Cancer, stroke claim Len B. Jordan at 84

LEN B. JORDAN Protected Idaho water

BOISE (UPI) — Former U.S. Sen. Len B. Jordan died Thursday night, two days after suffering a stroke while hospitalized for treatment of cancer and heart disease. He was 84.

Jordan, also a former Idaho governor and Magic Valley resident, died at about 7:25 p.m. at St. Luke's Regional Medical Center, said nursing supervisor Juanita Sathre. The Republican was admitted to the Boise hospital June 17 for treatment of coronary problems and metastatic cancer. His condition worsened after he suffered a stroke Tuesday, said his son, Joseph.

Jordan was the first person in the state's history to leave the Senate voluntarily. He retired in 1973 after a 16-year stint in Congress and was succeeded by fellow Republican James McClure, who now is chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

Ms. Sathre said Jordan's family declined to make immediate comment on the senator's death.

She said the former senator's body was taken to Summers Funeral Home. Funeral services were scheduled for 2 p.m. Tuesday at the United Methodist Church in Boise.

"The loss of Senator Jordan is like the falling of a magnificent tree in the political forest," said Idaho Republican Chairman Dennis Olsen, Idaho Falls.

The GOP chairman said he remembered Jordan as a specialist in water issues in Idaho, the nation and abroad. "I think his work with respect to water would be one of his outstanding contributions, and I remember him for his practicality, the way he approached the problems, and his integrity," Olsen said. "His service to Idaho was unparalleled as governor, senator and legislator."

Gov. John Evans, a Democrat, also praised Jordan as "a great statesman and leader."

"He served most ably as U.S. senator and as governor," Evans said. "We worked together on natural resource and water resource development issues. He will go down in history as one of Idaho's great statesmen who worked hard to develop those resources for the citizens of the state."

After his retirement, one of the largest state buildings in the Capitol Mall surrounding the Idaho Statehouse was named after Jordan. Jordan, who retired in 1973, was born in Mt. Pleasant, Utah, on May 13, 1899, and grew up in Enterprise, Ore.

At age 18, Jordan enlisted in the Army to serve in World War I and earned an officer's commission. After the war, he worked his way through college at the University of Oregon and continued with postgraduate study in economics.

Jordan, his wife and children moved to a remote ranch on the Snake River below Hells Canyon during the Great Depression. There, they lived in a stone house — much of which Jordan built with his own hands and raised sheep on 18,000 acres of range.

Ten years later, Jordan sold the ranch and moved to Camas Prairie. It was there that he was elected to the Idaho House of Representatives. After two years in the legislature, he was elected governor in 1950.

After serving his one gubernatorial term from 1951-55, Jordan was appointed by President Eisenhower to head the U.S. section of the International Joint Commission, which worked out agreements between the U.S. and Canada on joint use of water resources.

Following this, Jordan was selected as one of 12 members of the International Development Bank.

Helping out

Lela Hoyer is comforted by a friend after a collision at Shop Avenue and Fillmore Street in Twin Falls shortly after 5 p.m.

Thursday, Hoyer was northbound on Fillmore when a car driven by Randy McNeill, 18, of Twin Falls, failed to stop at a stop sign and was broadsided by Hoyer's pickup. Rescue personnel, left, worked to free McNeill from his car. McNeill and his passenger, Ron Hendricks, 16, of Twin Falls, were treated and released at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Sun Valley road plan fires merchant opposition

By ELLEN MARKS United Press International

BOISE — A contingent of Mountain Home residents told the state Transportation Board Thursday their local economy would be wrecked by a proposed new road that one resident said deserved the Golden Fleeced award for wasteful spending.

Elmore County Commissioner Bud Riddle told the board the proposed eight-mile road designed to bypass a portion of U.S. 20 would serve only the "recreational community" traveling between Boise and Sun Valley.

The proposed two-lane highway would run east and west, linking Tollgate on U.S. 20 with an Interstate 84 overpass about eight miles northwest of Mountain Home.

The road would reduce the distance between Boise and Sun Valley by 11 miles compared to the current route, which carries traffic to the interstate at the Mountain Home city limits, Transportation Department Director Darrell Manning said.

He said the board decided to consider seeking $12.3 million in federal funds to build the road on requests by residents in Boise, Sun Valley and Camas County, through which U.S. 20 runs.

About 60 residents attended the informal meeting, requested by Mountain Home officials. Manning said the board is considering whether to apply for the federal funds. If funds are granted, board members initially would set aside the land for future development of the road, which could take up to 20 years to build.

Camas County Commissioner Al Baüscher told the board the proposed bypass would be "very beneficial" to farmers because it would cut truck mileage and reduce shipping costs for the nearly 80,000 tons of hay that leave the area.

"If you cut 11 miles off their (truckers') route, there would be a tremendous savings to rural people who pay shipping costs," he said. "But Chamber of Commerce Vice President Dave Stephens said the cutoff would hurt the economy in Mountain Home because many stores are dependent on tourists traveling through the area."

"Any loss of traffic through our community will mean loss of business and jobs, especially during the summer months and skiing season," Stephens said.

Mountain Home businessman John Hiller said the board should maintain the current highway system rather than building new roads.

Jury deliberates

DUI trial debate ends

By ANN D. KIRKWOOD United Press International

BOISE — Virginia DeMeyer will be tormented the rest of her life with memories of the accident in which her car struck and killed two children, the lawyer for the suspended deputy Idaho attorney general told jurors Thursday.

William Brauner in his closing arguments to the Fourth District Court jury, said convicting the 30-year-old defendant of drunken driving and involuntary manslaughter would subject her to an injustice — and not bring back the children.

Mrs. DeMeyer — suspended from her job as a deputy attorney general for the Idaho Employment Department following the Oct. 4, 1982, accident — dabbed tears from her eyes and choked back emotion as Brauner told the jury his client was innocent.

The closing statements came as retired Judge Arthur Oliver announced an attempt had been made to intimidate a juror. He said the family of one juror had contacted him about a telephone call Wednesday night.

The judge offered no other details but said he was investigating the incident, which he called "not too serious."

At press time, the jury was still deliberating.

Brauner said Mrs. DeMeyer and the children merely were victims of a series of events that left the defendant blinded by the glaring sun as she drove along Idaho Highway 24 the evening of the accident.

As she summed her eyes, she swayed to the right in a natural urge to keep out of the lane of traffic, Brauner said. But in the process she collided with Wesley Black, 12, and his 10-year-old sister, Joy, who were riding a bicycle and wagon along the highway's emergency stopping lane.

Special prosecutor Glen Walker contended in his closing arguments that the state had proven its case against Mrs. DeMeyer. He said her admitted consumption of at least four glasses of wine and one gin in the 3½ hours before the accident left her with an estimated blood-alcohol content of 1.1 percent above the legal limit of .08 percent.

"She got drunk and drove down the highway and killed the kids," Walker said.

Arafat loyalists brace for last-stand warfare

By HUGH POPPE United Press International

TAAHBAVA, Lebanon — Yasser Arafat loyalists went on alert Thursday for an expected last stand at the Palestine Liberation Organization stronghold in Tripoli with Syrian-backed rebels routing their forces in the Bekaa Valley.

In Tunis, Arafat presided over an emergency meeting of the PLO's Executive Committee to discuss the revolt in his PLO guerrilla group, the largest in the Palestinian organization, and Syrian military backing for the dissidents.

A rebel supporter said Thursday the dissidents expected to clear out all pockets of resistance in the Bekaa by Saturday and then mount a drive toward the loyalist headquarters in Tripoli.

"Everybody is on alert, and we are being cautious," said an Arafat spokesman in the northern port of Tripoli, which became loyalist headquarters after Arafat transferred his command center from Damascus last week.

Arafat's deputy military commander, Khalil Wazir, known as Abu Jihad, said a press agency "WAPA" have been operating out of the city.

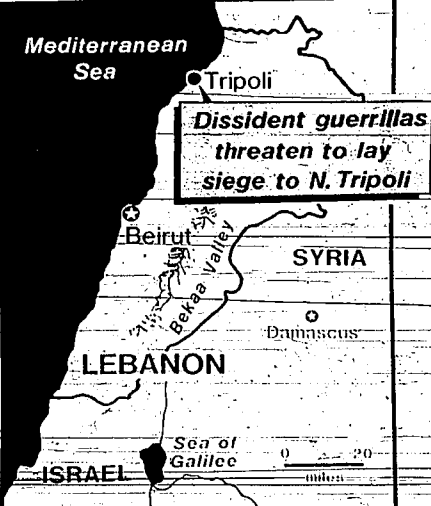

The beleaguered guerrilla chief offered his resignation to a group of Palestinian officials a week ago in Damascus but it was turned down toward Baalbeck — another major Arafat stronghold.

Lebanese police reports said the PLO fighting subsided Thursday after a night of clashes. State-run Beirut radio said the rebels backed by Syrian tanks had pushed northward toward Baalbeck.

Syrian tanks and security forces surrounded the key eastern Bekaa town of Chitaura, on the Beirut-Damascus highway, cutting loyalist supply routes to Baalbeck.

WAPA said Syria had warned Arafat's troops to evacuate besieged bases in the Bekaa, indicating "another explosion of the situation and a continuation of the battles."

A spokesman for the PLO in Tunis said "the Syrian army had set up

Teachers organize positions

Mondale talks shop

By SENEAD GRESSIN United Press International

PHILADELPHIA — Former Vice President Walter Mondale, stumping for the endorsement of the nation's largest teachers union, blasted President Reagan Thursday for making public schools the "doormat" of his policies.

"I want to be the best president American education ever had," Mondale told delegates at the 17-million member National Education Association's annual convention.

Mondale was the first of a stream of Democratic hopefuls to appear at the convention to seek the NEA's endorsement, which is expected to bring with it more than $1 million in contributions and the help of thousands of volunteer campaign workers.

Later in the day, U.S. Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, spoke to more than 200 delegates, mostly from Ohio.

"I firmly believe that America became what it is today... because people put up a school house, got a teacher and put kids in school," Glenn said. "It hadn't been like that in Europe."

Glenn also criticized the Reagan administration for cuts in education funding and called for a return to "excellence" in the country's schools.

With the nation's educational system under a heavy firestorm and looming as a major issue in the 1984 campaign, at least three other Democratic presidential aspirants also planned to attend the convention — U.S. Sens. Alan Cranston of California, Gary Hart, Colorado, and Ernest Hollings, South Carolina.

70,000 youths still avoid draft
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Selective Service System said Thursday the names of 70,000 youths who have not registered for a possible draft are being sent to the Justice Department for possible prosecution.

The Justice Department had no comment, but critics have said the department does not have the manpower to fully enforce the registration law.

The list is the largest since compulsory registration of all men on reaching the age of 18 became law three years ago. Only 15 young men actually have been indicted so far for defying the law.

A Selective Service spokesman said letters would be sent to the 70,000 on the list, warning them of possible prosecution and offering them a last chance to change their minds.

The names will be sent to the Justice Department by week's end, he said.

55 Angola hostages released
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — A group of 55 Czech and Portuguese men, women and children arrived at Johannesburg's international airport today after more than three months as captives of Angolan guerrillas.

The group, including 21 children and 10 Portuguese men, were flown out of guerrilla-held southern Angola by aircraft chartered by the International Red Cross, which negotiated their release.

Wearing maroon and white track suits, the freed hostages filed into the VIP lounge at Jan Smuts airport and a welcoming reception complete with tables heaped with chicken, sausage rolls, meatballs and fruit.

Red Cross officials would not allow journalists to talk to the hostages.

The freed hostages were among 64 Czechs and 20 Portuguese captured March 12 in an attack by anti-communist UNITA guerrillas on a paper mill complex in Alto Galumbela in the former Portuguese colony in central Angola.

U.S. balloonists die in crash
FRANKFURT, West Germany (UPI) — American balloonists Mader Anderson and Don Ida were trying to avoid flying over communist East Germany when they crashed to their deaths in a failed landing attempt, officials confirmed Thursday.

Haas Ohl, spokesman for Frankfurt air traffic controllers, said Anderson, 48, and Ida, 49, had unsuccessfully tried to obtain permission to fly into East German air space by radio from their helium-filled balloon.

The wind was pushing them toward East Germany and at their request we tried through the Foreign Ministry in Bonn to get permission for them to cross the border," Ohl said. "But this was refused."

Race organizers said all the balloonists were refused permission to cross into East Germany before the race, but Ohl said Anderson and Ida had tried the East Germans themselves on the chance they might get clearance.

He said once they were refused permission to enter East Germany the two highly-experienced balloonists prepared to make a routine landing that tragically went wrong.

Fighters faceoff over Mideast
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The aircraft carrier USS Eisenhower sent two jet fighters to intercept a pair of Soviet-built Libyan MIG-23s over the Mediterranean, a warship, the Pentagon said Thursday.

The swing-wing MIGs turned back for home.

The intercept by the two F-14 Tomcats occurred Wednesday about 25 miles north of the Libyan coast and 108 miles away from the nuclear-powered carrier, Pentagon spokesman Henry Cotto said.

Airliner goes up in free ride
AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — City officials and a gaggle of well-wishers were expected to greet the first of more than 350 Nellville, Wis., residents who plan to visit Texas because of an airline goof.

In all, more than 350 people from the heart of Wisconsin's dairy country took advantage of a blurb by Midstate Airline that offered to fly people to Austin for $44.99 round-trip, instead of the usual $98.

Nellville, Wis., a town of 2,700, was expected to send 350 of its residents for a visit to the Texas Hill Country.

A pair of the town's residents, Cheryl Glassbrenner, 18, and Rhonda Oldham, 16, were scheduled to arrive Thursday night at Austin's municipal airport.

"I'm disappointed," she said. "I'm Brian Schmidt, the owner of a Nellville tavern, told an Austin newspaper. "Tell them in Austin they better be ready, because we are coming."

Judge deals DeLorean setback
DETROIT (UPI) — A federal bankruptcy judge Thursday ordered a freeze on the $10 million proceeds from the sale of John Z. DeLorean's Logan Manufacturing subsidiary, the only substantial asset left to the accused cocaine-dealing auto maker.

Judge George Woods issued the order in favor of 600 creditors of the bankrupt DeLorean Motor Co. A. K. A. DeLorean argued the order would have "crippling effect" on their client's ability to raise cash.

DeLorean is awaiting trial in Los Angeles on charges he tried to swing a $24 million cocaine deal to save his floundering firm, DMC, filed for bankruptcy a few days after his Oct. 10 arrest.

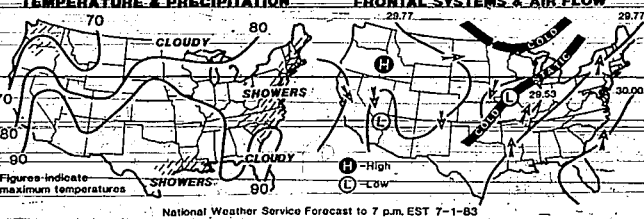

The sale of Logan Manufacturing, a snow grooming equipment maker based in Logan, Utah, was scheduled to take place Friday.

Reagan issues budget warning
LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — President Reagan warned Thursday night that failure by Congress to approve his full package of economic and military aid to El Salvador would "risk an explosion of violence that will bring real danger to our own borders."

After nearly two days of campaigning for his back-to-basics formula for education reform, Reagan switched gears and used a $1 million political fundraiser as a forum to deliver some of his toughest rhetoric to date on the threat of communism in Central America.

It was Reagan's final appearance before starting a four July fourth vacation at his mountaintop ranch near Santa Barbara.

Twisters strike the Midwest

By United Press International
Storms packing up to 70 mph winds and hail Thursday pelted a wide stretch of the nation from Texas through the Midwest, damaging buildings and knocking out power.

Tornadoes barreled through southern Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Winds from 40 to 70 mph in Corleona-Texas, damaged the Church-Curtis-Kill and a mobile home. There were no injuries. Power lines were down and an unknown number of people were without electricity.

In Arkansas, Lynch Hall was reported near Arkadelphia and Curtis.

Tornadoes struck the Minnesota communities of Mayer and Gaylord near about 20 miles west of Minneapolis. Farm buildings were damaged near Mayer.

High winds overturned several mobile homes and downed trees. Gusts to nearly 60 mph when a thunderstorm passed through Mankato and golfball-sized hail pelted Franklin.

High winds and hail swept through northwestern Wisconsin. A twister struck Sashora, but no damage was irremediably reported.

Large hail damaged several cars in Douglas County. Marble-sized hail was reported in Ashland County and golfball-sized hail and winds knocked out power in parts of Bayfield County. Strong winds destroyed a barn and damaged the roof of a house near Cadwater, Mich. Winds downed trees and power lines in Marengo and near Marshall.

With the death of Sen. Henry Dvorzhak in 1982, Jordan was appointed to fill his seat in the Senate and was elected to the post in November of the same year.

Although in his 70s, Jordan was still spry and an effective senator. During his stay in Washington, D.C. he was accused by a robber at his apartment. The senator punched him in the face and succeeded in fighting off the intruder.

After Jordan retired, he remained active in relationships he said he thought were important and which he may have neglected in his political days.

"I've come to regret that I've neglected some of the most important things," Jordan said in 1979. "No one likes to give up the Senate, but I thought I owed it to my family to be more available."

the death for MX but he won't lift a finger for education," Mondale said in a prepared videotaped statement to be aired during the convention for some 8,000 NEA delegates.

"Mr. Reagan ought to be ashamed of himself for making public schools the doorman of his campaign," said Mondale, who also told delegates his mother was a teacher.

Among issues faced by teachers at the convention is a spate of national reports critical of the state of education in the United States, including a recent report by the National Commission on Excellence in Education that found public schools educated by a "rising tide of mediocrity."

In addition, the NEA will be electing new officers. Mary Hatwood Futrell was unchallenged in her bid to become president of the union, a job that would make her one of the most powerful black women in the nation.

The NEA has barred formal addresses by the candidates to the entire convention, but allowed them to use videotapes, appear at caucuses of state delegations, host receptions and open convention booths.

Mondale, who addressed a meeting of 175 members of the Pennsylvania NEA delegation Thursday, reminded delegates he has called for an $11 billion federal education program.

Glenn, in his prepared videotape speech, called education "our best hope for meeting the challenges of tomorrow."

"What at stake is nothing less than America's economic and technological leadership," he said.

roadblocks (in Lebanon) to hinder the movement of PLO fighters."

The loyalists had withdrawn from Chitaura to the bordering towns of Taalabaya and Saldanyel where they anxiously watched from doors and windows.

Abu Saleh, head of Fatah forces in Taalabaya, said five of his soldiers had died and seven others were wounded in a midnight attack on nearby rebel positions. There was no other information on casualties available.

"We are surrounded by the Syrians who make our movement very difficult ... They take away our guns," a Fatah loyalist in Taalabaya said. "We cannot go out, only only communists (with our other forces) is by radio."

A rebel supporter said the dissidents were mopping up their week-old offensive in the Bekaa Valley and were preparing to drive toward the northern port of Tripoli.

"Arafat is stronger in the north, Tripoli. Once we have finished in the Bekaa, we will turn to Arafat in Tripoli," said Ahmad Hout, of the Libyan-backed Popping Front for the Liberation of Palestine General Command.

The PLO chairman recently transferred the command center of his forces in Lebanon from Damascus to the Tripoli region.

Palestinian sources said the Tunis meeting was attended by all but two of the Executive Committee's 15 members. The absentees represented pro-rebel groups.

The 6-week revolt in the PLO erupted over rebel charges that Arafat was too moderate in pursuing the armed struggle against Israel. Charges by Arafat that Syria was aiding the rebels led to his expulsion from Damascus last week.

FBI called into 'book affair'

By JUDI HASSON
United Press International

WASHINGTON — As President Reagan insisted "I haven't done anything to apologize for," the FBI disclosed Thursday it has entered the investigation of how Jimmy Carter's briefing papers found their way to Reagan's 1980 campaign camp.

FBI spokesman Roger Young said the bureau joined the case late Wednesday at the request of the Justice Department, which has been reviewing hundreds of pages of material turned over by the White House this week.

"The FBI entered the case ... for the purpose of determining who acquired the documents and how," he said. A House subcommittee also is looking into the matter.

Reagan's alleged use of Carter papers surfaced in a book by Time magazine correspondent Laurence Barrett, who wrote that a briefing book prepared for Carter's climactic Oct. 28 televised debate with Reagan apparently was slipped to Reagan's campaign by a "mole."

A spokesman for Budget Director David Stockman said Thursday, while Stockman was not the source of the report, he did discuss the Carter papers with Barrett and described them as "illegally."

"The New York Times suggested in its editorial column that Reagan apologize to Carter for the briefing book affair. Reagan was questioned about the matter while wrapping up a visit to Pioneer High School in Whittier, Calif."

"We don't know how that happened and I never knew there was such a thing. So we'll wait and find out," the president replied, noting he personally ordered the Justice Department to look into the matter.

"I've said all I need to say. I asked for this and they're doing it. I haven't done anything to apologize for," Reagan said.

Kidney transplants end in suicide

CHICAGO (UPI) — Suicide is a significant cause of death in kidney transplant recipients, doctors said Thursday in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"The psychological trauma and depression associated with end-stage renal disease and transplantation may be devastating," said Graeme F. Washer of the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center in Denver.

"Energetic, situational and psychiatric support is almost always important."

Washer and physician colleagues studied 209 patients — ages 17 to 38 who received their first kidney transplant between 1974 and 1979.

During 2 1/2 to 7 1/2 years of follow-up, 26 percent of the patients died.

Infection was the leading cause of death — 41 percent, followed by cardiovascular problems 20 percent, suicide 15 percent, gastrointestinal tract problems 13 percent, malignant neoplasms 4 percent and miscellaneous problems 7 percent.

"Eight younger patients died as a result of overt or veiled suicide, including refusal to undergo dialysis after unsuccessful transplantation," the authors said.

All but one had rejected one or more transplants.

"Many patients receiving chronic dialysis have successful transplantation as their single remaining goal," they said.

"It is therefore not surprising that the despair that may accompany graft failure and the alteration of physical appearance by steroid treatment, particularly among younger patients, can lead to suicide."

Economic report still on upswing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The latest economic statistics, from house sales to leading indicators, keep promising a stronger economy, but ominous signs of higher interest rates may jeopardize the future.

Even as the Commerce Department released its May measurement of house sales, a 648,000 annual rate that was the highest since August 1980, analysts said mortgage rates were pushing up-

The May sales rate was 4.35 percent above April and was the fourth month of the previous five to show improvement.

Chief economist of the Mortgage Bankers Association, Mark Riedy, said lenders were charging up to 7 premium points on Wednesday to FHA borrowers, the same pressure that forced the federally backed FHA rate up half a point on June 7 to 12 percent.

Riedy said conventional mortgage rates were being pushed up to as high as 13.5 percent.

"Where you really start slowing down housing demand."

Housing industry spokesmen said the record high $39,700 price tag for the average new house in May would "not help sales" either, although it reflected increased sales of better units to people moving up from their existing house, not price increases.

Tuition tax ruling will harm education

The U.S. Supreme Court's ruling this week to permit special tax breaks for tuition costs of private schools is a serious blow to the principles of democratic education on which America long has depended.

The court's decision to uphold a Minnesota law allowing such tax advantages was a close 5-4 vote, in which the court held that the Minnesota law in question was neutral, neither advancing religion nor entangling the state in it.

But despite the narrow ruling, the decision opens the door for a federal proposal closely paralleling the Minnesota statute. Such a law, in our opinion, would have several serious effects.

First, it would greatly further the growth of essentially all-white "academies" in the South and elsewhere in the nation. These schools were founded as little more than devices to avoid racial integration. While they have cloaked their purposes in high-sounding language about educational quality, that remains one of their main purposes.

A tax advantage at this time would, in our opinion, go a long way toward sanctioning the further division of America into two systems, one public and predominantly for minorities and "working" people, the other predominantly white and upper middle-class.

Two, the ruling signals a major change in the philosophy of American education, which long has been egalitarian and non-elitist in nature. A tax break of this kind means, in effect, that the principle of mass education, open to all and supported by public funds, can be eroded. Down that road may lie the kind of class-based education system that dominates European society. Is that what we want?

Three, we do not agree that a law that is nominally "neutral" toward religion is the same in principle as in practice. In practice, the Minnesota law is of most benefit to parochial schools, which remain, in that part of the country as in the West, a dominant non-public educational alternative.

It seems to us that the law, in fact, breaches the wall of separation between church and state. That is the position taken by the four dissenting justices.

The ruling, in our opinion, is a mistake, and we hope it will be overturned quickly or substantially modified.

'NOW, THINK DOES THE NAME CASEY MEAN ANYTHING? DOES CIA MEAN ANYTHING? DOES EL SALVADOR? NICARAGUA? CARTER BRIEFING BOOK? YOU RECALL NOTHING?'

Mr. President, it's BASIC, not basics

BOSTON — At times I have the unhappy feeling that the President of the United States is suffering from computer illiteracy. He doesn't seem to speak the lingo of LOGO. He keeps talking about going back to basics instead of forward to BASIC.

Anyone following his political lead-in across the country these weeks — if this is Wednesday, it must be Louisville — would suspect that he's living in the "Misinformation Age."

Many education problems won't be solved by more money but by getting our money's worth for what we already spend. The target may be excellence but it's not one he thinks we should throw dollars at.

From where I sit, however, in front of a video display terminal, the notion that he can cut the federal funds for education and raise the tide of mediocrity qualifies as Voodoo Education.

It's true that money can't buy the love of learning. There is much that can be done with no more loose change than a change of mind. But if you want a hint of the true cost of getting our education system up to date and to speed, try computing it.

There's little doubt about the need and value of preparing the next generation for their hi-tech futures. Even the President noted it in his State of the Union Address last winter.

Sen. Frank Lautenberg (D-N.J.), the hi-tech son of a man who worked in a textile mill that doesn't exist any longer, also talked about it in a speech to the Senate this month. He brought it down to the academic level. "In an age that demands computer literacy," he said, "education without a computer is like a school without a library."

At the moment, there are a lot of schools without these "libraries." For all the talk of an "explosion" of deductible advertising cost.

Not doing get me anything. I just feel Swenson might be a little bit resentful of his four store tax bracket while having to accept food stamps for a living, not to mention government subsidized produce.

of computer use in education, there are no more than 100 terminals and microcomputers for 45 million school children. If kids are to get skills in using computers as a tool — which is what a vast proportion will do as adults — they need more than a few minutes a week, more than one computer for every 100 students.

Marc Tucker of the Carnegie Project on Information Technology and Education calculates the idea formula this way: "Suppose we want a reasonably capable computer for every four students and we have 40 million children in public schools. We need, then, ten million work stations — with that kind of market, the price of this machinery might go to, say, $1,000 a station. That adds up to $10 billion dollars. Assume again, that the state and local people pay for half. The bill still comes to $5 billion."

This may be pie-in-the-sky stuff, but any student that is going to cost plenty. As Tucker says, "There is no way on God's green earth that we'll be able to do this without very significant federal assistance."

Computers are obviously not the magic solution to the woes of education. It's as easy to misuse a computer as a slide projector. Computers are just machines and schools are just day-care centers without attracting high-quality teachers, and

I suppose by that statement, he is referring to the report of the loss of some of these loading parasites being removed from the welfare rolls.

In comparison to life in their own country, welfare in the United States is living quite high on the hog.

As for Tony Bonilla awarding President Reagan an F minus, let me inform him that the true Americans of this nation award him an A plus. And more power to him in dealing with the welfare problem.

I am sure that in Mexico and other such countries, welfare and disability payments are unknown. While here in America some minor ailment that any of the Hispanics might have will be taken care of with a disability check.

The true American citizen does not want our country to become another Mexico.

caring administrators. But they do offer one small, concrete example of real costs.

The cost of buying this hardware and software also says something about fairness, about the gap between rich kids and poor kids and how they are affected by the gap between rich schools and poor schools.

Sen. Lautenberg, who comes from a state with the third highest per-capita income and some of the poorest cities, notes that a full 70 percent of wealthy schools in the country have computers, while 60 percent of poor schools have none. Not surprisingly, the school systems in wealthy and technologically sophisticated areas are gaining an advantage.

Increasing their side of the gap — Most of us talk about computers as education tools and as part of the transforming economy. The two — national education and the national economy — are simply inseparable.

Ideally, as Marc Tucker fantasizes the future, "If they were the right sort of machines, designed to be used in schools, with trained teachers, we'd have an extraordinary improvement in reading and writing. Kids would be able to handle data, use it, analyze it, understand it, which would make an extraordinary contribution to our ability to compete with other countries."

You can't do that with mirrors.

Letters/CSI can prepare students for liberal arts

Editorial was way off base

After absorbing the entire thrust of your June 19 editorial concerning the broad spectrum of academic limitations that are inherent at the College of Southern Idaho, it became apparent that the conditions in your plea for an administrator who understands the educational status of the college should apply to the editorial staff of the Times-News also.

As an alumnus of CSI and a college professor, it was certainly enlightening for me to discover from reading the Times-News — a bastion of journalistic insight — that I was ill-prepared for the liberal arts academic career in which I have evidently been successful.

In effect, if you showed arbiters would stop beating the drum for Jerry Meyerhofer and talk to those well-qualified individuals who work in the English, Social Science and other academic departments at CSI, you could then pause to remove your feet from your respective mouths.

Indeed, CSI is not Harvard or Stanford. Even more so, the Times-News is not the Detroit Free Press or the New York Times, and your recent editorial only serves to underscore that fact.

Writer wants Hispanics out

According to the raving and ranting of a certain Tony Bonilla concerning President Reagan's policies that in his words 'have been disastrous for Hispanics and other minority groups.'

The real scandal: Who stole substance from campaigning

WASHINGTON — Washington is entering the steamy season with a ugly scandal that some people are trying to make into a great big scandal. They are looking at the wrong scandal.

What they are looking at is the story — interesting but not too meaningful — of how the loose-leaf notebook that had been prepared for President Carter to study before he debated candidate Ronald Reagan in 1980 got into the hands of the Reagan campaign.

Was there a Reagan mole in the Carter campaign? Was the briefing book fished? Did CIA Director William J. Casey, then campaign chairman for Reagan, know the book was stolen when he gave it to White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III? Did it get to Reagan?

Who cares? Try to will, the Washington Post is not going to make a Watergate out of this one, not unless it finds that someone broke into the White House to snatch the incriminating document.

Since political campaigns were created a millennium or so ago, politicians have had the occasion to be a spy for their opponent's campaign organization, (2) tried to place a spy in their opponent's campaign organization, and (3) know all the time that there aren't any secrets in a political campaign, except maybe where the money is coming from.

A political campaign in the United States is as secret as a summer concert on the Capitol steps. You don't get elected by whispering in someone's ear; you get elected by making public appearances and public speeches and issuing public press releases.

Was Reagan going to complain about inflation and glorify his experience as governor of California? Was Jimmy Carter going to try to frighten the old folks with Social Security and glorify his experience in the Oval Office? Does the earth turn?

Everything that Jimmy Carter could say about the compelling necessity of retaining his manifest capabilities before he stepped into the White House has been debated by Reagan. Everything Reagan could say about horrible things were and of the pressing necessity of installing him in the Oval Office had been said countless times before he debated Jimmy Carter.

The only new items presented in the debate were President Carter informing us of how his daughter Amy fell about things and candidate Reagan asking us if we were better off. No secrets.

The scandal is not in the possession of the book, but in the contents of the book. In the things about which a staff person feels obliged to remind the Boss. Here is a guy who has been president of the United States for four years, and he needs notes telling him to "Present Presidential Image." Now there is a scandal.

Here is a man running for re-election to the most exalted office this nation can bestow and his notes say, "Use catch phrases which people can remember (e.g. Kemp-Roth is a rich man's tax cut which will flood the treasury with dollars as fast as the printing presses could print them.)" Thus do our leaders trust us and lead us.

The scandal is not that this nothing little book got into the wrong hands; it is that it is a nothing little book. The emphasis is not substance, but imagery.

Our political campaigns are chosen to be not events in which opposing ideas compete to determine the direction in which the nation shall go, but matters of make-up, shadows, catch-phrases, fantasy, play-acting and performance. Positions are not nearly as important as postures. There is your scandal.

Rep. Donald J. Albosta, D-Mich., is chairman of a subcommittee that should have a marvelous time investigating the purloined papers. There is the wholesome hero who said they should be returned. Very sofly. There is a White House which must be wholly cooperative or be accused of a grandly cover-up of the disasterly deed.

It should make for a lullabidull investigation, full of show biz, imagery and posturing. A better investigation would be one looking at who stole issues and positions and substance from presidential campaigns.

Otis Pike, a former congressman, writes for Newhouse News Service.

Flap about fished Carter notebook just won't disappear

WASHINGTON — Much as the White House wishes it will all go away, the furor over the purloined Carter briefing book papers is not expected to die down immediately.

At his news conference, President Reagan was bombarded with questions about the propriety of his aides in obtaining and using documents that were prepared for President Carter for his debate with Reagan.

But he deftly sidestepped the issue of whether it was right or wrong. At the same time, Reagan said that politics should be above reproach.

documents to the Reagan camp. So far, no one has come forward to claim the honor. Nor has the White House identified publicly at least anyone who might have had a hand in securing the secret papers on strategy and tactics.

The mystery is how four administration officials could have received such papers without anyone knowing how they got them. Reagan himself said that he did not know that they existed and only learned about them from reports in the press.

White House aides are outraged. Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes first dismissed the briefing book questions, saying there was no inquiry in the White House. Then he passed off the issue as something that is done in politics, "and not too unusual."

But some aides with their had never seen the papers. They insist that they did not aid Reagan in the debate with Carter and that he would have triumphed anyway.

was "much ado about nothing." Nevertheless, questions remain unanswered. With the Justice Department conducting an inquiry, it appears the White House will be answering more questions as time goes on.

Carter aides are saying they believe that more than the debate books left their campaign premises. If that is true, the plot will thicken.

The president, meanwhile, says of the ethical question, "I think that campaigning has always, in the eyes of the people, had a kind of a double standard and I have deplored it. And there are the people who've said — people that are otherwise totally honest — have said, when they hear about something,

Court gives strikebreakers a big boost

By ELIZABETH OLSON
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Strikebreakers won a legal victory Thursday when the Supreme Court ruled 6-3 that they can sue to recover damages in state court if they are fired after a strike is settled.

Upholding a Kentucky appeals court decision, the ruling gives 12 strikebreakers the chance to sue their employer for $6 million for promising they would be hired as permanent replacements for striking union members, but then discharging them when the strikers were recalled.

In siding with the strikebreakers, the justices rejected arguments the right to sue was an unacceptable attempt to strip an employer of one of his primary weapons during a strike — the right to hire permanent replacements.

To allow employers to "be free to deceive," Justice Byron White wrote, is akin to arguments in "labor strikes that 'this is no war,' but 'anything goes,' and that promises of permanent employment that under federal law the employer is free to keep, if it so chooses, are essentially meaningless."

It is one thing to hold that the federal law intended to level the employer and the union free to use their economic weapons against one another but it quite another to hold that either the employer or the union is free to injure innocent third parties," he said.

The strike against a Louisville, Ky., building supplies plant was supported by the National Labor Relations Board, and some of the 400 striking workers were recalled.

Women's Rights. Reagan's Wrongs.

Leader Judy Goldsmith: Reagan is 'a disaster for women'

NOW hunts Reagan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Organization for Women Thursday launched a campaign to defeat President Reagan's bid for re-election in 1984 because he is "a disaster for women."

Saying Reagan wants to send women back to the 19th century, Judy Goldsmith, president of NOW, said the campaign would include a "truth squad" to publicize Reagan's record on women's issues and picketing of the president wherever he travels and at the White House every weekend during the summer.

Making the announcement on the first anniversary of the defeat of the Equal Rights Amendment, Ms. Goldsmith predicted the gender gap will have a major impact on the 1984 election. The existence of a gender gap is based on polls that indicate fewer women than men support Reagan.

"Ronald Reagan is directly responsible for the emergence of the gender gap," Ms. Goldsmith told a news conference. "During his campaign for the presidency, Reagan claimed to be for the 'E' and the 'W' but not the 'A'."

"Ronald Reagan is a disaster for women," she said.

Nuclear sub-proposal generates opposition

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than 100 conservation and citizens' groups filed a joint protest with the Navy Thursday against a plan to dispose of more than 100 obsolete nuclear submarines at sea during the next three decades.

The five-page joint statement was based on an assessment of the Navy's proposal as described in a December 1982 draft environmental impact statement. The deadline for public comments was Thursday.

The dumping would release more than 6 million curies of radioactivity on the ocean floor, according to Navy data, even though the highly radioactive nuclear fuel would be removed before dumping. A curie is a standard measure of radiation. The emissions from the subs would be 20 times the level of radioactivity emitted by material the United States dumped at sea from 1946-1970.

Clifton Curtis, an attorney for the Center for Law and Social Policy, told a news conference. Nuclear waste disposal in the ocean was ended in 1970.

The groups said not enough is known about the potential effect on marine life and whether the food chain could carry radioactivity to humans. It also said monitoring techniques are inadequate and the impact on coastal fishing and tourism was not even considered in the environmental impact statement.

Robbers outfox alarm trap, net $500,000 in mined gold

CERRILLOS, N.M. (UPI) — At least three hooded men armed with pistols outfoxed a sophisticated security system surrounding a gold mine Thursday and stole precious bullion worth as much as $500,000.

The haulers, apparently working with inside knowledge of the Ortle mine near this fading ghost town 25 miles south of Santa Fe, escaped in a pickup truck taken from a Pinkerton guard.

The truck was found on a dirt road three miles from the mine with some of the stolen bullion. In the form of a lead about 70 percent gold, still in it, state police investigator Rick Megin said.

U.S. may give India nuke-plant parts

By MICHAEL MYERS
United Press International

NEW DELHI, India — Secretary of State George Shultz assured Prime Minister Indira Gandhi Thursday the United States was prepared to supply parts with special heat and safety nuclear reactors — even if a presidential waiver should be required.

President Reagan's decision to provide the spare parts, if they cannot be found elsewhere, would be based on the potential heat and safety problems involved in the operation of the Tarapur reactors near Bombay, a U.S. official said.

The politically sensitive decision resolves a chronic dispute between India and the United States, which is concerned about New Delhi's development of nuclear weapons.

Two U.S. Embassy staffers, meanwhile, were killed and two others were seriously injured when their car crashed head-on with a truck as they were returning to New Delhi from Agra, where they were involved with Shultz's visit, a U.S. official said.

The embassy did not release the names of the victims or indicate their jobs, pending notification of next of kin.

Shultz met with Mrs. Gandhi on the first full day of his visit to India but the formal notification of Reagan's decision was earlier conveyed to Foreign Minister Narasimha Rao.

"Both the United States and India are concerned for the operational safety of the reactor and for the health of the employees of the plant and for the residents of the community in which they operate," said U.S. spokesman John Hughes, assistant secretary of state for public affairs.

"In so far as the need for replacement of parts to ensure these objectives is concerned, the secretary indicated that the U.S. is prepared to take necessary actions to supply those parts which are not available from elsewhere," Hughes' statement said.

India's need for the spare parts arose following the May 18 shutdown of one of the reactors.

Provisions of the U.S. 1978 Non-Proliferation Act, however, prohibit American export of the spare parts for Tarapur because India has refused to accept international inspection of all of its nuclear facilities. India detonated a nuclear bomb in 1974.

Polish rule ready for changes

ROME (UPI) — Polish church leaders visiting Pope John Paul II predicted Thursday that martial law might be lifted in their homeland next month and that former Solidarity leader Lech Walesa would return to the political scene "in another way."

Cardinal Jozef Glemp, the Roman Catholic primate in Poland, asked by reporters if he thought the military government would end martial law July 2 — the Polish national day — as a result of the pope's recent visit, said, "We think so. I believe the church would want it."

"But then this is a political question in which I have no place," Glemp added.

Asked if Walesa was being eliminated from the scene, Glemp said, "No." But he was non-committal about what role Walesa might have. Church sources said the pope asked Walesa to step down as leader of the Solidarity underground in return for a commitment by communist authorities to lift martial law.

"At this moment, I cannot be specific about it (Walesa's future role). Things are developing," Glemp said.

Archbishop Henryk Gulbinowicz of Wroclaw, who arrived with Glemp, also indicated there would be a different role for Walesa.

"He will return in another way. He is still important but not the same way as before," Gulbinowicz said.

Reached at his home in Gdansk, Walesa said he had no information about any talks in Rome involving him.

"I trusted the church and I still trust it and I'm sure that it will not do any harm to me," Walesa said in a telephone interview. "But, I really know nothing."

Sudan drops rescue plans

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Sudan Thursday ruled out a military rescue operation to save five Western hostages, including two Americans, held under threat of death by guerrillas in a remote mission station.

The guerrillas said they would kill the captured aid workers Wednesday if they are not given $189,000 and 150 sets of clothing, plus radio time on the Voice of America and the BBC World Service to broadcast their protest against the government of the east African nation.

"Any thought of a rescue is now out of the question," said a spokesman for the Sudanese Embassy in Nairobi.

"The area is a very, very remote one and is not accessible at all. Besides it is the rainy season now and the area would be difficult to approach in secrecy," he said.

The hostages are John Hayspel of Evans, Kan. and Ron Foutler of Clermont, Fla., together with Canadian pilot Martin Overduln and a Dutchman and a West German.

Army: Rebels executed 13

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — The army said Thursday leftist guerrillas executed 13 captured government soldiers by hanging them in trees on a battlefield northeast of San Salvador.

It was the second atrocity charge against the rebels in two months. It could not be immediately confirmed independently.

The army's Press Committee issued a statement saying the 13 soldiers were found hanging in trees north of Rosario Perico, a village near the town of Tenancingo, 19 miles northeast of San Salvador.

Funeral home sources said no hanged soldiers had been sent in for burial preparation. The army generally sends its soldiers killed in battle to such funeral homes.

There was no date in the army communique on when the hangings were supposed to have occurred.

It said the hanged soldiers were from the Fifth Military Stockade of nearby Cojutepeque and that they were participating in a counterinsurgency sweep in the Tenancingo region when they were captured.

Jobless workers get fewer benefits

By BOB FURNISS
Times-News writer

BOISE — Jobless workers who file for unemployment benefits will draw fewer benefits beginning this Sunday because the state is attempting to rebuild its severely depleted coffers.

Officials at the Idaho Department of Employment expect to save $13.66 million from a temporary freeze on benefits and from changes that lighten up eligibility for jobless checks that lighten up eligibility for jobless checks.

But the state of belt tightening may not prevent future money crises in the state trust fund.

"We've projected that we may have to borrow (from the federal government) periodically for the next three years," said Rudy Hoiles, department spokesman.

The state law that goes into effect today orders cutbacks in payments to people out of work. It also increases taxes on employers, the main support for the Idaho Employment Security Fund — substantially during the next three years. Employer taxes were raised an average of 28 percent on April 4, and they will increase 20 percent in 1984 and 1985 as well.

The cutbacks in jobless benefits will affect 93 percent of all claimants in one way or another, Furniss said Thursday.

Unemployed workers who have been drawing the maximum amount, $159 a week, will not receive an increase to $166 that normally would have occurred on July 1, he said. The freeze is expected to save almost $2.48 million.

Three more provisions will not apply to workers currently on the program, but will affect the benefits of people who are just getting on the unemployment rolls.

The amount of earnings needed to qualify for maximum benefits has been hiked from $3,718 a quarter to $4,004. Fewer jobless workers will be drawing the highest rate, saving $4.52 million, Furniss said.

As many as 10 percent of the prospective claimants also will be ineligible to sign up for unemployment benefits because of a $266 increase in the minimum earnings required, and because of an increase in minimum weekly payments from $34 to $44, the spokesman said.

Applicants now must have earned at least $1,716 a quarter during their base period to qualify. These two changes will save $5.86 million, according to department projections.

Finally, rounding off benefit amounts in weekly checks to the nearest dollar will save $800,000.

Scott McDonald, director of the state employment department, said the actions taken by the Legislature are necessary to rescue the job insurance fund from insolvency.

"The devastating impact of a national recession resulted in Idaho suffering one of the highest prolonged unemployment rates in the nation," McDonald said in a prepared statement. "This resulted in depleting the state's benefit fund by April of this year."

The fund was drained to $400,000 at its low point, whereas accepted standards would demand a healthy job insurance fund to have somewhere between $120 million and $190 million for benefits and reserves, Furniss said.

If the state and its employers had not batted out the system with higher unemployment taxes, the businesses would have lost higher rates credit on their federal taxes and still have had to keep contributing the existing amounts, McDonald said.

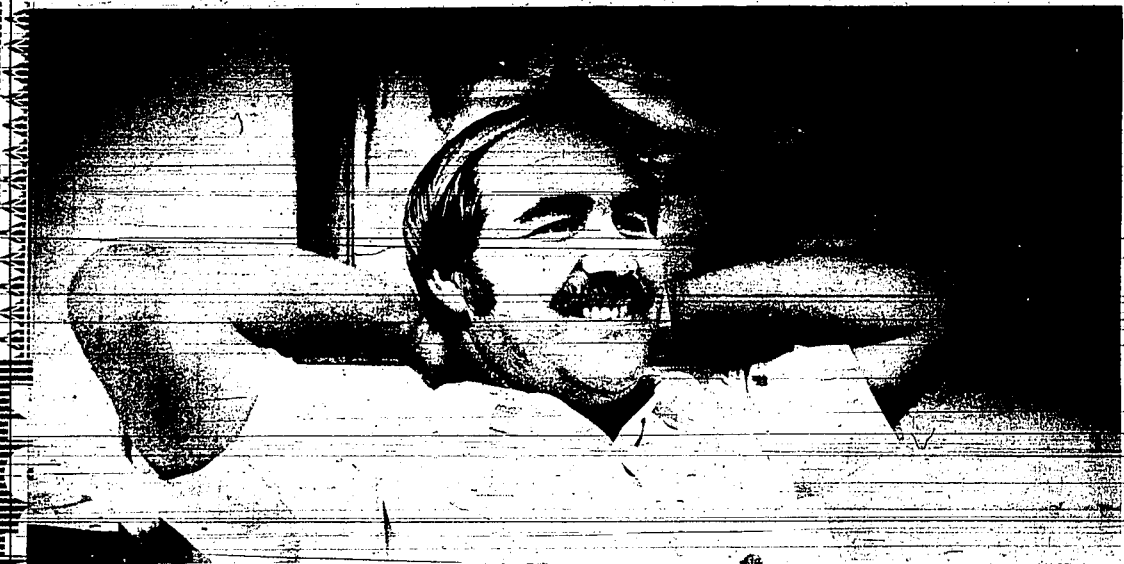

To date, the state agency has managed to avoid borrowing from the federal government, as other states have done. But, with the numbers of unemployed high and with accounts dwindling, lawmakers created a method of borrowing as a cushion for the future.

The new law creates a separate fund and authorizes taxes to pay off interest due the federal government, if necessary.

Idaho could find itself in that position again, depending on the economy, Furniss said.

"We're still hovering at an extremely low balance in the trust fund, but we've entered a period in the fiscal year when collections are at their highest point," he said.

At the beginning of next year, when collections normally are low and benefit payments normally are high, the fund could be in trouble, again, Furniss said.

If you do not keep up with your child support payments, chances are you will meet Ike Carson from the state Bureau of Child Support Enforcement

Child support collector faces threats on the job

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When Ike Carson goes to work each day, chances are he'll receive a threat. One day, the tires were flattened on his truck. Another time, sand was poured down the gas tank.

"It's all part of the job," Carson is the regional supervisor of the state Bureau of Child Support Enforcement.

Carson and the other enforcement officer, Leon Martin, are responsible for collecting child support from absent fathers when the mothers are not getting money from the state Department of Health and Welfare's Aid to Dependent Children (ADC) program.

They also collect payments from both parents for children in state foster-care programs or institutions. The funds help repay the state and federal governments that fund and administer the welfare programs.

The lion's share of their time, however, is spent on ADC cases. As part of the welfare benefits, a mother is required to sign over to the state all her child support payments as long as she receives benefits, he says. This amount, in addition to the state, includes unpaid support payments.

If the woman is separated from her husband and receives no child support, Carson's office goes to court and obtains a payment schedule.

If a child is born out of wedlock, the bureau staff helps establish paternity so that payments can be arranged. His office handles 35 to 40 such cases a year.

Throughout the investigations, the mother must cooperate in locating or naming the father — or she could lose her benefits, under the welfare rules. There are some cases where mothers must pay support. This, however, is rare.

The regional office currently is handling 2,500 cases. This is more than three times the number of active ADC cases. The reason for the discrepancy, there may be four or five children with different fathers in one family. And, each of them would owe support for their child, Carson says.

Since it was created in 1973, the bureau

City staff salaries compare favorably

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls municipal employees are paid at levels comparable to those of the area's private sector, a recent city-financed salary survey shows.

The study also shows that pay levels do not vary more than 1 or 2 percent from the average of four other Idaho cities, says Bryce King, the city's finance director.

The study was undertaken under the direction of King and City Manager Tom Courtney because of a suspicion that pay levels may have been knocked out of line recently due to a number of factors, such as pay freezes and inflation.

"We don't want to be the top payer, but we do want to be fair with our employees," King says.

Robbie Maughan, a technician in the city's engineering department and this year's chairman of the municipal employees committee, says the committee feels the survey was fair.

No group of city employees other than the firefighters is represented by a union, although the employees committee, composed of one representative from each department, has existed for some time.

The survey shows that jobs at the lower end of the pay scale fare well in a comparison with the private sector, King says.

For example, the city hires laborers in its street department at $37 a month and secretaries at just over $800 a month, he says.

But salary competitiveness starts to drop off in the $18,000 to $20,000 range, he says. The discrepancy becomes particularly acute at such supervisory levels as crew foreman, police lieutenant and Fire Department battalion chief, he says.

However, the city manager is rewarded handsomely, in comparison with other orders of the City Council, King says.

The study did not assess the pay scale of management positions, although Maughan thinks this would have made it more useful.

The second part of the study shows that Twin Falls pays close to the average of four other Idaho cities. According to the 1980 census, two of these communities — Lawton and Idaho Falls — are larger, and the other two, Coeur d'Alene and Nampa, are smaller.

"King says there was more behind the study than just seeing 'if anybody needs a raise.'"

"So, important factors in the internal equilibrium between positions. And at least one policy change will be recommended on the basis of the study. The city administration will propose expanding from three to four the number of pay 'steps' at each salary level."

King believes the city will reap

Cheese preferred over milk

TWIN FALLS — It appears that Magic Valley families like cheese more than rice and instant milk.

The South Central Community Action Agency had more than 65,000 pounds of rice and nonfat dry milk to hand out to eligible low-income households last month. But after the 1416 distribution, there were more than 400 cases of the commodities left over, says Carol Clett, the agency's service coordinator.

When the agency gave away 33,000 pounds of U.S. Agriculture Department cheese in May, there were only 41 cases left over. More than 5,000 households received an allotment in the distribution, Clett says.

The agency does not yet have the figures on the number of households that received packages of rice and milk. But it appears the response was not as good, and she does not know why.

"I can't understand why there isn't the interest in the instant milk," she says.

The remaining rice and milk will be distributed through the emergency bank at the Twin Falls SCCAA office.

There also will be a smaller-scale giveaway next month in Weyburn, and Burley, Clett says. She welcomes anyone interested in the food bank at the nearest SCCAA office.

Persons who did receive rice and milk in the latest distribution will not be eligible for more until after 30 days.

Next fall, the agency plans to distribute more rice, milk and honey to low-income families, Clett says.

Citizens want help to build new jail

Committee decides to seek free federal aid in planning and designing county facility

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A citizens committee studying the Twin Falls County Jail has decided to seek free federal help to plan and design a new facility.

At the same meeting, held Wednesday night, federal jail inspector Jim Stanger of Twin Falls told the group that a new jail is necessary and costly, but it also could be profitable.

With the committee's blessing, the county will apply for aid to the National Institute of Corrections, an agency of the U.S. Justice Department. The institute offers free advice on how to plan, finance and design jails, says Sheriff Jim Mann.

If the county's application is approved, experts would evaluate the jail and report their findings at a public meeting. The institute also would send four persons from the county or the committee to attend a week-long seminar in Boulder, Colo., on the building of jails.

Mann says the county probably will apply this week and should hear back from the institute within two weeks.

Earlier in the meeting, Stanger warned the county that it is "sitting on a time bomb" without an adequate jail facility. Stanger, who is the agent with the U.S. Immigration Service office in Twin Falls, also has taken on the job of federal jail inspector.

Class-action lawsuits by prisoners claiming bad conditions because of overcrowding can result in court orders that would empty a jail, he said. One pending suit in Napa, Calif., could have that effect on Idaho jails because the state is in the same jurisdiction of the federal circuit court hearing the case.

"If the court sides with the prisoners, it could order all Idaho jails with similar conditions to 'shut the doors.'" The county's only appeal would be to the U.S. Supreme Court, he said.

A new jail would at least reduce the risk of lawsuits against the county, Stanger said.

"Situations can happen in jails, even in new jails," he said, referring to the 1982 Memorial Day beating death of Christopher Peterman while he was confined in the Ada County Jail. As a result, that county is facing a multimillion-dollar lawsuit.

Stanger said that other Magic Valley counties face the same overcrowded problem with their jails. Yet, this could be used to Twin Falls County's benefit if it built a new, larger jail.

With a larger facility, neighboring counties probably would send over some of their prisoners to the Twin Falls County Jail, because they would not have the space. This would mean additional revenue to the county because the counties

Admitted embezzler faces 14-year prison term

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

HAILEY — A Ketchum businesswoman, who has admitted using her property-management firm to embezzle more than $78,000 from investors, now faces serving up to 14 years in prison.

No date has been set for the sentencing of Judy Campbell of Ketchum, who pleaded guilty this week to embezzlement in Flinth District Court in Hailey.

She consented to rental payments to her own use during the three years that she operated Campbell Property Management Co., that company managed properties in the Wood River Valley until 1982, when it declared bankruptcy.

Campbell remained free after the guilty plea. In lieu of $1,500 bond, pending completion of a presentence investigation.

The crime carries a maximum penalty of 14 years. Bill Blaine County Prosecutor Keith Roark says he will seek a five-year sentence.

"We view this particular crime extremely serious. There are a lot of people, rather than a single entity, involved, and it's damaging to the area, not just to the people who actually lost funds, but to a number of people who depend on community development, seasonal housing and those kind of activities," Roark said.

"When people from all over the country lose substantial amounts of money in this particular type of a scheme, it's not hard for the Sun Valley-Ketchum area to get a reputation as an undesirable place to invest or an undesirable place to visit.

"So, I think more is at stake than the money that was directly lost by Campbell Property Management Co. customers," he said.

Roark's office first began investigating Campbell in August and later seized the company's financial records before filing charges.

The woman's bankruptcy petition alone indicates that at least $78,000 is missing, Roark said. But he declined to say how much more money was taken.

At least 50 people lost money in the matter, he said.

Defense lawyer Greg Fuller has filed notice that he will submit mitigating evidence, in an effort to win probation for his client.

A key element in that proposal will be the defendant's offer — and ability — to pay restitution.

"My feeling is that if a defendant admits their guilt or at least pleads guilty and makes an attempt at restitution, that they should be considered for probation because, after all, how can a person make restitution if he's in jail," Fuller said after the court session.

"You can put them in jail and punish them for their crimes, or you can try to make the people who've lost their money whole."

The question of restitution is "still open," Roark commented. But the fact that the woman's assets are tied up in bankruptcy proceedings further complicates the matter.

"There's a real problem with this much money missing. It's unrealistic to think about full restitution," he said.

Asbestos: Danger in school

WASHINGTON (UPI) — About 10 percent of the nation's public schools have crumbling asbestos insulation that is a potential cancer hazard in a million pupils and school employees, a union survey released Thursday showed.

The study by the Service Employees International Union also found that at least 20 states are in violation of federal regulations that require a record of what schools have inspected for asbestos, a known carcinogen.

Idaho was one of the states debarred from federal aid because of failing to keep necessary information on file, such as the number of schools inspected, number found with crumbling asbestos and the number that have taken corrective action.

In addition, the union noted, a government task force to monitor state asbestos detection efforts in schools has not met since shortly after it was established in 1980.

The task force said 3.2 million pupils and 648,000 employees could be affected by dangerous asbestos insulation in all estimated 10,800 schools nationwide.

"It is our belief that there is cause for concern and that every parent, every school worker, every student should demand a solution to this problem," union president John Sweeney told a news conference.

Farms asked to save water

BOISE — Idaho officials seeking to ensure adequate water supplies for the state's farmers should encourage more efficient irrigation methods, the director of the Western States Water Council said Thursday.

Craig Bell said officials also should collect more data on the Snake River as they determine the best way to avoid depleting the widely used resource.

Bell and several others addressed a joint meeting of two task forces studying allocation of Snake River water rights.

The legislative and gubernatorial-appointed committees were named after a state Supreme Court ruling last year that gave Idaho Power Co. the right to 400 cubic feet per second of water at Swan Falls Dam.

The ruling raised concerns about the availability of water for irrigation and uses other than hydroelectric generation.

Bell said other states are trying to preserve their water supplies by encouraging farmers to adopt more efficient pumping methods.

Officials claim Idaho will have extra money

BOISE (UPI) — While preparing to issue the books on fiscal year 1983, state officials were guessing Thursday that Idaho legislators might find themselves juggling millions of dollars in extra revenue next winter.

State Public Instruction Superintendent Jerry Evans said he figured there may be $10 million to $20 million in 1984 funds available to the Legislature when it convenes next January.

"It's not because of any numbers I've seen, but a feeling I have," Evans said.

Due to emergency budget-balancing measures passed by the 1983 Legislature, revenue left over at the end of the fiscal year — midnight Thursday — was to be funneled into the Public School Income Fund.

The action was taken because a revenue-rollback forced lawmakers to order officials to delay paying the final fiscal 1983 public school funding allocation until fiscal 1984.

But of the $2 million that officials three months ago expected would be needed from FY '84 revenues to make that final payment, only a portion actually will be necessary. That's because fiscal 1983 tax collection rates surged after lawmakers passed the emergency bill.

Therefore, the state could have available many millions of dollars above the amounts budgeted for fiscal year 1984 programs, two officials said Thursday.

Evans noted that the amount of revenue left over at the fiscal year turning point would have no bearing on that final, delayed fiscal 1983 payment to local school districts.

But any money left over will be sitting unallocated when the 1984 Legislature convenes, and some lawmakers may want to put the funds into beleaguered programs.

Steve Seward, administration of the state Financial Management Division, said Thursday he could not speculate on the exact amount of money that may be left over. But he said it would equal a "substantial" portion of the $42 million.

Infant steelhead killed by mysterious disease

BOZEMAN, Idaho (UPI) — Officials at the Dworshak National Fish Hatchery say millions of young steelhead trout have died recently of a mysterious virus-caused disease called IHN.

Virtually all of the young fish from the 3.5 million eggs taken this spring have been destroyed by the disease, said hatchery manager Wayne Olson. He said only about 300,000 young fish remain from the Dworshak stocks.

Despite the heavy losses, officials said they still need to salvage enough fish to perpetuate the Clearwater River's steelhead run. But they admit that hope is in jeopardy.

Some young steelhead first were kept safe from the disease by being kept at the Kooksia National Fish Hatchery. But they later were moved to Dworshak, and officials said they smolts now are beginning to die by the hundreds.

They said this year's epidemic means the hatchery can only hope to release 1.8 million smolts if almost all of the remaining fish at Kooksia survive.

Based on a 1-percent return, that would bring 18,000 adult steelhead trout back to the Clearwater system. This year's run from the hatchery was estimated at 25,000.

The lower numbers could mean changes in fishing regulations for the fall of 1986 and spring of 1987 steelhead seasons, said Steve Pettit, Idaho Fish and Game Department senior fishery research biologist at Lewiston.

Several incidents occurred during local Boy Scout outings, and some took place at Schmidt's home, Haynes said.

"The boys who went with him were under the impression that they were on Boy Scout activities," Haynes said.

Man admits to sex offenses with Boy Scouts

CALDWELL, Idaho (UPI) — A 38-year-old man who admitted engaging in sex acts with a Caldwell Boy Scout during an outing last summer has been ordered to seek treatment for his sexual attraction to children.

James Phillip Schmidt of Nampa received a suspended sentence and was placed on 10 years probation Wednesday on the condition he receive a "personality" evaluation at Johns Hopkins University Hospital in Baltimore, Md., officials said.

Canyon County Deputy Prosecutor Lansing Haynes alleged police interviewed 16 scouts and their parents and documented an undisclosed number of cases in which Schmidt engaged in sex with juveniles, and several others in which he solicited sexual favors.

The boys who went with him were under the impression that they were on Boy Scout activities, Haynes said.

Bear incident ends camping

ISLAND PARK, Idaho (UPI) — The raid of an unoccupied tent by a bear in the Targhee National Forest of Idaho prompted forest officials Thursday to close the area to all overnight camping.

Forest spokeswoman Marion Bouillon said a bear, believed to be a grizzly, ripped into a tent late Wednesday in the Targhee Creek drainage along the Idaho-Montana border west of Yellowstone Park. The animal stole food from the canvas shelter, she added.

The incident follows an attack by a grizzly Saturday which claimed the life of a Wisconsin man who was dragged from his tent in Yellowstone Park and mauled to death.

Ms. Bouillon said officials have decided to permit daytime picnicking, fishing and hiking in the area, but have banned overnight stays on an indefinite period.

Jaeger whips Billie Jean at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Andrea Jaeger, a gun-chewing teenager who was not even born when Billie Jean King first appeared at Wimbledon, dismissed the grand dame of tennis 6-1, 6-1 Thursday to advance to the final of the $1.4 million championships.

"I have no excess," said King, a six-time champion. "She just cleaned my clock that's all."

Jaeger moves into Saturday's showdown against defending champion Martina Navratilova, who was easily overcoming with a 6-1, 6-1 victory over South African Yvonne Vermaak in a mere 36 minutes.

In the men's semifinals today, John McEnroe, the 1981 champion and a finalist the past three years, meets Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia and No. 12 seed Kevin Curren of South Africa. Unseeded Chris Lewis of New Zealand. The winners will meet Sunday for the title.

Jaeger's 56-minute victory was a triumph of youth over experience. The 18-year-old from Chicago won with astonishing ease against her 39-year-old opponent.

"I was surprised at how easy the match was today because I expected it to be a rather long, hard match," said Jaeger, the No. 3 seed. "I was able to concentrate on every point and get myself really into making the shot. I had confidence today and was never intimidated by the fact that I was playing Billie Jean King."

"I felt great today, great physically, but she was just too good. I couldn't keep the ball in play today. I couldn't do anything I wanted. She returned well off my serve and I couldn't develop any strategy."

King's reputation was of no consequence to Jaeger.

"Some of these kids were only two years old when I was number one and they don't know me at all," she said.

Jaeger's baseline game was impeccable. King looked to charge the net but was passed down the wings or beaten by lob. The youngster's fierce returns of service took the sting out of her opponent's game. And the outcome seemed certain to the nostalgic center court crowd when Jaeger broke King's serve in the opening game. King held in the third game but that was her last success of the set.

After holding serve in the first game of the second set, Jaeger forced three break points. King saved each one to hold serve but Jaeger reeled off the next five games before winning on her second match point when King overhit a backhand.

King hinted that an era may have closed at Wimbledon.

"I took a last look this day," she said. "I had a last look round back over my shoulder when I left the center court in case it was the last time."

Navratilova, seeking her fourth title, lost her opening serve to love but the rest of her match was embarrassingly easy. The champion put to rest any hopes Vermaak had of an upset, running through the next six games and taking the set in just 16 minutes.

Navratilova produced stinging volleys and ground strokes to pin her opponent to the baseline. The 3-foot-10 South African, ranked 35th in the world, was victimized by her sheer power. Navratilova strung together another six consecutive games after Vermaak held her first serve in the second set.

Navratilova, who has lost only 22 games in her six titles, offered some advice on how she would play herself.

"I would break her left arm," she said.

Navratilova, who holds a 10-4 advantage over Jaeger, said she will tough to beat Saturday.

Andrea Jaeger slams a backhand during her 6-1, 6-1 victory Thursday over Billie Jean King.

"I have never felt this comfortable at Wimbledon before," she said. "I never hope for tough matches and I am glad that I had to play Yvonne in the semis. I never had to meet the big guns because someone had taken care of them for me; but I had to face the winners of those matches." While acknowledging the strength of Jaeger's game, Navratilova said she wished she were playing Chris Evert Lloyd, who was eliminated in the third round.

"I am not expecting an easy match in the final because I know Andrea will not lay down for me," Navratilova said. "She is always a tough opponent and deserves to be in the final. However, I wish I was playing Chris, but Andrea has played well enough to be in the final."

Another football league?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Holding its inaugural news conference just six blocks from the headquarters of the U.S. Football League, the International Football League Thursday announced plans for another spring football venture beginning in 1984.

The NFL introduced its 12 franchise owners, each of whom had to put up $2 million in upfront money. Jerry Saperstein, chairman of the league's executive committee, said expansion plans call for four teams in Japan and four in Australia by 1985.

The initial franchises are proposed for Florida, either Miami or Fort Lauderdale; Houston, Houston, Chicago, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, New Orleans, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, the San Francisco Bay Area and Tennessee. Teams will be stocked from free agents and a college player draft.

The 12-team-USFL, bolstered by two-year contracts with ABC and ESPN, began its first year of play in March, with the league championship game slated for July 17 in Denver.

Saperstein, whose father, Abe, created the Harlem Globetrotters, said the NFL is financially secure for its initial season.

"We hope to make money right away," he said. "We're perfectly well financed to sustain losses. We are currently negotiating with several networks and we remain confident there's a place for our exciting brand of football."

Former Los Angeles Rams Coach Ray Malavasi, listed as a "football consultant" to the NFL, said the new league has won his over.

"When I first heard about the idea, I was very skeptical," said Malavasi, "but when I saw the type of people involved I became very confident. I think we have a very viable product to bring to the American people."

"We do not profess from conception that we will offer the kinds of players found in the NFL, but it won't take us long to get up to or better the level shown in the NFL," said Paul Zarymoff, co-owner of the proposed Tennessee franchise, to be located in either Nashville or Memphis.

Other players might not seek help, he thinks

Howe's penalty worries MLPA boss

KENNETH MOFFETT, MLPA executive director

NEW YORK (UPI) — Kenneth Moffett, executive director of the Major League Players Association, said Thursday he fears the fine levied against Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Steve Howe will deter other players from seeking help for drug and alcohol abuse.

Howe was fined $54,000 and placed on three years' probation Wednesday by the Dodgers — with the approval of Commissioner Bowie Kuhn — upon the pitcher's release from a cocaine abuse therapy program. The size of the fine matches Howe's salary for 30 days, the time he was away from the club.

Moffett said the Players Association would "more than likely" file a grievance against the Dodgers.

"To my knowledge this is the heaviest fine ever against a major-league player," Moffett said. "You have some lives at stake here, you have the whole human element. I feel this could put a chill on players coming forward if any other problems crop up."

Kuhn's policy of amnesty for players coming forward only applies to a first offense. In Howe's case, it was the second time he underwent treatment for his drug problem. He attended a five-week treatment center last fall at a facility chosen by the Dodgers. Kuhn also said Howe sought treatment last month only at the request of the Dodgers.

"The Commissioner and the management of the Dodgers have unfortunately taken the position that by being unsuccessful in his first attempt to recover, Steve has committed a punitive offense," Moffett said. "He also said that before the first five-week treatment period expired, Howe felt it was obvious he was receiving the wrong kind of treatment."

Howe was admitted May 28 to the Care Unit of Orange County, Calif.

Moffett cited a case 12 years ago in which an impartial arbitrator ruled that a player whose conduct and performance problems were caused by illness would be placed on the disabled list and not be subject to discipline.

The player in question — Alex Johnson — had an alcohol problem, however, while Howe's involvement is with an illegal substance.

Howe pitched an inning his first night back with the Dodgers Wednesday night in a 13-2 loss to San Diego.

Most Sawtooth sites open for holiday

TWIN FALLS — Most campgrounds and picnic areas in the Sawtooth National Forest will be open and operating for the fourth of July weekend.

The Butte Ranger District reports that all campgrounds will be open for the three-day weekend with the exception of Thompson Flat and Brackenberry in the Albion Division and Clear Creek in the Raft River Division. All other campgrounds and picnic areas in the South Hills are open with the exception of Bostetter Campground, which has its access blocked by a road washout. Rock Creek Guard Station will be open Saturday and Sunday to issue firewood permits and provide information to Forest visitors.

Many roads in the Ketchum area remain closed due to recent flood damage. Warm Springs Road is open to Ereshman's Bend and closed beyond. The road up Deer Creek is blocked just beyond Clarendon Hot Springs. Baker Creek Road is open, but very rough. Only high-clearance vehicles such as pickups and four-wheel drives should use this road. Trail Creek road is open. Hiking into the Pioneer Cabin is difficult since the Corral Creek road is out. The East Fork openings are the Little Wood River drainage and the trail to Horton and Baker lakes.

In the Fairfield Ranger District, the Couch Summit Road is still closed. To reach the campgrounds and trails in the Big Smoky area, Forest visitors may use the Wells Summit Road. Baumgartner Campground along the South Fork of the Boise River is open; however, travel beyond Baumgartner is not advised due to road damage.

Visitors to the Sawtooth National Recreation Area will find all recreation sites open. Sawtooth National Forest Supervisor Roland Stoleson reminds visitors that it is illegal to use, possess, and transport fireworks in the Forest. Violators will be subject to a $500 fine and have their fireworks confiscated.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Great athletes are born, with instinct. Joe Delaney died with that instinct that allowed the underzated running back to thrive as a running back in the National Football League—also led to his death Wednesday when he jumped into a downtown waterhole in Monroe, La., in an attempt to save three drowning children.

His teammates and staff members of the Kansas City Chiefs recall the 24-year-old player's toughness for water during his two training camps. He'd often beat the 100-degree summer heat at William Jewell College by jumping into the school's indoor pool after practice and splashing around. But it was always in the shallow end; he never swam; he merely frolicked. He was a marginal swimmer at best.

Delaney knew he belonged on land running with a football, not in water swimming laps in a pool. But when the rain-swollen pond swallowed up those youngsters Wednesday, Delaney, the father of three small children, knew there was only one thing to do. He went after them.

"Everyone knew he was a great football player," Kansas City guard Tom Condon said. "But that was only a small part of what made him so special to us. He had a tremendous heart. As a young rookie (in 1981), he played with cracked ribs, a broken wrist, a sprained knee. . . Then he had the courage to come back in his second year after suffering detached retinas in both of his eyes, knowing that there was a chance he could lose his sight.

"When those little kids needed help, he gave up his life trying to save them. He wasn't a swimmer. He didn't have any business being around water, much less trying to save someone else who was drowning. You just can't put it in words. The man had a tremendous heart," he was saying."

And kids were special to Delaney. He had three daughters: 7-year-old Tamika, 4-year-old Crystal and 4-month-old Tasha. Beyond that he was a big brother to every kid in his hometown of Haughton, La. (pop. 1,500), where he returned each winter when the season ended.

When it was learned in May 1982 that Delaney suffered a detached retina in his right eye — "Sugar Ray's disease," he called it because of its similarity to the injury that ended the career of boxer Sugar Ray Leonard — he did not ponder his future as a football player. He pondered his future as a father.

"My first thought was whether I'd get to see my two kids grow up," he said at the time. "Football had always been the most important thing in my life, but now it was second. I want to play. . . but I want to see her (Crystal) grow up."

Kids were the reason Delaney was in Monroe on the day of his drowning. He heard a television station was sponsoring a "Kids Day" at a city park and piled a bunch of youngsters from his neighborhood into his car for the 30-mile drive to Monroe.

Witnesses said Delaney warned the children not to go near the water. He was playing softball with those youngsters when he heard the frantic screams from the waterhole.

"The instincts that told the 5-foot-9, 185-pound Delaney when to cut uphill, when to duck, when to get out of bounds — instincts that enabled him to rush for a club-record 112½ yards en route to being AFC Rookie of the Year in 1981 — told him to save those children."

Two of the three children in that creek drowned along with him but the third managed to swim to safety.

"Kids were very special to Joe," said Les Miller, who brought Delaney to Kansas City as player personnel director of the Chiefs. "Just walking down the street back home you could see all that Joe meant to the kids of Haughton. He loved kids; he was a big deal to them and they were a big deal to him."

Joe Delaney leaves behind a record of accomplishments. He finished as the all-time leading rusher at his alma mater, Northwestern Louisiana, and also set four club rushing records in his brief stay with the Chiefs.

"I played against the best," said Houston defensive end Elvin Belcher after Delaney had rushed for a club-record 183 yards in a 1981 game against the Oilers — Guys like O. J. Simpson, Gale Sayers and Walter Payton — and Joe is right up there with them. He's great with a capital G."

But his legacy as a football player is hardly worth mention compared to the legacy Delaney leaves behind as a human being.

Towns are poppin' for holiday weekend

Buhl's Sagebrush Days billed as good old-fashioned 4th of July celebration

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — An old-fashioned, all-American Fourth of July celebration is what Buhl Sagebrush Days is all about.

Families and friends will gather from miles around this Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday to join the annual Independence Day fun.

This year's celebration will be "a purely patriotic," says Jack Ramsey, president of the Buhl

Chamber of Commerce, which sponsors the event.

"American Pride" is the theme of the festival which offers a parade, rodeo, carnival, dances, baseball and horseshoe tournaments, downtown sales, food and, of course, fireworks.

The three most important elements of Sagebrush Days are the family activities, the patriotic theme and the community effort, Ramsey says.

Although the chamber sponsors the event, practically every major organization in town is responsible for one of the activities, he says.

Thanks to the Kwanis Rotary, Buhl Recreation Association, West End Ministerial Association, Shriner, Buhl Rodeo Association, Senior Citizens Center and the city staff, Sagebrush Days is a success, says Ramsey.

This year, there will be two new events added to the long list of weekend activities.

A patriotic pageant, featuring music and skits, will be held Friday night at Bowers Field. The program will be highlighted by the Magichords, a barbershop chorus; Harold Shelton, a local singer; and Bobbie Vinyard, a young gospel singer.

The second new event will be an encore to the American Legion Baseball Tournament on Monday night. Some "oldtimers" will be taking their chances in a game against the 1983 team.

Ramsey says the 1986 baseball team is "very well known and fondly remembered." The game will go on for three or four innings, or until dark, or "they'll play only as long as the 1956 guys can last," Ramsey says.

The other traditional features of Sagebrush Days, which have made Buhl famous for nearly 20 years, will continue again this year.

Starting last Monday, high school members of the Future Farmers of America have been decorating the downtown parking meters with sagebrush, the festival's trademark, chosen many years ago simply because of its abundance in these parts.

Two of the main events, the parade and fireworks, are set to go for Monday.

Ken Curtis, a longtime Buhl resident and former businessman, will serve as marshal for the parade. As of last week, there were more than 75 entries in the parade in the categories of civic, private, horse-drawn, commercial, antique vehicles and riding clubs.

Rupert's 4th a tradition

By THOMAS MOHRLANG
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — Rupert area residents are gearing up for the annual Fourth of July celebration, a tradition in the community that began some 53 years ago.

Throughout the years, persons from the neighboring towns of Burley, Paul and Heyburn have converged on Rupert to celebrate the Fourth, making it the largest Independence Day celebration in the Mini-Cassia area.

The event, which begins today and climaxes Monday, is centered around two locations, the city square in downtown Rupert and the Minidoka county fairgrounds, located east of the city on the old Pocatello highway.

Today begins with a breakfast on the square from 6 a.m. to 9 a.m. Proceeds from the breakfast will go to maintain Christmas lighting on the square, another Rupert tradition. Breakfast cost is $3 per person, or $1.50 for children under 10.

Free entertainment on the square highlights this afternoon's events at 2:30 and 7 p.m. Horse racing begins at the fairgrounds at 1 p.m. today and concludes with a horse pulling contest at the fairgrounds at 8 p.m.

Saturday morning gets under way with five-kilometer, 10-kilometer and 20-kilometer runs sponsored by the Rupert Rotary Club. Runners will gather at the city square at 7:30 a.m. and will be taken to the various locations for the races. Trophies and gift certificates will be awarded to the winners.

Horse racing resumes at the fairgrounds at 1 p.m. and there will again be free entertainment on the square at 1 p.m. and 7 p.m.

Saturday night, the Rupert rodeo opens at the fairgrounds at 8:30 p.m. Saturday will be Kid's Night with children under 12 admitted free if accompanied by an adult.

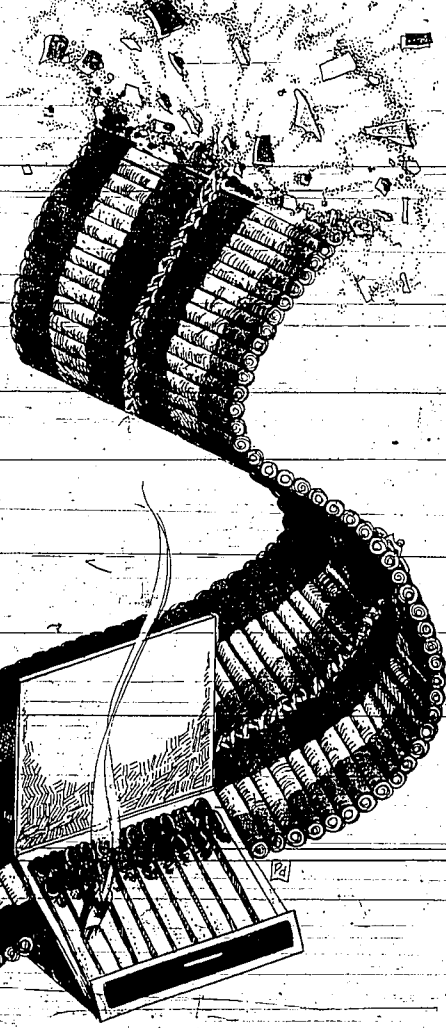

Activities on Sunday are horse racing, which gets under way at 1 p.m., and the rodeo at 8:30 p.m.

Monday morning will be highlighted by the Fourth of July parade in downtown Rupert. The theme is "Pride of the West."

Following the parade at 12:30 p.m., entertainment on the square will include the Pageant of Flags presented by the Burley Elks Lodge, the Community Education Dancers, the Idaho Old Time Fiddlers and the Sawtooth Country Cloggers.

Monday afternoon at 2 p.m., an American Legion baseball game at Minico high school will pit Minico Sage against Minico Sage alumni.

The Rupert celebration concludes Monday night at the fairgrounds with a final performance of the rodeo at 8:30 p.m., followed by a fireworks display. The new Rupert Rodeo queen will be crowned Monday night at the rodeo.

Glenns Ferry sets parade

By DIANA HOOLEY
Times-News correspondent

GLENN'S FERRY — The community of Glenns Ferry is looking forward to an old-fashioned Fourth this year, said John Taggart, Fourth of July committee chairman.

Taggart, who is overseeing the proposed parade, said "We're hoping everyone will turn out for all the activities planned during the day at the park, and we're encouraging everyone to be sure and participate in the parade."

He said the parade will begin at 10 a.m. at 308 East Idaho Street and finish at Hall Memorial Park.

Parade categories include: the mayor's float, equestrian, and commercial, with trophies awarded in each category.

An award will also be given for a car and not rod section of the parade.

Children can compete in two divisions: 8 years old and under, and 9 to 13 years old.

Taggart said awards here go to the best dressed and most colorfully decorated trikes and bikes.

Finally, there will be a trophy for the float best representing the historical heritage of the Three Island area around Glenns Ferry.

After the parade activities, especially for the children, are scheduled at the park, said Joyce Ferris, coordinator for children's activities for the Fourth of July celebration.

At noon, Parrris said races and three-legged races will begin. At 1 p.m. will be a "most patriotic baby" costume contest for all babies 2 and under. The savings money search is scheduled at 2 p.m. And at 3 p.m., there will be frog and toad races.

"One of the most exciting things for the kids is finding the money in the different contests," said Ferris. "I remember when I was a little girl and going to the fair, and seeing that magical $20 bill at the top of a greased pole."

So, in a couple of stock troughs filled with mud, will be hidden $25. The "Mud Mess" will begin at 4 p.m. At 5 p.m., will be the traditional watermelon eating contest; and at 6 p.m., there will be volleyball and tug of war, said Ferris.

In addition to these activities, Glenns Ferry will have its first Fourth of July tennis tournament. All interested participants should contact Rhonda Rice.

The day will be capped off with the annual fireworks display, which promises to be bigger and better, said Fiddle Bostick, city clerk.

Gooding cooking

GOODING — A free barbecue at the swimming pool park, beginning at 2 p.m., will open the festivities for Gooding's Fourth of July celebration.

The day's activities end with a 45-minute fireworks display at the football field beginning at 9:45 p.m.

Queen candidates this year are Tamara Johnson, Laura Jensen and Terry Kraus. The reigning queen, Michelle Kelley, will crown the new queen.

The Inland Empire carnival will be at the fairgrounds throughout the four-day celebration.

Flying for Jackpot

JACKPOT — An ultra-light air race, from Jackpot to Wells, Nev., and back will kick off the annual Jackpot Fourth of July celebration on Sunday.

Activities on Monday begin with the annual Western State Hotterling Contest at 2 p.m. In the canyon area south of Jackpot, between Shoshone Creek and Jackpot, off the old highway.

Children's games will be held at the park beginning at 10 a.m. and fireworks display will begin at 10 p.m. The fireworks will be launched from a site across the highway from the casino.

At 6 p.m. a western shoot-out will take place on Main Street.

The Fourth of July Rodeo begins at 8 p.m. Saturday at the county-rodeo grounds, followed by a fireworks display.

The evening will be capped off with a dance at the National Guard Armory, off Third Avenue South.

Another shoot-out on Main Street opens activities on Sunday at 11 a.m. The rodeo will follow at 2 p.m.

Stanley to light up

STANLEY — The mountain community of Stanley will celebrate the Fourth of July by setting off $1,000 worth of firecrackers Saturday night on the hill overlooking town across Highway 21.

Finally, on the Fourth itself, following yet another western shoot-out at 11 a.m., will be a mile-long Days of the Old West parade. The final round of the rodeo begins at 2 p.m. and at 4:30 p.m., the annual Button Barbecue will be held at the city park, sponsored by the Sawtooth Ranger Riding Club.

The Prescott Amusements carnival will be present throughout the celebration.

Albion plans party

ALBION — A "community party" is planned for Fourth of July celebrations in Albion Monday.

Celebration chairman Sue Keller says a children's parade beginning at 10 a.m., will kick off the community party.

The parade will begin at the grade school and travel down Main Street to the city park.

At 2 p.m., a patriotic program complete with patriotic speeches and singing, will be held at the Grange Hall.

Following the program, the activities will move to the city park where a variety of games and food booths will be available.

In the evening, a "stand-up-and-read" melodrama will be presented, followed by a "potluck" fireworks display after which the community will be encouraged to bring down all their fireworks and take part in the activity, Keller said.

Hailey folks gear up for three days of doin's

HAILEY — Three days of activities in Hailey are slated to celebrate Independence Day in Blaine County this week.

Beginning Saturday, an off-road vehicle parade will be held beginning at noon on Main Street, followed by a children's parade and an off-road vehicle race at the city-recreation area. Street sports, such as foot races, also will be held.

Organizers say the family-oriented event will get under way at 4 p.m. Monday in City Park.

There will be softball games for all ages, races and a variety of games for youngsters throughout the afternoon.

Dietrich to cater to families with show, picnic

DIETRICH — The Fourth of July will be celebrated with a community picnic, a talent show and fireworks in Dietrich.

The Boy Scout Troop will conduct a flag ceremony at 7 p.m. with a potluck dinner to follow.

Meat for the meal will be provided. Picnickers are asked to bring a covered side dish, salad, casseroles and the like, to add to the bill of fare.

People also will need to bring their own table service. Donations will be accepted to pay for the meat.

Bliss staging centennial bash

BLISS — A steady schedule of events has been planned for the three-day centennial celebration in Bliss.

On Saturday, a parade featuring the Air Force Color Guard from Mountain Home, large coaches from Nampa, and numerous floats will be at 11 a.m. Cash prizes will be awarded for the best entries.

A rodeo will be held at 2 p.m. at the arena north of Bliss. At 5:30 p.m., a full-course barbecue dinner will be served at the school cafeteria for $2 per person. The Old Time Fiddlers will play during a free dance at the school gymnasium at 8:30 p.m.

On Sunday, the celebration continues with the Silver Tea at the Grange Hall one block north of the Post Office. From 2 to 5 p.m., birthday cake and tea will be served without charge. Also at the Grange, there will

Jarbridge jumps, dance tonight

JARBRIDGE, Nev. — An "old-fashioned" Fourth of July weekend gets underway tonight in Jarbridge with a dance in the Community Hall with music by the Barton family.

Admission is $2.50 for adults, and $1.50 for ages 12 to 18. The dance begins at 9 p.m.

Sunday morning, at 11 a.m., a series of games and other events will be held, including a pie eating contest, a penny scramble, a watermelon seed spitting contest, an egg toss and other activities.

A bingo game will begin at 6 p.m. at the Community Hall.

Throughout the weekend, raffle tickets for a number of prizes offered by local businesses and individuals will be sold by Marguerite Nystrom and Carol Confer. The tickets are three for $1.

The prizes include a camera, a watercolor painting by Pat Henning, a handmade table lamp, an embroidered picture and other items.

Also performing during the celebration will be former Jarbridge residents, Velma and Al Franklin who play bass. Their daughter, Gretie, will accompany them on drums during a dance set Sunday night at 9 p.m. at the Restored Commercial Club House.

Mrs. Franklin's parents, Cliff and Grace Goddard, played for dances around the old mining camps years ago in the Jarbridge area.

The Barton group will play for the July 2 dance, said Lyn Barney, president of the Jarbridge Community Club.

Proceeds from all the events, which are sponsored by the Jarbridge Community Hall Fund, Inc., will be used for renovation and maintenance of the old Community Hall and to pay for the expenses of the celebration.

Shoshone serves up ice cream

SHOSHONE — The traditional ice cream social will be held Monday in Shoshone for the Fourth of July.

Free ice cream and cake have been provided for a community social by the Shoshone Chamber of Commerce for several years. This year's social will begin at 7 p.m. at the east-side ball park near the fairgrounds.

Committee chairman Charles Haster said entertainment for the social will be provided by the Sun Dancers, a north Shoshone square dance group.

A male quartet, the Doo-Bee-Wahs, made up of Shoshone residents Tim and Doran Duffin, Mike Mendall and Mark Heffernan, will sing, and a brass quartet headed by Bev Tabor will perform.

For the first time in many years, there will be a fireworks display in Shoshone.

The town's merchants are sponsoring a show that will be staged by the Shoshone Fire Department around 10 p.m.

Bliss staging centennial bash

be an exhibit of memorabilia, including old photographs, menu charts, maps, and various souvenirs of Bliss pioneers.

On Monday, the White River Race will be held at 10:30 a.m. A slide presentation, funded by a state historical grant will be shown free to the public at the Grange Hall at 1, 3, and 5 p.m.

A large fireworks display will begin in the late evening at City Park.

During the three day celebration, an antique display and art show will be open at the Trading Post, across from the Ox-Bow Cafe.

A new 82-page centennial history booklet will be on sale for 50¢ a copy, and a handmade centennial quilt will be given away in a drawing during the fireworks display.

'Ascent Into Hell' gets lost on the way

'Ascent Into Hell' by Andrew M. Greeley (Warner Books, $16.95).
Intended as a parable of God's love and forgiveness, Andrew M. Greeley's novel wanders from one sexual escapade to another in a series of poorly constructed events. But the book will sell. Curiously will compel the public to read this sexually explicit story written by a Roman Catholic priest.

Attention focuses on Hugh Donlon, the eldest of three children. Donlon's family comes complete with all the stereo-typical, Irish-Catholic sexual anxieties.

From birth his parents ordain him a priest. He conceals despite doubts created by a brief summer romance with Maria Malfreidy.

Once in the priesthood, however, Donlon becomes disillusioned by church bureaucracy. He abandons his vows when his affair with a nun forces them to marry.

He secures a position on the Chicago Board of Trade where he proves himself a successful broker. As Donlon's wealth grows, his wife declines. His marriage ends a failure.

Then fate turns on Donlon. Financial ruin and his wife's death strike simultaneously. Again he finds himself choosing between God and Maria.

Divided into six books and a prologue, each section opens with one of the seven last statements of Christ. The novel ends on Good Friday, symbolizing forgiveness and freedom.

Some people may not want to read beyond the first section, "The World Is Made of Glass," which is the next. The events fall to anger or excite. Poorly developed characters prevent us from caring. Romance and sensitivity escape the love scenes.

Conquest dominates. The elderly Mrs. Donlon clutches her rosary beads while making love.

Greeley risks misinterpretation. The Roman Catholic Church pardons these acts but it does not condone them. Greeley gives the impression one can practice what he preaches.

Alisen KlicCommons (UPI)

'The World Is Made of Glass' by Morris West (Morrow, $15.95).

The fictional Magda Lillane, kindness won't deny she was a mixed-up lady who had many good reasons for wanting to let it all hang out before a real-life Carl Jung.

But the beautiful and depraved Magda had no way of knowing that Jung, the great psychoanalyst, was in a bad way himself.

Reviews

She went to see him, anyway. Their meeting and the events leading up to it and from it are the major happenings in another fine novel by Morris West.

West got an idea for this strange story from a soap opera he read in Jung's autobiography, "Memories, Dreams, Reflections." "A lady came to my office. She refused to give her name. What she had to communicate to me was a confession."

It happened in 1913, a year before the beginning of World War I. Jung, by now a household word, had had a falling out with his mentor and benefactor, Sigmund Freud. He was having an affair with his secretary, a youthful assistant while his wife was bearing their fifth child, and he had no desire to see patients.

Add to this mental illness that had set in, manic depression, and it becomes evident Jung was in no condition to hear Magda describe her hearing relationship with her father, the murder of a rival, the mercy-killing of her dying husband, her adventures in brothels, and her thoughts of suicide.

Magda was insistent on receiving psychotherapy and Jung spent hours hearing the story of her life, occasionally interrupting to lecture her and sometimes silently repressing his lust for her.

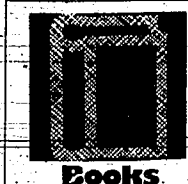

Even though West makes his reader wonder at times whether Jung is the analyst or the patient, the novel does not sink into the obvious and expected disintegration of a personality. Both parties end the long inquisition and confessional with mutual respect.

West unspools the novel by telling father, the murder of a rival, the mercy-killing of her dying husband, her adventures in brothels, and her thoughts of suicide.

'Chain Reaction' by Nicholas Guild (St. Martin's Press, $13.95). Unlike most World War II spy novels, "Chain Reaction" is set in the United States.

The plot, simple enough, revolves around a German agent's attempt to obtain the secrets of research on the atomic bomb taking place at Los Alamos, N.M.

Baron Joachim von Niehauser, a physicist, enlisted in the German

Books

Army for patriotic reasons but was severely wounded on the Russian front. His wounds make active combat impossible so he is pressed into becoming a spy.

Von Niehauser and an American turncoat who wants to help the Germans are transported by U-boat to the shores of Maine in January.

They hitch a ride with a local bumpkin and are forced to kill him. Author Nicholas Guild makes sure von Niehauser and his companion make lots of tracks in the snow so that the FBI can pick up their trail. Sure enough, the bumpkin's body is discovered in slope George Hayens.

The anticlimatic ending naturally has a duel of wits between Hayens and von Niehauser. The setting is the mountains of New Mexico in the worst storm of the century.

'Chain Reaction' will be irresistible to World War II spy fans and might make an entertaining movie. However, if its substance and spine tingling suspense that's sought, look elsewhere.

Fifteen minutes of each of the telethon's 21 hours will be broadcast live from ICRV-Namp; Channel 9 in the Magic Valley area.

The national telethon will be carried into more than 50 percent of American homes in many of the nation's major television markets. Magic Valley viewers can see the 20-hour telethon beginning 7 p.m. Sunday and ending at 4 p.m. Monday.

Forty percent of all pledges received from Magic Valley counties will be used to support local programs aimed at preventing and treating birth defects. A toll-free 800 number will be available for those wishing to pledge their support during the telethon.

March of Dimes President Charles L. Massey has hailed the telethon as a "dramatic new effort to deliver our message to the American people who have supported our efforts so generously throughout our history."

The executive producer/director of the telethon is Lawrence Binhorn, veteran of a quarter-century of television production. Producer is Norreen Conlin, art director is Bob Keene. Musical director is Joe Guercio, well-known for his work with top stars like Diana Ross and the late Elvis Presley.

L.M. Boyd's What's what

Wiretapping is an antique craft. First record of it dates to 1835. Tappers in Manhattan scraped the insulation off phone lines and alligator-clamped onto same, using headsets to monitor and notebooks to record. It was an ethical issue then as now, and almost a century of legal wrangling hasn't resolved it.

In Pigeon English, a word like "grass" can have a whole lot of meanings. Grass itself, beard-hair, fur, feathers. Did I miss any? Undoubtedly. But what else could possibly be meant by grass?

Whatever day of the week any year begins on -- Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, so on -- that year, will have 53 of those days entire.

FIBER

Q. What's the only natural fiber that doesn't have to be spun into thread before it can be woven into material?
 A. Silk

Q. Did you say the most highly paid TV entertainer was Alphonso D'Abuzzo? Who's he?
 A. Alan Alda started out with that name.

Q. Is the food in Venezuela distinctly hot like Mexican food?
 A. Distinctive, yes. Hot, no. Root seasonings with the local vegetables give most dishes there a delicate flavor.

DEPARTURE OF LOGGERS

Voices in Oregon made it clear in recent years they didn't welcome a lot of newcomers. Still, I don't think they hoped for an exodus of oldtimers. But that's what they got, unfortunately. When logging fell off a couple of years ago, 14,000 Oregonians packed up and moved out of state.

Another way to get the conversation rolling at the bar -- to quote the baseball history books which claim that pitching is 70 percent of the game.

It is also known that 11 percent of the American householders have mice in their homes, but not on purpose.

It'd rather have things to polish than things to paint, wouldn't you?

Address mail to L.M. Boyd in care of this newspaper.

Superman III not great, not terrible, it just works nicely

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

Movie sequels can be like bottles of wine. The story lines can age well or turn sour.

"Superman III" is pleasingly palatable.

The film is the third based on the comic book hero. To the producer's credit, the three have been distinct, nothing like the standard formula of the "Rocky" trilogy.

The original was a campy delight as it told how the baby from Krypton became the earthly man of steel. "Superman II" was good with its tale of three super-criminals from the home planet challenging Superman. All the while, Supe was struggling with his mortal love for Lois Lane.

The latest movie has Superman's alter ego, Clark Kent, going home to Smallville. There he is reunited with Lana Lang (Annette O'Toole), his childhood heartthrob. Lana now is a divorced mother, somewhat flaky but naively charming. It's enough of a reinjection to make Clark forget Lois.

Meanwhile, formerman Gus Gorman (Richard Pryor), an unemployed smuck, finds he is a computer genius and falls in with bad company — Ross Webster (Robert Vaughn), an ultra-rich man who wants more along with his beauty sister and script secretary.

It's his plan to use Gus' computer pizzazz for gain. (Such as causing a weather machine to turn on a storm on Columbia so he can corner the coffee bean market.)

Through Gus' work, Superman is turned evil through a bad batch of Kryptonite. He ends up doing things that take the curl out of his hair. And, the rest is typical comic-book, which is not at all bad.

In fact, most of "Superman III" is entertaining. It has more slapstick antics than the previous films and most of them are funny. There are some endearing moments about Clark going home again. And there's the spectacular, like Superman's fight with the Super-Computer designed by Gus.

Unfortunately, some parts of the movie are as slow as a Krypton orbit.

especially one where Superman is battling an industrial fire. This sequence seems to never end.

As for putting Richard Pryor in a movie with Superman, that took nerves of steel.

Yet, however fantastic the combination sounds, it works.

Pryor demonstrates his comic genius can work with almost any material. He said in an interview once that he's usually better than his films. In this one, at least, he's better than his lines.

Still, the redeeming quality of the three Superman films continues to be Christopher Reeve in the title role. He actually manages to bring warmth and relevancy to the character, wearing a cape and loafers.

Reeve and Pryor aren't exciting in their scenes together. They aren't oil and vinegar either. But they aren't.

That's about the most that can be said for "Superman III." It's not great, not terrible. It just works nicely.

George Burns: Advice giver and laugh getter

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — George Burns' new book, "How To Live To Be 100 Or More," is on the best-seller lists and counts more than getting laughs.

In addition to the chores elicited by George's observations on aging, he provides solid advice on how to attain the century mark.

Burns himself falls somewhat short. Thirteen years to be exact. He won't reach 100 until 1998.

More importantly, George's pointers on longevity include how to attain a healthy venerability. It no funneering anti-aging as a senile, doddering old party.

Burns is spry, glowing with health, mentally razor sharp. His memory is astounding. He has total recall of hundreds of lyrics of long-forgotten songs. He remembers a thousand humorous anecdotes.

There is, moreover, a tranquility about Burns that defies the stresses of show business that have driven many another star to alcoholism and drugs.

The first prescription for longevity is to be happy in your work.

"I absolutely love show business," he said. "Since I was seven years old, I wanted to entertain people. I look forward to it every day of my life."

"I have a good attitude about enjoying life. Even when I wasn't doing well, I still loved trying to succeed."

"You'll be happier and live longer if you find a job you love; that way you avoid stress."

"Never take stress to bed with you. Work on it in the morning. I don't worry. I pay my secretary. Jack doesn't worry."

"There's no way I can stand in one place for three hours and smoke a cigar. Impossible. But put me in front of an audience and I can do it every night."

George weighs about 130 pounds and stands 5-foot-7. He's rarely been overweight, convinced fat people die young.

"I'm not a big eater," he said. "I only eat one good meal a day. For breakfast I have fruit and coffee. At lunch usually just a cup of soup, like right now. And I eat lightly but a well-balanced dinner."

For more than 50 years George has arisen early. He does 45 minutes of floor exercises and stretches — situps and the like — and tops it off with a brisk, 15-minute walk around the neighborhood.

The latest book gives him muscle tone and keeps his waistline as slim as a chorus girl's, some of whom, incidentally, also contributed to longevity.

George has two or three drinks a day, sometimes more in an evening, but can't remember ever being drunk. He's never smoked cigarettes but is rarely without an expensive cigar — which he doesn't inhale.

Every afternoon, usually about 3:30, George gets into his pajamas and goes to bed for an hour and a half and drops off like a baby.

"Just as important as loving what you do is keeping busy," George said. "I wasn't too active until Irving (Fein) took over as my manager. My agents thought I was too old. Irving thought otherwise and keeps me busy."

In less than a decade, George has starred in four movies toured the country in concert, written three books, cut a couple of records and regularly stars in TV specials.

"I feel as good as I did when I was 40," he said. "I can say that after undergoing open heart surgery. I held the record as the oldest heart by-pass patient when I was 79."

He claims records for oldest star of a TV special, oldest to headline Las Vegas, oldest star to record a singing album and oldest star of a feature film: "Going in Style" at age 83.

"I'm popularizing old age," George said, grinning. "Now people can hardly wait to get old."

"To stay young you have to keep moving and doing. At 87 I can't afford to die. It would break me. I go out to dinner, a few drinks and a show two or three times a week."

Stars form comedy group

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Bob Hope, Lucille Ball, Steve Martin and Joan Rivers are among the founding members of the American Academy of Comedy, an establishment that is billed as a major show business development.

A non-profit organization, the American Academy of Comedy will promote, enhance and give recognition to comedy entertainment in varied forms.

Other founding members are Milton Berle, Dudley Moore, Redd Foxx, George Burns, Richard Pryor and Carl Reiner.

Here's the reason — A "Comedy awards" will be the organization's first major event scheduled for the fall TV season.

The show will honor outstanding achievement in comedy entertainment over the past year.

Gold mouth best take it with her

VanBuren Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I have a fortune in gold in my mouth. I'm pushing 80 and I've spent at least $4,000 for gold fillings, crowns, jacks and bridges work, and I can't see any sense in burying it with me.

Abby, after I die, why can't the mortician be instructed to remove all the gold from my mouth so my heirs can take it?

I've asked this question of at least a dozen people, and not one person could give me a straight answer. Can you? I don't want to take it with me.

DEAR PRACTICIAN IN CHICAGO: I'm licensed to practice dentistry, so if the family wishes to have gold removed from the mouth of a loved one, a dentist must be engaged to do the job.

On inquiring, I learned that engaging a dentist for this purpose would be impractical because the dentist would probably charge far more than the reclaimed gold is worth.

Even though you've spent thousands of dollars on dental work in which much gold was used, dental gold is not "pure" gold, and its reclaimed value is only a fraction of what it's assumed to be. Your dental bills represent the skill and time of your dentist, not the dental gold.

In conclusion, you can take it with you. And I suggest you do.

DEAR ABBY: With all the really serious problems you get, this is surely a minor one, but here goes. Have you ever heard of a woman found after padding to give a more shapely figure to women who have flat bottoms? I think they are called "Buns." I saw them advertised years ago, but I can't remember where.

I am a female senior citizen and have had my "all-down bones" ache constantly because I don't have any natural padding. Those foam-rubber-padded panties would be the answer to my prayers. Perhaps one of your readers will know. Thank you.

DEAR JIN: Try Frederick's of Hollywood. (Man wear them, too.)

Network gambling plenty on 'Loving'

America's 30 million soap opera addicts have a tough decision to make this week.

ABC is gambling a fortune on getting a sizable number of those viewers hooked on a new daytime soap. For that to happen, serial-lovers will have to be persuaded to "sample" the show and keep tuning in day after day.

Soap fans are loyal by nature and most daytime dramas are built around a long time (the average soap has been on the air for 18 years); but if ABC can get people to watch its new one, it could grab a bigger share of the billion-dollar advertising revenue that daytime television generates each year.

To win viewers over, "Loving" premieres as a two-hour, prime-time special Sunday night on ABC-TV. The $3 million movie, which will introduce the soap's characters and settings, stars Lloyd Bridges and Geraldine Page.

"The show itself is the star," said Agnes Nixon, creator of "Loving" and the so-called queen of daytime soaps. "A big-name star needs star treatment, which demonstrates the rest of the cast and crew in all of their glory."

Others have said that offbeat will be the star of the show. By taking over many of the elaborate sets constructed for the movie — including a $200,000 mansion to be occupied by a principal family — the soap's appointments will be lavish by daytime standards. The production budget will top $250,000 for five half-hours a week.

But ABC executives are banking mainly on Nixon's name and her 30-year track record as television's most successful creator and writer of soap operas to draw an audience. They even have enlisted her to promote "Loving" in TV commercials and in the press.

When we started "One Life to Live" (in 1976) on "All My Children" (in 1970), I didn't have any press and publicity about them," Nixon said. "They just slid onto the air and grew by word-of-mouth across the backwaters, telephone lines and the pages of magazines of America. But the soap opera form has become so much more popular and the networks have realized the financial importance of them that the interest and pressure today are tremendous.

Colorful 'Flying House'

by Kim Cooper

Discreetly children, a rollicking robot and a comically quizzical professor are passing through these hilarious, hilarious, hilarious moments of excitement and inspiration. The world has never known on CBN Cable Network's Flying House.

"Flying House" airs on CBN Cable Sundays from 7 to 7:30 p.m. (ET). Each episode is a colorful adventure based on Biblical narratives that the entire family can enjoy together.

On Sunday, July 3, the children and their robot companion take flight as Professor Bumble launches the house and crash-lands it near the ancient city of Capernaum.

The children overbear a young boy being taught carpentry by his uncle Thomas, a disciple of Jesus. Thomas is a perfectionist and becomes angry with the young student and orders him to build a chair for the disciples' table. The children, witnessing the event and sympathizing with the boy, offer to help him build the chair.

Thomas angrily returns and smashes the chair to pieces, forcing the boy to never want to be a carpenter.

The other disciples notice Thomas' behavior, tell him he's too harsh and then they light among themselves.

Several events lead to Thomas leaving and the boy's new understanding of why his uncle was so strict. The boy admits to his uncle that he was wrong.

"Flying House" ends with an explanation from Jesus that they must not judge each other lest they be judged themselves. A great lesson is learned by the disciples. Uncle Thomas and his nephew, the professor and the children
