Latin invasion feared

Stone's visits deemed futile

By FREDERICK KIEL
United Press International

A top Nicaraguan commander said U.S. special envoy Richard Stone came to Nicaragua to "wave the flag of negotiations" to hide Reagan administration plans to invade the country, a pro-government newspaper reported Tuesday.

Stone visited Nicaragua Monday to talk with junta leader Daniel Ortega and other leaders, the last stop of his two-week swing through Latin America to seek peace in Central America.

In Honduras, Defense Minister Col. Arnilar Castillo Suazo made a surprise statement saying border incidents with Nicaragua had been reduced.

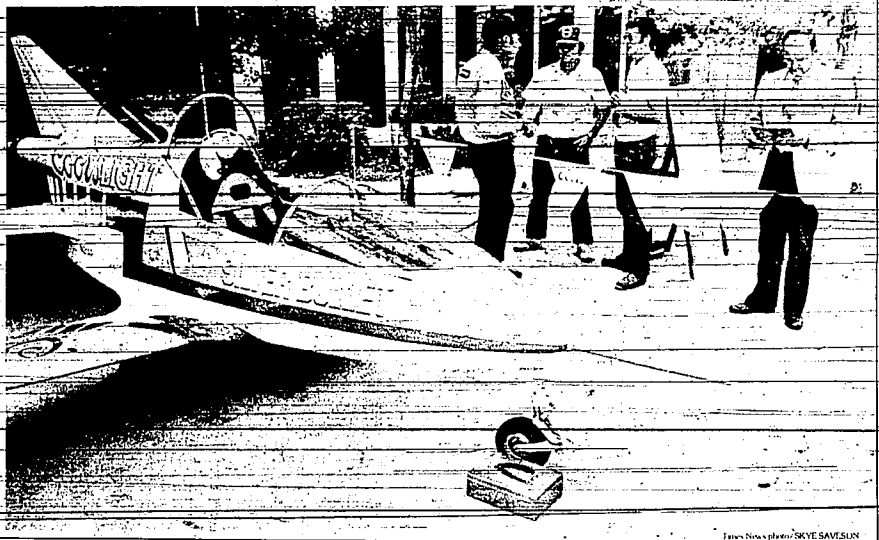

The two nations have come close to war over Honduran support of Nicaraguan rebels fighting to topple the leftist Managua government. The rebels operate in the border region with U.S. backing. Castillo said, however, that the controversial joint maneuvers involving 3,400 U.S. troops would begin as scheduled as early as August.

Nicaragua has charged the maneuvers could be a prelude to a massive U.S. military intervention in Central America aimed at overthrowing Nicaragua's Marxist-dominated government.

Stone returned to Washington early Tuesday. In Managua he said, "The Nicaraguan leaders interpreted my visit in a very useful manner and turned my desire to visit Nicaragua into an invitation. I can only tell you the talks were very useful."

Stone was also optimistic about his meeting Sunday in Bogota, Colombia with Ruben Zamora, a leader of the Salvadoran guerrillas' political arm, the Democratic Revolutionary Front. See STONE on Page A2

Visitors to downtown Twin Falls on Tuesday got a glimpse of one of the smallest jets in the world. Weighing just 432 pounds and having a length of 12 feet, the jet can fly to 26,000 feet and reach speeds of 300 mph. For the story of the plane, turn to Page B1.

Dollar goes 'mad' throughout Europe

By CATHY BOOTH
United Press International

The United States and its Western allies intervened Tuesday on international money markets to halt the dollar's rise but barely made a dent in its record-setting performance against the French franc and West German mark.

American tourists in Paris swooped down on bargains as the dollar held above the 8-franc barrier. The dollar's muscle-flexing jolted France, overshadowing the war in Chad local political events and even a big Paris murder story to grab the headlines.

"The dollar en folle!" — the dollar goes mad — screamed the Paris newspaper Le Matin, which devoted an entire front page to the news.

"The dollar is in good shape," editorialized Le Figaro, blaming the ruling Socialists for the franc's poor showing.

Finance Minister Jacques Delors said in a government statement, saying the Reagan administration was reneging on promises made at the June economic summit at Williamsburg, Va. to suppress "the dollar's rise."

The 10-nation European Commission said it was "extremely concerned" at the climb of the dollar.

"We left Williamsburg with some hope of an improvement but this has certainly not proven the case," a spokesman said.

In Moscow, the official Soviet news agency Tass charged that the Reagan administration was deliberately allowing the dollar to rise to stifle economic competition from its European allies.

"The record-high upswing in the rate of the dollar is literally stifling the French economy," Tass said.

"Paris, meanwhile, was hit hard with soaring prices for French goods, made cheaper by the strengthened dollar."

"It just bought $300 to $400 worth of perfume," said David Nissenbaum of Los Angeles. In the United States, it would have sold about $20 for that.

"It's doing some serious shopping for clothes and sunglasses too."

BPA pushes weatherization

Utility discards conservation programs

By ELLEN MARKS
United Press International

BOISE — Idaho Power Co. will not participate in regional conservation programs proposed by the Bonneville Power Administration because they are expensive and provide little benefit, utility managers said Tuesday.

BPA said it met Monday with BPA officials, who failed to convince them Idaho Power would benefit by signing a seven-year contract to fund residential weatherization and street-lighting programs.

Representatives from the federal power marketing agency are in Idaho this week, discussing their plan to spend about $27 million over the next two years to promote conservation throughout the Northwest.

"The BPA proposes to raise the funds by charging participating private and public utilities according to their size," Bowen said.

"The money then would be used to pay for existing BPA conservation programs and others that utilities such as Idaho Power might desire in the future," said Kirk Hall, director of the BPA's Program Design and Management Department.

Bowen said the programs during the next two years would cost Idaho Power about $30 million, compared to the $5 million Idaho Power plans to spend during the same period.

"The BPA of the utility already has spent $10 million on a residential weatherization program and is offering other incentives to improve the efficiency of street lights."

"But Hall said large utilities such as Idaho Power would benefit from the programs over the long run, even though they may have their own conservation programs."

"He said Idaho Power could negotiate with BPA for new programs it may need, with the federal agency providing the bulk of the funding."

"If they're active, they could get back more money than they spend," Hall said.

He said Idaho Power also would benefit because promoting conservation throughout the region would delay the need to build expensive generating plants, reducing the cost of the electricity the utility occasionally purchases from the BPA.

But Bowen said a projected price cut is "very debatable" because it is unknown how much BPA costs will rise.

"By the time you dump WPPSS in, we're not at all certain what the price will be," Bowen said. "It might not be cheaper than our own."

Hall said he was disappointed about Idaho Power's reaction to the conservation programs, but BPA officials plan to continue trying to sell their program to utilities throughout the region.

"It's not unexpected, but we're clearly disappointed," Hall said. "We kind of hoped everyone would rally around, but you're plowing new ground. It's just part of a long process."

The BPA's programs follow the goals of the Northwest Power Planning Council's 20-year energy plan which calls for cost-effective conservation measures that benefit the region. Hall

Housing industry fails to maintain recovery

By MARSHA TAYLOR
Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — The rebound in the U.S. housing industry that is considered vital to overall economic recovery already is spluttering and probably will stop dead before autumn in the face of rising interest rates, industry experts believe.

Sales of new one-family houses dropped in June as compared with May, the first monthly drop since January, according to figures released jointly Tuesday by the federal Bureau of the Census and the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

"Unfortunately, we've (also) seen the best on existing home sales and housing starts," says Jack Carlson, vice president and chief economist for the National Association of Realtors.

In June, housing starts fell slightly to an annual rate of 1,747 million, compared with May's 1,745 million. Also in June, home sales, adjusted to an annual rate, rose to 2.33 million compared with May's 2.3 million.

Statistics indicate that home sales are up about 3.3 million or 4 million transactions annually, says Carlson, but large numbers of would-be purchasers find they still are unable to qualify for mortgages.

A fresh upswing in interest rates will not help, says Carlson, who points out that average mortgage interest rates nationwide rose in June for the first time in 11 months. The average June rate rose to 13.01 percent from 12.99 percent for a conventional 30-year mortgage with a 25 percent down payment.

"The trend at best is to plateau," says Carlson.

"The consequences of a housing industry slowdown could be devastating for the strength of the U.S. economic recovery overall, he says.

An increase of 2 percentage points in mortgage interest rates pushes an estimated 900,000 families out of the U.S. housing market — families who would have purchased about 600,000 existing homes and about 300,000 new homes, says Carlson.

"That results in the loss of 1 million jobs and $30 billion, or 1 percent of GNP (gross national product)," he says.

"The realtor's pessimistic view of the state of the U.S. housing recovery is shared by others. Seattle builder Harry J. Pryde, president of the National Association of Home Builders, recently said the housing recovery "could be down as the shortest... (in) history."

Housing recovery hinges on three critical factors, says Jay Shackford, a spokesman for the home builders. In the short term, the main concern for the housing industry is the money-supply policy set by the Federal Reserve Board, since this policy directly influences mortgage interest rates.

In the medium term, he says, the issue of the federal budget deficit probably is the most critical one for the nation's housing sector.

"Each $1 billion increase in the deficit takes away $20 billion from

Panel to examine hungry Americans

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House reporter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, "facing criticism of his policies announced Tuesday creation of a national task force to find out why there are millions of hungry people in America." "The breadbasket of the world."

The U.S. Conference of Mayors, chiding Reagan for budget cuts in food programs, said it has drafted a seven-point program to ease the hunger of an estimated 40 million Americans. And the House approved a resolution expressing the sense of the Congress that there should be no further cutbacks in federal food aid to needy Americans.

Reagan directed White House counselor Edwin Meese to organize a panel of experts in poverty research, nutrition, economics, government and education to conduct a "rehearsed" study of the cause and remedy of hunger.

"America is literally the breadbasket of the world," he said. "Our farms are the envy of the world."

Reagan said he wants to know if food assistance programs "are being mismanaged" and said "if certain aspects of the programs require more funding, I want to know that too."

New Orleans Mayor Ernest Morial told reporters on Capitol Hill that the mayors have devised their own plan to ease hunger, which he laid to Reagan's spending cuts and to high unemployment — approaching "the degree of the Depression."

The mayors will urge Congress to adopt new jobs programs providing "meaningful" work for the unemployed and underemployed, he said.

Their program also includes urging adequate financing of food assistance programs and of emergency food and shelter efforts, joining together available data so Congress, the administration and the American public will know the extent of the problem, soliciting help from the private sector and formulating long-term plans to deal with the problem.

Morial said an estimated 22 million people receiving food stamps and another 18 million hungry people are "scattered throughout the nation."

"There are 40 million Americans documented who fall into the category of hungry Americans today," he said. "The Reagan administration has made cuts in food programs while the number of hungry has increased."

The House voted 407-16 for the resolution, which was sent to the Senate for action and was intended as a signal to Reagan that Congress would approve no further cuts in the food stamp program after appropriations in 1981 and 1982.

House Agriculture Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza, Texas, said "in passing this resolution, the House has said it believes that food program benefit levels for the needy, which have already been drastically reduced in recent years, should not be cut any more."

At the White House, Reagan said "If even one American child is forced to go to bed hungry at night, or if one senior citizen is denied the dignity of proper nutrition, that is a national tragedy."

Lightning ignites Idaho fires

Idaho firefighters battled a series of new lightning-caused brush fires Tuesday as officials considering Billings a Kuna farmer for accidentally igniting a major range blaze that roared within a few yards of several homes before crews edged it.

Idaho Department of Land Management officials said dozens of firefighters were dispatched Tuesday to attack five fires burning north of Weiser and near Emmett in the wake of a lightning storm late Monday.

Pat Shanafelt, a BLM spokesman at Boise, said the fires consumed 150 acres before the arrival of the flames were extinguished during the afternoon.

Shanafelt said the farmer who started the 1,542-acre Forrey Heights fire near Kuna Monday may be forced to pay "big bucks" to the BLM to cover the costs of suppressing the flames.

The spokesman said the fire was largely under control Tuesday, but crews remained on the scene for part of the day, looking for smoldering spots that could spread into another large fire if left unmonitored.

Shanafelt said the farmer who started the fire was using flames to clear fire-prone brush away from his haystack when the blaze eluded his control and spread across the ridge area.

"It could cost him big bucks," Shanafelt said. "For the aerial retardant alone it's about $6,000, and with the man hours and what have you, it could be $10,000 easy."

Woman wins governor primary

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Campaigner Evelyn Gandy, making a slick, well-financed bid to become the state's first woman governor, and Attorney General Bill Allain easily defeated three opponents Tuesday in Mississippi's primary election and will battle in an Aug. 23 runoff.

Gandy edged into the lead as the votes were tallied late into the night, but white-haired Allain, sporting a populist image and vowing he'll block a federal waste dump slated for Mississippi, ran a surprisingly strong second place.

Millionaire businessman Mike Sturdivant, making his first political race, ran a distant but respectable third, with state Rep. Lonnie Johnson and Laurel farmer Billy Davis bringing up the rear of the ticket.

Man cited for Chevron killing

SEA ISLAND, Ga. (UPI) — One of two suspects in the slaying of a retired millionaire oil company executive, his wife and a Brunswick cab driver died Tuesday from a head-on collision he swallowed while police were chasing him.

Thodore Woodard, 25, succumbed at 10:55 a.m. at a Brunswick hospital of respiratory, kidney and liver failure caused by swallowing the pesticide Paraquat. Police said Woodard drank about seven ounces of the weed killer before he surrendered following a high-speed chase Sunday.

Police said Woodard was able to talk while being chased, but refused to answer questions about the slaying.

A second suspect, Kenneth Bernard Blanks, 18, is sought in the case. Police issued a nationwide alert for him, but believe he may be hiding in the Savannah or Jacksonville, Fla., areas.

The nude bodies of W. Britt Roberts, 61, former president of Chevron Oil International, and his wife Merli, 52, were found Saturday in separate bathtubs in their pink-brick home on Sea Island, an enclave of expensive homes off the south Georgia coast.

Another hijacking thwarted

HOUSTON (UPI) — A man attempted to hijack a Pan Am flight carrying 124 people from Miami to Houston Tuesday, but a rescue team dismissed employee of the airline overcame the would-be hijacker and belted him to sleep.

The suspect, identified as Alfredo Ayala, a 30-year-old Cuban national, was taken into custody when Pan Am flight 924 carrying 121 passengers and seven crew members landed in Houston at 7:37 p.m. MDT, about an hour behind schedule.

Joe McGuinness, director of operations for Pan Am in Houston, said the hijacker was subdued by Spicer Lung, 45, a former Pan Am employee who was a passenger on the plane, his teenage son Spicer Lung Jr., and the purser.

McGuinness said Lung, who had worked as catering manager in Houston for 18 years, was laid off about three weeks ago.

Lightning strikes twice, kills

CRESTVIEW, Fla. (UPI) — When lightning struck their house, setting appliances afire, Frieda Parker and her 4-year-old son fled outside — only to be struck and killed by another bolt of lightning.

Oklahoma County sheriff Sgt. Bill Welch said Mrs. Parker, 24, and her son Simon were killed Monday trying to reach the family truck.

"It appeared she was trying to evacuate the house," sheriff's Welch said Tuesday. "Lightning struck the house and it was on fire. It appeared lightning struck them between the house and the family truck."

Latest 'Star Wars' profitable

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Return of the Jedi," final chapter of filmmaker George Lucas' "Star Wars" trilogy, raced past the $200 million box office mark, making it the fourth highest-grossing film of all time, it was announced Tuesday.

The film is topped only by "E.T. The Extra Terrestrial" and the first two films of the Lucas trilogy — "Star Wars" and "The Empire Strikes Back."

Twentieth Century Fox Pictures said "Return of the Jedi," which opened nationwide May 25, in 1,002 theaters, has earned $201.4 million.

Advertisers seek lost planes

FAVETTEVILLE, Ga. (UPI) — A team of adventurers searching for six P-28 fighter planes and two B-17 bombers abandoned in Greenwood during World War II say they may have located the aircraft buried beneath 30 feet of snow and ice.

After only a dozen days of good weather since they landed in the area, the aircraft were dug up; the team comprised mostly of men from Georgia, said Monday that they have discovered several large objects buried about 25 to 30 feet beneath the snow fields.

More die in heat, flooding

By TIM CODDER
United Press International

Relentless thunderstorms flooded southern Louisiana and Mississippi with 5 to 15 inches of rain Tuesday and torrid temperatures fried much of the nation in the second month of a heat wave that has killed nearly 200 people.

A flash flood watch covered southern Mississippi, where 5 inches of rain fell, and southern and central Louisiana, where 6 to 15 inches was reported.

Lightning ignited new fires in eastern Oregon, Idaho, Nevada and California. Blazes have already charred nearly 130,000 acres of range and timberland in the four-state area.

Strong thunderstorms swept the northern Plains, and scattered thundershowers provided relief to parts of the central United States, where temperatures climbed well into the 90s and hit 100s. Kansas City, Mo., reported a record 101 degrees before a storm with 50 mph wind gusts dropped an inch of rain on evening rush hour travelers.

Up to 15 inches of rain was recorded around Baton Rouge, La., starting Tuesday, closing a number of roads and streets and flooding several homes.

Showers and thunderstorms were numerous along the southern Atlantic Coast, and were scattered across northern New England.

Nationwide officials said at least 191 deaths have been blamed on the heat wave, now in its second month.

Texas reported its second heat wave death, a 51-year-old Dallas man who died of heat stroke Monday in his small wood-frame house, which contained only a single window air conditioner.

A 75-year-old man from the 56th person to die from heat in Missouri East St. Louis, Ill. Clarence Robinson was found in his ailing home in Sikeston, Mo., an hour after he suffered cardiac arrest. Scott County officials said Robinson's death was caused by the heat.

In the Chicago area, where air conditioning bills are being tripled, scores of carp, catfish and suckers suffocated in topdike lakes and ponds.

"I'm surprised we haven't had reports of this earlier," said Roland Eisenfels, chief naturalist for the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

Stone

Stone said his talks with Zamora were a "success," although Zamora ruled out any direct American mediation in the nearly four-year-old Salvadoran civil war.

Victor Tirado, one of the nine commanders of the ruling Sandinista front, spoke Monday in Managua at about the same time that Stone was meeting with other Nicaraguan leaders and issued a warning against American government intentions.

"We are sure that the Reagan government has decided to intervene with the military," Tirado said. "The more they menace us militarily, the more firm and incorruptible become our positions and our principles," said Tirado.

"Until this moment Reagan hasn't found the pretexts nor the right conditions to execute his aggressive plan," he said. "Neither does the Reagan administration want to appear purely bellicose, and that is why they have the flag of negotiations, to play two policies — the military, and the supposedly pacific, which takes second place."

Tirado said the Sandinistas named after a 1920s rebel hero, would not change Nicaragua's leftist policies in response to military pressure from Washington.

"The more they menace us militarily, the more firm and incorruptible become our positions and our principles," said Tirado.

Tirado voiced support for the Contadora process, the peace-seeking efforts of Panama, Mexico, Venezuela and Colombia who first met on the Panamanian island of Contadora in January.

In an interview with La Tribuna newspaper, the Honduran defense minister said the incidents along the frontier between Honduras and Nicaragua had become less frequent.

"We believe the situation is becoming normal and that is positive because the evacuated residents could return to their habitual work," Castillo Somoza said.

Reports from eastern Honduras near the frontier towns of Las Trojes and Cifuentes confirmed the defense minister's statements.

Housing

the pool of money available for mortgages, says Shackford.

And, in the long term, "the third issue is financial reform (needed) to keep home ownership opportunities available to young people," he adds.

"The industry crisis has been so long, and that nobody's really had time to go into this one yet."

Outside the housing industry, however, forecasts are more optimistic.

"Fall is going to be a great time to buy a home," says Donald H. S. Schaefer, vice president of U.S. services, Wharton Economic Forecasting Associates in Philadelphia.

Growth in the U.S. money supply will drop back into specified target ranges in the fall, says Straszheim, but analysts expect both short- and long-term interest rates. Mortgage interest rates should slip downward slightly in the autumn.

"I know the home builders and the realtors' around the country say that customers' traffic is down everywhere, but buyers will come out in the fall."

In 1984, however, interest rates across the board will move up again, says Straszheim.

Michael S. Cantler, chief housing forecaster for Chase Economists in Baltimore, Pa., says that "we might have good housing starts and home resale numbers for another month or two—but I think the second half of the year definitely will be weaker than the first half."

Carliner blames slowly rising interest rates, but says mortgage rates are only part of the problem.

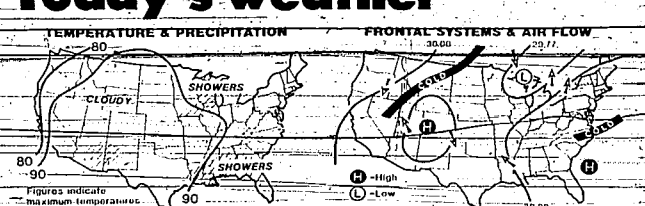

Lower interest rates by themselves do not generate the formation of new households that account for many housing purchases.

"The economy is growing again, but the rate of household formations hasn't really responded yet," says

Carliner. "Unemployment is still too high. That movement will be seen as far in housing has been people who've waited for interest rates to come down to move from multifamily housing to single-family housing."

But the demand from people who want to set up new households and move into multifamily units just isn't there."

Today's weather

Partly cloudy with scattered showers

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome, Gooding areas: Partly cloudy today and Thursday. High in the upper 80s or low 90s; low in the 50s.

Canby, Prairie, Hager, Wood River, Valley: Partly cloudy today and Thursday. High in the upper 80s or low 90s; low in the 50s.

Northern Nevada and Utah: Scattered showers today and evening thundershowers today and Thursday in both states. High 80 to 95 in both states; low in the 50 and 60s.

Synopsis: Hot with isolated showers and thundershowers.

That's the Idaho weather outlook for today and for several days to come. High pressure over the southern portion combined with low pressure off the Canadian coast, are maintaining a flow of unstable air from the southwest to Idaho.

On Tuesday afternoon, numerous thundershowers developed over the central mountains and south-central part of Idaho.

At mid-afternoon, radar indicated thundershowers from Salmon to Stanley and south through Gooding into Nevada. Moderate rain and strong, gusty winds accompanied some of those showers.

Afternoon temperatures were in the 80s and 90s, with the state's hottest reading at Boise — 96 degrees. The coolest in Idaho was 46 at Elk City.

In Twin Falls on Tuesday, the pollen count was 49 per cubic meter, the lowest in the state. Temperatures will remain warm in the south today, but may cool slightly in northern Idaho in the wake of a weak cold front.

The agricultural forecast for southern Idaho and the Magic Valley calls for only isolated showers over the valleys from today through Sunday, with precipitation totals ranging from 0.25 to 0.50 inches. Evaporation rates will be near 30 inch through the period.

Winds will be light in the early morning hours today and Thursday, increasing to 10 to 15 mph in the afternoons.

Elsewhere in the nation on Tuesday, the hottest temperature reported was 110 degrees at Blythe, Calif., and Imperial, Calif., and the coolest was 45, at Mehamn, Ore.

Chad tells U.N. of air strikes

Libyan-backed rebels attack into Chad

NDJAMENA, Chad (UPI) — Libyan-backed rebels claimed Tuesday they recaptured a strategic desert oasis in northern Chad and scattered troops from the pro-Western army of President Hissene Habre during a bitter three-day battle.

"There was no confirmation of the claim, but Chad officials said earlier Libyan warjets and helicopter gunships had renewed a "virtual genocide" on Faya-Largeau and repeatedly bombed the town in support of rebel forces.

Spokesmen for former Chad President Goukouni Weddeye said in Paris his forces had besieged the desert crossroad for 72 hours and recaptured the town without any "participation by Libyan forces."

The spokesmen said the word of the rebel victory was transmitted by a rebel radio station at Bardai, north of Faya-Largeau. There was no additional detail.

Western diplomats said the rebels had hoped to recapture Faya-Largeau before anti-aircraft weapons from France and Washington could be deployed.

"We are seeing a virtual genocide," Foreign Minister Idriss Mikine said, claiming Libyan jets bombed Faya-Largeau nine times Monday night and resumed the raids early Tuesday.

"At the United Nations, Chad said the Libyan air strikes had caused "terrifying" numbers of casualties and accused Col.-Muhammad Khadafi of wanting to "exterminate the Chadian people, destroy Chad, occupy it and extend his invasion to the rest of Africa."

Chad officials also denied Libyan reports President Hissene Habre was among those killed in the bombing.

"This report is complete foolishness," said Ahmad Allam-Mi, Chad's charge d'affaires in Paris. "The Libyans have repeatedly claimed the president is dead and it has never yet been true. It is not true this time either."

Faya-Largeau, 500 miles north of the capital of N'Djamena, fell to the rebels June 24, the first important victory in Goukouni's push to regain power.

Habre's Saturday recaptured the town, which controls the north of Chad, and built main routes south to N'Djamena.

Within hours, Libyan planes began pounding Faya-Largeau, apparently to stall the government forces while the rebels regrouped.

Senators, Blue Cross address organ donors

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Sen. Edward Kennedy and Mark Andrews, whose family members have suffered debilitating illness, introduced a bill Tuesday to study how to quickly match donors to patients needing organ transplants.

Kennedy, D-Mass., told a news conference that his son, Todd, was treated under a testing program while he had cancer. The son died last year because of the disease.

Andrews, R.N.D., said his wife, Mary, is recovering from a long siege of meningitis. Andrews said the family illnesses probably contributed to his and Kennedy's sponsorship of the bill along with

It would report back in six months. Rep. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., and Henry Waxman, D-Calif., have introduced similar legislation in the House.

Kennedy said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, has promised to expedite hearings in September.

Kennedy said the bill is intended to halt delays in the vital matches between donor and patient. He said one of the key elements would be a "better communications network."

Andrews quoted a Science magazine article that said out of 20,000 potential donors — young or middle-aged patients classified as brain dead — only 2,500 actually donated their organs. Of the 5,000 persons needing a new liver, one other senator, the bill would offer group coverage for the first time to pay for organ transplant operations.

The proposed 12-member task force would be composed of the secretary of health and human services, the surgeon general, the director of the NIH, six members from the medical, religious, insurance and public service community and three members from the general public.

Both senators addressed the moral question of who would receive the organ when there were several patients and only one donor.

"What do you do when two or three people need a transplant? Who plays God in deciding who should get it?" Andrews asked. He said the bill would partly answer the dilemma by helping providing transplants for all who need them.

Lamakers promise millions in AIDS research

By D'VERA COHN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Denying bias against homosexuals is slowing AIDS research, an official told Congress Tuesday. The government will spend $166 million on research this year and explore "all reasonable scientific pathways" toward a cure.

"As long as these young men and others are suffering from this illness, we are going to solve it — and solve it as quickly as we can," said Dr. Edward Brandt, Health and Human Services Department assistant secretary for health.

But Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Government Operations subcommittee that heard Brandt, said he had "grave concerns" about the government's response, and a leading public health official called it "shooting in the dark with scientific scatter guns."

AIDS, which stands for Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, helps out the body's immune system, but protects against deadly cancers and infections.

Researchers believe it is caused by a virus transmitted via blood or body fluids. Since 1981, 1,922 U.S. cases have been reported; 80 percent of the victims die within two years.

Groups representing homosexuals, who constitute most of the victims, say prejudice against them has blocked seeking a cure. Brandt called the allegation "insulting" and said, "We have approached this disease like we have approached all other diseases."

Stanley Matek, former president of the American Public Health Association, told the hearing the government is operating without an organized plan and should call in outside scientists to help write one.

"Thus far, our requests for cause and cure represent little more than mere shooting in the dark with scientific scatter guns," he said.

The first AIDS patient was admitted to a government research hospital in Washington only 11 days after the first cases were reported in Los Angeles last year. A workshop of the National Institutes of Health on such research was held six months later.

"I believe the response is as rapid as one could hope for," Brandt said.

He said the government is spending $166 million this year at the National Institutes of Health on such research as studies on how a normal immune system functions. However, only $22 million of that is for direct AIDS studies.

Gunman pans abortion; holds women hostage

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A gunman opposed to abortion and claiming to be "on a mission from God" held two female employees of the Women's Medical Center hostage Tuesday and threatened to kill them, police said.

Officers said the suspect, believed armed with a handgun or rifle, apparently followed one of the women into the office before a 3 a.m. The victims were still held captive 10 hours later. Members of the police Special Weapons and Tactics unit were deployed around the two-story building.

Police were in telephone contact with the man and provided him with food. When he asked for it, officers said he also made other demands, but they refused to release them.

The suspect, who was not identified, monitored television and radio news reports of the incident and made telephone calls to at least two stations.

Bolton spokesman Rod Bensen said the gunman had threatened to kill the hostages, identified as Wanda Juarez, 20, a receptionist, and a 24-year-old medical assistant whose first name is Judy.

"He claimed he is on a mission from God and he has made anti-abortion statements," Bensen added. "We believe that to be his motive at this point."

Lawrence Scott, owner of the medical center, said the facility concentrated on obstetrics and gynecology. He said "we do some abortions" at the center but insisted, "We are not an abortion clinic."

It was also disclosed that Scott recently received a telephone message threat and that another clinic employee was the victim of a robbery and kidnapping last week. That employee's father was killed at his Brentwood home last weekend, apparently during a robbery.

Pole fails at hijacking ship to Swedish freedom

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — A 21-year-old Polish elevator operator tried to hijack a hydrofoil off Lofoten, Poland, to Sweden but was overpowered by crewmen and arrested, the official news agency PAP said Tuesday.

The hijacker reportedly tried to commandeer one of the fast water-skimming craft that travel the Oder River between Szczecin and Swinoujscie, about 45 miles apart.

It was the first known attempted hydrofoil hijacking in Poland. About two dozen hijackings of domestic airliners have been staged since 1981, but fewer than half were successful.

Poland's Baltic Sea port town, corner next to East Germany, is about 80 miles from the Polish island of Bornholm in the middle of the Baltic Sea. The nearest point on the Swedish mainland, Ystad, is about 110 miles from Poland.

The hijacker, who wounded one crewman with his knife before he was disarmed, told police interrogators he intended to divert the craft to Sweden, the Polish news agency said.

The arrested man was identified only as Siewomir K., an elevator operator at a hospital in Radzyn Podaski, a town far from Szczecin, midway between Warsaw and the Soviet border.

PAP said the hijacker told interrogators that he had tried to escape Poland several times before by blowing away in the cargo holds of freighters docked at Gdansk, but all his attempts were unsuccessful.

The hydrofoil hijacking began when the young man feigned illness during the trip to Swinoujscie, PAP said. He pulled a knife on a boatswain who came to his aid, apparently intending to force his way to the helm.

Pentagon hikes MX estimate by $5 million after approval

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon said Tuesday the estimated cost of the MX missile has risen more than 90 percent — from $16.8 billion to $21.6 billion.

That does not include the $1.5 billion spent for developing the missile and a basing system for it, the Pentagon said.

The figures were contained in the Pentagon's report to Congress detailing the costs of 53 major weapons at the end of the second quarter of the year. Their total cost in the April-through-June period rose $177 million to $26.6 billion, it said.

It marked the first appearance for the MX on the quarterly Pentagon reports since the price tag for the new weapon is reflected in fiscal year 1982 dollars.

The administration wants to build 223 of the 10-warhead missiles, deploying 100 of them in existing Minuteman-3 sites in western Wyoming, Nebraska border and using the rest for spares and test flights.

The House and the Senate approved some initial production funds for the MX this summer, in a victory for President Reagan, but the legislation is still tied up in a congressional conference committee.

Evidence, not fear should guide council

The Twin Falls City Council on Monday declined an opportunity to step into an ongoing dispute between Buena Vista residents and a local business on where and how to restrict the storage of chemical pesticides in the city.

The decision to refer the matter for further study was, in our judgment, a good one. If — and this is a big if — the council follows through with a firm decision, based on scientific criteria, about how much of a buffer zone is needed between chemical storage and residential areas.

Obviously, Twin Falls residents deserve a healthy environment in which to live. But we think the council is right to set a standard based on scientific evidence, not on unsubstantiated charges.

The two sides are lined up firmly. Some residents are convinced that chemicals stored at Magic Valley Commercial Storage are making them feel sick. But their claims are not backed up with any firm evidence. In short, the bell is based on a guess. As one resident puts it, "It's there, we know it's there."

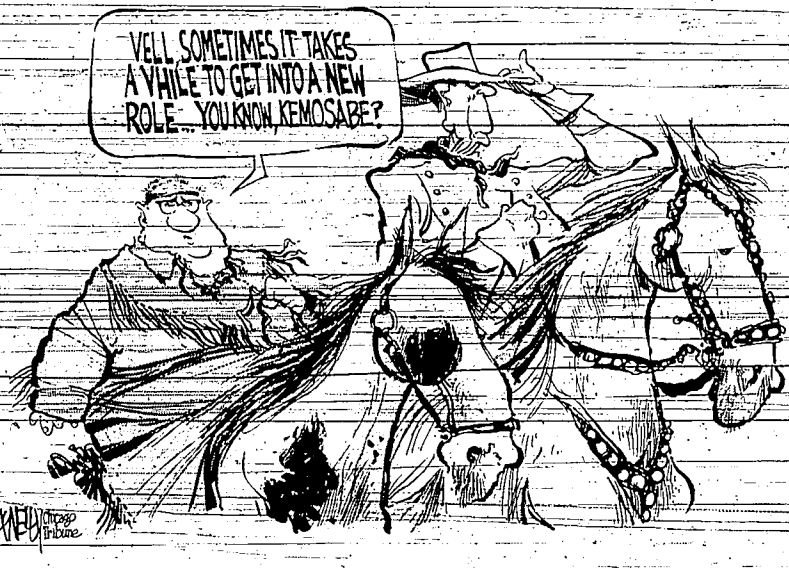

But is it fair to drive the warehouse out of business, thus accomplishing the same thing as forcing it to move, without any evidence of the supposed illness it is causing?

We don't think so. There is no evidence that Twin Falls is the site of another Love Canal. Business owner Elmo Muir, from what we can tell, has attempted to respond to residents' concerns, but apparently, nothing short of his leaving will satisfy some despite the fact that the proposed ordinance would not cover him directly.

The city's advisory committee probably will go over ground already plowed by the Planning and Zoning Commission, with various distances proposed for separating residents and chemical storage.

If the group comes up with a standard that has scientific validity, we think the council should accept it.

And in the absence of any real evidence that Muir's business is the culprit, we think the residents should lay off their attack of him. Scare, slogans and fear-mongering have no place in this debate.

Secrecy in crash probes wrong course

WASHINGTON — A proposed new Defense Department secrecy law would suppress most significant information now available from military air safety investigations on the reasons for military air disasters.

The law would seal information — compiled by the Defense Department in its air safety investigation probes — from the families of airmen injured or killed in military air accidents, as well as from the press and public.

Among the important facts in the air safety investigation to be kept secret are "any report or report" of the investigation that contains any "discussion, analysis, opinion, conclusion, finding or recommendation" of the reasons for the accident and ways to improve military air safety in the future.

The law also would require secrecy for "statements of information" that are made under an express or implied promise of confidentiality "from military personnel and aircraft manufacturers and for all medical reports that might show, for example, that the pilot or other crewman was using narcotics or had a history of alcoholism or mental instability."

The little-noticed provision was tucked into the large and controversial defense authorization bill passed by the Senate last week. It was slipped into the bill — sponsored by Sen. John Tower (R-Texas) and Sen. Henry Jackson (D-Wash.) — at the request of the Defense Department and the Justice Department.

Jack Landau

One of the admitted goals of the bill is to reverse a recent ruling by the U.S. Court of Appeals in San Francisco which decided most such information in air safety reports should be publicly available under the Freedom of Information Act.

The FOIA, enacted in its present form in 1974, gives broad access to government documents by the public, the press, scholars and others.

Another major goal of the Senate secrecy provision — which, along with the rest of the defense authorization bill, goes to a House-Senate conference committee (the House version of the bill contained no such provision) — is to stop testimony in air crash investigations from becoming public.

The Defense Department argues that witnesses are uncooperative if they know their statements will be made public. A number of newspaper editors who oppose the secrecy provision note that lawsuits on civilian aircraft crashes take their toll in public, and that the Defense Department's argument would seem to argue for secret trials of civilian claims.

(Witnesses know their statements never will be made public, that also might be an inducement for them to refuse to cooperate. Their refusal would never be known.)

The secrecy provision also is designed to stop air safety investigation information from being used in compensation lawsuits against the government filed by the families of dead or injured airmen.

Currently, that information may be subpoenaed for such trials. But the new provision would prohibit release of the information through any "administrative or judicial" proceeding.

Another side effect of the bill may be to encourage military commanders to exclude the press from covering the scenes of air disasters, taking pictures and interviewing witnesses.

Secrecy in the interest of national security certainly is a high priority in military affairs. But secrecy to protect aircraft manufacturers and poor military personnel policies that result in injury or death to U.S. servicemen shows a misunderstanding of the accountability of government.

Jack Landau writes on the law for Newhouse News Service.

Children suffering too
As Dr. Charles Manners' daughter, I feel that I have every right to stand up and speak out for this man — a man I grew up with and have known deeply all my life.

I have just as much right as a concerned mother, who has apparently already concluded (Monday's Times-News) that this man is guilty. I do not believe a person carries such judgment, from merely reading a paper or talking with a friend.

My father's future is at stake here, and a lot of people do not realize this. I am fighting for my father, whom I have looked up to and loved with all my heart and soul.

This man has raised two daughters and a son, and never in all those years did we, as children, have such horrible dealings with him. We are all those leading wonderful, stable lives — until now. Acknowledges us three children of an innocent man. We are suffering also.

I will fight this until it is over and justice is done.

A spray can keep cancer away

WASHINGTON — Weather apart, this truly has been a strange summer.

The U.S. Postal Service shows a surplus, gasoline becomes plentiful, the Social Security system is reported in good financial condition and the Agriculture Department uses a insect spray that cures cancer.

"Talk about your Urumis! This may take the cake — made with an artificial sweetener that enables the baker to claim 'A calorie diet keeps the doctor away.' The insect spray switch was turned up by two researchers experimenting with a chemical called diflubenzuron.

"Diflubenzuron is widely used to control such agricultural insects as the boll weevil," says a department news release.

But when some of the stuff was tried on mice, it stopped the growth of certain skin cancer cells. Anyone who has been even partly awake during the last couple of decades of this development, the potential significance of this development.

In case after case, insecticides have been found to cause cancer in laboratory mice. Now, at last, the shoe has been dropped on the other foot.

"If an insect spray that harms mice is assumed to be dangerous to human beings, it would seem to follow that an insect spray that benefits mice is a boon to the human race.

Dick West

Diflubenzuron, be it noted, is not a poison; as many of the banned products were. Further, this chemical is described as a "growth regulator" that prevents certain insects from developing complete body coverings.

Apparently, it has much the same inhibitive impact on a type of skin cancer in mice. Should further research show the chemical works as well on human skin, this could be the opening of new opportunities in the environmental and oncological arenas.

Some of the possibilities are illustrated in the following futuristic news items:

WASHINGTON — The Veterans Administration moved today to collect millions of dollars in medical fees from former servicemen who were exposed to a chemical used for insect control.

A VA spokesman said the chemical diflubenzuron was sprayed on crops in fields near where the GIs were participating in training maneuvers. It has since been shown to inhibit disease growth in human beings. Thus, the veterans may have accidentally received free immunizations, the spokesman pointed out.

WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency announced today it will provide funds to build an entire new city on a plot of Missouri farm land that was heavily sprayed with diflubenzuron.

The EPA said tests showed the soil contained enough of the chemical to prevent the growth of cancer cells in at least 10,000 people, the projected population of the town.

OTTAWA — The Canadian government has taken steps to encourage "acid rain" production in the United States.

Diplomats sold an insect spray widely used in America evaporators and drops from rain clouds into Canadian reservoirs.

Persons who drink the water then receive what is tantamount to anti-cancer medication.

Dick West writes from Washington for United Press International.

Congress' 'whipping boy' must be doing something right

WASHINGTON — It has been said that if Congress did not have a Paul Volcker, it would have to invent one.

Congress needs a whipping boy so badly. There aren't too many issues on which Sen. Edward Kennedy, liberal Democrat from Massachusetts, and Sen. Jesse Helms, conservative Republican from North Carolina, vote together on, but they stood shoulder to shoulder and voted "aye," recently, on Kennedy's offer for their advice and consent to the nomination of Paul A. Volcker for a second term as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

Obviously, the opposition to Mr. Volcker was not partisan. In fact, the 16 votes cast against him were cast by eight Republicans and eight Democrats.

How do you whip a whipping boy? First, you hit him from the left, complaining about tight money.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., said, "We are abdicating our responsibilities to our fellow citizens by failing to stop the reappointment of a man who has almost single-handedly caused one of the worst economic crises in American history."

Otis Pike

Wow! The argument had nothing to do with it. The Congress had nothing to do with it. OPEC had nothing to do with it and a worldwide recession had nothing to do with it. Paul Volcker did it all by himself.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., supported him, paying tribute to the fact that after inflation had been curbed, Volcker used the surplus of money to battle the recession. Said Bradley, "To Volcker's credit, he changed course last summer and abandoned three monetary targets after it became apparent that this economy was in a tailspin."

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., agreed. Said he, "Late last year, the Fed abruptly changed and moved money supply growth well above their announced targets." That got Riegle's vote.

There is no sense having a whipping boy unless you whip him, however. What Bradley and Riegle found worthy of praise, Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., blasted him for. Said Nickles, "During his first term as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, both interest rates and money supply had tremendous fluctuations which I believe are directly attributable to mismanagement by the Federal Reserve Board."

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., was less kind. "He is the architect and symbol of a cold, cruel and callous economic policy. It was deliberately produced recession and high unemployment, bankruptcies and foreclosures."

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said, "The 11 million unemployed Americans who have suffered through the worst recession since the Second World War, the thousands of farmers who cannot sell their crops because of our overvalued dollar, and the countless businessmen and women who have seen unsold goods pile up in stockrooms because of high interest rates know that Mr. Volcker's policies have failed."

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, put the whole matter in perspective: "It was suggested at the nomination hearings as we listened to the same type of complaint, that the only thing Mr. Volcker was not responsible for was herpes and AIDS and it may be had caused those as well."

Garn also said, "It is the tendency of politicians, when they have difficult times, to try to find someone else to blame, and in this case they have found a ready target in the person of Mr. Volcker — blaming him for all of these difficulties." That is a pretty good description of a whipping boy.

The first time Mr. Volcker was nominated, he was confirmed 98 to 0. On that occasion he had a record of performance. This time the vote was 64 to 16. When the opposition is so easily divided between Republicans and Democrats, and the whip is being laid on equally but from opposite sides by liberals and conservatives, this vote was the more impressive endorsement.

The whipping boy must be doing something right.

Otis Pike, a former congressman, writes for Newhouse News Service.

Salvadorans reported in heavy fighting

By MICHAEL W. DRUDGE
United Press International

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Leftist guerrillas clashed Tuesday with government forces conducting an operation in the rebel stronghold of northern Chalatenango province in what officers called heavy combat. Military sources said automatic rifle and artillery shelling could be heard throughout the night around the Chalatenango towns of Dulce Nombre de Maria and San Francisco Morazan, both 35 miles north of San Salvador. The fighting erupted when army troops on a sweep of the region discovered a rebel camp of the Popular

Liberation Forces near the two towns, officers said. Government troops fought a 3-hour night battle with rebels at the camp, but there was no immediate report on casualties from either side, one officer said. The two towns lie in a rugged mountainous section of Chalatenango province about 10 miles south of the Honduran border. The Popular Liberation Forces have long been active in the region and on Monday the army began a sweep to try to clean out suspected rebel camps in the northern reaches of the province. To the south, the army continued a separate operation in Cuscatlan province 114 Ngoron about 30 miles northeast of San Salvador between the towns of Maná San Juan and Tenancingo. Civilian sources in the Cuscatlan capital of Coljupaque said residents fleeing the fighting began arriving in the city Monday. In Monte San Juan, residents reported that army troops entered the town Monday, then pulled out to the north. Guerrillas returned to the village later in the day and fought with the civil defense militia, killing two militiamen. The guerrillas are putting up a stiff defense of the region around Monte

San Juan because it is along a supply line between strategic Guazapa volcano and rebel-controlled zones to the southeast. The army, which has become more aggressive under a new defense minister, Carlos Eugenio Vides Casanova, has traditionally halted combat operations in the first week of August to mark the religious holiday of the transfiguration of Christ, for whom El Salvador is named — "The Savior" in English. Military officers said they could not say how long the Chalatenango and Cuscatlan operations might last, citing security reasons.

Crocodile attacks

DARWIN, Australia (UPI) — A crocodile leaped four feet out of the water and attacked a fisherman in a moored boat, sinking his teeth into the man's arm and shoulder before swimming off, the victim said Tuesday. Gavin Confoo, 21, got a bigger bite than he bargained for while fishing with his two uncles and a sister-in-law at Byrnie Harbor, near Darwin, Sunday. Confoo said the 6-foot long crocodile swam toward their 17-foot boat, stopped, then surged out of the water. "We did nothing to provoke it," Confoo said. "It's about a month before the breeding season so it was possibly declaring its territory." "I dove across the boat so it probably leaped about 4 feet out of the water and 4 feet across the boat before it grabbed me," said Confoo, a serviceman based at Amberley, near Brisbane. He said the crocodile scrambled off the boat and just lay in the water. We thought it was preparing for another attack so we pulled up anchor and took off."

Soviets back arms reduction

TOKYO (UPI) — Moscow supports the gradual phasing out of nuclear weapons rather than the immediate destruction of all such arms, a Soviet delegate to a world anti-nuclear conference was quoted as saying Tuesday. Delegates to the 1983 World Conference against Atomic and Hydrogen Bombs split up into four groups to discuss disarmament, peace movements, peaceful use of atomic energy and nuclear non-proliferation, conference officials said. In one group, Alexander Kislov, member of the Soviet Peace Committee, proposed the phased reduction, conference officials said. Kislov was quoted as saying, "we cannot support a call for an immediate destruction of nuclear weapons. We propose phasing out the nuclear threat step by step." Saburo Rikuf, a Japanese diplomatic critic, warned of a risk of nuclear war's imminent in Asia and said, "It is necessary to develop an anti-nuclear movement in the region comparable to that in Europe," the officials said.

Envoy assures Lebanon of pullout

By United Press International
U.S. Middle East envoy Robert McFarlane assured Lebanon Tuesday of the U.S. commitment to remove foreign forces from the country, but Israel tightened its grip on the south, settling off protests, scuffles and burning roads. The Palestine Liberation Organization announced that guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat will visit Moscow early next month in efforts to win support in his battle with dissidents. Fierce ELO fighting continued in eastern Lebanon. President Amin Gemayel hosted McFarlane at the Lebanese leader's summer home. McFarlane assured Gemayel that the United States was abiding by its commitment to the withdrawals from Lebanon. Official Beirut radio said. On his first shuttle since replacing Philip Habib as President, Reagan's Middle East envoy, McFarlane later arrived in Israel for talks Wednesday with Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir. Although Damascus has criticized McFarlane, Lebanese Foreign Minister Sile Salem told Parliament the U.S. envoy wants to discuss with Syrian President Hafez Assad partial withdrawals and disengagement of forces in Lebanon.

Mexicans raise beer prices; blame U.S.

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Mexican brewers hiked the price of beer by 40 percent Tuesday, blaming the United States for the move because it increased the import tax on the Mexican product, the Beer Industry Chamber announced. A U.S. government source rejected the allegation that the tariff caused a drop in Mexican beer exports to the United States. A six-pack of beer in Mexico will now cost between $1.69 for the cheapest to about $2.50 for the more expensive beers. The daily minimum wage in Mexico is only about $4. "All I feel is that now instead of drinking five or six, I will only be able to drink two or three beers, because the money doesn't go that far anymore," moaned Juan Millan Ramos, a teletypist and a disappointed beer drinker in the capital.

What's what

You look at the great forests, and think how lightning set the growth ablaze, and ash reinvigorated the ground cover, and wind spewed the seeds into the incidental crannies, and the rains fell, and Nature marked its time with slow seasonal beats until green sprigs stretched into towering trunks. Once that was the way. Now, two-inch seedlings are encapsulated in fertilized bullets. These are fired from inertia guns. One man can plant 2,500 trees a day by shooting them into the ground.

Q: What's "trappin'?"
A: Soul food. Turnip greens plucked young. Boil them with small onions and stew meat.

Makers of cockroach traps like the Los Angeles market. People there buy 69 percent more of them than the national average.

Does it sound like an appropriate salary for a university professor? It's the national average in that line of work now.

Something else that could keep you busy for a dozen years or so might be to list the ways in which Alaska is unique. For starters, it's both the westernmost and easternmost state in the nation.

TIBET

At 16,000 feet of average elevation, Tibet is not a likely candidate for a tidal wave, what? Never can tell, though. Fossils of sea creatures have been found in the rocks there. It was underwater or there.

Q: How many of the published novelists in this country actually make a living from their writing?

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A heavy and frustrating influence hangs over you and it is necessary that you keep as cheerful as you can and don't force issues. You would be wise not to rely on others.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Business matters can be hard to handle until luncheon and then you can avoid one who is unreliable.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20): Rise above that feeling of depression and later be sure to handle that business matter well.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Forget that worrying and be more practical and use judgment later so that you do not make a mistake.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Avoid that angry and forceful friend and conditions later are rather restraining. Put risk above them.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Handle business matters well in morning and later be very diplomatic with your friends. Pay that pressing bill.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Avoid that new contact who has an eye on your assets. Study the actions of one in your power.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Be sure the promises you make in business are those you can keep and later do not go on any tangents.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Don't permit a partner to do something that you do not approve of. Keep a promise you made.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Be determined and you get that work done. Make a new partner explain agreements.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): You are angry with your loved one, but remain patient. Make sure you are not extravagant.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Take a walk and avoid an argument at home, and soon it will be over. Also sidestep one who gossips too much.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): A day to remain calm, cool and composed. He or she will early show the ability at getting into the money matters, repairing property, building, etc. — ask the education along such lines. Later in life, your progeny will develop selling ability.

Reagan, lawmakers argue Latin policy

By NORMAN D. SANDLER
United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Reagan and Secretary of State George Shultz told Republican congressional leaders Tuesday the administration's controversial carrot-and-stick strategy in Central America is making progress.

Reagan summoned GOP leaders from Capitol Hill to the White House to tell them the flow of supplies from Nicaragua to leftist guerrillas in El Salvador has been disrupted and Salvadoran government forces are getting more effective in combating the guerrillas.

They also said progress is being made in drawing Nicaragua and Cuba — who Reagan has branded chief antagonists in Central America — into peace negotiations.

Both attributed this to a multifaceted policy combining quiet diplomacy, economic incentives, an expanded U.S. military presence and aid for Salvadoran troops and Nicaraguan rebels.

"We have the will to stay with it," Shultz said. "Things are moving in a reasonably positive direction."

The meeting with the congressional leaders was part of a concerted drive by the administration to calm public fears that Reagan's recent get-tough approach to Central American problems could move the nation toward war in the region.

Afterward, Senate Republican leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said, "I feel the president's general attitude is one of optimism."

Baker said he is convinced Reagan "believes that the ultimate resolution of the problems in Central America will be on the diplomatic front" and is working vigorously in that direction.

As demonstrations of this commitment, Reagan called the peace effort's presidential envoy Richard Shope, who returned from Central America late Monday. The president also stressed his willingness to consider overtures to Cuba, which he has portrayed as the fomenter of turmoil in the region.

The implicit message was that a recent show of military force, coupled with stepped-up diplomatic initiatives, have had a favorable impact.

"There has been a shift in position, at least rhetorically, on the part of Nicaragua and Cuba," Shultz said.

Governors pan plan for defense spending

By LOVE MILLER JR.
Newhouse News Service

PORTLAND, Maine — The Reagan administration once again has failed to win support from the nation's governors for the president's economic policies.

At their summer conference here, Republican as well as Democratic governors reaffirmed their emphatic objections to Reagan's favorite defense spending targets, extended tax cuts and — most particularly — high long-term federal deficits.

Since there had been a noticeable absence of partisanship during the first two days of the National Governors Association meeting, it came as a slight surprise when the Democratic governors caucus actually adopted a statement at the final day of the conference Tuesday critical of Reaganomics.

But Republican governors — in their own closed session, took a similar position, although they did not put it in writing for public release.

Afterward, Republican Gov.

Richard Snelling of Vermont said the GOP state executives resented their support for an NGA economic policy statement passed last winter over strong opposition from the White House.

That statement took strong exception to Reagan's defense budget and called for a crash effort to bring down the impending long-term deficits, including consideration of postponing or cancelling the final phase of Reagan's 25-per-cent income tax cuts considered a "sell-out" by the Republican caucus members, told Lee Verstandig, the White House official for liaison with the governors.

That these substantial differences with the president were still unresolved.

Some governors said the Democrats' rather unexpected action in drafting a resolution was caused by resentment over the fact that Vice President George Bush had delivered what some considered a highly misleading partisan claim of administration economic success, and then departed without offering his listeners a chance to ask questions or present rebuttals.

House approves a Martin Luther King holiday

By WESLEY G. DIPPERT
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The House voted 353-90 Tuesday to make the third Monday in January a national holiday in memory of Martin Luther King Jr., the civil rights leader who evoked "the moral conscience of this nation."

Conservative Rep. Jack Kemp (R-N.Y.), who said he had changed his position on the bill, emotionally urged Republicans to approve the measure and return the GOP to the party Abraham Lincoln dreamed it would be a majority of members of both parties voted for the measure.

About 50 House members, including most of the 20 black members, rose to speak in support of the legislation, which now goes to the Senate where its prospects are uncertain.

"Martin Luther King changed America — all of America," Speaker Thomas O'Neill told a hushed audience.

"He changed it not by force of arms but by moral force," the Massachusetts Democrat said. "The decision we make in the House is not on King's place in history, but on his place in our hearts and in our lives. It is the decision of history, or to remain silent."

King was born Jan. 15, 1929, but designating the holiday to fall on Monday would give workers their 10th federal holiday and assure them of another long weekend.

"Martin Luther King was one of America's greatest theologians, humanitarians, Nobel peace prize winners and a person who showed not only the moral conscience of this nation but of the world," Rep. Katie Hall, D-Ind., the bill's floor manager, said in starting the 40-minute debate.

Rep. William Dannemeyer, R-Fla., leading the opposition, proposed designating the third Sunday in January in honor of King, who was slain in 1968, just as he said Reformation Sunday in October honors King's namesake, Martin Luther. The House voted 247-197 four years ago on such a proposal.

Dannemeyer also protested the bill coming to the floor under a suspension of rules.

Space shuttle Challenger was moved to launch pad for crew's dress rehearsal Thursday.

Space shuttle ready for next trip

CABE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The shuttle Challenger was moved to an ocean-side launch pad Tuesday to be prepared for its third mission later this month, a five-day flight with the first black crewman aboard.

The winged space-fighter was transported 3 1/2 miles before dawn from a giant tunnel crawler from the Kennedy Space Center assembly building to the pad from which it will blast off Aug. 30.

The mission, the eighth American shuttle flight, will feature the first night launch and landing in the shuttle program. Challenger is scheduled to lift off at 3:45 a.m. EDT and touch down at 3:45 a.m. EDT Sept. 4 on the desert landing strip at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Lt. Col. Guion Bluford, the first black scheduled to fly in space, will be one of the crew members aboard the spaceplane.

Challenger's tedious trek from the assembly building to the launch pad took seven hours. The giant crawler that transports the 12-million-pound cargo of spaceplane and its portable launch platform creeps along at less than 1 mph.

NASA spokesman Jim Ball said the move went smoothly.

The so-called "shuttle rollout" had been scheduled for Monday but was postponed because of thunderstorms in the area.

Brush fires burn land in 4 states

By MARC MCCABLAND
United Press International

Flames raged out of control Tuesday in Oregon, threatening the base of two high-voltage power lines to California and forcing utility officials to shut off power, so firefighters could battle the blaze.

Elsewhere, firefighters in four states battled a series of lightning-triggered blazes, which have consumed nearly 130,000 acres of range and timberland in Oregon, Nevada, Idaho and California.

In Idaho, firefighters battled a series of new lightning-caused brush fires as officials considering billing a Kuna, Idaho, farmer for accidentally igniting a major range blaze that roared within a few yards of several homes before being halted.

U.S. Bureau of Land Management officials said dozens of firefighters were dispatched to attack five fires burning north of Weiser and near Emmet in the wake of a lightning storm late Monday.

About 200 firefighters were trying to stop the 28,000-acre grass and sagebrush fire on U.S. Bureau of Land Management property near Paisley in southern Oregon.

In southeastern Oregon, 135 firefighters battled the 5,200-acre Alkali Butte fire and the 4,500-acre Horse Mountain blaze.

More than 700 firefighters were deployed against a string of fires that had blackened several thousand acres in Nevada, including one close to a gunpowder plant. Firefighters said the flames were being kept away from the plant, 1 mile east of Sparks by means of a firewall.

Report says one of every five children is poor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The number of people regarded by the government as poor rose to a 16-year high in 1982, the Census Bureau reported Tuesday, but officials said the government's poverty line may not be an accurate measure of well-being.

In its latest annual report on poverty levels, the bureau said last year's recession helped pull another 2.6 million people below the official poverty line — an income of $9,287 for a family of four.

That brought the total of the nation's officially designated poor to 34.4 million Americans, 15 percent of the population and the highest rate since 1966. But the rate of increase continued to slow and was the smallest since 1976.

The bureau's report said the income figures do not include non-cash government aid such as food stamps, Medicaid and school lunches, and if such benefits were included, the poverty rate might be 40 percent lower.

However, such benefits have never been measured as income in determining poverty levels.

The figures showed that 21.7 percent of children under 18 years of age were living below the poverty line. That was the "worst reading since 1964's 22.7 percent and was substantially higher than the 19.8 percent in 1981.

But for the first year on record, the official poverty rate for people older than 64 declined to no worse than that of the general population. In fact, the official category of poor, which grew 8.1 percent in 1982, expanded only for people 55 and younger.

Although at its highest level since 1966, the 8.1 percent increase in 1982 was smaller than in any year since 1976.

The bureau said that in the report by saying poverty rates "cannot be completely equated as measures of well-being."

Despite stiffer eligibility standards for some federal programs such as Medicaid, food stamps and school lunches, more tax money was spent to help the poor in 1982 than in 1966, the report said.

In fact, the growth in aid to the poor occurred in programs, such as food stamps and Medicaid, that provide benefits in a form other than cash. These benefits are not counted as income in determining poverty status," the report said.

Heart transplant pioneer retiring

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (UPI) — Heart transplant pioneer Dr. Christian Barnard will retire later this year, who is chief specialist at Groote Schuur Hospital's cardiac surgery unit, will retire because of arthritis, a hospital spokesman said Tuesday.

Barnard, 63, who led the Groote Schuur team that performed the world's first human heart transplant at the Cape Town hospital in December, 1967, will take early retirement from government medical service, the spokesman said.

"The retirement of Dr. Barnard means the end of a long and famous connection which he has had with us since June 1958, and my department and I are heartsore to have to take leave of this colorful colleague and friend," said Johan Louber, head of the Cape Province medical committee.

fact that the esteem which he as the leader of the team that was a medical man gained for Groote Schuur, the Cape Hospital Service and South Africa will not easily be equalled."

After his retirement, Barnard is expected to devote his time to farming, tending his stud farm of Simmentaler cattle at Sedgfield, 250 miles east of Cape Town.

"His brilliance as a cardiac surgeon and his pioneering work in this sphere led to the amazing and dramatic first human heart transplant," Louber said.

"The fame that his medical team gained overnight has faded somewhat, but it remains an irrefutable

Clerk scares people; cops explain why

BOCA RATON, Fla. (UPI) — James Karsner, a mild-mannered warehouse clerk thought to be the people suddenly seemed afraid of him, but police soon explained why.

Karsner, 21, went into the Glendale Federal Bank in Boca Raton Monday to make a deposit, and in quick succession found himself handcuffed, fingerprinted and accused of an attempted bank heist.

The problem stemmed from the deposit slip that Karsner picked up at the bank counter and filled out without examining it. On the back of it, unknown to Karsner, somebody had hand-written: "Give me all your money now."

Karsner said he had no idea what was happening when he saw a policeman break out a shotgun. And he was further confused when a customer at a nearby drive-in teller's booth looked frightened, rolled up her car windows and dived to the floor.

"I turned to the woman behind me and said, 'I wonder who's going on? I told her, 'I don't know if it's safe to go out,'" Karsner said.

For Karsner, it wasn't. When he stepped out of the building a policeman pointed a revolver at his face and told him he had just robbed the bank.

"I almost fainted. I was afraid. I didn't know what to do," said Karsner. "I said there must be some mistake."

The bank teller who had accepted the deposit slip came out and identified Karsner as the culprit. Karsner said he hadn't looked at the back of the deposit slip, and hadn't asked for any money.

After two hours of checking, police believed Karsner and released him. Now he says he is waiting for an apology from the bank.

'Seminarian' admits fraud

MOSCOW (UPI) — A man who posed as a cancer-stricken Catholic seminary student has admitted in court that he persuaded a Washington resident to pay him for "anointing" his ailing dog.

Police said John Arthur Clevidence, 25, from Michigan, pleaded guilty to a felony grand-theft charge before Second District Judge Andrew Schwam.

The judge scheduled a sentencing hearing for Sept. 9.

Clevidence, who was convicted of misdemeanor fraud last year in nearby Whitman County, Wash., could receive a maximum sentence of up to 14 years in prison on the Idaho charge.

Clevidence was arrested after Thomas Butler of Vancouver, Wash., told officers he paid Clevidence for anointing his dog, Stuffy.

After 450 years, project resumes

LONDON (UPI) — Work has restarted on the west tower of the North Church, Bolton Abbey in the north Yorkshire. The Times reported Tuesday.

So what? Well, the new activity comes after a 450-year break.

Work on the 120-foot tower began in 1520 and was ordered stopped by King Henry VIII when he dissolved the monasteries in the 1530s, following his falling out with the Roman Catholic church.

At the time, about one-third of the tower had been built on the church in northern England.

Filer police chief resigns amid accusations

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

FILER — The embattled police chief of Filer, Gary Roehl, resigned Monday.

But he says he is innocent of the informal charges recently filed against him.

Roehl, 33, had been on suspension from the Filer Police Department since mid-July. The suspension was caused by charges that he was intoxicated and was "offensively touching" residents of the Casa Grande Apartments in Filer on the night of July 6 and into the next morning.

It is not known whether the Filer City Council accepted the police chief's resignation at its meeting Tuesday night. Mayor Perry Dyke and police commissioner Ron Stokessberry had said earlier in the day that they did not want to comment on the resignation until after the meeting.

But Stokessberry did say that a police chief should "set an example, not be an example."

Before the resignation was announced, council members had been scheduled to meet tonight to decide whether Roehl would keep his job.

But Roehl, who had been Filer's police chief since June 1982, said Tuesday that tonight's meeting probably would have meant his dismissal anyway.

"They want my badge, and they'd have taken it if I hadn't resigned," he said.

Even if the council had decided to retain him, Roehl says he could not have been as effective in his job.

"This decision is in no way an admission of guilt to any of the statements about my alleged actions at the Casa Grande Apartments," Roehl said in a written statement.

On the night of July 6, Roehl says he went to the Casa Grande Apartments with two male friends who lived there.

Roehl says he did have at least two, but not more than three beers before arriving at the apartment complex. He says he does not recall drinking any more at the apartments.

"I had a couple of beers; I was not drunk," he said.

During the evening, Roehl says one woman with whom he was talking had a "coordination attack" and fell out of her lawn chair. Roehl says he later was "accused of doing this," but he says he was at least three feet away from the woman at the time.

"I honestly don't remember having any thing to do with that," he said.

When two Filer police officers made their regular rounds at the apartments around midnight, Roehl says he was leaving.

Before getting into his car, Roehl says he touched the arm of a female friend in a "sign of friendship and trust." The two officers said him touch the woman; he says and did not say anything about it at the time.

The officers also did not attempt to stop Roehl from leaving in his car. But during a later, council meeting, the officers "both stated they thought I was drunk," based on his speech pattern, Roehl said Tuesday.

Since he occasionally visited friends at the apartment complex, Roehl says he was surprised when "I was told to stay away" from the apartments by the police commissioner the next day.

"When I left, I had no idea anybody had been upset," he said.

"I made remarks I've made for two years to the same people and behaved as usual to 'fit in with the crowd'."

Although Roehl admits he may have been "trying to be overly friendly" with his friends on July 6, he says it was not any different than other evenings he had spent at the apartments.

"I feel the investigation conducted by the Filer Police Department was very unprofessional and very one-sided, as the information gathered had many distinct errors, which I pointed out to the police commissioner," Roehl said in his written statement.

"I don't feel ashamed or guilty because I know my intentions at the time."

Roehl also says his attorney had advised him that his conduct was not grounds for suspension and was only a "personal judgment" by City Council.

Kindergarten classes Preschool passes after summer test

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — The first summer kindergarten program in the Jerome School District is coming to a close, but it looks like "fuller summer sessions will be on the agenda."

Last year, the district discontinued its kindergarten program because there was not enough room in its crowded elementary schools and bond issues to provide new classroom space had failed.

But after protests from parents, the district decided to try an eight-week summer program.

It would not have been possible without the air-conditioned high school, says Robert Lawson, the district's director of special services.

"We shuffled the kindergarten furniture into high school classrooms, and with the help of some outstanding teachers, have had what we feel is an excellent program," he said Tuesday.

Friday will mark the final day for the kindergarten students, who will be spending back Aug. 22 as first-graders.

"We know we can't progress the children as far in 40 days of summer as we can in the 180-day school-year program," Lawson says. "But we feel it's much better than no kindergarten."

Over the pre-testing was completed, Lawson and the teachers divided the students into groups. Children who could already read, for example, were put into one level. Then, they were grouped according to their abilities in other areas. Children who could count or write their names were placed in other levels.

Some of the students had attended private kindergartens, while others had been to day-care centers, where they had learned about colors, shapes and letters. And some had received no training and little exposure to learning procedures, Lawson says.

Stark rise in fatal motorcycle accidents worry state police

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Motorcycle accidents have claimed 50 percent more lives in Idaho this year than last, Idaho State Police officials say.

State police say 15 persons have died in motorcycle accidents so far in 1983, compared to the 10 fatalities that were reported statewide at this time last year.

At least 100 more people were killed in riding season is only half-over.

The latest death occurred in Twin Falls last week.

Kenneth Eugene Trowbridge, 22, of 329 E. Fifth St. in Jerome, died last Friday at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise. He had been in critical condition since he was brought to the Boise hospital the previous Tuesday, hours after his motorcycle was struck by a car in downtown Twin Falls.

Trowbridge was traveling south on Shoshone Street North when his motorcycle was struck by an eastbound car at Third Street. The eastbound car was driving on the motorcycle. Trowbridge was thrown into a fence, police said.

Trowbridge, who suffered a head injury, was not wearing a helmet.

In the only other motorcycle fatality in this area this year, a Buell man was killed in a June 26 collision near Barger.

Craig Kaster was southbound on U.S. 89, when he was struck by a northbound car. As a result of the fatality, Kaster's family recently filed a $1.1 million wrongful-death action in Fifth District Court.

Locally, the number of motorcycle fatalities has not increased above the average rate.

State police believe increased motorcycle usage is responsible for the higher statewide fatality rate.

"Probably it's due to just more use of the motorcycle because of the economy," says L. Bob Wright, of the ISP office in Twin Falls. "I think it's an ever-growing sport. People just like to get out on motorcycles. They're cheaper to operate. I think that has a lot to do with it."

Also playing a role is the fact that many motorcyclists do not use helmets. Following a libertarian view, the Legislature has removed motorcycle helmet requirements from the books.

But state police say they will continue to wage a public relations campaign in favor of helmet usage. And they also caution motorcyclists to draw attention to themselves.

"I don't think that the motoring public as a whole sees motorcycles," Wright says. "People are used to seeing cars, big cars, and a motorcycle just doesn't have the mass to be visible."

One solution is the motorcycle headlight. State police say that cautious motorcyclists would do well to operate their headlights both in daylight and at night.

"That's the only thing that we can do, is to suggest it, and then hope that they take that into consideration," Wright says.

Suit filed on BID

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Opponents of the Twin Falls business improvement district filed suit on Tuesday to block collection of their assessments and to have the program declared unconstitutional.

The lawsuit, filed in Fifth District Court, formalized the allegations that were raised Monday by the lawyer for seven Twin Falls businesses.

Named as plaintiffs in the lawsuit are: United Automotive Inc.; Ralph Lockerby, doing business as G and R Office Products; Lowell V. Havener, doing business as Havener's Frames and Gallery; H.L. Ramsey, doing business as Ramsey's Window Decorating; Nordling Parts Co. Inc.;

J.M.A. Inc.; and John J. Eiler Jr., doing business as the Beacon Club.

The plaintiffs want the court to issue an injunction against the collection of their business improvement assessments. They contend those assessments have been imposed unfairly. They also want the court to determine the constitutionality of the state business improvement law, as well as the constitutionality of how that law has been applied in Twin Falls.

The Twin Falls City Council created a business improvement district last year under a new state law that allows businesses to "tax" themselves in order to pay for promotion and physical improvements.

Bishop returns for show Coors' shows off its tiny, experimental jet

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sleek and small, the Silver Bullet jet is a punchy little speedster.

Its pointy shape and a metallic paint job could convince some admirers that the experimental craft carried its name in the air.

Actually, Silver Bullet is the nickname for the beer it advertises. Coors Light beer by the Adolph Coors Co. comes in a silver aluminum can.

But the mini-jet's mission can be described as a blend of beer and barrel rolls.

Parked Tuesday on the pavement in Twin Falls downtown mall, the Silver Bullet displayed the Coors Light name while it drew the curious.

Some people are skeptical when they see the world's smallest jet.

"I say look at it and think it's a mock-up or display model. They don't realize it's a real airplane," said mechanic Leonard Hannasch.

How small is the Silver Bullet? Smaller than most cars, not counting the wings. It's a compact, 12-foot hunk of aluminum squatting on what looks like go-kart wheels. Pilot Bob Bishop's legs stretch up into the nose of the plane. His seat is "scrunched" up against the engine wall.

"But they've got it, there is no doubt Bishop could fire up the French turbo engine and taxi down Main Street.

This is no toy, Hannasch says.

While posing on the ground, the Silver Bullet simply sits out of its element. It's small on earth, but seems big in the air. When it taxis after a routine of tail slides, inverted passes and wing walks, spectators talk about how much larger the Silver Bullet seemed while airborne, Hannasch says.

Bishop, his wife, Mary Ellen, and some friends spent 3,000 hours assembling and modifying the jet for aerobatics in the spring and winter of 1976. They tossed out 100 pounds of weight. The plane still is a trim 42 pounds — 630 fully loaded. They also bent the leading edge of the wings by hand to cut the stalling speed to 70 mph, which would allow more fancy turns and dives, Hannasch says.

Duplicating the plane today would cost $125,000 because the parts must be made specially, he says.

The manufacturer of the original kit, Bede Aircraft Corp., went bankrupt in 1977.

Consequently, there are only four still flying in the world. One sits in the Silver Bullet was outfitted with weapons to star in the latest James Bond movie, "Octopussy," Hannasch says.

Since 1976, the Silver Bullet has spent 200 hours soaring and swirling through the skies at exhibitions and in commercials.

Bullet hits police chief's car

By WENDELL

WENDELL — Sheriff's deputies are looking into how a bullet happened to strike Wendell police Chief Mike Tambini's car on Tuesday.

Tambini, who was not injured in the incident, says he hopes the bullet that struck his overhead lights was a stray.

"Hopefully, someone was trying to shoot a bird or a can," he said. "That's the way I'm looking at it. It might be something different. I don't know."

The incident occurred at 12:30 p.m. at a cornfield in the northwest area of Wendell. Tambini said he had received a citizen's complaint about gunshots in the area of Fifth Avenue West.

On his third patrol through the area,

Tambini said he heard a "pop" from his overhead light unit. At that point, he notified the Gooding County sheriff's office that he was under fire and asked for assistance.

Tambini said he could not see where the shot came from.

"When you hear something like that, you really don't want to stand up and take looking," he said.

Five Gooding County units and two Idaho State Police units arrived on the scene and conducted a search of the 200-square-yard cornfield.

"We didn't come up with anything, so I don't know if there was anything to the incident or not," said Sheriff Robert Aja. "As far as I'm concerned, there's nothing that I can tell you."

Bob Bishop flew his jet at the 1981 Jerome air show.

Gooding farm tour is today

GOODING — The fourth annual Gooding County Farmer of the Year tour will be held today.

Persons wanting to attend should meet at the Gooding County Courthouse at 9:30 a.m., says Ed Koester, chairman of the contest. Bus transportation will be available.

Stops on the tour will be the five nominated farms: the Lyle Thomas, David Smith and Joe D. Pavlov operations in the Gooding area, the Jack Hiral farm in Wendell and the Frank and Larry Graves farm in Bliss.

All tour participants there will be able to vote for their choice of Farmer of the Year.

The program was begun four years ago to recognize farm farms and good management, Koester says. The tour is sponsored by the Gooding Farm Bureau and various local grange organizations.

Shoshone man killed in Oregon

BAKER, Ore. — A Shoshone man and his as yet unidentified companion were killed instantly Monday in a one-car rollover near Baker, Ore.

Oregon State Police report that Ernest Alan McClure,

25, of Shoshone, and a male, believed to be between 17 and 25, were crushed to death after they were thrown from the car.

The accident occurred at 8:25 a.m. on Interstate 84, about two miles west of Baker.

State police believe McClure lost control of his westbound vehicle after it drifted off the east shoulder onto a borrow pit. The car rolled twice, landing on its left side.

State police believe the companion was a hitchhiker, but they found no identifying papers on him. The unidentified victim was carrying $101 in his right sock, according to police.

McClure was alone at the time he left Gooding on Sunday.

A full obituary on McClure is elsewhere on this page.

Injured woman walks for help

HANSEN — An injured Filer woman walked about three miles to summon help after a car accident Tuesday morning on Rock Creek Road.

Kylien Hill, 20, of Route 2, Filer, was reported in fair condition Tuesday afternoon at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Hill was a passenger in a car driven by Vincent Todd Jensen, 49, of Route 1, Kimberly, according to Cpl. Richard Wright of the Idaho State Police.

At 1:30 a.m., Jensen was northbound on the road, about 22 miles south of Hansen, when he reportedly fell asleep. He drove off the left side of the road and down an embankment. The car came to rest in Rock Creek, according to the officer.

Jensen and Hill began walking to call for help. Jensen, who also was injured, could not continue after a while and laid down on the side of the road. Hill kept going and reached a campsite. An unidentified camper telephoned the ISP at 5:25 a.m., Wright said.

When a police officer picked up Jensen and took him to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, where he was treated and released, Hill was taken to the hospital by an unidentified person.

Jensen has been cited for inattentive driving. There was $600 damage to the vehicle.

A Burley teenager was being held in the Castle County Jail on an assault with a deadly weapon charge. His name was not released because of his age.

According to Burley police, the juvenile stabbed two Burley men at the motel at about 2 p.m. Police would not identify the men.

One of the men received a small puncture wound on his right shoulder, and the other suffered a scratch on his shoulder. Both refused treatment.

Dog's license 'saves' girl

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls woman called police Tuesday afternoon when a lost child wandered to her home.

Barbara Kruse, of 1636 Harmon Park Ave., said a little blonde girl, about 2 years old, had her dog showed up at her door about 5:55 p.m. She knew the child's first name but could not obtain any other information, she told police.

Quick thinking by a police dispatcher solved the case. She asked if the dog had a license. It did. Tracing the number, an officer learned the dog's name; its address and its owner's name.

The child, dog and family were reunited in a matter of a few minutes.

Burial will be in Shoshone Cemetery.

Friends may call at the Bergin Funeral Chapel in Shoshone all day today.

Nephew arrested again for theft

By United Press International
The Times-News

BOZEMAN, Mont. — Two Pocatello men have been charged with trying to spend some of the $25,000 in bonds that were stolen last October from Oren Boone of Twin Falls.

One of the suspects, Gregory Patrick Leeds, 45, is Boone's nephew. Last year, Leeds was charged in Twin Falls County with grand theft.

Fifth District Magistrate Court documents indicate that Leeds admitted taking the bonds. But at the time, the Poestello man claimed that the bonds had been stolen from his truck before he could return them.

Prosecutors dropped the case in December at Boone's request. In an affidavit filed with the court, Boone said he wanted to preserve peace within his family.

"None of the documents have been recovered that are set forth in the complaint," Boone told the court.

"However, I believe some or all of them will be replaced, and I will have sufficient assets to live."

Leeds and William Howard Speck, 39, were arrested Wednesday at Pocatello, where Speck had left $5,000 in bonds last week for a five-day waiting period, according to a Bozeman police officer.

One of the firm's clerks contacted authorities after checking a list of stolen bonds.

Anyone holding the bonds could return them for cash after the waiting period.

Speck was arrested at the financial institution. Leeds was arrested in a car outside.

Speck and Leeds were jailed in lieu of $8,000 each, on charges of attempted theft and possession of marijuana. Leeds posted bond and was released.

More than $100,000 of the bonds are confirmed to have been passed in Idaho, California, Nevada, Utah and Montana, according to Bozeman police Sgt. Ron Green. More may actually have been stolen.

Police recovered another $4,500 worth of bonds after making the arrest.

Jet

The little jet at 70 mph, and from takeoff, the Silver Bullet can explore as much as 26,000 feet of air overhead.

Fractically, though, it has no engine system, heat or pressurized cockpit. Hannasch says: Bishop generally keeps it under about 2,500 feet, he says.

"That's still plenty of room to thrill an audience. The jet can spiral, loop, spin at speeds up to 120 mph. Its size also makes it a real naiser. Bishop can put on a 20-minute show using 12 gallons of aviation fuel. He also could race as far as 287 miles on its two 18-gallon wing tanks, Hannasch says.

The statistics say the Silver Bullet is a lot of plane squeezed into a little space.

Bishop, 39, who is from Edmond, Okla., worked as a test pilot for Boeing, and he has been a professional aerobatic flyer more than a decade. He is set up to promote Coors Light early this year. Since then, a long list of air shows has taken him and the Silver Bullet to Florida, Connecticut, Ontario, San Diego and Seattle. The 28-event tour will end in November, Hannasch says.

Bishop was not showing off his plane personally Tuesday in Twin Falls. His only sign of ownership was a helmet with a bronze visor, set atop the pilot's seat.

But he and the Silver Bullet will be flying at the Jerome Air Show this weekend at the Jerome County Airport, located at U.S. 33 and Idaho 26, east of Jerome and north of Twin Falls. The show will be a preliminary event to the week-long Jerome Festival of Pride. Air shows are scheduled for 6 p.m. Saturday and 1:30 p.m. Sunday.

Tumor claims life of state board chief

NELS SOLBERG
Led state education

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — Idaho Board of Education President Nels Solberg died at a Spokane hospital Tuesday after undergoing weeks of treatment for a brain tumor, officials said. He was 52.

Officials at Sacred Heart Hospital said the Grangeville resident, who underwent surgery for the cancer earlier this year, lapsed into a coma Monday night and died at about 3:50 a.m. Tuesday.

Solberg, owner and manager of a Grangeville insurance and real estate firm, was appointed to the Education Board in 1979 by Gov. John Evans and became president of the panel in April.

He also was a Democratic state senator for three terms from 1968 through 1972, serving six years on the Education Committee and four years on the Finance Committee.

Solberg graduated from Klamath High School in 1948; and in 1952 from the University of Idaho with a bachelor's degree in business administration. He also was in the U.S. Air Force from 1952 to 1954 as a first lieutenant.

He is survived by wife, Mary Ann, and children Julie, Don, Jan and Jill.

Funeral services tentatively were scheduled for Friday morning at Grangeville.

Education Board Vice President Robert Montgomery of Boise, who had been acting president in Solberg's absence, said Solberg's death was a "profound loss" to the board and the state.

"All of us on the board will miss him because he contributed a great deal and really cared about education in Idaho," Montgomery said.

"On a personal level, Nels was a good friend and a man of great integrity," he said.

"When Nels was first appointed to the board, he said he wanted to be an advocate for students and for their educational needs," Montgomery added.

"I think he filled that role effectively because he always looked at the human impact of the board's decisions."

"I know all the board members will miss his common-sense approach to making decisions."

"Nels was truly one of Idaho's finest sons, and he gave generously of his service to our state," said Gov. John Evans.

Marilyn Jones, an aide to Evans, said Solberg underwent brain surgery and seven weeks of treatment at the Spokane hospital in late spring, then returned to the hospital one week ago.

McClure plans battle against food stamp fraud

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three western senators have introduced legislation to reform the Food Stamp program, citing alleged waste, mismanagement and fraud that costs taxpayers more than $1.2 billion a year in misspent money.

Food Stamp Program, due to error," McClure said.

He said waste costs 10 percent of the Food Stamp program and totals nearly $21 million a week nationwide.

The Food Stamp program was set up with the best of intentions and is a necessary program for many people in this country who find themselves in circumstances beyond their control," McClure said.

"Certainly, we as a society have a responsibility to help people who are in need. But there is also a responsibility to the taxpayer to wisely manage the taxpayer's money."

The legislation is a 16-point plan to eliminate abuse, force states to manage and monitor the program better and cut wasteful duplication.

The plan requires Food Stamp recipients to make even dollar purchases so they can't spend the change for other things.

They would be required to have photo identification cards and to countersign the stamps to help curtail black market trade.

The standard deduction would be reduced from $85 to $80.

States could use the same eligibility determination as for Aid to Families with Dependent Children or Supplemental Security Income. The states would have to pay for any excess in the error rate above 3 percent.

Agreement aids Gem State mining operations

BOISE (UPI) — Surface mining and dredge operations in Idaho likely will improve under a new agreement between the state Lands Department and the U.S. Forest Service, Idaho Minerals Bureau Chief Tom Markland said Tuesday.

"An improvement," Markland said. "The more awareness the company has that people are checking on the permits, the better the job they do."

The agreement will mean applicants for operations on federal lands will no longer have to file duplicate paperwork and obtain double bonding, Lands Department Assistant Director Fred Kisabeth said.

Miners now will be able to submit one plan that will satisfy both state and federal requirements, he said.

Under the agreement, Idaho's inspectors will continue to check mining operations on Forest Service lands to ensure they follow the Bridge and Placer Mining Act and the Idaho Surface Mining Act.

Kisabeth said the agency is working with the Bureau of Land Management to reach a similar agreement for project inspections on federal ranges and in the state.

Lands Department Director Gordon Trombley praised the agreement as a method of improving inspections with limited state personnel.

"Through continued cooperation with the Forest Service, the Idaho Department of Lands will better be able to allow removal of minerals while preserving water quality and ensuring rehabilitation for beneficial use of the land... with the department's very limited staff," Trombley said.

Firefighters battle a 1,000-acre blaze on BLM land near Alfalfa, Ore.

Crews gaining on Western range fires

By MARC McFARLAND
United Press International

Wary firefighters Tuesday contained a stubborn blaze in eastern Oregon, the largest of the Western range and forest fires that have scorched more than 115,000 acres. But flames roared out of control elsewhere in Oregon and in Nevada, California and Idaho.

Some 125 firefighters contained the 62,000-acre Indian Fork blaze 100 miles south of Vale, Ore., at 7 a.m. P.M. said Bureau of Land Management spokesman Barry Rose. He said exhausted crews hoped good weather would allow them to control the blaze by Tuesday night.

"Lightning strikes usually occur late in the afternoon. That's the hot part of the day," Rose said.

Four smaller blazes triggered by lightning Monday were extinguished, but two dozen others that had charred thousands of acres in the Burns and Lakeview areas burned out of control.

Elsewhere in Oregon, 135 firefighters battled the 5,200-acre Alkali Butte fire, the 4,300-acre Horse Mountain blaze and an 18,000-acre fire burning out of control northeast of Paisley.

More than 700 firefighters were deployed against a string of lightning-caused range fires that had blackened several thousand acres in Nevada, including one close to a gunpowder plant. Firefighters said the flames were being kept away from the plant 4 miles east of Sparks by means of a firewall.

Firefighters hoped the biggest Nevada fire, which ravaged 27,000 acres in the Pah Rah Mountains east of Sparks, would be contained late Tuesday and controlled by Wednesday.

Two other fires that scorched more than 3,700 acres 25 miles north of Reno were contained. Firefighters in Northern California struggled to contain a 300-acre blaze in Shasta County, while crews in Siskiyou County controlled a 400-acre fire.

Ernie Loveless of the California Division of Forestry said the Shasta County fire, 7 miles northeast of Redding, threatened about a dozen homes in the Ft. Jones area overnight but moved past the residential area Tuesday.

He said 400 firefighters manning the fire lines expected to control the blaze Tuesday night.

In Idaho, BLM crews put out a 540-acre fire near Mountain Home Tuesday and moved to five new blazes that have burned more than 400 acres of range country north of Weiser and Emmet.

Spokesman Pat Shanafelt said the BLM was considering billing a Kuna farmer for the $16,000 cost of putting out a 1,500-acre fire that threatened a housing development Monday. The farmer was burning brush when the flames went out of control, Shanafelt said.

Protest was not arson

SALEM, Ore. (UPI) — The Oregon Supreme Court Tuesday overturned the arson conviction of a communist activist, arrested in 1961 after a demonstration at a Eugene speech by a former Iranian hostage.

Nancy Whitley, 32, and the late John Joseph Koller, both members of the Revolutionary Communist Youth Brigade, were convicted of arson. They allegedly set fire to a gasoline-soaked strip of yellow cloth as a political protest during a speech by Victor Tomseth on the University of Oregon campus.

The Supreme Court Tuesday held the law Mr. Whitley was convicted under — first degree arson — requires that the fire must damage property which places another person or property in danger.

DENVER (UPI) — Environmentalists Tuesday praised a federal judge who upheld the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in barring a proposed Colorado dam that threatened downstream roosting grounds of whooping cranes in western Nebraska.

Robert Gollen, an attorney with the Boulder, Colo.-based National Wildlife Foundation, called the ruling an "extremely important victory."

"It means that not only can government bodies regulate the use of land to protect the general welfare, but that they can also regulate private water rights as well," Gollen said.

Chase The Blues All Summer

Blue is beautiful in the summertime. Beautiful in the summer sky, the peaceful lake, the shining sea, the cornflower and the bluebird. Mostly, blue is beautiful in blueberries, where there's a double dividend - you not only can see the color, but you can taste the flavor.

Summer is also a time for marriages, when something blue is a traditional part of the festivities. One of the most satisfactory marriages is that between blueberries and unflavored gelatine. Use them to create recipes that are natural, flavorful and wholesome. Unflavored gelatine contains no artificial ingredients or sugar, and blueberries are a completely natural treat. They belong with one another because the unflavored gelatine gives recipes the support they need while letting the fresh blueberry flavor shine through. The results are appealing and refreshing dishes guaranteed to live happily ever after.

Any time of day can be blueberry time. Mornings start out great when Berry Blueberry Jam is on the breakfast table to spread a little homemade flavor on toast, muffins or croissants. Cool and creamy Summer Blueberry Soup is a delicious make-ahead surprise. There aren't too many soups like this that can be enjoyed for breakfast, as a dinner appetizer, as a mid-afternoon or mid-night snack or as a delightful dessert.

When afternoons call for entertaining or just lounging, Shimmering Blueberry Salad can quench a parched palate with its light and clearly refreshing combination of blueberries, oranges and rose wine. Everyone knows that blueberries are a regal berry, and Fresh Blueberry Cheesecake is fit for a king with its lusciously light cheese filling crowned with rings of blueberries and whipped cream. Part of the blues, chasing attraction of all these dishes - including creamy Blueberry Ice Cream - is their ease of fixing and the delight in the faces of those who sample them.

The blueberry season is short, but these recipes can all be prepared with readily available unflavored gelatine and dry pack frozen blueberries when the fresh have passed. Enjoy these wonderful dishes whenever you want to chase the blues summertime or anytime.

BERRY BLUEBERRY JAM

- 2 cups (1 pt.) fresh blueberries
- 1/3 cup sugar
- 2 teaspoons grated orange peel
- 1 envelope unflavored gelatine
- 1 cup water

In medium saucepan, combine blueberries with sugar, cook 5 minutes, crushing berries slightly. Bring to a boil, then boil rapidly, stirring constantly, 3 minutes. Stir in orange peel. In small bowl, sprinkle unflavored gelatine over water; let stand 2 minutes. Add to blueberries; stir over low heat until gelatine is completely dissolved, about 5 minutes. Ladle into jars; cover and cool slightly before refrigerating. Makes about 2 cups jam.

FRESH BLUEBERRY CHEESECAKE

- Pastry for single-crust pie
- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatine
- 1 cup (1/2 pt.) cold light cream or half and half
- 1 cup (1/2 pt.) light cream or half and half, heated to boiling
- 4 packages (8 oz. ea.) cream cheese, softened
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons orange liqueur
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1 cup ice cubes (about 6 to 8)
- 2 to 2 1/2 cups fresh blueberries
- Whipped cream

Preheat oven to 450°. Press pastry into 10" x 2" fluted quiche/flan pan or 9-inch deep-dish pie pan; prick bottom and sides with fork. Bake 10 minutes or until golden; cool. In 5-cup blender, sprinkle unflavored gelatine over cold cream; let stand 3 to 4 minutes. Add hot cream and process at low speed until gelatine is completely dissolved, about 2 minutes. Add cream cheese, sugar, liqueur and vanilla; process at high speed until blended. Add ice cubes, one at a time; process at high speed until ice is melted. Let stand until mixture is slightly thickened, about 5 minutes. Arrange 1 cup blueberries in prepared pan; add gelatine mixture. Chill until firm. Garnish with remaining blueberries and whipped cream. Makes about 8 servings.

SUMMER BLUEBERRY SOUP

- 1 envelope unflavored gelatine
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 2 1/2 cups water
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 cups (1 pt.) fresh blueberries
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon or aromatic bitters
- 1 cup (1/2 pt.) light cream or half and half

In medium saucepan, mix unflavored gelatine with sugar; blend in 1 cup water. Let stand 1 minute. Stir over low heat until gelatine is completely dissolved, about 5 minutes. Stir in remaining water, lemon juice, blueberries and cinnamon. Simmer, stirring frequently and crushing berries slightly, 15 minutes or until blueberries are tender. Cool completely; stir in cream. Chill 4 hours or overnight. Garnish, if desired, with lemon slices and additional blueberries. Makes about 1 quart soup.
NOTE: Soup will thicken upon chilling.

BLUEBERRY ICE CREAM

- 1 envelope unflavored gelatine
- 1/2 cup cold milk
- 1/2 cup milk, heated to boiling
- 2 cups (1 pt.) fresh blueberries
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 2 cups (1 pt.) whipping or heavy cream, whipped

In 5-cup blender, sprinkle unflavored gelatine over cold milk; let stand 3 to 4 minutes. Add hot milk and process at low speed until gelatine is completely dissolved, about 2 minutes. Let cool completely. Add blueberries and sugar; process at high speed until blended. Pour into large bowl and chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from spoon. Fold whipped cream into gelatine mixture. Pour into 2 (4" x 10") freezer trays or 8-inch baking pan; freeze until firm. Makes about 1-1/2 quarts ice cream.

SHIMMERING BLUEBERRY SALAD

- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatine
- 1/3 cup sugar
- 1-1/2 cups boiling water
- 2 cups rose wine
- 2 cups (1 pt.) fresh blueberries
- 1 can (12 oz.) mandarin oranges, drained

In medium bowl, mix unflavored gelatine with sugar. Add boiling water and stir until gelatine is completely dissolved. Stir in wine. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture is consistency of unbeaten egg whites. Fold in blueberries and oranges. Turn into 5-1/2 cup mold or bowl; chill until firm. Makes about 10 servings.

How to fix that watermelon

One of the wonderful things about summer is watermelon. And the traditional way for eating this delicacy is fresh, as is, and icy cold. However, there are other ways to enjoy it that are just as summery. Here are a few.

Willetta Warberg
On food

WATERMELON AND PINEAPPLE COMPOTE

Two cups of drained, canned pineapple chunks
Three cups of watermelon flesh, which has been cubed or cut into balls with a melon ball-cutter
A fourth-cup of sugar
A cup of dry white wine
Fresh mint springs for garnish
In a large bowl, put the pineapple chunks and the watermelon chunks or balls. Sprinkle them with sugar and toss the fruit carefully so you don't break it. Sprinkle with the wine and carefully toss the fruit again to coat the pieces evenly. Cover and chill for several hours before serving. Serve in individual dishes and garnish with sprigs of fresh mint.

WATERMELON-RASPBERRY DESSERT

Three cups of watermelon chunks or balls
A pint of fresh raspberries
A cup of sugar
Fresh mint sprigs for garnish
Put the watermelon chunks or balls into six individual dessert dishes. Chill. Rinse the raspberries and pat dry. Then mash the berries with sugar and press through a sieve to remove the seeds. Chill the puree. When ready to serve your dessert, pour the raspberry puree over the watermelon chunks or balls. Garnish with sprigs of fresh mint.

WATERMELON POESICLE COMPOTE

Water
Green food coloring
Three slices from a lemon
Sugar to season to taste
Four cups of chilled watermelon chunks or balls made with melon ball-cutter
Into a saucepan, put enough water to fill an ice-cube tray. Add a few drops of green food coloring. The juice of the lemon and enough sugar to sweeten the liquid to your taste. Heat, stirring to dissolve sugar. Remove from the heat and let cool. Pour into an ice-cube tray and freeze. When ready to serve the compote, crush the ice cubes into a fine powder, using a blender. Put a little powdered ice with the watermelon chunks or balls. Garnish with a slice of orange and/or fresh mint sprig.

WATERMELON PICKLES

A large, ripe watermelon
Three tablespoons of salt
A quart of cold water

A quart of boiling water
Two cups of white vinegar
Six cups of sugar
One tablespoon of whole cloves
Three tablespoons of whole all-spice
A one-inch piece of fresh ginger
Four slices of cinnamon, broken into small pieces
Pare the outside green rind and the pink flesh from white rind of the watermelon. Cut the white rind into bite-sized chunks or rounds, making two pounds of cut rind. Place the rind in an enameled kettle with salt and cold water. Let stand overnight. Drain off the salt water. Cover the rind with fresh water; bring to a boil and simmer for 10 minutes; and then drain again.
In another kettle, combine the quart of boiling water, the vinegar, the sugar and a cheesecloth bag, which has been filled with the cloves, all-spice, ginger and cinnamon sticks and tied. Bring to a boil, and when the sugar has dissolved, simmer for five minutes. Add the rind and then simmer for about 45 minutes or until the rind is transparent. Remove the cheesecloth bag of spices.
Spoon the watermelon pickles into hot, sterile jars and seal immediately. Allow the watermelon pickles to stand for at least a month before eating. Makes about two pints.

THIS WEEK'S BEST-MARKET BUYS: Watch for sugar sales. Pork will be a good buy — especially spare ribs. Avocados are abundant and nicely priced. Bananas have not become scarce as predicted.

College garden offers new breeds

REXBURG — Many award-winning flowers and vegetables have been planted in the Ricks College Research and Demonstration Garden this year.

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

The garden is located on the only location in Idaho where gardeners can see all the recent All-America winning flowers and vegetables in one location.
The 1983 All-America winners in the Ricks garden are Sweet Success cucumber, Red Picotee petunia, Acapulco Silver kohla and Candlelight ornamental pepper.
Sweet Success has long, burlesque, astringent cucumbers similar to greenhouse cucumbers. Red Picotee petunia has bright red flowers with white edges. Acapulco Silver kohla produces three- to four-foot hedge-like plants with fern-like leaves. The plants are dark green until the first frost, when they turn red. Candlelight is a dwarf, six- to eight-inch pepper plant that produces slender, pointed peppers that turn bright red in late August and September.
One flower and one vegetable have been designated as 1984 All-America winner. Gardeners can get an early preview look at these new varieties a year ahead of their introduction. Celebrity is a new medium-girth bush tomato that is multiple disease resistant. Plants in the Ricks garden are growing vigorously and beginning to set fruit. It is too early to tell how much fruit will mature.

Border Beauty Rose is a new, semi-dwarf hybrid zinnia with three- to four-inch flowers on 12 to 14 plants. It is blooming well now and will continue to look better as summer progresses. A silver variety, Border Beauty Sentinel, also is included in the Ricks Garden.
Another new award-winning zinnia in the Ricks Garden is Street Stuff. The flowers are equal in size to Border Beauty, but the plants are about three-fourths as tall. Short Stuff has been a winner in European flower trial competitions.

The Ricks College Research and Demonstration Garden covers 10 acres on the south side of the campus. More than 350 annual flower varieties, 100 perennial flowers and 50 different vegetable varieties are included in this year's garden. The garden also includes tree and small fruit trials, as well as landscape demonstration plantings. These all have been developed over the past seven years by the faculty and students in the landscape horticulture department.
The Ricks garden is open to the public seven days a week. A large parking lot borders the garden on the west side, across from the Manwaring Student Center. The flowers and vegetables are all individually labeled. Large grass walkways provide easy access to all parts of the garden.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College.

Wall Street broker crowned king of the coupon clippers

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

Heal-ye! Heal-ye! All-hail His Majesty: Milton Anapol, selected as the American Coupon Club's "Coupon King" for 1983.

He reigns with his wife, Marlene, and four children; over a coupon kingdom in Richmond Hills, N.Y. King Milton is 37, and works in a Wall Street brokerage firm.

"His supermarket savings have been mighty, and his family, friends and neighbors all praise his couponing and refunding prowess. His story shines as a beacon to all men who say, 'There's got to be a better way.'"

"In his own words: 'In the old days, '60' (before couponing), shopping was a long, agonizing experience. I remember times when I just couldn't bring myself to walk into the supermarket, and I waited outside in the car while my wife did the shopping.'

"Then, in 1975, I started to do a little couponing. It didn't make shopping any more enjoyable, but with food prices going sky-high, it was a way to save a few cents. The turning point for me came in May of 1977 when my wife, Marlene, gave birth to our fourth child, and I was left to do the shopping. Two supermarkets in our area were giving double coupons, and I began clipping like crazy. I couldn't believe how much money I was saving on each shopping trip... and it was fun."

"When my wife came back from the hospital, we decided to do our couponing and supermarket shopping together. We really got organized, and I started to buy several dozen newspapers whenever they contained a good variety of coupons. Within a few months, we were regularly saving 25 percent on our grocery bills."

"It became a refunder in 1980. We began collecting professional purchases, and I enlisted the help of friends and relatives. Soon, I was trading refund forms with dozens of other refunders from all over the country, and I was amazed at the number of refund offers I could send for. By this time, our supermarket savings were up to 35 percent."

"In 1981, I started stocking up, and soon had a surplus of several items. One of them was coffee—I had more than 400 lbs. After some thought, I decided to try and sell the coffee. I didn't need it, friends. The first sale led to many others. I now find that I can buy items on sale at stores that offer double coupons, and then sell them at a reduced price and still make a profit. Recently, I have been selling these extra items at flea markets and taking in $200 to $300 on a weekend."

"Our typical trip to the supermarket usually involves using 75 to 150 coupons. I have so many coupons now that I can't take them all to the supermarket. On a recent trip to update New York, we passed a store that was offering double coupons; they also had Job Squad paper towels on sale for a roll. When I thought of the 30 Job Squad coupons I had left at home, I could have cried!"

"I could go on about our savings—three cases of Del-Monte tomato sauce for 40 cents; 20 lbs. of O'Sea's fishcake dinners for 59 cents each; 40 pounds of Hills coffee for 19 cents each. Recently, I received 115 tubes of Close Up toothpaste free when the store offered them on sale for 99 cents and doubled all my 50-cent coupons. I hope this gives you an idea of how I shop and save."

There is little doubt Milton Anapol deserves his title of Coupon King. If you are a male shopper, tell me about your smart shopping experiences. Write to me in care of this newspaper.

Angels spoil Twins' bid for blanking

By United Press International

Two straight shutouts for Minnesota Twins pitchers was too much to ask for.

Minnesota's Bobby Castillo took a four-hit shutout into the ninth inning, but Ron Jackson's two-run homer spoiled that and filled the California Angels to a 2-1 victory over the Twins in Minneapolis.

Rick Lyman pitched the Twins' first shutout of the year Monday night.

The Angels began their winning rally off Castillo, 7-9, when Fred Lynn led off the ninth with a single. Jackson then followed with the fifth home run to make a winner of Bruce Kison, 9-5. Kison entered the game in the eighth and got the last four outs in his first relief appearance of the year.

The Twins took a 1-0 lead in the eighth when reliever Luis Sanchez walked John Castino with the bases loaded.

Ray Smith singled off the glove of shortstop Rick Burleson to open the eighth and Houston Simmons walked. Bobby Mitchell ran for Smith and Darrell Brown sacrificed and was safe at first when third baseman Jackson failed in an attempt to get Mitchell at third. Sanchez retrieved starter Ken Forsch and issued the walk to Castillo on a 3-and-2 pitch that was low and away.

Indians 5, Orioles 4
At Cleveland, Andre Thornton singled in two runs and Tom Brennan went six innings to pick up his first victory of the season in the eighth. In the opener, Bert Blyleven, making his first start in 19 days, scattered four hits over six innings. The Indians have won four straight under new manager Pat Corrales.

Reds 6, Rangers 3
At Arlington, Texas, Glenn Hoffman belted his second home run four days and Jim Rice and Gary Alenson had two RBI each as the (Red Sox) Rangers lost their seventh straight. The victory snapped a three-game Boston losing streak. Larry Parrish hit two homers, his 19th and 20th of the year, for the Rangers.

American

White Sox 7, Tigers 5
At Chicago, Greg Luzinski drove in three runs and Greg Walker added two RBIs, including a solo homer, to lead the White Sox. Lamar Hoyt, 18-10, pitched his first five innings to gain the victory, which was Chicago's seventh in nine games.

Blue Jays 10-13, Yankees 9-6
At Toronto, Rance Mulliniks smacked a double and a single to drive in four runs and Damaso Garcia went 3-for-3 with three RBIs to lead the Blue Jays to a doubleheader sweep. In the opener, Dave Collins' one-out single in the 10th inning scored Garth from second base for the win.

Brewers 5-3, Royals 1-2
At Milwaukee, Ted Simmons hit the first pitch of the bottom of the ninth over the left-field fence to win the nightcap for the Brewers and give them a sweep of their doubleheader. In the opener, Ben Oglivie drove in four runs with a sacrifice fly and a homer and Bob Gibson and Jim Slaton combined on a three-hitter in leading the Brewers.

Simmons hit his seventh homer of the year, off starter Larry Gura, who fell to 8-14 despite yielding only six hits.
Mike Caldwell, 8-8, walked seven hits, struck out two and walked one in going the distance for the seventh time this year in the nightcap.

Eagles owner gets in trouble

By United Press International

Philadelphia Eagles Owner Leonard Tose was cited for civil contempt Tuesday for using his NFL franchise as collateral for a $400,000 personal loan.

Tose, who earlier testified he was not using the franchise as collateral in the deal, said he signed to secure the loan. He was ordered to file legal documents in Montgomery County Court by Aug. 10 that would remove the Eagles as collateral.

"We cannot believe that a person so long engaged in running a multi-million dollar business is either so careless or unbusinesslike as to sign papers simply because they are put in front of him," said Delaware County Judge Howard Reed Jr. in delivering his decision.

Reed ruled the loan agreement violated court orders he issued July 1 and July 6 that barred Tose from taking action that could affect the value of the team or could lead to its sale or any other action. The court, an investment group that is challenging Tose for ownership of the Eagles.

At a hearing Monday on the group's request for a contempt citation, Tose's daughter, Susan Fletcher, vice president of the team and its legal counsel, testified she also had not read the final loan agreement with Fidelity Bank and Trust Co. of New Jersey.

Fletcher said she believed the documents were identical to preliminary documents that she read and that, she said, made no mention of the Eagles.

In other developments:
■ Eagles running back Wilbert Montgomery, tackle Jerry Slocum and linebacker Jerry Robinson sat out Tuesday's practice with minor injuries and their status for Friday night's pre-season opener against the Detroit Lions still was in question.

■ Tampa, Fla., holdout quarterback Don Williams met with coach Tom Brady but his status "nothing is happening" in his stalled contract talks with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. Williams, a five-year starter, has said there is a chance he may sit out this season.

■ Tampa Bay coach Tom Brady said he is seeking a multi-year deal worth $600,000 per year, but the Buccaneers have offered him $400,000 and claim their offer is final.
■ Williams, who earned $195,000 last season, has been working out with hitting coach Jerry Glanville, who also is sitting out camp trying to renegotiate his contract.

The Bucs open their exhibition season Saturday night at home against the New York Giants. Tight end Frank Wilson, linebacker Tom Donahoe and tackle Jack Muller, all recovering from injuries, joined the Steelers in their two worst seasons.

■ At Lake Forest, Ill., defensive tackle Dan Hampton will have to wear a cast on his right hand for the rest of the season. Hampton's right ring finger is in his hospital's Chicago Bears intrasquad game. Coach Mike Ditka said Hampton, an All-Pro last year, may play against Buffalo in the Saturday exhibition opener.

■ At Fresno, Calif., Packers said they might sign defensive end Cleveland Crosby as a free agent, while the California Supreme Court turned over the case of the city of Oakland vs. the Los Angeles Raiders to the Court of Appeal, with the Raiders for the court to determine where the legal home of the team shall be for the 1983 season.

Mets top Expos 5-2, deny Rogers 14th victory

By United Press International

Steve Rogers is going to have to wait.

Bob Bailor's two-run single highlighted the second inning Tuesday night that led the Mets to a 5-2 victory over the Montreal Expos in New York and helped throw Rogers' bid to become the major leagues' first 14-game winner.

Crisk Swan, 2-5, matched his longest outing of the season and scattered five hits over seven innings to get the victory. Montreal's runs came on Gary Carter's 11th home run, following a single by Al Oliver, in the fourth. It was Carter's first home since July 4.

In the 36th year of the National League, the Mets toed the plate, 13-6, for base hits. George Truett got out with a single and moved to third on Darryl Strawberry's double. Bailor's single scored both runners and he advanced to second on the throw to the plate. Ron Hodges followed with an RBI single.

New York collected three straight singles in the third off Rogers but failed to score as Mookie Wilson was thrown out attempting to steal after his leadoff single.

Foster and Strawberry hit back-to-back homers in the eighth off reliever Bryn Smith, who replaced Rogers after the Expos' starter was lifted for a pinch hitter in the 36th. Foster's homer was his 14th of the year and Strawberry's hit 10th.

Jesse Orosco, who allowed only one hit over the final two innings, earned his 10th save as the Mets won their third straight.

Pirates 10, Phillies 3
At Pittsburgh, Johnny Ray went 5-for-5 and drove in three runs. Dave Parker also had three RBIs and pitcher Larry McWilliams singled in a run and scored twice during a 16-hit attack to lead the Pirates.

Mike Easler, Tony Pena, who had three hits, including two triples, and Jerry Rizzo also drove in a run for the Pirates.

Cubs 5, Cardinals 3
At St. Louis, Steve Lake's two-run double highlighted a four-run second-inning that carried the Cubs to a one-out double into the left field corner came on the first pitch from Nell Allen, 7-10, after St. Louis' second baseman Tom Horv bootled a possible double play grounder.

BOWIE KUHN Owners will decide his fate.

May succeed himself on interim basis

Kuhn could keep his job, after all

By DAVE W. DYCK Chicago Sun-Times

BOSTON — And the next commissioner of baseball is — Bowie Kuhn.

Baseball appears to have found its way to square one, as owners prepare to discuss the issue of Kuhn's replacement here today. And all sources say either an unlikely compromise will be worked out and Kuhn will stay, or Kuhn will follow himself on an "interim" basis.

The latter appears the most probable. Baseball's 10-man Executive Council, chaired by Kuhn, met for seven hours Tuesday. Half way through, one owner in the room emerged to say, "Things are really getting fired up. It's very delicate."

But apparently the group couldn't compromise on a compromise to hand the anti-Kuhn forces today. That probably means no commissioner will be chosen. And if that happens, the Executive Council takes control of the commissioner's office and can name anyone it wants.

"Presumably it would be him (Kuhn)," said Jerry Reinsdorf, a member of the Executive Council and a staunch Kuhn backer.

The issue must be resolved somehow today, since Kuhn's term expires Aug. 12 and the National League already has rejected him in two separate votes. In fact, an election is not on the agenda for today and anti-Kuhn owners Nelson Doubleday (New York Mets) and Ted Turner (Atlanta Braves) aren't even coming to Boston.

"It doesn't matter," said Houston's John McMullen, a member of the opposition. "A vote was taken last November. Did (ex-president Jimmy) Carter get another chance after his election?"

"There's a certainty of the Executive Council running baseball Aug. 13," said Mets' general manager Frank Cashen, filling in for Doubleday, who has said he would take the Executive Council to court if it appoints Kuhn.

But one pro-Kuhn owner said Executive Council members should not vote on Kuhn and can legally name Kuhn.

"But it's a long way between now and tomorrow," Reinsdorf said.

The pro-Kuhn forces have so stacked the deck that even the search committee to find a successor to Kuhn apparently has come up with no viable candidates. It is headed by Milwaukee's Bud Selig, another Kuhn man. Sources say the committee's recommendation, after one year of searching, will be — Kuhn.

All-Star game a moneymaker—but more may be needed

TWIN FALLS — After a two-year run in Twin Falls, the State All-Star Football Game will be moving to Coeur d'Alene next year.

And, to the relief of Paul Ostyn, who pushed most of the pencils around the ledger sheet to make the numbers come out he carried, "they won't start out with zero in the checking account."

Ostyn, the Magic Valley area coach and people who picked up the All-State idea after a financial bloodbath in Boise three years ago know they were fighting heavy odds in making the thing break even.

a ringing vote of confidence in the football coaches. "There, for many years, athletic contests — and here we are — have remained in the south where population and income potential are greater. That's largely due to the fact most of the teams come from southern Idaho, too."

But there already is one problem arising and it is a major problem. It is reported that North Idaho Junior College has answered inquiries about feeding and lodging the troops for the pre-game training period with a no. "We don't know if it has to do with conflict or simply the physical inability of North Idaho to put its physical plant together at that time.

Because of that, the committee has turned to University of Idaho to see if it can accommodate the troops for their pre-game practices. But since the game is slated for Coeur d'Alene, it takes something out of the preparatory week to have the players 90 miles away.

"I think it is a workable plan and I'm going to talk to our people when we get back to Moscow to see if we can work that out," said Coach Dennis Erickson Sunday. "I think we can put a package together comparable to what CSI offered."

One doesn't know what the CSI plan entailed as to money but Jerome Coach Jon Jung said "without CSI giving us the rate if that, it would have been impossible for us to hold the game."

Coeur d'Alene Coach Herb Criner told Ostyn he had spoken with a hotel in the host city and "they had made us a pretty good offer."

But Ostyn said, "I don't know what the offer was, but it couldn't be as good as they've had it at CSI. You start talking about housing 65 or 70 boys plus six to eight coaches in a motel for a week and you're talking a lot of money, exclusive of meals."

On the subject of housing and feeding football players, here are some interesting statistics provided through listening at the Big Sky Conference get-together in Sun Valley.

Four Big Sky Conference teams, Boise State, Montana State, Reno and Weber State, will open their seasons Sept. 3. That means, under training requirements, the teams will be assembling on those campuses about now.

It is, of course, a month before school starts so extra expense is drawn for housing and feeding.

Boise State University is charging its athletic department $17 per week for lodging 105 football players for the four weeks before school starts. The others probably are similar.

The Bobcats, therefore, are looking at $70,000 expenditure before taking the first one-third of the money. ASU Athletic Director Babe Garcia said he could commiserate with the Bobcat athletic director's feeling.

"I remember when I was coaching at ISU three years ago. We got our kids three meals a day at the old Green Lantern and it costs us $3 per day," he said with a laugh. "That included the salad, the juice, the milk, everything. Heck, you can't buy breakfast for that one."

"Just in the five years I've been athletic director, I've seen the Green Lantern go from $100,000 a year to $25 per person in that time."

Garcia said such numbers are the reason the Big Sky Conference athletes are recommended expanding the league substantially to cover an extra night and involving all athletes.

"We've got to find some money somewhere. You can only cut costs so much. And now we're absorbing that 10 per cent reduction per year from the state. We're going to have to take out $80,000 from our reserves this year and that reserve is from the national championship two years ago. It's all playoff and television money."

F&G places salmon fishing ban

BOISE (UPI) — The state Fish and Game Department extended a ban on chook salmon fishing to the entire Salmon River drainage Tuesday, claiming Nez Perce Indians rained the native run by taking 100 fish earlier this week.

The department last month banned chook salmon fishing in the river upstream from the Little Salmon, but waters in the lower stretch were exempt when the tribal executive committee agreed to halt fishing among its own members.

Using four-foot hoop nets and gaffs, Indian fishermen from July 30 to Aug. 7 took an estimated 100 chook salmon, more than 70 percent of the normal number of wild fish in the annual upstream run, Conley said.

The ban on chook fishing was extended to the Little Salmon drainage at noon Tuesday, Conley said.

"The present order was necessary after the tribe, using a loophole in its earlier agreement and without notice to the department, permitted tribal members to devastate the 1983 Rapid River native salmon run," he said.

"He said the executive committee's 'responsible' action would deplete an already critically low run of summer chook.

"Prevention of similar action on other critical runs in the Salmon River drainage established the need to close the entire Salmon River drainage to treaty Indian fishing until further notice," Conley said.

Dart-tossing theory worked last summer but won't now

By EDWIN DARBY Chicago Sun-Times
For sure, the dart-board theory won't work now. An investor can't close his eyes, throw a dart at the stock market tables and expect a money-making winner.
