Panel: Repay interned Japanese $1.5 billion

By WESLEY G. PIPPETT
United Press International

WASHINGTON — A federal commission recommended Thursday the government pay $1.5 billion in compensation to the surviving 60,000 Japanese-Americans who were interned after Pearl Harbor, including payments of $20,000 each.

"No amount of money can fully compensate the excluded people for their losses and sufferings," the Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment said.

The commission, issuing its final report, also recommended putting the balance of the sum after individual payments into a special education foundation for the Japanese-American community.

There also should be a formal national apology for the "grave injustice" done to the them.

"I do not consider it to be guilt money," commission Chairman Joan Bernstein told reporters. "I consider it to be a response in the usual manner in our society for a wrong that was done."

"I regard it as an appropriate remedy for a serious violation by our government of basic fundamental rights," said commission member Arthur Flemming, former secretary of health, education and welfare and former chairman of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights.

The commission recommended "the appropriation of $1.5 billion to provide a one-time per capita compensatory payment of $20,000 to each of the approximately 60,000 surviving persons excluded from their homes on the West Coast."

It also said Congress should set aside $50 million to be used for Aleuts evacuated from the Aleutian or Pribilof Islands during the war, and a payment of $5,000 to each of the few hundred surviving Aleuts. It said the 900 Aleuts were moved because of military necessity. The commission was established by Congress in 1980, nearly four decades after 120,000 Japanese-Americans were put in internment camps for most of World War II under presidential Executive Order 9066 issued by Franklin Roosevelt.

"A grave personal injustice was done to the American citizens and resident aliens of Japanese ancestry who, without individual review or any probative evidence against them, were excluded, removed and detained by the United States during World War II," the commission said.

"The excluded people suffered enormous damages and losses, both material and intangible," it said.

The commission reported Wednesday a consulting firm, ICF Inc., of Washington, had estimated the Japanese-Americans suffered property and income losses of between $2.5 billion and $5.2 billion in 1983 dollars, adjusted for interest and inflation.

Rep. Danle Lundgren, R-Idaho, who represents a district in which many Japanese-Americans live, opposed the compensatory portion of the report because he was not sure it could pass in the current economic climate in Congress.

"We are developing a thought that unless something has money attached to it—any action taken by government or private individuals is of no use," Lundgren told reporters.

He said what the government did in World War II was wrong. "And something to apologize for" it must be done, but many American taxpayers today were not even alive when the internment occurred. "Including myself."

"I don't know how you relate that to guilt when they had nothing to do with it," Lundgren said. "Most of the major actors have long since left the scene. I wonder, frankly, if individual reparations would affect future actions."

City lawyers say WPPSS ruling alters strategy

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — As a result of a ruling this week by the Washington Supreme Court, some public officials in Idaho could become major targets for WPPSS-related lawsuits.

"That was one of the opinions offered Thursday by a panel of city attorneys involved in WPPSS litigation. The discussion occurred at the annual conference of the Association of Idaho Cities, which is taking place in Twin Falls through Saturday.

Wednesday, the Washington Supreme Court ruled that public utilities in that state had no legal authority to sign so-called "well-or-high-water" contracts to finance the construction of two Washington Public Power Supply System nuclear-power plants. Work on the plants since has been terminated.

The ruling came as a surprise to the Idaho cities and utilities that are involved in the same WPPSS power plants and much of the litigation. The ruling has been interpreted as releasing Washington public utilities from any obligation to pay their shares of the plants' debts.

The ruling also has set off a scramble among lawyers involved in the WPPSS litigation in Idaho, where a similar "authority" case is pending before the Idaho Supreme Court. They are seeking to re-determine their standing in relation to a number of WPPSS-related lawsuits.

One result of the Washington ruling is that the investors who purchased the bonds sold to build the plants may now shift their restitution claims to lawsuits alleging securities fraud. And these lawsuits ultimately could reach the local public officials who were involved in deciding to buy the plants, the lawyers said Thursday.

Home construction attains 3-year high

By DENNIS G. GULINO
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Encouraged by the economic recovery and good weather, home builders turned May into the busiest month in more than 3 1/2 years, with the construction pace 19.1 percent beyond April's rate, the government said Thursday.

The annual rate of housing starts reached 1,791,000 units, 75 percent higher than the rate a year earlier, the Commerce Department reported.

"I'm not worrying about this year," said Michael Sumichrast, chief economist of the National Association of Home Builders. "The year is in the bag for us. We'll have half a million more units than last year."

Sumichrast and other housing analysts say builders appear to be more enthusiastic than buyers, whose purchasing pace may be slowing down slightly.

However mortgage interest rates no longer seem to be accelerating, as was the case earlier this month when the government raised its federally backed rate for FHA and VA loans by half a point to 12 percent.

"The increase in mortgage rates might even help in the short term," Sumichrast said. "People will jump into the housing market" anticipating possible further increases.

The annual rate of housing starts was the highest since September 1979's 1,822,000, the department said. Builders obtained new building permits at a rate 5.6 percent above that in April, the report also showed, an indication the housing boom has plenty of momentum to carry it into later this year.

So far housing has been leading the economy into recovery, with construction materials from steel to glass in heavier demand and construction employment climbing.

"May figures represented a 'catch-up' for a lull in two months of weather," Sumichrast said.

Farmers attack changes to reclamation law

By ANN D. KIRKWOOD
United Press International

BOISE — Proposed rules governing sweeping changes in national reclamation law would set up a mound of paperwork sufficient to build another dam, Idaho irrigators told federal officials Thursday.

At a Boise hearing held to receive public comment on rules proposed to implement last year's changes in the Reclamation Act, Idahoans who testified raised concerns about the reporting requirements of those regulations.

"The primary purpose of reclamation law is food production," Idaho Water Users Association Director Sheri Chapman reminded the Bureau of Reclamation's three-man panel which gathered in Boise for the hearing. "Regulations and paperwork should be minimized."

Ted Diehl of the Northside Canal Company in Jerome said the forms required by the rules would increase his firm's operating costs by $50,000 the first year and $20,000 annually thereafter.

"This would pile the paper up in one neat stack, though to create another dam," Diehl testified.

Thursday's hearing — one of 13 held across the West — was designed to gain public comment on the rules that are designed to enforce the Reclamation Reform Act. That law was the first major revision of national reclamation law for more than a half-century.

Included in the changes to the Reclamation Act are new limits on the amount of land producers may irrigate with water from federal projects. The acreage limits were changed by Congress from 160 to 960 for Class 1 or top-grade farming land.

The proposed regulations would allow owners of less productive land or parcels in higher elevations to use federal water for irrigating larger parcels, however.

As part of the regulations, bureau officials proposed farmers also be required to assure their compliance with the Reclamation Act by filing certification forms annually.

"It's a little bit foolish to require annual certification if an operator doesn't change his operation from one year to the next," Chapman testified.

He and other witnesses suggested the bureau require one initial certification, then notify producers that they must file new forms only if their status changes.

Tom Howenden of the Idaho Cattle Feeders Association said the paperwork requirements would create confusion among irrigators.

Andropov elected Soviet president; poor health rumored

By KIRSTEN O. LUNDBERG
United Press International

MOSCOW — Communist Party chief Yuri Andropov today was named president of the Soviet Union, consolidating his control over the Kremlin by accumulating in seven months the power 1 took Leonid Brezhnev 13 years to assume.

Andropov's election by the Soviet legislature gives him the three top titles held by Brezhnev on his death in November — president, Communist Party chief and chairman of the defense council.

"Your trust in me I consider trust placed in the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, and I have been a member of this party for more than 40 years, and I adhere to its ideals," Andropov said after the unanimous vote was taken by a show of hands.

Andropov's wan physical appearance and his failure to return to the session after a break raised new questions about his health, one day after his 69th birthday. Finnish sources said he looked ill at an official dinner over the weekend.

Pollburo member Konstantin Chernenko, who was out-maneuvered by Andropov to succeed Brezhnev, put Andropov's name up for nomination and said Andropov "will meet the highest and best interests of the state."

Chernenko praised Andropov's "energetic and imaginative activity" that has brought him the "general respect, faith and sympathy of the party and people."

Andropov showed no emotion after the vote but appeared to be in pain when he rose to acknowledge the standing ovation from members of the Supreme Soviet, the nation's legislature, meeting in joint session.

"Allow me to express my whole-hearted appreciation and gratitude for the high trust and honor given me," Andropov said. Special microphones were set up at his seat to spare him another walk to the podium to deliver his brief remarks, which were delivered in a high, pinched voice.

When the legislature reassembled after a break, Andropov was missing, although the rest of the Communist Party Politburo resumed their places on the stage.

Andropov was reported to have spoken at length at a meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee on Wednesday, but that was behind closed doors.

There was no hand-shaking or back-slapping from the Politburo members who surrounded Andropov after his election beneath a giant statue of Vladimir Lenin in the 19th century Great Kremlin Palace. But they were smiling and exchanging small talk as the routine business of the legislature continued.

The election was followed by a speech by Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who called President Reagan's latest offer of flexibility in the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks a ruse to conceal a U.S. military buildup.

"We must conduct negotiations honestly and not try to outsmart our partners," Gromyko said. "The U.S. president is attempting to present his position as flexible, but the intention is entirely to pursue the buildup of military programs currently underway."

"Washington does not deny the likelihood of using nuclear weapons first. Washington should know better than that. There are no winners or winners' sides in a nuclear war."

Brezhnev became Communist Party leader in 1964, but it was not until 1977 that he added the presidency and chairmanship of the defense council to his political responsibilities.

Countdown for shuttle begins
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The countdown began Thursday for the second flight of the shuttle Challenger and ran smoothly toward a blastoff Saturday that will rocket the first American woman into space.

They're either on ahead of schedule," said Mark Heas, a Kennedy Space Center spokesman. "Everything's being along by the book."

Other three crew members, mission specialists Sally Ride, John Fabian and Norman Thagard, went joy riding in the trainers to experience some of the motions of spaceflight.

Ms. Ride, a cool perfectionist, has shied from the publicity accompanying her flight. "Sure thank you all for coming out," has been her only statement to the news media since her arrival at the Cape Wednesday.

Dairy support cutback planned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Agriculture Committee Thursday tentatively approved twin proposals to cut government spending on dairy and tobacco price support programs.

The panel delayed action on a third plan, which would allow a two-year freeze on "target prices" — price levels used to determine how much the government should pay farmers when actual market prices for their crops drop below expected levels.

Hyrum, Utah, meatpacking firm finalized plans to construct a commercial plant. Bruce Wade of Tri-Miller Packing Co. in Hyrum said his firm would build a 60-foot-long sausage and transport it to Caldwell for the town's annual Buckaroo Breakfast Aug. 13.

Slipnot spokesman Phil Quinney, meanwhile, said anyone alleging Monday's siting on the firm's first 60-foot-long hashbrown would be asked to take special sanitary measures, including wearing hair or beard nets.

Russian girl upset with mail

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Soviet schoolgirl who wrote President Reagan with an appeal for peace complained Thursday that her letter, addressed in Russian, was returned stamped "address unknown."

Tatyana Fomina of Byauke, a town in the Soviet Far East, said she was distressed by the return of her letter, which had been addressed in Cyrillic handwriting to "President Reagan, the White House, Washington, United States of America."

"I wish you to check it out and let me know what my mistake was," Miss Fomina said in a letter to the Soviet Peace Committee. "I very much want peace. I am waiting impatiently for summer, so I can earn money and donate it to the Soviet peace fund."

According to Yuri Zhukov, chairman of the peace committee and a Pravda columnist, it was not by accident that the schoolgirl's letter was returned.

Europeans launch satellites

KOUREG, French Guiana (UPI) — The Ariane rocket hurtled into space Thursday and pushed two satellites into orbit, successfully challenging for the first time the U.S. dominance of the lucrative commercial space launch market.

Technicians and scientists at the French space center on the northeast coast of South America exploded in cheers at hatching after the second and largest satellite detached from the rocket according to plan.

"Now we are on the right track," said Frederic d'Allest, president of ArianeSpace, the marketing arm of the European Space Agency, which developed the rocket. "Many potential clients were waiting for this flight to confirm their orders."

U.S. may have to move base

TEGUICIGALPA, Honduras (UPI) — A congressman for the ruling Liberal Party said Thursday a U.S. military training base under construction in Honduras must be closed if Congress does not approve it.

"If the legislative branch does not approve (it) they will have to remove their installations," Congressman Hector Orlando Gomez Cisneros told UPI. He said Foreign Minister Rodrigo Paz Barmela appeared before a session of 82 deputies Wednesday to discuss the decision to construct the base at Puerto Castilla on the Atlantic coast.

Interest law axed by Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Thursday overwhelmingly approved a bill to repeal the automatic withholding of tax on interest and dividends, but attached burdensome riders that could complicate final congressional approval.

The bill now goes to a Senate-House conference committee, which must work out differences between the Senate bill and a House version that is a straight repeal of the withholding law.

On a 48-41 vote, the Senate attached to the simple House-passed bill some riders ranging from President Reagan's Caribbean aid and Enterprise Zone proposals to stronger taxpayer compliance/interest and dividends.

A single compromise bill produced by the conference would have to be approved again by the full House and the Senate before it could be sent to President Reagan.

The president, who has vowed to veto a straight repeal of withholding, hinted he may sign a bill that contains

Other WPPSS matters were discussed by the attorneys Thursday. Bill Parsons, the attorney for the city of Burley, cautioned that the Washington case "lent over." He said there will be re-hearings and reconsiderations and possible modifications to the decision before it is final.

WPPSS

As part of the discussion, Steve Tuft, the attorney for the city of Heyburn, outlined many of the major WPPSS suits that still are pending.

Thirteen are bondholder lawsuits, many of which directly name participants in the plants as parties to securities fraud, he said.

The charges are based on claims that all those involved in the sale of the WPPSS bonds misrepresented their creditworthiness, Tuft said.

Chemical Bank, which is acting as the trustee for the bondholders, has indicated in an Oregon court that it will press such suits.

"It is my personal concern that the bondholder lawsuits are a sleeping giant," Tuft said.

The bondholder suits presently are being referred to a multi-district panel in Washington, D.C., which will determine where they will be tried. Tuft said. But once these suits come out of this panel, a real "war of attrition" could begin, he said.

The investors are not sure who to blame, he said, but they don't care either. They may go after as many people possible to get the WPPSS debt paid.

Included will be bond-rating agencies, brokerage firms, engineers and bond counsels who certified the bonds, Tuft said. It also could include city council members, mayors, city attorneys and other public officials who acted on behalf of the various participants.

Other WPPSS matters were discussed by the attorneys Thursday. Bill Parsons, the attorney for the city of Burley, cautioned that the Washington case "lent over." He said there will be re-hearings and reconsiderations and possible modifications to the decision before it is final.

And Parsons said he hopes the Idaho Supreme Court case can be resolved before the end of July.

National Weather Service Forecast to 7 p.m. EST 6-17-83

Increasing clouds, chance of showers

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas: Increasing clouds with a chance of afternoon showers. Winds S to 15 mph. Tonight and Saturday, partly cloudy. Cooler and breezy Saturday. Highs 65 to 72, lows upper 40s.
Camas Prairie, Halley, Wood River Valley: Increasing clouds today with chance of a shower. Partly cloudy tonight and Saturday. Windy and cooler on Saturday. Lows 40 to 45, highs 68 to 85.
Northern Blaine News: Increasing high clouds in both Nevada and Utah today and Saturday. Turning colder on Saturday.
A rapidly approaching Pacific weather system just off the Northwest coast is expected to bring showery weather to northern Idaho this morning. The precipitation will spread south during the day today. The showers are expected mainly to central Idaho, from the central mountains and northward.
Cool, unstable air from the Gulf of Alaska will move in behind the shower system. This will result in cool, showery weather throughout the entire state over the weekend. Most of the precipitation, however, continues to be limited to the northern half of the state. High pressure will begin to build back into the state on Monday, resulting in drier weather.
Most of Idaho experienced sunny skies and mild temperatures Thursday, with many afternoon temperatures reaching into the upper 80s to upper 90s.
The agricultural outlook indicates total precipitation will be light, less than 0.1 inch. The showers are expected in southern valleys from showers falling today.
The daily average evaporation rates will be near .20 of an inch through the period.
Winds for spraying will be 10 to 20 mph today.
The highest temperature reported in the state on Thursday was 81 degrees at Lewiston, while the lowest was 27 degrees at Stanley.
Elsewhere in the nation, temperatures ranged from a high of 110 at Gila Bend, Ariz., to a low of 34 at Bismarck, N.D.

Senate bitterly passes income ceiling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate rejected a pay raise to $100,000 Thursday and bitterly accepted a compromise hike to $69,800 immediately and a 30 percent limitation on outside earned income effective Jan. 1.

The action could affect about half of the Senate's members who earned more than the 30 percent limit last year — a group headed by Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., who made $135,000 from speeches in 1982.

The vote was 49-47, with both Republican leader Howard Baker and Democratic leader Robert Byrd pressuring several senators to switch their votes during the course of the roll call.

The pay raise was attached to a catch-all supplemental money bill for fiscal 1983 that was then approved 64-33.

The compromise was sponsored by Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., with the bipartisan leadership support of Baker and Byrd as well as the Common Cause lobbying group.

"There is a serious problem when one accepts payment from people that have legislation before this body," shouted Jackson, who sponsored a series of rejected proposals last week.

"When income on honoraria exceeds salary, you've got to be foolish to believe it is consistent with the job you hold."

The amendment increases a senator's pay from $69,662 to $69,800, the same as the House, and imposes a limit of 30 percent of salary on unearned outside income. The House already has that limitation.

Sens. Jake Garn, R-Utah, who earned $60,000 from speeches last year, and John Tower, R-Texas — neither of whom has private wealth — condemned the "double standard" in the Senate and promised to press for legislation for full disclosure of unearned income.

Reagan's arms stand 'terrifies' honor student

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan Thursday accepted a high school student's petition for a nuclear freeze, but she said she was "terrified" by his insistence that peace will come only through U.S. military buildup.

"I was terrified even more to hear in person than to hear over national TV that he so strongly believes that the way to reduce is to build up," Ariela Gross, 17, said after a private, 20-minute meeting in the Oval Office. Reagan's session with Miss Gross, of Princeton, N.J., ended a controversy that flared when a Department of Education official threatened to revoke her $1,000 scholarship if she insisted on giving Reagan a letter urging an immediate nuclear arms freeze.

"He simply wanted to give me his views on the arms race," she said after the rare meeting. "I don't think anyone changed anyone's mind."

Miss Gross said Reagan — whom she described as "charming" — "did most of the talking... It was hard for me to interrupt. He's the president."

But the politeness ended when Reagan spoke out bluntly on arms control policies to the 141 Presidential Scholars — including Miss Gross — on the South Lawn. She responded later in an interview.

"I know many of you and your friends back home are concerned by the destructive capability of the world's nuclear weapons," Reagan told the students. "I pray for the day when nuclear weapons will no longer exist anywhere on earth."

"We're keeping this country strong for only one reason — to deter any adversary — from thinking it can achieve its goals through war," he said.

Committee votes to limit tax cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Democratic-controlled House Ways and Means Committee voted Thursday to limit President Reagan's July 1 income tax cut to about $700 per person.

The committee, bowing to the Democratic leadership's wishes, approved the limit — 18-15 — with four Democrats voting in opposition.

It now goes to the full House, where Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas predicts it will be approved by a "comfortable margin" next week.

The 10 percent cut is the final phase of Reagan's three-year, 25 percent tax rate reduction Congress approved in 1981. Reagan has vowed to veto legislation that waters down the program.

The committee-approved Tax Rate Equity Act allows the 10 percent cut to go into effect as scheduled in two weeks, but single taxpayers would get a tax cut of no more than $377, a family of four with one wage earner would get a reduction of up to $673, and a two-earner family would a maximum tax cut of $720.

Abortion debate entering political arenas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan expressed "profound disappointment" Thursday at Supreme Court's reaffirmation of a woman's right to an abortion and activists on both sides agreed the debate is now in the political arena.

Supporters and opponents of the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion said the court's three majority Wednesday striking down most state restrictions on abortion means the forum for debate has shifted to the Senate and the 1984 election campaign.

Reagan called on the lawmakers to take action to stop abortion.

"Once again, I call on the Congress to make its voice heard against abortion. Our society is confronted with a great moral issue — the taking of the life of an unborn child," he said in a written statement.

"Accordingly, I join millions of Americans expressing profound disappointment at the decisions announced by the Supreme Court in striking down several efforts by states and localities to control the circumstances under which abortion may be performed."

Senate bitterly passes income ceiling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate rejected a pay raise to $100,000 Thursday and bitterly accepted a compromise hike to $80,000 immediately and a 30 percent limitation on outside earned income effective Jan. 1.

The action could affect about half of the Senate's members who earned more than the 30 percent limit last year — a group headed by Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., who made $135,000 from speeches in 1982.

The vote was 49-47, with both Republican leader Howard Baker and Democratic leader Robert Byrd presiding several senators to switch their votes during the course of the roll call.

The pay raise was attached to a catch-all supplemental money bill for fiscal 1983 that was then approved 61-33.

The compromise was sponsored by Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., with the bipartisan leadership support of Baker and Byrd as well as the Common Cause lobbying group.

"There is a serious problem when one accepts payment from people that have legislation before this body," shouted Jackson, who sponsored a series of rejected proposals last week.

"When income on honoraria exceeds salary, you've got to be foolish to believe it is consistent with the job you hold."

The amendment increases a senator's pay from $60,662 to $69,800, and the same as the House, and imposes a limit of 30 percent of salary on unearned outside income. The House already has that limitation.

Sens. Jake Garn, R-Utah, who earned $60,000 from speeches last year, and John Tower, R-Texas — neither of whom has private wealth — condemned the "double standard" in the Senate and promised to press for legislation for full disclosure of unearned income.

Reagan's arms stand 'terrifies' honor student

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan Thursday accepted a high school student's petition for a nuclear freeze, but she said she was "terrified" by his insistence that peace will come only through U.S. military buildup.

"I was terrified even more to hear in a session that to hear over national TV that he so strongly believes that the way to reduce is to build up," Ariela Gross, 17, said after a private, 20-minute meeting in the Oval Office.

Reagan's session with Miss Gross, of Princeton, N.J., ended a controversy that flared when a Department of Education official threatened to revoke her $1,000 scholarship if she insisted on giving Reagan a letter urging an immediate nuclear arms freeze.

"He simply wanted to give me his views on the arms race," she said after the rare meeting. "I don't think anyone changed anyone's mind."

Miss Gross said Reagan — whom she described as "charming" — did most of the talking — it was hard for her to interrupt. He's the president.

But the politeness ended when Reagan spoke to bluntly on arms control policies to the 141 Presidential Scholars — including Miss Gross — at the South Lawn. She responded later in an interview.

"I know many of you and your friends back home are concerned by the destructive capability of the world's nuclear weapons," Reagan told the students. "I want to make something very plain. I pray for the day when nuclear weapons will no longer exist anywhere on earth."

"We're keeping this country strong for only one reason — to deter any adversary — from thinking it can achieve its goals through war," he said

Committee votes to limit tax cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Democratic-controlled House Ways and Means Committee voted Thursday to limit President Reagan's July 1 income tax cut to about $700 per person.

The committee, bowing to the Democratic leadership's wishes, approved the limit 18-15, with four Democrats voting in opposition.

It now goes to the full House, where Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas predicts it will be approved by a "comfortable margin" next week.

The 10 percent cut is the final phase of Reagan's three-year, 25 percent tax rate reduction Congress approved in 1981. Reagan has vowed to veto legislation that waters down the program.

The committee-approved Tax Rate Equity Act allows the 10 percent cut to go into effect as scheduled in two weeks, but single taxpayers would get a tax cut of no more than $637, a family of four with one wage earner would get a reduction of up to $673, and a two-earner family would a maximum tax cut of $720.

Abortion debate entering political arenas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan expressed "profound disappointment" Thursday at Supreme Court's reaffirmation of a woman's right to an abortion and activists on both sides agreed the debate is now in the political arena.

Reagan called on the lawmakers to take action to stop abortion.

"Once again, I call on the Congress to make its voice heard against abortion. Our society is confronted with a great moral issue — the taking of the life of an unborn child," he said in a written statement.

"Accordingly, I join millions of Americans expressing profound disappointment at the decisions announced by the Supreme Court in striking down several efforts by states and localities to control the circumstances under which abortion may be performed."

Pope's visit triggers worker protests

By BARRY JAMES
UPI Senior Editor

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Pope John Paul II came home to pealing church bells Thursday, pledging solidarity with Poles who are "deprived of their liberty" and triggering an anti-government demonstration in the streets of the capital.

"I only live Solidarity," chanted tens of thousands of Poles leaving a Warsaw cathedral after the pope's first homily of his eight-day pilgrimage to his homeland, the second since John Paul was elected pope in 1978.

"Poland for the Poles ... This is the real Poland ... We want free elections," shouted the crowd, unfurling Solidarity banners and chanting the name of Lech Walesa, the founder of the banned trade union.

Priests on a church balcony along the crowd's route waved Solidarity banners and made the "V-for-victory" symbol in a direct protest of 18 months of martial law in Poland.

Starting his visit with a denunciation of military rule, the pope said at Warsaw's Okęcie Airport he came to be with those who "have suffered and are still suffering" in his homeland.

Around the country church bells chimed for the Polish pontiff as Poland's president, Henryk Jablonski, greeted John Paul in the name of the communist regime of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski.

On Friday, the pope was meeting for the first time with Jaruzelski and was to hold an outdoor mass for an expected 1 million people.

The pope kissed the ground as he stepped from the plane that brought him from Rome. "I have come home," John Paul told officials and church leaders at the airport welcoming ceremonies.

Cardinal Jozef Glemp, primate of Poland's Roman Catholic Church, praised the visit, amid a struggle between the rigors of martial law and the will of the Polish people, as "a victory of faith and trust for the whole nation."

As the pontiff flew to Warsaw, church and state officials debated in secret a possible meeting between John Paul and Walesa.

In Gdansk, authorities placed a 24-hour guard around Walesa, the symbol of the popular ferment stifled by the imposition of martial law. Walesa said he would travel to Czestochowa this weekend to try to see the pope.

Government fires 550 striking copper miners

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — The military government, facing its strongest opposition in 10 years of rule, fired 550 militant copper miners Thursday who staged an illegal strike as a prelude to a nationwide walkout over the arrest of their leader.

The workers, representing 92 percent of the 600-man early morning shift at the El Salvador copper mine, the nation's third largest, walked off their jobs at 8 a.m., beginning the first copper industry strike in 10 years of harsh military rule.

"These gentlemen are all sacked because they broke the law," military leader Gen. Augusto Pinochet said in a speech in northern Chile at the end of a three-day tour outside Santiago.

The powerful Copper Workers Confederation ordered a nationwide walkout of its 22,000 members for Friday after the government jailed union president Rodolfo Seguel because he led nationwide protests demanding an immediate return to democracy.

Three people were killed and 350 people were arrested in the protests. Seguel was jailed without bail and will be prosecuted on charges of violating national security laws.

Under a 1979 law, workers may strike only when unable to reach contract agreements with their employers. Strikes for other reasons, including political, are banned.

Representatives of four other opposition unions which make up the National Workers Command, failed to agree on a general strike in support of the copper miners.

18 die in vengeful massacre in isolated Mideast violence

By United Press International

Masked gunmen killed up to 18 people in the northern Lebanese city of Tripoli Thursday in a bloody machine-gun "massacre," apparently in revenge for the deaths of members of a small Moslem sect, Lebanese news reports said.

Conflicting accounts said the gunmen were either members of the Syrian-supported Moslem-Alawite sect or Syrian forces who occupy the port city of Tripoli and its environs.

The government press agency called the bloody scene at a swimming pool, restaurant and garage Thursday a "massacre" intended to avenge the killings in Tripoli of Alawite Moslems.

The independent Central News Agency quoted police officials saying 18 people were killed in the shooting spree. The official Lebanese National News agency said "about 16 people died and three others were wounded."

The killings in Tripoli, 42 miles north of Beirut, grabbed attention from the continuing violence in and around the Lebanese capital of Beirut.

Five people were treated for cuts after four bombs aimed at four shops reportedly owned by Christians exploded nearly simultaneously in Moslem west Beirut. Police refused to link the bombings to a religious motive.

The Israelis said no one was injured in a rocket-propelled grenade attack on their positions near a U.S. Marine base outside Beirut. The Marines reported Israeli machine-guns opened fire and flames lit the sky.

Truck crash breaks uranium container

KOOSKIA (UPI) — A truck carrying a cargo of enriched uranium overturned on twisting U.S. Highway 12 in North Idaho Thursday, cracking a container of the radioactive substance.

Idaho State Police said one of 24 containers loaded on the truck split when the vehicle apparently went out of control and landed on its side about 40 miles east of Kooskia.

Officers said no hazard was posed by the 7:30 a.m. accident and the highway remained open throughout the day.

The cause of the incident was under investigation. Dispatchers said the highway was clear and dry at the time of the accident.

Troopers equipped with Geiger counters remained at the scene until crews from Richland, Wash., could travel to the site for clean-up and to transport the containers to their destination; ISP dispatcher Paul Boswell said.

The cargo bound for Richland, Wash.; nuclear facilities from Ashstabile, Ohio, was destined for use in a nuclear reactor, said Sue Kuntz-Hagan of UNC Nuclear Industries in Richland.

She said technicians from various

U.S. Department of Energy contractors in eastern Washington would load the uranium on another truck for shipment to the Hanford facilities.

Each of the 24 containers carried four uranium "billets" weighing 450 pounds each, she said. At Hanford, the billets are processed into fuel assemblies for use in the reactor, which produces plutonium for the government, she said.

Dam releases will lower Boise River

BOISE (UPI) — Federal officials cut releases from the reservoir system above Boise Thursday as a dwindling snowpack and cooler temperatures lessened the strain on upstream reservoirs.

Dave Brownell, Corps of Engineers Lucky Peak project superintendent, said releases from Lucky Peak Dam were cut by 500 cubic feet per second at 10 a.m.

Corps and Bureau of Reclamation officials said conditions would be checked again Friday, and another decision made about whether releases should be further reduced.

Thursday's cutback was expected to lessen water levels in the Treasure Valley by about three inches.

The river had been running at about 15 inches above flood stage since Sunday. Some residents in low parts of Ada and Canyon counties had been forced to flee their homes and bypass flooded roads.

Panel told assessors shouldn't collect car fees

BOISE (UPI) — A county official told members of a legislative committee studying Idaho's tax structure Thursday assessors should not be saddled with the burden of collecting vehicle license fees.

Ada County Assessor Bill Schroeder said tax collections rob the assessors of personnel and time needed to complete more important duties like property appraisals.

The Legislative Council's Tax Structure Committee began its first meeting at the Statehouse by reviewing tax studies conducted in 1955 and 1967 by panels composed of citizens as well as lawmakers.

Lawmakers authorized the new joint committee this year after they were forced to raise sales and fuel taxes to overcome an anticipated budget shortage.

Committee co-chairman Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, said members have been charged with developing a long-term plan that will enable lawmakers to balance the state's budget without resorting to emergency tax measures.

Utah flooding appears past; cleanup task commences

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The Herculean task of coping with two months of record Utah flooding should end this weekend, National Weather Service state meteorologist Bill Alder said Thursday.

"I don't think we're going to have many problems after Sunday," Alder said. "We're forecasting a wild storm system moving into Utah during the weekend with the snow level down to 7,000 feet either late Saturday or on Sunday.

"So, after highs in the 80s today and Friday, we'll then go back downhill and the cooler weather should bring an end to the flood-stage levels on most western Utah rivers and streams."

State Public Safety Commissioner Larry Lunnen and Lorraine Tempest, director of the Utah Comprehensive Emergency Management Division, said they were still collecting flood damage reports which were expected to push the Utah total since mid April to more than $200 million.

The major damage began April 12 with a massive mudslide in Spanish Fork Canyon. The slide backed up the canyon's river over the tiny railroad community of Thistle and buried more than three miles of U.S. Highway 89-6 and Denver & Rio Grande Railroad tracks.

Lunnen said he would meet with his staff through Friday to compile new damage totals.

Psychic fails to locate clues in search for missing sitter

POCATELLO (UPI) — A psychic investigating the disappearance of a 14-year-old babysitter says she believes the girl left voluntarily from an apartment where she was watching a young child.

Judy Belle, 38, Sacramento, Calif., said Thursday she felt Cindy Brnghurst left the residence with a man she apparently knew.

"I have her leaving the apartment," Ms. Belle said. "I see an individual, a man, that she recognizes. At this time, she feels in control. Brnghurst voluntarily walks down the stairs, and then I lose her."

The Alameda Junior High School student has not been seen since she was reported missing early June 5.

but police say they do not believe she disappeared from her home.

The psychic said at a news conference Thursday she came to Pocatello last weekend at the request of the girl's family, but found almost no clues when she arrived.

"There are certain things I need to work with, and I was told they were here," Ms. Belle said. "When I arrived, everything that I needed to work with had been destroyed, from my perspective."

The girl's clothing had been washed and the woman whose child she had been tending had moved from the apartment and taken all the furniture, Ms. Belle said.

Jury convicts 27-year-old on rape charge

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A jury of 10 men and two women took just over a 24-hour deliberation and convicted 27-year-old Thomas Livingston of raping an 83-year-old woman at her home last winter.

Jurors told The Times-News that they asked only one vote to reach a unanimous decision that Livingston was guilty of rape, burglary and grand theft.

"There wasn't a thing you could defend him with," said one juror, who asked not to be identified. "Of course, you feel terrible about it. You don't like to see anyone in that position. You feel very sorry for the family. You just have to do what the law tells you. You don't have any choice."

Several of the defendant's family members and friends broke into tears as deputy clerk Cleo Robinson read the jury's verdict. Livingston, who now faces serving up to life in prison, remained silent as he heard the verdict. He was then led back to his cell in the Twin Falls County Jail.

Judge Theron Ward has delayed sentencing until a presentence investigation is done. Prosecutor Harry DeHaan said he hopes to complete sentencing by mid-July.

Livingston was charged with breaking into the woman's home on Dec. 16, raping her and stealing her cash, jewelry and car.

Defense lawyer Mike Powers, who chose not to put his client on the witness stand, said he was not surprised by the verdict.

"My concern was that Tom would get a fair trial, and that it not be overcome by emotion," Powers said. "I think he did it."

Powers said he is considering an appeal. No decision will be made until after Livingston is sentenced.

The strongest point of DeHaan's case against Livingston involved the arrest. There was no dispute that Livingston was arrested in Jackpot, some two-and-a-half hours after the rape was reported, and that he was in the victim's car and possessed her jewelry and cash.

At one point, Powers conceded that Nevada authorities had a strong case against his client for possession of stolen property.

When the jury had to decide whether to believe the victim's contention that although she had not seen her attacker's face — a fact that prevented her from identifying Livingston at a Dec. 30 preliminary hearing — she now could identify Livingston as the man who raped her.

"In order to vote for acquittal, ladies and gentlemen, you're going to have to believe she's crazy," DeHaan said.

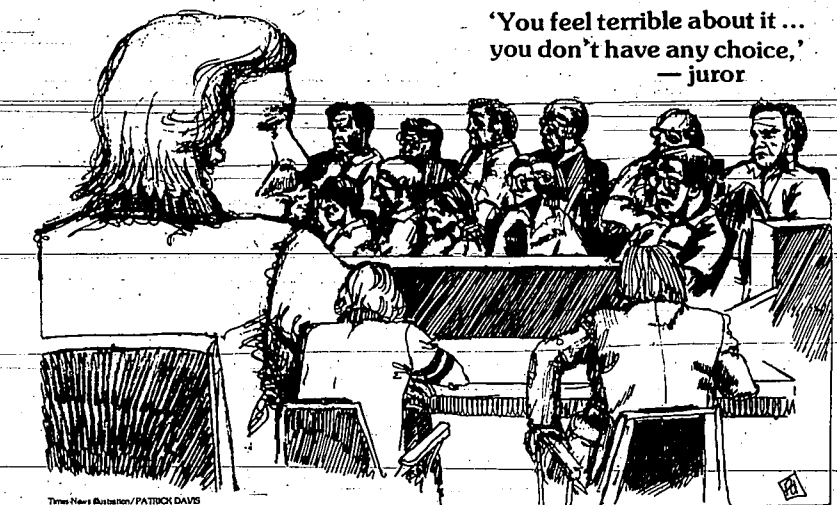

The prosecutor attempted to verify her story through what he called "the most incredible chain of incriminating evidence I've ever seen."

Absent from DeHaan's circumstantial evidence was any proof that Livingston was at the scene of the crime. Police testified that they had found no fingerprints, and the victim said her attacker had wiped the crime scene clean of any incriminating fingerprints.

Instead, DeHaan produced a series of tissue samples that matched the combination of blood and enzymes found in semen stains at the crime scene with Livingston's blood and enzyme makeup.

However, an estimated 11.6 percent of the U.S. population possess the same combination, said William Eubanks, the FBI laboratory specialist who analyzed the tissue samples.

"Again, it doesn't prove that he was the criminal," DeHaan said in his closing argument. "But it does make it less and less likely that he wasn't."

Ario Campbell and John Livingston, the defendant's brother, testified that they were present at the time of the alleged conversation. Both said they never heard the defendant say anything about the charge against him.

Powers also produced 13-year-old Dori Jones of Twin Falls, who said she saw a strange man at the victim's home earlier in the day.

Coupled with an initial police report that the assailant had "inky curly-brown hair," as opposed to Livingston's blond hair, Powers suggested that police had arrested the wrong man.

All of this was heard by a capacity courtroom audience, some of whom defended themselves without chairs Thursday. A coalition of people, representing the Twin Falls chapter of the National Organization for Women, the First Baptist Church of Twin Falls, the Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center and Volunteers Against Violence, organized the attendance as a way to demonstrate support for the victim.

Despite the unusually large audience, jurors said they were not intimidated by the public attention given the trial.

City leaders argue issues, quiz experts at annual meeting

Panelists: Cities hardest hit by nation's tax revolt

AIC President Deekard talked as both a mayor, a legislator

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The revolt against government spending has hit Idaho cities harder than government almost anywhere in the nation.

A panel of tax experts gave that message Thursday to representatives of Idaho cities, who were gathered in Twin Falls for the annual conference of the Association of Idaho Cities.

In the aftermath of the 1978 property-tax revolt, "no state has hit the brakes more sharply than your state," said John Shannon, the associate director of the U.S. Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations.

And nationally, local governments have stepped on the brake much harder than state governments.

"Local government in general, and city government in particular, are the low men on the intergovernmental totem pole," Shannon said.

"The flow of dollars follows the flow of power," said Jeff Younts, a member of the Garden City City Council, and a state legislative budget analyst.

Although they agreed that Idaho cities have been hard-pressed since 1978, members of the panel disagreed on the solutions.

The residential property tax is the most "underutilized" tax in the state, said Russell Westerberg, the president of the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho.

The state relies heavily on its income tax, and reliance on the sales tax is increasing. But property-tax collections remain low in a per-capita comparison with other states, said the leader of the taxpayers group, an independent watchdog organization.

It must be the job of local government, which is hurt most by this situation, to convince residential homeowners that their tax rates are "the best buy going," he said.

The key to local government lies on the local level, Westerberg said. "It is against political nature to go through the agony of raising taxes for someone else to spend."

But cities better face up to the fact that this is never going to work, said Steve Seward, the director of the state's division of financial management.

The average person is paying more and getting less in direct local government service, he said.

The reason is that the burden of tax collection and distribution is no longer spread evenly, and therefore, some reform in the tax system is needed, he said.

Reform would mean increasing the progressivity of the state income tax, which would mean that people who earn more would pay more. It also would mean expanding the income tax to personal services. These would include everything from haircuts to legal counsel. And it would mean

To solve problems, cities must look to legislators

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Cities will have to lobby the legislature more effectively next year or face continuing deterioration in the services they provide, the president of the Association of Idaho Cities said Thursday.

In his opening address to the annual AIC conference, which is being held in Twin Falls, Jerry Deekard, the mayor of Eagle, said Idaho cities had better start their effort Monday — and refuse to quit until they get what they want.

Deekard, who is also a state legislator, said he could count on his hands the number of times local elected officials testified in Boise this year.

"If cities do not do a better job than that, they can continue to expect to encounter problems providing basic services."

"And if we are not able to provide essential services, we will level, you can forget economic development," he said.

Economic development is the theme of this year's AIC conference.

The remarks came at an opening general session of the conference, which featured a series of humorous — and not-so-humorous — jabs at the Legislature.

Deekard told the estimated 350 assembled delegates from cities around the state that the Legislature currently holds the cities in handcuffs.

Among the 11 Western states, Idaho now is 11th in providing fire protection and 10th in handling its sewage problems, he said.

And at a time when federal funding for cities is diminishing, Idaho cities find themselves almost two times as dependent on federal money than other cities.

One reason for the problem, he said, is that the Legislature has given its cities less discretionary authority than any other state.

As a result, in 1983 the Legislature raised $159 million in new taxes, and only $1.3 million of this will go to cities, Deekard said.

And cities in Idaho have borne the brunt of the revolt against government spending, he said.

From 1978, when the One Percent Initiative was passed to today, the cities' spending has increased only 14 percent, he said. State spending has increased 59 percent.

"Perhaps we have been guilty of doing too good a job locally."

"We have managed affairs at the local level better than the state, but now we come to a point where cities could start going broke," he said after the meeting.

Without healthy city government, new business and industry will not consider moving to Idaho.

Efforts should be made to obtain additional revenue-raising capacity from the Legislature, Deekard said.

"The sales tax is the most obvious place," he said after the meeting. Local-option taxes cannot provide broad enough relief.

Deekard also said that adjustments should be made in the state property-tax formula.

The ceiling on yearly increases in the local property tax should be lifted to 8 percent, to reflect inflation and the pressures of growth, he said. The current limit is 5 percent.

The state fund itself has dipped from $23 million in 1979 to $15.8 million, and most of that will be spent this year.

State officials now are considering ways to boost Idaho's water-quality money. Some tactics being considered include issuing pollution-control bonds, increasing the cigarette tax that pays part of the tab and switching the grants to low-interest loans, Braum said.

Cities will see less grant money for sewage work

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho's cities soon will be paying far bigger shares of the bills to construct sewage-treatment facilities, which have been ordered by environmental authorities.

Disappearance of some state grants, withdrawal by the Federal Environmental Protection Agency from some expenses and sagging revenues in Idaho's water-quality fund will throw much more of the burden on local shoulders next year, said the manager of the state's sewage-grants program said Thursday in Twin Falls.

Waste water and sewer systems once cost cities as little as 5 percent of the total expense.

Instead, some cities will have to chip in 40 percent of multimillion-dollar projects; others may not rank high enough to get any chunk of the water-quality money.

All will have to meet federal water-quality standards by 1988, said Robert L. Braum, the manager of municipal facilities construction for the state Health and Welfare Department. He spoke to city officials gathered for the Association of Idaho Cities conference.

The largest drop in funding will come in October 1984, when the federal government cuts the amount of money it will pay to build new sewers or treatment plants from 75 percent to 55 percent, Braum said. State law already has eliminated the 15 percent share Idaho used to contribute for any one project.

So many cities that do obtain grants for plants will bear as much as 45 percent of the building expense.

At the same time, federal rules will scratch certain types of sewers that once were eligible for grants. The EPA also will build them only for the existing population, not for projected growth, as was the case under the former policy, he said.

The rule will take their toll in Idaho, Braum said. In 1980, the state's cities were eligible for $23 million in grants to fix outdated sewage systems or construct new ones. In late 1984, they will be eligible for only $127 million. Idaho is getting about $11.8 million this year from the federal government.

The rest must come from state or local funding. The state's water pollution-control fund, which primarily helps smaller communities, also is shrinking, the state official said.

Decline in the state inheritance tax, one of three that support the fund, have dropped annual income from a high of about $3 million yearly to $4.2 million this year. In 1985, it will be $2.2 million, Braum estimated.

The state fund itself has dipped from $23 million in 1979 to $15.8 million, and most of that will be spent this year.

State officials now are considering ways to boost Idaho's water-quality money. Some tactics being considered include issuing pollution-control bonds, increasing the cigarette tax that pays part of the tab and switching the grants to low-interest loans, Braum said.

CSI solicits donations for athletic funding

TWIN FALLS — CSI Interim President Gerald Meyerhoeffer Thursday night called on the Golden Eagle Boosters for more monetary support for the school's athletic program.

Meyerhoeffer, still in the running for the school's presidency, told the 17-year-old club that while its support has been outstanding over the years, the expense crunch has struck heavily.

"It has always been our boast at CSI that we haven't had to subsidize athletics at CSI," Meyerhoeffer said. "But unless we get extra help now, that won't be true in the future."

Meyerhoeffer noted the basketball athletic budget alone has tripled in the past three years.

What Meyerhoeffer actually was seeking was the boosters' support in taking on the large growth of the athletic budget outside the realm of the season ticket.

Throughout its 17-year history, the booster club has made most of its profit by taking 20 percent of the season ticket sales. Its members have made to the business community and public.

He noted that CSI was perhaps unique in dividing its per-se ticket money with a booster club, noting that almost all colleges at least partially fund their athletics through outright donations. Ticket revenues accrue directly and totally into the athletic department budget.

Putting together some analogies,

Meyerhoeffer noted that "Moscow, a town one-third the size of Twin Falls, raises $130,000 in donations to the University of Idaho Vandals. Those contributing to that fund purchase tickets outside that figure."

In fact, Meyerhoeffer noted, that CSI currently raises about $3,000 in scholarship funding from Twin Falls. However, University of Idaho Boosters raise more than twice that amount for the Vandals in Twin Falls "although it isn't exactly the same type of operation."

"The CSI board remains committed to athletics," Meyerhoeffer said. "In fact, athletics are second on the list of priorities the board has established for hiring of a new president. He must be athletically oriented."

Meyerhoeffer said the basic problem for athletics came about when costs increased while "our enrollment and income has remained practically static for the past few years."

At the same time, state funding has decreased markedly. "A year ago it appeared the state would fund CSI at a higher rate than ever before," Meyerhoeffer said. "With about 75 or 80 percent of its budget in salaries, CSI committed itself contractually. The state then withdrew more money than it originally committed. You can see the budgetary problems."

He noted that some junior colleges, like Snow of Ephraim, Utah, garner as much as $300,000 a year through its alumni association. CSI receives practically nothing.

"We feel, and we're being very honest, there is no doubt that people will want to buy tickets to see the games. Most feel right now that buying a ticket is a donation. We are not dictating to you because this organization is very important to us," Meyerhoeffer said. "But our total income to the scholarship fund is less than our ticket sales ($15,000)."

Earlier in the evening, Roy Raymond elected president of the booster group with Jim Miller named vice president. Stan Snow was sustained as secretary-treasurer for the 17th straight year. Richard Boyd and Dennis Culp were named one and three-year board members, respectively.

Duran claims title on 8th-round knockout

NEW YORK (UPI) — It has taken Roberto Duran more than two and a half years but he finally has erased the stigma.

Duran, the former World Lightweight and World Boxing Council welterweight champion, returned to his native Panama in disgrace in November, 1980 after abruptly quitting in the eighth round of a title defense against Sugar Ray Leonard.

Duran, fighting in what could have been his last bout, returned to glory Thursday night, celebrating his 32nd birthday, by knocking out previously unbeaten champion Davey Moore to win the World Boxing Association junior middleweight title.

Duran, who became only the seventh fighter in boxing history to hold titles in three different weight classes, turned Moore's face into a swollen bloody mess, knocked him down in the seventh round and was battering him mercilessly across the ring in the eighth when referee Ernesto Magana of Mexico stopped the bout at 2:12 of the round.

Fighting before a crowd of 20,061, the first Madison Square Garden sellout in 10 years, Duran completely dominated the fight against Moore, the least experienced of the current boxing champions.

With Moore having difficulty seeing from his swollen left eye in the seventh round, Duran connected with a tremendous right hand to the jaw that dropped Moore flat on his back in Duran's corner with 15 seconds to go. Moore was up at the count of eight and barely hung on to finish the round.

"It was a left cross that closed his eye," Duran said through an interpreter. "I was not thinking it would be an easy fight but I was sure I was going to beat Davey Moore. Not many people believed I was working very hard. The New York press said Moore would beat me in four rounds. I wanted to be the champion again. I was kind of surprised Moore was not stronger. "I was never hurt in the fight. I worked hard on his body after I hurt his eye."

Moore claimed the eye injury was a result of being thumbed. "He thumbed me and the eye started closing little by little," Moore said, obviously in pain. "I really couldn't get off. He was quicker than I thought. I was very surprised I thought I was the stronger fighter but he was the better inside fighter."

Duran, looking like the man who dominated the lightweight division a decade ago, was all over Moore in the eighth. He battered him with two combinations to the body which doubled Moore over and then hammered him nearly 30 times to the head. Moore tried to hold on but his legs were wobbly and Magana finally stopped the massacre with Moore lying on the ropes with his hands at his sides.

The fight brought out a star-studded array of champions and former champions, including ex-heavyweight king Muhammad Ali, Sugar Ray Leonard and Marvin Hagler. And Duran treated them to a show by turning back the clock and showing the form that made him one of boxing's most feared punchers.

Responding to the chants of "Duran, Duran, Duran," Duran went to the attack immediately. He rocked Moore with two combinations to the head in the first round and then unleashed a ferocious body attack that had Moore backpedaling. Duran, with almost a snarl on his face, continued the assault in the second round and brought blood from Moore's nose with a solid combination. Duran landed another hard combination just before the bell and the fighters almost tangled again when Moore hit Duran well after the bell sounded.

Moore's face began to show severe damage in the third round as he was splitting blood, dripping blood from his nose and his right eye was closing

Roberto Duran send Davey Moore to the canvas in the seventh round of their championship match Thursday night fast. Moore tried to counter with his own combinations but Duran was too quick. The punches that Moore did land seemed to have no effect on Duran as he stopped, smiled and resumed the attack. Moore's face was smeared with blood and his right eye was a mere silt at the end of the sixth round and Duran began to finish him off in the seventh. Duran weighed 152 pounds.

Moore, who needed an additional hour and 15 minutes Thursday morning to make weight, weighed in at 154.

Ballesteros, Mahaffey tie for first-day Open lead with 69s

OAKMONT, Pa. (UPI) — Seve Ballesteros, the man who supposedly can't play a U.S. Open course, and John Mahaffey, enjoying a pleasant return to the scene of his greatest triumph, both had rounds of 2-under-par 69 Thursday to share the first round lead of the Open with Bob Murphy.

Bruce Devlin, after failing to survive the cut in seven of 10 tournaments this year, was the only other player in the field of 156 to break par, and following his round of 70, the 45-year-old Australian admitted he was "totally intimidated" by the treacherous 6,972-yard Oakmont course, calling it unfair.

Bobby Wadkins, a last-minute replacement for the ailing Lee Trevino, overcame a start of three consecutive bogeys with an eagle on the fourth hole and a 50-foot birdie putt on the eighth for a surprising 71. Leaving him tied for fifth place with Lou Graham and D.A. Weiringer.

Defending champion Tom Watson, despite only one birdie for the day, was encouraged by his round of 72, while four-time Open champion Jack Nicklaus was disappointed with a 73, claiming he "lost away four shots on the front nine."

Ballesteros, winner of his last two events in the U.S., including the Masters and last week's Westchester Classic, had an eagle on the par-3, 630-yard ninth hole and added a birdie on the 13th. However, he lost his chance for the outright lead with a bogey on the 18th hole when he 3-putted from 25 feet.

His erratic game supposedly wasn't suited for the tight boundaries of an Open course, and in five previous National championships he survived the cut only twice. Repeatedly, following his round, he used the term "I was very lucky" in a deprecating manner whenever anyone questioned his ability to win an Open.

"I don't have to say anything," Ballesteros responded to a question of how he answers his critics. "They have the problem. They can say what they want. I just want to play the golf course and see what happens."

The 26-year-old Spaniard used his driver only three times during the round, hit the fairways that his critics said he couldn't, and commented later, "Overall my play was steady. I putted well, my concentration was good and I'm happy with the round. My confidence is very high."

Mahaffey, winner of the 1978 PGA Championship on this same Oakmont course, had a rollercoaster round marked by six birdies and four bogeys, two of them coming when he three-putted from 20 feet.

"I didn't play very well and I feel very fortunate to be under par," Mahaffey said. "I drove poorly. Normally you drive the way I did today you'd be lucky to shoot 75."

Murphy, following consecutive bogeys on the 13th and 14th holes, earned his share of the lead by sinking a 10-foot birdie putt on the short 16th hole.

"I only got in the rough once," Murphy said. "That was the key to my round. This is absolutely the toughest course I have ever played."

Devlin first beat the treacherous Oakmont course, then tore it apart. "I've got no explanation for being here," the 45-year-old Australian said of his position. "I played just as bad coming into this Open as I did last year. I suppose the explanation is that since this is the Open, you don't want to make a complete fool of yourself. You go out and try harder."

Devlin added, "The golf course was totally intimidating to me. I don't think I've ever played a golf course as difficult as this."

Scott Simpson aceed the 228-yard, par-3 16th hole with a 1-iron, but a bogey on No. 18 dropped him to 73.

For the most part, the fears expressed all week by the top pros that the Oakmont Country Club would prove a fearsome rival were borne out.

The frustration on a muggy, sunny day, with the temperature reaching the mid-80s, reached a boiling point in the case of George Burns, who shot a 10 on the final hole, when he hit into three consecutive bunkers, for an 83, and then was disqualified for failing to sign his card.

Hale Irwin, a two-time Open champion, eagled the ninth hole to join Watson at 72, where they were tied with Lanny Wadkins, the older brother of Bobby and the current leader on the PGA earnings list. Ray Floyd, Jim Booris, Jim Nefford, Joey Bassett, Nick Price and Frank Conner.

Among those tied with Nicklaus and Simpson at 73 were 1965 Open champion Gary Player, 1978 champion Andy North, Gil Morgan and Hal Sutton.

was beaten by Nicklaus in the 1962 Open at Oakmont, the first of Nicklaus' 69 successes, was 1-under-par as late as the eighth hole, but closed his round with a pair of bogeys to wind up at 74.

Johnny Miller, whose final round 63 gave him the 1973 Open crown last time the championship was played at Oakmont, struggled to a 78. Miller faces gallstone surgery and said he had taken so many stomach tranquilizers that "maybe I was too relaxed."

Nicklaus, seeking a record fifth Open crown, collected his only birdie of the round with an uphill 6-foot putt on the sixth hole.

"It wasn't that tough," Nicklaus said of the course conditions, one of the few who offered that opinion.

Express hopes schedule will help in quest for division title

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — The Los Angeles Express will try to take advantage of their major ally in their playoff quest. The schedule — beginning with Friday night's game against the New Jersey Generals —

Los Angeles is in a three-way battle for the USFL's Pacific Division title despite a 7-8 record with three games remaining. Oakland leads the division with an 8-7 mark and Denver is right behind the Express at 6-9. With their final games at New Jersey, at Washington and home against the Gold, Los Angeles finds itself meeting three of the league's four worst teams down the stretch.

"It's becoming more and more apparent that the division title may not be decided until the final weekend," said Express coach Hugh Campbell. "The whole team was pounded 42-17 at home by Michigan last week. Obviously, we can help ourselves by getting back in the win column this week."

The Generals, 4-11, have lost five of their last six and fell out of playoff contention long ago. New Jersey's worst watching-only because of rookie running back Herschel Walker's attempt to gain 2,000 yards rushing on the year.

Walker, the 1982 Heisman Trophy winner from Georgia, has 1,620 yards on the ground and must average 127 yards per game to hit the 2,000 mark. Campbell is well aware of Walker's numbers, which include a team-leading 46 pass receptions and 15 touchdowns. "I would say that New Jersey's offense is Herschel, the threat of Herschel and throwing a pass to Herschel," Campbell said. "He seems to have the perfect combination of size and speed as a running back. And we've had our problems with run-oriented clubs."

New Jersey, which bowed 20-15 at Los Angeles in its March 6 season opener, is last in the league in overall defense, just against the rush, and 11th against the pass. To make matters worse, the Generals kicking game faltered when Dave Betz missed 23 and 28-yard field goal attempts in last week's 23-9 loss to Philadelphia.

Betz was out Wednesday and replaced by former Chicago Bears kicker John Roveto. "It was time for a change," New Jersey coach Chuck Fairbanks said. "We think John can help us."

Roveto is the Generals' third kicker since the start of the season. Betz and Dave Jacobs combined for the league's worst field goal percentage at .526 (10 of 19) and the Generals lead the USFL with seven missed conversion kicks in 23 tries.

The Express, 11th in offense, has been inconsistent behind veteran quarterback Mike Roe and rookie Tom Ramsey. Ramsey completed 23-of-35 for 223 yards in last week's loss. Rookie receiver Jojo Townsend, reunited with former UCLA teammate Ramsey, caught 11 passes for 174 yards and an 82-yard touchdown pass in his second pro game last week.

Penrose starts second game for Denver Gold

DENVER (UPI) — Quarterback Craig Penrose will start his second U.S. Football League game Friday when the Denver Gold hosts the Arizona Wranglers at Mile High Stadium.

Penrose, filling in for the injured Fred Mortensen, completed 21-of-27 passes for 244 yards and one touchdown in a 16-10 loss to Oakland Monday.

Coach Craig Morton said rookie running back Vincent White would get equal playing time with team rushing and scoring leader Harry Sydney. But Morton said the decision had nothing to do with Sydney's crucial fumble on a 2nd-down play that the Oakland's that ruined what could have been a winning drive.

"Sydney had a great game except for that one play," Morton said Wednesday. "And Vincent is very familiar with our offense now." Denver's starting quarterback Alan Risher was expected to start for the Wranglers despite torn rib cartilage.

But Denver was not without its own injuries. Starting right guard Ron Hausauer was out for the season with knee ligament damage and his replacement, Joe Sillipo, was questionable with an ankle injury. Safety Tony Blount will miss the rest of the season with a fractured wrist and tackle Doug Hogcock, halfback Glenn Ford and linebacker Kyle Whittingham were nursing assorted hurts.

Waldron has junior golf medal pin

TWIN FALLS — Larry Waldron took the medalist pin and headed a six-man contingent that will represent the Twin Falls area in the Idaho Golf Association's state junior boys finals.

Waldron fired a 147 over 36 holes at Twin Falls Municipal for a two-stroke lead on Jason Meyerboffer and Flynn McRoberts. Cam Hurst of Jerome was fourth with a 154 while Craig Jones and Greg Hanson, both Twin Falls, rounded out the list at 155. Waldron was in the 191, followed by Scott Hanning, Ellettsville, with 202, and Robbie Sauer, Buhl, at 237.

Kade Wilson, Buhl, claimed the 10-11 title with a 188 while Billy Bernhard, Ketchum, had 233 and Clic Blomfield, Ketchum, had 256.

Upshaw sees big hike in NFL salaries

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — National Football League players' salaries may exceed those of professional baseball players in the 1987 contract renegotiation, newly appointed NFL Players union director Gene Upshaw said Thursday.

"By 1987, we may be able to pass baseball," he said. "The U.S. Football League has had an impact and we are moving up pretty quick."

At a Thursday news conference the recently-retired Los Angeles Raider player paid tribute to former union director Ed Garvey, who led 12 years as union director to become deputy attorney general "for the state of Wisconsin."

Upshaw said he has scheduled meetings with NFL owners, the AFL-CIO, and other sports unions in the weeks ahead.

"My number one objective is to promote a still better relationship with management," Upshaw said. "He said a meeting with NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle has been scheduled in New York July 16 to discuss ways to solve conflicts before they become problems."

The Express, 11th in offense, has been inconsistent behind veteran quarterback Mike Rice and rookie Tom Ramsey. Ramsey completed 22 of 35 for 282 yards in last week's loss.

Rookie receiver Jalo Townsell, reunited with former UCLA teammate Ramsey, caught 11 passes for 174 yards and an 82-yard touchdown pass in his second pro game last week.

In the 12-13 age group, Brian Oliver, Halley, won with a 197, followed by Scott Hansing, Flter, with 202, and Robbie Sauer, Buhl, at 221.

Kade Wilson, Buhl, claimed the 10-11 title with a 188 while Billy Bernhard, Ketchum, had 233 and Clic Bloomfield, Ketchum, had 256.

Upshaw sees big hike in NFL salaries

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — National Football League player's salaries may exceed those of professional baseball players in the 1987 contract renegotiation, newly appointed NFL Players union director Gene Upshaw said Thursday.

"By 1987, we may be able to pass baseball," he said. "The U.S. Football League has had an impact and we are moving up pretty quick."

At a Thursday news conference the recently-retired Los Angeles Raider player paid tribute to former union director Ed Garvey, who left 12 years as union director to become deputy attorney general for the state of Wisconsin.

Upshaw said he has scheduled meetings with NFL owners, the AFL-CIO, and other sports unions in the weeks ahead.

"My number one objective is to promote a still better relationship with management," Upshaw said.

He said a meeting with NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle has been scheduled in New York July 16 to "discuss ways to solve conflicts before they become problems."

Yankees back in turmoil

Martin reportedly on ropes for defeats and behavior

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Billy Martin set his lineup for Thursday night's game against the Cleveland Indians, apparently still secure in his job as manager of the New York Yankees.

Reports of Martin's dismissal were "greatly exaggerated," according to one team official.

When reached before Thursday night's game with the Indians, Martin declined to comment on the substance of Wednesday night's meeting with owner George Steinbrenner.

The Yankees had lost nine of their last 13 games before Thursday night's game. Steinbrenner flew to Cleveland Wednesday, triggering reports he was planning to fire his controversial manager for the third time in five years.

The two met for about 90 minutes at an undisclosed location and among the subjects said to be discussed were Martin's general behavior as well as a proposal by Steinbrenner.

According to one source, Steinbrenner suggested that pitching coach Art Fowler, possibly Martin's closest friend, be replaced.

With the exception of a two-year span, Fowler and Martin have been together since Martin began managing at Minnesota in 1969.

"The published reports of Billy Martin's demise are greatly exaggerated," said Ken Negro, the Yankees director of public relations. "I have not heard from George, but as far as we know, Billy is the manager and will manage the club against the Indians tonight."

Besides conferring with Martin, Steinbrenner also had flown to Cleveland to visit his hospitalized father.

Before Wednesday night's game Martin seemed depressed. He was aware Steinbrenner was in Cleveland and talk was swirling that the Yankee owner was about to dismiss him for the club's poor showing and for conduct unbecoming a manager.

However, the Yankees defeated the Indians, breaking a four-game losing streak and Martin was in considerably higher spirits after the game.

"What did I do?" he said in response to questions about his status. "I didn't murder anybody."

Following Tuesday night's loss he smashed a clubhouse urinal with a baseball bat. He later called Indians president Gabe Paul to apologize and promise to pay for the damage.

Martin reportedly had committed other transgressions in recent days, including failing to show up for a workout in Milwaukee last Thursday, holding repeated conversations with a female sitting near the Yankee dugout during one game with the Brewers and taking naps in the manager's office before games.

The terms of Martin's contract — $1.5 million over five years — may discourage any dismissal. Martin's friend and adviser, Eddie Sapir, who attended Wednesday night's meeting, insisted there be no "escape clause" in Martin's contract.

Don't dig up any surprises.

You'd be surprised how many hundreds of miles of telephone cables are buried all over this area. Sometimes they're right where you plan to dig or grade or excavate.

To avoid digging up any costly surprises that could disrupt telephone service to you or others, let us know first. Just dial (toll-free) 1-444-2424 at least 48 hours before you dig. We'll come to your site, locate our buried phone cables, and mark them. At no cost to you.

So make a phone call before you dig—whether it's for major excavation and grading or just digging for a fence post, a garden or some landscaping. It could save time and trouble and money. And keep you from digging up something you didn't bargain for.

San Diego team seeks new vote

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Despite the San Diego City Council's refusal to grant a lease for San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium, the owners of the homeless USFL franchise may not be quite ready to give up; it was reported Thursday.

Deputy mayor Bill Cleator said Paul Robinson, a San Diego lawyer representing the owners of the San Diego franchise, had contacted him and Councilman William Jones Wednesday about the possibility of trying to convince the panel to vote again.

The council rejected the USFL's request for a lease Tuesday on a 5-3 vote. City staff had recommended refusing the lease because of potential wear and tear on the turf, uncertainty over the revenue the new team would bring the city and the risk of financially-weakening the stadium's other tenants.

Cleator, Jones and Gloria McCall voted for the USFL.

A UNIQUE OPPORTUNITY FOR MASS MUTUAL POLICYHOLDERS IN TWIN FALLS.

If you are one of our many thousands of policyholders in the Twin Falls area, you have an opportunity to significantly increase future dividends.

Developments in our business make it possible for you to share what is expected to be a considerably increased dividend distribution by electing our new adjustable policy loan interest rate. We call the program "Update" and the following figures illustrate how dramatically dividends can be increased for those who are eligible.

The program for election will affect policies on each policy anniversary date. Within 60 days prior to that date, you will receive details.

We want to fully inform you about this opportunity as quickly as possible. You should know now that to be eligible for a 1984 dividend increase, you must accept this offer before the 1983 policy anniversary.

This is an opportunity to significantly enhance future policy values. You owe it to yourself to get all the facts.

Information, including an illustration of the proposed increases for your policy, is available now from your Mass Mutual agent listed below. Or, call his or her service office at the address shown, or the home office via toll free 1-800-343-1440.

Rosalie Sorrells wove together stories and songs in her performance at the Renaissance Academy Wednesday.

Rosalie Sorrells: A tune full of life

The Grandma Moses of folk singers smiles as young as a Sawtooth spring

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Rosalie Sorrells, a legend of the folk-singing circuit, was driving through downtown Twin Falls and trying to tell a story about inspiration.

And suddenly, as easily as drawing a breath, her voice slips into song, the notes rising above the afternoon traffic.

Later, seated in one of the city's finer restaurants, she asks for a Myers rum and orange juice in a tone well-versed in ordering drinks.

Here is a life filled with the kind of hardship and high-living celebrated in her music. She turned to professional music in the late-1960s at age 33 to support herself and her five children, when her marriage crumbled.

"I really didn't know how to do anything," the then-Utah housewife says in an interview with The Times-News.

"I didn't know how to type. I could wash the floor. I could take care of children. . . . My options were very limited. I could make more money doing one concert than anything I could do in a month."

"Everyone told me I was too old. If I'd accepted that, I'd given up right away."

In 20 years crisscrossing the country, armed with guitar and an indefatigable outlook, she has won a devoted following among folk-song enthusiasts. She belongs to the folk-singing "family" that includes Pete Seeger, Arlo Guthrie, Tom Paxton and Utah Phillips.

She came back to her native Idaho this month to celebrate her 50th birthday with her family in Boise and stopped off in Twin Falls to perform Wednesday at the Renaissance Academy of the Arts.

She has recorded seven albums, including one titled, "The Lonesome Roving Wolves," which features music sung by early Mormon pioneers.

Asked to explain the significance of the title, drawn from one of the songs, she says, "I'll sing you a verse."

And if any of the restaurant's well-fed customers had perked up their ears, they might have heard a haunting voice telling of the woes of crossing the plains in search of a home in Utah.

And if one of them had looked up, he might have glimpsed a gentle-faced woman—a bit stout and blessed with a double chin—dressed in white cotton and leather with beaded earrings brushing her shoulders.

Although she laughingly calls herself the "Grandmother Moses of folk singing," Rosalie's eyes remain daring and kind, and she flashes a smile as young as a spring in the Sawtooths.

A graduate of a Boise high school, she attended first grade in Twin Falls at Bickel, and retains vivid memories of her teacher, Miss Porterfield. ("Miss Porterfield?" she calls out during her concert, peering without much hope over the audience.)

Daughter of a "renegade, maverick" father and a sturdy mother, who still lives in a cabin near Idaho City, she studied piano and acting later, with her husband, she taught guitar at the University of Utah. Her Salt Lake City home became a way station for traveling musicians.

And when her 14-year marriage

Fiddle, banjo players sought for contest

"Big Tom Sargent was the first in line; He could fiddle all the bugs off a sweet-potato vine.

He could fiddle down a possum from a mile-high tree. He could fiddle up a whale, from the bottom of the sea.

Yuh could hear hands spankin' till they spanked each other raw. When he finished variations on "Turkey in the Straw."

LOGAN, Utah — Sponsors of Utah State University's Festival of the American West are looking for old-time fiddlers like the one described above in Stephen Vincent Benet's "The Mountain Whippoorwill."

The fiddlers are being sought to participate in the fiddle and banjo contest for the festival's Great West Fair.

The contest is a new attraction at the annual festival and will feature events for "Small Fry" fiddlers 12 years old and younger, a junior division for fiddlers 12 to 18, and an open division for fiddlers 18 and up. There will also be two divisions for banjo players, one for under 18 years old, and one for fiddlers 18 and over.

Ron Jones, producer of the Great West Fair says there's nothing quite like old-time fiddle and banjo music, and he is hoping to find interested musicians to take part in the music event.

Fiddlers in the Small Fry category will compete July 29; Juniors on Aug. 2; banjo pickers on Aug. 3; and open division fiddlers on Aug. 6. Prizes will be presented after each evening's competition for first, second and third place winners.

"We're gearing the contest to the Utah, Idaho, Wyoming and Colorado area," says Jones.

"The whole event will be casual and strictly for fun. We know there are fiddle players and banjo pickers out there and we'd love to have them all take part. We're not looking for professionals," he adds.

Fiddle contestants in the contest will be asked to play a hoedown, a waltz and a tune of their own choice. Banjo players will play two selections, no piece exceeding four minutes in length.

Judges will look for old-time fiddling ability, timing and quality. Audience response will also be taken into account, so cross tuning and other "fancies" will be encouraged, but no electric pick-up or amps will be allowed, says Jones.

Interested persons should contact: Fiddle and Banjo Contest, Festival of the American West, Utah State University, UMC.

Logan, Utah 84322

Entry forms need to be filled out and returned by July 15.

'Oz' plays twice more

JEROME — The Northside Playhouse presentation of "The Wizard of Oz" will be on stage for two final showings.

Members of the production group say the show is playing to appreciative audiences, which have been increasing with each performance.

The musical production, a long time favorite fantasy, continues tonight through Saturday in the Jerome High School auditorium. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

Tickets are available at the door and at outlets in most Magic Valley communities.

Liz Nutting, who plays the role of the wicked witch, said performers and the production staff have received many favorable comments about the show.

Spud Pups to play benefit

TWIN FALLS — The Spud Pups will play a benefit dance for the Renaissance Academy tonight, from 8 p.m. to midnight.

A popular area band, The Spud Pups play old-time Western music in the style of Bob Wills and The Texas Playboys. They also perform old fiddling tunes.

The group consists of Steve Parks on fiddle, Rick Kuhn on bass and Chris Bollon on guitar.

Admission to the dance, which will be held at the academy, will be by donation.

Oakley home tour set

By GABRIELLE WESTERGREN
Times-News Intern

OAKLEY — Oakley's annual tour of Old Historic Homes, to be held June 25 from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., offers an opportunity to step back into the past.

The two main highlights will be the Howells Castle, an early day Victorian home restored by Gary Mullard, a local businessman, and the Cutler Worthington house, restored by John Roundy, a local school teacher.

The Marcus Funk residence, restored by Jay Gorrings, also will be featured if a number of planned projects can be completed by the owners in time.

The Funk residence is copied after the New England style of architecture. It was begun after the turn of the century by a polygamist who sold it when he couldn't practice

Friendship quilt work begins

HAILEY — Organizers of the Northern Rockies Folk Festival Friendship-quilt have begun work and are seeking blocks for this year's quilt. The quilt is made and sold by raffie to benefit the festival, scheduled Aug. 5-6 at the Hailey City Park.

A friendship quilt is made from squares which have been designed and made by community members, and which are then put together in the traditional quilting-bee style.

Quilt blocks for last year's quilt included traditional designs, as well as picturesque embroidered pieces and one-of-a-kind artistic pieces.

Requirements for this year's quilt blocks are as follows: The squares should be 12-inch by 12-inch in size, with an additional 1-inch seam allowance. The square should be placed in a traditional or original design, hand applied or embroidered, and must be made of calicos or solid colored cottons only.

The theme of this year's quilt is "Idaho," which suggests a broad range of subjects and colors to work with. The deadline for contributing quilt squares is July 25.

Several Wood River Valley businesses have been helpful in the creation of the friendship quilt. The Yardsack in Ketchum has donated batting and backing material, and Parke Printing in Hailey has donated the printing of the raffie tickets, which will be available in late July.

Over $1,200 was raised by the quilt raffie last year. The quilted quilt was seen by Hailey resident Jake Lemon. Last year's quilt will be on display during the coming weeks at Mountain States Savings in Hailey.

Persons interested in making a quilt square, should contact Terri Symons at 788-9659, Peggy Goulet at 788-4713, or Sally Kern at 788-4162.

Tour

The house was finished by Marcus Funk.

A noticeable feature is the "widow's walk," which, when built on a structure located near the ocean, allowed fishermen's wives to keep a lookout for their husbands. The builder copied the New England style without knowing the purpose for the structure. In Idaho, the widow's walk serves no practical purpose.

The Clark House, built in 1915, is typically described as charming. It has white balustrades around the porch and colored glass windows.

The John Smith House was built by a German, Joe Beck. It has a straight, stern style.

Beck, 14 years old, fled from Germany to avoid conscription. He was hauling trunks onto a ship, bound for America, and stayed away in the hold. The crew discovered the young teenager, fed him and sneaked him past immigration.

Beck, speaking no English, continued on by train to Minidoka. John Smith, who was there to meet people from Salt Lake City, fed the boy a sandwich and invited him to Oakley.

The pair communicated in sign language. Previously, a mason's apprentice, Beck built this house for his adopted father.

Each tour group will have an individual guide to explain the various attractions of the homes on this year's agenda.

Tours will begin with a slide presentation at the old Howells Opera House, which was built in 1904. They will run every half hour with a break from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The walking tour will cost $2.50 per person and proceeds will be used to help with the restoration of the Howells Opera House.

Falklands war books hit the press

By United Press International

A year ago, Argentine troops in Stanley raised the white flags over the Falklands capital.

Thus was written another chapter in British history, and it's being written still in a rash of books on the campaign.

The unconditional surrender that was signed June 14, 1982, ended a brief, bloody war that killed more than 200 men. It was Britain's first real war since 1945.

Two of the books make fascinating reading, more so because of the lack of information disclosed at the time of the 74-day conflict.

Max Hastings, who traveled with the troops, marching through snow and sleet, has collaborated with The Economist's Simon Jenkins to produce "The Battle for the Falklands" (Norton, $17.50). It is a book that is part thriller and part a history of failed diplomacy and crossed messages.

In a similar way, "War in the Falklands — The Full Story" by the London Sunday Times Insight Team (Harper and Row, $14.95), based on reporting during the conflict by the newspaper's top investigative team, attempts to combine a human story of bravery and agony at sea and on the battlefield with a serious analysis of how two nations ended up fighting each other.

Both books, although written from a British perspective, hint at the legitimacy of Argentina's claim over the islands.

 broke up, she went on the road in search of a musical career. Then, considered an "unacceptable" route for her age.

She developed a repertoire that includes traditional folk tunes, blues, Irish, Mormon and Basque songs, union-organizing melodies, modern ballads and her own compositions.

Although her style now is anything but raucous, for a year she sang in a country-western band: "I stood there with a mike in one hand and a beer in the other and raised hell all over the Bay area."

Her friend Utah Phillips says "No one sings like Rosalie." She is a "legend," a self-willed, high-velocity tornado, barnstorming festivals, night clubs and low dives, all the while writing the book on what to do if you're a woman over 40 and on the road.

Major fame and certainly fortune have eluded her. She describes how she tried to take a more cabaret, more polished "approach" in "one" of her albums.

"It's still my favorite album... It's the first time anyone took me seriously as a singer and not as a character or folk person."

 But, she says, a negative review in the magazine Rolling Stone, which unfavorably compared her to her more famous (and younger) female vocalists, squashed the producer's plans to release a single.

"If I'd been younger and less desperate to make a living for my children, I think that would have seriously knocked my career in half," she says.

Her concerts evenly mix singing and story-telling. Her tales, drawn from her life, from her friends, even from a biography of Marlene Dietrich, are uttered in a slow-pitched, compelling tone; her voice sinks softer, softer, as the audience leans forward to catch the words, until that voice abruptly rises into a melody, often without aid of guitar.

She considers the tales between the tunes a necessity. "At first, people would say to me, 'Sing, don't talk so much.' SING." Now they say, "Tell that story again."

Like many natives of this fair state, she often has to explain to strangers and audiences the location of her hometown.

"They think of Ohio, 'Oh, Idaho, is that in the Midwest?' I used to get mad. I'd say, 'Well you know where Wyoming and Montana is?' 'Oh yeah, that's way out west.' Well, Idaho is WESTER."

"I once saw a man in a T-shirt: 'Boise, Iowa, and proud of it.'"
 Part of her act includes a poem by Peter Viereck, dubbed "The Sinister Potato," and she launches into a rendition over her rum and orange juice, her long earrings trembling: "Oh vast earth apple, waiting to be tried..."

And where does this expatriate Idahoan live? In upstate New York. Moreover, her spirited defense of Idaho doesn't diminish an equal love for "big city" life.

Sorrels doesn't hesitate to sing out on political themes: union organizing, the peace movement, the environment "I do a lot of anti-nuclear songs. I feel very strong about that," she says.

"I don't see any way to separate that (politics from singing). Folk music is the music of people. And people, if in touch with themselves and their lives, have to have an opinion."

She talks wryly about her children and the trials of motherhood. An upcoming album will feature songs about parents and children.

Wednesday's concert included a song written after a discussion with her teen-age daughter about whether the library stays open until 4 a.m.

Rosalie says she's been to that library, too, and "my mother never believed me, either."

Yet the song speaks tenderly of "Child-of-my-body/bone-of-my-bone/apple of my eye," in a characteristic Sorrels package of pathos and humor.

'The Travelin' Lady sings like a rare few

By WILLETTA WARBERG
 Times-News arts critic

Few folk singers have voices so distinctive, diction so clear, repertoire so gripping, stage presence so captivating and projection so astonishing that no matter how traditional the form they sing in, their identity can scarcely fail to be recognized long after their concerts are over.

"The Travelin' Lady" Rosalie Sorrels, nationally famous Idaho-born folklorist and storyteller, belongs in that rare company.

Last Wednesday evening, at the Renaissance Academy in Twin Falls, Sorrels provided a program of extraordinary and historically oriented folk songs — many of which were her own compositions.

From her naturalistic material, there arose melodic lines and words which caught at audience hearts with their freshness and originality.

Sorrels opened her program by knotting folk tales with music. This Idaho Burl Ives sang and talked her folk path across the country and impressively identified throughout the program with Idaho, her own family and dreams. Her music was the real music of this great United States.

Intermittently, Sorrels spoke her tales, slipped into unaccompanied voice and then gently strummed in her guitar accompaniment. Her guitar seemed as much part of her hands and body as her limbs.

Review

"I'm Gonna Tell on You," "I'd Be a Fool If I Didn't Fall in Love With You," and "Apple of My Eye," were a few of her own compositions.

Sorrels' originality is most striking because her subjects are ordinary and everyone can identify in some way with them.

Her lyrics and stories dwell with contagious affection on Idaho and the poky small towns and simple country style and life. She gently falls in love with everyone, places and things.

Sorrels gently fell in love with her audience Wednesday evening and everyone seemed to fall in love with her.

Johnny Shoes picked a good hair of Wednesday's program. This young man's performance was pleasant and settling. Nothing seemed out of place and nothing could shake him from his platform.

Unquestionably, Shoes has good picking technique. But, where were the musical nuances?

The contrast of musicianship between Sorrels and Shoes was unfortunately staggering.

Ritter takes some time out

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — John Ritter will take time out from his "Three's Company" series to star in "Sunset Limousine," a two-hour CBS-TV movie scheduled for next season.

Co-starring with Ritter will be Susan Dey, who recently co-starred in the ABC-TV miniseries "Malibu."

Miss Dey, who appeared as Jo in the TV production of "Little Women," played the eldest daughter in "The Partridge Family" series and recently starred with Albert Finney in the movie "Looker."

Jane Fonda and her Jayne Development Corporation, have signed a deal with Columbia Pictures that calls for her to produce — and sometimes star in — several projects with the studio over the next few years.

Fonda's production company will move its headquarters from 20th Century-Fox to The Burbank Studios, where Columbia executive offices are located.

What's what

One out of every 25 babies born this year will be alive 90 years from now, the optimists report.

Of the 10 most common men's names, the least liked are Albert, Henry, Frank, and Harry. Or so reports a Los Angeles surveytaker.

Open Question: "Davy Jones's locker" is sailor talk for "the bottom of the sea." But who was the original Davy Jones. (If such a person existed?)

Largest proportion of churchgoers is not in the South's Bible Belt, as commonly believed, but in New England.

FATAL ACCIDENTS.

Q. To what do you attribute the fact that traffic accidents which occur at night are twice as likely to be fatal?
A. Liqour.

Again am asked the difference between an English cut and a Continental cut of roast beef.

The English is supposed to be several thin slices. The Continental, one thick slice.

Q. How come nobody ever gets a headache and a toothache at the same time?
A. It happens. But pain doesn't accumulate. So you only feel one or the other, whichever hurts most.

More than half of the cars in this country are parked indoors every night.

FOREIGN DOCTORS

Q. What does a foreign physician have to do to practice in this country?
A. Get a certificate of examination by the Educational Council for Foreign Medical Graduates. 2. Possess a permanent visa and declare with the Immigration Board the intention of becoming a citizen, or already have full citizenship. 3. Apply to a Medical Examinators' Board for an application that must be certified by the dean of the foreign medical school and verified by the U.S. Consul nearest to that school. 4. Take the State Board Examination.

Q. How do you account for the fact that farm more American men have visited Paris than have visited London?
A. More U.S. troops have been stationed on the Continent than in England.

Address mail to L.M. Boyd in care of this newspaper.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today will be a day in which changes in attitude are not in your best interest. Continue in the status quo. The evening is best used - staying out of any ensuing controversies.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You are inclined to be slipshod in your work now. Be more careful. Don't upbraid a co-worker who doesn't do what you want.

TALIBUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Keep working on your talent for desired results. Control that tendency to pick up and let go. Be happy tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Clear your domestic situation. Don't have any guests in today. Make sure you pay some pressing bills.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be particularly careful in making out reports and in communication with others. Drive very carefully today.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Seek out financial expertise where your monetary affairs are concerned. Study your property to see what repairs are needed.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 21) You are upset about not gaining personal goals. Friends cheer you up. Learn how to budget more carefully.

LIBRA (Sept. 22 to Oct. 21) Schedule your time wisely to accomplish a good deal in the outside world. Plan time to help out in dire straits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 22 to Nov. 21) If you are too demanding in going after your wishes, others resent it. Steer clear of group affairs which result in arguments.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Others are apt to criticize unjustly today. Make sure your credit is good. Handle public work wisely.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A new contact might suggest some new plan that is not right for you, so thank him and go about your own business.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't run away from your job in favor of new ventures. Be understanding with a co-worker. Use kindness at home.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take care in communicating with a loved one. Be sure to spell everything out. Be careful when signing contracts.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... The or she will want everything in precise order. Push-to-allow-for-human error and be more understanding of fellow human beings. There is ability for correct analysis, so be sure to give a fine education. Stress religion.

Robin Williams: A vibrating raw nerve

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Robin Williams would never be entrusted with defusing a bomb.
Nor would he be a likely candidate for transporting nitroglycerine.

Williams is a vibrating raw nerve. He is classically "on," telling jokes, improvising one-man sketches, mimicking celebrities, inventing wild noises.

He prances and twists his mobile face into a thousand different caricatures in the space of a few minutes. It is difficult for him to sit still.

The diminutive, hyper Williams brings to mind a cocker spaniel in the animal shelter determined to please anyone and everyone.

One suspects he is introspective beyond belief and overcomes his shyness with motion and humor.

On a recent visit to Hollywood to ballyhoo his new movie, "The Survivors," he sported a full beard for yet another film. He capered around a Paramount Studios office like a caged gazelle.

"I'm going to New York to star in "Moscow on the Hudson," Robin said. "That's why the beard."

He launched into a pseudo-Russian language diatribe with enough

Movies

English thrown in to make his point.

"In New York I'm going to play some of their small improvisational clubs," he said. "I do the Improv and Comedy Store when I'm in Los Angeles. In San Francisco I'll do the Holy City Zoo and Cobb's Pub. Great."

Williams drops in unannounced and, unpaid, does an hour's turn on stage late in the evening.

"I do it for the same reason people take therapy," Robin explained.

"It's good for me. It's a release. It keeps me in shape. There are usually seven or eight other comics hanging out. Like the weird and happy folks."

"Sometimes I work on new material. I start with five minutes and end up with 20. I usually do an hour if I can find an ending. If not, God knows!" Williams has no clearly structured act such as Richard Pryor's or Bob Hope's. Much of his act is as raucously blue.

Like most improvisational comedians, Williams has no idea where his monologue will take him. When he is on a creative roll, he keeps going. Like a firestorm one laugh feeds on the other until he's built an inferno of comedy.

There is a constant threat of a cold streak and an unresponsive audience. Putting himself on the line, living on the ragged edge, tempting disaster might account for his hyper nature. There is no worse death than bombing.

Williams toured 60 cities with his high wire act last year, from which he forged a hit comedy album, "Throbbing Python of Love," the title, he hastens to explain, is a none-too-subtle double entendre.

"I still don't have an ending," Robin said. "When I hear that horrible sound of silence I go on to other things."

"I never tape my act. It's the same way Indians felt about taking their pictures, like stealing a part of your soul. Or like getting a centipede to think about his legs."

Williams jumped to his feet to interpret a centipede tripping over itself, while concentrating — on coordinating his hundred feet.

"If something improvisational really works it locks into a certain memory bank," Robin went on, admitting much of his best material is forgotten a moment after it is performed.

Robin now makes his home on a ranch in Napa, Calif., north of San Francisco.

"We have a horse with an overbite, a plain male and a swyback older horse," Robin said. "We also have a pond with one fish. Its mouth is all pulled to one side from being caught so many times."

"We also got a sheep who thinks he's a goat and 65 cattle, give or take a flet. We got a cat with asthma. What we have is a farm for animists who can't make it anyplace else."

In his first two movies, "Popeye" and "The World According To Garp," Williams was the sole star. In "The Survivors" he finds himself in heavy with old pro Walter Matthau.

"We improvised," Williams said happily. "But no matter what I did or how much I projected, Walter would always top me. Every time he got the best of it by simply giving a deadpan look or by raising an eyebrow a quarter of an inch."

Vienna not Viennese enough for Carl Reiner

By RICHARD FREEDMAN
Newsweek News Service

NEW YORK — Perhaps only Carl Reiner, who co-wrote and directed the new Steve Martin comedy, "The Man With Two Brains," would seriously consider going to Terre Haute, Ind., to shoot scenes supposedly set in Vienna.

The idea was to bill the Hoosier city as the Austrian capital and show some street signs in German, but alter Terre Haute in no other way. It would have given audiences something to ponder.

It would also have saved money, but cooler heads ultimately prevailed. So instead, using some stock travelogue footage, the Viennese sequences were filmed where the rest of the movie was — in Hollywood.

"I wanted to use Terre Haute so badly," confides the veteran writer-comedian of the Sid Caesar-Imogene Coca "Your Show or Shows" and "The Dick Van Dyke Show," collaborator with Mel Brooks on "The 2000-Year-Old Man" records, and actor in "The Russians Are Coming, the Russians Are Coming."

"We actually went to Vienna to scout locations — but I just didn't look Viennese enough. We even thought of using Montreal. But one night I saw a 'Love Boat' episode shot in Greece. I thought, 'Let TV take you everywhere.' What we really require is to make people laugh. So we decided to spend our money instead on improving the jokes."

"Besides, I like to make the audience do some of the imaginative work. In Steve's operating theater, there's always a cat on the loose. But you never see it. Audiences can imagine a much more destructive cat than we could ever show."

"The Man With Two Brains" is the third Reiner-Martin collaboration (after "The Jerk" and "Dead Men Don't Wear Plaid"). It concerns the misadventures in surgery and matrimony of scatter-brained, egocentric

Dr. Huhruhurr (a name only Reiner and Martin can pronounce), who marries one of his patients, the glamorous but vicious Dolores (Kathleen Turner), after nearly killing her in a car accident.

When he has cause to regret the success of his "cranial screwtop" surgery, he tries to arrange a unilateral "citizen's divorce." In Vienna he visits the very strange lab of Dr. Necessiter (David Warner), where he falls in love with a disembodied brain in a bell jar.

The identity of the actress who speaks the brain's sexy lines is a deep, dark secret. But Reiner has authorized me to describe her as "a major motion-picture actress who won an Oscar in the past five years."

Martin learns in the course of the movie what Reiner considers the major morality he subscribes to: "To judge people for what they are, not for what they look like. The whole idea of the neat 'cranial screwtop' brain operation was that we wanted the awful wife to be so physically angelic that we couldn't bear to shave her head."

Collaboration with Martin and writer George Gipe on the scripts for the Martin movies works smoothly, with each author respecting the contributions of the others.

"I didn't know the bulk of Steve's work before 'The Jerk,'" Reiner says. "As a writer, he's brilliant but unstructured — he'd destroy a character for the sake of a great gag. So I structure him."

"We come from totally different backgrounds, of course. My father emigrated from Hungary to Union City, N.J., in 1906. I was born in the Bronx and went to Evander Childs High School. Steve comes from a pure, straightlaced Orange County WASP background, and worked as a kid selling maps at Disneyland — a crazy place for a loner like him to grow up."

"So, he's a strange amalgam of talents. You could call him klutzy graceful. He can juggle, do sleight-of-hand tricks and play the banjo, but he's really an introvert."

"What most people don't know about Steve is he's very serious and knowledgeable about abstract and early-American art. He was bitten by the art bug when he went to college, and when he toured the college circuit he was always happiest if there was a museum nearby where he could spend all his free time."

Like Martin and most other gifted comics, Reiner too is an essentially serious man.

Shakespeare production to be studied

MOSCOW — The making of Idaho Repertory Theatre's summer production of William Shakespeare's "Love's Labour's Lost" will be televised this summer and broadcast to area cable television viewers through the University of Idaho's Video Outreach Program.

Dr. Roy Fluhrer, chairman of university's theatre arts department and producing director of the summer theatre, has received a grant from the Association for the Humanities in Idaho to fund the project entitled "Classic Theatre: From Script to Production."

The purpose of the project is to help audiences to better understand the social and historical background of "Love's Labour's Lost," said Fluhrer. "All of Shakespeare's comedies, this one was the most topical and popular of its time. That makes it one of the most difficult of his plays for modern audiences to understand and enjoy," Fluhrer added.

"Love's Labour's Lost" makes many references to Elizabethan events and personalities, and has been described as a satire on the affectations of Elizabethan culture, Fluhrer explained.

The play is also wordy and employs a wide variety of metrical styles and rhetorical devices. To appreciate the play fully, its passages must be experienced and understood in all their energy, he said.

"Audiences this summer are going to have the opportunity of being able to watch us on television as we prepare this production. Then they can come to the theatre to see the finished product. These programs should enhance both their understanding and enjoyment of the show," Fluhrer said.

"Love's Labour's Lost" opens July 12 in the University of Idaho's Hartung Theater with subsequent performances July 13, 16, 21 and 29. Tony Rigas, director of the school's video outreach program, said three half-hour programs will be produced through the project. In two of the programs Fluhrer, the director of "Love's Labour's Lost," will interview historians and scholars who have an expertise in the area of Elizabethan culture.

They will discuss various aspects of the play and how the play should be communicated to audiences across the stage.

Paper may be meaningless, but so is the coveted title

DEAR ABBY: My problem is rather complicated. My family is (or rather was) an old established Italian family of nobility. Because of some legal misunderstandings, we are no longer titled. I understand that it is possible to buy a title and that is what I want to do. How do I go about it?

Although we no longer belong to the ultra-rich, we are by no means poor. Having a title is not very important to me, but it would mean a great deal to my mother, who is gravely ill, so please hurry your answer.

NEEDS A TITLE

I contacted my Italian connection, who responded: "Dear Abby: All Italian titles of nobility were abolished following World War II—in 1946, when the Italian people voted Umberto II out of office, he went to Portugal to live in exile. While there, from time to time, he reportedly sold titles of nobility to those of merit."

Unfortunately for Needs a Title, Umberto recently died in a Swiss clinic.

"However, if Needs a Title" is determined to buy one, have him get in touch with me, and for a fee I will have an appropriate title and official-looking document prepared, complete with medal and ribbon.

"Meaningless? Of course! But so is the title he seeks."

—LEONARD W. MOSS, WAYNE STATE UNIVERSITY, DETROIT

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for four years to a handsome, successful man. He has a problem that he's so ashamed of I can't get him to try to get help. He's a bed-wetter. Sometimes a couple of months go by without a problem. Then he gets upset about something, starts drinking too much, and the bed (and I) are soaked! I've tried waterproof mattress covers, but haven't been able to find one that doesn't sound like crinkly plastic when it's laid upon.

I am constantly deodorizing with everything I can think of, but it's still an odor. He's ruined one mattress and is working on the second.

Needless to say, this has affected our love life. I would rather sleep on the couch than with him. He resents this, gets upset, and the whole thing starts over again.

How can I help him? I love him and can't believe this is happening to us, and that I am actually writing to Dear Abby.

WET NIGHTIE

—WET NIGHTIE

You must persuade him to see a urologist. If he knew how many adults suffer from bed wetting, he would be comforted and less embarrassed. If his problem is psychological, he needs to get help at the other end.

In the meantime, a urologist will tell you where to buy a comfortable, super-absorbent, diaper-type garment, complete with moisture-proof plastic bloomers for adults—with this problem. It could save your mattress and possibly your marriage.

DEAR ABBY: I hope "Lopsided and Miserable," the 18-year-old girl with one breast noticeably smaller than the other, takes your advice and seeks out a plastic surgeon. I'm 19, and up until two years ago I had the same problem, so I know how she feels.

I went into the hospital on Thursday evening, had the operation on Friday morning and was home by noon on Saturday.

Wood River Music Festival set

SUN VALLEY — Plans for the second Wood River Valley Music Festival were outlined recently to the board of trustees of the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities.

Bob Green, chairman of the center's performing arts committee, said the two-week event will begin July 7 and continue through July 16.

The festival will feature six programs of classical chamberworks, and a program of lighter works for chorus and vocal soloists.

Concerts will take place in all three communities in the Valley, two in Ketchum at the Presbyterian Church of the Big Wood, two in Sun Valley, one each at the Sun Valley Opera House and Our Lady of the Snows Catholic Church, and two in Halley at the Liberty Theater.

Programs at each of the concerts will be different. The special concert featuring lighter works for chorus and and strings by Beethoven, Schubert, Dvorak and Smetakovich. Also new to the festival will be the University of Montana Chamber Choral in concerts July 13 and 16 presenting music by Bach and Picket with instrumental accompaniment and in an all-choral program of lighter works at Creekside on July 14.

The chorale, is spending the spring academic semester studying and performing in Vienna and will also perform in concerts in Germany, Hungary and France.

Ticket sales for the events are now on sale at Chapter One Bookstore and the Sun Valley Center Gallery in Ketchum, at Ex Libris on the Mall in Sun Valley, and at Gemini Art and Office Supply in Halley.

Brochures with attached mail order forms may be obtained from the Sun Valley Center for the Arts, Box 656, Sun Valley, ID 83333 after May 1.

Bernstein is driving harder than ever in race against time

By JOHN ARDOIN
Dallas Morning News

A reporter once asked Samuel Bernstein, "Is it true you used to tell your son Leny not to make so much noise on the piano?"
"True," the older Bernstein replied, "but how did I know he was Leonard Bernstein?"
"How could anyone have known that this bright Boston boy would grow up to be the most dazzling, multi-faceted and creative figure to emerge in American music? After all, there was no precedent for him. Well — nearly none."

The closest was George Gershwin, who died while Bernstein was a teen-ager. The two had much in common, however. Both grew up in Eastern cities and sang the praises of New York in their music; both were infectious pianists and innovative composers; both conquered Broadway and Carnegie Hall.

Gershwin, however, died to be only 39. Who knows what further wonders he might have created? Bernstein, on the other hand, will be 65 in August. He has had time to explore his talents as composer, pianist, conductor, teacher and author to the fullest. At an age when the energies of many men are retirement and taking it easy, Bernstein is driving himself harder than ever, as though he were in a race with time.

This spring he published a fascinating book, "Findings," after completing an in-depth series of Brahms' orchestral music for Deutsche Grammophon Records and a complete "Tristan und Isolde" for Philips (both of which were also filmed for television). Soon he will rerecord his landmark interpretations of the Mahler symphonies digitally for DGG.

He has also just finished a project that has long been uppermost in his mind — his first opera. It will receive its world premiere today by the Houston Grand Opera. With Stephen Wadsworth as his librettist, Bernstein took his 1952 chamber work "Trouble in Tahiti," a theater piece about life in suburbia, and added a season in which changes the character and plot forward to 1983. The Houston Opera production will also be given at the Kennedy Center in Washington and at Milan's La Scala Opera.

Though Bernstein has reached the highest peak of accomplishment, celebrity and stardom, he remains controversial. Controversy has always swirled around Bernstein; his gifts and personality are so out-sized that they have rarely left people indifferent. His monthly presence on music's horizon and his prodigious success in every field of musical endeavor have annoyed as many as they have excited.

Just last month, for example, Time magazine published a cover story entitled "The Tragedy of Leonard Bernstein." To its author, Leon Botstein of Bard College, Bernstein's career "has been an accumulation of false starts, spent opportunities; a record of extensive and sustained exposure with ephemeral results."

It is quite an indictment, and would be damning if it were true. But it isn't. There will always be pigeons flying over the statues of great men; why should Bernstein be an exception? But in his case, facts speak louder than opinion.

Leonard Bernstein burst into America's consciousness on Nov. 14, 1943, with a single concert. He was the 29-year-old assistant conductor of the New York Philharmonic. Its guest conductor — the venerable, beloved Bruno Walter — was in bed with flu. Bernstein was told that morning that he would make his Philharmonic debut, replacing Walter. There was no time for a rehearsal, and in those days, the Sunday Philharmonic concerts were broadcast live, nationally.

The next day, an enthusiastic review of the concert ran on the front page of the New York Times. (The only other time I recall a concert review being accorded such importance was after Birgit Nilsson made her Metropolitan Opera debut as Isolde.)

To understand why Bernstein's debut was such big news, it is necessary to recall that in 1943 there was no such thing as an American conductor who was taken seriously, and a conductor in his 20s was unheard of. Here were two strikes against him.

The third was that he was Jewish. He had been warned by his mentor, the renowned conductor of the Boston Symphony, Serge Koussevitzky, that the name Leonard Bernstein would never be used on a poster outside Carnegie Hall. Koussevitzky begged the young musician to change his name to something more Aryan and marketable. He suggested Leonard S. Burna. Bernstein refused.

Under his own name and with subsequent triumphs in New York and elsewhere, Bernstein's massive talents prevailed. He threw open the door to generations of exceptional young American conductors, such as James Levine and Michael Tilson Thomas.

But he did more than provide an example. Throughout his career, he worked with and for aspiring conductors and showcased them.

A curious aspect of the Harper's article is why it takes Bernstein to task as a pianist, criticizing him for neglecting his instrument. To my knowledge he never intended to pursue a career as a concert performer. That he plays as well he does — his performances of Mozart concertos are exceptional — is amazing, considering his intense schedule as a conductor.

When it comes to his compositions, evaluations are admittedly subjective. Where his music may mean little to one person, it can and does mean a great deal to another. Even music by Mozart and Tchaikovsky has come and gone out of fashion. What is significant to me is that Bernstein has always written for the public and not the press. He has said with disarming directness that he wants to reach his audiences, adding that "by going directly to the people and bypassing the critics, I very often incur the wrath of the critics because I render their function invalid. They simply have no job (because) there is nothing to interpret."

"It's all there, and this I can vouch for by experience, by audience reaction, by thousands of letters I receive from all over the world. All the time, about my music and what my music means to the peoples of the world. And I mean all kinds of people — plumbers and nuns and intellectuals and surgeons and street-cleaners and army personnel."

As for Bernstein the conductor, anyone who lived through the Philharmonic's concerts before and after Bernstein's tenure as the orchestra's first American music director knows he took a dispirited, lackluster ensemble and brought it back to national prominence. He did this through inventive programming and visceral performances, a national television series and hundreds of recordings. Sadly, the energy and accomplishment he generated was dissipated when Pierre Boulez assumed leadership.

Harper's, however, sees Bernstein as little more than a man desperate to be loved and to please. If this is a fault, Bernstein admits it freely in "Findings," whose nearly 400 pages are a compendium of juvenilia.

poetry, essays, speeches and articles produced between 1935 (at Boston's Latin School) to 1980.

One of the most moving sections of the book dates from 1954 and is entitled "This I Believe." It is the passionate confession of a humanist and a key to Bernstein's music. He writes:

"I believe in people. I feel love and need, and respect people above all else, including the arts, natural scenery, organized piety or national superstructures. One human figure on the slope of an Alp can make the Alp disappear for me. One person fighting for truth can disqualify for me the platitudes of centuries."

THE ACES BOBBY WOLFF

When outrageous expenditures are divided finely enough, the public will not have enough stake in any one expenditure to squelch it.

If the opponents must win a trick, one must be careful about which opponent wins. Often, it is vital to squelch the dangerous opponent from winning the lead.

East wins and shifts to clubs, giving West his two club tricks. West exits with a diamond and South can discard a spade.

To make his game, South must keep East off lead. He should duck West's diamond jack, allowing West to win.

What if East overtakes the first diamond with his ace? The club shift gives West his two club tricks but

QUALITY, ELEGANCE AND STYLE FOR YOU

1984 TEMPO
We're excited about the arrival of the new Ford Tempo. Tempo offers not only front-wheel drive action, but also a new high-torque 4-cylinder engine that performs smoothly. An advanced four-wheel independent suspension gives Tempo big car riding comfort, and it is one of the most aerodynamic cars in its class. Minute attention has been paid to every detail - an example for Ford's total commitment to quality. 42 est highway and 28 EPA est mpg.

1983 THUNDERBIRD
This sleek, all-new Thunderbird is the most aerodynamic Thunderbird ever. With new suspension, gas-filled shock absorbers and MacPherson struts. It's the ultimate in luxury. Elegant touches outside. Inside, you're surrounded with the luxury and high-tech electronics.
The most exciting Thunderbird in years, on display now in our showroom.
