Congress defies Reagan, passes budget plan

By ROBERT MACKAY
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Defying President Reagan, Congress Thursday approved a $69 billion 1984 budget that would boost taxes, slow his military buildup and pump more money than the president wants in non-defense domestic programs.

The spending plan projects a $179 billion deficit for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1. This year's deficit is estimated to be $208.6 billion.

Despite Reagan's opposition, the Republican-led Senate gave final congressional approval to the spending plan on a 51-43 vote. Nineteen Republicans, including leader Howard Baker, voted for the budget. Only 12

Democrats voted against it. All four of Idaho's delegates to Washington voted against the package.

The only hitch in passage of the bipartisan compromise, put together by Senate Republican and House Democratic budget leaders, came on a move by Senate Finance Committee Chairman Robert Dole, R-Kan., to make a last-minute change.

Dole, whose committee writes tax law, tried to scale back the three-year, $73 billion in tax increases in the budget plan to $39 billion over three years. But his proposal was defeated, 51-41.

In arguing against the Dole amendment, Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said, "I believe in all sincerity that if we modify the budget at this late date, we're not going to get one." Reagan, who called for the defeat of the budget, opposes the plan on the basis it increases taxes too much, does not spend enough on the military and provides too much money for non-defense programs.

The president does not sign a budget resolution, because it basically is a guideline for Congress, but he can veto the spending and tax bills later that are based on the numbers in the resolution.

Reagan repeatedly has threatened to veto spending or tax bills that exceed his budget request.

Under the budget compromise adopted by Congress:

• Taxes would be increased $12 billion in 1984, $15 billion in 1985 and $46 billion in 1986 for a three-year total of $73 billion. It does not specify how to raise the money, leaving that decision to congressional committees.

• Defense spending would grow at a 5 percent "real" rate after accounting for inflation, rising from this year's level of $244.6 billion to $268.6 billion — a $24 billion increase. Reagan sought a 10 percent "real" increase or $280.2 billion, $11.6 billion more than the congressional budget plan.

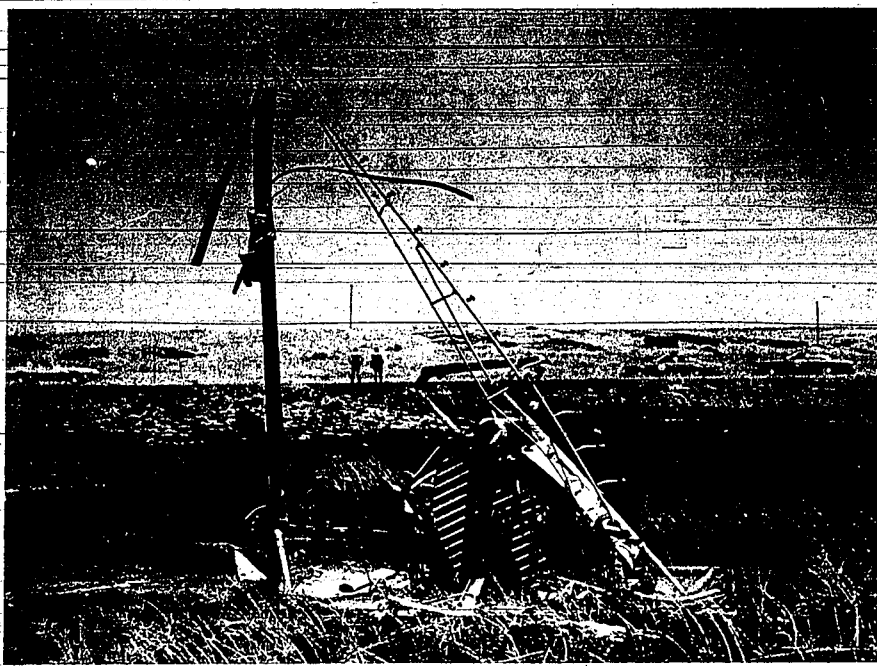

• Non-defense domestic programs would get $22 billion more than Reagan wants, but $3.5 billion of that is for new recession-relief initiatives — such as mortgage foreclosure relief and a new jobs bill — that is in a "reserve fund" and would not be used unless Congress first authorizes the new programs. Dole said later there is "no way" his committee will be able to raise $73 billion in taxes, but Domenici said he was confident Dole will find a way.

"If we don't have a budget, we'd be inviting chaos and we'd be inviting larger budget deficits," Domenici said, adding that Reagan will probably veto some of the spending bills that seek to implement the budget later.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., said passage of the budget will strengthen the hand of Reagan's opponents in any potential veto fight.

"If we lost it, we'll lose all our cover on a veto fight," Chiles said. "If you're within the budget resolution, you're voting within a limit. If you don't have a budget, you don't have a rationale — you're just opposing the president."

Court returns Idaho fish suit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Splitting 6-3, the Supreme Court Thursday dismissed Idaho's 7-year-old suit against Washington and Oregon seeking a specific share of salmon and steelhead trout that migrate along the Columbia and Snake rivers.

But the justices left open the door for Idaho to file a new suit in the future, "whenever it shall appear that it is being deprived of its equitable share of the migratory fish."

In setting the case, the high court accepted the recommendation of a special master who found Idaho failed to present proof that it is not getting a fair share of the fish, which travel along rivers through the three adjacent states.

"Although Oregon and Washington may have harvested a disproportionate share of anadromous (migratory) fish over the long run," Justice Harry Blackmun wrote for the court, "Idaho took 58.72 percent of the total harvest in the period from 1975 through 1980."

"We agree with the special master that these figures do not demonstrate that Oregon and Washington are now injuring Idaho by overfishing the Columbia or that they will do so in the future," said Blackmun.

State officials vow more fight — BI

In addition, he said, Idaho has not proven its charge that the two other states mismanage the fish as they pass through their territory — for example, by permitting overfishing.

Idaho filed its suit in 1976 directly to the Supreme Court, which has the power to settle disputes among states. Idaho claimed overfishing of the Columbia and Snake rivers in Washington and Oregon was ruining sport fishery in its own state, which is bisected by the Snake River.

The fish hatch in the rivers and eventually migrate to the Pacific Ocean, then return upstream to spawn and die.

Although the high court refused to help Idaho at this time, in two important holdings it found both that fish are a natural resource that may be allotted to states on a shared basis, such as water, and that it is possible to devise a fish allotment formula, even though the numbers would be speculative.

Pope sees Walesa, returns to Vatican

By PHILIP PULLELLA
United Press International

VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II ended his eight-day Polish pilgrimage Thursday in a secretive meeting with Solidarity founder Lech Walesa and returned to Rome with a prayer, "that good will triumph" in his native land.

"These days have been so unforgettable for me," John Paul said in a message to Poland's communist leaders issued from his plane as he flew back to the Vatican at the end of a 2,700-mile journey through Poland. Walesa was described as "deeply moved" after meeting the pope at the end of a trip in which John Paul inspired millions of his countrymen and drew flag-waving Solidarity union supporters in every city he visited.

On Wednesday, the pope held a surprise second meeting with military ruler Wojciech Jaruzelski that failed to reconcile differences between the military government and the outlawed labor movement.

"Solidarity has passed into history as a result of the political directions adopted by its former leadership," government spokesman Jerzy Urban said. "This is a closed chapter."

Utah dam breaks; 1,000 people leave homes

By RALPH WAKLEY
United Press International

DELTA, Utah — An earthen dam taxed by record mountain runoff collapsed Thursday, sending a mud-brown surge of debris-laden water roaring through four rural communities and forcing the evacuation of about 1,000 people. The flood also washed out two bridges along U.S.

Highway 6, the major highway between Salt Lake City and central Nevada, and a bridge on in Deseret.

Millard County sheriff's dispatcher Paulette Peaney said the Sevier River's swollen waters hit the town of Deseret about 5 p.m. MDT after flooding the cities of Hinkley and Oasis and the recreation community of Sherwood Shores.

Residents were asked to leave the four communities and Sutherland, a town bypassed by the raging floodwaters. They had up to two hours' notice and fled before the river reached their homes and farms.

There were no immediate reports of deaths or injuries from the break at the Delta Millard, Abraham Desert dam, located about 100 miles southwest of Salt Lake City.

Shuttle crew's work done; homecoming scheduled today

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Challenger's astronauts Thursday overcame a turbine problem and wrapped up "The Greatest Show on Earth," preparing for a landing this morning in Florida — California, depending on the weather.

Forecasters were optimistic the weather would cooperate for NASA's desired landing at the Cape. Conditions were expected to be even better at the backup site at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Sally Ride, America's first woman in space, and the other astronauts — Robert Crippen, Frederick Hauck, John Fabian, and Norman Thagard — finished the final experiments on their sixth day in space, put the first reusable satellite back in its berth and stored their gear.

by almost half of all space fliers.

In a goodnight message, mission controller Guy Gardner sang in an off-key, foghorn voice, "Goodnight ladies, Goodnight gentlemen, Goodnight Crip. We'll let you go to sleep."

The astronauts responded by playing a tape of the circus tune, "The Greatest Show on Earth," which the Challenger crew members claimed as their theme song.

Challenger truly was the greatest show on or off the Earth during its flight, which provided the most spectacular views of the shuttle to date — telecasts of the black and white spacecraft circling the globe at 17,000 mph.

The astronauts also acted the mission's primary goals, launching two communications satellites for paying customers and proving the shuttle can become a space repair and rescue vessel.

The mission's most confounding problem, surfaced Thursday when the astronauts tried to start one of three auxiliary power units and it quit before reaching full power.

The power unit checked out on a second test and mission controllers told Challenger astronauts to proceed with plans to land on schedule at 4:53 a.m. MDT at the Cape.

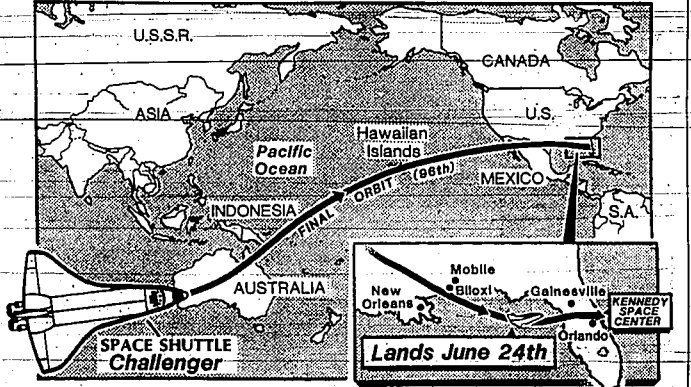

"That sounds good to us," Crippen said. "We're looking forward to coming home tomorrow."

The power unit that developed a problem, is one of three turbines that drive the pumps for the hydraulic system controlling the shuttle's aerodynamic flaps and rudder during a landing.

During its streak through the atmosphere, Hauck and Crippen will fly the 102-ton Challenger like a glider to bring it home from its 2.5-million-mile mission.

The space agency wants to bring the shuttle down at Kennedy Space Center rather than Edwards Air Force Base to stay on schedule for the next flight in mid-August.

Challenger cannot land in rain, widespread cloud cover or high crosswinds.

Evans: WPPSS will be rescued
 BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans predicts the federal government will rescue the Washington Public Power Supply System and prevent the Northwest energy agency from defaulting on payment of bonds used to raise money for terminated nuclear power plants.

Interviewed Wednesday on the Idaho Public Television show, "Idaho Reports," Evans said he believed the government would not allow WPPSS to default on payment to bondholders, many of whom have invested their life savings in terminated WPPSS projects 4 and 5.

Evans said he did not know how a financial rescue plan should be structured, but he added, "We'll have to see some kind of federal bail-out eventually."

WPPSS officials have said the Supply System faces default on repayment of bonds issued over the past several years to raise construction money for the two terminated plants in Washington.

Car firms report huge increase
 DETROIT (UPI) — The Big Three automakers Thursday reported a 73 percent increase in mid-June sales due to cut-rate interest programs and other incentives that were not available in 1982.

Figures for the entire domestic industry were to be available later.

Combined Big Three sales for the June 11-20 period totaled 197,222, up 73 percent from 114,013 last year. Sales for the month so far totaled 400,099, up 41.1 percent from last year's 283,483.

More than 1 in 5 of the top 100 firms have sold 2,937,674 cars, up 9.2 percent from 2,690,348.

Analysts credited the huge increase to low-interest financing programs and rebates plans which the firms did not offer at this time last year. They noted June was the worst month for the industry in all of 1982.

General Motors Corp. turned in a 77.6 percent increase for the middle 10 days, selling 121,629 cars versus 68,496 last year. The automaker is offering 8.8 percent financing on small cars and has been conducting a sales contest among dealers.

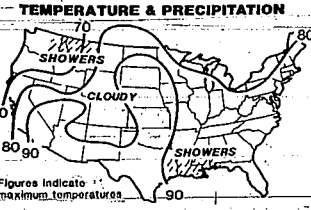

Man says he killed 100 women
 MONTAGUE, Texas (UPI) — A judge Thursday set a $1 million bond and appointed three psychiatrists to examine former mental patient Henry Lee Lucas, charged with killing two women and self-implicated in another 100 slayings.

Judge Frank Douthitt ordered Lucas, who served time for killing his mother 23 years ago, held in lieu of $1 million bond in the slaying death of Katie Rich, 80, of Ringgold in Montague County, 90 miles northwest of Dallas.

Lucas had been drawing pictures of the 100 or more women, mostly hitchhikers and runaways in their teens or early 20s, he claims to have killed, and helping authorities match them with descriptions of missing or slain women.

The slightly built, unshaven 46-year-old briefly testified at the hearing that he wanted to continue giving authorities information, saying, "I'm gonna give back the dead that I took."

Secret base alleged in Egypt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States built a secret base in Egypt to meet any crisis in the Persian Gulf and stationed 100 men and $70.4 million worth of equipment at the isolated installation known as "Site Mike," congressional testimony and high-level sources disclose.

The inland clandestine base was kept secret from Congress because Egypt warned the United States that public disclosure would force it to be shut down, the sources said Thursday. They declined to furnish the precise location of the base because of its secret classification.

"It is out in the middle of nowhere," Maj. Gen. Chick Smith Jr., an Air Force strategist with the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told a House subcommittee Feb. 16. "It is a very good base for secret operations."

The Pentagon declined comment.

Test from ancient China found

PEKING (UPI) — A yellowed booklet with silk covers has been confirmed by experts as the only known final examination paper of an ancient civil service during the Ming Dynasty, the official Xinhua News Agency said Thursday.

The accordion-form booklet of 10 folds was written by the top-ranking or "zhuangyuan" test candidate, Zhao Bingzhong, and found in his home county of Yidu in north China's Shandong County.

Under the civil service system, candidates throughout the nation had to pass major provincial and national exams held every three years before they qualified for the final court exam given by the emperor.

Scholars devoted their whole lives to passing the examinations, often taking decades to pass the tests after repeated attempts.

Hearing aid made for infants

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) — A hearing specialist at Yale-New Haven Hospital has developed a method of enhancing sounds enough for most hearing impaired infants to benefit from use of a hearing aid.

Nolan Bauman, director of Yale-New Haven's Hearing, Speech and Language Center, started his treatment program based on the premise that even infants can benefit from hearing aids.

Using extremely sensitive equipment, he can pick up the faintest response of nerve cells in the brainstem to sound, indicating the severity of hearing loss and how strong a hearing aid was needed to help the baby.

Burford cleared of contempt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House committee voted Thursday to clear former environmental chief Anne Burford of contempt of Congress charges levied by the House six months ago.

The resolution to lift the contempt citation, approved unanimously by the Public Works and Transportation Committee, goes next to the full House. If approved there, the U.S. attorney has indicated the matter will be dropped.

Mrs. Burford was charged with contempt last Dec. 16 for her refusal, under orders from President Reagan, to provide agency documents to Congress.

 homecoming since becoming pope in 1978, John Paul pledged to continue to "stand by every working man."

"I hope good is more powerful than evil, and good will triumph in Poland," John Paul, near tears at leaving the city he served as archbishop before becoming pope, said in a farewell ceremony in Krakow.

"I pray for that," he said. Then, his white vestments flowing, he climbed aboard the Soviet-made Polsh jettiner that brought him back to Rome.

No details were officially released about his talks with Walesa in a chalet in the Dolina Czochołowska valley of the Tatras mountains, 50 miles south of Krakow — arranged with maximum secrecy to avoid Solidarity demonstrations.

The mouth of the valley near the border with Czechoslovakia was sealed off by frontier guards, troops and hundreds of police. The forest crawled with militiamen searching for reporters or others not authorized to be in the area.

Dam

 Millard County officials were unable to give a property damage estimate because the bridge washouts prevented them from reaching the areas after the explosions.

"It (the river) is really big and very muddy, filled with uprooted trees and washed-out fences," said Delta City Administrator Vance Bishop, who helped run an evacuation center.

"Normally about this time of year the river would be about up to your head. But today it was about 25 feet deeper than the dam went."

Millard County officials used explosives to breach the Gunnison Bend Reservoir, 7 miles downstream of the larger dam, hoping to drain some of its water—and limit—the flooding in the west central Utah valley.

"It looked like a mass migration in Deseret," said Eldon A. Ellason of Delta.

"People were putting mattresses and every conceivable piece of furniture in trucks and trailers. They're lined up like a parade," said Eldon A. Ellason, 68, of Delta, said he helped his two brothers evacuate their Deseret homes.

"I was just down there and there were several large trucks offering to move people," he said.

"They were total strangers who pulled into Deseret and told them they were available."

DUI trial begins with lawyer faceoff

By ANN D. KIRKWOOD
United Press International

BOISE — Special Prosecutor Glen Walker told jurors Thursday two southwestern Idaho children "died an awful death" last year at the hands of a drunken driver he identified as suspended Deputy State Attorney General Virginia DeMeyer.

In opening arguments to the eight-woman, four-man panel, Walker said the 31-year-old defendant's speech was slurred, she smelled of liquor and failed three sobriety tests following the Oct. 4, 1982 accident.

He told jurors his evidence would show the former attorney for the state Employment Department had six glasses of wine, at least one gin and tonic beverage — and only a bowl of soup to eat — from before the 6:30 p.m. accident.

Walker said 12-year-old Wesley Black and his 10-year-old sister, Joy, were far off the highway when they were hit by a car and killed. The boy was riding a bicycle and towing his sister in a "rusty old wagon" when they were killed, he said.

But Mrs. DeMeyer's attorney, William Brauner of Caldwell, said the alcoholic beverages his client will admit consuming had nothing to do with the tragic accident.

Brauner — who presented his opening statements to jurors as Mrs. DeMeyer's father, Ada County Commissioner Ed Riddle, listened — said his client was blinded by the setting sun as she drove west toward her Caldwell home and did not see the children until it was too late to avoid them.

Brauner also said his evidence will show the children were on the pavement, not off the road as the prosecution contends. He said Mrs. DeMeyer had difficulty driving the evening of the accident because of the sunlight — and swerved when she saw a bright reflection she only later learned was coming from the bicycle ridden by Wesley Black.

$30.7 million released for local housing loans

By STEVEN CHRISTENSEN
United Press International

BOISE — Idaho Housing Agency officials announced today they will release $30.7 million in low-interest mortgage loans this summer to spur further recovery of the state's economy.

Agency Chairman Hugh Coats said applications for the loans — which will carry a 10.21 percent interest rate — can be filed immediately with 19 lenders around the state, and will be taken until July 15.

But he said brisk competition for the 750 available loans is expected and they may go quickly.

Coats, appearing at a governor's news conference to announce the new issuance, said a similar project last March in which $13.5 million in loans were offered shows Idahoans have a strong pent-up demand for low-interest mortgages.

IHA Executive Director Robert Kucab said applicants may use the loans to purchase existing homes worth no more than $7,000, or for newly constructed residences not exceeding $65,000 in value.

To qualify, applicants must meet maximum-income limits, be Idaho residents and cannot have purchased a home within three years, he said. In addition, loans may only be used to buy primary residences.

Evans said the new issuance will help the state recover from the recession by creating new employment in the construction industry and related fields.

"First, the funds will be affordable to many Idahoans and thereby contribute significantly to keeping the housing industry on the upswing," he said. "Second, the effect of the mortgage funds, rippling through Idaho's economy, will increase employment in the housing-related fields and generate over $1 million in state tax revenues."

Housing agency officials said they expect about 40 percent of the loans may go toward construction of new homes. Evans said every $1 million pumped into the residential construction industry creates about 55 new jobs.

A single person seeking a loan must not earn more than $23,000 annually, IHA officials said.

Teachers seek faculty reviews retaining tenure

LEWISTON (UPI) — A representative of the Idaho Federation of Teachers called on the state Education Board Thursday to institute a faculty review process that doesn't jeopardize the tenure system.

In a presentation to the board's monthly meeting at Lewis-Clark State College, Nicholas Gier, a University of Idaho philosophy professor, urged members to adopt a policy now used by the UI law school and approved by the university's faculty council in 1981.

That practice allows department heads to publish lists annually of faculty members up for a five-year employment review.

"If there is no adverse evidence, there will be no review," Gier said. "This principle protects academic tenure by not requiring faculty to re-tenure themselves every five years."

Board members postponed action on Gier's recommendations and other proposed rule changes, however, saying they would reconsider the issues again on Friday.

Gier also asked the board to adopt a policy that would require universities to give reasons when non-tenured professors' contracts are not renewed, saying the state had a moral, if not legal, obligation to do so.

He said professors also should be allowed to see their personal personnel files, a practice now allowed only at the UI.

Gier then said he believed professors tenured at one Idaho university should be able to transfer that tenure to another state campus. But UI President Richard Gibb and Idaho State University President Myron Coulter opposed that plan, saying officials at each school should have wide discretion in deciding who should be accepted for tenure.

Board members approved a $3 increase in student health fees at Idaho State University, effective in the second semester of the 1983-84 academic year.

Syria denies staging attack on PLO forces of Arafat

By United Press International

Syria today denied it sent tanks and troops into battle against Yasser Arafat's forces and accused the Palestinian leader of refusing to cooperate in talks aimed at ending the guerrilla rebellion.

The Syrian government, in front-page headlines carried in three government newspapers today, rejected charges that Damascus had helped PLO dissidents crush Arafat loyalists in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley on Tuesday.

"This accusation is totally baseless," the newspapers said, quoting an official statement.

But Khalil Al-Wazir, an Arafat aide also known as Abu Jihad, told Beirut's As-Safir newspaper today that a Syrian military commander had admitted Syrian involvement in the fighting but said the decision was not taken in Damascus.

Syria has denied helping the PLO insurgents defeat Arafat's troops and claims to have formed a committee to resolve the matter.

"(But) the PLO leadership is refusing to cooperate with the committee and will not meet it," the Syrian newspapers said.

"Syria will not give into blackmail from those who failed to solve their internal problems because of their short-sightedness. Blaming Syria will not solve these problems," the papers added.

In Damascus, a meeting between Syrian Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam and high-ranking Palestinian leaders failed to immediately resolve the crisis.

PLO officials said Saudi King Fahd, a major financier of Syria, and the PLO, expressed support for Arafat in a telephone call.

Teen hijackers jailed; bomb stopped in time

LARNACA, Cyprus (UPI) — Two Lebanese teenagers who hijacked a Libyan Boeing 707 over the Mediterranean — surrendered peacefully today, freeing their 32 hostages unharmed but leaving a time bomb ticking in their luggage.

Airport security found the bomb rigged inside a Polaroid-type camera when they searched the hijackers' luggage hours after their surrender at the Larnaca airport. Bomb experts successfully dismantled it.

"It would have gone off any minute," said a shaken bomb disposal unit officer. Police originally found only one pistol and a magazine on the two hijackers.

The hijacking of the Libyan Arab Airways jet, which began Wednesday morning shortly after the flight left Athens for Tripoli, ended some 20 hours later as the 21 passengers and 11 crewmen stepped off the Boeing 707 under a burning morning sun.

The two hijackers, who had demanded to be flown to Tehran, stepped off the plane minutes later flashing the "V" for victory sign. They were arrested and whisked away in a police van. They were believed to be undergoing questioning at Nicosia prison.

A police source identified the hijackers as Raedla Arif Akmed, 19, and Hassan Mahli Saadoun Hall, 17, both Lebanese passport holders.

The passengers, mostly Egyptians, were put up at a Larnaca hotel until a flight out could be arranged.

A Filipino passenger said the hijacking started 20 minutes after takeoff from Athens Wednesday morning and soon turned into an odyssey of confusion as airport after airport refused to let the hijackers land.

One of the hijackers was brandishing a pistol in the air and kept on telling us that we were going in different directions," he said.

Chilean strike not supported

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — A general strike called to demand a return to democracy failed to win widespread support Thursday and turned violent as police firing tear-gas battled supporters of the first nationwide walkout in 10 years of military rule.

joined the strike, but dock workers at a major port refused to participate, setting back union efforts to paralyze the nation.

Six dissident labor federations representing an estimated 1.5 million workers called the strike to protest government repression and demand major changes in the regime's political and economic policies.

Water projects fine, but they cost you

It's called looking out for the home folks, or, depending on your perspective, the ol' pork barrel. The difference, of course, is whose project we're talking about. Money spent elsewhere booms the federal budget. Money spent at home has "a direct impact on the state's economy" and provides "significant benefits." To borrow the language directly from Sen. James McClure's announcement, this week of a long list of federal water projects for Idaho.

The bill? $14.171 billion nationwide, including $45.6 million in Idaho.

Now we have no objection to any of the specific projects. Many of them seem worthwhile. But as with all else in this world, there is a minus to every plus. In this case, the subtraction is in taxes. Yours.

It's interesting to note that in a Senate divided on virtually everything else, the vote on the projects bill was 91-6. Maybe there was something for everyone in it.

In any case, according to McClure's office, more than $20 million will be spent in the Twin Falls district, which you should think about the next time you send the Internal Revenue Service a check. For the record, here are the local projects and their amounts:

Army Corps of Engineers, flood-control study, Columbia River system, $1.095 million; Corps of Engineers, construction projects, Lower Snake River and fish and wildlife compensation, $16.7 million; Bureau of Reclamation, Minidoka Dam project, $25,000; and Bureau of Reclamation, Little Wood River project, $80,000. Total: $20.1 million. Pretty pile of change, no?

Labor should forego its bullying tactics

Jim Kerns of the Idaho AFL-CIO recently told his membership that labor problems in the Legislature would continue "unless we have a series of serious accidents and kill a bunch of these" lawmakers.

Mr. Kerns is ordinarily an amiable guy, and I doubt that he would sanction actual violence. However, he stuck by that theme in his later apology. He regretted his utterance, he said, but "the killing would be done at the ballot."

Such hyperbole may seem harmless. After all, assassinations are a rarity. Even jocular encouragement, however, to that basest of human actions—murder—is injurious to the public process.

In my political career, I was subjected to four threats on my life. I can tell you that they're no fun. The most chilling, perhaps, was reported by the press. In that case, I received a letter demanding $10,000 in payment and withdrawal from the governor's race if I were to remain alive.

The culprit was arrested and deemed mentally incompetent. He is presently at large. We will always have to cope with weirdos, but another incident was equally disturbing. On election night, police intercepted a message that two men from Nampa were coming to Boise to kill me.

I was placed under tight security, which prevented me from being much in evidence during that long, emotion-filled evening. As far as I know, the two were never arrested. I was "killed at the ballot box" and they took their bullying tactics elsewhere.

I was subjected to considerable verbal abuse from organized labor during the campaign, and I believe in right-to-work. It's a debatable matter—I readily agree that there is a strong philosophical argument against it. I attempted to discuss the matter objectively, but was greeted by rude and threatening behavior at local meetings and other public gatherings where I was confronted by union members.

We all owe a debt to unions for the social reforms they have accomplished over the years. The working man was often subjected to unsafe and demeaning job conditions before unions found their strength in this country. Many employers would not pay a fair wage if it weren't for pressure from the unions.

Yet, union membership has been shrinking in recent years. One cause, I believe, is that unions spend too much time on coercion and too little on legitimate persuasion.

d'Allestandro's grocery store in Boise is a classic example. The employees, the employer and the general public all seemed happy enough with the store's labor practices. An overwhelming majority of the employees rejected a union and expressed contentment with their jobs. The union, however, decided to break the back of the independent grocer and has been picketing vigorously for over a year.

They peddled their message from the doorway until recently, when the store got a court order moving them back to the sidewalk. They hang doggedly on, determined to bring economic violence to the store's owners that they will unionize in spite of their employees' wishes.

Coors brewery pays high wages and furnishes top-flight working conditions. A wide majority of its employees have rejected a chance at a union contract. But the brewery is one of organized labor's prime targets and a continuing boycott may eventually prove too much for the company to resist.

I believe the unions would be more prosperous if they sold themselves to those who need a union. Instead of muscling those who don't. More reasonable political rhetoric would be helpful, also. Mr. Kerns' threat to "kill them" at the ballot box elsewhere is not as effective as good, solid arguments in favor of fair treatment of labor.

Former Lt. Gov. Phil Batt writes from his onion farm at Wilder.

Magic Valley group joined protest

I thought your coverage of International Disarmament Day was very good. It was interesting and heartening to know that people all over the USA, including groups in Idaho were demonstrating and protesting against nuclear testing and the nuclear arms build up.

I did find it strange however, that there was not a word included in your articles about the action taken by the Magic Valley Snake River Alliance on this day.

In the Twin Falls City Park on Monday evening approximately 200 people came together to enjoy several local musicians and speakers. They came together to voice their hopes and prayers that our nation and others will come to their senses.

Though not civil disobedient in nature (no one was arrested), it was certainly newsworthy and a definite statement that people in our valley care about the future of the world.

Once again, thank you for covering this sensitive issue. Through newspapers and your covering grassroots movements like ours, hopefully we can turn the tide.

Two launches were similar, but reactions were different

WASHINGTON—At 7:33 a.m. EDT last Saturday a crowd estimated at 250,000 cheered in jubilation as a mighty rocket on the East Coast lifted five astronauts into space.

At 7:19 p.m. on the same day, a smaller gathering watched in dismay as a mighty rocket on the West Coast lifted six simulated nuclear warheads into a trajectory aimed at the Kwajalein Islands 4,000 miles away.

The quarter-million observers packing the parking lots, roads, waterways and beaches of Florida watched as one famous woman accompanied by four anonymous men soared into space from Cape Canaveral.

There were more than 1,000 watching the first successful launch of the MX missile from Vandenberg Air Force Base in California, and most of them were cheering it on. The ranks of those who weren't cheering had been depleted by 36 arrests.

The disparity between the East Coast crowd and the West Coast crowd was enormous: The reasons were obvious.

The United States may have been running 20 years behind the Soviet Union in putting its first woman into orbit, but we atoned for that delay with hoopla: There were "Ride Sally Ride" placards and bumper stickers and greetings on motel signs and T-shirts. The lady was on the cover of magazines and on the morning and evening news broadcasts of all the major networks.

The news media, which insists that we must always treat women equally, led the way in greeting one of the five astronauts very differently. This may be fair. Bella Abzug used to call such displays of female preference "reparations."

In any event, the East Coast flight had publicity, people, a historic first and more hype than the Super Bowl. It was scheduled for 7:33 a.m. and went up precisely on schedule. It would cost about $250 million.

The West Coast launch was supposed to be a secret—military, and all that. Had it not been moderately successful, they would still be trying to keep it a secret.

Exactly when it was supposed to have been launched remains a secret. There were weather problems and computer problems and delays. No one is publicizing how much it cost.

You can't keep the launch of a 71-foot rocket requiring the tender care of thousands of Air Force and civilian specialists a complete secret, however, and word got out. One good clue was the fact that Congress is facing a close vote on actually producing 100 MX missiles. Instead of just testing one. What better way to encourage the lawmakers than with a successful launch?

The Air Force publicity office had prepared some hopeful releases regarding the launch, and these found their way into the hands of some people who view the MX without enthusiasm. Some protests stemmed into Vandenberg camp and claimed to have stopped a launch the previous Monday just by their presence.

This must be taken with a grain of salt. It is equally possible some technician dropped a wrench.

In any event, 36 people including Daniel Ellsberg, who makes a career of such things, managed to get themselves arrested before the West Coast rocket went up. Mr. Ellsberg was quoted as saying the protest was a success because, "We wanted the world to know that this government cannot test first strike weapons without having to arrest American citizens."

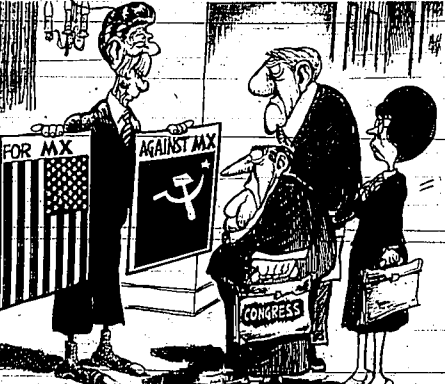

Despite the great differences between Saturday's rockets, there were similarities. Both were awesome as they roared into space. Since the Chinese invented gunpowder, man has adored rockets—and both were beautiful. Both were terribly expensive, and YOU paid for both of them.

Both had payloads to deliver. The East Coast vehicle delivered two communications satellites in space, one for the Canadians and one for the Indonesians. It carried a West German satellite to release and retrieve. It carried an assortment of scientific experiments.

The West Coast satellite carried six dummy nuclear warheads. That's reason enough for a quarter of a million on the East Coast to feel exalted while a handful on the West Coast felt dismayed.

Next MX vote may well foment revolt among Democrats

WASHINGTON—A revolt is brewing among Capitol Hill Democrats over the MX, and the issue may erupt into open rebellion during the next crucial vote on the giant nuclear weapon.

Two recent events indicate the depth of frustration among opponents with the refusal by the party leadership to take a position on the MX. Democrats expressed their concern at a 2 1/2-hour party caucus June 14, called on a petition signed by 112 members and circulated by a freshman from California.

The issue: why the House leadership broke with the majority of Democrats and supported President Reagan in a critical MX vote last month.

The second event occurred barely an hour later at an anti-MX rally on the Capitol steps, when both Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Gary Hart, D-Colo., chastised those who endorsed MX.

"Any Democrat who thinks we can purchase peace by voting for MX ought to be ashamed of himself," Kennedy declared.

Democrats, who consider themselves the party of arms control, last month forced Reagan to adopt a more flexible arms control policy as part of the deal for deploying 100 of the 10-warhead weapons in existing Minuteman missile silos.

Reps. Les Aspin, D-Wis.; Norman Dicks, D-Wash., and Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., led a group of moderate Democrats who obtained a written agreement from Reagan to seriously seek arms control. The president wrote a similar letter to several similarly concerned senators.

In return, the House and Senate voted to release $625 million in engineering and flight-testing funds that had been "fenced" in the 1983 budget.

But now some Democrats are beginning to feel as if they've been flim-flammed—both by the leadership and by the moderates who led the turnaround from December, when both houses had put the MX on the agenda.

And both Aspin and Dicks have indicated they will re-evaluate their positions if Reagan does not moderate his position on arms control beyond the sketchy outlines he provided for the new round of Strategic Arms Limitation Talks in Geneva.

It fell to a freshman, Jim Bates of California, to circulate the petition that convened the caucus.

"If we weren't going to take a position on defense as a party, I wanted to know why," he said.

"As a freshman, I'm not accustomed to questioning the leadership. But in this case, we were frustrated and disappointed, and felt we had to question them. It seemed as though they were out of step with the party on this issue."

Other sources said seven or eight Democrats who voted to release MX research funds last month will switch their positions on a vote scheduled in mid-July to authorize production funds for 27 missiles.

At least 25 or 30 of the 91 Democrats who joined 148 Republicans in the May vote would be needed to turn MX around yet again.

Aspin, formerly an MX opponent, warned rejection of the MX missile program by Democrats would rob the party of an opportunity to use it as a key campaign issue next year.

"If we give him this, then it's up to the president to get an arms control agreement and we can hold him accountable," Aspin said.

Among the prominent party members who supported the MX last month were Democratic leader James Wright Jr., D-Texas, and whip Thomas Foley, D-Wash.

"I thought it might have been a mistake if the Democratic leadership had taken a partisan stance and had been seen as obstructing the defense of the country," Wright said.

But other Democrats question whether the party would not already give up that spot by failing to take a stand—particularly when its leading presidential contenders oppose MX.

The issue will be a crucial one for the party as the pro- and anti-MX forces heat up their lobbying in the coming weeks.

WASHINGTON — The House Thursday approved a Democratic plan to limit President Reagan's July 1 income tax cut to a maximum of $720 per family and sent the measure to the Senate, where it faces an uncertain future.

The final vote was 229-191, generally along party lines, with 29 Democrats defecting. The anti-climactic finale came several hours after the Democratic-controlled House indicated its support for the tax cap on a 259-165 procedural vote.

The proposal, originated by House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, would limit the 10 percent tax cut scheduled for July 1 to a maximum of $637 for individuals and $720 per family.

The House also approved an amendment that instructs Congress to match the $6 billion raised from the tax cap with $6 billion in federal spending cuts.

Republicans called the amendment a "sham" and "big leaf" because it was non-binding. The amendment's sponsor, Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., conceded there were "no absolute assurances" the savings would be achieved, but he added, "Our assurances are a heck of a lot better than President Reagan's assurance that he would balance the budget by 1984."

The tax cap bill now goes to the Senate, where Republican leader Howard Baker of Tennessee has vowed to fight it. If it seeks through the GOP-dominated Senate next week, Reagan says he will veto it and there does not appear to be enough votes to override a veto.

Throughout the afternoon debate, House Democrats argued the cap would improve the equity of Reagan's, three-year 25 percent tax cut program by placing the burden on the rich, who were the main beneficiaries.

Court files major blow to power of Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court, in a major blow to congressional power, Thursday threw out Congress' use of the legislative veto because it "thwarts" the president's authority to manage the government.

The 7-2 ruling settled a historic constitutional confrontation between the executive and legislative branches.

The court majority, which lost the vote of one justice — Lewis Powell — in the broad scope of its ruling, overturned Congress' shortcut for reviewing, and even canceling, certain Reagan administration actions. The court said Congress has to pass legislation to curtail executive branch actions.

The legislative veto is written into a wide range of laws, including foreign arms sales and the 1973 War Powers Act, which empowers Congress to force the president to withdraw armed forces he has sent into hostilities abroad without a formal declaration of war.

Calling the ruling the "death knell" for some 200 laws with the veto provision, Justice Byron White said the justices should have left for later consideration "the constitutionality of other congressional review statutes operating on such varied matters as war powers."

Reagan urges doctors to curb medical costs

CHICAGO (UPI) — President Reagan deplored the ballooning cost of medical care Thursday as a cancer "that must be removed," and said health insurance should finance treatment only for serious problems, not trivial complaints.

"Let me reassure you, we're not trying to limit the utility and access of America's health care. We're trying to save it," Reagan said in a speech to the American Medical Association house of delegates.

Continuing his response to charges that his budget priorities have hurt the poor and elderly, Reagan said health insurance "should cover hepatitis and whooping cough, not hicups."

He defended his policies, including sharp changes in Medicare and Medicaid, the government's principal health care program, as essential steps to "discourage the unnecessary use of services" that fuels medical inflation.

Reagan, arriving back at the White House at 4:01 p.m. EDT, waved to his wife, Nancy, who awaited for his arrival on the balcony, and went straight to the family quarters.

Taking aim not only at government programs but also at "fancy, gold-plated, all-option insurance plans that cover every sneeze and itch," Reagan said the spiraling costs may soon jeopardize the quality and access of our health care.

Jailed protesters continue anti-nuclear cause

PLEASANTON, Calif. (UPI) — Jailed anti-nuclear activists accused of "gumming up" the justice system demanded Thursday that the judge come to their prison to hear their pleas.

The demonstrators refused to leave the jail camp to go to court for arraignment because they fear heavy sentences. They hope to win lighter punishment by their stalling tactics at the Santa Rita jail where they are housed in a red-and-white striped circus tent.

Only 69 of the 1,023 people arrested since Monday have been arraigned in Alameda County Municipal Court Judge John A. Lewis' make-shift courtroom on the Santa Rita grounds. Eighty of those arrested were juveniles who were released, and 866 remain imprisoned, refusing to walk across the compound to the portable classroom being used as a courtroom.

Tape: Kennedy nearly jailed governor, questioned NASA

BOSTON (UPI) — President John F. Kennedy considered jailing a recalcitrant Mississippi Gov. Ross Barnett and questioned priorities of those running his prized space program, secret White House tapes released Thursday showed.

But the tapes, made public by the John F. Kennedy Library, nearly 20 years after Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas, were only a tiny portion of the nearly 600 tape recordings made in the final 16 months of his administration.

Library spokesmen said as much as 75 percent of the material — much of it dealing with issues that still arouse a burning interest in historians and the public alike — could remain classified indefinitely.

Four of the tapes included in a detailed list of meeting recordings supplied by library officials were marked "no tape was ever received with this number." There was no further explanation.

JOHN F. KENNEDY

The tapes, spiced with occasionally strong language, reveal a president who could in one moment be deadly serious and the next turn humorous.

The tapes also showed an easy working relationship between Kennedy and close advisers.

Bill helps canals

By HAL BERNTON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A bill passed this week by the U.S. Senate authorizes the Twin Falls Canal Co. to apply for low-interest U.S. Bureau of Reclamation loans.

These loans normally are reserved only for federally funded water projects.

The canal company's proposed eligibility for low-interest federal construction loans should come as good news to stockholders, who are faced with a $61 million rehabilitation job in the years ahead.

The canal company is a privately financed irrigation project which without special congressional authorization would not be eligible for the low-interest loans.

The authorization is contained in a $14.1 billion energy- and water-project funding package for fiscal year 1984, which begins Oct. 1.

In addition to the authorization, the bill includes $225,000 to fund a Bureau of Reclamation project to determine the best way to develop 12,000 new acres in the A and B tracts of the Mindoko Irrigation Project.

It also authorizes $18.7 million to develop new fish hatcheries on the Lower Snake River, $1.09 million for erosion and flood-control studies along the Columbia River and its tributaries, and $90,000 to develop recreational facilities at the Little Wood River Reservoir.

"We got pretty much what we wanted in the bill," Tom Hill, a legislative aide to Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said Thursday.

But Hill noted that the $14.1 billion Senate bill contains some $400 million more in funds than President Ronald Reagan had requested. He predicted that the bill may be cut slightly during a joint Senate-House conference meeting on the bill, expected to take place within the next few weeks. The House already has passed its own version of the funding package.

In a month's time, Hill said, the final version of the bill should be signed into law by Reagan.

Pilot Douglas McFall rode out the crash, ran to safety

Ignites rangeland Helicopter crashes

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Jerome crop-duster whose helicopter landed hard and then burned near Twin Falls on Thursday said the engine suddenly quit while he was flying at about 500 feet.

"I just began to lose power in the aircraft," said Douglas J. McFall, of rural Jerome. "The only thing you can do when you lose power is go to the ground."

McFall, 25, rode out a rough landing and scrambled to safety after he noticed a fire in the engine. The $25,000 helicopter was consumed in the blaze.

"It was just a ball of fire when we got here," said Idaho State Police Trooper Frank W. Mogensen, one of the first persons at the scene. A grass fire touched off by the flames also blackened five to 10 acres of grass around the crash site.

Police rerouted traffic at U.S. 93 and Golf Course Road, about a mile north of Twin Falls, while a U.S. Bureau of Land Management fire crew extinguished the blaze.

McFall was returning from a crop-spraying job, and he had just refueled at the Hazelton airport. His tanks had been drained of insecticide spray, preventing any chemical release during the crash landing, he told police.

McFall, who has flown helicopters for the past two years, said he was within a few miles of his ranch and company headquarters near Jerome when the engine went dead.

There was no time to panic, he said. "I started to look down. You want to pick your spot where you're going to set down."

Skid marks at the scene indicated that the helicopter bounced down once or twice and stopped within about 30 yards. McFall said the aircraft landed upright on its skids.

But when he looked up at the engine overhead, he saw the fire. McFall said. He shut off the ignition and bailed out of the aircraft. He caught a ride on a road about 100 yards away and called authorities.

McFall said later Thursday evening that he still does not know why the engine quit.

A chunk of the tail rotor was found on the ground about 60 feet away from the burned-out hulk. The pilot said the main, overhead rotor most likely bent down from the force of the landing and chopped off part of the tail.

McFall, the owner of Mountain West Helicopters, said the crash and the resulting fire have destroyed his aerial spraying business. He was not insured for that type of accident, he said. Mountain West was only a few months old, he said.

"I'll fly again, but this helicopter business is just not for me."

Thursday's accident was the second time McFall has been forced down while flying a helicopter. Last year, a homemade, experimental craft he was piloting crashed outside of Jerome and put him in the hospital for five days, he said.

The National Transportation Safety Board will conduct a routine investigation of the accident, probably with the help of the Federal Aviation Administration office in Boise, a spokeswoman at NTSB's regional office in Seattle said.

State unable to enforce stream law

By HAL BERNTON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A state Department of Water Resources official says that his agency is unable to enforce a law that is supposed to help protect stream channels from harmful acts.

David Shaw, a department official who helps administer the state's Stream Channel Protection Act, says that budget cuts have reduced his staff from six members to two full-time workers.

"There is virtually no enforcement," Shaw said this week. "It takes two people full-time just to process all the paperwork. There is very little opportunity to even help people fill out applications, let alone get involved with enforcement."

The law gives the state Department of Water Resources the responsibility for approving all permits to alter natural channels. This includes any stream construction that might damage the environment, or alter high-water flows.

But following two years of budget cuts, state Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, says, "The stream-protection program is so low-profile that citizens are unaware of the law."

Noh is critical of his legislative colleagues for defeating a measure that would have helped fund the program through revenues taken in by the state Fish and Game Department.

He cites the recent gasoline spill in the Wolf Creek drainage area, outside of Coeur d'Alene, as proof of the need for a tougher program.

Noh says that the state attorney-general's office has estimated the spill caused close to $1 million in damage.

The spill was caused by a ruptured pipeline. The accident happened when construction workers entered the creek with heavy equipment to build a bridge. Some 20,000 gallons of gasoline poured into the creek — killing all stream life in the area and contaminating some domestic wells.

Noh says that according to the attorney-general's office, the construction workers did not obtain a Department of Water Resources permit before entering the stream.

According to Noh, Attorney General Jim Jones has recommended to local prosecutors that the persons responsible for the accident be charged with violating the Stream Protection Act.

Noh also points to the recent spring floods as proof of the need for an adequately funded stream-protection program. The floods have sparked new debates over altering the channels of the Big Wood and Boise rivers, actions that would require close state monitoring.

"We are in the middle of a year with heavy flooding and great interest in clearing some stream channels," Noh says. "And the state is unable to properly respond."

Shaw says the budget for his office initially was slashed two years ago, after it was singled out by some legislators as an unnecessary program.

Some environmentalists think the program is not strict enough, while some legislators "think we're too strict and we should let people do whatever they want to," Shaw says. "It's never been a popular program."

Noh says the act could cause problems if it was administered with too much zeal. But "I'm afraid we have swung too far in the other direction."

Firms seek chance to build new jail

TWIN FALLS — Nine architectural firms have expressed interest in working on a new Twin Falls County jail.

Earlier this month, county officials solicited resumes from architects in response to a citizens' committee's conclusion that the 72-year-old jail should be replaced.

They plan to select a firm that can outline what the county needs in a new jail and then prepare plans and cost estimates. The move does not signal a commitment toward construction of a new jail, which by one estimate could cost more than $4 million.

So far, county officials have not determined how to raise money for such a project. That's where they hope the experts can help.

Ann Cover, the chairman of the Twin Falls County commission, said Thursday that the firm names came from firms located in such areas as Boise, Spokane, Salt Lake City and Peoria, Ill.

Cover says the county commission will select some of the applicants to make more detailed presentations by mid-July.

Harsh drunken-driving law soon will be rule of the road

Stiff jail time, fines signal change from old law

By MARTY TRILLHAESE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Drunken driving, long a nightmarish topic for its victims, is about to become more painful for its perpetrators.

Idaho's new drunken-driver law, complete with stiffer jail sentences and higher fines, will take effect one week from today.

Police and prosecutors, speaking at a press conference Thursday in Twin Falls, described the new law. They said they hope it will result in more convictions, tougher sentences, more treatment for problem drinkers and a deterrent against drunk driving.

"The public has made the state perfectly aware that they want tough enforcement of drunken-driving laws and we're going to crack down even harder," said Sgt. Ed Strickfaden, of the Idaho State Police office in Twin Falls.

Insurance agent Richard Cook of Twin Falls promised that insurance agents will spend about $1,000 statewide in the next week for advertisements alerting the public to the new law.

The same message was repeated at five other press conferences held simultaneously throughout the state.

Cracking down on drunken drivers has been a major issue in the state for the better part of a year, culminating with the 1983 Legislature's decision to enact a wide-ranging series of new laws.

"This bill and the law will undoubtedly aid officers in the field and prosecutors in the courtroom," said Keith Roark, the Blaine County prosecutor and the president of the Idaho Prosecuting Attorneys Association.

According to Roark, the biggest change in the law will be the implementation of an objective standard for conviction. As of July 1, a blood-alcohol content of 10 percent will be sufficient evidence of driving under the influence.

Under the old law, the standard was a strict .08 percent. But that was only a presumption of guilt, requiring prosecutors to produce other evidence against a defendant, who could argue that he was in control of his faculties and was able to drive.

"In the past, what we really had was a subjective standard. Now, what we have is an objective standard," Roark said.

The standard cuts both ways, however. Anyone who submits to a chemical test and receives a rating below the .10 percent figure cannot be prosecuted under the new law. That may prove an incentive for drivers to submit to the test. Another incentive is an automatic 120-day suspension of driving privileges for failure to take the test.

But it also raises the possibility that drunken drivers will stay below the legal limit will go free, says Thomas McCabe, a Boise lawyer and a member of the Idaho Trial Lawyers Association. McCabe represented that organization on a state panel that last year developed suggested changes in Idaho's drunken-driver laws.

"Let's take a 19-year-old kid. He's just reached the legal drinking age. He's never touched a drop before," McCabe told The Times-News in a telephone interview Thursday. "He could conceivably drink enough alcohol to get his blood alcohol to .07 and still be snookered."

At the press conference Thursday, Roark acknowledged that possibility. But "if you look at the new law on balance, it's a significant change for the better," he said.

The best-known feature of the law is its mandatory minimum jail sentence for persons convicted of two or more drunken-driving offenses within five years. The law provides a minimum 10-day jail sentence.

The law also eliminates the practice of removing convictions from a defendant's record through withheld judgments. Those convictions will be considered for sentencing under the new law, Roark said.

This and subsequent offenses can be prosecuted as felonies, carrying a maximum five-year prison sentence. Felony charges also can be filed against a motorist who injures another person while driving under the influence.

And if prosecutors can show a drunken driver was responsible for a traffic death, they can obtain a manslaughter conviction against the defendant.

"That's a significant change," Roark said. "Gone is the concept of gross negligence. Gone is the concept of proximate cause."

Other provisions call for:

- A mandatory two-day jail sentence for anyone convicted of driving with a suspended driver's license.
- Driving privileges can be suspended for up to 180 days for a first drunken-driving offense; for a

Prosecutor explains what officers use as clues

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — The best way to catch the long arm of the law under Idaho's new drunken-driving law is to "make sure if you are going to drink, you aren't going to drive," says the Jerome County prosecutor.

Speaking this week at a Jerome Chamber of Commerce meeting, Dennis Adamson explained some of the clues that Idaho State Police officers and other law-enforcement officers look for as "probable cause" in stopping a motorist they suspect of driving while intoxicated.

He handed out copies of the "DUI apprehension" portion of the state police officers' manual.

"If you avoid all of these things, you will probably not be stopped as a DUI suspect," he said. "An officer can't stop you unless he has probable cause."

Among the items that officers watch for is a wide-radius turn from one street to another. Out of 100 motorists making such a turn, 65 percent will be driving while intoxicated, Adamson said. And about 60 percent of the drivers who almost strike a "stationary" object or other vehicle will be drunk, he said.

A person who drives in a fairly straight line but who straddles the center line or a lane marker is drunk 65 percent of the time, he said. And about 60 percent of "weaving" drivers are intoxicated.

Some other indicators that officers use in deciding if a motorist should be stopped are swerving, drifting, stopping without cause or braking erratically.

Going too slowly is another strong indicator, Adamson said. About half of the drivers who are traveling slower than 10 mph below the speed limit will have had too much to drink, he said.

Once a driver has been stopped, Adamson said there are some obvious indicators, such as the smell of alcohol. But despite the availability of more technical equipment and methods to determine alcohol content, officers still rely to a large extent on tests of an individual's ability to walk straight, stand on one leg and touch his nose with his finger, he said.

Adamson said there are other subtle clues, such as prescription medicine, that can cause the same symptoms, but these symptoms indicate a person should not be driving.

Some of the new drunken-driving law that will go into effect July 1, Adamson said he feels the law hits a "happy medium" of fairness.

There are some good, responsible people who drink, but the majority of these people will stop driving and driving after their first arrest, he said.

Competition tightens at prep rodeo

By MIKE PRATER
Times-News writer

FILER — Thursday night's performance of the Idaho High School Finals Rodeo was like a middle chapter in a long suspense novel — nothing really happened, but you could tell the climax was nearing.

There were different winners for each of the 10 events during the second night of action at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds. Leads that were established in the first two sessions Wednesday were lightened, but in very few cases were they overtaken by a performance from Thursday night's go-round.

Some very quick times were clocked in the women's events, however, especially in goat tying, where an interesting statistic is starting to develop.

Nampa's Kyna Parker, the defending state goat tying champion, had the quickest time of the night with a 8.616. That time, combined with her winning first go-round time of 8.950, gives her the overall lead midway through the second go-round. She leads the rest of the field by nearly three seconds and only a handful of girls, based on previous times, have a chance of catching her.

But the interesting manner in the event is that every cowgirl competing in goat tying has recorded a time, a rather unique item for high school competition. Fifty-three straight goals have been wrestled to the ground and tied during three performances.

Officials at the rodeo believe that is one of the longest strings of successful goat tying attempts in the history of state high school rodeo.

In other events, Jodi Archibald of St. Anthony won the barrel racing, sprinting though the triangle pattern in 18.383.

Local cowgirl and senior-to-be Shelley Hill, established herself as the girl to beat in goat tying. The Castleford native had a 3.384 time, giving her a leading 8.134 overall lead on two leads.

Once again, the animals in the cowboys' rough stock events proved to be one step ahead of the young competitors.

Wes Miller of American Falls won Thursday night's saddle bronc and the first go-round with a 68, but more than half the field ended up in the dust before their eight-second ride expired. The same pattern was true in bareback riding and bull riding.

Only six of 18 cowboys had bareback rides, with Jeff Burns of Dubois coming up with the top score, a 60. After that it was Terry Laumb of Declo with a 54.

Marty Wyatt, a Bonners Ferry cowboy, had a 58 to top the bull riding list. Only five of 17 cowboys put scores in the books.

All-around candidate Kelsey Felton, a Lewiston cowboy, had a 16.632 to top a slow steer wrestling field. Twin Falls cowboy Tim VanOstran still leads that event and probably will when the rodeo concludes Saturday night.

VanOstran also put his name in the goating. He missed his first calf out Wednesday, but with a 10.072 Thursday, he now leads the second go-round.

Hammett's Sean Black and Mark Jones of Hagerman had a 7.223 to easily beat out the team roping field. Guthrie, of McCammon, and Sean Harris of Pocatello were far back with a 20.280. VanOstran and Laumb lead the event, and will throughout the remainder of the rodeo, unless another pair can come up with a sub-three second run.

Thursday night's results:

Steer wrestling — 1. Kelsey Felton, Lewiston, 16.632; 2. Mark Jones, Hagerman, 23.700; 3. Troy Brown, Hagerman, 24.430; 4. Ron Vincent, Caldwell, 45.110.

Cowboys wallop Jerome

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Nate Burke threw strikes and Twin Falls handed the ball.

That's how Cowboy-Legion Coach Mike Robbins summed up an 11-0 decision over Jerome Thursday night.

Burke scattered five hits and fanned 11 but, more importantly to Robbins, gave up just three walks.

"It's good to see him throwing strikes again," said the coach, referring to recent starts when Burke's control let him. "I told him tonight if he couldn't get it over he was sitting down. He got a little shaky in the middle innings but then came out of it."

"The other thing was that since last weekend we've just been hitting the back out of the ball. When we were 7-1 I told the guys we were better than a .500 team and I think they are starting to realize it. But we still have a couple of places we need to jell," the coach said.

The bulk of the Cowboys' offense came from the bottom half of the lineup as the last four hitters accounted for seven runs and eight of the hits.

Jerome starter Kevin Hulsey gave Twin Falls a couple of runs in the second on a base-loaded walk and a wild pitch but after that the Cowboys did most of their scoring with their bats.

Derrick Korsen plated the walking Dave Stollen with a single in the

Jones vows effort to protect fish

COEUR D'ALENE (UPI) — Idaho will return to court to protect its upstream runs of migratory fish if Oregon and Washington officials "get too hoggy" and don't properly regulate their fishing industry in the future, the state's attorney general warned Thursday.

Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones said he was "a little disappointed" by a U.S. Supreme Court ruling Thursday that dismissed the state's claims against Washington and Oregon.

That 7-year-old lawsuit contended the two downstream states allowed overfishing on the Columbia and Snake river systems, reducing the number of migratory fish that made their way upstream to Idaho.

That 7-year-old lawsuit contended the two downstream states allowed overfishing on the Columbia and Snake river systems, reducing the number of migratory fish that made their way upstream to Idaho.

Justice Harry Blackmun wrote for the majority.

But the majority decision also gave Idaho a legal basis for bringing suit again in the future if the state can show it sustains damage, Jones said.

"And he said increased runs of steelhead trout recently could mean more downstream fishing and damage to Idaho's runs."

"It could be we're going to have to end up in court in the future, using the legal basis we gained in this decision," he said. "We just have to monitor their (Washington and Or-gon) activities and let them know that we do have this legal remedy, and if they get too hoggy in the future, we intend to use that remedy."

Justices also ruled that fish are a natural resource that may be allotted to states on a shared basis, such as water, and that it is possible to devise a fish allotment formula, even though the numbers would be speculative.

Jones said he was slightly frustrated, however, that in taking seven years to decide the case, justices allowed circumstances to change.

"When the case was filed, the defendant states were taking too many fish and had for many years prior," Jones said. "But when it was resolved, the fish numbers were so low that nobody's been fishing them. If it had been decided in a more timely manner, I think we could have received an allocation."

In their dissenting opinion, three justices said they believed the case should have been remanded to Special Master John Breitenstein because they believed "Idaho's claims had substantial merit." Breitenstein had rejected Idaho's contentions and a majority of justices backed the special master's findings.

While Jones said he was disappointed Idaho's position was not in the majority, he said he was pleased that at least three justices backed Idaho's claims that Washington and Oregon mismanaged the fishery.

National power boat champions to vie at Burley Regatta

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

BURLEY — At least five national power boat champions will be on hand Saturday and Sunday for the eighth annual Burley Boat Regatta.

Some 30 boats will take part in the event, which is expected to attract 5,000 spectators to the Burley Marina on the Snake River.

The highlight of the event will be races between the winners in the various divisions, to be held Sunday afternoon, following the conclusion of the regular competition. The fastest jet boats races will square off for a $1,000 purse, and there will be a separate race for the winners of the flat-bottom boat races.

The boats are all called sprint-racers. The bulk are from 19 to 22 feet in length, with in-board motors powered by automobile engines. Classes are based, among other things, upon engine build and type of fuel used. The fastest craft — the so-called "K" boats — can reach speeds of 140 miles per hour.

Racers will run a three-mile course. Depending upon the number of entrants in each division, there will be heats and final races each day in each division.

Among the national racing champions on hand for the event will be Ron Bolton of Long Beach, Calif., the national KRK winner; Kevin Austin of Seattle, who has been the national high-point winner in the ski jet division for the past three years; Mike Doyle of Oakley, the national ski jet champion; and Randy Peters of Salt Lake City, the national competition jet boat champion.

There will be at least eight jet boats participating from Phoenix, Las Vegas, Nev., Seattle and Salt Lake City.

The race is sanctioned by the American Power Boat Association, and points earned by the contestants will be included in the national APBA standings.

The final testing and time trials will be completed this afternoon and tonight, with competition scheduled to start 1 p.m. Saturday, preceded by heats starting at about 10:30 a.m.

The first races will be in the outboard, D-stock category, followed by super stocks, competition jet boat, 2.5 hydroplanes, SK flat-bottom boats, ski jets, 145 hydrocs, small outboards and finally the KRK alcohol-fueled boats, which is expected to start about 3:30. The events will be run on the same schedule Sunday, to be followed by the competition among the fastest boats from each division beginning about 5:30.

Spectators had already begun to gather around the marina, which is located east of Burley near the Burley Municipal Golf Course, on Thursday night, but the biggest part of the crowd was expected to arrive between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. on Saturday. Race organizers suggest that spectators wishing to get a good vantage point should plan to arrive early.

Admission is $5 per day, with children 12 years of age and under admitted free. Concessions will be available, and the Burley Elks Club will sponsor at breakfast Saturday morning at the marina, beginning about 7 a.m.

Tennis

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — More than 200 entrants, believed to be the largest ever to participate in a tennis tournament in this city, will convene at the Twin Falls Open, which begins tonight at three sites.

One hundred and fifty-one players will vie in the sanctioned (all categories except Class B) events, according to Loren Whitney, one of the tourney chairmen. Some 50 or 60 more will compete in Class B.

At stake in theUSTA-sanctioned competition are points toward state rankings. It is the fourth of seven such tournaments for adults occurring this summer.

In addition to being Twin Falls' largest tourney, the Open should feature a considerably strong field. With the exception of Chris Langdon, a top Boise State University player who won last year's event, all of the state's best men's players will be present.

Eddie Perkins, another BSU star who lost to Langdon in last year's finals, returns and has drawn the men's open No. 1 seed status. The second seed is Mark Scribner, a Sun Valley teaching pro.

Local players participating in the open category include Dave Eads and Doug Blevins, both of Twin Falls. For the women, only Twin Falls' Carolyn Matsuoka is entered in the open division, where Wendy Olsen and Shelly Sarni are the top two seeds, respectively.

Play will be held in the following classifications: open, A, 35s, 45s, 55s and B for men's singles; open, A, 35s, 45s and B for women's singles and men's doubles and open, A, 35s and B for women's and mixed doubles.

The tourney, co-sponsored by the Times-News and the Twin Falls Tennis Association, continues Saturday and concludes with final Sunday. Matches during the initial rounds will be conducted on the courts at Harmon Park, Twin Falls High School and Frontier Field.

Wimbledon: rowdy McEnroe triumphs; two Americans ousted

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Second-seeded John McEnroe, funning and fighting all the way, survived a tempestuous 2-hour, 42-minute battle against little-known Romanian Florin Segarcuacu Thursday to join defending champion Jimmy Connors in the third round of the $1.4 million Wimbledon tennis championships.

The volatile 24-year-old left-hander from New York, champion in 1981 and a finalist for the last three years, was given an unexpectedly hard fight before winning 16, 7-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl and

Swedish teenager Mats Wilander, seeded third and fifth respectively, both won easily, Lend outgunning American Trey Waltke, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3, and Wilander overwhelming South African Tian Viljoen, 6-3, 6-2, 6-1.

But two seeded American men, Vitas Gerulaitis (8) and Hank Pfister (15) failed to survive the second round. Gerulaitis was dumped, 7-6, 7-5, by Australian Mark Edmondson, who also eliminated him in the quarterfinals last year. Pfister was beaten, 7-6, 7-5, 7-6, 6-4, by Ricardo Acuna of Chile in an ill-tempered battle on one of the outside courts.

In women's play, title-holder Martina Navratilova had to pull out all the stops for a 7-6, 6-3 victory over Sherry Acker of the U.S., who had two set points, and fifth seeded American Pam Shriver was handed a surprise 2-6, 7-6, 6-4 defeat by Iva Budarova of Czechoslovakia.

McEnroe footfaulted five times — "the most I have ever had in one match" — and asked for umpire Malcolm Huntington and the linesman to be changed during his No. 1 court clash in which tournament referee Alan Mills and ITTF supervisor Curt Nielsen were called on to settle disputes.

McEnroe received a warning from the umpire for equipment abuse when he took a chunk out of the court with a double faulting. But he later won an argument against the umpire when he disputed a penalty point incurred for smashing the ball into the net after losing a rally.

McEnroe asked for Mills and Nielsen to be changed during his No. 1 court

Webb tops Seattle PBA event

SEATTLE (UPI) — Wayne Webb averaged 222 for six games Thursday and maintained his lead after three rounds of the $100,000 Seattle Open on the Pro Bowlers Tour.

Webb, an 11-time PBA Tour champion from Indianapolis looking for his second title of the year, rolled a third-round score of 1,334. The 25-year-old right-hander, hoping to break a record of a mid-year slump, totaled 4,183 for 16 games, a 232 average.

Trailing Webb by just 23 pins in second place was another Indianapolis bowler, Randy Stoughton. Stoughton rolled a third-round score of 1,391 to move up from fourth place and totaled 4,160 for 18 games.

Completing the top five in the event, the last on the PBA's six-stop Spring Tour, were: Amleto Monacelli, Riquisimelo, Venezuela, with 4,123; Charlie Rapp, St. Paul, Minn., with 4,089 and Steve Giljum, Crestwood, Mo., with 4,027.

The field of 144 bowlers was trimmed to the top 24 players following the third round. Those players entered match play late Thursday evening, with 24 more games remaining before the top five reach the championship round.

The five finalists will roll off for the $12,000 title Saturday.

Missing Series ring surfaces

NEW YORK (UPI) — A stolen 1977 World Series ring that belonged to the late Yankee catcher Elston Howard was found early Thursday on the finger of a man arrested for stealing a car and then hitting a police van, authorities said.

Police at the 46th Precinct in the Bronx said the arresting officers discovered the ring on the finger of Carlos Maldonado, 41, a Puerto Rican, after he collided with their van around 1:30 a.m.

The ring was stolen two years ago during a burglary at Howard's Teaneck, N.J., home. It had been awarded to Howard after the Yankees beat the Los Angeles Dodgers in the 1977 World Series.

The athlete died of a heart attack Dec. 14, 1980 at the age of 51. He played with the Yankees from 1955 until early 1967 when he was traded to the Boston Red Sox. He won the Most Valuable Player award in 1963.

Howard was named as a Yankee coach in 1969, making him the first black coach in the American League. He was an administrative assistant to Yankee owner George Steinbrenner at the time of his death.

Police Officers Marvin Carroll and Raymond Loughlin said the incident began when they spotted the suspect and believed the car he was driving may have been stolen.
They followed Maldonado for a short distance and as they tried to pull him over, the two vehicles collided. Sgt. Kenneth Rodriguez said the officers noticed the ring when they were questioning the suspect.

"The ring is studded with diamonds and has the New York Yankees logo on it. I guess it really caught the officers' eyes," Rodriguez said.

Edward McCarthy, a spokesman for Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola, said attorneys on the prosecutor's staff were planning to question Maldonado in an attempt to learn where he acquired the ring.

"We want to know where he got it and if he knows anything about 10 other rings that were taken from the Howard residence," he said.

Nielsen again and told them: "I don't think I deserve this penalty point and I don't think this person should be in charge."

After listening to the arguments, the officials rescinded the penalty point.

McEnroe later defended his actions. "Anything I've done today I had a perfect right to do," he said. "Not only did I have a right to do it, they (Mills and Nielsen) agreed me with me when I told them I was going to do it. How can I be blamed when they came back and rescinded his mistake?"

"Players have emotions. They aren't robots. If they want everyone to be robots and not have personalities and don't want anyone to question the calls, then that's fine. But don't blame me for the way the rules have been written."

McEnroe said he would consider pulling out of the tournament if bad decisions persisted.

"If they (the officials) are going to keep making mistakes, I don't see why I should keep on playing," he said. "However, I'm not going to make a martyr of myself at this stage of my career. I don't want to lose because of bad decisions. I want to lose because the other guy is better than me."

It was a day on which McEnroe's tennis failed to match the heights of his temper.

Segarceanu, ranked only 88th in the world against McEnroe's No. 2, produced some brilliant backhand passing shots but was generally McEnroe's loose play which let the Romanian into the match. McEnroe's serve, usually one of his most potent weapons, also failed him and he had seven double faults.

Lendl, ranked third in the world but seeking his first major title, trailed 0-3 against Walke before demolishing the 28-year-old American with a display of fierce hitting founded on explosive serving.

Walke, wearing long white flannel trousers held up by an ATP tie around his waist, entered center court like someone stepping out of a page from the Great Gatsby but left looking disheveled after 71 minutes of power play.

After losing his opening serve in the second game, Lendl dropped only five points in his other 13 service games, which included eight winners.

There was nothing Walke could do to halt the tide of blistering winners exploding from Lendl's racket. The 23-year-old Czechoslovak, more at home on clay surfaces, obviously is adjusting quickly to grass and said later: "I am improving day by day."

Wilander, another clay specialist, also showed he is adapting well to the faster surface as he ousted Viljoen, the big-serving South African who is ranked a lowly 424th in the world.

Edmondson, overcoming a pinched nerve in his back, ended the Wimbledon hopes of Gerulaitis for the second year in succession, mastering the New Yorker with his powerful serve and volley game.

Edmondson had every reason to be pleased with his performance.

"He is one of the 10 or 12 top players in the world and to beat anyone in straight sets, you have to be playing pretty well," he said.

Connors continues his bid to win the crown for the third time when he meets Sweden's Henrik Sundstrom in the third round today. Chris Evert Lloyd, chasing the final leg of the Grand Slam, tackles fellow American Kathy Jordan in the women's event which she has won three times and appeared in the last five finals.

Beck leads Open champ Nelson by one shot at Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Chip Beck shot a 7-under-par 65 Thursday to take a 1-shot lead over a fatigued Open champ Larry Nelson in the first round of the $400,000 Memphis Classic.

Nelson, who edged Tom Watson for the rain-delayed Open title on Monday, said he was a little tired but he still posted a 66 over the 7,249-yard and 10-hole Country Club course for the runner-up slot.

Tom Purtzer, Fred Couples and Bill Murchison were grouped at 67, while defending champion Ray Floyd headed a pack at 4-under 68.

Beck, a North Carolina native, has never won on the tour, but he finished second in Atlanta earlier this year and has been playing good golf for two months.

Beck started on the back nine and carded a 3-under-par 33, sinking birdie-putts-of-four-feet on No. 10, three feet on No. 16 and a 20-footer on No. 18. He then played the front nine in 4-under 32, birdying Nos. 1, 3, 4, and 7 with a 15-footer at No. 4 his only long putt.

"I guess the key to my round was making a lot of 3-to-4-foot birdies and pars," the 26-year-old leader said.

Another plus in his favor was growing up playing on Southern courses and bermuda greens, said Beck.

"I think confidence on the greens helps," he said. "You'll probably see a lot of Southerners play well here."

Nelson also started on the back and shot 33 on each nine, posting three birdies on each side. His longest birdie was a 20-footer at No. 18.

Nelson, another southerner who lives near Atlanta, said confidence in his putting put him in contention for his second title in as many weeks.

"I think my confidence level is higher now, as far as standing over the putts and thinking I can make them," he said.

One thing that bothered Nelson was fatigue and a small lull in taking the Open title.

"I think I had my adrenalin going for three straight days," he said. "I didn't get any sleep Sunday night and Monday night. I think all that just caught up with me."

The golfers battled near 90-degree heat and high humidity on the Colonial course, where a rain shower caused a 25-minute delay in the morning and the last group finished as dark clouds again rolled over the course late in the afternoon.

Couples, the Kemper Open winner, saved his hot play for the front nine, which he played last, mastering it with five birdies in a row, stretching from No. 3 to No. 7.

Bennett wins senior title at Sun Valley

SUN VALLEY (UPI) — Dale Bennett of Seattle lost a five-shot lead over the first 10 holes of the final round Thursday but recovered for a three-shot victory in the 54-hole Pacific Northwest Golf Association men's senior championship on Sun Valley's Elkhorn course.

Bennett, 64, bogeyed four of the first five holes and then missed a short putt on the 10th to fall into a tie with playing partner Jim Frost of Mercer Island, Wash. But Frost faltered while Bennett got back on track to finish with a 78 on the 6,500-yard par 72 course.

Bennett had a 54-hole total of 227, Frost, Herb Fritz of Vancouver, B.C. and George Holland of Seattle each had totals of 330.

Bennett, who never lost the lead during the entire tournament, made five straight pars while Frost, the tourney favorite, missed a 22-inch putt and made 7 on the par-5 13th, three-putted 14 for a bogey and hit into the water and made another bogey at 15.

Bennett lost a shot with a bogey at 16, then parred the last two holes.

Frost hit a 76 for his final round while Holland and Fritz each carded 75.

Defending champion Mac McDowell of Redmond, Wash., shot 77 and finished tied for 5th at 233 with Kenney and Gary Seattle.

Bruce Shortis of Seattle shot 80 for a 244 total and won the over-70 championship by 14 shots over Frank Marolich of Hayden Lake.

Two-way tie at Rochester LPGA event

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — Lynn Okamoto, the all-time single-season, money winner in the Japanese women's golf tour, shot 4-under-par 68s Thursday to tie for the lead after the first round of the $200,000 Rochester International.

Okamoto, 21st on the LPGA money list this year with $35,674 in earnings, strung together three straight birdies on holes 4, 5 and 6 at the Locust Hill Country Club to grab a share of the lead.

Okamoto, an LPGA member since 1981, has only one previous tour victory at last year's Arizona Senior Open Classic. In 1981, however, she won eight tournaments on the Japanese tour to become the top woman money winner in a season.

Adams, who resides in Kingsville, Texas, won the Orlando Classic earlier this season, but has struggled since.

"After last Sunday I decided to do what it took to play better and I can see the payoff start," said Adams, who is 14th in earnings with $60,414. "It was time for a change of attitude. I had really gotten lazy."

She said being paired with defending champion Sandra Haynie was a little help.

"I needed a player like that to slow me down," she said. "I was getting a little quick."

Okamoto, pleased with her round, said through an interpreter that she "played well from tee to green."

Rochester native Cathy Morse was in a three-way tie with Alice Miller and Rose Jones for second place with 3-under 69s.

Haynie was tied for the lead heading to the final hole, but a double bogey on the 18th dropped her into a four-way tie with Jane Blalock, Becky Pearson, and Kathy Martin for third at 2-under 70.

Morse gave the Locust Hill crowd its biggest thrill of the day with a hole-in-one on the 15th.

Pirate lefty lunged

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Pittsburgh pitcher John Candelaria is suffering from a partial tear of a tendon on the inside of his left elbow and a bone spur on the back of the elbow, the Pirates announced Thursday.

Candelaria removed himself from Wednesday's game with the Chicago Cubs because of a twinge in the elbow.

Pirates Executive Vice President Pete Peterson said the club had not yet decided whether to disable Candelaria. He was to make the trip to St. Louis with the Pirates Thursday night.

Candelaria had X-rays taken Thursday and the problems were diagnosed by team orthopedist Dr. Jack Failla.

Cloggers host dance program

By GABRIELLE WESTERGREN
Times-News Intern

TWIN FALLS — The Sawtooth Country Cloggers and a Boise dance troupe will perform a free dance Saturday at 6:30 p.m. in the City Park band shell.

"A Dancing Force," a 23-member company from Boise State University, will present "Twenty-four Hours in New York City," a program featuring jazz, modern, ballet and improvisational dance numbers.

The Sawtooth Country Cloggers of Twin Falls is hosting the event. The cloggers, directed by Ed and Vickie Austin, won first and second-place trophies last year when they competed in the Intermountain Clogging Competition in Utah, and won a third-place trophy more recently for precision team clogging at a competition held at Ricks College in Rexburg.

Considered part of the American folk heritage, clog dancing was

Mexico: Land of past and present

Editor's note: Times-News reporter Stephanie Schorow recently spent three months in Mexico studying Spanish under a fellowship from the National Press Foundation. She leaves the Times-News this week to join the staff of the Stamford (Conn.) Advocate as a reporter and editor. Following are some of her observations made during her Mexico stay.

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

MEXICO — The polished stone walls of the main pyramid at Chichen-Itza rise above the Yucatan jungle in a balance of strength and symmetry.

This April day, hundreds of Mexicans are gathered at the pyramid — one of the most beautiful pre-Columbian structures in a country rich with antiquities — to witness an ancient ritual and enjoy an afternoon picnic.

Every spring equinox, the setting sun creates a shadow that resembles the humped body of a giant snake on one side of the pyramid. For a few minutes, the curving body "connects" with a large stone serpent's head, resting at the bottom of the pyramid. Thus, the legend goes, "The spirit" of the snake is crawling down the pyramid.

For the annual occasion, the nearby city of Merida and other small villages have turned out their civic best.

While a microphone-assisted announcer blares out names and background, various performers appear on a small stage set up near the pyramid: a singing group clad in traditional Spanish garb; young dancers in white dress with geometric trim; teen-age boys in feathers and glitter, trying to preserve Mayan dignity under the eyes and lives of their fellow youths.

In some ways, the event resembles local celebrations in Idaho — a Mexican version of Buhl Sagebrush Days — or the once-a-year opportunity for a town to commemorate its heritage. Only in Chichen-Itza, the heritage goes back more than 1,000 years.

The intense, almost personal pride Mexicans take in their Indian past can overwhelm a visitor to their country. Evidence of it is everywhere, not just in the meticulously upkeep archaeological sites. Aztec and Mayan motifs are incorporated into modern buildings, into business logos, even into the markings on manhole covers in the streets of Mexico City.

This pride in ancestry compares all the more amazing when compared to the conditions under which the sons and the daughters of those ancestors live.

Often, the darker the skin — indicating more Indian "blood" — the poorer the person is. Most of the poor in Mexico are members of the various Indian cultures, each with distinct language and customs. But the poverty in Mexico can be as overwhelming to the senses as the sight of the pyramid at Chichen-Itza.

Because many Mexican homes lack water, children often get it at community faucets

The Yucatan's small villages reflect the poorer half of ancient Mayan architecture. Just miles from the fabulous wealthy resort of Cancun, entire families live in one-room straw huts, lined side-by-side on dirt streets or clustered around wells — the only source of water.

Through the doorways you can glimpse bare dirt floors and hammocks strung up for sleeping. At night, the occasional gleam of a naked light bulb shows that a few people have electricity.

Even in the more prosperous and modern state of Morelos, persons living in the small town of Tepozatlan rely on communal faucets for water. Up and down the cobblestone streets, you can see the children carrying buckets, some with yokes and pails slung over their shoulders.

In Mexico City's ritzy Zona Rosa district, the poorer Indians sell wares or beg on sidewalks in front of continental restaurants and New Wave boutiques.

At first, just a look from one of those dirt-streaked faces above the outstretched palm would send my hand creeping toward my wallet.

was turning away from the sad-eyed women with clinging children with casual callousness.

This is the paradox of Mexico: the contrast of rich and poor; of marvelous heritage and utter privation, of pride in the Indian past and poverty in the Indian present.

The ruins at Teotihuacan, at Monte Alban and Uxmal are touted as national treasures. But faces on Mexican television seldom include those of a dark-skinned people with Indian features.

Rather, the brunettes dominating the sit-coms and commercials have the features of Spanish and Europe, with an occasional blonde thrown in. Many appear to be mestizo descendants of a Spanish-Indian mix. But to the electronic eye the Indian people simply don't exist.

To American eyes, the differences between shades of brown seem slight. Not so to Mexicans.

In Cuernavaca, I was able to attend a Mexican wedding which joined two wealthy families. In the church, looking over the hundreds of people — representatives of the "Cuernavaca 500" — I did not see one dark-skinned person attending. Indian blood ran thin in this well-heeled crowd.

Mexicans acknowledge that discrimination exists in their country, but say it is more a matter of economic circumstance and cultural differences than outright color bias. One of the country's most beloved historical figures, Benito Juarez, was a Zapotec Indian from the state of Oaxaca.

Nor is Spanish considered a "superior" blood. Spain, at least among the Mexican people I met, was not regarded with the same kind of affection as England. Rather, a smoldering resentment lingers, a warm hundreds of years after the Spanish conquest.

The destruction of the Aztec city of Tenochtitlan or Mexico City, the enslavement of the Indian population and the rape of the country's resources has left its mark in the minds of the people.

For every marvelous archaeological site in Mexico, there's a tale of destruction by the Spanish, who, driven by greed and religious fervor, wiped out much of the Indian civilization then in existence.

The human sacrifices of the Aztecs, bloody as they were, were more than equaled in ferocity by the "sacrifices" of Indian life made by Spaniards seeking to convert and exploit this new world.

Asked to explain the difference between Spanish spoken in Spain and that spoken in Mexico, several of my Mexican teachers launched with laughter. Into an exaggerated imitation of the "lisp" of classical Spanish, another subtle jab at that country.

Still, the Spanish vein, like the Indian heritage, is inextricably woven into the fabric of Mexican life, creating a patch-work tapestry held lightly together.

Student acting in repertory company

REXBURG — Melanie Parry of Twin Falls is performing with the Academy Players in the third season of Summer Repertory Theatre at Ricks College.

The group consists of 50 actors, actresses, musicians and technicians at the junior college.

Parry has had extensive training in vocal production, and had an opportunity to travel with the all-American Choir to Europe in 1979.

Cliff Robertson joins Falcon Crest

By VERNON SCOTT, United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — Cliff Robertson, the "Major" victim of David Begelman's embezzlement, at Columbia Pictures, has made a career comeback but still bears the scars of the ordeal.

"Robertson, you'll remember, was the totally innocent actor whose name was forged on a $10,000 check by Begelman in his scheme to defraud Columbia in 1978.

But Begelman regained his job and went on to head production at MGM. United Artists, which he plunged into debt, Begelman last year was made president of Sherwood Productions, an independent film company.

For almost four years Robertson did not fare as well.

The old boy fraternity in Hollywood virtually black-balled him although nothing specific could be proved. Robertson simply didn't work.

Those who weren't Begelman's pals were afraid of offending the still-powerful executive and his cronies. Begelman takes credit for hiring Robertson and inspiring his comeback two years ago in "Brainstorm."

But Robertson denies Begelman had anything to do with it. Robertson said he was hired by director Douglas Trumbull before Begelman even knew about it.

The effects of Robertson's plight for standing up and telling the truth still echo in Hollywood. It is significant, even today, that a CBS biography of Robertson makes no mention of the whole dirty story.

Robertson has joined the cast of the network's popular prime time soap opera, "Falcon Crest," playing a doctor distantly related to one of the families.

The interesting role and hefty salary persuaded the actor to work for the first time in series television.

But from 1978 to 1981, Robertson was unemployed by the entertainment industry. During his outcast years he attempted unsuccessfully to put together some independent films.

Once he got his foot in the door in "Brainstorm," thanks to Trumbull, Robertson went on to star with Jacqueline Bisset in "Class," and Bob Fosse's new film, "Star 80," both due for release later this year, along with "Brainstorm."

Twin Falls art shop owner hosts fair Sunday

TWIN FALLS — This Sunday, Judy Watson, the owner of The Black Sheep, a consignment art shop, will host an art fair on the grounds of her farm just outside of Twin Falls.

The "Country Collection" will last from 2 p.m. to 7 p.m. The farm is at the end of Pole Line Road East.

Running her small art shop, The Black Sheep, was too time-consuming for the teacher and mother. It was "too much work to keep new items in and be open once a week," she says. The art fairs will take the place of the shop.

Watson plans to arrange three fairs each year. The other two probably will be in September and at Christmas. If this one, an "experiment," is a success, she says.

The outdoor shows will provide customers with a chance to "come out on a nice day in the country, see some nice things and meet the artists," Watson says.

She anticipates having around eight artists on hand for Sunday's event. Items will include antiques, watercolors, weaving, quilts, pottery, wall hangings and old-fashioned wooden toys.

Most of the items on display will have been made by her regular artists, who are both local and from out of state.

In selecting what to sell, Watson says she tries "to stay country and old-fashioned." She says her one-of-a-kind items consist of artistic art, not craft. "Things the average person wouldn't make."

Cloggers

brought to this country by Irish, Scotch and English immigrants, says Ed Austin.

He says it was influenced further by Cherokee ceremonial dances and developed in the Appalachian Mountains.

Modern clogging incorporates traditional square dance figures and is performed to a bluegrass music tempo.

The Sawtooth Country Cloggers, who have been dancing as a group for a year and a half, range in age from 13 to 21.

The Austins were introduced to clogging at Brigham Young University, where they met while touring with the International Folk Dance team. Both have toured extensively as dancers in the United States, Europe and Israel.

Terry Tucker, director of Cloggers West, says the Sawtooth Country Cloggers are "an impressive group to watch. It's easy to get excited by the energy they generate during a performance," he says.

Idaho's largest gem show to be held in Filer

Association of America.

Food concession stands for the fair will be furnished by the Lutheran Church women and special crafts displays and sales will be offered by senior citizens organizations and individual artists.

"I'm trying to line up a tomahawk-throwing contest with the Black Powder frontiersmen. In fact, I'm practicing up on my own tomahawk-throwing," Anthis said.

Persons wanting more information on entering displays may call 733-0354.

Gene Anthis, who sponsors the event, said he is getting a lot of new exhibitors this year, some coming from as far away as Minnesota, he said.

Show dates are July 15, 16 and 17 from 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m., except Sunday when the show will close at 6 p.m.

The show has two special features, he said. One is the variety of gems, displays and demonstrations not seen at most shows. The other is the no-admission charge. It's free to the public and everyone is invited just for the fun of it, he said.

The show will have an inside section and another area for outdoor exhibits, including booths and displays.

Each year the show fills a large area of the fairgrounds surrounding the merchants building.

Anthis said there will be the usual exhibits of Bruneau Jasper, Biggs Jasper, Oregon picture Jasper, some Idaho fire opal and Australian fire opal. Handmade jewelry, including Indian silver and turquoise, will be available for sale as will be other arts and crafts, he said.

Demonstrations are planned in silversmithing, chain making and jewelry making.

Anthis said a gold show is being planned to demonstrate panning for gold, gold recovery equipment and methods. The demonstrations will be conducted by the Gold Prospectors

TV show debates progress

"Progress," like "motherhood and apple pie" used to be one of those words about which there was little debate. Today many people question whether more, bigger and faster is always better.

Some rural Idahoans wrestling with that question will speak their minds on "Road to the Future? Garden Valley to Lowman," a production of KALD-TV, the Public Broadcast station in Boise.

The program will be aired July 7 at 7:30 p.m. on Idaho Public Television.

A 15 issue is a Federal Highway Administration proposal to rebuild and pave a 16.6-mile stretch of road through a relatively untouched central Idaho river valley — a project estimated to cost between $17 and $22 million.

Program producer Peter Morrill and his crew focused the program not only on the spectacularly beautiful setting involved, but also on the spirit of the people whose lives will be affected if the road goes through.

There is general agreement that the project is necessary, but some reluctance to give up the isolation many residents moved here to find.

Rob Donley, a retired bounty hunter whose lifetime catch includes 204 cougars — 21 slain with bow and arrow — loves the back country both for its rugged beauty and its safety.

"I never lock my doors up here. I guess if the road comes through, I'll either have to lock my doors or never leave the place."

An Idaho Fish and Game officer says, "People come here because it is isolated; when you upgrade it, it will downgrade the experience."

"But a prospector who moved to Garden Valley to reopen a gold and silver mine feels change is inevitable: "I'm not so sure it's good for the people up here, but it's going to happen whether we like it or not. If you put a locked gate down at the corner at Highway 55, someone would break it down."

Some residents see good in the road. "Have you ever tried to stop on a dirt road for a deer?" one asked. "It's tough. At least on pavement you stand a chance."

A logging truck driver is also glad to see the change. The present road, he says, is famous for "taking a truck and turning it into a bucket of bolts."

Others, like a local resort owner, welcome the speedier east-west connector and hope it will attract more tourists to the area. Some simply feel driving on paved roads is one of the conveniences of modern life they want to share.

Producer/director Morrill was assisted with script and production by KALD Producer Gary Richardson. Kim Day of the Idaho Educational Public Broadcasting System narrates.

What's what

"Don't worry about your children." That's rule No. 7 in David Davie's list of ways to live to an old age. He's a British gerontologist who studied the people of Vilcabamba, Ecuador. They're among the longest-lived people in the world. His rule No. 8 is: "Walk at least a mile a day." No. 9: "Eat as little as possible." His first seven rules have to do with the usual: Keep working, enjoy hobbies, don't worry, so on.

ALCOHOL

No, sir, exercise doesn't speed the alcohol out of your system.

"There is not much harm in a lion. He has no ideals, no religion, no politics, no chivalry, no gentility; in short no reason for destroying anything that he does not want to eat." George Bernard Shaw said that, and this: "Man is the only animal of which I am thoroughly and cravenly afraid."

It's not the zipper that's called the fly. It's the fold of cloth over the zipper. So says our I-language man, who studies everything.

START WITH A CAMEL

The letter "C" started out as a drawing of a camel's neck.

If you want to get a fix on Sri Lanka, that beautiful island nation of elephants and leopards and tea-tinted people in the Indian Ocean, try this: It used to be called Ceylon. Much earlier it was known as Serendip. You probably can recall the tale about the three princes herefrom who adventured abroad reputedly to discover happy surprises they didn't expect. Horace Walpole in 1754 alluded to it when he invented the word "serendipity." The name Sri Lanka today would not lend itself to such catchy coinage, but that's the place nonetheless.

'Twilight Zone': Only one of 4 episodes gets high marks

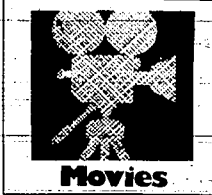

By RICHARD FREDMAN
Newhouse News Service

Based on the popular 1959-64 television series by the late Rod Serling, "Twilight Zone - The Movie" is a very mixed bag consisting of four separate, mildly supernatural tales and a self-congratulatory prologue.

Only the last story really works on the big screen, and the entire enterprise leaves an acrid taste in the mouth because of the tragedy surrounding its filming.

Last July 23 one of the film's stars, Vic Morrow, and two Vietnamese children were killed when a helicopter loaded with explosives fell on them while the first episode was being filmed.

The director of the episode, John

Movies

Landis ("Trading Places"), and two criminals have been indicted on criminal charges by a grand jury and were scheduled for arraignment in Los Angeles Superior Court this week. Instead of scrapping the whole doomed segment, the film laboriously works around its ill-fated desecration — the actual helicopter footage is not shown — to get off to a start that is both aesthetically weak and morally insensitive. If not downright indefensible:

It shows Morrow as a bigoted barfly inveighing against Jews, blacks and Asians because he's been passed over for a promotion. After spewing his hate for longer than the story really needs, he leaves his companions to fight himself suddenly in Nazi-occupied France.

Hounded as a Jew both by the Gestapo and French fascist sympathizers, Morrow is next bullied by a "black" by the "Kis" Klux Klan. Escaping them, he's magically transported to Vietnam, where he's given a similar hard time by the Viet Cong, U.S. forces, and a very large snake slithering in the muddy river where he seeks refuge.

This elaborately mechanical poetic justice — worth about three minutes of screen time — is stretched to a full half-hour, as are the other stories in "Twilight Zone." Since the story is so paper-thin and contrived, all one can think about during it is that Morrow and the Vietnamese youngsters lost their lives making this hokum.

The next episode is a characteristic Steven-Spielberg concoction — about what fun it is to be old and abandoned in the Sunnyvale Rest Home.

There, the doddering denizens are given a pep talk by hysterical Mr. Bloom (Scatman Crothers) about how "life is rich." To prove his point, he rallies the geriatric troops into playing a game of kick-the-can, with grotesque results.

One makes a mental note to ask Spielberg, 38, how he feels about the joys of old age about a half-century from now.

On to Joe Dante's contribution, a sour fantasy involving a 27-year-old schoolteacher (Kathleen Quinlan) who finds herself at the mercy of a young boy (Jeremy Licht) she rescues from a bully in a diner.

The kid takes her home, where she finds herself surrounded by his alleged family. They apparently spend their days and nights at his command, mesmerized by endless television cartoons, their only nourishment consisting of peanut butter burgers.

As a commentary on American youth culture, this segment has all the satiric clout of a Howdy, Doodie cartoon.

"Twilight Zone - The Movie" only comes to life in its final segment, a wonderful chiller based on the original "Twilight Zone" episode "Nightmare at 20,000 Feet" and directed in stunning style by George Miller ("Mad Max"; "The Road Warrior").

In it, John Lithgow (the beguiling transsexual football player in "The World According to Garp") shows us the ultimate fear of flying.

Gibbering with panic right from takeoff, he's a passenger on a Boeing 747 who has to be coaxed to the gills with sedatives by anxious stewards in order to keep him from going completely berserk.

Simmons' workout routine now on tape

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — Richard Simmons, the exercise fanatic with more bounce than a taut trampoline, hopes to give Jane Fonda a run for her money in the video cassette market with a new 90-minute tape.

Titled "Every Day With Richard Simmons," the exercise program is an extension of the Simmons physical fitness business.

The curly haired former "funny little fat person" has become an industry.

He runs 50 exercise studios, which he calls "anatomy asylums" (none franchised), in eight states; has written a couple of books, "Never Say Diet" and "The Never Say Diet Cookbook," and wrote, sang and produced, a platinum recording, "Reach."

There is no escaping him. Simmons writes a column syndicated in 145 newspapers. He also has a radio show. Simmons built his fortune by persuading women to work on their bodies in an attractive way in interactive settings—long before Fonda arrived on the scene, he shattered the work-out image of sweat socks, musty gyms and weight-lifting.

Simmons' leap from obscurity to fame was accomplished through his highly rated daily half-hour TV exercise show syndicated in 189 cities.

His glib jokes at the overweight, including frequent reminders that he once was a fatty himself, have endeared him to viewers.

Today he says, "My parents were in show business but they didn't make it.

I was a poor kid in New Orleans. I wasn't born with a silver spoon in my mouth. I was born with it in my hand and I said, 'Fill it!'"

"When I grew up I was very heavy. I did commercials and pictures as a funny little fat person. I was a dancing meat ball and a Firelli on TV."

"If I didn't exercise every day I'd be huge. I love food but I watch what I eat. I have one meal a day, usually at noon, with maybe a small salad late in the day. But I never eat anything after 5 o'clock."

Simmons said some 190,000 people exercise every week in his studios and that 4.5 million people watch his TV show. He estimates millions of tons of fat have been burned off by his adherents.

"The coed classes are inhibitive to some women," he says. "They are embarrassing to a lot of men because the women are better at it. My cassettes are wonderful for people who aren't yet ready to work out in public."

Only nine years ago Simmons was the 195-pound proprietor of Derrick's restaurant, an in place for Hollywood's in people.

The temptation to gorge himself was, of course, overwhelming. He gave up Derrick's to fly to Europe for six months of study with a nutritionist. He returned to Beverly Hills seven years ago to open Ruffage, a salad bar and exercise studio that caught on with Hollywood's trendy set.

Simmons became a regular member of the "General Hospital" soap opera cast for three years playing himself, becoming famous, spreading his own fitness gospel.

Churchill: He did everything to excess

By VICTOR WILSON
Newhouse News Service

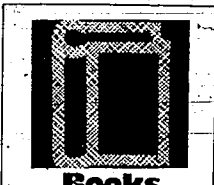

He was baptized Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill (1874-1965), and it is unlikely our era will see his like again.

Son of an American mother described as a "wanton" and an English lord (who contracted syphilis as a youth, and eventually died of it), Churchill conquered a lonely, sickly childhood.

He fought and defeated his schoolmates; his college mates; his military mates at Sandhurst (the British West Point) and his country's enemies abroad in India and Africa. Then he fought in the trenches in France, against his political enemies in Parliament, and finally the Nazis in World War II.

Writing in the first of a two-volume biography, "The Last Lion: Winston Spencer Churchill: Visions of Glory, 1874-1932," (Little, Brown, $25), author William Manchester says, "When he refused to yield to human frailty, in his inner world, there was no room for concessions to weakness. He never complained."

"In his 70th year he flew to councils of war overseas spanned across a tick mattress on the floor of an unheated World War II bomber. During the 10 years after VE Day, he suffered a heart attack, three bouts of pneumonia, two strokes and two operations.

"Nevertheless, he continued to build the image of a tireless embodiment of manliness, who ate, smoked and drank, all to excess ... Actually, most of the stories about his alcohol intake are myth."

"Once (Churchill) asked Frederick Lindemann ('The Prof'), a close friend and a top British scientist, how many boxcars could be filled with the champagne he had drunk in his lifetime."

"The Prof replied, 'Only part of one.'"

"Churchill smiled, and said, 'So little time and so much to achieve.'"

Author Manchester continues: "In his most famous photograph he is seen glaring at the camera, his jaw jutting like the butt end of a gun, the incarnation of defiant Britain."

"The Canadian photographer, Yousuf Karsh, who understood him, caught the expression by a trick. Just before he triggered the shutter, he reached out and yanked Churchill's cigar from his mouth ..."

"If you look closely ... you may catch a glimpse ... of a man ruled by his instincts ... in triumphing over his physiology, Churchill had become an aggressive extrovert ... and it was that, not his surface toughness, which changed the history of the world ..."

Manchester is the author of 14 books, including "The Death of a President," "The Arms of Krupp," and "American Caesar," which have been translated into 18 languages. He is adjunct professor of history and writer-in-residence at Wesleyan University.

Adolf Hitler became Churchill's personal bete noire, but "it would be fatuous to suggest that the Nazi-Hitler was his only significance for Churchill was as an answer to an emotional longing," the author writes. "Churchill was no warmonger ..."

"Here," at last, was pure evil, a monster who deserved no pity, a tyrant he could claw and maim without admonishment from his scruples. By provoking his Titanic wrath, the challenge from Central Europe released enormous stores of long-suppressed vitality within him.

"In the beginning, Hitler responded in kind. He, too, was a hoarder of rage, and he was a great hater. He may have felt that Britain's Prime Minister met an ache in him, too. As it turned out, he needed Churchill the way a murderer needs a noose ..."

Churchill once remarked that his idea of a good dinner was to dine well, and then "to discuss a good topic — with myself as the chief conversationalist."

"At one meal with his son, Randolph, when the latter tried to make a point, Churchill barked, 'Don't interrupt me when I am interrupting!'"

And in 1945, after the Third Reich's collapse, and his own astonishing ouster as Prime Minister by Britain's voters, he remarked, calmly:

"For my part, I consider that it will be found much better by all parties to leave the past to history, especially as I propose to write that history myself."

And he did — in fascinating after fascinating, fat volumes, which achieved a worldwide audience.

Barron's latest 'worthy of Le Carre, Greene'

By United Press International

"KGB Today: the Hidden Hand," by John Barron, (Reader's Digest Press, $19.95).

John Barron is known for taking the often plodding world of real-life espionage and extracting from it the high drama and riveting excitement of personal involvement. His latest book is worthy of the reputation, sometimes taking spy-novel genre to the levels of Le Carre and Greene.

"Levchenko had no idea what he would do in America," he writes in "KGB Today: The Hidden Hand."

"He did know that he could no longer flee from himself, his thoughts and beliefs. Work no longer could be an opiate anesthetizing him against his feelings and convictions. The more he toiled for the KGB, the more he sensed the spirit of the KGB, the more he loathed himself for being part of it, for abetting it."

The man in question is Stanislav Levchenko, a KGB major who under cover as a Soviet journalist, operated a "high-level espionage operation in Japan in the mid-1970s — until he defected to the United States in 1979, purportedly disillusioned with the ruthlessness and hypocrisy of his work."

Barron's fourth book, his second on the "KGB," created a furor in both Washington and Tokyo before publication over advance reviews charging the KGB had recruited prominent Japanese to influence opinion or spy on Japan and its allies.

A senior editor at Reader's Digest and award-winning former reporter for the Washington Star, Barron does interviews with Levchenko and other sources and spins a chilling picture of the KGB's worldwide activity — including a worrisome discussion of its U.S. network.

There are sections in which plausibility becomes obstructed by a lack of corroboration for some of Barron's assertions, notably his treatment of Soviet influence on the nuclear-freeze movement. Of course, often this is made necessary by the reluctance of "experts" to be identified.

But he appears to take Levchenko, largely at face value and he does get a bit preachy in parts, sounding more like a cold warrior than a reporter when he discloses the Soviet system smothers the spirit of Russia and strangles the lives and hopes of its people.

Nonetheless, there is fodder enough to make the book a valuable tool. And Barron has simply made the reading intriguing.

"Report on the Shroud of Turin," by Dr. John H. Heller, (Houghton Mifflin, $19.95).

Centuries-of-controversy surround the Shroud of Turin.

Purportedly the burial garb of Jesus of Nazareth, this ancient linen cloth with its life-sized image of a man has been branded an artist's forgery. Now, after four years' research conducted by 40 American scientists, John H. Heller presents us with the facts gathered during this period.

The researchers used the most modern lab techniques in conducting their tests, and Heller's description of the team's approach and findings reads like a detective story.

Approximately 2,000 years old, the hand-woven shroud measures 14 by 3 1/2 feet. It shows the front and back of a man. His hands cross his pelvis. Puncture wounds mark his top wrist, his feet and his right side. Body incisions indicate he suffered scourging. Numerous lesions surround the crown and forehead of a face that reflects serenely.

All signs point to death by crucifixion. Obscurity mars the shroud's history. It is thought to have been stolen from the Eastern city of Constantinople during the Crusades. In 1356 it appeared under the ownership of a French knight, with no reference as to how he obtained it. During the past 400 years it has belonged to Italy's royal House of Savoy. Since 1978 it has been kept in the Cathedral of St. John in Turin, Italy. There it has been displayed several times each century.

Although details of the death marked by the image on the shroud run very similar to those attributed to Jesus in the Gospels, it is important to note that crucifixion was a common form of Roman punishment. The Roman Catholic church has never acknowledged the shroud as a relic.

Heller tells how his own skepticism involved him in this scientifically taboo subject. Each researcher took the risk of offending large parts of the population — no matter which way the evidence went. They could not quit had they wanted to because they were fascinated. They were hooked.

No conclusion was reached by the researchers, but Heller said the image was "an extracanonical witness to what happened to Jesus Christ, whether the man in the Shroud was Jesus or not."

"America Wants to Know, The Issues and Answers of the Eighties," compiled by Dr. George Gallup, (A&W Publishers, $19.95).

Dr. George Gallup's broad survey of over 500 matters facing an inquisitive public is a masterful undertaking.

America's pioneer pollster established his foundation for this study by searching for 100 questions asked most by the American people. Once the questions were determined, Gallup obtained opinions of leading authorities on each subject.

- Some of the questions:
—Has anyone come close to finding a cure for heart attacks or cancer?
—Why can't the U.S. auto industry compete with the Germans and Japanese?
—Is there any scientific evidence to prove the existence of God?
—Is there proof that vitamin pills are effective?
—What is the best way to stop smoking?
—How much radiation is escaping into the air?

Among the contributors are such well-known experts as Dr. James Pauling, Isaac Asimov, Leon Jaworski, Norman Cousins, Dr. Michael E. DeBakey, Dr. Mary S. Calderone, Robert L. Heilbroner and B.F. Skinner.

Some of the answers are encouraging. For instance, it is often said

Abby apologizes for 'insensitive' reply

DEAR ABBY: What's the matter with you? Are you on vacation? I can't believe you wrote the answer to "The Johnsons" who were hurt because their son consistently addressed his letters to "The Johnsons" instead of "Mr. and Mrs. Johnson." They thought it showed a lack of respect and asked you if they were wrong to feel that way.

Abigail Van Buren
Dear Abby

enough to do so!
I enjoy your column, Abby, but this time your answer lacked your usual sensitivity and understanding. I think you owe "The Johnsons" an apology.

—AN EDITOR IN OHIO
DEAR EDITOR: The Johnson letter—and my "insensitive" reply—unleashed an unexpected blizzard of mail, pro and con—mostly con. But you're right. I do owe Mr. and Mrs. Johnson an apology, and I hope they will forgive me. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I think you erred in your response to "The Johnsons," who objected to the manner of address on their son's letters.
Respect is a social modality in and of itself, and should not depend on the misfortunes of others, or proper appreciation that a son cared enough to write. His manner of addressing his parents was in my opinion disrespectful.

—REV. ROBERT G. EPPLER,
LOUISVILLE, KY.

DEAR ABBY: Shame on you for chewing out the Johnsons when they sought your help for what you consider to be a problem of relatively minor importance. They simply asked whether or not their son was showing them the respect due parents when he addressed their letters to "Mr. and Mrs. Johnson."

As an advice columnist you are expected to handle all problems, big and small, with equal compassion and understanding.
