrats this past week.

For the long term, nothing was changed. For the short-term, the speaker is counting on short-termies.

Since the days of Franklin D. Roosevelt, the basic economic philosophy of the Democratic Party has been to tax the wealthy. The basic social policy has been to spend the tax receipts on the poor. O'Neill was true to this reasonable and massively successful political tradition.

Choosing as his audience a group highly unlikely to appreciate his speech, O'Neill described the Reagan economic policies as "a program of the rich, by the rich and for the rich." This traditional Democratic battle cry was delivered to a conference of the American

Otis Pike

Stock Exchange, and the applause did not threaten to bring the roof down.

Specifically, O'Neill proposed that no one should get more than $700 in tax reductions from the tax cut coming July 1. If you make less than $50,000 per year, says the Gospel according to St. Tip, you are not rich and should get the full benefit of the tax cut. If you make more than $50,000, you are rich and you shall pay.

His proposal will be well-received in those smoky halls where the names of Franklin Roosevelt, Harry S. Truman and John F. Kennedy are invoked as patron saints. It is a simple political concept. There are more people making less than $50,000 than there are making more than $50,000. More people, more votes.

There are two things wrong with O'Neill's proposal — one political, one not.

There are people making more than $50,000 — far from a majority, but plenty. Not all the people making that kind of money are in the U.S. Senate. No politician likes to do anything that makes anyone mad, but the proposal is that it has little to do with budget deficits.

O'Neill may claim the president's program is of the rich, by the rich and for the rich. He cannot deny that it also is of the Congress, by the Congress and for the Congress. Congress passed the tax bill the Democrats are calling unfair.

Here is where the short memories are essential. When the current tax law was being written in 1981, both parties engaged in what House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, described as an "auction" to see which party could do the most to cut taxes.

As recently as this spring, the House Democrats passed a budget calling for raising $30 billion in additional revenue. As they passed it, they boasted that the deficit in their budget was smaller than in Reagan's. The only way they could raise that $30 billion was to repeal the third year of the tax cut.

Now, O'Neill says, forget what we said only two months ago. We aren't going to repeal the third year of the tax cut, only limit it for the rich. We aren't going to raise $30 billion, only $6 billion. Our deficit would be bigger. That, he forgot to say.

On the day O'Neill came out with the Democratic program for the 1984 campaign, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the windfall oil profits tax was constitutional even though it treated some oil produced in Alaska differently from oil produced elsewhere.

That decision will guarantee almost as much revenue over the next five years as the classic Democratic proposal to soak the rich.

New offices to be ready for doctors

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Two new doctors soon will be joining the hospital staff of St. Benedict's Hospital in Jerome, and a new office building will be available for their needs.

Construction began last week on a 22-by-68-foot office building, just south of the hospital. It will provide office space, examining rooms and storage rooms for two physicians.

Robert Campbell, the hospital's executive director, says that doctors using the new building will have access to all hospital facilities and equipment.

By being located near St. Benedict's, the physicians will be able to avoid having to buy some of the same equipment that is across the street, Campbell notes.

He says the location also will be convenient for patient care and the use of hospital departments and records.

The building is one of four satellite structures that St. Benedict's Hospital has provided for medical staff members on and around the hospital grounds.

The two new doctors coming to Jerome this summer are Dr. Susan Hulme, an internist, and Dr.

James Irwin, a family practitioner.

Hulme will join the office of Dr. James Sloat, and Irwin will occupy half of the new building.

Campbell says that negotiations are under way with a urologist, who will be offered the second half of the new facility.

"Our policy is to recruit medical talent to meet the needs of the community," Campbell says. "To do this, we first need to make building space available, as there is very little suitable office space for rent in Jerome."

Max Long, the director of ancillary services at St. Benedict's, designed the new building when it became apparent that Hulme and Irwin were interested in the Jerome area.

Verl Rawson of Jerome is the general contractor for the structure, which is scheduled for completion about Aug. 15.

Campbell says the eventual goal is to provide all types of medical specialists so Jerome residents will not have to leave the community for specialized care.

The present construction site is large enough for another two-doctor office building, which could be added in the future, he says.

Checking plans for office building rising near St. Benedict's Hospital in Jerome are, from left, Bob Campbell, hospital executive director; Max Long, ancillary services head; subcontractor Bob Haslam and Verl Rawson, general contractor

Walker Center's new home should be ready in August

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

GOODING — The Walker Center for Alcoholism and Chemical Dependency treatment should be moving into its new $1.2 million home later this summer.

The construction news is adding the finishing touches to the 24-bed center, which is attached to Gooding County Memorial Hospital.

The addition should be completed by the end of August, says Carl Bergstrom, the center's director.

Crews will spend the next four to six weeks painting the interior, says Gary Jones, the superintendent of the project. The next job is to install an emergency generator near the hospital's entrance.

One of the world's largest hospital-construction companies, the Hospital Building and Equipment Co. of St. Louis, is the contractor.

An average of 16 persons have worked on the project daily since construction began in January. The weather even has been cooperative. A February that was nice enough to allow workers to pour the concrete foundation put them ahead of schedule, Jones says.

Throughout the building, crews had to realize they were working near a hospital. Noise and dust had to be kept to a minimum, and hospital entrances had to be kept clear of machinery, he says.

Ed Myers, the hospital administrator, says there have been no problems in the hospital because of the construction. "It's gone as smoothly as clockwork."

Oversight, Bergstrom says, the construction has been on budget.

While its new home is being built, the center has kept its doors open. Since last year, it has been using 13 beds in the north section of the hospital. The administrative offices are located in a house nearby, and counseling programs are conducted in a mobile home.

Everything will be moved into the new wing when it's ready.

In addition to treatment at the Gooding facility, the center will build a network of community operations in southern Idaho.

Five employees will conduct after-care counseling for graduates of the center's treatment program, Bergstrom says.

In addition, they will refer people to the center.

Presently, this work is done on a contract basis. But the center's staff believed a more-efficient job could be done by its own employees, he says.

The outreach staff should be in place in six months to a year.

The Walker Center wing will be dedicated Oct. 1. This date coincides with the seventh anniversary of the establishment of the alcoholism treatment program.

St. Benedict's Hospital in Ogden, Utah, the owner of Walker Center, is financing the building project. The Gooding hospital contracted last year with St. Benedict's to provide alcoholism and drug-abuse treatment at its facility.

Growth on their minds

BLM land sale announcement sparks thoughts of expansion of facilities, casinos at Jackpot

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

JACKPOT, Nev. — Growth is on the minds of residents and community leaders at Jackpot these days.

In March the town overwhelmingly approved a $600,000 bond issue to finance nine new holes at its municipal golf course.

Last week Elko County voters approved a $7.5 million school bond that will build a $1 million high school in Jackpot.

At Casino Pete's, the town's largest casino and employer, has a master plan for further expansion in a number of areas in the coming years.

And now further excitement is being generated by the announcement that the federal Bureau of Land Management is considering selling enough land nearby to increase the size of the town by a factor of five.

The possibility of land sales and the continuing prosperity of gaming in Elko County, have given new life to rumors that the town may be ripe for further major casino development in the coming years.

BLM's land sale proposal concerns 2,300 acres on three sides of the town. The sales would take place in fiscal 1984, which begins next fall.

Any federal land sale near Jackpot would cause a stir. The townsite is a two-mile-by-three-mile rectangle carved from federal land, says Jay Snyder, Jackpot's justice of the peace.

Jackpot is an unincorporated township. As such, its government is a five-member advisory board that is appointed by, and represents the town to, the Elko County commissioners.

It was with considerable interest that the board met with BLM last month.

BLM traditionally works with local governments when

Elko County jackpot for gaming

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

JACKPOT, Nev. — Fiscal 1982 — was the year which proved that the industry was not recession proof after all," begins the 1982 Nevada Gaming Abstract, a publication of the Nevada State Gaming Control Board.

Gambling revenues for fiscal 1982 were up only 3.8 percent throughout the state of Nevada in 1982.

But while the state figures are weighed down heavily by the Las Vegas and Reno-Lake Tahoe areas, Elko County remains one of the most prosperous gaming areas in the state.

Gambling revenues rose by 10.7 percent in Elko County in 1982.

"That is probably the best overall increase percentage-wise in the state," says Stuart Curtis, a statistician for the board.

A total of $50.2 million in revenue was produced by 10 casinos in the county.

The largest casino in the county is currently Cactus Pete's in Jackpot.

In recent years Cactus Pete's has been involved in an adventurous building campaign.

land sales are at issue, says Rodney Harris, BLM district manager in Elko. One reason is to ensure that those local governments have enough land for their own needs.

And after meeting with BLM representatives, the board made two recommendations:

Most recently it completed its new hotel wing. An apartment complex for employees is currently under construction.

Craig Nilsson of Twin Falls, one of the members of a limited partnership that owns Cactus Pete's, says the casino has further expansion plans.

The largest of these are still only part of the casino's master plan; the casino has not reached a definite decision to proceed with them.

But it is talking about building a general store and a recreational vehicle park, says Nilsson.

The grocery store is needed because Cactus Pete's leases the Treasure House building, the location of Jackpot's country store, and that lease will expire Sept. 30, he says.

And when it comes, the expansion of the casino will come to the south of the existing main building, he says. Up to 350 motel rooms are provided to the north by the master plan, he says.

Cactus Pete's also owns the Horseshoe across the street. It is working on master plans for this property as well.

Nilsson says it is too early to say what these are. But he says the casino knows it has plenty of room to expand on the site.

One was that BLM hold back about 600 acres from its proposal for use by the town, says Richard Carson, one of the board members.

The town could use the land for such routine needs as a park, a dump, new water works, sewer lagoons and expansion at the airport, he says.

Or it could use it for non-traditional developments such as a race track or a motorsport course, says Snyder. Those developments could be built by the city or by lease or portion of the land to a private developer, he says.

The other recommendation was that BLM sell a portion of its land in small five-acre lots.

There presently are only about 25 landowners in Jackpot, a town of about 1,000. Carson estimates. Smaller parcels might make spread land ownership more widely, he believes.

BLM originally did not want to get involved in the smaller parcels because they require more work, says David Vandenberg, a realty specialist for the BLM in Elko.

But he said BLM would continue to work with the board, and listen to the recommendations of a city planner the board plans to have study the situation.

At Huber, a board member and part-owner of Cactus Pete's Casino, says that planner will be one who has worked with the casino.

But it is indicative of the preliminary nature of the land sales proposal, that neither BLM nor the town now seems sure of where they stand in the planning process.

Vandenberg says that BLM is willing to hear what the planner has to propose on behalf of the town. Craig Nilsson of Twin Falls, another partner in Cactus Pete's, says BLM has yet to supply the necessary topographic maps and other information, so that the planner can get to work.

The proposed sales are in line with a draft Wells Resource Management Plan, says Vandenberg, although they are not specifically tied to it. That plan was issued by the Nevada state BLM office in May.

The plan discusses the future of resources in BLM's Wells Resource Area. The resource area covers 5.7 million acres in the eastern half of Elko County. A total of 4.3

Bliss illustrates benefits of small schools

By HARRIET GUTHRIE
Times-News writer

BLISS — The Bliss School did not have a senior prom queen this year — the graduating class consisted of four boys.

Louise Sears, a junior, filled in. And 36 ninth, through 12-graders, along with 20 eighth, domed formal wear to make the dance a success.

There are never enough seniors in Bliss. Although this year's graduating class of four is the smallest in memory, the school rarely has more than 14 seniors. Twelve is the norm.

To make up for the missing upperclassmen, activities are not limited to certain age groups. All of the high-school students join in reading drama, debating and sports teams go. You do not have to be a Moses Malone or Martina Navratilova to be a triple-sport athlete in Bliss.

Shawn Egan, a junior, played soccer and basketball, and ran track. He also found time to sing in the choir.

Michelle Hobbey, a junior, is another all-around athlete. She participated on the basketball, track and volleyball teams. The yearbook and choir completed her extracurricular activities.

The teachers also demonstrate a wide range of specialties.

Douglas Andrews teaches classes in biology, physics and microbiology during one semester. Each day, Verla Flores prepares for classes in English, bookkeeping and typing.

School has one of the smallest enrollments of the state's 115 school districts.

The high school is so small that it does not field a football team any more. The school had to use so many ninth-graders to get a squad together that the students "just got beat to death" by other teams, says Superintendent Dick Flores.

Although the students and teachers think their school is tops, they are worried that outsiders will view their small size negatively.

With the subject of consolidation in the air once again, the residents of Bliss hope their school does not melt away into another district.

A merger with Hagerman, for example, which is only nine miles away, still would result in a district with only 450 students. Despite the promise of more specialized classes and activities, Flores estimates that 80 percent of the community is against consolidation.

"The school is the heart of the community," says Myrl Eckles, a Bliss graduate who put four children through the school. Without the school, Bliss would have just a few cafes and a truck stop, she says.

The school is much more than a school, says Jim Gearty, a history professor at the College of Southern Idaho. He is the only place in town that seats more than 50 people.

But Flores, who fondly taps the one-and-a-half-foot-thick walls of the 63-year-old lava stone and oak building, says that more is at stake than the identity of a quiet farming community. Educational quality also is an issue.

Small schools do a better job with all but the gifted athlete or musician, he says. A high school has to accumulate about 1,000 students before people see a real change in curriculum, he says.

Flores cites the class of 1963 as a case in point.

"Although the four graduates are 'fine people,' they were not academic performers," he says. "In a larger school, they wouldn't have had a prayer."

"Everybody knows everybody else. It's just like a big family," says Trudy Schroeder.

Declo school to add room
BURLEY — The Cassia County School District will add a classroom to Declo Elementary School this summer.
 The school board approved the project last week at the request of Jody Zullinger, the co-presidents of school's Parent-Teacher Organization.
 Because of lack of space, two classes of sixth-graders attended Declo Junior and Senior High School last year. The PTO wants the keep the students at the elementary school, and it is asking for the additional classroom to house them.
 The work will consist of finishing one of four classrooms that were added on to the building a year ago.

Superintendent Norman Hurst says. At that time, only two were completed because the district ran out of money.
 He estimates the job will cost $10,000. PTO members have volunteered to help with the labor.
 The classroom should be ready by fall.

Filing deadline Wednesday
TWIN FALLS — Homeowners have until Wednesday to file applications for the new "50-50" property-tax exemption.
 Obtaining that tax break is relatively easy. Application forms are available at all county assessor offices.
 However, most people will receive it automatically if they obtained the homeowner's property-tax exemption in 1982.
 Under an initiative passed by the voters in November, the homeowners' exemption was increased. Now, 50 percent of the value of a home, up to a maximum of $50,000, will be excluded from property taxes.
 By law, only owner-occupied homes are eligible for the tax break.

In Twin Falls County, Assessor Dorothy Hamby estimates that some 14,000 residences qualify for the exemption. So far, 13,000 of those properties are registered to receive the exemption, including 500 homeowners who have applied for the break this year, she says.

Jackpot

 million acres, roughly 75 percent of it, is publicly owned.
 One of the recommendations in the "preferred alternative" contained in the report is the sale of 93,150 acres of federal land.
 "This is the same as the high level figure listed in the "resource production" scenario of the report. As such, it reflects the Reagan Administration's proposal to sell off federal lands in order to help balance the federal budget, among other things.
 There is disagreement over the quality of the lands that BLM may offer for sale near Jackpot.
 "There is going to be some really choice land for sale, both commercial and residential," says Carson. He says the good commercial land will be located south of town and much of the quality residential land will be located around the Jackpot golf course.
 But Nelsen thinks otherwise. "Much of the BLM property is not commercial in nature," he says. Only a small portion of it is adjacent to the highway and can be considered for development in the near future, he says.
 And Huber says even though the casino may bid on some of the BLM land, and other bidders may come from out of state, there is another factor — the price that BLM asks for the land.
 The lands will be sold at auction, with BLM setting a low bid price on the basis of comparable sales and fair market value, says Vandenberg.

 If the prices is too high, there may not be any bidders at all, says Huber.
 "One indication of how the land sale program may work may be seen by the end of the summer. BLM plans to sell one 80-acre lot north of Barton's Club 53 before the end of this fiscal year."
 The sale was planned separately from the major BLM proposals, says Vandenberg.
 He says the land was selected because of a "trespass" on it by someone with a bulldozer. And he says BLM also received a letter from the county commissioners requesting that the land be sold.
 Even though the sentiment in Jackpot now appears to be overwhelmingly in favor of increasing the amount of land available, Vandenberg says BLM is moving cautiously.
 He doubts there will be any serious movement on a large sale proposal until the first of next year, and he emphasizes there is much study still to be done.
 The draft report points out one impact a large sale might have — it would decrease the value of neighboring property. For this and other reasons other land sales by the Elko District have "met considerable opposition," he says.
 "And if the response to the public comment that we get shows problems we haven't foreseen, we may not sell that much land," he says.

 The low faculty-to-student ratio also can help those students who take Spanish, physics or computer science.
 When there are only two students in a physics class, a teacher can afford to change books frequently or buy relatively expensive kits for the whole class, says Andrews, the physics teacher.
 Derry Bryson and Kristy Buckland built a shortwave radio and contacted 15 stations around the world under Andrews' supervision.

 If one of his students has trouble with, or is particularly interested in, a topic, Andrews can spend extra time on it.
 However, all of this attention can scare some students, he says. "They know Ernands will be placed on their time."
 Still, Andrews says he never worries about how to teach a class with two students. The "ideal" faculty-to-student ratio is one to one, he says.
 Florsheim proved that the Bliss School can provide a solid background for college. About 40 percent of the senior class goes on to college or vocational school.

 Flores himself graduated from high school with a class of seven. He went on to earn a Ph.D. from the University of Texas.
 Andrews also acknowledges that a small class cannot turn all students into geniuses. "You can't instill a love of learning in all students," he says.
 Still, Flores believes there is a place for the small school in Idaho.
 "The rural school can catch up if it wants to," he says.

Removed or not, cousins confusing

DEAR ABBY: As the mother of 10 children, grandmother of one, aunt of 20, great-aunt of two, and cousin of everybody west of the Mississippi, I have spent years explaining to my offspring the difference between first, second and third cousins, first cousins once-removed, etc. Since my children read "Dear Abby" faithfully, I may have to start all over again.

You told "All Mixed Up" that according to Webster's New International Dictionary, "the child of one's first cousin is properly called 'first cousin once-removed' but often popularly 'second cousin.'" I wish you had gone on to explain that while that may be "popular," it is not correct.

As you (if not Mr. Webster) know, your first cousin once-removed (one generation removed) is the child of your first cousin; second cousins would be your child and child of your first cousin. As second cousins are children of first cousins, third cousins are children of second cousins. A first cousin twice-removed would be your first cousin's grandchild (who would, of course, be your grandchild's third cousin, and your child's second cousin once-removed).

Abby, when you're trying to marry off 10 children, and you're related to everybody west of the Mississippi, you have to know these things.

— TERESA BLOOMINGDALE, OMAHA, NEB.

DEAR TERESA: Thanks for telling me in words instead of sending me a genealogical chart. That's where I got into trouble in the first place.

DEAR ABBY: I run a small restaurant in Heathsville, Va. We specialize in soft-shelled crabs, which are always fresh and delicious at a reasonable price.

Most of the customers ask for toothpicks. Abby, I was taught as a little girl that it wasn't proper etiquette to pick your teeth in public. I don't have toothpicks on hand to give out.

Please write back and tell me what I should say to those people who ask for toothpicks. I promise to train and put it up where people will see it. Thank you.

— MARTHA CURTIS

DEAR MARTHA: You may want to frame this: If you want to succeed in business, your first concern should be to please your customers. Never mind etiquette.

If a customer asks for a toothpick, cheerfully provide one. Many small restaurants (and some large ones) keep a container of toothpicks at the register so those who need them,

Poles prepare for papal visit

The Pope's visit to Poland

June 16-23 selected itinerary

By WALTER WISNIEWSKI
United Press International

WARSAW, Poland — Polish bishops Sunday complained that communist authorities did not organize enough buses or trains for Pope John Paul II's visit, and urged Catholics to come by foot to the masses and other public ceremonies.

"In those places where transportation means are inadequate, we shall undertake pilgrimages on foot. In the spirit of faith," the bishops said in a message read during a radio mass.

At the Vatican, Pope John Paul told 45,000 people in St. Peter's Square that his June 16-23 trip to his homeland will "bear much good fruit" for the Polish people and asked for prayers for its success.

The church has estimated well over 10 million Poles would take part in the various ceremonies during the pope's visit.

"There was no estimate from government officials about the extent of transport facilities for the pilgrims expected to converge on Warsaw, Czestochowa, Krakow and five other cities and shrines on the pope's itinerary."

The message from the church warned people to observe carefully all precautions and regulations ordered by the police throughout the pope's visit.

Polish authorities have ordered exceptionally heavy security for John Paul's trip, his second to his homeland since he was elected to the papacy in 1978. Some of their fears are rooted in worries about an attempt on the pope's life, but the regime also apparently is concerned that members of the Solidarity underground may use the occasion to show they are still active despite the declaration of martial law 18 months ago.

The papal visit is being heavily covered by the world's press, and many people expect the Solidarity activists to try to publicize their cause at the sites of outdoor masses the pope will celebrate.

The church, which organized the trip in cooperation with the government of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, has not specifically asked Solidarity supporters to "restrain" from demonstrations. But the bishops' messages have stressed the need to preserve the religious character of all public events.

The episcopate's complaints about not enough facilities for Poles who want to see the pope came in a series of pastoral announcements during the regular weekly radio broadcast of mass to the nation — one of the few reforms won by Solidarity that has persisted beyond the union's abolition.

Everything ought to be done so that the trains, buses and cars and other transportation could carry the largest possible number of pilgrims to the places for the papal masses, the church announcement said.

Mixup in full ceremony

BLOCK ISLAND, R.I. (UPI) — The procession was short for the two graduates of the Class of 1983 at the Block Island School.

Patricia Ann Mitchell was valedictorian and Glen W. Hall was salutatorian even though he finished at the bottom of his class of two. They were graduated Saturday in a full-scale commencement ceremony.

Folks on the tear-shaped island 12 miles south of the Rhode Island coastline — population 575 — can't recall the last time the school graduated only two students.

Usually the classes are three or four times that size, except for once in the 1950s when there was no graduating class.

There were no shortcuts in the ceremony. Wearing blue caps and gowns, Miss Mitchell and Hall marched to the traditional "Pomp and Circumstance" and heard the Rev. Stanley Pratt deliver the invocation. Block Island School Committee Chairman Everett Littlefield presented the diplomas to the graduates. Somehow, he got them mixed up.

Lightning blamed on Satan

LONDON (UPI) — The organizer of evangelist Billy Graham's trip to Britain is convinced the devil attacked his home with a lightning bolt in revenge. The Sunday Times said.

A lightning bolt, described by lay preacher Anthony Bush as "a huge fireball cum streak of lightning," set fire to and destroyed the front of his farmhouse near Bristol.

"There are forces of good and forces of evil, and there was no doubt this was enemy action," said Bush. "It was as good a job as an Exocet at a quarter of a mile."

Bush is regional chief of Mission England, which is planning to bring Graham to Britain for a speaking tour early next year.

Bush said the lightning struck Tuesday night when the group had just ended a meeting discussing Graham's trip. "This was no coincidence," he said. "A month ago three of Bush's colleagues were involved in separate car crashes. I believed it was enemy action at the time, and this incident confirms it," he said.

Walks with aid of small computer

Paralegic steps up for diploma

DAYTON, Ohio (UPI) — Nan Davis, the first paralegic to walk with the aid of a computer, took her second steps outside a laboratory in five years to receive her college diploma.

Miss Davis was paralyzed from the waist down in an auto accident on the night of her high school graduation in 1978.

Last November, the St. Marys, Ohio, woman became the first paralegic to walk with the help of a computer-controlled electrical stimulation system.

The system, designed by Wright State University professor Dr. Jerrold Petrosky, uses tiny electrodes placed near the spinal cord to sense the position of the body, and act as the stimulus for the muscles.

Miss Davis, to a standing ovation Saturday, took five steps to a podium to pick up her bachelor's degree in education from Dr. Robert Kegerris, Wright State University president.

"She was unassisted except for an escort by Petrosky and an assistant following close behind carrying the computer, which is now small enough to fit into an average-sized purse."

"This is the first time I've walked outside a lab since high school," Miss Davis told her fellow graduates. "We've all worked hard to get to where we are today."

Petrosky said last November that it would be 10 years before the system would be small enough to be marketable. Now he said the device is within a year of surgical implantation.

He said technical assistance from private industry, such as National Cash Register and Armco Steel, enabled him to do two or three years work in one.

Coroner's staff identifies body as that of missing show producer

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Coroner's investigators, using dental record, Sunday positively identified the body of a man found in a forest stream bed as missing variety show producer Roy Alexander Radin.

Forensic odontologist Gerald Vaie and Betty Hoffman, D.D.S., have compared dental X-rays of Roy Radin with dental X-rays of John Doe number 94 and found them to be a positive match, the coroner's office said.

The dental records were flown in Sunday from New York following the discovery of the badly decomposed body which matched that of Radin in size and dress.

The body was found Friday by a forest ranger and a beeper in the Angeles National Forest, near German, 65 miles north of Los Angeles.

Radin, 33, disappeared May 13 while en route to a dinner meeting in Beverly Hills. He was reported missing four days later by his secretary, Jonathan Lawson.

An autopsy done on the body — which matches Radin's in size and weight — indicated the man died of a single gunshot wound, Coroner's senior investigator Edward Day said.

The body was well-dressed: 6-1, and very heavy, Radin was listed at that height and 275 pounds in the missing person report.

John O'Grady, a Hollywood private investigator hired by Radin's mother to find the missing man, said he told the family "there is a 99 percent chance the body is that of Mr. Radin."

He said the family "is in shock," and was in seclusion in Cleveland.

The Radins are a wealthy Long Island family active in the theatrical and film industries. Radin lived in a 72-room oceanfront mansion in Southampton, Long Island.

O'Grady said Radin was in Los Angeles to find $35 million in backing for a new film studio and was "reluctant" to go to the dinner meeting at the fashionable La Scala Restaurant with unidentified potential backers.

The detective said Radin postponed the meeting once in attempts to find restaurant with tight security measures.

Radin was last seen leaving the Plaza Suite Hotel in Hollywood in a limousine with a woman not identified by police.

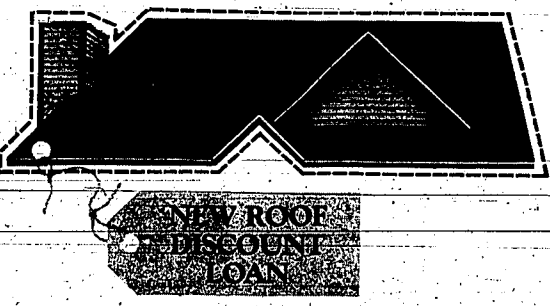

Radin never arrived at the restaurant. The woman told police they quarreled in the car and Radin got out on Sunset Blvd. and was not seen again.

Sheehan wins LPGA title

By GENE CADDES
United Press International

KINGS ISLAND, Ohio — Patty Sheehan, who came from far off the pace to win the $200,000 Jack Championship Sunday at the Jack Nicklaus Golf Center, will now need a new set of goals.

Sheehan, who reeled off five consecutive birdies on the back side to overtake third-round leader Sandra Haynie, said her only goal for 1983 was to win a major championship. Now that she's accomplished that feat, the rising young star will need a new target to shoot at.

"My only goal this year was to win a major," said Sheehan, "and to beat Sandra (Haynie). It's really something because she's such a competitor."

PATTY SHEEHAN
Comeback kid

Sheehan said she really didn't think at the start of the day that she would have much of a chance because Haynie had been playing so well. But even after she bogeyed the 10th hole and was still four shots behind, she hadn't given up.

"I figured I was still in there because Sandra wasn't playing that well," said Sheehan. "Then I was fortunate enough to make all those birdies."

Haynie said she was "disappointed in myself for not winning, but encouraged at the same time. I haven't been playing that well and I'm not going to let one bad round destroy what I did this week."

Sheehan finished with a 6-under-par 66, giving her a 72-hole score of 9-under-par 279 and a two-shot victory over Haynie, who had a final round of 75.

Debbie Massey, who birdied the final hole, won alone in third at 283, following her final round of 70. Chris Johnson and JoAnne Carner tied for fourth at 284, followed by Vicki Tabor and Pat Bradley at 285 and Alice Miller and Alexandra Reinhardt at 286.

Sheehan earned $30,000 for the victory while Haynie picked up $19,600 and Massey $14,000.

Sheehan, seven strokes off the pace when the day began, was still four shots behind after she bogeyed the 35-year-old hole. The 25-year-old former San Jose State star then reeled off her string of five straight birdies, climaxed by an 8-foot birdie putt on the 15th which gave her the lead for the first time in the tournament.

Cubs keep on winning in NL East

By United Press International

With the Chicago Cubs playing to rave reviews these days, a seat at Wrigley Field has suddenly become the hottest ticket in town.

Before a record crowd of 38,635 Sunday, Jody Davis hit a grand slam in the fourth inning and Keith Moreland belted a two-run homer in the second to lead the surging Cubs to their ninth victory in 11 games, a 6-3 decision over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The three-game series with the Cardinals drew a record 116,107 fans and broke the previous Wrigley Field mark of 12,878 set against the New York Mets in July, 1969.

Davis' grand slam, the first of his career, came off loser Bob Forsch, 4-5, and was his third homer of the three-game set. Since May 20, Davis has had 14 hits — eight of them homers.

Chuck Rainey, 7-4, pitched the first seven innings to gain the victory. Lee Smith, who relieved, Bill Campbell in the eighth, earned his ninth save.

Bill Buckner led off the Chicago fourth by being hit with a pitch and charged the mound, forcing both benches to empty. Ron Cey singled, and two outs later, Larry Bowa walked to load the bases. Davis followed by hitting a 1-2 pitch into the left-center field bleachers for his 10th homer.

Philadelphia 5, Pittsburgh 4

At Philadelphia, Pete Rose singled with two outs in the 11th to deliver Joe Morgan from third base and lift the Phillies. Morgan drew a one-out walk off reliever Rod Scurry, 2-5, and went to third on a single by Joe Lefebvre. One out later, Rose lined Scurry's first pitch to right to make a winner of Ron Reed, 4-1, the fifth Philadelphia pitcher.

New York 6, Montreal 1

At New York, George Foster hit a two-run homer to cap a three-run first inning and Tom Seaver pitched a four-hitter to lead the Mets. Foster's 11th homer came off starter and loser Charlie Lea, 3-3. Seaver, 4-5, walked five and struck out three in pitching his third complete game in 13 starts.

Cincinnati 3, Los Angeles 1

At Cincinnati, Mario Soto pitched a three-hitter. Duane Walker drove in two runs and Paul Houserholder homered to pace the Reds, who had a no-hitter for 6 1/3 innings, struck out eight and walked four to improve his record to 8-4.

Atlanta 3, San Francisco 2

At Atlanta, Dale Murphy hit two home runs to help Pascual Perez to his eighth victory of the season. Murphy's first homer of the game, a two-run shot in the third inning, came off loser Andy McGaffigan, 2-7. His second of the game and 17th of the season came in three years. ISU "snapped a 2-2 tie. Gene Garber, who relieved Perez in the seventh, earned his fifth save.

Houston 2, San Diego 0

At Houston, Nolan Ryan fired a five-hitter for his 51st career shutout and Bill Doran and Jose Cruz drove in runs to lead the Astros. Ryan, 4-1, struck out 11 to bring his lifetime total to 3,536 — tying him with Steve Carlton of Philadelphia for the all-time strikeout record.

Red Sox end slump vs. Orioles

By United Press International

Wade Boggs found an element of truth Sunday in the old saying, "you've got to walk before you can run."

Boggs drew a bases-loaded walk from Tippy Martinez with two out in the ninth inning, enabling the Boston Red Sox to snap a seven-game losing streak with a 7-6 triumph over the Baltimore Orioles.

Remy Rerry started the Red Sox ninth with a bunt single off Martinez, 3-2, and went to third when Dwight Evans doubled down the right field line. Jim Rice was walked intentionally and Tony Armas lined out, but Boggs walked on four pitches to force in the winning run. The Orioles argued vehemently over the final pitch to Boggs.

Bob Stanley, 5-3, pitched the final 2 1/2 innings for the victory, which broke a six-game winning streak for Baltimore.

The Red Sox, who blew leads of 2-0 and 5-2, tied it 6-6 in the bottom of the eighth on a pinch hit double by Ed Junk after Baltimore had taken a 3-5 lead in the top of the inning when pinch runner Al Bumbry faced home on Lenn Sakata's groundout.

Detroit 3-4, Cleveland 1-1

At Detroit, Jack Morris followed a five-hit victory by Milt Wilcox with one of his own and Chet Lemon and John Grubbs hit solo home runs to spark the Tigers' sweep. The triumphs gave the Tigers eight victories in their last nine games and 15 of their last 19.

Texas 4, Minnesota 3

At Minneapolis, George Wright hit a 417-foot solo homer with one out in the 11th to hand the Twins their sixth straight loss. Wright's shot to right, his third homer of the year, came on a 2-0 pitch from loser Ron Davis, 2-2. Odel Jones, 2-2, got the victory.

Milwaukee 6, New York 5

At Milwaukee, Jim Gantner's two-run single with the bases loaded in the bottom of the 12th lifted the Brewers. Starter Mike Caldwell walked the first 11 innings but yielded, to Tom Tellemann, 4-2, in the 12th. Ted Simmons had three hits, including a 10th-inning double that was his 2,000th career hit.

Seattle 8, Kansas City 1

At Seattle, Glenn Abbott, making his first start in 20 months, tossed a four-hitter and Jamie Allen hit a two-run homer to snap Kansas City's three-game winning streak. Seattle pounded Larry Gura, 5-8, and Vida Blue for 16 hits in their best offensive effort of the season.

Toronto 6, California 5

At Anaheim, Calif., Willie Upshaw, Ernie Whit and Barry Bonnell drove in 15th inning runs to lift the Blue Jays. Bob Boone doubled home a run and Doug DeCinces, singled home another run for the victory in the bottom of the inning before Dave Geisel got the last two outs.

Chicago 8-12, Oakland 1-10

At Oakland, Calif., Jerry Kosman scattered seven hits Sunday to lead the Chicago White Sox to a sweep of a double-header.

In the opener, Tony Benazard tripled and scored on Vance Law's single. Gene Getz, who had walked in the 11th inning to lift the Sox, homered in the 11th.

Philadelphia earns first playoff berth

By United Press International

Who was the first team to clinch a USFL playoff berth?

That trivia question was answered Sunday when the Philadelphia Stars won their top spot in the Atlantic Division with a 23-9 triumph over the New Jersey Generals.

David Trout kicked three field goals and running back Kelvin Bryant scored a touchdown and set up another for the Stars' top scorer in the end zone place Boston by four games with three remaining. New Jersey dropped to 4-11.

Philadelphia trailed 9-0 in the first quarter, which began in 48-degree heat, but the Stars rebounded to win on five consecutive possessions, beginning with Trout's 25-yard field goal on the last play of the first half that made it 9-3.

Philadelphia took the opening kickoff of the second half and scored on 12 plays with Bryant scoring on a 1-yard run and Trout adding the conversion for a 10-9 lead.

Trout added a 39-yard field goal with 6:12 remaining in the third quarter to make it 13-9. On the Stars' next possession, Bryant caught a Chuck Fusina pass at midfield and broke three tackles before getting knocked out of bounds at the 7-yard line after a 50-yard gain. Allen Harvin swept right end on the next play for a TD and Trout's conversion made it 20-9.

Trout added a 49-yard field goal with 10:59 left in the fourth quarter. New Jersey's Herschel Walker, the league's leading rusher, gained 75 yards on 22 carries. Walker now has 1,292 yards for the season while Bryant has 1,374.

USFL

Harvin led Philadelphia in rushing with 76 yards on 15 carries and Fusina added 54 on six carries and completed 19-of-35 passes for 219 yards. Generals' quarterback Jeff Knappie completed just 9-of-26 passes and was intercepted twice.

The Generals took a 9-0 lead when Joe Cugliari nailed Bryant in his own end zone for a 6-yard loss with 6:19 left in the first quarter. Following the safety, the Generals drove 57 yards in eight plays, with Walter Tullis scoring from 11 yards out on a reverse. Walker started the play by running around right end then handed off to Tullis, running to his left. Tullis eluded safety Scott Woerner at the line of scrimmage and went into the end zone untouched.

Chicago 31, Tampa Bay 5

At Chicago, Tim Spencer scored three touchdowns to help the Blitz tie Tampa Bay for first place in the Central Division. It was Chicago's second victory this year over the Bandits and each team has a 10-5 record. Tampa Bay was hampered by a first-quarter injury to quarterback Jimmy Jordan and a second-quarter injury to running back Gary Anderson.

Michigan 42, Los Angeles 17

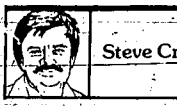

At Los Angeles, Bobby Hebert passed for 247 yards and four touchdowns to lead the Panthers in front of only 16,023 onlookers. Hebert threw TD passes of 31 yards to Ken Lynch, 52 to Derek Holloway, 16 to Anthony Carter and 2 to Ray Pinney to pace a 417-yard offensive effort.

Why we can't keep Kragthorpe, Criner, Monson, . . .

TWIN FALLS — Jim Criner, 59 victories, 21 losses, four conference championships, one national championship. . . Dave Kragthorpe, 21 victories, 14 losses, one conference championship, one national championship. . . Don Monson, 102 victories, 47 losses, two conference championships, Ron Jensen.

Idaho's three state universities are hemorrhaging. It's not merely that the best and the brightest are leaving for greener pastures; they always have. The problem is that the best and brightest physics teachers and humanities professors are leaving too.

The perception is growing that the Idaho schools are losing ground on a financial treadmill. Those inside the athletic department know it, of course, but it's beginning to become apparent to the athletes they are trying to recruit. One women's athletic director notes, for example, that prospective student athletes can tell a lot about the financial condition of her school by comparing promotional literature it gives them with that which they receive from out-of-state institutions. One football coach says he's had prospective recruits tell him that they've been attending an Idaho school because their football programs might not be around in four years. Still others talk about gifted athletes passing up the Idaho universities because there's no guarantee the degree programs they want won't be phased out in a year or two.

Their point is illustrated dramatically by running down the list of top Idaho prep prospects who are leaving the state: Meridian High School basketball stars Scott Johnson and Tresa Spaulding are headed for Southern Methodist and Brigham Young, respectively; Moscow High football star Doug Riesenberger is headed for Berkeley; and classmate Andrew Joyd — a three-time all-state basketball player — will play at Texas. Two Boise High School football stars, running back Kirk Copeland and light end Mike Blidhugh, turned down full scholarships to Idaho State and Boise State, respectively, to walk on at West Texas State and BYU.

The effects haven't shown up in the three schools' football and basketball programs yet, but they are evident in the minor sports. Idaho has eliminated two in the same period. Coaches who leave aren't replaced, and those who remain are asked to do double duty — all the while their salaries are being frozen. All three institutions are cutting back travel and recruiting, which of course means that the odds of finding another David Hughes or Mike Machurek or Brian Kellerman are correspondingly less.

It's only a matter of time before Idaho, BSU and ISU field teams to match their budgets. The consensus is that if the 30 percent, three-year cut in funding for intercollegiate athletics mandated by the State Board of Education goes into effect as scheduled in 1985, the three schools will not be able to remain in NCAA Division I.

The fact that they're competitive now is, in the words of one athletic director, because they're coached by overachievers. But overachievers in the Big Sky tend to wind up in the Big Eight or the Pac-10.

The financial problems of the three institutions' athletic departments should be of more than casual interest to the taxpaying Idahoan for two reasons. The first is that from 1968, when construction of the Idaho State Mindome was begun, until last winter, when the BSU Rayvillon was completed, the three schools invested in excess of $20 million in athletic facilities. Although most of those dollars came from students, the revenue that they housed Division II teams playing the likes of New Mexico Highlands — and the Kibbie Dome generate contribute significantly to the operating budgets of the three schools — and save taxpayers' dollars. It's entirely possible that those four facilities could become expensive white elephants if they housed Division II teams playing the likes of New Mexico Highlands.

The second reason is that, like it or not, a college's athletic image has a lot to do with its success as an academic institution. Unless it's Northwestern or MIT, a school with a little football program and a pathetic basketball team gets the reputation of being a loser, regardless of the strength of its business school. Successful athletic programs attract students, and with them, increased private financial support.

Private support for the three universities' athletic programs has nearly doubled since Boise State put Idaho on the sports map by winning the national Division I-AA football championship 3 1/2 years ago, while state support has remained static. Stacked against an inflation rate that has averaged 9 percent for the past five years, the state is widening deficit. The coaches and AAs see signs that private donations are reaching their peak; it is a limit, after all, to the number of times you can send a "Dear Friend" letter to alumni.

Yet even if the Legislature and the State Board were to double the amount of money they spend on intercollegiate sports — it's currently less than 1 percent of the state's education budget — it would not solve the athletic directors' problems. Nothing that happens on the field can compensate for the fact that there aren't enough chemistry labs available or that graduate assistants are replacing associate professors in freshman English.

The feeling is widespread and deep among the three schools' coaches and AAs that their schools' academic programs are in trouble, and that neither the state nor their athletic programs. The consensus is that things will get worse until the Legislature funds them adequately.

That's what makes an attractive out-of-state offer irresistible.

TWIN FALLS — Stan Ayers hit his first 100 targets Sunday to win the two-day 200 target singles championship at a weekend shoot sponsored by the Twin Falls Gun Club.

Along with his total of 97 for Saturday, that gave Ayers a total of 197 points. Carl L. Kelly won the A division championship with 195 points, while Chuck Cramer was the B champion with 152. Frank Brinkman was the C division title in a shoot-off with Neil Shaw; both men finished the regular competition with scores of 183. Dennis Veatch was the Class C champion with 182 points.

Kelly was the overall high-point winner in division A for the weekend with 462 points, while Jeff Scott took the B division with a score of 450. Shaw was the C champion with 440 and Veatch took the D division with 440 points.

Division winners were Kincaid, Veatch, Billie Mason and Eddie Mellon in the first event and Kelly, James Woolace, Mason and Robert Marriot in the second handicap shoot.

Steve Fahrwald took the 50-air doubles competition with a score of 96. Division winners were Kelly, Chuck Woodland, Leland Sabin and Joe Nelson.

Sixty-three shooters participated in the event, which was co-sponsored by Snap-on Tools.

Hailey's Lennon top cyclist

MELEBA — Boone Lennon of Hailey captured the senior men's division cycling championship here Sunday in the Idaho District Championship Road Race.

Lennon, racing for the Valley Cyclists/Galena Perch team of Ketchum, scored a two-minute victory despite hitting a dog on the last lap.

In second place was Larry Richter of Boise.

Hans Meulenger of Ketchum took the veteran men's division honors, while John Mills of Ketchum was second and Dave Nelson of Twin Falls finished third.

Carol Braun of Boise won the senior women's event, finishing ahead of Jane Reynolds of Boise and Linda Lennon of Hailey.

Lola Lindsay of Boise won the veteran women's division title.

The master's title went to Gordie Webster of Ketchum, who finished ahead of Jake Provonska of Ketchum and Will Lindsay of Boise.

Charlie Fliske of Boise took the grand master's title.

Craig, Carvajal win races

BUHL — Bryan Craig and Henry Carvajal took the top honors Saturday in the McAuley River event.

Winds hamper T-Bluff racing

TWIN FALLS — High winds and cool temperatures kept down the crowds and limited the performances of cars racing at Thunder Bluff Saturday night.

The cool weather kept many of the cars from reaching their optimum engine temperatures, and hence hampered their speed.

The trophy dashes were won by Dave Wilson of Buhl in the J division, Mike Andrews of Twin Falls in the pro category and Kevin Carter of Buhl in the main J division.

Greg Ginder of Twin Falls was the winner in the pro race, beating Larry Harms of Twin Falls. The winners of the A and B heats were John Harrell of Twin Falls and Doug Bybee of Castleford.

Dirty Don of Twin Falls won the J stock race over Wilson, while Chuck McBride was the winner in the main division.

Howa, Zakalyk top tourney

Low gross in the B division went to Dot McInn and Donna Harriman with a 61. Marilyn Donnelly and Dorothy Prather had the low net score, a 68.

In third place in the A division gross standings were Vera and Chris White with a 91, ahead of Glenda McGreer and Jackie Schell, who combined for a 93.

Cowboys split in Meridian

MERIDIAN — The Twin Falls Cowboys committed a total of eight errors here Sunday, but still managed a split of an American Legion doubleheader with Meridian.

Legion baseball

The Cowboys lost the opener 7-4 and came back to pick up the nightcap 4-3.

Viktor Valdez scattered five hits in the first game and allowed just two earned runs. But fielding mistakes and mental errors allowed Meridian to tie the game in the third inning and score two runs in the fourth and another in the fifth.

Twin Falls' four runs came on rallies in the second and third innings. A sacrifice bunt by Tim Crossman and a single by Scott Matlock accounted for the Cowboys' first two runs. Mike Federico's two-run single in the third drove in the other two runs.

In the nightcap, Twin Falls scored two runs in the top of the sixth on two walks, a sacrifice bunt, a fielding error and a groundout to erase a Meridian lead. Left-hander Nate Burke then put the hosts away with strong pitching in the final two frames.

Meridian's three runs all came on a series of throwing errors by the Cowboys in the fifth inning.

The split improved the Cowboys' record this season to 5-6. Twin Falls will take on Buhl Tuesday night in a doubleheader scheduled for 6 and 8 p.m. in Buhl, then will host Minico in a conference doubleheader Friday night at Frontier Field.

"We had great pitching," said Cowboys' coach Mike Robbins. "But we made too many costly mistakes, mental mistakes mostly. We just didn't give Valdez enough support, but he threw a good game."

Robbins noted he was pleased with the offensively production of Mike Federico, Shawn Humberger, Scott Matlock and Dave Slotten.

"We played better today than we did yesterday (in the Cowboys' doubleheader loss to the Boise Senators), but we should have won both games the way Valdez and Burke were throwing. Meridian wasn't hitting the ball that well, but we just gave them too many chances."

HAILEY Jerome belted out 29 hits, capped by a grand slam home run by Darren Weeks, to sweep a rain-shortened American Legion "B" doubleheader from Wood River here Sunday, 14-2 and 13-2.

Jerome exploded for seven runs in the second inning of the opener to give the right-hander Troy Prairie all the support he needed. Prairie struck out 12 Wood River batters, and allowed just two hits.

The story was much the same in the nightcap, with Jerome scoring six runs in both the second and the third innings. The game was called after three innings because of rain.

Darren Weeks finished the day with five hits in five trips to the plate, while Tracy Weeks was 4-for-4.

The victory improved Jerome's season record to 6-1, 4-1 in the Magic Valley Legion Conference.

Falls Brand captures The Pocket tourney

TWIN FALLS — Falls Brand of Twin Falls fought off high winds, threatening clouds and The Torch to win the Pocket Slowpitch Softball Invitational tournament Sunday.

Playing the Rupert-based team for the second time in seven hours, Falls Brand scored 11 runs in the fifth and sixth innings, en route to a 12-7 victory. A 12th inning run came in the seventh inning.

Tanner Sellers, who had three hits for Falls Brand in the championship game, was voted co-MVP for the tournament. He shared that honor with Don Johnson of Budweiser-Ovitt's, a Burlington team who placed fourth. Johnson was also the leading hitter, going .856 over the two-day period.

Falls Brand reached the championship semi-finals earlier in the day with a 15-10 win over the same Rupert team. In the other semi-final, Cameron's also of Rupert, easily knocked off Mambo's. Instead of Twin Falls 21-5, Cameron's Jeff Hess had five hits to power the slugfest.

Falls Brand then earned the right to play for the title when Brett Black scored in the eighth inning as the eventual champions disposed of Cameron's 6-5. Cameron's tied the game at 5-5 with two runs in the seventh, but couldn't muster any offense in the extra inning.

In loser bracket games at Harmon Park, Coors of Buhl eliminated MK of Challis 14-6. The Torch, scoring seven runs in the seventh inning, knocked off Coors, and Budweiser-Ovitt ripped Mambo's 10-2 in 12.

The Torch then went on a two game winning spree, halting Budweiser-Ovitt's final inning two-run surge to win 6-5 then blanking Cameron's 2-0. Both runs in that rare defensive game came in the fourth inning on a two singles, a fielder's choice and a sacrifice fly.

That game set up the championship finale, where The Torch hoped to pick up some revenge. A victory by The Torch would have meant a second game.

Dugger wins association match play

TWIN FALLS — Doyle Dugger dethroned defending champion Ron Boyd Sunday to win the Twin Falls Men's Golf Association match-play tournament at the Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course.

The other flight champions were Wes Startin in the first flight, Jim Peopple in the second, Brad Clawson in the third and Charles Brumbach in the fourth.

The consolation champions were Nick Hansen in the championship flight, Jerry Burkett in the first, Kevin Heutner in the second, Russ Renk in the third and Darrel Richardson in the fourth.

The two-day tournament drew 44 golfers.

Greenwell all-around champion

FILER — The all-around winners of the Sixth District High School Rodeo, along with a pair of Twin Falls cowboys, collected more honors late Saturday night at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds.

Minico's Tana Greenwell, who clinched the girls all-around title midway through the final performance, added a barrel racing championship to her breakaway roping title.

The barrel racing championship put Greenwell's point total at 226, far ahead of reserve champion Kaysee Atkinson of Twin Falls. Atkinson had 3.5 lead coming into the Filer rodeo, but was plagued throughout the three-day event with several penalties and ended up with 190 points.

A pair of Buhl cowgirls, Mona Alshire and Toni Rodig, were second and third with 46 and 44 points, respectively. Bonnie Simpler of Minico was fourth with 43 points.

The boys all-around winner for the second straight season, Terry Laumb, and partner Tim VanOstran of Twin Falls, who was the reserve all-around winner, captured the team roping title. The two won the title going away, winning both go-rounds and collecting 30 points for a total of 65. Twin Falls cowboy Kenny Turna and Richard Hunsaker of Declo were far back with 47 points. Declo cowboys Benny Bailey and Junior Bryan were third with 42 and Oakley's Will Becke and Tim Zebarth of Twin Falls took the final state spot with 37 points.

The team roping win gave Laumb 276.5 all-around points. VanOstran, who won the calf roping and steer wrestling titles to put pressure on Laumb's 286.5 all-around points.

Scott Sayers easily captured the bull riding crown for the second straight year. The Twin Falls senior had rides of 68 and 63 to clinch the title. The closest competitor was Scott Beck of Burley who had 37.5 points. Sayer's teammate Dave Tedder was third and Mike Estes of Minico had 32 points for fourth place.

Twin Falls and Declo won the team honors in the Class A, and Class B divisions, respectively.

In Class A, Twin Falls piled up 1,197.5 points, easily outdistancing Minico, who had 620. Declo had 946 points to collect the Class B trophy. Castleford, who mainly depended on sisters Sallee and Shelle Hell for points, ended up with 472.

The only major disaster coming out of the Filer rodeo was the injury Darren Day received during his bull ride Friday night. The Burley cowboy had surgery on the lower part of his right leg, where both bones were broken.

Ballesteros claims Westchester title

HARRISON, N.Y. (UPI) — Seve Ballesteros, making his first golfing appearance in the United States since winning the Masters two months ago, captured the final hole Sunday to break a three-way tie for the lead and capture the $450,000 Westchester Classic.

In a torrid finish on a scorchingly sunny day, Andy Bean and Seve Ballesteros tied for second, two shots behind Ballesteros, Fuzzy Zoeller, Mike Reid and Mark McCumber were another shot back.

A playoff seemed inevitable for most of the afternoon, and with six holes remaining, there were six players bunched within a single shot. Ballesteros started the day with a one-shot lead over Zoeller and parred his way through the first 10 holes. But when the 26-year-old Spaniard bogeyed the 11th and 12th holes, first Zoeller and then Stadler took turns at the lead before Ballesteros finally got his first and only birdie of the day with a 39-foot putt on the 16th hole.

Ballesteros still was deadlocked with Bean and Stadler, both of whom had finished their rounds when he reached the 18th tee. His drive on the pin's 535-yard hole carried within 225 yards of the pin and, Ballesteros used his iron for a championship shot that carried within seven feet of the flag. Enjoying the luxury of needing only a birdie to win, Ballesteros went out in grand style with the eagle that gave him a 1-under-par 70 for the day and a 7-hole total of 8 under 276. The victory was worth $81,000 and brought his earnings on the U.S. tour this year to $183,764.

The tournament is known as the Westchester Hanover Westchester Classic.

Bean, who started the round five shots off the lead, closed with a 67 and Stadler had a 68 to share second place at 278. Stadler, after holding the lead with only two holes to play, bogeyed the 17th when he missed a five-foot putt while Bean blew a four-footer for a birdie on No. 18.

Zoeller, who had the consolation of becoming the 40th player on the PGA Tour to become a golfing millionaire, managed only a 72. Reid had a 70 and McCumber a 68.

Roger Maltbie, with a closing 72, was at 290 and tied at 282 were Jerry Pate (70) and Fred Couples (71).

Defending champion, Bob Glider managed just a 72 for 287 but did eagle the final hole, the same hole where he made his historic double-eagle last year. Gibby Gilbert ace the 133-yard sixth hole and finished at 70-283.
