Latin America plan new role for Kissinger

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (UPI) - President Reagan named Henry Kissinger Monday to head a special commission on U.S. policy toward Central America. He warned that America will "pay a terrible price" if it fails to aid Latin democracy. Saying the former secretary of state is "virtually a legend" in foreign affairs, Reagan announced in a speech to the International Longshoremen's Association convention that he will establish the nine-member advisory panel. Blending a conciliatory tone toward Congress with harsh rhetoric directed at Cuba, the Soviet Union and Nicaragua, Reagan urged a unified effort to resist "the first real communist aggression on the American mainland." He said the "time is now" for a bipartisan commitment "to make the United States what it should be - a loyal friend and reliable defender of democracy and human decency." Administration officials said Reagan hopes the commission, patterned after panels that tackled Social Security reform and the MX missile controversy, will ease the path to congressional approval of $100 million in additional military aid for El Salvador and avert a cutoff of covert funds to rebels battling the Marxist Nicaraguan government. Opposition to continued CIA backing for Nicaraguan rebels had led the House to schedule a secret session on the topic Tuesday. While House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters Kissinger was selected to head the commission because he is a person "who has strong credibility in foreign policy, I don't think anyone can quarrel with that." Insisting the United States has a "moral responsibility" to promote democracy in the region, Reagan warned in his speech. "We cannot afford the luxury of turning away from our neighbors' struggles as if they didn't matter. If we do turn away, we will pay a terrible price for our neglect." He maintained many Americans "don't fully understand the seriousness of the situation," despite his efforts to warn that spreading revolution is a direct threat to U.S. security. Kissinger served as Richard Nixon's top foreign policy adviser and stayed on as secretary of state under President Ford. Senate Republican leader Howard Baker said the choice of Kissinger to head the panel is "an excellent idea," but Richard Vigueire, publisher of Conservative Digest, blamed Kissinger for "the loss of Angola, Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia," and "for the giveaway of the Panama Canal." And Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., charged the new commission "may represent nothing more than another attempt to delude congressional and public opposition to the administration's policy there." "One more public adviser or study commission will not make a bad policy good," Dodd said in a statement. "What it will do is buy time for an administration that is watching time run out." Officials told reporters Reagan later will name the eight other members to the panel and that Democratic and Republican congressional leaders would appoint "senior consultants" to the study group. Reagan said the panel will include representatives from business, labor, and the academic and Hispanic communities. It is to assess the best way to attack the economic, social and political problems of the region and report its recommendations by Dec.

Northwest senators confer on WPPSS No. 3 bailout plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Northwest senators are conferring on strategy for a possible federal bailout of the Washington Public Power Supply System's plant No. 3 at Satsop, Wash., aides to the senators say. Led by Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, and Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Oregon, the lawmakers are considering attaching a WPPSS rescue provision to an Interior Department appropriations bill slated for consideration this week. The bill would involve getting permission from Congress for the Bonneville Power Administration to make direct payments to the plant. That way, which faces an indefinite construction halt. That way, lenders for the plant wouldn't have to fear their money might get caught up in a WPPSS bankruptcy. Washington state Gov. John Spellman has endorsed the plan, noting his own special panel looking for a solution to the WPPSS financial crisis won't report back to him for several months. "If an action occurs in the meantime, it is not unwelcome," Spellman said over the weekend. "We're not going to say, 'Wait until the study is done.'" However, the chances for success are considered slim at best. Rick Coakes, press secretary for Sen. Jackson, D-Wash., said "no strategy" was proposed to be added. "It's a chance at all of some realistic federal role, you bet we'll be involved in it."

Some ill-feeling toward a WPPSS bailout has surfaced in the House due to the fact that public utilities have been pressing their campaign in the Senate. "I think there is a lot of resentment here that the private power people did most of their work on the Senate side - they should be aware that Congress has two houses," said a top congressional aide who asked not to be identified. But Rep. Tom Foley, D-Wash., the House Majority Whip, discounted the seriousness of such sentiment, saying the Senate was "a logical place" to launch a WPPSS bailout. "The biggest logical default on payments for $2.25 billion worth of bonds sold for two terminated nuclear reactors. The supply system also faces a myriad of litigation over its troubled nuclear power plant program, which has seen five active construction projects dwindle to one. Last week, a group of chief executives from the Northwest's four largest private utilities traveled to Washington, D.C. The private utilities own 30 percent of WPPSS plant No. 3, which was ordered mothballed for up to three years. The executives, including John Ellis of Bellevue's Puget Sound Power & Light Co., Wendell Satre of Spokane's Washington Water Power, Donald Frisbie of Portland's Pacific Power & Light, and Robert Short of Portland General Electric, told congressmen they fear their stockholders will have to absorb a $1-billion loss if the plant is never revived.

Space station NASA to present plan to construct orbiting space facility

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The space agency will present President Reagan a proposal for its next major project, an orbiting space station, within a year. If funding is approved, it could be in orbit by 1992, NASA Administrator James Beggs said Monday. Beggs said now that the U.S. space shuttle is nearly ready for routine flights, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration hopes to get space station start-up money from Congress in the fiscal-1985 budget, begin construction in fiscal 1986 and have the station operating by 1992. It is estimated such an orbiting station will cost $8 billion to $10 billion, he said, with the first year's funding and other initial costs running around "a couple hundred million," Beggs said. "I think we will have an approved program in a really short period of time, not the end of this year but the first half of next year," he said.

If all goes well the plan should be approved in the next six months to a year," he said. The station, to be constructed in modular sections brought by the shuttle into orbit, a few hundred miles above the earth, would support several people for months at a time. It would serve as a base for research, commercial projects and spacecraft launches into higher orbit or deep space. Although several large corporations already have sent experimental projects up with the shuttle to see how the environment would affect manufacturing, the most important commercial development from space stations will be "ones we have not dreamed of," Beggs said. In addition, he said, the station would contribute to national security and serve as a vehicle for international cooperation. He called it "the next logical move" after the shuttle and said failure to proceed with it would mean the United States would lose its preeminence in space technology. He pointed out that the Soviet Union, Europe and Japan all have their own space programs. The Soviets have been in space longer than the United States and Europe has entered the field with its Ariane satellite launcher and is interested in manned space flight. Japan has indicated it too will soon enter the field. Some analysts believe the Soviet Union already has begun construction of a space station. Beggs said presidential science adviser George Keyworth expressed skepticism about space station plans at first, but is becoming more interested in the program. The administrator said Congress has been generally supportive. "Past attempts to gain approval for a space station program have been held up because of their high cost and the number of shuttle flights required," Beggs said. The latest plan would require "several" flights, but declined to be more specific.

Close vote over MX funding seen as Senate resumes defense debate

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A weary Senate resumed debate on the MX missile Monday amid growing indications an upcoming House vote on the strategic nuclear weapon will be close. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, a major Senate backer of MX, accused Sen. Gary Hart, D-Ohio, and other MX foes of holding the Senate hostage over the new missile. "The only thing that is holding us up now is the MX," he said. "That's the biggest issue left." It was the Senate's seventh day of work, including an unusual Saturday session, on a $200-billion military spending bill containing $4.6 billion for production of the first 27 MX missiles. In an amendment accepted by the GOP leadership, the Senate voted 91-0 to ban testing of anti-satellite weapons against objects in space unless the president certifies it is necessary "to avert clear and irrevocable harm to the national security." The Soviets now have a primitive but operational anti-satellite system that could "knock out" low-orbiting U.S. satellites.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., the leading Republican MX opponent, opened Monday's attack on the MX missile. "If there were ever a time to be bold, this is it. If there were ever a time to abandon political considerations, this is the moment," he said. "I urge my colleagues to say 'no' to this monument to meanness." Senate Republican leader Howard Baker told reporters he hopes to wrap up the issue by midweek without having to file a petition to cut off debate. He remained confident of victory for the MX, saying, "I don't know of any slippage (among Republicans) on the Senate side." Baker said he had heard rumors that if he did file the petition, Hart's forces planned to file 150 anti-MX amendments, which could tie the Senate in knots just three weeks before the August recess. A spokesman in Hart's office refused to comment on the rumor, saying only: "I think we want to keep those options open." In a "Dear Colleagues" letter, Hart quoted some of the missile's staunch proponents - including Tower and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger - in an attempt to bolster his arguments against the MX, a 10-warhead, intercontinental missile. "By stuffing the MXs into fixed silos, we're creating just so many more sitting ducks for the Russians to shoot at," Hart quoted Tower as saying in November 1981. "I ask for your support in opposing this program," Hart wrote. Baker also said if MX opponents are trying to keep the Senate from voting before the House does - possibly Wednesday - "I expect they'll accomplish that purpose." "I understand it's a tight vote on the House side," he added. The Senate held a Saturday session in an attempt to clean up non-MX amendments on the bill. At least seven were still pending when it reconvened Monday. The Senate's last vote on MX was in May, when it voted 59-39 to approve the release of $500 million in light-testing funds. The House endorsed the MX by a 239-186 margin last May on the same issue. Since then, perhaps half a dozen House members have indicated they will switch sides but at least 27 switches are needed.

Vatican meets one demand

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Bowing to kidnappers' demands, a telephone "hotline" was installed Monday for the man in the matter. The kidnappers listened to a tape of the purported moans of the daughter of a papal messenger abducted 20 days ago.

The unusual Vatican move was in response to the demand by the captors of the 15-year-old girl, the daughter of a papal messenger, to speak to Vatican Secretary of State Agostino Casaroli and negotiate the exchange of Turkish papal attacker Mehmet Ali Agca for the girl.

In a tape-recorded message left Sunday on the steps of President Sandro Pertini's palace residence, the kidnappers repeated their demand that Agca be freed by Wednesday in exchange for Emanuela.

The message also contained "sounds of a young woman wailing in pain and the Orlandi family confirmed that segments were the voice of Emanuela."

Mario Meneguzzi, Emanuela's uncle, told police he has "no doubts" that the section of the tape where a girl is heard crying: "Please let me sleep," is the voice of his niece.

Meneguzzi said, however, that he cannot be certain that the most dramatic section of the recording, the sounds of Emanuela apparently being tortured, is her voice. She was abducted almost one month ago.

Arrests foil Vegas bomb hoax

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Police cordoned off a block of the Las Vegas Strip Monday and evacuated two hotels after a man phoned a McDonald's restaurant and threatened to blow up the place unless the day's receipts were placed outside.

Bomb squad crews went to the scene and found what appeared to be a bomb with a large amount of TNT. But closer inspection showed the device was a fake.

Police later arrested Raymond Thomas, 35, and James Van Buren, 35, on charges of robbery, bomb extortion and conspiracy. No hometown was released for either suspect.

The incident began about 1 p.m. when a man telephoned the manager of the McDonald's restaurant and said there was a bomb in the establishment and it would be exploded unless a store employee placed the day's receipts outside the restaurant.

At 3 p.m., a branch of First Interstate Bank on the strip was held up and Thomas was quickly arrested nearby. Van Buren was arrested later.

Police Lt. Hal Miller said Thomas admitted to the bomb extortion and the bank robbery.

Victim runs car over rapist

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — A man charged with rape, robbery and attempted murder in two states was captured after one of his victims escaped and ran over him with a car, police said Monday.

Nelson Wood, 22, of South Bend, is accused of Saturday's rape in a South Bend house, where a Michigan couple was visiting. The two men in the house were tied up and the man sexually assaulted both women, South Bend Detective Chief Michael Borkowski said.

"He then took one of the women as a hostage and drove up to Michigan, where he repeatedly raped her," Borkowski said.

While in Michigan, the rapist drove the car over a metal cable along the highway. He left the car to untangle the cable from the wheels, he said.

"When he got out to push, she gunned it," and ran over him, Borkowski said.

M-19 leader reported killed

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — The leader of Colombia's guerrillas was killed in a plane crash three months ago and replaced by a three-man council that rejected a government amnesty and resumed terrorist attacks, the rebels said Monday.

The guerrilla movement, known as M-19, issued a statement to the Foreign Press Association saying leader Jaime Bateman, 42, was killed near the Panamanian border April 25.

Rumors had circulated in Colombia about his fate since the end of April, some claiming he was killed and others alleging he fled the country with $8 million belonging to the organization.

In early June, M-19 named a three-member board to lead the guerrilla organization. Alvaro Fayad, Carlos Pizarro and Alberto Jose Navarro — all longtime members of the leftist group — assumed command of M-19.

Man held for contract killings

NEW YORK (UPI) — Irvin Margolies, a Manhattan jewelry manufacturer, has been indicted on murder and conspiracy charges for hiring a gunman who killed two federal witnesses and three CBS technicians, authorities said Monday.

Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau said the indictment charges Margolies, 47, of Scarsdale, N.Y., with two counts of second-degree murder in the slayings of two former employees, Margaret Barbera and Jenny Soo Chin.

The indictment said the jewelry manufacturer ordered the two murders to prevent the women from cooperating with a federal fraud investigation of his bankrupt firm, Candor Diamond Co. of Manhattan.

Margolies allegedly hired Donald Nash to commit the murders.

Nash, 47, of Keansburg, N.J., was sentenced to a minimum 100 years in prison in the slayings of Barbera, 38, and the three CBS technicians.

The CBS employees were shot to death by Nash when they tried to help Miss Barbera as she was dragged into a van on a West Side pier in Manhattan April 27, 1982.

Lightning hits four on beach

JONES BEACH, N.Y. (UPI) — Lightning bolts from a flash thunderstorm Monday killed one man and injured three others at a beach on Long Island, police said.

Police said the victims were hit by four separate bolts of lightning that struck Jones Beach within moments of each other.

None of the victims was in the water when the lightning struck, police said. Three were on the beach and one was walking through a parking lot.

Lebanese leader reportedly meets with Hussein for surprise talks

By United Press International

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel met in secret Monday night with King Hussein in preparation for his talks in Washington on the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon, sources said.

But Syria, which has refused to withdraw its 40,000 soldiers in Lebanon, earlier Syrian Valley dismissed any further efforts at U.S. mediation as futile and reaffirmed its opposition to a pullout.

The sources said Gemayel and Hussein met in a secluded villa in Nice, the nature of the talks was not revealed. Hussein flew into Nice from the Canaris Island where he was vacationing with his family.

Jordan denied Israeli claims Sunday as he decided to join Middle East peace negotiations.

The United States has been attempting to draw Hussein into peace talks with Israel based on President Reagan's Sept. 1 plan calling for creation of a Palestinian entity linked to Jordan.

Hussein bowed out of the talks on the proposal after PLO leader Yasser Arafat refused to grant him carte blanche in negotiating with Israel on occupation of the West Bank and the Golan Heights.

Gemayel stopped in Nice for an overnight stay on his way to Washington where he will press Reagan to use all contacts necessary to bring about a settlement in Lebanon, including talking with Moscow, state-run Beirut radio said.

East of Beirut airport, where Gemayel boarded his special afternoon flight, the situation in the mountainous region was tense after two days of bloody artillery exchanges between Lebanese Christian Phalange and Druze militia men.

The private Phalange radio reported sniping incidents on the Beirut-Shouf mountain roads that wind through the Druze stronghold.

The private Phalange radio reported sniping incidents on the Beirut-Shouf mountain roads that wind through the Druze stronghold.

In New York, the U.N. Security Council voted hours before the six-month mandate of the 5,800-strong U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon expired to maintain the troops that have been in the region since 1978.

State-run Beirut radio said Gemayel, on his second trip to Washington in 10 months, would ask Reagan to "work up its contacts with Damascus" to see exactly what its demands are for withdrawal.

"If Soviet-U.S. contacts are necessary, Lebanon feels they should also be carried through," the radio said.

State-run Syrian radio, however, warned, "Syria will not bargain on her position on the complete withdrawal of the Israeli forces from the Golan Heights or its rejection of the (Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal) agreement."

"He is wrong who thinks the road to Damascus lies through Washington, or that his voice will be better heard if it comes through American-made loudspeakers," said the radio, monitored in Beirut.

Beirut radio said Gemayel also will discuss new military purchases to strengthen the Lebanese army, which is rebuilding with U.S. assistance after disintegrating in the 1976-78 civil war.

The Lebanese army is expected to receive its first real test when it is forced to move into the mountains to fill the vacuum left by a partial Israeli withdrawal.

The Druzes, who fear collusion between the army and the Phalange, have warned the army not to enter without first negotiating a political settlement.

Horror films come to life in Illinois

JOLIET, Ill. (UPI) — In a scene from a hundred horror movies, one teen was killed and another raped and stabbed after they fell asleep in their parked car.

The attack possibly was linked to four other ambush slayings over the weekend, police said Monday.

"We're looking into any links," state police Sgt. Marvin Tinsley said.

The boy was killed and the girl critically wounded early Sunday, just 24 hours after a volunteer deputy and three others were massacred in an ambush 20 miles away.

Anthony Hackett, 18, of Ermden, Ill., and an 18-year-old girl, who was not identified, fell asleep in their car on the way home from an amusement park outside Chicago, Will County, State's Attorney Edward Pelka said.

They parked the car off the road from Interstate 55 near Wilmington, Ill. Hackett was asleep in the front seat and the girl, who was not identified, was asleep in the back seat.

"They were awakened by a tapping on the window," Pelka said. A man fired through the driver's window, shooting Hackett in the head.

"The offender reached through the window, pulling the female out," Pelka said. The attacker left her by the road on a highway south of Joliet. The girl was in critical condition Monday at a Joliet hospital.

She was then gagged, blindfolded and stabbed several times, Pelka said. The attacker left her by the road on a highway south of Joliet. The girl was in critical condition Monday at a Joliet hospital.

Hackett was found slumped over the wheel of his car. An autopsy showed he died from four gunshot wounds to the head.

Police believe the same attackers also may have committed four murders early Saturday. The shooting spree began on a winding gravel road near Lockport, Ill., when the killers approached a parked car holding Catherine Norwood, 25, and Richard Paulin, 32, both of Lemont, Ill.

Paulin's body was found in the car. Mrs. Norwood was forced into the ground and shot "five or six times in the back, execution style," police said. Her body was found beside the car.

A short time later, two deputies in a squad car were flagged down by a man, who said he was having car trouble. He opened fire when the officers got out of the car, killing auxiliary deputy Steye Mayer, 22, and critically wounding auxiliary deputy Dennis Foley, 50.

Foley, shot five times in the jaw and abdomen, "played dead" and managed to radio for help when the men fled. He remained in critical condition Monday at Silver Cross Hospital.

Minutes later, a car drove past the scene, but turned back when one of the killers waved for help. As the car slowed, the gunman opened fire.

George Kiehl, 24, Lockport, was killed. A passenger, Laura Troutman, 21, was shot in the left shoulder and abdomen and was in fair condition Monday at a hospital.

'Mercy killer' avoids jail

HOUSTON (UPI) — A man convicted of attempted murder in the mercy killing of his comatose father last March was sentenced to three years probation Monday. He could have received up to 20 years in prison.

Billy Ray Clore, 26, had asked the jury of nine men and three women to grant him probation, indicating he had already suffered enough. Prosecutors did not recommend a prison sentence.

The jury deliberated 2 1/2 hours in reaching its decision. It found Clore guilty Friday of attempted murder for the shooting of his father Robert Clore, 63, who died in April.

Clore could have received sentences from two years probation to 20 years in prison.

The sentence caused the close-knit Clore family to clutch each other around Billy Ray and cry as they stood in a courtroom.

After the sentence was read he said, "I'm pleased with the verdict. Mostly now I just want to get back to work."

The elder Clore had suffered kidney failure, two heart seizures and brain damage.

Youth sentenced for killing family

RUSSELLVILLE, Ark. (UPI) — A 15-year-old boy who pleaded guilty Monday to killing his mother, sister and grandfather, and then stabbing his little brother told a judge quietly, "I don't know why I did it."

Robert Simpson of Crow Mountain, Ark., was sentenced to 32 years in prison on each of three counts of first-degree murder and 20 years for first-degree battery. The sentences are to run concurrently.

Circuit Judge John Patterson has no legal power to order psychiatric care after the youth is sent to prison, but he said he would strongly recommend it to prison officials.

Simpson stood stiff and tight-lipped, his hands clasped behind his back, as Patterson questioned him about his decision to plead guilty. The judge asked Simpson to describe what he did.

"I took a gun, walked in the room and shot my mother, grandfather and sister and stabbed my brother," he said. "I don't know why I did it."

His father, Wayne Simpson, stood behind the youth and wept.

Psychiatrists concluded the youth had an "isolated, explosive disorder," Prosecuting Attorney Jon Sanford said.

The youth had confessed killing his family the night the shootings occurred.

According to police reports, the boy walked into the living room and shot his mother — algebra teacher Margaret Simpson, 39 — and his sister Jennifer, 7. The 7-year-old grandfather, Thomas Simpson, was also shot in the head but lived for 2 1/2 weeks.

The boy also stabbed his 4-year-old brother, Jason, then tried to drive him to the hospital, police said. Simpson, too young to drive legally — wrecked his mother's car on the way to the hospital and the brothers were taken the rest of the way by a passerby, police said.

Hypocrite is word to fit Rep. Crane

Back when Rep. Daniel Crane was running for Congress in Illinois, he made a big deal about how good a family man he was. He said he didn't want to take them to Washington with him because he didn't approve of the lifestyle there.

But apparently there were other motives. It seems Crane was spending part of his time — to put it as delicately as we can — cavorting with a 17-year-old congressional page.

Now, we remember the Bible's invocation about who is without sin should cast the first stone. But given Crane's pious pronouncements about family, God and country, we think the voters of that district would be perfectly justified in casting him out.

The grounds? How about hypocrisy. That seems to fit the groveling, oh-I'm-so-sorry tone with which Crane stood up before the voters last week, wife silently at his side (we wonder what she's thinking) and one of his children in his arms to say how sorry he is. In our view, he should have thought of that earlier.

Now, Crane is hardly the first or only hypocrite in government life, nor is he the first or only one to go to bed with someone other than his spouse.

There might not be many people left in Washington to run the government if the people threw out everyone who's ever done that.

Nor, it could be said, does his transgression have much to do with his ability to carry out the public interest as a legislator.

President John Kennedy was known as something of a Lothario and President Lyndon Johnson had an eye for women as well, although both are considered more or less effective presidents.

Nonetheless, Crane's actions seem particularly sleazy to us, given the age of the person involved (at 17, she still is legally a child), and the fact that she was, in effect, a congressional employee.

That doesn't exactly make her a consenting adult, as Crane claims.

The action suggests, in all its ramifications, yet another case in which a congressman thinks the laws and ethics of public office shouldn't apply to him as they do to others. We've had some of that thinking coming from our own congressman, George V. Hansen, who has his own interpretation of the federal financial disclosure act.

If hypocrisy like Crane's represents the kind of morality we're sending to or keeping in Washington these days, maybe the voters should override what he blithely calls a "mistake" and give him the resignation he says he won't consider.

WE THANK THEE FOR THE GIFTS OF THY BOUNTIFUL HERPES AND THINE BLESSED AIDS, O LORD... NOW SEND US SOMETHING FOR ALL THE OTHER WIERDOS.

A boy's wish for mankind

In the world there are a lot of problems. The problem that is going all over the world is hunger. I wish everybody would share with everybody else. The rich people should help others that are not as fortunate as they are. But I think some rich people become more arrogant than when they were not rich.

Another solution for the hunger problem is for the countries that are rich to help the poor countries. People are becoming more aware of this problem and many people are trying to help.

Another major problem that we are faced with is the threat of nuclear war. We don't know when a war might start. We don't even know if we are going to make it through the day or not. Sometimes I wonder why can't all the countries get along. We're all people. We may be different at some things, but I would think we could all get along. I wish there were a person who could make all the nuclear weapons disappear and make everyone in the world forget all about nuclear.

A lot of countries have the problem of education. Many countries do not give money to public schools. In some countries many children can't go to school because their families are very poor and they have to work to help their parents. I wish that all the countries supplied money for schools and that everyone had money and food so they can send their children to school and get a good education. If everyone can get a good education, everyone will get a better chance for a good job.

The problem that is common everywhere in the world is diseases. Diseases kill a lot of people. A lot of people have cancer and people are dying everyday of cancer. The disease that is becoming an epidemic in the United States is the disease AIDS. AIDS shuts down the immune system and the victims die because their body cannot fight the bacteria around them. Their faces become swollen and their bodies stop working and they die. These are only some of the diseases that are killing people all over the world. I wish scientists and doctors could find a cure for all these diseases. I wish some of the major problems in the world could be solved. That way people all over the world will live a happier and a longer life.

Things to say about the Carter book

Things to be said when discussing Carter's black book and other crimes and misdemeanors. If you are a Republican team player.

"It's much ado about nothing."
"Everybody does it in politics."
"We didn't steal the book. Someone gave it to us."
"I never used any of the material. It was useless and boring."

"If there was any wrongdoing I hope the Justice Department gets to the bottom of it."
"In retrospect it was stupid to even have accepted the material, but at the time we thought it might be helpful."

"That side was probably doing it to us."
"I never heard about a mole in the Carter White House until I read it in the newspaper."
"When I received the material I'm sure I gave it to X."

"It must be mistaken. He never gave it to me."
"It's summer and the press has nothing to write about."
"It's unfair to compare the stealing of a black briefing book to Watergate. There were no break-ins, and the president isn't trying to cover up anything."

"It's silly to think that Carter would have won even if Reagan didn't know his game plan."
"Jim Baker was stupid to admit he saw the material."
"Stockman was stupid to admit he got the material and it was helpful."
"Bill Caspy was stupid to deny he ever saw the material."

Art Buchwald

"George Will didn't do anything wrong when he helped Reagan prepare for the debate."
"George Will didn't have to say on TV he saw material from the Carter camp."
"In a political fight you use everything you can to beat your opponent."
"It's different to steal material than if someone hands it to you."
"I forgot who gave me the stuff. I never saw the guy again."
"It's ridiculous to say I knew anything about it."
"The whole thing is a Democratic conspiracy to make us look bad."
"There was never a Republican mole in the Carter White House."
"If there was a mole in the White House he never passed on any classified material."
"The information from the Carter National Security Council was common knowledge to everyone."
"Nobody cares about the dirty tricks except the press and the politicians."

"The president says he wants to get to the bottom of it. That shows he had nothing to do with it."
"You can't control every volunteer in a political campaign."

"In a campaign you get so many pieces of paper that you never ask where they came from."
"I don't know how the Carter papers turned up in my files. I certainly didn't put them there."
"It's strange that this story should have broken just as the 1984 elections are upon us."

"The important thing to remember is Carter would have lost the debate even if we didn't have the briefing book."
"If the Democrats want to make something out of this we have plenty of stuff on them that we haven't released before."

"Things to say if you are a Democrat:
"If someone had given me purloined papers from the Reagan camp, I would have returned them immediately."
"It makes me sick to think this is how they won the election."
"Nobody learned a thing from Watergate."
"I'm not enjoying the White House discomfiture one bit. If I were the president I'd fire the whole staff."
"If it hadn't been for the mole in Jimmy's White House, Amy Carter might now be in charge of nuclear proliferation policy."

Art Buchwald writes from Washington for the Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

Restraint of power lies behind legislative veto decision

WASHINGTON — We are hearing fresh discussion on Capitol Hill these days of an issue that is as old as government itself. The immediate topic has to do with the legislative veto. The ancient issue has to do with the restraint of power.

The question has troubled free governments since Pericles took on the Athenian Aropepous and curbed its censorial riots. The issue was at the heart of the barons' rebellion against King John that produced Magna Carta. No problem was closer to the hearts of our own Founding Fathers than the problem of restraining the constitutional powers they were delegating to a new government.

Every schoolchild presumably is familiar with at least the essential restraints devised by the framers of the Constitution. The powers delegated to the national government were intended to be limited powers. Certain powers could not be exercised at all. "No bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed." The House and Senate would act as checks upon each other. The president would have a power of veto, but the Congress could override. At every point in the Constitution, wherever a power is extended, a provision reaches out to snatch some power back.

The system worked well enough for 150 years, but then the operative structure of our government began to change. The old-line departments began to yield power to a host of new independent regulatory agencies. The needs of society grew more complex; government assumed a greater role. Precisely in the traditional pattern, the Congress that was delegating power sought a means to snatch it back. This was contrived the legislative veto.

Striped to its essentials, in its most familiar form, the legislative veto was an admirably simple mechanism: Congress would delegate power to the Federal Trade Commission, for example, under which the FTC could issue trade rules having the force and effect of law. But, if Congress concluded that the FTC had abused its power, Congress could nullify the rules by its veto.

Over the years a number of variations developed on this theme. An estimated 200 laws were enacted that contained a legislative veto in one form or another. The power to nullify rarely was exercised, but the power was there. Now the mechanism has been scrapped. The Supreme Court's 6-3 decision last month in the Chadha case turned on a tricky point of constitutional law: When Congress imposes a legislative veto, is Congress improperly excluding the president from the legislative process? The court said yes; and there went the veto.

A vacuum has been created; and nature, we are instructed, absorbs a vacuum. At the moment, the independent executive agencies, apparently have acquired powers that are effectively unfettered. A president cannot nullify a trade rule or regulation. The Congress no longer can interpose a veto. On the surface, the agencies have won. But, in times past that sense has not appeared to be exercised actively.

Both in fact and in theory, the prospect of a bureaucratic binge is more apparent than real. Congress retains the power of the purse. Basic laws creating the administrative agencies always can be amended through the normal process. These avenues carry slow traffic; they offer none of the tidy efficiency of the now discarded legislative veto.

James C. Miller III, chairman of the FTC, was on the Hill last week to talk the matter over with a House Judiciary subcommittee. It may have seemed odd of character for a bureaucrat to ask that his powers in some fashion be restrained, but Miller is no ordinary bureaucrat. He urged the committee to find some way of creating a veto power that would include a president and thus avoid the prescriptions of the court. His liberal Democratic colleagues, former FTC chairman Michael Perlechuk, disagreed. The legislative veto, they argued, was a good tool for disciplining agencies.

It is a nice problem for philosophers and politicians. The heavens haven't fallen since the court's opinion of June 23, and they are not likely to fall any time soon. Government goes on. But is it only a matter of time before one of the regulatory agencies takes some action that sends congressmen climbing the wall. Without resorting to the laborious process of a restrictive amendment to an appropriations bill, how could the offensive action be suspended? We will be back to the struggle that Pericles waged so many years ago.

Relationship with umbrellas is series of one-storm stands

BOSTON — It is raining out and the woman who is waiting for the streetcar doesn't have an umbrella.

This isn't, of course, strictly true. The woman bought five umbrellas in the past year alone. Legally, she must have dozens of umbrellas out there in the world. The problem is that they currently are open over other people's heads.

There are, moreover, two umbrellas technically under her guardianship. There's a beige one she borrowed from a friend. It started raining in New York. It's at the office. There's a large yellow-and-red striped one of unknown origin. It's in her car trunk.

For the moment, therefore, she has been left high and wet, somewhere between home and work, pondering the transience of umbrellas. These who have followed the saga of this woman should know that she has never developed what you might call a relationship with an umbrella. Her connection to umbrellas has been a series of one-storm stands. At any moment, when the wind shifted, she left one behind and then picked up another.

Indeed, her past is scattered with umbrellas, like broken hearts. It is really quite a scandal. She is now dripping with remorse.

English-speaking world sported countless umbrellas. Lord Bowen wrote:

"The rain it raineth on the just
And also on the unjust fell;
But chiefly on the just, because
The unjust steals the just's umbrellas."

In the 20th century America, where all the standards have been shot to bits, the judgment isn't quite that simple. In truth, normally decent people who pay their taxes and never steal hotel towels and send lost sweaters back by return mail have umbrellas of dubious origins all over their rooms. Indeed, it's a greater crime in urban America, to steal a parking space than an umbrella.

Was the black one covering the man in front of her left at an office late one rainy night? Was the green one behind her deserted in a restaurant contract?

For her own part, the woman in question has lost more umbrellas than she has lifted. Once she read an article in which consumers complained that the things fell apart. She'd never held onto an umbrella long enough for it to fall apart. Perhaps it was a character flaw. Perhaps, as Robert Louis Stevenson wrote,

"Umbrellas, like faces, acquire a certain sympathy with the individual who carries them."
Maybe the umbrellas of stolid, dependable people live to ripe old ages, accompanying the same master on 20 years of daily walks, like dogs. Maybe the umbrellas of journalists have the half-life of newspaper, and are distributed widely.

She would prefer to believe that, ecologically speaking, she is into recycling. This is also possible. From time to time she spots a familiar handle in an unfamiliar hand. Maybe she is a part of some migrating pattern. For a moment she contemplates the idea that people should tag umbrellas rather like birds and see how far they travel in one lifetime.

Having run through a gamut of options, our wet philosopher is left mumbling in the rain until it occurs to her that perhaps certain things are not meant to be owned. They are not private property in the sense of a suit jacket or a chair or a car. They are by common practice, communal, rather like ball-point pens, matchbooks and water fountains.

As she comes to the conclusion that umbrellas should be shared, the streetcar arrives. There, in the corner of a seat, is the battered forgotten umbrella of a fellow traveler. She will give it a temporary home in her underground railway and then, undoubtedly, send it on its way.

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe.

MX, B-1 bomber show high tech, but cost too much

Congress has begun debate this week on the military budget. Highlighting that debate will be the arguments for and against actual production of two very expensive, very sophisticated strategic weapons systems — the MX "Peacekeeper" missile and B-1B bomber.

Both systems are masterpieces of high technology. Neither system is needed.

Consider the B-1B. Now entering its second decade of development and design, its replacement, the famous "stealth bomber," already is on the drawing board and prototype testing of its technology already is under way.

The B-1B, simply put, is an interim weapon system, designed to bridge the gap between the ancient but reliable workhorse of the Strategic Air Command, the venerable B-52G and H models, and the stealth bomber, which is expected to become operational by the mid-1990s.

The B-1B is expected to be in service for only a decade or so before it is replaced. The B-52s, which have served this country for nearly 30 years, can still do the job, however, and can continue to do so during that interim period.

The supersonic B-1B is faster than the subsonic B-52. It presents a slightly more difficult target for enemy radars to pick up. But neither aircraft will reach Soviet airspace until after our ICBMs have destroyed much of the Soviet defensive capabilities — especially their radars, which do not work well in atmospheres charged with the electromagnetic disruptions caused by nuclear explosions, anyway.

Furthermore, the Soviets built a defense for the B-1 — the MIG 25 — several years ago, before the original B-1 program was canceled in the mid-70s. The MIG 25 has few capabilities other than to shoot down B-1s, although the Soviets, whose weapons-purchase programs are every bit as odd, intractable and filled with inertia as our own, have continued to mass-produce the high altitude interceptor.

And at $250 million for each individual aircraft, plus several million more for annual maintenance and a typical annual loss rate of one percent of the aircraft in service due to training accidents, a plane that already has a defense waiting for it simply is too big a buck for the bang.

Guest Opinion Kelly Everitt

We should wait for the stealth bomber and spend the money on education so we'd have pilots capable of flying it. The MX is another weapons system whose production Congress should reject.

You'll recall, although the administration doesn't run and us of it very quickly, that the MX was supposed to be a MOBILE missile. At the time it was proposed, the Air Force insisted that increased accuracy of Soviet missiles — coupled with the official American policy of "riding out" the first wave of the assault before launching a retaliatory strike — meant ANY missile in a fixed location was highly vulnerable to being destroyed.

Over 30 different "basing modes" eventually were developed after rejection of the mobile mode at sites in Utah and Nevada. In the end, the "win choice" of the Air Force was selected. The administration has decided to place the missiles in old Minuteman III silos — which the Soviets have had targeted for years. Thus, its survivability is no better than the current generation of U.S. ICBMs, although this was the reason it was designed.

The MX has some virtues. It is more accurate by nearly a factor of 10 than the old Minuteman IIIs, and can carry 10 warheads instead of the one to three warheads that the present missiles are capable of carrying. And being more accurate, the size — or yield — of its warheads can be less destructive.

But U.S. policy has not changed to accommodate its increased capabilities. For one thing, ICBMs are considered "deterrent" weapons. The existence of their destructive potential, theoretically, keeps the other side scared enough not to use his own ICBMs. The existing Minuteman IIIs have served well in that role, and being no less vulnerable than the MX, should continue to do so for some time.

Additionally, although the first missiles would become operational before the end of this decade, the vast majority would not be available until the 1990s, at which time it is expected that increasingly rapid advances in laser, particle-beam and anti-missile missile technologies will be available to defeat or negate much of the MX's capabilities.

At half a billion dollars a piece, the 100 MX missiles we would be buying are simply not worth the cost. The money would be better spent to develop and maintain our lead in the peaceful exploitation of space — a venture that has proven benefits for all of mankind.

Both the B-1B and the MX are drains on the national treasury that already is burdened with a defense budget that has been inflated for the benefit of defense contractors without providing a commensurate return in the actual warfighting capability of the U.S. armed forces.

Congress should unequivocally reject these weapon systems. If it must tax us for these costs, let the money be spent in more constructive ways.

Kelly Everitt writes for The Times-News. He has a special interest in military history.

Board criticizes air safety

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The kinds of buildings and businesses surrounding some of the nation's airports could pose hazards to air safety, National Transportation Safety Board Chairman James Burnett said Monday.

Inadequate animal control at airports and varying regional interpretations of federal air safety standards also pose potential problems, he told a congressional subcommittee.

Burnett revealed a growing feud with the Federal Aviation Administration over landing approach procedures to Washington's National Airport.

The disagreement, he said, stems from an NTSB investigation into a Dec. 28, 1982, incident in which a Boeing 737 came too close to a tall building in Rosslyn, Va.

"The board determined that the plane was, indeed, low — at an altitude about 400 feet when passing the 398-foot high USA Today building," he said.

He said the board made several recommendations to revise landing approaches and landing procedures "to prevent occurrences of planes flying too low and too close to densely populated areas on approach to Washington National Airport."

The FAA, however, rejected the NTSB recommendations.

"I assure you this matter is not closed," Burnett told the subcommittee.

Asked if he thought air traffic to and from National Airport could be a hazard, Burnett said, "I'd be hesitant to rent an office on the top floor of some tall buildings in the Washington area."

Burnett appeared before a House science and technology subcommittee on transportation to outline preliminary findings of a study of airport certification criteria and operations.

The preliminary findings, he said, indicated different FAA regions have varying views on what constitutes compliance with federal air safety standards.

The study also found potential problems with the use of land around airports and with airport animal control programs.

"Off-airport land use by local jurisdictions, such as waste disposal site locations, can result in obstructions or other potential hazards," he said beyond the control of the FAA and airport management," he said.

"Observation of animals within the perimeter areas of some airports indicated that possible problems exist with present control measures," Burnett added.

Subcommittee Chairman Dan Glickman, D-Kan., said his panel wants to determine the "adequacy of current government policy and research efforts" on airport safety.

"It is clear that airports represent the most critical juncture in air transportation," Glickman said. "Over half of all civil aviation accidents occur at or near airports."

Burnett observed: "Major aviation travel in this country is very safe compared with other forms of transportation. It is our job to keep it that way."

The NTSB is studying National and Dulles International in the Washington area, Kennedy International and LaGuardia in New York City, Los Angeles International, Burbank, Glendale-Pasadena in California, Houston International and Houston Hobby in Texas, Chicago's O'Hare International and Midway, San Diego's Lindbergh, Denver's Stapleton—International, Boston's Logan International and Florida's Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood.

Security measures questioned

Hijacking prompts review

MIAMI (UPI) — The seventh hijacking of a domestic airliner in Cuba since May 1 occurred during a federal probe into ways to halt the air pirates, officials said Monday.

Seven members of a Cuban family hijacked a Delta Airlines Miami-to-Tampa flight with 108 people aboard and ordered it flown to Havana Sunday — just two days after federal officials met with several persons at Miami International Airport to discuss the problem of sky piracy.

The FBI said the hijacking was carried out by two male members of the family — one holding a knife to a flight attendant's throat and another using an aerosol can of hair spray as a make-shift torch.

It was the third domestic hijacking this month and the seventh this year involving planes either heading to or from south Florida.

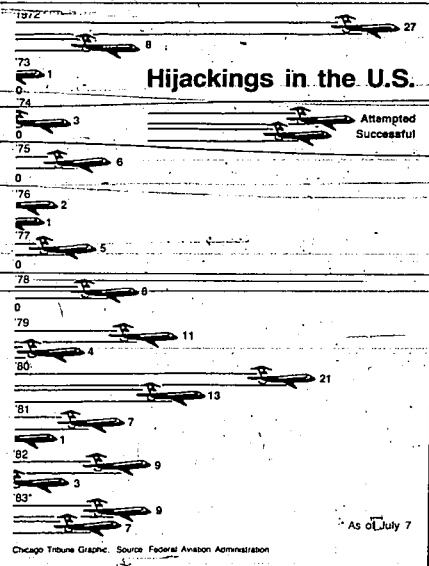

Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Jack Barker said FAA officials met Friday as part of an investigation into security systems at the Miami airport. Of the seven U.S. hijackings this year, four of the flights originated in Miami.

"The whole security system is under review. The screening process, the equipment, the behavioral profile — the entire security system. If any changes are deemed necessary, they will be made," said Barker.

Barker said any conclusions reached by federal investigators would be released this week, unless the information would compromise efforts to halt the hijackings.

The last hijacking before Sunday — the commandeering of a jetliner out of Fort Lauderdale on July 7 — also took place the day after FAA officials met in south Florida to probe airport security problems.

Federal officials have expressed surprise that hijackers are not discouraged by the routine arrest and sentencing of air pirates by Cuban authorities in Havana.

According to a report provided by Cuban officials and released last month by the U.S. State Department, at least three hijackers last year received sentences ranging from 12 to 20 years in prison. One hijacker was sentenced in 1980 to 50 years in jail.

Returning Cubans could cut hijackings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department suggested Monday that the number of aircraft hijackings in Cuba would be reduced if Fidel Castro's government agreed to take back Cubans who now cannot return legally.

The United States has asked Cuba to take back an initial group of 670 of the 125,000 people who fled the 1978 exodus, and who are ineligible to remain in the United States because of having criminal records or other reasons.

Cuba sent a note proposing that talks about the return of some so-called "Mariel" boatlift — "undesirables" be broadened to include full normalization of relations, and a State Department spokesman confirmed Monday that the United States replied July 7. But he suggested the U.S. reply dealt only with the specific question of how to deter hijackings.

Spokesman Alan Romberg said, "We continue to urge the government of Cuba to make public the punishment of those found guilty. If Cuba sentences them to long terms in prison and makes it public... that should serve as a deterrent to future hijackers."

Firefighters battle to save oldest living trees

By United Press International

Firefighters launched an all-ground attack Monday on a forest fire which was burning toward an 18,000-acre stand of ancient bristlecone pines, the earth's oldest living trees.

The man-caused fire burned within a mile of several dozen summer homes protected by a ridge on 10,450-foot Mummy Mountain in Nevada, one of the highest mountains in the Spring Mountain Range. Some roads were closed.

"A few bristlecone pines have been damaged, but there has been no major damage to them as yet," said

Steve Weiss, a spokesman for the Nevada Division of Forestry. "The fire is at the 9,200-foot level and the main stand of bristlecone pines start at the 10,000-foot level."

"The fire is moving in the direction of the bristlecones but slowly," said a dispatcher.

Bristlecone pines — short, knarled and weathered — are among the oldest living things on earth. Some are estimated to be more than 4,000 years old.

"We hope to pinch off the fire near the top of Mummy Mountain some time today. It is burning upward. It is in a steep canyon right and firefighters have to hike in," Weiss said.

He said an investigation was under way to place responsibility for the man-caused blaze. A blaze started by a camp fire charred 6,400 acres of forest in the same general area two years ago.

An estimated 250 firefighters, armed with shovels and saws, were supported by helicopters Monday which made repeated drops of water and fire retardant chemicals into the steep mountain canyon.

Crews from Nevada, California, Arizona, Utah and Idaho worked round the clock shifts to contain the 100-acre blaze. Firefighters contained about one-third of the fire perimeter as the lower slopes early Monday, halting its advance toward populated and recreational areas.

Three all-landers were grounded Sunday by erratic wind with gusts up to 30 miles an hour.

Members of Friends of the Earth demonstrate in support of international whaling ban

Threatens sanctions

U.S. warns Japan over whaling

BRIGHTON, England (UPI) — The United States Monday warned Japan, the world's biggest whaling nation, to observe a total ban on commercial whaling by 1986 or face sanctions.

The U.S. delegation to the International Whaling Commission, meeting until Saturday at southern England's famous seaside resort, said both trade and fishing-import sanctions were possible should Japan refuse to go along with the ban.

The United States, with President Reagan's full backing, already has urged Japan's fishing allocation in the America's 200-mile coastal limit to nearly one-third this spring. Japan's harvest from U.S. waters amounted to $425 million in 1981 alone.

Japan's allocation for fall fishing was due to be set July 1, but the United States withheld a decision pending the outcome of this week's IWC meeting.

The whaling commission, an intergovernmental body of 40 nations, last year decided on a total commercial whaling ban by 1986. However, Japan, the Soviet Union, Norway and Peru formally objected, which under IWC rules means they can ignore the ban.

Japan is the world's largest whaler, responsible for most of 1982's total legal slaughter of 14,000 since it buys most of the Soviet Union and Peruvian catches.

Ever-conscious of the public relations effect of continued whaling, Japan has not formally decided whether to flout the international body.

Fishery Director Kunio Yonezawa is working hard behind the scenes to win exemptions, but his opening address carried a clear threat that Japan could withdraw from the whaling commission if the "emotional" anti-whaling forces continue to win the day.

Unlike Japan's case, the United States faces an almost impossible task in pressuring the Soviet Union to obey the commercial whaling ban. The Soviets do not fish in U.S. coastal waters nor do they export much to America.

Observers pointed out the U.S. case is weakened by its own position supporting so-called aboriginal whaling for Alaskan Eskimos who hunt the most endangered species of all — the bowhead whale.

Experts say there may be only 2,200 bowheads still living and even a ban on hunting by the Eskimos may not save the species from extinction.

OPEC agrees to $29 base

HELSINKI, Finland (UPI) — OPEC agreed Monday to hold the line on its production ceiling and $29 base price at least through the third quarter of this year despite some bleeding over violations by maverick members.

"We have reached agreement that we will keep the ceiling (individual output), quotas and prices for the third quarter," Indonesian oil minister Dr. Subroto told reporters after the 13-nation cartel adjourned for the day.

"We will keep open what will happen until the fourth quarter," he said.

Subroto said Nigeria, an OPEC dissident that has ignored its output quota, had agreed to roll back production to its OPEC-assigned level of 1.3 million barrels a day.

OPEC will allow Nigeria, the cartel's weakest link, to continue selling its oil for 50 cents a barrel less than its African competitors within OPEC, Subroto said.

Officials said the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would meet again Tuesday to study a long-term pricing strategy and to select a new secretary general.

OPEC will hold its next semi-annual meeting in Geneva Dec. 7, but sources said the cartel could call an emergency summit beforehand if conditions changed in the international oil market.

Earlier, a senior OPEC delegate pointed the finger at Nigeria, Iran, and the United Arab Emirates for flouting production quotas agreed upon after weeks of haggling during the cartel's March meeting in London. A UAE official denied the country was overproducing.

The delegate, who asked not to be identified, said he would ask OPEC to head off a new round of confrontation.

Saudi Arabian oil minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani said his kingdom, OPEC's most powerful producer, favored keeping the cartel's base oil price at $29 a barrel through 1985. He said a "significant" number of OPEC states supported the Saudi stand.

But insiders said several OPEC dissidents vowed to fight any Yamani-led move to freeze prices until a clearer picture of world oil demand emerged in the next few months.

OPEC production has rebounded from a 22-year low of 14 million barrels a day in March to about 17 million barrels a day now. Demand is expected to exceed the cartel's ceiling in late autumn as consuming nations rebuild stocks for the winter.

Polish authorities blasted for laws ending army rule

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Communist authorities Monday apparently took one of the final steps to end 19 months of martial law.

But former Solidarity leader Lech Walesa accused the regime of preparing restrictions to crush dissent.

The Military Council of National Salvation, supreme authority in Poland since Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski declared martial law Dec. 13, 1981, met to hear appeals for a return to civilian rule and "to take appropriate decisions," the official PAP news agency reported.

Referring to the Communist Party Politburo and Central Committee's support last week for the lifting of martial law, the military council said such moves "suit the present needs" of the country, PAP said.

In Gdansk, Walesa said the government's solution to the problem of martial law was to institute a new, massive crackdown on any independence movement in Poland and call that the restoration of civilian rule.

"If I had to choose between the new regulations and martial law I would take martial law," Walesa said in a telephone interview.

"The new regulations are more licentious, more specific and more unfavorable than ever," he added.

"They are digging a deeper and deeper chasm between the rulers and the people."

Walesa predicted a new law "concerning the socio-economic crisis" due to be voted in by Parliament this week would force him to end his dissent to keep the outlawed Solidarity union alive.

"I will have a minimal chance to operate," the former union chairman said of pending regulations threatening up to three years' imprisonment for one "active in an organization which has been disbanded or outlawed."

The legal framework for the transitional period following martial law will be enacted by parliament at a special session Wednesday and Thursday. Parliamentary sources said a long list of regulations, most of which will remain in effect at least through 1985.

FARM FOR SALE

The Government is offering for sale a 165 acre farm, 85 acres crop land. Good location, 8 miles South, 1 1/2 miles East of Fairfield, Idaho. The property may be purchased for cash or twenty five percent (25%) down and the balance in twenty (20) equal annual installments. All bids must be accompanied by a certified check, cashiers check, postal money order, or bank money order, payable to the Treasurer of the United States for at least five percent (5%) of the total bid. The property may be inspected at any time. Additional information and bid forms can be obtained from the Farmers Home Administration, 438 Idaho Street, Gooding, Idaho, 83330, telephone number, 934-4468. The opening of sealed bids for the property will be public. Bids will be opened at 1:00 p.m. of the Farmers Home Administration Gooding Office on Tuesday, August 9, 1983. The Government reserves the right to reject any and all bids. The property will be sold without regard to race, color, sex, age, religion, national origin or marital status.

Cuba feels heat of nations

CANCUN, Mexico (UPI) — The Central American peace proposal issued Sunday by four Latin American presidents — was the first time Latin nations have publicly recognized the involvement of Cuba in the region's crisis.

The presidents of Mexico, Colombia, Panama and Venezuela issued the 10-point proposal after a one-day summit, hurriedly called to discuss the burgeoning crisis, with a war between leftist Nicaragua and U.S.-backed Honduras sparking the greatest fear.

The four countries make up the Contadora group, formed in January and named after the Panamanian island where they first met.

Contadora took a major step forward at the Mexican resort of Cancun in efforts to end the conflict in Central America with its first concrete list of goals.

The declaration criticized foreign meddling in the region, without naming any country, but pointed remarks to the U.S. and Cuban leadership made it clear that the four presidents believe both countries play a part in the problems and have a stake in the solution.

Members of the group have long let it be known that they do not want U.S. military intervention in the region, but the mention of Cuba was the first time the communist island was included in their call for peace.

The United States has up to 55 military advisers in El Salvador and another 120 in Honduras at a new military training school to teach Central American troops. The first contingent will be the Salvadoreans.

Washington says that Cuba has 8,000 advisers in Nicaragua, 2,000 of them military trainers. Cuba is also accused of helping Salvadoran guerrillas.

The Sunday declaration called for an end to the regional arms race, weapons trafficking, and a ban on all foreign military arms and withdrawal of foreign military advisers.

The four Latin presidents also urged Central American countries to hold free elections. In the region, only Honduras and Costa Rica have democratically elected governments.

A family of 15 Siberian Pentecostals arrives in Austria on the way to a new life in the West. Spent five years in U.S. Embassy.

Pentecostals arrive in West

MOSCOW (UPI) — A family of 15 Siberian Pentecostal Christians flew to Austria on the way to a new life in the West Monday, ending the saga of the "Siberian Seven" that included almost five years in the basement of the U.S. Embassy.

"We'd like to thank the Americans for all the help they gave us," said Maria Chmykhaylova, 66, who with her son, Timofei, 21, shared the basement with five members of the Vashchenko family.

"The Soviets gave us help, too. They say we wouldn't do them any harm, that we just asked and asked — she said before she, her husband Prokhor, and 13 other children, spouses and grandchildren flew to Vienna with visas for Israel.

The family was not sure whether it would continue on to Israel or stay in Austria for processing to the United States and then find a destination.

"We want to go to America," Chmykhaylova said. His wife added that they hoped to live in Texas, where a Pentecostal friend lives.

The Chmykhaylovas emigrated just three weeks after the Vashchenkos flew to Vienna and on to Israel. The Chmykhaylova invitation to Israel, on the basis of which they were granted visas, came from Lydia Vashchenko. In June 1978, Maria and Timofei Chmykhaylova and five Vashchenkos broke past Soviet guards at the U.S. Embassy to seek help in emigrating. Both families began efforts to leave the country in 1982.

The Pentecostals who became known as the Siberian Seven, refused to leave their embassy refuge until 1982 after Lydia, the oldest Vashchenko girl, went on a 34-day hunger strike to attract world attention to their plight.

Lydia decided to return home to Chernogorsk in Siberia, and apply for an exit visa. A year later, it was granted and in April she emigrated.

The 15 remaining immediate members of her family followed — two months later.

Two of the Chmykhaylova sons said they had left fiancées behind and appealed for them to be granted permission to leave. They were unable to marry because the family renounced citizenship in 1972 and sent in their internal passports. Without an internal passport, required of all Soviet citizens traveling inside their country, a marriage cannot be registered. An older brother with four children and a fifth on the way was able to marry his wife only in May.

The Pentecostals say they suffer religious persecution in the Soviet Union, where some of the tenets of their faith bring them into conflict with Soviet law.

The family paid a total of $9,450 for their visas, Chmykhaylova said. The money had been saved over time in anticipation of being allowed to emigrate.

There were a few tears at the end as aunts from Siberia stood behind the barrier, saying goodbye to their relatives.

The immigration means that the goals of a group that pushed for the freedom of the Soviet Pentecostal Christians holed up in the American Embassy have been achieved and the group will disband, its founder said Monday.

Jane Drake of Montgomery said the emigration of the second, and last, family that sought refuge in the embassy completed the goal she set when the Society of Americans for Vashchenko Emigration was established.

"SAVE was a task force to bring attention and try to assure the emigration of the Vashchenko and Chmykhaylova families," she said. "The Montgomery woman said, 'It should be dissolved and it will be dissolved. 'We have some thank-you letters to write, and after that we're going to dissolve. Our goals have been accomplished,' Mrs. Drake said.

The divorce of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and his wife Joan "was not an angry, drawn-out thing, and for that I'm grateful," says Ted Kennedy Jr., 31, in an article in the current issue of McCall's Magazine. "They deal with each other and they're not bitter." "We (Ted, brother Patrick, 16, and sister Kara, 23) are number one in their lives, and we have always made us feel that." The article quotes the senator and Joan Kennedy as saying, "We're looking for marriage in their immediate futures."

Spending of the clan, CBS is reported to have offered recent Brown University graduate John F. Kennedy Jr., a starring role in a series or mini-series of his choosing, only to have Uncle Ted veto the idea. This is reported in an upcoming book about the latest shuttle mission, entitled "Growing Up Kennedy," by Harrison Ralston and John Quinn. John is working as a deckhand on a Cape Cod fishing vessel this summer and may go diving for treasure later this summer. He's supposed to enter law school this fall.

The message also extended congratulations to the four male crew members of the latest shuttle mission, Judy Ford, one of three women who began the effort to gather the 714 signatures, said. "It was a way to demonstrate that many women in the Reagan administration do support the president and his policies." The names of the women, all presidential appointees or administration recruits, include those of United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick; Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Dole; and Secretary of Health and Human Services Margaret Heckler.

TEA FOR TWO

Meanwhile in Moscow, 11-year-old Samantha Smith from Manchester, Maine, slipped tea Monday with the world's first woman cosmonaut, Valentina Tereshkova, and inspected her collection of dolls from all over the world. Samantha, on the 11th day of her goodwill visit to Russia at the invitation of President Yuri Andropov, gave her hostess a tote bag emblazoned with a picture of a lobster, a lobster trap and the word Maine. When the meeting ended, the cosmonaut kissed Samantha twice and gave her a hug. She also handed her two books, one on space and one on Russian art.

Simon and Garfunkel open tour

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — Paul Simon and Art Garfunkel, whose sweet harmonies — and haunting melodies — touched the soul of a restless America in the 1960s, start touring the nation today for the first time in 13 years.

The 13-city tour, opening in Akron, was prompted by the astounding response to a free concert the duo gave in New York's Central Park in September 1981. More than a half-million people turned out with blankets and picnic baskets to hear the old ballads that have become classics.

Since then, fans have turned out by the hundreds of thousands in Paris, London, Tokyo and Sydney to hear the singers, now both 41. In France, their "oldies" bootlegs, "Robinson," went to the top of the music charts all over again.

Promoters would not discuss Monday how many $16-a-seat tickets had been sold for the first show, but admitted the concert in Akron's Rubber Bowl was not a sellout.

"We always perform abroad where we're rebroadcast for the American tour, over which the two have maintained strict control.

For the Akron opening, they outfitted the Rubber Bowl with a 172-foot-wide stage, a 100-foot-wide, a 600-watt-fore video screen and a 100,000-watt four-speaker sound system.

Local attorneys for the pair even went to federal court to secure a ban against "bootlegging" all 177 authorized T-shirts and souvenirs at the concert.

The real lure, however, remains Garfunkel's chortley voice, Simon's pointed lyrics and rhythms ranging from folk to jazz to reggae.

Friends since grade school in New York, Simon and Garfunkel split up after a five-year career that won them 13 Grammy awards and more than a dozen gold records.

"They were 'pop prophets'" then who captured the emotions of their mostly young audience — singing of loneliness in "Homeward Bound," pessimism in "Sounds of Silence" and brotherhood in "Bridge over Troubled Water."

Later this summer, an album featuring the first new Simon and Garfunkel music since 1970 will be pressed.

Utah child found safe in Idaho ghost town

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Kidnap victim Tasha Jane Bevan, enjoying her first day at home since she was found unharmed following the weekend ordeal, is the best lead into the abduction, Salt Lake County Sheriff Pete Hayward said Monday.

The 4-year-old girl was kidnapped from a neighborhood theater last Thursday night. She was found unharmed three days later in an abandoned school house in the southeastern Idaho ghost town of Strevell.

Hayward said Tasha has been "very helpful" in remembering specific details surrounding her abduction and 120-mile trip to Strevell, just across the Utah-Idaho line.

"She's very bright and very alert," Hayward said. "The sheriff said he planned to continue questioning the child in efforts to 'apprehend the person or people involved in this abduction.'"

The sheriff said he has reassigned several deputies to work on the Bevan kidnapping, and they had "some very positive leads and some good suspects."

A telephone tip led to her recovery in Strevell. Investigators said a man called the Box Elder County sheriff's office in Utah on Saturday night and told deputies where the girl could be found.

Deputy Roger Olsen went to the area about 11 p.m. and found the child alone.

Police in both states are looking for the caller, who told officers he was on a cross-country motorcycle trip to Arkansas. They are seeking the man for questioning.

"We don't know if he was a motorcycle person or not," Hayward said. "The name and address he gave were fictitious."

Tasha was reunited with her parents Sunday.

"We're so glad she's home. We keep hugging her. Everybody holds her. She's had lots of hugs," said Rita Bevan, Tasha's mother.

On Monday, yellow ribbons still decorated the Bevan home.

Zoning rules upset Boise land owners

BOISE (UPI) — A group of disgruntled Ada County property owners has formed an "illegal subdivision owners association" to protest what members claim are inconsistent enforcement of zoning laws and reasonably high assessments on land.

Dave O'Leary, a spokesman for the Boise Board of Realtors, said Monday that his organization is helping the association fight for changes in assessment and building permit policies in "illegal" subdivisions — areas where developers have gone ahead with construction without first obtaining zoning changes or permits.

The group's fundamental goal is "the ultimate legalization of all illegal subdivision lots in Ada County," he said. The association also plans to work for lower assessments in those areas so that property taxes are "commensurate with allowable uses," he said.

O'Leary pointed to the current case of Ron Lopez, the owner of land in an illegal subdivision. Even though Lopez cannot develop his property, county officials have appraised its value at $2,000 per acre, he said.

"Lopez says he can potentially make only about $30 per year from his land for grazing purposes. This makes [land] worth only about $33 per acre, based on that income potential," O'Leary said.

O'Leary also criticized zoning policies regarding the subdivisions.

In many cases, he said, county officials issue building permits in an area, then later revoke them, leaving people with "worthless" plots of land.

"We feel there has been some inconsistent enforcement of zoning laws in the subdivisions," O'Leary said. "People buy land with the purpose of building on it in several years. Then, down the road, they find out it is an illegal subdivision and that they can't build."

Citizens don't like newly enacted beer law

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls City Council added the drinking of keg beer in city parks to its list of municipal regulations Monday night. But the regulations that council chose to enact were not strict enough for several dozen citizens who appeared at the meeting. Specifically, council voted unanimously to initiate a permit system for keg beer in municipal parks. From now on, anyone wishing to bring keg beer into a park must first obtain a permit from the city parks and recreation department. They also must pay a $50 deposit to the city to ensure that the park is left in the same condition they found it.

Failing to obtain a permit will carry the standard maximum misdemeanor punishment — a $300 fine or 30 days in jail, said city attorney Fritz Wenderlich.

The ordinance places new restrictions on drinking alcohol in city parks. Prior to the meeting Monday, the city had no ordinance prohibiting the drinking of alcohol in city parks. The city code does contain an ordinance that prohibits all beverages in glass containers — from milk to whiskey. And certain limited curfew restrictions also apply in city parks. Not one citizen's voice was raised in favor of the ordinance at Monday's council meeting. But there was a storm of disapproval.

Robert Schroeder summed up the feelings of the dozen citizens who did comment when he said $50 was an "awfully cheap" price to pay for the permit.

"Keggers equal drunkenness," he said, in setting the deposit fee figure, council should take a hard look at the potential damage rowdy beer drinkers may cause, he said.

Other citizens said city parks are meant for families. Keg beer has no place in city parks, they said. There are numerous places where those who want to drink it may go.

The deposit price should be as high as $1,000, said Mike MacDonald. That would discourage drinking keg beer, as well as ensure undamaged city parks.

"Make them realize you are not playing games," he urged. Byrd Golay told council that Twin Falls was a family and community. "Why don't you guys stand up and say no to alcohol in city parks?" he asked.

Judy Golay said granting permits "endorsees group drunkenness."

A motion by Councilman Emery Petersen to raise the $50 fee to $300 failed in a 4-3 vote. Council members Gale Kleinkopf and Alan Wubker joined Petersen in voting for the measure. Paul Newton, John Peterson and Mayor Chris Talkington voted against. Mary McClusky was absent.

The issue arose after city staff members reported an increase in keg beer, especially at Dierkes Lake, in recent months.

Researcher Truman Massee thinks that his shaving-cream markers may hit the spot with area farmers

'Cream' of the crop

Cheap shaving-cream device helps farmers mark their fields

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — A smooth face once was the best you could hope for from a can of shaving cream. Now, smart farmers might be able to squeeze wood-textured beans or pestless pastures out of a $2 can of foam, soil scientist Truman Massee says.

From the seat of a tractor, it's easy to miss spots or treat some areas twice while spraying insecticides, herbicides, fungicides or other crop protectors, says Massee, who is a researcher at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Snake River Conservation and Research Center near Kimberly.

Farmers often rely on guesswork or distant landmarks to cover their fields. Keeping spray patterns straight particularly is a problem in pastures, where there are no crop rows for guidance, he says.

Some companies have developed systems that use red dyes or other foams to mark what's been sprayed and what has not. But they typically involve separate motor-driven pumps and tanks costing anywhere from $1,500 to $4,000, Massee says. One even uses electronic homers dropped into the field to guide the tractor, he says. Most farmers are not going to spend that kind of money to make a neat sweep of their fields, Massee figured.

So, he and fellow Agriculture Department technician Harold Waggoner have invented a do-it-yourself sprayer that lays down blobs of shaving cream to help farmers keep their bearings.

Called the "U.S.D.A.'s Poor Man's Marker," the marker costs about $3 to make, using common materials like plastic pipe, tubing and string. It fastens on the end of a spraying boom. Best of all, the shaving cream does its job for about 10 cents an acre, Massee estimates.

Persons who want to make one of the markers can get a free instruction sheet showing how. Basically, the can fits inside a plastic pipe, and a remote trigger on the top presses the foam button on top of the can. The tractor driver pulls on a string or cord — fishing line might work even better, Massee suggests — to work the trigger.

"There's only about 60 seconds of steady flow in each full can of shaving cream, so, with half-second tugs on the cord, a grower should be able to get about 120 good globes per can," he says.

Massee figures that each can is good for between seven and 12 acres, depending on the spacing of the blobs. The only major difficulty might come when winds are high or gusty, he says.

Generally, farmers would mount a can at each end of their spraying boom, because they normally are driving back and forth across the fields.

Massee says he got the idea from thinking about pranks such as shaving-cream designs on windows at Halloween or messages on honey-mooners' cars. The simple device was developed during the past year between large research projects, he says.

After giving a short demonstration on Monday, Massee suggested that making the markers might be a good project for Future Farmers of America chapters. The system is not patented because it was developed by a federal agency, he says.

Massee already has a fistful of letters asking for instructions, and the device is being used in the fields by Kimberly-area farmers, he says. Persons interested in building the inexpensive markers can write Massee at: Snake River Conservation Research Center, Box 186, Kimberly, 83341.

And in case you're wondering, the high-priced cream works as well as the cheap stuff. "We've tried four different brands, and they all make about the same amount of blobs," Massee says.

Council appoints pool funding group and picks designer

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls City Council named seven citizens to lead an effort to raise private funds for a new city swimming pool Monday night.

Council also selected the firm of Gile-Armstrong of Twin Falls as architect for the project. The seven citizens initially were chosen by ballot at an afternoon council work session. They are: Donna Britze, Zoe Ann Shaub, Dave VanEngelen, Morrie Roth, Joan Edwards, Matt Devine and Richard Jensen.

The committee members will have the task of heading a private drive to raise money for a replacement Harmon Park-type municipal pool. The pool will be designed in such a way that it can be enclosed at a later date.

Council held off setting a specific dollar goal for the group, however. There was talk of doing this at a later date when the total contribution from city's capital-improvement fund is set.

During a discussion of the proposed 1984 city budget at the work session, council tentatively decided to allocate $200,000 in capital-improvement funds for the pool. But several council members agreed that more may be needed for the project at a later date.

"Come spring, we may want to do what seems — sacrilegious — to this council — dip into our reserves," said Councilman Emery Petersen.

Council member Paul Newton said he found it hard to envision the group raising $300,000 from private sources in such hard economic times. And City Manager Tom Courtney noted the fund-raising drive would be concurrent with that of the United Way.

The seven members were chosen from a list of 13 citizens who had agreed to serve, Petersen said, however, that there will be plenty of work to be done in the fund-raising drive. There will be work for all volunteers, he said.

Gile-Armstrong was selected from a group of five architectural firms that had submitted proposals for the pool project.

Experience was a factor weighed heavily by council members in the selection. Newton said "real tricks" present themselves in the building of swimming pools.

In other action Monday night, council approved a bid of $151,506 for one street reconstruction project by PMF Inc. That project consists of the reconstruction of Wendell Street, from Curtis Eaton Avenue to Filer Avenue; the reconstruction of a quarter mile of Highland Avenue; and 11 separate storm-drainage improvements at older intersections.

Council also approved a bid of $5,743 from H. O. Jensen Inc. for a second project. It involves the installation of traffic signals at Filer Avenue and Washington Street.

Both projects will be completed this summer.

Consolidation hearings scheduled for August

By HARRIET GILBERTZ
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley residents will get a chance to speak out about school consolidation at a series of public meetings, scheduled for the week of Aug. 22-23.

The meetings will be sponsored by the joint legislative committee that is studying school reorganization. They are designed to give the public an opportunity to relay their ideas on the subject to their state representatives.

Wood River High School in Halley will be the site of an Aug. 22 meeting. On Aug. 23, the legislators will move to O'Leary Junior High School in Twin Falls.

Burley residents will get their chance to comment on Aug. 24 at Burley Junior High School. And Gooding High School will be the site of an Aug. 25 hearing. All of the meetings will start at 7:30 p.m., and participants are encouraged to submit their comments in writing.

Committee members will analyze the comments from the Magic Valley meetings, as well as similar ones being held in other parts of the state, before making recommendations for proposed legislation.

The committee consists of five state representatives, five state senators and 22 citizens. Businessmen, homemakers, professors, superintendents, principals and school board members are represented on the group.

The committee members from the Magic Valley are: Sen. John Barker, R-Buhl, the chairman of the Senate contingent; Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Deer; Rep. Donna Scott, R-Twin Falls; Curtis Eaton, president of Twin Falls Bank and Trust; Frank Berry, the principal of Twin Falls Christian Academy; and Keith Huetig, a Valley school board member.

The committee will study district boundaries, transportation routes and administrative structure before making its final report to the full Legislature in January.

School districts in Twin Falls, Canyon, Lincoln, Jerome, Gooding and Bonneville counties probably will rank high as target areas for consolidation.

While the state committee's hearings in this area are still a month away, members of a group studying the possible consolidation of the Kimberly, Halley and Murlough school districts has been working quietly for several months.

After spending the past four months looking into the details of a merger, group members are scheduled to report back to their individual boards in August, says Chairman James Wright of Kimberly.

The 21-member committee has contacted the St. Mary's, Buhl and Marsh Valley school districts to get an idea of their curriculum, administration and transportation routes are like, Wright says.

Those districts were chosen because they are about the same size as a consolidated Kimberly, Hansen and Murlough district would be, he says.

Jerome officials won't promise pay increase

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Jerome County's elected officials and department heads failed to get a commitment from the county commissioners Monday afternoon for a 10 percent pay increase for county employees.

Following the announcement last week of a planned 15 percent pay increase for Twin Falls County workers, Jerome officials met with the commissioners to inquire about their chances for an increase. They said their staffs would be happy with a 10 percent increase.

Assessor Marjorie DuBols said Jerome County employees have not had a pay increase for two years and many are getting discouraged. Some are actually unable to live on their salaries, she said.

Sheriff Elsa Hall said some of his workers make only $400 per month in take-home pay, on which they are trying to support a family.

"By the time they pay rent, even in a low-quality apartment or house, pay their insurance, car payments and medical bills, there just isn't much left for food," the sheriff said. Hall and DuBols both said they have employees who are forced to use food stamps to feed their families.

All of the department heads expressed concern that workers who have waited and waited for better pay are not going to stay with the county if higher pay is offered elsewhere.

"We are going to lose our trained and experienced workers, and this will reduce the quality of our services," DuBols said.

Clerk Cheryl Watts said she has two highly valued employees she is afraid she is going to lose because of the low pay.

"We would like to be able to say we can give raises this year, but we aren't sure it's in the cards at this time," she said.

Fast-food logos replace billboards along the interstate

By HAL BERNTSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In the changing world of advertising along Idaho's interstate highways, big is out and small is in. Many of the large billboards that once flourished along the Idaho stretch of Interstate 84 have been removed — the victims of the highway beautification program launched by the Johnson administration in the mid-1960s.

But a new generation of smaller bill signs are popping up along the interstate. They bear the logos of various motels, campgrounds, service stations and restaurants.

The new signs, installed by the state Department of Transportation, arrived in the Twin Falls area in mid-June — flanking the east- and westbound Twin Falls exits off Interstate 84.

The signs tell weary motorists hailing from faraway parts that Twin Falls is a city where they can savor the familiar tastes of a McDonald's Big Mac or get a good night's sleep in the comfort of a Holiday Inn bed. They also bear the logos of Burger King, JB's, Canyon Springs Inn and several area service stations.

The signs are filling an advertising void created during the last 15 years, as the state Transportation Department forced the removal of most of the billboards along the interstate.

Those billboards, says Twin Falls MacDonald's owner Bill Kyle, did not meet the rigid zoning standards set forth in the federal Highway Beautification Act of 1968. The standards, he says, include a requirement that billboards "only appear on commercially-zoned properties with year-round businesses.

States that did not comply with the terms of the act risked losing some federal highway funding, Kyle says.

Some billboard companies are fighting the government-imposed regulations, he says. But in the meantime, the few legal billboard spots that remain along state and interstate highways command premium prices.

The new state signs, Kyle says, offer an alternative means of promoting local businesses to travelers.

"I'm not sure the state should be involved in this type of thing," he says, "but given the way things are, the state boards are better than nothing at all."

"They're located right on the shoulder of the highway, so they don't have to be as big (as billboards). But they don't have the same flexibility as billboards, since you won't change your message every few months."

State Department of Highway officials do not view the signs simply as toned-down versions of the old billboards. Rather, says state Highway official Bill Fowler, they are "informational signs."

'Banned' author will speak

KETCHUM — Howard Morland, the author of The Progressive magazine's once-banned "The H-Bomb Secret" article, will speak this Thursday in Ketchum. Morland is now the chairman of a program coordinator for the Washington, D.C.-based Coalition for a New Foreign and Military Policy.

His talk will address first-strike nuclear strategy, including the controversy over the proposed deployment of Pershing II and "cruise" missiles in Europe this fall.

Morland's article, published in the Progressive's November 1979 issue, was delayed for six months by a government court injunction.

Morland's Ketchum talk will be part of a short Idaho tour sponsored by the Groundwater Alliance and the Snake River Alliance. He also will speak in Boise and Pocatello, as well as tour the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

His talk will begin at 8 p.m. at the Crookside Bar and Grill.

Travel group meets today

HANSEN — The Magdalen Travel Committee will meet at 1 p.m. today at Anderson Camp, which is located off Idaho 50, just north of Interstate 84, near Hells Canyon.

On the agenda are revisions of the committee's bylaws, a discussion on promotion of upcoming summer and fall events, and completion of the Magdalen Travel show booth display.

Jackpot to host blood drawing

JACKPOT — The first Red Cross blood drawing in Jackpot will be held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. today at the Jackpot Pete's cocktail center. It will be sponsored by the Jackpot Lions Club.

Sunday fight leads to arrests

TWIN FALLS — An early Sunday morning fight in Twin Falls has resulted in two arrests. The men may be more, according to the police chief Tim Qualls.

Marla Magdalena Trevino, 20, and Gustavo Ray Dernal, 18, both of Twin Falls, were arrested for battery shortly after midnight, on Second Avenue East. Qualls said Monday.

The two were released later Sunday from the Twin Falls County Jail, after posting $800 bond each.

Trevino was charged with battery after she resisted arrest, Qualls said. No police officers were injured, however, he said.

Qualls would not release any further details about the incident because he said it still is under investigation and there probably will be more arrests.

Suit filed over condominium

BOISE (UPI) — A La Grande, Ore., man is seeking $40,000 damages in a lawsuit over the purchase of a Ketchum condominium.

Stephen C. Anderson's lawsuit, filed Monday in federal court in Boise, claims that Edward and Josephine Flynn of Woodside, Calif., should be held responsible for a debt owed the Fort Worth Mortgage Corp. in Fort Worth, Texas, and the Illinois Services Federal Savings and Loan Association of Chicago.

In 1978, the suit says, Anderson and the Flyns agreed to exchange the Flyns' condominium for land owned by Anderson. Anderson assumed the Flyns' mortgage on the condominium, while the Flyns assumed Anderson's mortgage.

But in May, Fort Worth Mortgage and Illinois Services demanded full payment of the amount due on the condominium Anderson had obtained.

The two companies claim they were owed the cash because they were not consulted before the condominium was traded to Anderson.

Anderson's lawsuit first asks the court to declare the two lenders do not have the right to demand full payment on the condominium.

It also asks the court to require the Flyns to pay the $40,000 debt if it holds that the lenders are within their rights to demand payment.

Camas board member resigns

FAIRFIELD — The Camas County school board has elected new officers for the coming year.

Bill Simon of Fairfield has been elected the new chairman. He replaces Melvin Fletcher, also of Fairfield, who resigned from the board at its meeting last week.

Fletcher had been a member of the board since 1978. He resigned for personal reasons, Stroud said.

The board also elected Jack Prostenor of Fairfield as its vice chairman.

Guerin Fischer of Rolling Meadows, Ill. — the two out-of-state candidates for the college presidency — are scheduled to visit Twin Falls next week. Interim CSI President Jerry Meyerhoeffer also is finalizing the board.

The board expects to make a decision shortly after the on-campus interviews, Craig said.

Yarborough currently is the president of Amarillo College, and he also has been the president of a community college in Cheyenne, Wyo.

Fischer, a native of Spokane, is the executive director of the Clearbrook Center Foundation, an organization that serves the disabled and handicapped.

LeRoy Craig said that H.D. Yarborough of Amarillo, Texas, and vice president of CSI under James "Doc" Taylor. He assumed the president's duties when Taylor died last year.

It also was announced that the college will sell its surplus equipment this Friday, at an auction that will begin at 11 a.m. in the Expo Center.

All of the money will go to the college. Included in the inventory are chairs, desks, beds, shelves, passenger cars, a video camera, a motorcycle and a combine. Some of the more unusual items are a plastic duck, a purple velvet saddle, and two iron rocker practice horses.

The vehicles were donated to the college and were used in the auto shop.

Idaho Power shows user increase

BOISE — The Idaho Power Co. is reporting a growth spurt in new customers.

Power company spokesman Larry Taylor said Monday that the utility had connected 2,422 new homes, businesses and farms this year by June 30, almost 700 more than by the same time last year.

In the southern division, which covers the Magic Valley, 203 new customers hooked into the utility's electrical lines. That is 70 percent more than the 119 recorded during the first six months of 1982.

The most active area was the Boise division, which includes Boise, Nampa, Caldwell and Mountain Home.

The increases may be tied to the recent upturn in the housing market, Taylor said. More than 1,600 of the new connections were to homes, he said.

Although the new activity is far ahead of 1981 and 1982, it is not expected to affect power supply in the utility's service area, Taylor said.

Farmers have used 27 percent fewer megawatt hours of electricity this spring for irrigation pumping, he said. There also have been few very hot days, which reduces the amount of electricity used for air conditioning.

Idaho Power officials have said they expect to be able to avoid buying electricity from other power systems this summer because of adequate capacity. The only difficult drain of power occurred on July 13, when the demand barely inched over last year's peak day, Taylor said.

At the end of June, Idaho Power had 263,225 customers in Idaho, northern Nevada and eastern Oregon. It was a gain of 4,000 customers over 1982, the utility spokesman said.

Signs

Fowler says that the businesses whose names and logos appear on the signs must pay an annual fee of $350 to the state Department of Transportation. The fees, he says, pay for the installation and maintenance of the signs over their eight-to-10-year expected lifetime. The actual logos, however, must be furnished by the businesses, according to state specifications.

Eventually, Fowler says, the rental fees should provide enough revenue to offset the need for the state tax money that now is used to fund the program.

The businesses promoted by the signs, Fowler says, have to meet certain standards set by the state. "If they're a restaurant, they have to serve three meals a day, maintain a certain number of operating hours, be licensed by state and local agencies, and have restrooms and telephones," he says. "And gas stations have to be open at least 16 hours a day."

Fowler says the gasoline signs can hold the names of up to six businesses, while the food, lodging and camping signs each can hold four names.

Under the present system, a business files a sign application with the state Department of Highways. If the business meets the standards, then its application is approved.

The department then solicits applications from other businesses within three miles around the applicant's operation to try and fill additional spaces on the sign.

If there are more applicants than space available, applications are approved on a first-come, first-served basis, Fowler says.

Like many other governmental operations, there is a certain amount of red tape involved: After he filed his application, Kyle says, it took the state 16 months to install his MacDonald's sign.

Jerome

"I wish we could tell you yes, we will give you the raises," said Commissioner Pam Smith. "But we have to find the money first."

Butler suggested that the department heads make a list of any alternative suggestions, such as reducing working hours or days, or adding other benefits that would not require a major financial outlay. He asked the officials to submit their lists for consideration during the budget sessions.

Michael T. Gulick

HEYBURN — Michael Tracy Gulick, 27, of Heyburn, died Sunday at his home. Born May 5, 1956, in Monet, Mo., he later moved with his family to Burley, where he attended school. He married Diane Barnes on Aug. 20, 1981. In Burley, they moved to Heyburn, where they had lived since.

Mr. Gulick was employed by the J.R. Simpson Co. He was a member of the Black Powder Club.

Surviving are: his wife of Heyburn; three daughters, Alyson Lacey Gulick and Savannah Diane Gulick, both of Heyburn, and Destiny Dawn Triton of Boise; his mother, Ludean Gulick of Heyburn; a brother, Dennis Gulick of Twin Falls; and three sisters, Joyce Roberts of Burley, Sheryl Steens of Hansen and Lisa Gulick of Heyburn. His father preceded him in death.

The funeral will be held Wednesday at 11 a.m. at Hansen Mortuary in Rupert, with pastor Ross H. Dampier of the Rupert First Christian Church officiating. Burial will be at Riverside Cemetery in Heyburn.

Friends may call at the funeral home this afternoon and evening, and prior to the service on Wednesday.

Max K. Martin

BUHL — Max Kaha Martin, 63, of Buhl, died Sunday at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Boise.

Born in Pikeville, Tenn., on June 4, 1920, he moved with his family in 1923 to Twin Falls, where he attended school. During World War II, he served in the Army, having been stationed in Germany. He had lived in Buhl since.

He married Carol Shirley at Grange Park, Ore., in 1949. They later were divorced.

Surviving are: three sons, Max Dale

Martin of Riverside, Calif.; Daniel Lee Martin of Grants Pass, Ore.; and Wade Eugene Martin of Salem, Ore.; four grandchildren; a brother, Homer Martin of Buhl; and three sisters, Joyce Pikeville, Tenn. He was preceded in death by a son, three brothers and a sister.

A graveside service will be held Thursday at 2 p.m. at West End Cemetery in Buhl.

Friends may call at the Farmer Chapel in Buhl on Wednesday until 8 p.m. and until noon on Thursday.

TWIN FALLS — Leslie Joan Hankins Warley, 21, of Pocatello, and formerly of Twin Falls, died early Saturday morning in an automobile accident in Pocatello.

She was born Aug. 17, 1961, in Pocatello. She had graduated from high school in Twin Falls.

Survivors include a daughter, Kara Jo Warley; and a son, Rick Warley, both of Pocatello; her mother, Zina Rae Magee of Pocatello; a brother, Marshall Hankins of Pocatello; two sisters, Jean Magee and Mary E. Magee, both of Pocatello; and her paternal grandparents, Al and Lucille Hankins of Twin Falls.

She was preceded in death by her father, Val Hankins; a sister, Cindy Hankins; and her grandmother, Elzina Jensen.

The funeral will be held today at 1 p.m. at the 10th Ward of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Pocatello.

Friends may call at the Manning Funeral Chapel in Pocatello until 11 a.m.

Stanley A. Fields

CASTLEFORD — Stanley A. Fields, 60, of Castleford, died Sunday at the Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital, following a long illness.

Born at Whitesburg, Ky., on Oct. 6, 1922, he graduated from high school and attended Berea College in Kentucky. He had worked in coal mines until moving to Kansas in 1954.

Mr. Fields married Adena Carson at St. Marys, Kan., on Oct. 12, 1928. They moved in 1946 to Castleford, where he had been a farmer and carpenter until retiring in 1979.

He was a member of the First Baptist Church of Castleford.

Surviving are: his wife of Castleford; two sons, Jack Fields and Bob Fields, both of Buhl; three daughters, Geneva Benson of Jerome and Lila Graybeal of Buhl; 18 grandchildren; 26 great-grandchildren; two sisters, Mabel Cramer and Irene Graybeal, both of Boise; and two brothers, Russell Fields of St. Marys and Paul Fields of Fallbrook, Calif.

He was preceded in death by two sisters and three brothers.

The funeral will be held Wednesday at 10:30 a.m. at the First Baptist Church in Castleford, with the Rev. Larry Rankin officiating. Burial will be at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls.

Friends may call at the Farmer Chapel in Buhl today until 8 p.m.

The family suggests that memorial contributions be made to the Castleford Quick Response Unit or the Baptist Church in Castleford.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon and evening, and at the church one hour prior to the services.

BURLEY — A memorial service for Edwin Horner "Foxy" Berkey, who died Sunday, will be held Wednesday at 2 p.m. in the Payne Chapel in Burley, with pastor Harry Johnson officiating. The family suggests that memorial contributions be made to the American Cancer Society.

Eager lover, but not father

DEAR ABBY: I am a 49-year-old man, divorced for 10 years. I raised four children — my youngest is finally out of the nest.

I am in love with a young lawyer who is divorced from her lawyer husband and has custody of their only child — a 7-year-old boy. If it weren't for the boy, I would marry her in a minute, but I don't want to raise another child! I have told her that.

She says she will send the boy to summer camp, to his father's, to her mother's for weekends and holidays, then to boarding school so I wouldn't have to raise him, but I think the boy deserves better than to be sent away, pushed around and boarded out.

This woman and I are perfect for each other in every way, so why is it so difficult for me to move into her lovely home, to be with her and the boy away, and live happily ever after?

—HAVING DOUBTS

DEAR HAVING: Because having been a conscientious father, your conscience won't permit you to allow this woman to abandon her responsibilities as a mother in order to have you.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

I also thought I didn't have a drinking problem because I never drank before 5 p.m., although at night I'd drink until I passed out.

In my case, not only was my drinking making me a bed wetter, it was hurting my marriage in ways I wasn't even aware of.

A friend got me to go to Alcoholics Anonymous. I've been sober for a year, and it's been the best year of my life. Incidentally, when I stopped drinking, the bed-wetting stopped immediately. —Wet Nightie, should introduce her husband to A.A.

—DRY IN L.A.

DEAR DRY: I received a flood of letters (no pun intended) from former bed wetters saying, "As soon as I dried up, so did my bed." Let's hear it for A.A. It's the greatest!

We deaf persons are as hungry for knowledge, diversion and entertainment as the hearing public. If you print my letter, it might help.

—PUNTA GORDA, FLA., READER

DEAR READER: One letter (yours or mine) won't help, but the squeaky wheel gets the grease, so if organized groups of the deaf and hearing-impaired were to launch an organized, vigorous letter-writing campaign, you might get some action.

NBC and CBS, can you hear me?

DEAR ABBY: The letter about cousins — first, second, third — reminded me of a cartoon I saw years ago.

It pictured a woman showing her family album to a friend. She was saying, "That's Rodney's first cousin twice removed. Rodney threw him out of the house twice."

He builds condominiums for cats

MUNDELEIN, Ill. (UPI) — George Ney believes a cat's home should be his castle, or at least his condo.

To that end, Ney and his four employees at Cat House Originals will make condominiums, duplexes, ranch style homes and tree houses to suit even the fussiest feline tastes.

The structures are made of tree limbs, plywood and lots and lots of carpet. They're perfect for keeping cat claws in shape without sacrificing human furniture. Ney said.

Business is growing by leaps and bounds.

"Anybody that's a cat lover will do it," said Ney, one of the few cat trainers in the country. "Cat lovers are different — they're crazy. They'll buy them. The houses are so different, they should know what he's talking about."

"I used to be a cat in my previous life," he said with a chuckle. "The only thing that has changed is my shape. My cat-like feelings carried over."

Ney started catering to felines five or six years ago. Before that, he owned a carpet store and began carpeting wire spools. One customer asked if he could make a perch for her cat.

After that, he started building scratching posts and four years ago found enough demand for kitty condos to prompt closing his carpet store and pounce fulltime on the cat housing market.

CONSERVATION PAYS OFF FOR NATURAL GAS CUSTOMERS!

Intermountain Gas will help you conserve energy and save money!

We'll conduct an Energy Audit in your home for possible energy savings.

- Conservation must be the ultimate goal of all energy companies. If we can help you make your home more energy efficient, the time will have been well spent and you'll save money. We are offering this energy audit at no cost to Intermountain Gas customers. This is what we will do:
- Check the thermal efficiency of insulation, windows and doors.
  - Check heating system, water heating and evaluate the habits and energy usage patterns with suggestions on ways to reduce energy consumption in your home.
  - Give you a copy of the inspection results, review ways you can reduce energy waste and tell you which measures qualify for federal and state tax incentives.

Results of this audit are determined by a sophisticated computer program for this purpose.

We will also give you a folder that explains 27 ways to reduce energy consumption at NO COST OR LOW COST. If you'd like a free energy audit for your home, please call us for an appointment.

Modernize your present gas heating system to save three ways.

- We'll give you $100 cash.
- You'll start saving up to 20% on heating bills.

ELECTRONIC IGNITION YOU GET

$50.00 CASH

Replaces conventional standing pilot light which burns continuously. Valve ignites burner electrically. No gas burns between heating cycles. Saves money during the heating season. Eliminates service calls to disconnect furnace in the spring and reconnect in the fall. Electronic ignition must be installed to qualify for cash rebates shown below.

VENT DAMPER YOU GET

$25.00 CASH

When furnace goes off, damper closes vent so that heat cannot escape up the chimney. (Applicable only when furnace is in a heated area.)

NIGHT SETBACK THERMOSTAT YOU GET

$25.00 CASH

The equipment described can be added to most natural gas heating systems. A qualified dealer must install the equipment to earn cash rebates shown above.

Weddings

Human-Schlund

EDEN — Kathy Human and Bob Schlund exchanged vows June 5 at the Trinity Lutheran Church in Eden. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kyle Human of Eden. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Jean Kohn and Bob Schlund Sr., both of Twin Falls.

Rev. Gary Benedix officiated with Anna Schwarz as organist. Lonette Brutke and Andy Morris sang. The bride wore an organza gown trimmed with chantilly lace featuring a chapel-length train. She carried a cascading bouquet of roses on a white Bible.

Tracy Agee was the maid of honor. Penny and Vickie Schlund and Cindy Larson, sisters of the bridegroom, and Lori Human, sister-in-law of the bride, were bridesmaids.

Bryan Human, brother of the bride, was best man. Kelly Human, brother of the bride; Ross Magnuson, Loran Giesple and Chuck Hency were groomsmen.

Special guests included Mr. and Mrs. Eldred Patz, great-grandparents of the bride; Mrs. Zada Wisecaver, grandmother of the bride; and Mrs. Martha Schlund, grandmother of the bridegroom.

A reception was held after the ceremony. Angie Homer was guestbook attendant. Kandace Sorenson, sister of the bridegroom; Wendy Peterson, Jody and Leslie Silver attended the gift table.

Sandra Wisecaver, aunt of the bride; Patty Kincaid; Sue Shawver and Jana, Burnett served. Shelly Stigile provided music at the reception.

The bride, a graduate of Valley High School, is a student at the College of Southern Idaho. The bridegroom, also a graduate of Valley High School, attended Idaho State University. He is employed as a salesman by Thlesen Motors.

Following a trip, the couple is living in Twin Falls.

Standouts

Two CSI students have received Pat and Liv Schneider memorial scholarships. They are Rodney Michotte of Billings, Mont., who plans to study engineering, and Leslie Butcher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Butcher of Filer, who is in the registered nursing program.

The fund was established following the death of Pat Schneider, a longtime CSI employee.

Jeffrey D. Olson, son of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Olson of Twin Falls, has received the Chevalier degree, highest honor given in the DeMolay. The citation, given at ceremonies in Idaho Falls, is for outstanding activity and is awarded by the International Supreme Council upon recommendation by the Advisory Council to the executive officer.

Olson has been active in the Twin Falls DeMolay chapter and now is state DeMolay chapter senior councilor. Jeff Marchant of Burley also received the degree.

Following intermission the band will play "Dream Journey," Bob James; "Danny Goodman in Concert," arranged by Wayne Scott; "Manchall Spectacular," arranged by Warren Barker and "Big Band Favorites," arranged by Lowden.

The concert will conclude with "Here We Have Idaho."

WWI vets set picnic

RUPERT — The Veterans of World War I and auxiliary will hold their annual potluck picnic at 1 p.m. Thursday in Neptune Park, Rupert. All World War I veterans, wives and widows are invited, according to Charles Schaddick of Rupert.

Speakers scheduled

TWIN FALLS — Carol Alworth of Soda Springs will speak at the Women's Aglow Fellowship meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Senior Citizens Center, 939 Fourth Ave. W., Twin Falls. Cover charge is $1.50.

Paperbacks requested

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Band Booster Club needs donations of paperback books, especially westerns. Proceeds from the sale of the books will be used to purchase jackets for the high school pep band and support all Twin Falls school bands, according to Roland L. Gardner, club president.

Anyone having books to donate can call 733-2313 for pickup or the paperbacks may be delivered to Gardner's home, 1345 Wilmore Ave., Twin Falls.

Stockton-Harkness

TWIN FALLS — Beth Stockton became the bride of Max L. Harkness June 17 at a ceremony at the 12th LDS Ward in Twin Falls.

Bishop Bert Webster officiated. Jane Stockton, daughter of the bride, and Royce Fraley, both of Twin Falls, were the attendants.

An open house was held following the ceremony at the bride's home, with music by the Oldtime Fiddlers.

The couple will reside in Twin Falls where the bridegroom is self employed and the bride works at the Twin Falls Clinic Hospital.

Practical nurses graduated

TWIN FALLS — Fifteen College of Southern Idaho practical nursing students were recognized Friday in the annual graduation ceremony for completion of the program.

Valencia Koehn of Buhl was selected by her classmates as the outstanding student and received the award for the best geriatric nurse by Harrah's Nursing Home.

Judith Fisher of Twin Falls received the Dr. James L. Taylor award for academic achievement and the award from the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center for clinical expertise.

Joseph Laragen of Twin Falls was honored by the Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital for his clinical expertise. Laura Novak of Twin Falls received the award from the faculty for perfect attendance.

Other students completing the year-long program of classroom studies and clinical experience were Laura Blessing, Kathrine Collins, Shelly Hubert, Paula Jardine, Patti Jo Miller, Leana Parks, Wendy Prouse, Susan Shewmaker, Sylvia Simon, Connie Stone and Melanie Switzer.

Servicemen

JEROME — Air National Guard Airman Mary J. Moore, daughter of Robert D. Coupe of Jerome, has been assigned to Keesler Air Force Base, Miss., after completing Air Force Basic training.

The basic training provides credits toward an associate degree in applied science through the Air Force Community College. The airman will now receive specialized instruction in the administration field. She is a 1981 graduate of Boise State University.

She's angry about a harmless lump

DEAR DR. LAMB — For about five months I have had a medium-sized lump in my breast, right above the nipple. I had a mammogram which proved to be negative. My doctor diagnosed it as fibrocystic disease. She says it is harmless, and there is nothing to be done for it.

I have noticed that the size and pain varies before, during and after my menstrual period.

I have cut back on caffeine and all calcium foods which is supposed to help. I am confused and angry with her decision. May I have your opinion?

DEAR READER — I am not sure why you are confused and especially why you are angry. Your doctor has evidently reassured you that you do not have breast cancer and you should be happy that your examinations proved that.

Such lumps from fibrocystic disease do not become cancer either. They are quite common and may be more painful just before menstrual periods.

I would like for you to be a little more aggressive in your program to help decrease the symptoms. You should stop all caffeine. Don't drink any coffee except decaffeinated coffee and no tea except decaffeinated tea.

Avoid cocoa and chocolate in all forms. If you smoke, stop entirely. If you follow that program for a year you may be fortunate in having a major decrease in your symptoms.

There is some difference of opinion about this, but studies that showed limited results were too short in duration and did not also have the women stop smoking.

You should read about fibrocystic disease in The Health Letter 18-12, Breast Basics, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it.

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

In care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Castle City Station, New York, NY 10013.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I had two growths removed through my rectum. The only cutting that was done was on the growths to remove them. Before the operation they were referred to as tumors.

After the operation with the benefits of biopsies, they were referred to as "polyps" and non-malignant. What is the likelihood of recurrence of these? If there is a recurrence what is the danger of cancer?

DEAR READER — Polyps are circumscribed areas of tissue that project above the surface of various linings. So polyps in the colon are projections of tissue above the surface of the colon lining. Some are wart-like projections, others are flatter.

You can tell a certain amount about a polyp from its physical size and characteristics, but the best and final evidence is being able to look at the tissues under a microscope. There are several types of polyps but the common hyperplastic polyp is a piling up of normal tissues. Possibly this occurs because the lining is constantly being shed and a new lining is always being formed.

Some polyps do have a relatively marked tendency to become malignant but others, such as the hyperplastic ones, are quite common and do not become malignant.

You may develop new polyps, rather than having a recurrence of the ones removed, just as other people develop polyps.

Howell captained a local team to the best ball title at 117. The amateurs were Ted Black, Gary Jenkins, Durbin, and Gus Menapace. The Pocatello Country Club crew of pro Gary Mathie and amateurs Woody Kerbel, Dave Harding had 122.

Tied at 123 was the home crew of Mike Ceriello, McCollum, Jim McClellan, Thomas and Barry and Garden Valley pro Rich Stanwood and amateurs Montgomery, Skredersiu, Glenn Giddings and Steve Meyerhoefer.

South's stars face big job

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The last time a football team coached by Bill Jones met a team coached by Herb Criner at Bruhn Stadium, the final score was 55-13.

That, of course, was last November's showdown for the A-1 state championship, won by Criner's Coeur d'Alene squad over Jones and Twin Falls.

Come Monday night's North-South 1983 State All-Star Game, Jones, the South's head defensive coach, and Criner, who coordinates the North's offense, will again prowls opposite sidelines.

Maybe this time the score won't be as lopsided, but don't be surprised if a similar number of points are amassed.

"I do not predict scores. I've played against Herb and the North people enough to know they're capable of running up the scores," Jones said Monday afternoon during a press conference at College of Southern Idaho. "I do know it will not be a defensive game."

It could also be a better game than the North's 22-10 victory over the South last July.

"We're potentially a better team than last year," said Criner, noting that the North once more enjoys a sizeable advantage over the South. But the South isn't totally bereft of talent, either. "This year's team isn't as large as the team we had last year, but I feel we're quicker and have a better attitude," said Cleve Morgan of Soda Springs, who helped coach the '82 South crew.

Despite his doubts that the All-Star Game will feature relatively little scoring, Jones spoke enthusiastically about the South's defense, particularly the linebackers.

"Out of the good linebackers in the state, the South has at least half," he said. Skyline's Ernest Spruitt and Bonneville's Jeff Moss, Jones continued, have proven to be especially effective in early

Erickson will speak at banquet

TWIN FALLS — University of Idaho head football Coach Dennis Erickson, who took the Vandals from a 4-4 record to the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs in his first season at the helm in Moscow, will be the featured speaker Sunday at the 1983 State All-Star Football Game Banquet.

The banquet will be held on the eve of the State All-Star Football Game, pitting the top prep players from Washington and 3 against the All-Star team from District 4, 5 and 6. The banquet is scheduled for the Coliseum Springs Inn.

The banquet is open to the public, and reservations may be made by telephone at 236-2200. Tickets are $10. Seating is on a first-come, first-served basis.

secondary," he said.

Bonneville's Kirk Copeland heads the South's corps of tailbacks, with Milco's Dave Pena and Blackfoot's Rob Aubrey sharing attention at fullback.

Meanwhile, if the hyperbole of its coaches is to be believed, the North boasts an offense overflowing with superb players.

Moscow's Eric Bjorkman, who handles the North's passing attack, has great faith in his quarterbacks and receivers.

"I feel like a little boy in a candy store," Bjorkman said. "When it comes to the passing game we have three great quarterbacks — (Mountain Home's) Brent Pease, (Moscow's) Vaughn Goebel and (Coeur d'Alene's) Steve Halliday who can throw the ball all over the field. All of them will play."

Joining the quarterbacks in the backfield are "four if not five capable backs" in the words of — Richard Pease of Mountain Home. Bishop Kelly's Mike Henry, Post Falls' Greg Ziegler and Mountain Home's David Toy (bound for the University of Washington) are the tailbacks, with Borah's Ty Ogata and Emmett's Tim Waggon at fullback.

Post Falls' Nick Menegas, the North's head defensive coach, enjoys the luxury of having the game's biggest player, Moscow's Doug Riesberg (6-foot-7, 240 pounds) on his front line.

The kickoff is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Tickets are priced at $4 and are available in advance at Donnelly Sports and Sherwood Sports Center, and at CSI.

Justice gives NCAA, nets a reprieve

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Supreme Court Justice Byron White, a former All-America halfback, has blocked a ruling that invalidated the NCAA's multimillion-dollar arrangement with television networks on college football broadcasts.

White took the action Saturday, but the Supreme Court did not make it public until Monday.

His order delays the effect of a federal appeals court ruling that the broadcasting deal is anti-competitive because it reduces the number of games available to TV viewers nationwide on fall Saturdays.

The NCAA's contracts with the networks involve $74.3 million in payments in 1983, and affect at least 22.5 million for each game broadcast.

White asked the University of Oklahoma Board of Regents and the University of Georgia Athletic Association, which brought the challenge to the television package, to respond by Tuesday.

Clyde Muchmore, an Oklahoma City attorney who represents OU, said he had anticipated White's order and spent the entire weekend working on a response.

"We expected this request. Justice White's request for our response by tomorrow (Tuesday) indicate he's going to do something soon."

Toolson, Hulsev earn berths on BCI team

MERIDIAN — Andy Toolson of Twin Falls High School, Gary Hulsev of Jerome and Dennis Dugger of Shoshone have been named to Idaho's Basketball Congress International team.

The Idaho BCI team will compete with teams from other states at the BCI Summer Camp in Meridian, Idaho, from July 22-28.

Tempo, Ariz., next week.

The Idaho team was selected on the basis of tryouts held last week at Ricks College in Reardan. The tryouts were coached by Idaho basketball coach at Ricks and by Elliott Johnson, a former Idaho State basketball coach.

The BCI team will compete in the Class A-3 championship at Ricks College.

Toolson, a 6-foot-10, 200-pound forward, is the star of the team. He is a member of the Gen. State Conference championship team and has been named to the basketball tournament last week.

Hulsev, a 6-foot-10, 200-pound forward, is the star of the team. He is a member of the Gen. State Conference championship team and has been named to the basketball tournament last week.

Dugger, a 6-foot-10, 200-pound forward, is the star of the team. He is a member of the Gen. State Conference championship team and has been named to the basketball tournament last week.

ANDY TOOLSON

Toolson, 10, played from Rigby, Idaho. Hulsev, a 6-foot guard, is from Coeur d'Alene. Dugger, a 6-foot guard, is from Caldwell. Rick Klotz, a 6-foot guard, is from Coeur d'Alene. Neil Koch, a 6-foot forward, is from Burley. Steve Halliday, a 6-foot forward, is from Mountain Home. Doug Riesberg, a 6-foot-7 forward, is from Moscow. Vaughn Goebel, a 6-foot forward, is from Coeur d'Alene. Steve Halliday, a 6-foot forward, is from Coeur d'Alene.

PAT CORRALES
Fair warning

First-place Phils fire skipper Corrales

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Philadelphia Phillies, who have been struggling although they finished this last weekend in first place, fired Manager Pat Corrales Monday and replaced him with general manager Paul Owens.

Phillies President Bill Giles said the managerial change was made to try to shake some life into the Phillies, who were 43-42 going into Monday night's game against the Houston Astros.

"When you see ball players hitting 40 points below where they've been hitting, something is wrong," Giles said at a packed news conference at Veterans Stadium. "It's the job of the manager to motivate and get the players to play up to their capabilities. Whether it's the players' fault, Pat's fault or my fault, we have to find out."

Owens, the Phillies general manager since 1974, is taking over the field managership for the first time in 11 years. He replaced Frank Lucchesi as manager for the 2 1/2 remaining months of the 1972 season.

"I feel we've got the talent out there, but we've just been spinning our wheels," Owens said. "We're too good a club to be doing what we're doing. We have to find out who is playing and who isn't."

Owens, 59, said he will just be the field manager for this year, returning to the front office next year.

Corrales, who was hired in November 1981 to replace Dallas Green as manager, appeared to be on the chopping block last month after the Phillies completed a 1-6 swing through California. However, after Corrales met with the front office staff, Giles said the manager's job was safe. Giles explained Monday that Corrales did not institute some changes that were recommended.

"We told him what he should do to improve the club," he said. "But I didn't feel he did what we told him. We liked Pat, and we were really hoping that he could get this team going but it became evident to us he didn't do it."

Corrales had been under fire recently for his continual juggling of the Phillies lineup. Some players complained about the change and others told reporters privately about a lack of communication with the manager.

Handyman Royster lifts Braves

By United Press International

Atlanta's Jerry Royster, normally a utility performer, said before the start of the season that he wanted more playing time. The New York Mets wish he had been sitting on the bench Monday night.

Royster tripled in two runs and scored on a wild pitch to highlight a four-run fifth inning that rallied the Braves to a 7-4 victory over New York.

With the Mets leading 4-2, Atlanta scored twice in the fifth. Glenn Hubbard led off with a single off starter Tom Gorman, 0-3, and was forced at second by Bruce Benedict. Pinch hitter Randy Johnson walked and one out later, Royster followed with his two-run triple to right to knock out Gorman. Reliever Doug Sisk then uncorked a wild pitch to score Royster. Dale Murphy walked, went to second on a balk and scored on a single by Bob Horner.

In the eighth, Royster doubled in Mike Jorgensen with the Braves' seventh run.

Rick Camp, the second of four Atlanta pitchers, hurled 3 1/2 innings.

National

striking out two and allowing just one hit to even his record at 7-7. Steve Bedrosian pitched the ninth for his 15th save.

New York took a 1-0 lead in the first off Craig McMurtry on a run-scoring single by George Foster and made it 4-0 in the second on a two-run single by Mookie Wilson and Foster's RBI single.

Atlanta scored twice to make it 4-2 in the second on an RBI single by Terry Harper and a run-scoring double by Benedict.

Houston's 4, Philadelphia's 2

At Philadelphia, Steve Cruz, Terry Furl and Bill Doran each had two-run singles, their last in the 1983 major league debut of Paul Owens. Steve Carlton, 9-11, lasted only 3 1/2 innings, his shortest effort since last Aug. 24, as the Astros made things easy for starter Joe Nickro, 6-7, with a 7-1 hit attack. Owens, who moved from the front office to replace the fired Pat Corrales earlier in the day, was an interim manager in 1972.

Resurgent Chisox climb atop Western Division

By United Press International

Making catcher Carlton Fisk No. 2 here helped make the Chicago White Sox No. 1.

Fisk, hitting at a .350 pace since being moved to the second spot in the Chicago batting order, drove in four runs with a two-run homer and a single Monday night to spark the White Sox to a 5-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

The victory moved Chicago into first place in the American League West. The White Sox are 30-18 since May 28, when they were in sixth place, seven games behind.

Fisk slammed a 2-and-1 pitch deep into the left-field stands for his 15th home run following a walk to Rudy Law with one out in the third. He chased Juan Encarnacion, 3-10, with a two-out, two-run single in the third. Encarnacion, who has lost seven straight decisions, was inserted as the starting pitcher when Bert Blyleven developed a stiff right shoulder while warming up.

The White Sox grabbed a 1-0 lead in the first. Fisk struck a one-out single, moved to second on Greg Walker's grounder and scored on Greg Luzinski's single. An error by Indians' shortstop Julio Franco on a two-out grounder by Jack Cruz net up Fisk's two-run single.

New York's 4, Minnesota's 2

At New York, Graig Nettles tripled in two first-inning runs and Dave Winfield tripled in another run in the seventh to back the eight-hit pitching of Ron Guidry, 11-5, and give the Yankees their fourth straight win.

Toronto's 6, Kansas City's 4

At Toronto, Jim Clancy fired a five-hitter and Buck Martinez, Cliff Johnson and Barry Bonnell each drove in two runs to lead the Blue Jays, Thursday, to a 6-4 victory over the White Sox in his last five decisions. The victory was the Blue Jays' ninth in their last 11 games and marked the 400th win in the franchise's seven-year history.

Milwaukee's 4, Texas's 4-3

In Milwaukee, Cecil Cooper's sacrifice fly in the eighth inning scored Paul Molitor to break a 3-3 tie and lift

Milwaukee to its eighth straight victory Monday night and a sweep of the Texas Rangers in their doubleheader.

It was Texas' fifth straight loss. In the first game, Ted Simmons RBI single in the seventh inning broke a 3-3 tie.

Boston's 7, California's 1

In Anaheim, Calif., Gary Allenson drove in three runs with four hits including a two-run homer, and Dave Stapleton collected three hits and one RBI Monday night to pace the Boston Red Sox to victory over the California Angels. The slumping Angels have lost seven of eight games and eight of their last 10.

Baltimore's 9, Seattle's 4

In Seattle, Ken Singleton collected four hits and two RBIs and Jim Dwyer added three hits and two RBIs Monday night to lead Baltimore to victory over the Seattle Mariners, giving the Orioles their eighth win in nine games.

Detroit's 4, Oakland's 2

In Oakland, Calif., Chet Lemon homered and Lou Whitaker, Lance Parrish and Glenn Wilson drove in runs Monday night as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Oakland A's.

Raiders' Chandler to retire

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (UPI) — The Los Angeles Raiders Monday announced the retirement of wide receiver Bob Chandler and the acquisition of tackle Charlie Hannah from the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

The Raiders dealt defensive end Dave Browning and an undisclosed future draft choice for Hannah.

Chandler, who attended Southern California, was drafted in the seventh round in 1971 by Buffalo. He was acquired by the Raiders in 1980.

The crafty wide receiver finished with 370 receptions for 5,233 yards — a 14.2 average. He missed much of the 1981 season after rupturing his spleen in the season opener. Chandler played only two games last year, spending the rest of the season on injured reserve with a knee injury.

Hannah, 6-5, 260, started at right tackle for Tampa Bay the past four seasons. He was a third-round draft choice in 1977 after completing his eligibility at the University of Alabama.

Browning, who like Hannah is 27, started 52 consecutive games for the Raiders before going on the injured reserve list with a shoulder injury midway through the 1982 season.

He attended the University of Washington and was the Raiders' second-round draft pick in 1978.

Clerc breezes in Pro finals

BROOKLINE, Mass. (UPI) — Jose-Luis Clerc needed just 76 minutes Monday night to rout 18-year-old Jimmy Arias in straight sets and capture the U.S. Pro Tennis championships for the second time in three years.

The 24-year-old Clerc, who had lost his only previous meeting with Arias, took charge immediately and never let up before a capably Longwood Cricket Club crowd for a 6-3, 6-1 victory that marked his first tournament title since January.

Clerc, who won the 1981 Pro Tennis championships, ran off a string of six straight games in the second set to end the match and take home the $9,000 first prize.

Cardinals trade Dawson

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The St. Louis Cardinals Monday traded defensive lineman Mike Dawson, a seven-year NFL veteran and a former first-round draft choice, to the Detroit Lions for a future draft pick.

Dawson suffered a serious knee injury in the fourth game of the 1980 season, but returned in time to start every game and started all nine games in the 1982 strike-shortened season.

Coach Jim Hanifan praised Dawson as a "rugged, consistent and dedicated football player." Dawson was the Cardinals' first-round draft choice in 1978 out of Arizona. He led the team in sacks in 1977 and 1978.

Hisaw's performance tops Coors Southern Idaho shoot

TWIN FALLS — Several outstanding performances were turned in during the Southern Idaho Coors Championship Shoot, which concluded Sunday at the Gun Club.

One of the more remarkable triumphs belonged to Jody Hisaw, who defeated Steve Schmelch in a shoot-off 23-18 (both had shot 97) to win the 100 handicap targets category, 17-22 yard division. Hisaw previously had shot only 300 registered targets and still was technically a rookie.

Other winners included Rich Blackstead AA, 656; Chuck Woodzick A, 649; Schmelch B, 640; Dave Matz, C, 640 and Rick Veatch, D, 560. High overall for handicap events was Leon Hansen, 275, while Rick Erickson took high overall for other events with 394. Erickson tied with Steve Fahrwald after defeating Fahrwald in a shoot-off, 37-35.

The event's results:

100-10 yard singles: AA — Rich Blackstead, 94; Jeff Scott, 93; B — Steve Schmelch, 86; C — Ray Miller, 86; D — Donna Hiller, 82; Rookie — Alan

100 handicap championship: Champion — Phil Butler, 98, 17-20 yards — Clyde Cameron, 95, 21-23 yards — Ken Hansen, 94 (defeated John Thomas, Chuck Cramer and John Thomas in shoot-off, 24-27); C — Carl Kelly, 94 (defeated Rick Erickson in shoot-off, 23-21); High woman — Donna Hiller, 91; High junior — Timbre Wolfe, 88; High veteran — Pilon Heryford, 91; High rookie — Gary Marcol, 81.

Soda Springs racer sets record at Gooding track

GODDING — Tom Bailey of Soda Springs set a new track record Sunday at Magic Valley Raceway, blistering down the dragstrip in 8.77 seconds (152 miles per hour), eclipsing the old mark by .03.

Bailey was heard to say, "I think I can break the old track record" as he headed for his car before his attempt.

Otherwise, local racers dominated weekend action. Jerry Carlyle of Twin Falls defeated Bailey in the Super Pro finals, picking up $300 for his effort. Bailey earned $150.

Keith Tino of Fort Hall won the Pro competition and $200, with Stan Sorenson of Twin Falls capturing second and $100. Harry Siles and Mark Kidd, both of Twin Falls, reached the semifinals and earned $50.

Twin Falls racers made a clean sweep in the street category with John Thebert taking the $100 first place prize with Charlie Conn garnering second and $50, Elmer Moore and Phil Corbin made the semis and took home $25 apiece.

Newspapers.
Where color brightens
your sales picture

Newspapers are still mostly a black and white medium in which color commands extra attention, recall, and sales. Adding even one color to a newspaper ad increases sales an average of 64%*—much more than the extra cost. For more about color, color contracts to reduce costs, call your advertising representative or Bill Blake, Advertising Director, The Times-News, (208) 733-0931.
