Aquino murder unsolved

Marcos blamed

By Times-News wire services

MANILA, Philippines—The first firm clue in the assassination of Benigno Aquino emerged Tuesday from the nickname "Boly" attached to the clothing of the man the government said killed the opposition leader.

Filipino leftists denied there had been any communist involvement in the assassination of the charismatic 50-year-old Aquino, as charged Monday by President Ferdinand Marcos.

But in contrast, a Japanese freelance journalist, who says he witnessed Sunday's assassination of Aquino at Manila airport charged upon his return to Japan that the victim was gunned down by two of President Ferdinand E. Marcos' military officers.

Kiyoshi Wakamiya, 72, insisted that the man who the Philippine government contends was the assassin was not the killer of Aquino and he remains convinced that the slayings were "organized and premeditated" murders by the country's authorities.

The Japanese journalist, who had been a close friend of the Philippine opposition leader for the past three years, was aboard the China Airlines commercial plane that flew Aquino from Taiwan to Manila on a false passport.

According to Wakamiya, not long after the aircraft landed at the airport three Philippine military officers entered the plane and escorted the former senator down the ramp onto the ground. He said that as he watched moments later two of the officers were carrying automatic pistols.

Almost immediately there were two or three shots; the journalist told newsmen, and "I saw the two shoot Aquino in the head from a one-meter range" and the opposition leader fell to the ground, bleeding profusely.

At the same time, Wakamiya said, a man appeared to be shoved out the back of a military type vehicle parked in the vicinity. As he ran, the journalist said, some of the soldiers standing by fired and killed him.

He told the press that he has in his possession "evidence" that will prove that the murder of Aquino was premeditated by the Philippines authorities. He would not reveal his evidence, however.

Manila Police Chief Maj. Gen. Pascero Olivias said investigators were trying to trace the serial number of the .357 Magnum handgun allegedly used to shoot Aquino moments after his arrival Sunday from three years of self-exile in the United States.

Salvador Laurel, president of the United National Democratic Opposition and a member of the country's interim assembly, gave an address before the parliament Tuesday, denouncing the "treacherous" murder of Aquino.

He reiterated questions raised earlier by opposition leaders over how the assassin was able to penetrate airport security and get past military guards to shoot Aquino at close range.

Marcos' defense minister, Juan Ponce Enrile, also addressed the assembly, saying that "any hint of any participation of the military in the killing of Aquino is unpleasant and undesired."

"There are lots of possibilities and we must wait for the results of the investigation," he said.

The Batasang Pambansa, a rubber-stamp parliament, unanimously passed a resolution expressing the profound grief of the Filipino people at the death of Aquino.

"He died of a heinous crime that cannot be condoned by any civilized society," the resolution said.

"His statements prior to his arrival in the Philippines, as well as one intended for delivery upon arrival, uniformly showed his clear desire for national reconciliation and unity."

Government television said the name Rolly, a nickname for Rolando fern in brown thread in the alleged gunman's underwear was "the first firm lead." In the case, Olivias said, the man also wore a gold ring with the initial "R."

The alleged assassin was shot down in a volley of military gunfire seconds after the government said he fired a single bullet into the back of Aquino's head.

Idaho colleges report poor students study teaching

National study offers same finding - A3

BOISE — Education programs at Idaho universities are attracting some of the least skilled high school students, a state Board of Education official said Tuesday.

But Linda Stalley, the board's chief academic officer, told an interim legislative committee college graduates who finish their degrees in Education include many of the best-scoring students on campus.

She said tests of high school seniors showed students interested in such subjects as math, science and medicine received consistently higher scores than those who contemplated majoring in education.

The 11-member panel also heard the head of Idaho State University's English department urge the state to upgrade its certification requirements to help weed out unqualified candidates.

"The people we are attracting are the least academically qualified students," Stalley compared to other majors. "Ms. Stalley told members of the Idaho Joint Legislative Public Education Reform Committee.

But she added that students who eventually receive teaching certificates have higher grades and test scores than scholars who major in other subjects.

Many high school students who indicate interest in education drop out or change their major, while others who initially preferred other subjects often switch to education — thus persisting in their scores for prospective teachers — she said.

"We're not saying we're taking the best students into education, we're just saying we're not taking the worst," Ms. Stalley said.

Committee member Sen. Herb Carlson, R-Eagle, said he did not believe Idaho's public school teachers were unqualified.

"I don't know a bad teacher personally, and I know all kinds of teachers," he said. If teachers were second-rate, Idaho students would not consistently score high on standardized national tests, he added.

Results of tests designed to trace the progress and learning levels of education majors will be submitted to the state Education Board by mid-September, Ms. Stalley added.

Dante Cantrill of the ISU English department said his school's standards for education majors are higher than those used by the state to certify instructors.

Law agency enters horse racing circle

Editor's note: This is the first in a series of stories on long-term credibility problems plaguing horse racing in Idaho.

By MARK SHNEFELT
United Press International

BOISE — The state Law Enforcement Department, vowing to solve chronic administrative troubles and stamp out any corruption at the major licensed tracks, is moving full-force into regulation of Idaho's horse racing industry.

Officials say investigators will be assigned to weed out illegal activity at racing parks, the department will step-up background checks of industry participants and administrative rules will be changed to make it easier to crack down on violators.

The "strong oversight responsibility" desired by the department in a recent memorandum from Director John Rooney to Gov. John Evans is aimed at reducing public suspicion about fairness in horse racing and ending years of controversy about Idaho Horse Racing Commission operations, officials say.

"We have some problems with horse racing in this state," Rooney said. "Obviously the Horse Racing Commission doesn't have the manpower to do much about it."

"You just can't go out once in a while to a track and expect to find something. We intend to do that on a regular basis and develop some contacts with people at the track who are not afraid to come out."

"We want to see that everything is above board and honest and above-board at the tracks," he said.

Athletes leave games in drug scandal

By FRED McMANE
UPI Sports Writer

CARACAS, Venezuela — An American weightlifter was stripped of his gold medals and 13 members of the track and field team withdrew from the Pan American Games Tuesday in the biggest drug scandal in international amateur athletics history.

In addition to weightlifter Jeff Michels of Chicago, the governing body of the Pan Am Games announced three more Latin American weightlifters must return their medals because they failed drug tests.

The three are Jacques Oliver of Chile, Enrique Montiel of Nicaragua and Jose Adames Paez of Venezuela.

Eleven athletes now have either been reprimanded or stripped of medals at the Pan American Games. In all, 17 medals, including 11 gold, have been disallowed.

"This is the largest expulsion of athletes in the history of international competition for drug abuse," said William Simon, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee.

The return to the United States of the unlucky 13 all from the men's team, came before Tuesday's start of the track and field competition and depleted the squad's weight competitors. Only javelin thrower Curt Ransford of Spokane, Wash., was left from the right members originally entered in weight events.

The American athletes arrived at Kennedy International Airport in New York Tuesday and ducked reporters. Further, Treasury Secretary William Simon, president of the U.S.

Olympic Committee, said the disciplinary action against them "lets athletes know now that we mean business."

"It's not only the American team," said Simon, who arrived with the returning Americans. "This is a worldwide problem. It has to be stamped out."

As a result of the scandal, Simon said the U.S. would do pre-testing on athletes before the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

The latest development occurred less than 24 hours after four weightlifters including Olympic champion Daniel Nunez of Cuba, were stripped of their gold medals and three other weightlifters received reprimands from ODEPA for using the illicit muscle-building drug.

Those athletes returning to the United States are: Mark Patrick, Centerville, Ill., 400-meter hurdles; Randy Williams, Los Angeles, and Brady Crain, New York, both 4 x 100 relay; Jesse Stuart, Hiltchcock, Texas, and Ian Eyles, College Park, Md., shot put; Paul Bishop, South Gate, Calif., and Greg McSeveney, Norwalk, Calif., discus; and John McCardie, Eugene, Ore., hammer throw.

Dr. Evie Dennis, chief of mission of the USOC, said Williams returned home Tuesday. He learned Monday that his wife had given birth.

Hail destroys crops, emergency declared

Northgate of Raport, near Mindlen

SUITE — Monday's severe hailstorm cut through a 100-acre three-mile path of crops, causing extensive damage in the western portion of Twin Falls County.

By Tuesday, the Twin Falls County commission had received 100 hundredweight (an acre) of state of emergency in the area.

Setting in motion procedures that could lead to low interest loans for farmers in the area. The loans will be available through the Farmers Home Administration.

"There are reports of total losses of crops of alfalfa and some very high percentage losses in the grain north of Cassport through Sun Belt," said Commissioner Judy Belding of Paul. "We're just trying to get something established so we can get some help over here."

A second hail and rain storm smashed through the Magic Valley on Tuesday. The rain pouring down on the area was a relief to some farmers and livestock raisers.

She said her husband, Bruce, lost much of their grain. The hail stripped the leaves on their sugar beets, and their potato fields were hit hard, she said.

"The spots (normally) will gain a third of their weight because they are not growing. We probably lost 75 to 100 hundredweight (an acre)," she said.

"It was the third straight year their farm has sustained hail damage. The grain and the potatoes are not growing because of the hail," she said.

In Twin Falls County, the storm's path affected crops north of Cassport through Sun Belt and north to the Ohio River. Damage was severe in some areas, although estimates differed widely.

"It's a percent of damage," she said. "We probably lost 100 percent of the crop," she said.

King, the county director of Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said he had no way of knowing how much damage was done.

When rain came Tuesday, it was a relief to some farmers and livestock raisers.

Police still seeking runaways

RUPERT — Three runaway boys suspected of looting and torching a farmhouse here have gone hunting for camping in the nearby mountains. Police say a Mindokko County sheriff's deputy said Tuesday the boys, who walked away from the Idaho Youth Ranch three days ago, still are being sought. They are reported to be traveling in a green 1971 Ford.

Three of the boys, a 19-year-old from Twin Falls, a 15-year-old from Pocatello and a 16-year-old from Burley, reportedly left the ranch together early Sunday morning. Officials are not sure, but they say a 12-year-old from Coeur d'Alene who ran away a few hours earlier may have teamed up with the trio.

Later in the day, they allegedly stole six to eight guns, ammunition and other items from the Jarald School house, located about 10 miles northeast of Rupert. While they were at the home, the Burley boy was burned severely. His companions drove him to Mindokko Memorial Hospital before leaving the area, officials said.

The 10-year-old listed in critical, but stable condition late Tuesday at the University of Utah Hospital in Salt Lake City, where he was transferred for treatment.

The Shenk house was gutted by fire. They were away on vacation at the time.

Priest Lake land swap posed

PRIEST RIVER (UPI) — Attorney General Jim Jones says he will conduct an Idaho Land Board committee meeting next week to review a proposal aimed at allowing development of a major resort at Priest Lake.

Diamond International executives will be asked to explain their proposals to sell undeveloped tracts for residential development or trade acreage with the state in a possible construction of a resort at the scenic Panhandle lake, Jones said Tuesday.

Diamond has proposed either subdividing and selling its property along the east side of the lake, or consolidating its holding through land trades that would enable development of a resort.

The trade could involve up to 11,500 acres of private land and about 5,300 acres of state-public school endowment property, Jones said.

Tropical storm close to Florida

MIAMI (UPI) — Tropical Storm Barry developed swiftly in the Atlantic Tuesday night and forecasters said the slow-moving storm's most likely target was Cocoa Beach — a few miles from the launch pad where the space shuttle Challenger is poised for liftoff next week.

Barry, which began as a disturbed area of weather known as a tropical wave early Tuesday, developed sustained winds of 45 mph and became the season's second tropical storm on Aug. 23, MDT.

The storm was located about 240 miles east of Palm Beach County, moving to the northwest at 5 mph, the National Hurricane Center in Miami reported.

Forecasters said Cocoa Beach, where the space shuttle Challenger was on its ocean-side launch pad and scheduled for liftoff next Tuesday.

Women plan Mt. Everest climb

KATMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — An American expedition of 12 men and six women is setting the record for the fastest mountain crossing, hoping to place the first American women on the summit of Mount Everest.

The U.S. team also hopes to complete the first autumn conquest of Everest's west ridge, described by one English climber as the "crucial way" to the summit of the 29,202-foot peak in the Himalayan mountains.

The $800,000 expedition, five years in the planning stages, includes six men and five women who will do the climbing, with the others acting as support personnel. The group is being accompanied by an experienced team of Nepalese sherpas.

U.S. blasted for backing rebels

Nicaragua charged that Honduran helicopters are airlifting U.S.-backed rebels into a remote corner of an eastern province to join Indian insurgents in escalating combat, diplomatic sources said Tuesday.

With fighting also escalating along the northern border, the Nicaraguan army's chief political officer, Hugo Torres, warned that rebels based in Honduras were preparing for "what could be an invasion of great size."

Woman loses bid for governor

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Populist Attorney General Bill Allain defeated Evelyn Gandy, the grande dame of the "strong woman" politics. Democratic "miss" Tuesday that ended her hopes of becoming the state's first woman governor.

With 17,731 of the state's 2,000 precincts reporting, Allain had 335,378 votes or 51.9 percent to Miss Gandy's 309,637 or 48.1 percent.

The white-haired Allain, 55, riding a campaign push that was centered on his successful fight against the state's utility, grabbed the lead early and held it throughout the night.

Miss Gandy, 62, a former lieutenant governor who has spent more than half her life in elective office, was unable to crack Allain's strength in the Centennial district and saw her support erode in South Mississippi. Allain carried several heavily black populated Delta counties, and stayed close to Miss Gandy's total even in counties he lost.

Iran finally repays U.S. debt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Iran, after two and a half years of negotiations, has agreed to repay $419.5 million that the U.S. Export-Import Bank says it is owed by the government, announced Tuesday.

Iran stopped making payments on its debt to the bank when militants seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran in November 1979 and took 66 hostages. The United States responded by freezing Iranian assets in this country.

The federally sponsored bank, which makes loans and issues guarantees of private credit to promote U.S. exports, declared Iran in default on Dec. 21, 1979.

Evans and Commission Chairman Russell Westberg agree with the move to increase regulation of the controversial industry and clean up the "commission's" bookkeeping practices, Parsley said.

"I don't have it as a constant in my mind of illegally against the horse-racing industry," said gubernatorial aide Marie Parsley, assigned by Evans to work on the regulatory crackdown.

Parsley said Evans wants the commission to achieve a reputation as a tough regulator, shedding any appearance that it is a promotional arm of Idaho's $50 million horse-racing industry that sees $15 million also bet annually at parimutuel windows.

"The horsemen seem to think we should appoint someone to that commission, but it's a regulatory body," Parsley said. "We should do that no more than we should appoint a utility official to the Public Utilities Commission."

Westberg said he and first-year Commissioners Cy Chase and Arthur Oliver will try to increase the state's control of the industry and parimutuel betting while eliminating "internal problems." But he welcomed aid from the Law Enforcement Department.

"Because of some of the acrimony and operational problems at the commission, it probably has been appropriate for the governor to request the Law Enforcement Department be involved during the interim in which the commission is being newly established and reorganized," Westberg said.

However, officials acknowledge the reorganization may be hampered because state laws are vague about how deep the Law Enforcement Department can get involved in Horse Racing Commission operations.

Rooney noted that the commission is an arm of the department, but the commission is also recognized as an autonomous body of government.

"They said the Legislature may be required to resolve the jurisdictional conflict."

In the past several years, the commission has been racked by internal controversy and clashes with industry participants.

In 1981, the commission's chief clerical employee was fired after being accused of embezzling $16,000 from commission receipts. Betty Younger later was convicted on a lesser charge.

This month, two jockeys at the Pocatello Turf Club were suspended by the commission for one year for possessing electrical prods at the racetrack. The stud steward, Walter Culbertson, also alleged the jockeys were required to carry the devices by trainers and owners.

Thomas Martin was fired as executive secretary of the commission last winter, and enraged horsemen demanded Evans fire Westberg.

"In fact, it is possible for a person to teach science in high school with only a freshman-level preparation in science courses, according to state standards," he said.

However, committee member Rep. James Stolehoff, a Sandpoint Democrat who is a grade-school principal, said many elementary school instructors must be able to teach a wide variety of subjects to children whose learning is only beginning.

"I hope we don't get to a point where every student has to be an expert in every field to qualify for entry in colleges of education," Stolehoff said.

In addition to helping mind the books, Law Enforcement also will take up the slack in enforcing commission rules at the state-licensed tracks in Boise, Pocatello and Coeur d'Alene, Rooney said.

Today's weather

Partly cloudy, some thundershowers

Twin Falls Partly cloudy, some thundershowers. High pressure is expected to build over Idaho over the next several days, bringing a drying and warming trend for the rest of the week. Thundershowers are expected to climb above normal, and precipitation will be confined to the mountains after today.

Camas Prairie, Halley, Wood River Valley Partly cloudy today and tonight, with a slight chance for afternoon and evening thundershowers. Fair and warmer on Thursday. High 70 to 75 today and in the middle 70s on Thursday; lows in the 40s.

Northern Nevada and Utah Partly cloudy today in Nevada, becoming mostly overcast in the 40s; lows in the 50s. Partly cloudy over Utah, with a few isolated afternoon showers. High in the 80s; lows in the 50s. Thursday: High 70 to 75 today and in the middle 70s on Thursday; lows in the 40s.

For Magic Valley farmers and other Idahoans weary of daily showers, there's some good news. High pressure is expected to build over Idaho over the next several days, bringing a drying and warming trend for the rest of the week. Thundershowers are expected to climb above normal, and precipitation will be confined to the mountains after today.

The agricultural forecast for the Magic Valley and southern Idaho calls for total precipitation of 0.1 to 0.2 inches through 10 inch today. Evaporation rates will be near 25 inch today, climbing to near 30 inch by the weekend. Winds will be less than 10 mph through Thursday.

On Tuesday, afternoon thundershowers hit Idaho, sweeping in from the southwest erupting from the Magic Valley eastward. Those storms produced heavy rain, hail and gusty winds in the Pocatello area from Arbutus to Caldwell, N.C., and the Pass, and in the Panhandle. Lighter showers dampened the Twin Falls area around mid-afternoon. Additional thundershowers and thundershowers were expected to develop during the evening before tapering off.

Low pressure over eastern Oregon maintained a flow of unstable air from the southwest over Idaho, with thundershowers extending from northern California into Oregon and eastward into Idaho.

In Twin Falls on Tuesday, the pollen count was 31 per cubic meter of air. Idaho temperatures generally ranged in the 60s and 70s on Tuesday, with the warmest reading, 83 degrees, recorded by Caldwell and Hagerman. The coldest morning low was 38 at Stanley.

Elsewhere in the nation Tuesday, the hottest temperature reported was 108 degrees at Caldwell, N.C., and the coldest was 38 at Flagstaff, Ariz.

Nicaragua charged that Honduran helicopters are airlifting U.S.-backed rebels into a remote corner of an eastern province to join Indian insurgents in escalating combat, diplomatic sources said Tuesday.

With fighting also continuing along the northern border, the Nicaraguan army's chief political officer, Hugo Torres, warned that rebels based in Honduras were preparing for "what could be an invasion of great size."

The urged lawmakers to push for higher state standards, saying most education majors already could meet enhanced requirements.

At present, Cantrill said, teachers can be certified to teach subjects in which they are not skilled.

"In fact, it is possible for a person to teach science in high school with only a freshman-level preparation in science courses, according to state standards," he said.

However, committee member Rep. James Stohbert, a Sandpoint Democrat who is a grade-school principal, said many elementary school instructors must be able to teach a wide variety of subjects to children whose learning is only beginning.

"I hope we don't get to a point where every student has to be an expert in every field to qualify to enter the colleges of education," Stohbert said.

Evans and Commission Chairman Russell Westerberg agree, with the move to increase regulation of the controversial industry and clean up the commission's bookkeeping practices.

"We can't have it — this constant in-lieu-of-illegality against the horse-racing industry," said gubernatorial aide Merle Parsley, assigned by Evans to work on the regulatory crackdown.

Parsley said Evans wants the commission to achieve a reputation as a tough regulator, shunning any appearance that it is a promotional arm of Idaho's $50 million horse-racing industry that sees $15 million alone be annually at parimutuel windows.

"The horse racing industry is extremely critical of the lack of internal fiscal controls," Rooney said. "We decided the best thing to do was to go in and exert more of an oversight function in the fiscal and personnel area."

Westerberg said he and first-year Commissioners Cy Chase and Arthur Oliver will try to increase the state's control of the industry and parimutuel betting, while eliminating internal problems. But he welcomed aid from the Law Enforcement Department.

"Because of some of the acrimony and operational problems at the commission, it probably has been appropriate for the governor to request that Law Enforcement become involved during the interim in which the commission is being newly established and reorganized," Westerberg said.

However, officials acknowledge the reorganization may be hampered because state laws are vague about how deeply the Law Enforcement Department can get involved in Horse Racing Commission operations.

Rooney noted that the commission's authority over the department, while Westerberg said the law also recognizes the commission as "an autonomous body of government."

They said the legislature may be required to resolve the jurisdictional conflict.

In the past several years, the commission has been racked by internal controversies and clashes with industry participants.

In 1981, the commission's chief clerk, William Younger, was indicted on charges of embezzling $16,000 from commission receipts. Betty Younger later was convicted on a lesser charge.

This month, two jockeys at the Pocatello Turf Club were suspended by the commission for one year for possessing electrical prods — the racetrack. The track steward, Walter Culbertson, also alleged the jockeys were required to carry the devices by trainers and owners.

Theodore Martin was fired as executive secretary of the commission last winter, and enraged horsemen demanded Evans fire Westerberg.

who led the drive to oust Martin for "differences in philosophy."

The commission then launched a sweeping reorganization, with most changes taking effect only now.

The drive began after an accounting by the Idaho Legislative Auditor's office showed the commission lost an estimated $45,000 during a two-year period through embezzlement and sloppy bookkeeping, Auditor Bruce Balderston said.

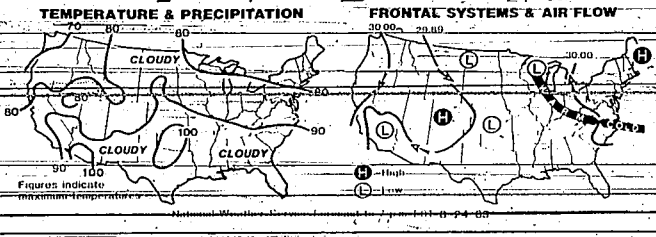

The last three audits of the Horse Racing Commission have been extremely critical of the lack of internal fiscal controls, Rooney said.

"We decided the best thing to do was to go in and exert more of an oversight function in the fiscal and personnel area."

In addition to helping mind the books, Law Enforcement also will take up the slack in enforcing commission rules at the state-licensed tracks in Boise, Pocatello and Coeur d'Alene, Rooney said.

Today's weather

Partly cloudy, some thundershowers

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas: Partly cloudy today and tonight, with a slight chance for afternoon and evening thundershowers. Fair and warmer on Thursday. Highs to 75 today and in the middle 80s on Thursday; lows in the upper 40s.

Camas Prairie, Halley, Wood River Valley: Partly cloudy today and tonight, with a slight chance for afternoon and evening thundershowers. Fair and warmer on Thursday. Highs to 75 today and in the middle 70s on Thursday; lows near 40.

Northern Nevada and Utah: Partly cloudy today in Nevada, becoming overcast and high to 60; lows in the 50s. Partly cloudy over Utah, with a few isolated afternoon showers. Highs in the 80s; lows in the 50s.

Idahoans weary of daily showers, there's some good news. High pressure is expected to build over Idaho over the next several days, bringing a drying and warming trend for the rest of the week.

Temperatures are expected to climb to above normal, and precipitation will be confined to the mountains after today.

The agricultural forecast for the Magic Valley and southern Idaho calls for total precipitation in the valleys of less than .10 inch today. Evaporation rates will be near .25 inch today, climbing to near .30 inch by the weekend. Winds will be less than 10 mph through Thursday.

On Tuesday, afternoon thundershowers hit Idaho with several bands of storms erupting from the Magic Valley eastward. Those storms produced heavy rain, hail and gusty winds in the Pocatello area, from Abilene, Morinda, Pass, and in the Panhandle. Lighter showers dampened the Twin Falls area around mid-afternoon. Additional thundershowers and thundershowers were expected to develop during the evening hours of Wednesday.

Low pressure over eastern Oregon maintained a flow of unstable air from the southwest over Idaho, with thundershowers extending from northern California into Oregon and eastward into Montana.

In Twin Falls on Tuesday, the pollen count was 31 per cubic meter of air. Idaho temperatures generally ranged in the 60s and 70s on Tuesday, with the warmest reading, 83 degrees, recorded at Emmett and Hagerman. The coldest morning low was 38 at Stanley.

Elsewhere in the nation Tuesday, the hottest temperature reports were 102 degrees at Goldsboro, N.C., and the coolest was 38 at Flagstaff, Ariz.

"A lot of the grain was harvested, of course, but the grain that wasn't, was probably 25 percent to 30 percent damaged," Kirk said.

Kirk also said he had heard reports that nearby orchards had been damaged, but he did not know to what extent.

Department heads representing U.S. Department of Agriculture agencies in Twin Falls County, will assess total damage today. Those officials, comprising the Twin Falls County Emergency Board, will decide whether to formally convey the disaster declaration to the state Bureau of Disaster Services, which would contact federal officials.

"We'll compare notes on what the extent of the damage was," Kirk said. "If the decision is to recommend that a disaster be declared, we'll call it right into the state disaster board in the morning."

Taxes, education dominate funds use

Well, it's now late summer and the politicians are getting back in town from God knows where, holding press conferences on, guess what, taxes and public education.

Between the lines of rhetoric, we like one of the ideas being kicked about, but have doubts about how the money would be raised or spent.

Gov. John Evans has floated the perennial favorite of expanding sales-tax receipts by eliminating various exemptions from the state sales-tax law.

Over the years, various lobbies have received exemptions, the list of which is getting rather lengthy.

But the Legislature is likely to greet this idea with the enthusiasm of a flock of sheep contemplating a coyote, considering it was the Legislature that gave the exemptions in the first place.

Nonetheless, we think the idea of a careful review of sales-tax exemptions has merit. Many industries in the state enjoy them, including contractors, the INEL, service businesses and, yes, newspapers.

Some of these exemptions probably should remain. A careful review will spare the daylight of everyone who has one and add to the lobbyists' coffers, but we see nothing sacred about reviewing the whole list.

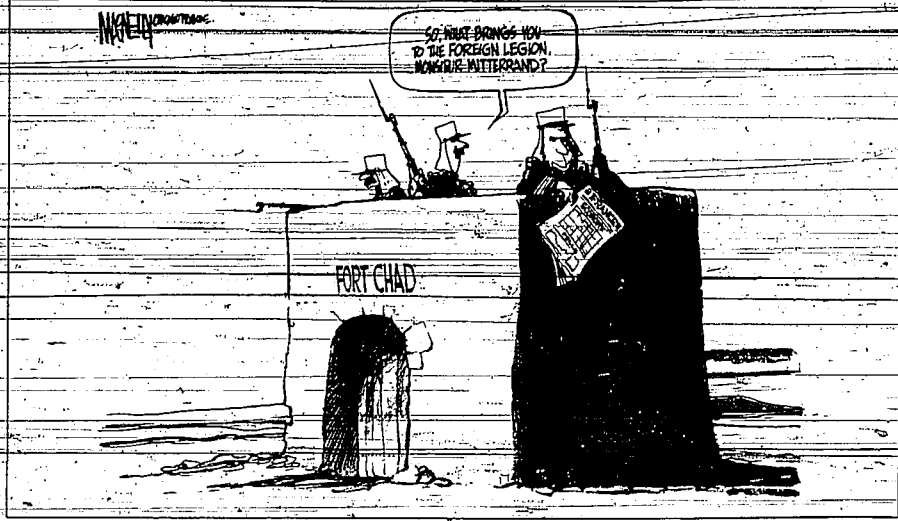

We're opposed, however, to taking the money raised in this way — or by whatever method — and earmarking it for a specific use. Instead, the money should go to the general fund, to be allocated routinely in the legislative process as the state's needs warrant.

Evans believes that educational funding needs to be higher in Idaho, and that the bulk of the money should go toward raising teachers' salaries.

Sure, we could and probably should spend more for education.

But the amount we think should not be set aside in advance. To earmark a fund's source for that purpose, then designate the money for a particular use like salaries, seems to us to lock in the state's spending discretion.

State police explain checks

After reading your editorial of August 10, I cannot help but believe you've passed judgment on our police to hold sobriety checkpoints without a review of the situation. Let me provide you with some information and background on our planned checks.

You've questioned the constitutionality of the check points: Be assured we do not enter into this plan of enforcement without thorough investigation of this question. Months of research and review of court cases nationwide have preceded our decision to hold sobriety checkpoints in Idaho.

A 40-page procedures manual has been developed, half of which is devoted to a review of these court cases. We've also noted, as mentioned in our initial press release, that court challenges of checkpoints held in Blackfoot resulted in a ruling by Magistrate Judge Robert Brower upholding the constitutionality of such checks.

The Presidential Commission on Drunk Driving is also recommending checkpoints as an effective means of dealing with this problem. The ISP sobriety checkpoint program is certainly not a "hair-baked scheme" cooked up overnight.

You seem to have "read between the lines" that we "expect a court challenge." We certainly have not made such a statement. The ISP would not enter into this program unless it has received a court challenge, a possibility, and have thus conducted in full every phase of the operation is made certain in full accordance with law and is thoroughly documented. This is only sensible.

In your discussion of "rights," you seem to overlook the right of the general motorist — the right to drive on the highway without fear of injury or death at the hands of a drunk driver. How is the checkpoint program so much different from the accepted practice of having one's bags checked and walking through metal detectors at airports? The public accepts this practice because they prefer the minimal "intrusion" to the fear of being victimized because of someone's irresponsible actions. Drunk drivers kill many more people than hijackers. Sobriety check points have proven an effective tool to combatting the DUI problem. Will the average motorist mind a 30-second stop at the end result is greater highway safety? We think not. RICK OWENS

A challenge for racial opinions

In response to Bernice Ross's letter of August 18 I would like to say:

Mrs. Ross, unless you are an American Indian, you have no more right to live here than anyone else, be they black, brown, yellow or white.

America is made up of more than just so-called "white" people and even the whites are of various and sundry ancestry.

May I also point out that your Aryan-type, white supremacist views are actually Naziistic in origin and the original Aryans were Indians from near the Caspian Sea and the Hindu Kush mountains and met like the "colored" persuasion, and even they have interbred to the point where they no longer exist as a "pure" race, so your racist opinions don't hold water. (Except maybe near Cayuga Lake, that is.)

'No-Tell motel' one solution

It was with no small amount of concern that I read the letter from Deborah Buchanan detailing the aberrant behavior of two teenagers in the park. Once again the deteriorating state of education in our public schools has been spotlighted, this time by two youngsters attempting sexual intercourse with their clothes on. I am sure that if they had both received proper sexual education this debacle would not have occurred.

And then of course there is the issue of the location these two lost souls chose to attempt their doomed-to-failure activity. They were probably too young to do it in the back seat of their parents' car, since this usually requires a state law mandating age of 16 for a driver's license. The video arcaades though providing acceptable chambers for the decaying of our children's minds, would probably not be suitable for romantic activity.

So what's the answer? Since the people of our community have dropped the ball in sexual education, we should provide a place where our adolescents may grope their way toward sexual competence away from the prying eyes of sexual voyeurs and the pitiful cackling of our morality crusaders.

A publicly supported No-Tell motel for teenagers would fill this purpose.

Thank you, Mrs. Buchanan, for your vigilance and reporting.

Idaho law against Constitution

Wake up, Idaho people! When are these laws against our Constitution going to stop?

I don't condone drunk driving, but I also don't condone any state in the United States of America trying to change our hard-fought-for Constitution. If the Idaho State Police have the right to search and seizure for drunk drivers, what is next?

Will our lawmakers people get laws into effect that will let them enter our homes, take our guns, control our religious beliefs, etc., etc.?

If anyone has been in a country that has martial law or communism, this is the way things are started. The more laws that we have, the more lawbreakers there will be.

So, Idahoans, let's not be trapped into believing that this is a good law. There isn't such a thing as a good law that benefits the American Constitution. MYRON CORNELIUSON

Reagan administration often at cross-purposes with itself

MICHAEL DEAVER
Trying to repair damage

WASHINGTON — More and more often these days, the Reagan administration is displaying a distinctive split personality which seems bound to give it trouble in the upcoming election year.

On the one hand, the Reagan presidency has become an exuberant, ebullient, happily drummed almost daily through speeches on the road and audiences in the Oval Office and White House Rose Garden.

And yet it seems that at least once a week, of late, the administration has made some decision or espoused a policy that conflicts with its feisty, roll-out-the-barrel political serendipities. It appears to be increasingly a creature at cross-purposes with itself.

Occasionally a spasm of logic occurs, and these conflicts are resolved. After steadily opposing the proposal to make Dr. Martin Luther King's birthday a national holiday, for example, Reagan appears to be on the verge of changing his mind. He has been persuaded, finally, that this symbolic switch would do more for him with American blacks than all the earnest speeches he has made attempting to refute charges that he "doesn't care" about them.

More typically though, the Reagan team continues to beckon key constituencies with one hand while poking fingers in their eyes with the other. This has been particularly evident lately with regard to women, who are a majority of American voters (they cast 52 percent of the presidential votes in 1980 and are expected to vote to 54 percent in 1984) and who, in large numbers, are turned off by Ronald Reagan.

"Frightened by polls that show that this 'gender gap' is wide and getting wider," top presidential aides are mounting a frantic effort to defuse this political time bomb. A special task force headed by Deputy Chief of Staff Michael H. Deaver is striving to determine how much of the Women's Equity Act, a big package of proposals to better the economic lot of women, the administration can embrace.

Yet as Deaver's team labors furiously a few blocks across town in Reagan's Department of Education is dismantling or reassigning all or five women employees working in the Women's Education Equity Act Program, which attempts to foster career training for women.

That office will not be completely abolished, however. Five employees will remain — all men.

Even more offensive to the millions of women who care about these things is a brief just filed in the Supreme Court by Reagan's Department of Justice.

In it, the Reagan administration attempts to reverse a longstanding government policy against educational institutions that discriminate against women.

Such discrimination was supposed to be outlawed by an amendment to the federal Education Act, known as Title IX, passed by Congress in 1972. Until now, the government has interpreted that to mean that if an educational institution had any discriminatory program, all federal aid to the school would be cut off.

But in the brief filed last week, the Reagan court asks for a much narrower interpretation, denying federal funds or aid only for the discriminatory program, but allowing other federal aid to the school or college to continue.

If the high court should accept that argument, the non-discriminatory influences of Title IX would be reduced to a small fraction of its present full-campus effect.

This attempt to backslide has caused a furor among civil-rights groups in general and, nationally, women's groups in particular.

Unless Reagan's top brass manage to give fuller priority to politics and re-election over ideology — or vice-versa, these damaging contradictions seem destined to continue — and get worse.

Loye Miller Jr. writes from Washington for NewsNow News Service.

Surrendering principle for money nothing to be proud of WASHINGTON — It is a tough time for American pride.

The news is full of how, 33 years ago, the U.S. Army found it desirable to help a Nazi war criminal, provide him a job, protect him escape and in the process file to the U.S. High Commission for Germany.

The U.S. High Commission told the French we didn't know where the Nazi war criminal Klaus Barbie was. The statement was false, but not a willful lie — merely passing on the lie the Army had told them.

And yet it seems that at least once a week, of late, the administration has made some decision or espoused a policy that conflicts with its feisty, roll-out-the-barrel political serendipities. It appears to be increasingly a creature at cross-purposes with itself.

That office will not be completely abolished, however. Five employees will remain — all men.

Even more offensive to the millions of women who care about these things is a brief just filed in the Supreme Court by Reagan's Department of Justice.

In it, the Reagan administration attempts to reverse a longstanding government policy against educational institutions that discriminate against women.

Such discrimination was supposed to be outlawed by an amendment to the federal Education Act, known as Title IX, passed by Congress in 1972. Until now, the government has interpreted that to mean that if an educational institution had any discriminatory program, all federal aid to the school would be cut off.

But in the brief filed last week, the Reagan court asks for a much narrower interpretation, denying federal funds or aid only for the discriminatory program, but allowing other federal aid to the school or college to continue.

If the high court should accept that argument, the non-discriminatory influences of Title IX would be reduced to a small fraction of its present full-campus effect.

This attempt to backslide has caused a furor among civil-rights groups in general and, nationally, women's groups in particular.

Unless Reagan's top brass manage to give fuller priority to politics and re-election over ideology — or vice-versa, these damaging contradictions seem destined to continue — and get worse.

Rebels kill 2 Soviets, take 24 hostage

By ALEXANDER SLOOP
United Press International

LISBON, Portugal — South African-backed Mozambican rebels killed two Soviet geologists and captured 24 Soviet technicians in an attack on a gem mine in the Marxist African nation, Portuguese radio said Tuesday.

The radio, quoting sources at Moscow's embassy in Mozambique's capital of Maputo, said the attack occurred Sunday at the Morrú mine in central Zambezia province. It was the insurgents' largest kidnapping of foreign technicians.

A large number of Mozambican civilians and millitarians were also killed in the attack by the Mozambican National Resistance or RENAMO in the former Portuguese colony, the radio said.

Editors at the official Mozambican news agency AIM said they were "aware of the report but were awaiting word from security authorities. The RENAMO spokesman in Lisbon, Fvo Fernandes, was not immediately available for comment.

The diplomatic sources told the radio the anti-Marxist guerrillas killed two Soviet geologists in the attack and disappeared into the bush with another 24 Soviet mining technicians. The radio gave no further details.

Rebel chief Alonso Dhlakama recently said he hoped to gain control of Zambezia's diamond and semi-precious stones mines "in order to finance the purchase of weapons."

Two weeks ago, Mozambican President Samora Machel visited Zambezia and said his forces were preparing a major offensive against the rebels with "new weapons."

The militarily and economically strategic province brings in about 65 percent of the Marxist country's foreign exchange earnings.

Rebels move in Chad, U.S. to pull spy plane

By NDJAMENA, Chad (UPI) — Libya has moved a column of tanks and infantry south from the rebel-held town of Faya-Largeau to challenge government and French forces in southern Chad, the government said Tuesday.

"Several battalions of tanks and armored cars and several battalions of infantry have been sent 30 miles south of Faya-Largeau," Information Minister Soumaila Mahamat said at his daily news conference. "These are not only for reconnaissance but are an advance base of aggression south to be launched against the south of Chad."

The minister said the Libyan force was led by 104 Soviet-made T-62 and T-72 tanks. He estimated the Libyan garrison in the rebel-occupied north of the country to number 5,000, or about 3,500 more than reported by Western intelligence sources.

There was no independent confirmation of the minister's claims, but Western diplomats have reported a steady buildup of Libyan forces in the north.

In Washington, a State Department spokesman said two U.S. AWACS reconnaissance planes monitoring Libyan moves would be withdrawn from neighboring Sudan following consultations with concerned governments.

The Pentagon said a five-man U.S. team arrived in Chad last weekend to assess requirements for further assistance and left NDjamena for the United States Tuesday afternoon. The United States has already committed $1 million of a promised $25 million aid package.

Fight moves to Beirut street

By United Press International

Günmen ambushed a Lebanese army patrol in Beirut's southern suburbs Tuesday and the soldiers returned the fire, killing one of the attackers. Fighting between Palestinian factions raged from eastern Beirut to northern Tripoli.

In addition, the military command in Tel Aviv said Israeli artillery shelled Palestinian positions in Lebanon's eastern Bekaa Valley during a search for a guerrillas who set a bomb that wounded four Israeli soldiers.

Phalangist Radio said Israeli and Syrian forces traded mortar and rocket fire for three hours.

The radio said Israeli forces pounded Syrian positions in the towns of Bar Elias, Ksara and Deir Zaoune, inflicting considerable material damage. The Israelis used fragmentation bombs and scored direct hits, it said.

Chinese kill 30 criminals

PEKING (UPI) — In a harsh crackdown on crime, 30 people were executed Tuesday for murder, rape and theft following the largest public sentencing in China in recent memory, Chinese sources said.

The executions came amid a tough "law-and-order" campaign in the capital begun more than three weeks ago. Chinese sources said a city of officials have set a target of 30,000 arrests on charges from pickpocketing to murder.

Another campaign involving government and party officials implicated in economic crimes has resulted in more than 30,000 arrests.

Injured pilot crawls mile to water

Survives 3 days in 100-degree heat

BUFFALO, Okla. (UPI) — A 60-year-old pilot with two broken legs last weekend crawled more than a mile from his wrecked plane to cattle watering tanks where he lay for three days in 100-degree heat until help arrived.

From his hospital bed, Eldred M. Harmon of Carmen, Okla., said Tuesday after he reached the tanks he never doubted he would be rescued alive. "I knew that farmer would come check his tanks," Harmon said.

Civil Air Patrol searchers found the wreckage of Harmon's plane late Monday, and ground crew found him about 1 1/2 miles away in the isolated plains of the Oklahoma Panhandle. Harmon will be in the hospital three to four days for treatment of his injuries, including multiple facial fractures and two broken legs. His hands, knees and elbows were worn raw by crawling.

"Then I got up (in the morning) and went to hitchhiking," he said. Harmon said he could not see any water because of the rolling hills, but crawled to the top of a hill and decided to gamble on finding a creek at the bottom.

"I wouldn't fly into a storm that was going to kill me," he said. "When I couldn't go under it, I tried to get around it. It didn't work. I don't know there, but I didn't want to hit the ground out there."

After the crash, Harmon said, he found both his legs were broken and he took his boots off "so it wouldn't sweat in there." He stayed in the plane during the night, trying to get his distress signal to work, but "it didn't seem to work."

Talking fireplug joins department

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — The newest member of the Orlando Fire Department is a fireplug — and it talks at that.

It's a robot that the Fire Department plans to use to educate school children about fire safety. It recently became a firefighter Monday when it was sworn in before the Orlando City Council.

"It's a pretty neat little thing," said Deputy Fire Chief J.R. Hunt. "It makes you want to go up and hug the little guy."

The fireplug, which will gain a name through a grade school contest in September, has a siren and rotating red-beacon — in addition, it speaks, listens and tapes messages through a remote-control system.

Blizzard disrupts search for Ark

ANKARA, Turkey (UPI) — Former U.S. astronaut James Irwin encountered a blizzard Sunday during his attempt to "see Mount Ararat" in search of Noah's ark, the Turkish daily Hurriyet said Tuesday.

In a report from Erzurum, 445 miles east of Ankara, the newspaper said Irwin's team had climbed to 15,000 feet by Sunday but was prevented from reaching the 16,946-foot peak because of a blizzard.

Conditions were so bad that the team eventually was forced to return to its base camp after taking shelter among rocks and becoming lost for a time.

"We will try for a second time within two days," Irwin was quoted as saying.

Scientists and archeologists have been on Ararat for a week searching for evidence to support the theory that the mountain was the spot where the biblical prophet Noah, his family and an arkload of animals came to rest after the deluge.

Local Turkish legend based on the Koran's version of Noah's story also supports the theory. Each winter, Kurdish tribes inhabiting the area hold prayer rites in tribute to Noah and local Moslem mullahs claim to be descended from the prophet.

Irwin's 1982 expedition for the ark was aborted after he fell 100 feet from an ice ridge and suffered bruises and various injuries. He was treated for a week in a Turkish state hospital after the fall.

John Miller, Bradley of

Birmingham, Ala., and Richard Daniel Bass of Dallas, Texas, managed to reach the peak last year. They were the first Americans to reach the peak since 1974, when Edward Behling, a U.S. airman stationed in Turkey, scaled Ararat without government permission.

High seas postpone anchor lift

HATTERAS, N.C. (UPI) — Rough seas and thunderstorms forced researchers Tuesday to postpone efforts to raise the anchor of the Civil War ironclad USS Monitor that sank in the Atlantic 120 years ago.

"As of right now, it doesn't look too good for getting a recovery," said Jack LaCovey, public affairs director for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

"If there were to be a dramatic change in the weather, we would do something today."

He said weather forecasts predicted thunderstorms and a 35- to 40-knot winds over the wreck site in the Atlantic Ocean 16 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras. The seas were too turbulent to permit diving operations from a 22-foot, four-person miniature submarine.

The winds were expected to diminish to 10 to 15 knots by this morning and become more northerly before swinging to the northeast later in the day.

Diving efforts would depend on what those winds will do to us," LaCovey said.

The 1,300-pound wrought-iron anchor — considered unique because it has four flukes or prongs to grip the bottom — was ready for raising once the weather conditions eased.

On Monday, divers cleared away sediment covering the anchor and attached a lift barge that will be filled with air to float it to the surface.

The anchor would be the largest object recovered from the Monitor, which foundered and sank on Dec. 31, 1862, while being towed to Beaufort, N.C., to participate in a Union blockade of Confederate ports.

Weed 'Kong' on display at farm show

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — The "King Kong" of weeds was captured and went on display Tuesday at an agricultural conference at Pennsylvania State University.

Known as the "tearthumb" or "mille a minute weed" the weed was spotted in York County in southeastern Pennsylvania and brought to the Aug. Progress Days conference at Penn State, said Dr. Nathan Hartwig, associate professor of weed science.

The weed's vine grows up to six inches a day during peak summer months, reaching a maximum height of 20 to 25 feet, he said.

It is named the tearthumb because of downward curving spines on its stem that make it painful to pick up, said Hartwig.

The weed's "roots" trace back to Japan, Korea, China and India, said Hartwig. However, the plant has been branching out and was recently sighted in southeastern Pennsylvania and in five Maryland counties, he said.

The weed tends to climb up anything," said Hartwig. "It has become enough of a problem for people to recognize it as a bad weed."

The weed is part of a Common Weeds of Pennsylvania display featured in the College of Agriculture tent during the three-day conference.

Patrons worry about consolidation's effects

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Citizens from three Twin Falls County school districts already considering a merger highlighted the discussion at a Tuesday-night hearing on the topic of school consolidation statewide.

About 60 persons attended the meeting, which was held in Twin Falls by a special legislative committee.

Composed of state legislators, educators and citizens, the committee has been tasked by the Legislature to make recommendations on school reorganization, whether the state's distribution of funds to schools is supporting or discouraging consolidation and other related issues.

In the Magic Valley, school districts in Twin Falls, Lincoln, Jerome and Gooding counties have been mentioned as possible candidates for consolidation or reorganization.

James Wright of Kimberly said Tuesday night that a 21-member ad-hoc committee appointed by the school districts of Kimberly, Hansen and Murtaugh has concluded that consolidation for those districts is feasible and financially possible.

Wright, a member of the ad-hoc committee, said his group found potential educational advantages to forming a single district.

The committee already has made specific recommendations about such a combination, he said, including the building of a new high school.

However, other residents from the three districts who spoke Tuesday night were not unanimous in support for the proposal. George Powell, the Kimberly School District superintendent, said he still has not made his mind up about consolidation. But he has thought it would be tough to get a bond issue passed to finance a merger project.

Bob Pettigrove, a former Hansen School board member, said consolidation would result in greater transportation costs because buses will have to travel farther.

Combining the three schools also would mean the loss of two basketball teams, two school bands and other activities. And, he said, the community involvement surrounding a high school would be lost.

"Take a high school from a community and you sign its death warrant," Pettigrove said.

And Lewis Eilers, a dairyman who lives south of Kimberly, said he had other concerns that would have to be addressed before he would support consolidation. One was whether an increased curriculum would be an advantage if the students could not fit the basics into a schedule.

"I want my children to go to college, and they have to have the basics," he said.

Eilers said another concern was whether

In jail-beating incident Youths deny charges

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The three boys charged with beating a 15-year-old boy in the Twin Falls County Jail earlier this month denied those charges Tuesday in 21st District Magistrate Court.

The boys, ages 17, 16, and 15, all of Twin Falls, remain in a single cell. The public defender has been appointed to represent them in juvenile court, where they each are charged with one count of battery.

If convicted, the boys could be ordered to serve jail sentences, or they could be committed to the state Department of Health and Welfare, with the recommendation that they be sent to the state's Youth Services Center at St. Anthony.

No date for their trial has been set. The names of the boys and their victim have not been released because of their ages.

Sheriff's deputies say the victim suffered some bruises and was harassed by the three boys before the two-day incident was discovered Friday, Aug. 12.

The victim immediately was separated from the other boys, and on the following Monday, he was examined by a doctor and then released to the Health and Welfare Department.

Court officials said Tuesday that the victim has been placed in a special Health and Welfare foster home.

The sheriff says the incident serves to reinforce the need to replace the county's 72-year-old jail. Last week, Sheriff Jim Munn said the design of the four-story jail played a role in preventing jailers from uncovering the incident sooner.

Local officials will meet with jail design consultants today for an all-day session at the College of Southern Idaho. The consultants, representing Voorhes and Associates of Boulder, Colo., will appear as part of the National Institute of Correction's jail study program. That program is supported by federal funds.

All three of the defendants had been sentenced to jail prior to the incident. The eldest had been convicted of grand theft and first-degree burglary;

the 16-year-old had been convicted of second-degree burglary and one count of first-degree burglary; and the 15-year-old was serving a sentence after he was deemed to be incorrigible.

A fifth youth in the county, a 14-year-old Twin Falls boy, was not involved in the incident, according to the sheriff. He was serving a brief sentence for petty theft and slouch has been released.

On the average, two male and two female juveniles are in the jail at any given time, Munn says. No more than two minor incidents between juveniles occur each year, he says.

This latest case is the first time that a minor in Twin Falls was not involved in the incident, according to the sheriff. He was serving a brief sentence for petty theft and slouch has been released.

Asked why his department had not announced the incident earlier, Munn

Teachers oppose benefit cut

By HARRIET GUTHERTZ
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — More than 100 Twin Falls teachers voiced opposition to a proposed cut in insurance benefits Tuesday at a meeting of the Twin Falls Education Association to remain firm in contract negotiations with the board.

"We think we are worth the same thing as last year," said Martha Lange, a teacher at Bicket Elementary School. The board can't afford to maintain the same insurance coverage as last year, and the teachers deserve it, she said.

The TFEA called a general meeting, held at Our Saviour Lutheran Church in Twin Falls, to explain the difficulties it has had in negotiating a contract settlement this year and to poll its members on strategy.

This year, the board has asked the teachers to pay for part of their health insurance to offset premium increases. In the past, the board has paid the entire cost of husband-and-wife family policies.

The TFEA, however, has refused to consider a change, saying it amounts to a salary cut, and that the board can't find the money to cover the premium increases.

The teachers already have agreed to work under last year's salary schedule, although "experienced teachers will receive a $100-a-year incremental raise, based on continuing education credits and seniority."

If the board were to fund insurance coverage at last year's level, it would mean a $100-a-year raise, the chief negotiator for the teachers.

Hutchison said she had verified the accuracy of that figure with Superintendent Gary Piller.

All 107 teachers attending the meeting opposed a settlement under the terms proposed by the board, according to Hutchison.

"What the board is asking is ridiculous," said Nick Nicholson, a speech and debate teacher at Twin Falls High School. "If we took a cut, we would be the only ones in the state to do so."

Teachers are already accepting a 3 percent to 4 percent pay cut, considering inflation by working under last year's salary schedule, said Tom Gilmore, a high school chemistry teacher.

The school board has hit a sensitive nerve by asking for concessions in health insurance. The teachers have retired for lower salaries in the past to win health insurance benefits, he said.

Medical costs have gone up 12 percent in the past year, Gilmore said. "I want to protect my family."

The teachers' association will hold another meeting Thursday to give members who were unable to attend Tuesday's session a chance to express their opinion on the board's offer, Hutchison said.

County denies subdivision request

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

RUBERT — A proposal for a six-lot subdivision, located about three miles east of Heyburn, has been denied by the Minidoka County commissioners because it was improperly prepared.

The subdivision plat was prepared by property owner Kirk Southern without a professional survey, which is required by county ordinance.

The county commissioners also denied the plat because the developer did not get necessary approval for an increase in the subdivision's lot size and a possible substandard access.

The proposal for the subdivision was presented to the Minidoka County Planning and Zoning Commission on July 29 by Marvis Brice of Candell Brice & Co. also is a member of the zoning board.

Brice's action generated conflict of interest complaints and resulted in a directive from the county commission to deny the plat.

In a letter, the commissioners instructed the zoning board to avoid any possible conflicts of interest in the future.

The commissioners talked with Brice about the conflict situation Monday and Tuesday, commission Chairman Lyle Barton said that the Bridge gets a checkup

By MARTY TRILLHAASE

TWIN FALLS — Backers of the Miller Bridge replacement project will tour the proposed bridge site for the first time today.

Once constructed, the new bridge will be located about 50 feet downstream from the site of the present 70-year-old structure, and it will stand about 10- to 12-foot higher.

"The river is now down, so we can actually get on site and see where the bridge will be," says project consultant Gerald Martens of Jerome.

The old bridge links Twin Falls and Jerome counties across the Snake River, about a half-mile downstream from Miller Dam, and about a half-mile from the Cassia County line.

The replacement project is being sponsored by Twin Falls and Jerome counties, and the Murtaugh and Hildesdale highway districts. Recognizing the bridge's role as an important farm-to-market link between Murtaugh and Burley, Cassia County officials also have joined in raising funds for the project.

Earlier this year, federal funding became available to cover 80 percent of the bridge's replacement cost, put at close to $500,000. Local officials plan to cover their share in two ways.

The highway districts plan to construct 1,200 feet of approaches, and the three counties are attempting to raise $50,000 in private donations to cover the rest of the project.

So far, those solicitations are ahead of the two-year fund-raising campaign schedule. As of July 1, $22,651 in cash had been raised and another $8,390 had been pledged to the effort, says Joe Stastny, the chairman of the Murtaugh Highway District.

Martens' selection as project designer earlier this summer is awaiting formal approval by the state and federal transportation departments. The agreement, expected within two weeks, calls for a $48,000 designer's fee.

Martens intends to use the remaining road-weather money to conduct drilling tests for the bridge's foundation. The agreement, expected within two weeks, calls for a $48,000 designer's fee.

Hospital OKs exotic X-ray machine

By HARRIET GUTHERTZ
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Regional Medical Center will continue to modernize its radiology department with the addition of another sophisticated, computer-driven X-ray machine.

After a three-month delay to study its financial feasibility, the hospital board on Monday approved the purchase of a $197,000 digital subtraction angiography machine. This machine will allow doctors to produce pictures of patients' veins and arteries to diagnose strokes and blood clots.

The addition of room equipment and a fluoroscope for the angiographic equipment will bring the cost of the suite where it will be housed to $227,000.

The hospital will finance the equipment with unanticipated interest it earned on the bond issue to finance its recent remodeling and construction project.

MVRMC added a $789,000 computerized tomography scanner last winter. That piece of equipment produces detailed pictures of thin slices of the body, with up to 2,600 different gradations of gray.

The new machine will, said Bill Burns, the hospital administrator.

The equipment also will cut the cost of the test slightly. The current angiography charge is $456, but that would drop to about $400 with the new machine, Burns said.

At a presentation made at the May board meeting, Dr. Richard Strand, the hospital's radiologist, said he needed about 160 patients a year to use the machine.

In other business Monday night:

The board approved the purchase of a $105,000 flat iron for the hospital's laundry. The iron will replace a similar piece of equipment that will be replaced by the first bill, said Mitch Bajsman, the director of support services.

Burns told the board he expects the contractor to complete construction on the main part of the hospital by the Sept. 27 deadline. If work is not completed by that date, the contractor is obligated to pay a $3,500-a-day fine, he said.

The contractor has until December to finish the same-day surgery center that plans to complete work in October, Burns said.

"We're doing a lot of things right," said community-relations director Sue Summers when she announced the results of patient survey. The latest survey shows that MVRMC received a higher-than-average rating when compared to all of the other Hospital Corporation of America hospitals.

HCA of Nashville, Tenn., manages MVRMC for Twin Falls County, under contract.

Burns also asked the board to consider joining the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry for a year. Membership would help the hospital, he said.

If the board agrees, MVRMC would be the second hospital in the state to join the group, which lobbies for businesses.

To get the hospital's marketing effort moving, Burns invited Ken Smith of Suga Food Service to give the board an introduction to marketing and long-range planning.

"Marketing is everything," Smith said. "With the deregulation of health care, hospitals will have to figure out what kind of services people want and find a creative way to make them available," Smith said.

Like any business, hospitals will have to find out who their customers are and what their competitors are doing, he said.

Hospitals will have to keep a lid on costs without sacrificing quality, and find a creative way to make decisions on what services to expand and which to de-emphasize.

Hospitals have to provide services that the community wants, but ones that also are financially attractive to the hospital, Smith said.

Boise donates land for birds

BOISE (UPI) — The Boise City Council, despite complaints from several residents, voted to relinquish title to a 200-acre tract of land so the property can be used as a breeding ground for raptors.

The land is located south of Boise in the Flying Hawk Reserve. It will be given to the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, which will turn it over to the Peregrine Fund Inc.

"We feel this transfer is just another ill advised decision which is typical of city administration, which is constantly doing things that are not in the best interests of the citizens," said Tom Brannen of the Boise Neocal Committee.

He said the council's action will begin a "Raptor Rebellion" among voters.

Boise bought the land 11 years ago from the BLM for $2.50 an acre. BLM officials said they could sell land west of the reserve to the city at the same price.

Boise School Board member David Hawk said he was concerned about increased traffic along South Cole road endangering pedestrians.

Firm penalized for dredging

BOISE (UPI) — The state Attorney General's Office said Tuesday a northern Idaho developer has agreed to pay a $2,500 penalty to settle a suit claiming the firm illegally dredged a bay at Lake Coeur d'Alene.

Deputy Attorney General Kurt Burkholder said the Big Horn Development Co. agreed to pay the penalty plus lawyers' fees to settle a suit brought by the state in 1982.

He said the firm also promised to undertake a reclamation project at Everlett Bay — site of the January, 1982, dredging operation.

The suit alleged Big Horn violated the Lake Protection Act and terms of its dredging permit by going too far into the bay to remove silt. Citizens had also complained the company created an environmental hazard by dumping material from the bay on the shore.

Food keeps lid on price rise

By DENIS G. GULING
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Food bargains held consumer prices in a modest 0.4 percent gain in July. The rise was limited despite 1.7 percent increases in the cost of school lunch, tobacco and used cars, the Labor Department said Tuesday.

But food prices are expected to rise as the effects of this summer's drought are felt, and July's small increase in prices was still enough to wipe out the monthly improvement in hourly earnings. The inflation-adjusted spending power of the average blue collar worker slipped 0.1 percent in July, the first decline since February, the department said in a separate report.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes, with President Reagan in California, said the price report and last Friday's report of rising corporate profits were "continuing good news about the president's program and ability to hold down inflation while at the same time having substantial growth."

Food prices went down 0.1 percent in July after a 0.3 percent drop in June. When a May increase of 0.3 percent was figured in, the three-month decline for food and beverages — 0.3 percent at an annual rate — was the largest for any such period since May 1976, department analysts said.

By any measure, the government's Consumer Price Index continued to behave modestly. The 12-month period through July produced a 2.4 percent inflation rate, the lowest for any year since the one that ended in January 1982.

Looked at another way, the 1983 inflation rate from January through July was only 3.2 percent at an annual rate, compared to last year's 4.9 percent for the year.

The price report did not reduce most forecasts of the U.S. heat wave and drought that killed animals and stunted crops.

Analysts expect that by late this year or early next, meat prices will head upward quickly because of shortages caused by early slaughter in the face of rising feed prices. Federal acreage reduction programs may keep feed prices escalating, they added.

Leading private analysts expect 1983 to end with a rate slightly higher than last year's but nowhere near 1981's 8.9 percent.

The analysts also agreed that the 14.7 percent jump in after-tax corporate profits reported Friday — an eight-year high — showed companies becoming efficient enough during the recession to make money in recovery without raising prices very much.

The Consumer Price Index for July was 299.3, equivalent to a price of $299.30 for the government's sample "market basket" of goods and services that cost consumers $100 in 1967. The index was up 0.4 percent both before and after seasonal adjustment.

Medical care expenses climbed 0.6 percent in July, the most since February.

Pacific Express into black

CHICO, Calif. — Pacific Express Holding Co., the parent company of Pacific Express Airline, recorded the first profitable month in its 16-month history during July.

The air carrier, which operates jet service to 19 Western cities, has crossed into the black for the first time since its inception.

Pacific Express president and chairman Stanley M. Cobb Jr. said a February restructuring of its routes contributed to the achievement. Since February, the airline has withdrawn from some crowded, metropolitan markets in favor of unserved or underserved cities in California, Oregon, Nevada and Idaho.

During July, the company took in net income of $50,000 on revenues of $5.5 million. It also boarded a record 94,919 passengers. In the second quarter, Pacific Express took a $2.5 million loss on revenues of $12.1 million.

Cobb said the airline has been gaining passengers and closing the gap between its revenues and expenses steadily. "On the basis of our July results and improvements throughout most of the airline industry, we expect to continue our upward trend and show a profit in the third quarter," he said.

Pacific Express started flying in January, 1982.

Financing plan receives nod

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Shareholders of UT Group Inc. have approved a plan for $61 million in additional financing.

The action came at the corporation's annual meeting. The plan provides for a five-year loan of $55 million from one or more financial institutions and purchase by the corporation of the President of the LDS Church of a $6 million convertible subordinated note.

The corporation, formerly known as CRT Inc., will go to repay existing debt of $20 million. Another $41 million is to go for working capital, operating expenses and capital improvements.

Military trucks roll off line

PLANT, Mich. (UPI) — The first of at least 54,831 diesel-powered, four-wheel-drive light trucks ordered by the military rolled off a General Motors Corp. assembly line Tuesday.

The trucks, known as Commercial Utility Cargo Vehicles, will be used at U.S. military installations around the world. They are derived from the full-size Chevrolet and GMC pickups and utility vehicles sold as Blazers and Jimmy.

The Army initially ordered 53,238 trucks as replacements for its present light-duty fleet and later ordered an additional 1,593. The current order is worth about $700 million.

GM asks for time to reply

PLANT, Mich. (UPI) — General Motors Corp. will ask the government for more time to respond to a $4 million Justice Department suit over alleged defects in GM X-cars, Chairman Roger Smith said Tuesday.

At an impromptu news conference, Smith said the firm's legal staff will ask for an extension of Tuesday's deadline for GM's response. A GM spokesman said the company has not yet determined how much extra time it will ask for.

Two weeks ago, the Justice Department filed the $4 million lawsuit seeking a recall of 1.1 million 1980 GM X-cars for brake problems. Models include the Chevrolet Citation; Oldsmobile Omega; Pontiac Phoenix and Buick Skylark.

Knacker declared bankrupt

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Jake Butcher, the force behind the recent World's Fair one of the most powerful bankers in Tennessee, has been declared bankrupt.

Butcher was declared insolvent Monday by Bankruptcy Judge Clive Bare, who ordered the liquidation of Butcher's assets under Chapter 7 of the federal bankruptcy code.

Butcher, 47, was forced into bankruptcy by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., and the American National Bank & Trust Co. of Chattanooga, which filed a petition in bankruptcy court June 29 claiming Butcher defaulted on $115 million in debts.

Red ink news swamps Dow

By FRANK W. SLOSSER
United Press International

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones average skidded below the 1,200 level Tuesday in a stock market sold by reports of a widening federal budget deficit that threatens to keep pressure on interest rates.

The biggest news was in the over-the-counter market where MCI Communications, a major challenger of American Telephone & Telegraph, plunged a record 16-million shares on reports its competitive edge might have been cut.

The Dow Jones industrial average, an 8.94 winter Monday, skidded 10.26 to 1,182.89. Through Monday, the closely watched average had risen 40.09 points since hitting a four-month low of 1,163.06 on Aug. 2.

The New York Stock Exchange index lost 0.83 to 94.27 and the price of an average share decreased 22 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 1.57 to 162.77. Declines routed advances 1,071-528 among the 1,973 issues traded.

Big volume volume plunged to 400 million shares from the 522 million traded Monday, as megabuck institutions stayed on the sidelines.

An afternoon rally attempt crumbled after the Commerce Department reported a July federal budget deficit of $21.4 billion, bringing the red ink for 10 months of the fiscal year to more than $179 billion.

The bond market weakened after the deficit figures and stocks followed," said William LeFevre, Purcell Graham & Co. vice president. "This is a very nervous market."

Observers said traders are looking for almost any excuse to take profits made the past year in one of the largest sustained rallies in market history.

Some investors said the government's report of a 0.4 percent increase in July consumer prices was larger than expected. But the 2.4 percent rate of consumer inflation over the past 12 months was the smallest in 17 years.

Brazil's request for a renegotiation of its debt held some investors back and could stir things up a bit in the coming days, according to Michael Metz, Oppenheimer & Co. vice president.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges fell to 700,770 shares compared with 88,994,010 traded Monday.

The American Stock Exchange index lost 1.39 to 229.67 and the price of a share fell 16 cents to 29.50. Composite volume totaled 713,700 shares compared with 7,118,800 Monday.

The National Association of Securities Dealers index of OTC stocks plunged 5.10 to 293.66.

On the trading floor, American Telephone & Telegraph was the most active NYSE-listed issue, up 1/2 to 60 1/2, or more than 1.3 million shares.

Honest taxpayers to foot another bill

Congress has passed and President Reagan has quietly signed into law a measure that will allow (invite) tax cheats to squirrel away $1 billion in taxable income through 1983 and which, of course, will therefore compel us, America's honest taxpayers, to foot the bill.

Also as a result of this legislation, the Internal Revenue Service estimates 19 million Americans will fail to report on their tax forms interest and dividends they have received. A full 5 million will illegally fail to file any tax returns at all. Only 10 million will report the tax net into which you and I fall (complaining or not).

This has culminated "one of the nastiest, most furious and bitter fights I've ever seen on Capitol Hill."

Who got the blame for it? That's the word for it for virtually sanctioning tax cheating at this date? Tax cheating is never proper, and it's even less appropriate when our nation desperately needs every penny it can legally obtain to cut our dangerous deficit.

That "credit" goes to the lobbyists for the banking industry who put on an unprecedented campaign of distortion and lying to kill the White House's bill to withhold income tax from interest and dividend payments. The lobbyists created at nothing in their effort to stope an environment so poisonous toward their congressional leaders in favor of withholding nor President Reagan, who had proposed it, dared touch it.

The bankers won — and in the end, I sensed a bit of shame in their attitudes toward their victory. The United States lost.

But our defeat wasn't total, as I'll explain. First, the bankers' campaign demands a final touch of publicity.

The lobbyists orchestrated an effort that drew 22 million pieces of mail provided, in many instances, by the bankers themselves as inserts in monthly statements to customers. They managed to confuse many of you into believing that withholding interest is a tax when, in fact, interest and dividend income has been taxable all along just as wage and salary income has been taxable.

Every time I set foot in a bank in New York during March and April, I saw threatening signs implying that the U.S. government was trying to foot my savings account by taking away interest. I had earned and was due me — a bald-faced lie.

When confronted with this fact, bankers I know well and respect argued that all the U.S. Treasury had to do was to expand more effort to match the 1979 forms submitted by banks and brokerage firms declaring my interest and dividend earnings with individual tax forms — and then account in the money.

To put it moderately, if I wouldn't be that simple, Mr. Treasury, I would match the 1979 forms submitted by banks and brokerage firms declaring my interest and dividend income paid with the income tax forms would be a formidable job and involve an incredible amount of time, workers and dollars. It just will not be done.

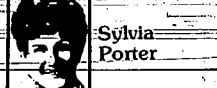

But our defeat, it repeats, was not total. Had Congress not repealed the withholding of income tax from interest and dividend payments, the Treasury would have collected $13.4 billion through 1983. The compromise bill, which Reagan approved with reluctant grudging, has substituted other measures to collect the taxes, is expected to yield $2.4 billion extra instead. The net to the cheats: "only" $11 billion.

The new law provides measures to beef up enforcement as well and penalize taxpayers and banks for providing incorrect information. Banks will have to provide the IRS with correct Social Security numbers for new accounts or incur severe penalties; for old accounts, banks will have to mail reminder notices to customers once each year to verify that the Social Security number for the account is correct.

And most important, the new law recognizes evasion will persist and the IRS must have more money and staff to handle the paperwork and provide quick answers to verify that the Social Security number for the account is correct.

System utilizes logic, engineers' experience

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (UPI) — General Electric Co. researchers have unveiled a computer system which combines the experience of engineers with a computer's logic to track down problems in large machines.

GE scientists said the portable "troubleshooting" system, which relies on artificial intelligence programming into a computer, can turn an inexperienced mechanic "into an instant Mr. Fix-It."

The equipment, which is being used to help repair electric and diesel locomotives, may one day be used to find troubles with jet engines and control computer programs, officials said.

The computer was introduced at the American Association for Artificial Intelligence meeting in Washington, D.C. Monday. The technology was developed by GE's research and development center in Schenectady.

"It's meant to capture the expertise of seasoned engineers" after they retire," said Francis Lynch, one of the GE engineers who worked on the device.

Lynch said many veteran engineers know from experience where to look for problems in machines such as locomotives. "Those skills can often help the technician avoid time-consuming work needed to find the cause of equipment failure," Lynch said.

GE researchers interviewed a locomotive field service engineer who has been repairing diesel and electric locomotives for more than 40 years.

The information was programmed into a computer, teaching the computer to duplicate the human thought process and reason answers to questions by drawing on the experience of the expert.

The computer displays a series of possible problems and then leads the engineer through a series of more detailed questions based on the same questions an experienced mechanic might ask, GE said.

Warning to bond buyers echoes after default by WPPSS

By JEROME IDASZAK
Chicago Sun-Times

The phrase "caveat emptor" is echoing through the canyons of Wall Street a lot more than usual these days.

It doesn't signify a growing interest in classical studies. It's the reaction by the strip-tease set to $2.25 billion worth of bonds sold for a project called "Whoops."

"Let the buyer beware" is the translation of the well-known Latin phrase. It's your risk, pal, unless there's a written guarantee. The trouble with the bonds of Whoops — the literal pronunciation of the nickname for Washington Public Power Supply System — is that those who bought them thought there was a guarantee.

In the early 1970s, managers of WPPSS predicted rising energy demand and banked on nuclear power to meet it. With three plants in the works, they decided to build two more. Eighty-eight utilities agreed to buy the bonds, not hard to do with a yield of up to 11 percent, tax free.

The people examining and selling the bonds weren't discouraged by newspaper articles that raised questions about Whoops in 1978, or by some Seattle city councilmen who didn't like the new plants until they had a consultant's criticism in 1976 of Projects 4 and 6, some months ahead of the initial sales of the bonds.

Brokers sold and sold, through April, 1981. Nine months later the two plants were canceled. No revenue would pay the bondholders.

The 88 utilities balked, and a panel of Washington state judges backed them up. So much for the guarantee.

The judges' ruling stunned Wall Street, which got so angry this month when the State of Washington no longer related to WPPSS — sold $1.5 billion worth of bonds, Washington had to pay a half percent interest above the going rate for similar bonds.

Wall Street will survive, and so will the State of Washington. But some of the folks who bought municipal bonds find their lives in as much shambles as the Washington power system.

No one's absiding fears for the insurance companies and other big institutions that bought WPPSS bonds, though their employees and their pension funds may suffer indirectly if the investment losses shrink profits. But individuals who plunked down $5,000 for Project 4 and 5 bonds as a nest egg for retirement or their children's education find their investment now worth about $50. Some nest eggs.

Stocks about losses, of course, are common. They often involve fraud.

The WPPSS situation is more serious: There are no crooks to go after.

There are questions about management's forecasts of power demand and their estimates of construction costs.

And there are questions about some of the big Wall Street firms that raked in $50 million fees for selling the bonds — how diligently did they analyze WPPSS?

The rating agencies say they don't have the staff to do independent digging, with only 70 or 75 people to review more than 3,000 municipal bond issues a year. That raises the question of what their ratings are worth.

Lawsuits have been filed, and the courts will decide. While that may bring some comfort, most investors don't want lawyers and a judge deciding how much their investment is worth.

There's little comfort in the fact that less than 1 percent of all municipal bonds issued after the Depression have not been paid off on schedule. As federal revenues for cities are frozen or cut back as cities and states face local tax protests, a WPPSS situation may happen again.

Get-rich-quick fever didn't cause individuals to buy the bonds. They wanted a good dividend. They wanted a conservative way to cut their tax bills. They trusted brokers, analysts and public officials.

They trusted a system that failed them. And Wall Street, instead of shouldering some of the blame or talking about changes in the way firms analyze and sell investments, prefers to talk L.A.

Athletes burned by 'hot' lab

By JOHN POWERS
Boston Globe

CARACAS, Venezuela — The word was passed at the U.S.-track and field team's Monday night meeting: Beware. The lab here is "hot."

The drug-testing equipment at these Pan-American Games, U.S. coaches John Randolph and Dick Hill told their athletes, is the most sophisticated in the world. If any of you have any questions about it...

So Tuesday morning, several hours before four more weightlifters (including Chicago's Jeff Michels, the triple heavyweight gold medalist) were stripped of their medals for steroid use, more than a quarter of the 48-man U.S. squad left for the States, apparently to avoid doping controls.

"I was shocked," said U.S. hurdler James King, who ran in Tuesday's 400-meter hurdle heats. "We figured it wouldn't pertain to that many people. I mean, this is only the second string here. To wake up this morning and find 13 guys on your way-back-home..."

What can you say? Included: pole vaulter Mike Tuttle, hammer throwers Dave McKenzie and John McCardle, discus throwers Paul Bishop and Greg McEwenay, shot putfers Jesse Stuart and Ian Pyka, javelin thrower Duncan Atwood, long jumper Randy Williams, triple jumper Mike Martony, decathlete Gary Bastien, hurdler Mark Patrick and sprinter Brady Crain.

"It would be an injustice to have this be a blanket indictment," said U.S. Olympic Committee executive director F. Don Miller. "There could be other reasons—Personal reasons, injuries, family reasons."

to be with his wife, who is about to give birth.

Yet given the timing — Monday afternoon four other weightlifters had been stripped of their medals and three others disciplined, with more announcements expected — the reason for the abrupt departure seemed to be to avoid the sanctions that would follow a positive test.

"Why else would they leave?" said U.S. sprinter Sam Graddy. "Why would they walk out on their country? Cause that's what they're doing. Walking out under the U.S. flag."

In all, 10 of the 16 U.S. field event entrants are gone, leaving the medal chase open to a pourpour of anonymous from South America and the Caribbean islands.

With four of the 19 listed entrants absent, Cuban Luis Delis won Tuesday's shot put, followed by a Trinidad and Tobago man from Wednesday's hammer throw without McKenzie and McCardle, two of the three top finishers at the U.S. nationals, should be a similar grab-bag.

"You watch the meet go on," said King. "And you can't already see there's a lot of shows." The 11 weightlifters, medical officials here say, are not isolated cases. As many as two or three dozen athletes may be named before the Games end early next week.

"The initial information I had," said U.S. team physician Dr. Roy Bergman, "is that they were detecting three a day."

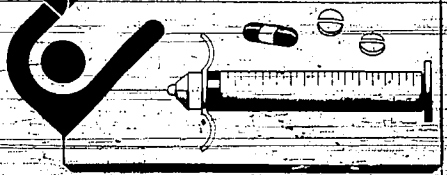

Tuesday's batch of positives included Michels, Chile's Jacques Oliger (3 silver medals), Venezuelan Jose Adames Perez (2 bronze) and Nicaragua's Enrique Montiel (2 bronze medals).

The testing equipment, imported from Colorado, can trace drug usage at the molecular level as far back as a year through urinalysis.

Though the same equipment reportedly was in place at the recent World Track and Field Championships at Helsinki, medical sources here say it was calibrated to a less sensitive level.

"[I]t was used the same way at the Worlds," said King, "you would have had a hell of a lot more guys go home. You could have thrown Helsinki right out the window." Several members of the U.S. team here also competed at Helsinki. Most did not. "This is just the second team here," King said. "The fourth and fifth guys in an event. And that's what scares the hell out of me. I'd hate to see what's going on in the first team."

The fact is, nobody knows for certain. The Helsinki tests were lenient by design. And the U.S. team was not tested at the Athletics Congress national championships at Indianapolis in June. The reason, said USOC Vice President Eric Dennis, chairman of the women's team, was expense.

The Pan-American organizers spent $400,000 on doping control and have only tested some medal winners and a few more random competitors.

"Athletes need to be tested more often," said U.S. hurdler Sharrife Barksdale. "They should be tested at all big meets, from nationals on up."

If that is done, athletes here predict that a large number of world-class competitors will either get clean in a hurry or pass up next summer's Los Angeles Olympics, where the same controls will be used.

"What this tells everybody is: Stop and think about your training program," says hurdler Judy Brown. "This is the last warning."

The USOC, which is on record against the use of banned drugs, says it will support international sanctions against any guilty American athletes.

British hurdler Sebastian Coe goes further. He told the International Olympic Committee at its last Congress that drug users should be banned from amateur sport for life. And many of his colleagues agree.

"It's unfair to athletes who don't use them," said Graddy. "I want to be in a late next to somebody who's natural," said Graddy. "Like myself."

Steroids can kill too, say experts

By JERRY ZGODA

BOSTON — Some athletes take anabolic steroids to stimulate muscle and strength development. Doctors say anabolic steroids increase the growth of body tissue, but they don't know that steroids increase strength. They know that steroids are dangerous to take.

"Anabolic steroids are artificially produced chemicals derived from the male hormone testosterone. They promote tissue growth and are used by some weightlifters, bodybuilders, football players and other strength athletes."

"Many athletes take them for the purpose of building muscle mass," said Dr. John Reilly of Children's Hospital's Sports Medicine Department. "They get bulkier. People definitely get bigger after taking anabolic steroids. There isn't been a whole lot of scientific data that you get stronger. There's very little medical use for anabolic steroids."

Steroids are available only by prescription. Catabolic steroids, such as prednisone, are used by doctors to treat rheumatoid arthritis and other inflammations.

"Anabolic steroids are used to treat patients with a shortage of natural male hormones in the body, but are not widely used in other cases because of the risks. They have been linked to kidney and liver failure and sexual and reproductive dysfunction."

"They're very dangerous to take," Reilly said. "They put too much stress on the body. There are cases where big, healthy kids, who could wipe out an army, went into liver failure and died."

There's no agreement on whether steroids help increase strength. Ted Arcidi, a world-record holding powerlifter from Concord, says they don't.

"I tried them for about three weeks two years ago, but they didn't help me," said Arcidi, who holds the world powerlifting record in the bench press at 630 pounds. "I got bigger. In fact, I got bloated. I gained about 10 pounds, mostly in water retention. There are no magic elixirs to gaining strength. It takes a lot of hard work and intense training. I don't see how steroids help anyone get stronger. Only in the head they might. They're getting bigger, so they think they're stronger and they think they can perform better."

There are still a lot of users, even though the steroids, which can be taken orally or injected, are illegal. "You can get them on the black market, easy," Arcidi said. "If I wanted to get on steroids, I could get them any number of places. If they're really going to crack down on all the steroid users — all the guys in the NFL, track and field, bicycling, weightlifting, swimming — they're going to deplete a lot of the quality athletes in a lot of sports. It's not hard at all to find athletes who use them."

Double play

Boston Red Sox third baseman Wade Boggs appears to have a double in this double exposure taken at Minneapolis' Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome Tuesday night. Boggs was stepping to the plate when this shot was taken. The Minnesota Twins beat the Sox 3-2.

Jury out on BYU this year

By RALPH WAKLEY

PROVO, Utah — Brigham Young's LaVell Edwards, the dean of Western Athletic Association football coaches, should easily win his 100th career game this season and perhaps a ninth league title.

Edwards' offense, led by All American tight end Gordon Hudson and All-WAC quarterback Steve Young again looks impressive even through BYU returns just eight of its 1962 starters.

The Cougars have experienced players in every position except one of the defensive backs, and half of this year's second-team players also lettered in 1982.

"We have good experience at quarterback," says Edwards, which must rank as one of his all-time understatements.

Young completed 62.7 percent of his passes last year for 3,100 yards and 18 touchdowns, and the 6-foot-2 senior was also BYU's No. 2 rusher last fall, carrying for 407 yards and 10 more TDs.

Edwards also says the Cougars "will be strong" at the receivers and linebackers and that his running backs "are good. While we were hurt most in the lines by graduation, we expect to be good shape up front."

The top receiver should again be the 6-4 Hudson who led BYU in catches with 67 receptions in both 1981 and 1982.

But the Cougars also have veterans Mike Pendleton, Mike Bado and Glen Koslowski back from a corps of receivers that routinely includes more than a half dozen players.

And starting fullback Casey Humalu also returns. Humalu rushed for 665 yards in 1982 and was among nine BYU players with 14 or more receptions.

"We won't change much this year. Our opponents will still have to look for a strong passing game," says Edwards. "But with Humalu, plus

Athletes claim they weren't warned of lab

NEW YORK — More than a dozen American athletes sat in confusion and frustration in the coach section of the Pan-Am Games on Tuesday at Caracas, Venezuela, to Kennedy Airport on Wednesday.

The 13 athletes had withdrawn from track and field competition at the Pan-American Games in the wake of an anabolic steroid scandal that stripped four weightlifters (including American Jeff Michels) of medals. Eleven international athletes have been seen at the Games.

"The tests were much too stringent," said one American athlete.

The rich get richer, and Meridian High School gets bigger

TWIN FALLS — There is no doubt in the mind of Borah High School football Coach De-Pankratz about the current football situation in the state's capital.

Pankratz, whose Lions had a losing season last year, should rebound pretty well into respectability this fall. In another year or two, Pankratz feels this year's sophomore class will bring back memories of Borah days of old.

But the Idaho State grad said it appears to him that the Lions will rise to the top of the manpower reservoir it had in the first 25 years of its existence.

"When they put Borah out here, we were in the new part of town. The city was growing into our area and it was the younger couples with younger children that were buying the subdivisions here. I don't see that changing."

"Now a lot of our neighbors' kids are pretty mature. A lot of the same families are still living in the same houses and their children have left home and are making homes for themselves now. It used to be you had to be careful driving down the streets because of all the little kids outside playing. Now you can drive several blocks and not see any youngsters."

Pankratz said all you have to do to understand Meridian is to move the block back those 20 to 25 years and you see Borah again.

"Right now you're got us (Borah and Capital High School) blocked in. Their district line is just a couple of blocks behind Capital High School. There is a lot of growth going on from Capital out toward Meridian, but all these children are enrolling in the Meridian schools."

Capital is abutted on the south — the other portion that apparently is enjoying development — by the Borah district.

"Our next enrollment growth will come from kids being raised in the Five Mile (Road) area," Pankratz predicted. "That's the only way our district can grow."

Pankratz can take it down virtually block-by-block if you want to get really technical.

"They shifted the zone between the Boise (High School) and Borah districts and took a large part of that housing development across from the airport into the Boise district. Borah averaged a variety of starter and a half out of that area every year for a long time. Do you remember Jerry Ahlin (two-year Borah starter and later Idaho quarterback) or Cedric Minter (two-time SIC rushing champion and state sprint king)? They're from that area. In fact, Boise has been averaging a starter a year out of that neighborhood since they made the shift. Over a couple-three classes at a starter and a half per class, you're talking a difference of 10 players in the total swing between Borah and Boise and it definitely has hurt Borah."

Five or six years ago Borah was the second largest high school in the state with more than 2,300 students in its top three grades. This fall it will be just over 1,600. Capital has had an enrollment loss and Boise figures to be up slightly this fall because of some development going on in the northern side of the city.

"But here's the thing," Pankratz said. "I understand that Meridian will have over 1,100 sophomores enrolling this fall. They've had some classes close to a thousand, but all of a sudden here is that big class."

"It's not going to get a lot different," Pankratz said. "The area that is growing and has the land to develop is in the Meridian school district."

Meridian, of course, is considering a bond election which would establish a second high school in the district. A previous bond issue was defeated by a rather narrow margin a couple of years ago.

"I think this time it will pass," Pankratz said. "In the first one there were a lot of well-known people who were out actively fighting it. This time there doesn't seem to be much organized opposition."

Meridian basketball Coach Don Hayes tends to disagree with Pankratz' assessment. "I think the time the people were just getting used to the idea of having a high school and playing equally with the city schools or anyone else in the state," Haynes said. "They kinda said to themselves 'heck, let's stay the biggest high school in the state a while longer and see if we can win some."

Cooper gets Olympia Award

KETCHUM — Christin Cooper of Sun Valley, the first American skier ever to win three medals in the World Championships, received the Olympia Award Tuesday for her athletic excellence.

Presented and funded by The Southland Corporation, better known as the operator of T-Eleven stores, the Olympia Award recognizes the accomplishments of athletes participating in the 31 Olympic sports who "wouldn't otherwise be recognized," as Southland representative Renee Ferry, 97, explained.

Cooper is one of four women awarded the honor. The others are Phil and Steve Mahrs and Cindy Nelson. Overall, some 90 performers nationwide have won the award, which is being offered for the first time.

At a luncheon Tuesday Cooper collected her prize — an amphora, a two-handled Greek vase decorated with athletic figures. The vase recalls those that were awarded to the winners of amateur competitions in the Panathenaeic Festivals near Athens in the fifth century B.C.

Cooper continues to train for next February's Winter Olympics and rehabilitation from the compression fracture she suffered in her left knee January 23 during downhill training in Les Diablerets, Switzerland.

She claimed the highest finish ever for an American woman in the final overall World Cup standings in 1982, placing third. She won silver medals in the giant slalom and slalom, and a bronze in the combined downhill.

Horse show this weekend

The Magic Valley Reined Cow Horse Association will hold its fourth annual futurity competition Saturday and Sunday at the College of Southern Idaho arena.

The show will feature open, amateur and novice classes for three- and four-year olds, featuring $2,000 in added money plus trophy saddles.

Showtimes both days start at 8 a.m., with qualifying on Saturday, and the finals on Sunday. A vet check is scheduled for Saturday at 8 a.m.

Further information can be obtained by phoning Susan Lewis at 325-3007.

Rodeo pre-registration today

FILER — Cowboys living within a 50-mile radius of Filer may enter the Twin Falls County Fair Rodeo before 9 p.m.

Events will include bareback, saddle bronc and bull riding, calf roping, steer wrestling, team roping and girls' barrel racing.

Volleyball clinics Thursday

FILER — A volleyball skills clinic will be held here Thursday. The clinic will be held at Filer. School under the direction of Sharon Lutkehus, Vicki McCabe and Filer High School varsity volleyball players.

Seventh- and eighth graders will meet in the junior high school gym from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. There will be a $5 fee. Sixth graders will meet from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m., and their fee is $3.

Students participating should have suitable gym shoes.

Soccer meeting set Thursday

TWIN FALLS — There will be a reorganizational meeting of the Twin Falls Soccer Club on Thursday at 7 p.m.

The meeting will be held at the playing field behind Twin Falls High School.

All area soccer players are urged to attend to discuss the fall season and future of Thursday night soccer.

Ken Landreaux and Greg Brock hit two-run homers in the seventh inning to highlight a brawl-filled 6-3 Los Angeles Dodgers win over the Montreal Expos Tuesday night.

With the Expos leading 2-1 in the seventh, Pedro Guerrero reached on an error by first baseman Al Oliver before Landreaux hit his 13th homer. Brock's RBI was their hit off the shoulder by losing pitcher Bryn Smith, and nibbed the mound but was tackled from behind by Expos catcher Gary Carter and both benches and bullpen emptied onto the field.

Both Marshall and Smith were ejected from after a delay of 10 minutes. Brock then hit a two-run homer off reliever Dan Schatzeder with Derrell Thomas running for Marshall. Combined with Atlanta's 7-0 loss to St. Louis, the victory brought the Dodgers to within two games of the lead in the National League West.

The win went to reliever Pat Zachry, 37, who worked the seventh. Tom Niedzier pitched the eighth for the Dodgers, picking up his seventh save. Smith fell to 7-3, despite pitching a two-hitter over 7 1/3 innings.

American

Doug Bair, making his first major-league start after 397 relief appearances, combined with Aurelio Lopez on a four-hitter and a 2-0 Tuesday night Texas Rangers victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Chef Lemon and Rick Leach stroked RBI doubles to provide the visiting Tigers with their offense. Bair, 5-3, was pressed into the starting rotation due to a shoulder injury to Mill Wilcox. The right hander, who celebrated his 34th birthday on Monday, pitched six innings and allowed four hits while walking one and striking out none. He retired nine straight batters between the third and sixth innings. Lopez worked the final three innings to earn his 17th save and first since July 31.

The Tigers took a 1-0 lead in the fifth inning against Charlie Hough, 10-12, when Clem Wilcox got hit with a double to center and scored. Lemon's double down the right-field line. Detroit made it 2-0 in the seventh when Lemon was hit by a pitch with one out and scored from first base on Leach's double to right-center field. Lopez faced just 10 batters in the final three innings.

A two-run homer by Green, his sixth of the year, and Hendrick's solo shot, his 13th of the season and first since July 25, in the third off-Pete Falcone, 8-2, increased the lead to 4-0 as the Cardinals beat the Braves for the second time in four games this year.

St. Louis built the lead to 7-0 in the fifth. Green singled to one out, stole second and scored on a pinch-hit single by Ken Oberkfell, who stole second and scored off a single by McGee. Center fielder Dale Murphy misjudged McGee's hit for a three-base error, allowing McGee to score.

The Braves' best threat came in the second. Murphy led off with a single but was thrown out by Green trying to stretch the hit into a double. Chris Chambliss and Rafael Ramirez followed with singles but Randy Johnson bounced into a double play to end the inning.

Cincinnati 4, Chicago 0
At Chicago, rookie left-hander Russel, 23, pitched a six-hitter over seven innings and hit a two-run homer to propel the Reds. Russel's homer came on a 10-pitch off-Ferguson-Jenkins, 4-9, and came after Dan Biliello singled. Houston 6, Pittsburgh 5
At Pittsburgh, pinch hitter Denny

Walling smacked a three-run homer and Ray Knight drove in the go-ahead run with a two-run single to cap a five-run ninth and lead the Astros to the opener in the nightcap. Terry Puhl and Dickie Thon had RBI hits, and the Niekro and Bill Dawley combined on a seven-incher to complete the sweep. Niekro, 14-10, allowed six hits in six innings and Dawley pitched three innings of one-hit relief for his 12th save.

New York 3, San Diego 3
At San Diego, rookie right-hander Waller pitched his second complete game of the season and climaxed a six-run eighth inning with a three-run homer, his third of the season to lead the Mets. Terrill improved to 5-5. John Montefusco, 9-4, was the loser.

San Francisco 3, Philadelphia 1
At San Francisco, Darrell Evans hammered the Phillies for his third of the season. In the eighth, Evans gave the win despite the loss, as the Phillies moved a half-game ahead of Pittsburgh in the NL East by virtue of Houston's double-header sweep over the Pirates. Mike Gibson, 2-7, got the win, and Greg Minton picked up his 15th save. At Holland, 7-2, was the loser.

Veterans Martin, Odoms in trouble

By United Press International

NFL

One NFL team sent a veteran tight end packing Tuesday, and another might be going if he doesn't impress this weekend.

Gary Shirk, who spent eight years with the Giants, was among four players cut to enable the NFL to reach the 50-man roster limit. Shirk, who caught 130 passes in his NFL career, started just one game last season and was outplayed by three rookies and veteran Tom Muldrew in pre-season.

Shirk's best season was 1981 when he caught 42 passes for three touchdowns in helping the Giants into the playoffs.

Denver tight end Riley Odoms, an 11-year veteran, won't be playing for the Broncos if the club's deal-out James Wright in the team's final pre-season game Friday against Minnesota.

Broncos Coach Dan Reeves said Tuesday he thinks Odoms "needs to go somewhere else to play" if he doesn't start.

Odoms is Denver's No. 3 career pass receiver with 392 catches for 5,693 yards and 41 touchdowns. The Broncos first-round draft choice in 1972 caught a career-low eight passes last year. Odoms and Wright will each play one half Friday.

Among other veterans cut Tuesday was 10-year veteran wide receiver Morris Bradshaw, who was waived by New England. Bradshaw played in two Super Bowls with the Raiders before joining the Patriots last season.

The Green Bay Packers cut Ray Stachowicz, their regular punter the past two seasons.

In other training camp news:

Atlanta Falcons offense anemic in the first three exhibition games, got a boost when holdout All-Pro tackle Mike Kenn reported to training camp and fellow holdout R.C. Thielmann was expected not far behind.

At Houston, Oilers Coach Ed Biles named veteran Archie Manning as his starter for the Sept. 4 season opener against Green Bay. Manning edged Clifford Nielsen after the two divided playing time in the first three pre-season games.

At Dallas, Cowboys Coach Tom Landry emphasized once again that Danny White is the team's No. 1 quarterback, but he did not sound so sure about defensive end Harvey Martin. Martin, who has led the Cowboys in sacks the past two years, has been distracted during the past few months from financial problems and his being mentioned in an on-going cocaine investigation.

Also, Oilers' cornerback Willie Tullis, charged with criminal trespass for allegedly breaking into a woman's apartment, surrendered to Houston police Tuesday and was held under $1,000 bond. Tullis, 25, was named in a complaint filed last week in Tom Green County by a woman identified as Cyndi Nepper of San Angelo, Texas. A warrant was issued for his arrest Monday.

The testing equipment used in Caracas, considered the most sophisticated of its kind, is similar to the equipment to be used in 1984 at the Olympics in Los Angeles. The U.S. Olympic Committee has indicated that the status of any athlete found guilty of using illicit drugs could be in jeopardy for the 1984 Games.

"We have suspected the use of steroids for years," said USOC president William Simon. "Now those who use them can get caught."

The problem of steroids — a chemical compound found in the male hormone testosterone that increases muscle fiber — was called a "time bomb waiting to explode" by Simon.

Dr. Anthony Maddalo of New York City told CBS-TV that steroids "are believed to increase strength, although this hasn't been absolutely proven, and that the side effects of steroids include liver disease, liver tumors, high blood pressure and temporary sterility."

USOC secretary general F. Don Miller cautioned that the withdrawal of the 13 American athletes is not to be considered an indication of guilt, and added, "It would be an injustice to have a blanket indictment of the athletes. Some of them might have left Venezuela for personal reasons."

Disagreeing with Miller, U.S. javelin thrower Curt Ebinford, the only member of the eight-man weight team who remained to compete in Caracas, told UPI that it is clear the American athletes left "for fear of competition."

The athletes were picked from the U.S. Outdoor Track and Field Championships at Indianapolis in June, a meet administered by The Athletics Congress, the governing body for track and field in the United States. As the U.S. member of the International Amateur Athletic Federation, TAC is responsible for choosing the qualifying meets for major international competitions.

The U.S. Olympic Committee, as the arm for the International Olympic Committee, is responsible for raising funds to support the national teams and administration, such as making travel arrangements.

The two organizations have run into difficulties before. At the 1981 National Sports Festival in Syracuse, N.Y. for example, they bickered over the eligibility of shot putter Brian Oldfield—the IOC had declared him permanently ineligible because of his short-lived pro career, while the TAC had restored his amateur status.

And with regard to testing for illegal drug use by athletes, neither seems to care much what the other one is doing about it.

"Athletes were not tested this past June at the National Outdoor Championships, which also determined the makeup of the U.S. team for the World Championships in Helsinki, Finland this year. If they had been, they may have been prepared for the sophisticated procedure which is being used at the Pan Am Games and will be used at the Olympics next year. Several athletes before departing Caracas Tuesday said if they had known of the extent of the testing, they would not have come."

Dr. Evie Dennis, chief of mission for the U.S. delegation to the Games, said she learned of the presence of the new testing equipment when she arrived in Caracas on Aug. 11 and immediately made efforts to inform the various American governing bodies who were in turn to inform the athletes. To the best of her knowledge, this was done.

"They knew, but they were non-believers," Dennis said.

Dennis said she had pushed for testing at the national championships this year but was turned down by what she called "the democratic procedure." More specifically, she said the primary reasons it was not done were the expenses involved, and the fact the athletes would not have had enough forewarning before the meet.

"I think this will help my position," she said with a smile Tuesday. Pete Cava, press information director for TAC in Indianapolis, agreed that financing was the major — but not the only — factor involved in the decision not to test.

"It was talked about, but the cost was really prohibitive," Cava said. "It would have been about $10,000. But also, we figured that since the World Championships and all other selection meets were going to test, why should we duplicate the tests?"

But testing in Finland "was not nearly on the scale it is being done in Caracas."

Young's running ability, we should have a little more balance."

The Cougar defense will be led by 3-year veterans Brandon Flint (6-4, 250) at end and Todd Shell at linebacker. The other 1982 starters back are cornerback Greg Peterson and safety Kyle Marshall.

"We'll be solid on defense, but we lack great speed in our secondary. We'll depend on quickness and intelligence to stop the long plays. And, we also have to avoid injuries to our key players," Edwards says.

BYU's 1983 season "will mirror the season with a 9-3-1 record, says he has only brought in six junior college transfers, and will continue to build for future years with freshmen. He has 20 first-year players on the varsity roster.

The freshmen most likely to contribute this year are Shawn Knight (6-6, 258), listed as the No. 2 man at right defensive tackle; 6-5 wide receiver Daren Davis; 210-pound running back Lakel Heimuli; defensive back Scott Peterson; and quarterback Sean Conroy, who has already earned a spot on BYU's travel squad.

Edwards thinks "four or five" schools will challenge BYU this fall for the WAC title, including Air Force.

The Falcons were the only league team to beat the Cougars last year, and the two teams play this fall at the Academy. He says New Mexico and Utah are also "in a good position" this year, and that Colorado State "will be the surprise team."

Calcutta chicken and rice is easy to prepare.

Beef and fruit kabobs is a low-calorie offering.

Gravy and rice join forces for casual meal

Casual entertaining long has been associated with patio and poolside parties. Foods served at such gatherings have become so popular you're apt to find almost identical menus being served indoors these days.

Whatever the location, such meals should be hearty enough to satisfy yet light enough to fit the lower-calorie trend in mealtime planning. Canned gravy and rice work well into such planning.

The gravies range from 16 to 50 calories per serving while rice also is low in calories only 82 in each half cup. Rice is low in fat and sodium, therefore ideal for today's lifestyles.

A meat, poultry or seafood nicely sauced with canned gravy and served over rice will highlight any occasion.

CALCUTTA CHICKEN AND RICE

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
8 choice broiler-fryer pieces
1 medium onion, sliced
1 can (10 1/2 ounces) chicken gravy
2 tablespoons ketchup
3 tablespoons orange marmalade

1 to 1 1/2 tablespoons curry powder
3 cups hot cooked rice

Brown chicken in 11-inch skillet over medium heat in hot butter; remove from skillet. Spoon fat from drippings remaining in skillet. Add onions to drippings in skillet; cook over low heat until tender. Stir in gravy, ketchup, marmalade and curry, scraping any bits from bottom of pan. Bring to a boil. Add chicken. Reduce heat, cover and simmer 30 minutes or until chicken is fork-tender. Serve with rice; spoon gravy over chicken. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

BEEF AND FRUIT KABOBS

2 cans (10 1/2 ounces each) beef gravy
1/4 cup brown sugar
1/4 teaspoon cloves
12 carrot pieces, each 1 1/2 inches long
12 green pepper pieces, each 2 inches square
1 1/2 pounds boneless sirloin steak, cut in 1-inch cubes
1 can (about 16 ounces) chunk pineapple, drained
3 cups hot cooked rice.

To make sauce: In 1-quart saucepan heat gravy, sugar and cloves to boiling, stirring occasionally. Meanwhile, in 2-quart saucepan heat carrots in 1-inch boiling water to boiling. Reduce heat, cover, simmer 5 minutes. Add green pepper, simmer 3 minutes more or until tender-crisp. Drain. On six 18-inch skewers, thread meat alternately with pineapple, green pepper and carrots. Broil kabobs 10 minutes or until done, turning and basting frequently with sauce. Heat remaining sauce, serve with kabobs and rice. Makes 6 servings.

Two really can eat a lot cheaper

By JEANNIE LESEEM
UPI Family Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — People who live alone have good reason to complain about their high cost of living.

A recent research report indicates they pay almost twice as much per capita for food as larger households: $30.67 per capita per week, compared with $16.53. These figures represent the average weekly food costs of a one person and "four-person" family from 1977-1982.

The report for the Newspaper Advertising Bureau, Inc., indicates inconvencence and lack of motivation are more to blame than lack-of-shopping-sophistication, carelessness or a spendthrift mentality.

Part of the problem, probably is food waste, said Stuart Tolley, NAB's vice president for research. Most food is packaged for larger households who are still the food stores' best customers.

"Packaging in small quantities costs more, when it is available," Tolley said. "It's also likely the one-person households have higher rates of food spoilage, since they must often buy in larger quantities than they can use for a single meal."

He suggests food industry and food advertisers pay more attention to singles' needs and wants since they now represent the fastest-growing type of household in the United States.

Between 1955 and 1980, the number of one-person households grew by 64 percent, the bureau report said. The total number of households increased only 72 percent.

In the past decade alone, the number of one-person households grew by 64 percent, the bureau report said. The total number of households increased only 72 percent.

Singles are not just the young and never-married. The 538 main telephone interviews conducted for the bureau by Hayes, Nedved and Associates of Sewickley, Pa., included adult food shoppers of all ages and the divorced and widowed. About 50 interviews were completed in 11 metropolitan areas across the United States: Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Detroit, Jacksonville, Fla., Kansas City, Mo., Los Angeles-Long Beach, New Orleans, New York, Philadelphia and San Francisco.

Census figures show the New York area is No. 1 in singles households — 1,067 million out of a total 3,594 million households.

The Los Angeles-Long Beach area is second, with 742,830 singles households and the Chicago area is third, with 604,203.

The survey found significant differences between one-person and multi-person households in the way they shop and what they consider important in food buying.

For example, singles rank nutrition and cost lower than larger households, especially if the singles are 65 or older.

Younger singles rank taste considerably higher than older singles. And all ages are more interested in ease of preparation and are less price conscious than larger households.

Evidence from 1981 Simmons Market Research Bureau data strongly suggests that female singles are more apt than their male counterparts to buy quick and easy food, such as instant products and frozen complete dinners and entrees.

Both men and women singles take less time to comparison shop between and within stores. Eighty percent in the NAB study did not make extra trips for sales and bargains, compared with two-thirds of those in multi-person households.

If prepared properly Fresh beets can make delicious meal

The chance came this weekend to turn a generous gift of freshly pulled beets into some delicious meals.

On food

PEASANT BORSCHT

1 pound meat and poultry bones
Water to cover
4 chicken or beef bouillon cubes
1 clove garlic, peeled and minced
2 large onions, peeled and quartered
2 stalks celery and tops, minced
6 beet greens (only six leaves), minced
6 beets, peeled and sliced
3 carrots, pared and diced
3 tomatoes, peeled and quartered
1 cup shredded cabbage
2 large potatoes, peeled and sliced
Salt and pepper to season to taste

Sour cream to top each serving

Into large kettle, put meat and poultry bones, water to cover; simmer 1 hour. Then add bouillon cubes; mashed garlic; onions; celery; beet greens; beets, carrots and tomatoes; simmer 2 more hours, adding water when necessary to keep plenty of broth around vegetables. Remove bones and discard. Then add cabbage and potatoes and simmer until they are tender. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve steaming hot with a dollop of sour cream. Makes 6 servings.

Note: This soup may be frozen and reheated for serving.

STUFFED BABY BEET APPETIZERS

As many baby beets as desired.
Hard-cooked eggs, sliced
Real mayonnaise

In kettle, put beets which have been cleaned and tops trimmed to 1-inch above beets. Add water to cover and a pinch or two of salt. Simmer beets 15 minutes or until they are just tender. Rinse under cold water and then peel. Scoop out centers of baby beets; fill with mixture of sliced hard-cooked eggs and real mayonnaise. Put cocktail picks in sides of baby beets and serve on cocktail appetizer plate, or use to garnish salads and meat dishes.

BEEETS IN HORSERADISH SAUCE

5 large beets
1/2 cup onion, sliced
1 tablespoon prepared horseradish
1 small onion, peeled and minced
Pinch salt
Chopped parsley

Clean beets and trim tops to 1 inch from beets. Do not cut off roots. Cook until tender in salted water. When tender, rinse in cold water and peel. Thinly slice, covered beets and set aside in warm place in top of double boiler, mix together sour cream, horseradish, onion and salt. Heat over boiling water in double boiler bottom. Stir occasionally. Arrange sliced beets in serving dish. Pour horseradish sauce over top and sprinkle with chopped parsley. Serve immediately. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

BEEETS AND ONION SALAD

5 large beets
3 large sweet onions, peeled
French salad dressing, use store-bought or homemade

Clean beets and trim tops to 1-inch from beets. Do not cut off roots. Cook until tender in salted water. When tender, rinse in cold water and peel. Thinly slice cooked beets. Thinly slice sweet onions. Arrange sliced beets and onions in flat salad dish. Pour French dressing over top. Serve at room temperature for best flavor. Makes enough salad for 6 servings.

THIS WEEK'S BEST MARKET BUYS: Watch for special fresh produce sales. Local gardens are producing now and the markets are trying to compete. "Outdoor" fresh produce markets are usually not much cheaper than the stores. Be leary of over-pricing where there appears to be a "special." No shortages have been reported this week. Now is the time to buy your cranberry supplies.

Don't fertilize other plants Your lawn is due for that fall feeding

REXBURG — Now is an excellent time to fertilize lawns.

As the weather begins to cool, grass perks up and grows better. By feeding now, it will be darker and more uniform green color longer into the fall. It also will build a stronger root system and a thicker turf, which will resist weed invasion next year.

Although almost any lawn fertilizer is satisfactory for fall feeding, I prefer one with iron or sulfur or both. These two nutrients usually produce a darker green lawn. General-purpose fertilizers also are very good for fall lawn feeding. Formulas like 15-15-15 and 16-8-8 give good results.

If you have a significant number of weeds in the lawn, consider applying a combination, weed and seed product. Fertilizers which contain 2,4-D and related compounds also will kill dandelions and other broad leaf weeds.

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

Another practice which will significantly improve the appearance of a lawn is proper mowing. Most people cut their grass too short. If cut shorter than 1 1/2 inches, most grass varieties will begin to thin out and leave spaces for weed invasion.

If your grass is not as thick or healthy as you would like, try raising the lawn mower one notch. The grass will grow standing to catch up and will not have to be mowed any more often than before.

Fall is not a good time to fertilize other plants, so don't be tempted to feed trees and shrubs now. However, trees and shrubs growing in the lawn will not be harmed by the small amount of fertilizer which reaches them.

Fall also is a good time to plant lawns, trees, shrubs and bulbs. They still have plenty of time to get their roots established before winter. By planting now you can often have a larger plant at a cheaper price than you would pay next spring.

Why not just send out a list of all the products you use, instead of listing all of the refund forms by name? It seems to me that trading partners would keep these lists and this would save a lot of time spent in constantly updating them. —Karen England, Adelanto, Calif.

They take in 20 refund forms they find in supermarkets and cut out forms in newspapers and magazines that they can't use, and put them into an envelope and mail them to a trading partner in another city. In a week, back will come 15 or 20 different refund forms. Even if only a few of these refund forms can be used, with an average refund value of $1.30 per offer, it is worth the time and postage.

Putting refund forms in an envelope and just sending them off to a trading partner sounds very chaotic. What if you can't use any of the forms that are sent in return? That's the reason why successful traders send along a request list which names each of the refund forms they are looking for. With a request list, we trade by choice rather than by chance. Trading partners do their best to fill these requests and this helps to make each trade worthwhile.

We get very specific with the forms we put on a request list because by doing so, we get more of the refund forms we need. If, as you suggest, my list only showed the brands I use, I would probably get a lot of duplicate forms for offers I have already sent for. Remember, some of the bigger companies have dozens of current refund offers. For example, Kellogg's on my request list would bring me dozens of Kellogg's refund forms, most of which I have already used.

Readers who are interested in finding the forms that appear all too infrequently in their supermarket carts start a request list by going through the refund offers listed in this column. Within a few weeks you should have a list of 20 or more offers for which you would like the required refund forms.

During this time, start looking for refund forms to trade. Even if you don't see any forms attached to supermarket shelves, don't forget to ask the cashiers if they have any. Check with the store manager for forms on the backs of specially marked packages. Ask your friends to keep an eye out for refund forms.

While you're putting together your first request list and searching for refund forms, start thinking of all the relatives and friends and neighbors who live in other parts of the country with whom you can start trading refund forms. You might even make a few copies of this column to help you explain to them what trading forms is all about.

Enduring chemical hassles

By JAMES R. CAMPBELL
United Press International

FRANKLIN, Mich. — Buying a purse is an ordeal. Tobacco smoke makes an outdoor concert intolerable. Cooling dips in a swimming pool, cozy nights by a fireplace, a spin in a new car — alluring in a restaurant are impossible.

Linda Weiss lives in a world devoid of nearly every pleasure most people take for granted. She can't even enjoy them vicariously at the movies.

"I had one very bad experience going into a theater," she said. "I told my husband, 'I have no feeling below the waist.' He had to carry me out."

Mrs. Weiss, 44, said she is among a growing number of individuals who have suffered an immune system breakdown through sensitivity to everyday chemicals and foods. Almost anything makes her sick.

"Just today, for instance," she said in an interview, "my husband took me to get a purse. I couldn't go into the store or was standing outside and he would hold them up to the window. But when anyone opened the door I got a whiff of formaldehyde. It also got into the hair of my husband's arms and into his clothing. It took me about 45 minutes to recover after we got home."

To help others cope with such problems, Mrs. Weiss and her husband, Milton, a dentist, have written a book, "How To Live With The New 20th Century Illnesses: A Realistic Guide To Living Chemically-Free."

Nearly anyone can identify with many ailments she describes — including asthma, hives, headaches, sinus trouble, hayfever, rheumatism, arthritis, digestive problems, irritability, depression, foggy thinking and memory lapse.

She had nagging symptoms for years. Total collapse came 2 1/2 years ago, on her honeymoon.

"We were in a hotel in Florida that had been sprayed with pesticide. That put my system into overload."

Back home, they stripped their living quarters of everything synthetic. Mrs. Weiss said she did not step outside for 10 weeks.

"They replaced carpeting with tile flooring."

"We had to tear out the kitchen because of formaldehyde-laden glue," she said. "The countertops had to go to granite."

"We had to replace the metal blinds."

"We had to eliminate the gas furnace and put in electricity. We sealed up the fireplace."

In the process, the couple located manufacturers, distributors and retailers of ecologically acceptable products.

Dr. Paula G. Davey, a clinical ecologist in Ann Arbor, Mich., encouraged them to write the survival guide.

"Our beds and bedding, clothing, rugs, rug pads, furniture, walls, draperies, food, water and air frequently are made of, or contain fumes from, polyester, plastic, foam, rubber, cosmetics, perfume, pesticides, chemicals — formaldehyde, cleaners, sprays, waxes, glues, drugs and preservatives," to name a few of the products of fossil fuels," Dr. Davey wrote in a foreword to the book.

Mrs. Weiss said no product is safe for everyone. She urges readers to "please use this book as your guide — not your Bible."

She and her husband said people with an undiagnosable illness might look in their own mouths.

"Silver fillings avoid mercury into the roots and saliva, so you are getting it continuously," she said.

Weiss uses hypnosis instead of chemical pain killers, distilled water for mouth-rinsing and makes fillings and other dental appliances from non-toxic substances.

"The couple bought a 1978 medical automobile with an all-leather interior and very little of the plastic common in newer models."

"I'm pretty good in a car now," she said. "But an hour seems to be the limit. We have an air filter and ionizer running continually. I could never get into a new car."

Although fresh, unprocessed foods cost more, Mrs. Weiss believes she is saving money by eliminating the fancy picnic by the lake.

"Exceeding her life is 'incredible, pretty tough,'" she said. "At least I am not in constant physical pain."

"I want to go on a vacation, and believe it or not, it would be a real treat to go to a movie. The biggest thrill of all would be just to look outside my house and not have to look over my shoulder."

Single copies of the Weiss's resource guide are $12.95, plus $1 for shipping (and 4 percent sales tax for Michigan residents). The Linda Weiss & Milton Weiss, P.O. Box 17, Franklin, Mich. 48025.

By United Press International

Raymond Chandler, author of the Philip Marlowe detective novels, did not take up writing until he was 45 and had been forced out of the oil business by the Depression.

DEAR READERS: A coloring book is an ideal way to educate children and I had just come across one that really grabbed my attention.

It's "Winthrop and Munchie Talk About Alcohol," a non-judgmental coloring book in present-day format about alcohol to children.

Winthrop, an appealing cartoon character, is about to dig into his morning cereal when in walks his thirsty friend, Munchie, Winthrop of the Munchie some milk.

But milk isn't what Munchie had in mind. It's hot outside, and he could really go for a nice cold beer. Winthrop is shocked! He tells Munchie he's not old enough to drink alcohol. Munchie says he was only kidding, but adds, "It's very grown up to drink beer."

Their conversation develops into a message about the alcoholic content of beer, wine, vodka and whiskey, how alcohol affects the brain, the body and the way you act; the legal drinking age; and just about everything a child should know about the subject. It's a wonderful way for parents and teachers to teach children about alcoholism.

The Winthrop and Munchie coloring book can be obtained by writing:

DEAR ABBY: I do lap swimming on a regular basis each week. I swim in a public pool in Aurora, Colo. Sometimes fathers bring their 3- and 4-year-old daughters into the men's shower room with them.

I know I personally am uncomfortable showering with a young female child in the locker room. I've discussed this with other swimmers and they feel the same way. My friends say the children are too young to think anything of this. What do you think?

RICHARD IN AURORA
DEAR RICHARD: Male nudity is probably no big deal to a 3- or 4-year-old girl whose father would bring her into a men's shower room.

However, since you and other swimmers are uncomfortable with young females in the shower room, you have every right to ask their fathers not to bring them.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning "wants to Love Again," who asks for the male point of view about silicone implants to enlarge the breasts: Were she my wife, lover or friend, I'd say, "Don't do it for my benefit."

I am 65 and I've had a very active sex life. And I've learned that beauty women are not necessarily passionate. Neither are all flat-chested women cold. I've found it to be the other way around. What women lacked in chest they usually made up for in sex.

I have to tell you, the best bed partner I ever had was built like a 12-year-old boy.

Peach punch pick of party

INGLEWOOD CLIPS, N.J. For summer entertaining that's a breeze, just remember this basic equation—make ahead foods with creative, fresh flair—equal successful entertaining and fabulous fare.

1 quart lemon sherbet, softened
1 can (16 oz.) peach halves in heavy syrup, drained (reserve 1/2-cup syrup)
1 cup frozen lemon-flavored iced tea mix
1 can (46 oz.) peach nectar, chilled
1/2 cup bourbon
1 bottle (28 oz.) club soda, chilled
In-bottle of 3/4-cup ring mold.

Arrange peach nectar, cold in sherbet, freeze until firm. In punch bowl, combine lemon-flavored iced tea mix, peach nectar, bourbon and reserved syrup. Just before serving, add club soda and top with sherbet ring. Serve with ice and garnish, if desired, with fresh mint. Makes about 20 five ounce servings.

Stuffed burgers help trim calories

If your dietary plan for summer centers around eating light and right, here's a delicious suggestion for your next cookout — mushroom-stuffed burgers.

To the diner's surprise and delight, these thick, juicy burgers conceal a spicy mushroom-onion filling. Calories are kept in check by serving the burgers on rafts of crisp iceberg lettuce rather than buns.

While stuffed burgers are impressive, they are easy to make. For each burger, simply seal together two thin beef patties with the filling in between. With a little imagination, you can come up with countless stuffing possibilities to give basic burgers a new twist. In the burgers featured here, the filling is easily made by briefly cooking sliced mushrooms and green onion with barbecue sauce.

For burgers that are nicely browned, yet still flavorful and juicy, you'll need to pay close attention to the fire. The fire is ready for cooking when the coals are covered with a grey ash and are glowing in the center.

Cooking couldn't be easier for the burger; it will be turned only once. For best results, season each side after it has browned. Seasoning before cooking may cause moisture to be drawn to the surface and retard browning.

Because ground beef is so versatile and economical, it's reassuring to know that you can serve it often on a well-balanced, health-promoting diet. Like all beef, ground beef is an excellent source of high-quality protein, the type needed daily by the body to build, maintain and repair tissues and help resist infection and disease. Other important nutrients in beef include the B-vitamins thiamin, niacin, riboflavin, B-6 and B-12 and the minerals iron and zinc.

MUSHROOM-STUFFED BEEF BURGERS

1 1/2 pounds ground beef
1 cup thinly sliced mushrooms
1/4 cup thinly sliced green onion
1/2 cup barbecue sauce

Pepper

1 small head iceberg lettuce
Cook mushrooms, onions, and barbecue sauce over low heat 8 to 10 minutes. Cool. Divide ground beef into 8 equal portions and form into patties 4 inches in diameter. Spoon an equal amount of mushroom sauce in center of 4 patties. Top with remaining patties. Press edges together securely to seal. Place on grill over ash-covered coals so patties are 5 to 6 inches from coals. Broil an additional 5 to 6 minutes, to doneness desired.

Turn and season: Meanwhile, cut lettuce into four 1-inch crosswise slices or rafts. To serve, place a patty on each lettuce raft. Makes 4 servings.

Let "lean and light" be your guide when selecting accompaniments to serve with the stuffed burgers. A variety of crisp relishes will go well as will sliced tomatoes and steamed eggs. Then end the meal on a cool, refreshing note with watermelon.

Ethnic food more popular

By United Press International

Chicken consumption in the United States has increased 70 percent over the past 20 years, Turkey is up 42 percent, seafood 32 percent.

Mexican style food consumption has grown 91 percent in the past six years alone, and oriental food 83 percent, says Tony Adams, marketing research director for a major food manufacturer. His figures come from various sources including the Gallup Organization, the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the SAMI division of Time magazine.

"We now consume six and a half times as much apple juice as we did 20 years ago, two and a half times more chilled fruit juice and twice as much frozen orange juice," the Campbell Soup Co. executive said in a speech at a recent press lunch in New York.

Adams added that "nuts, canned tuna, vegetables and especially salads have all shown double-digit growth in these past two decades."

Broccoli consumption has tripled in the past 20 years to become our 10th most popular vegetable, he said.

All this reflects the growing popularity of Italian-style food, which Adams said "has almost become all-American, so its 38 percent increase in consumption is on a base much larger than that of Mexican or Oriental."

These astonishing percentages reflect three strong trends, said Adams and two other Campbell executives: Ethnic and American regional fare, health and fitness.

Among vegetables, old favorites such as peas, lima beans and beets are being bypassed in favor of lighter, lower-calorie and/or more nutrient-dense ones such as leafy greens and broccoli.

At the same time, people are looking for what Steve McNeil calls "purely taste indulgence."

Columnist offers tips on everything from wine to nylons

The new interest in wine among Americans is really not so new. George Washington enjoyed his daily Madeira. Thomas Jefferson spent thousands of dollars to import French wines to his cellar and even tried to grow grapes to make his own wine. A few years earlier (1789), the Rev. Junipero Serra planted cuttings from Spanish vines in Southern California.

California wines now have achieved their place with the fine wines of the world, and wine-tasting parties have become an important American way of entertaining, says Ruth Elzer Church in her book "Entertaining with Wine" (Rand McNally, $16.95 hardcover, $7.95 paperback).

You don't need a wine cellar unless you want to store red wines for maturing. White wines should be consumed when young, within several years of bottling. They'll keep nicely on your shelves, but preferably in a cool place. An all-purpose wine glass will do for all your wines. This glass has a slim stem and a rounded, elongated bowl that curves slightly inward at the top. It holds 8 to 10 ounces and should be filled only halfway to allow space for aeration.

Inexpensive California wines that come in gallon bottles are fine for everyday use. Here is a great trick for storing that I learned from Helen McCally, food editor of House Beautiful magazine. Save these empty vermouth bottles that have a metal screw top. Five of these "flubs" can be filled with the gallon of wine and easily stored in the fridge. Because of the screw top, they can be placed on their sides, will not take up as much room as the gallon bottles and are a lot easier to handle.

DECOR DELIGHTS: The importance of color and design has influenced consumers in their choice of housewares, according to a survey by the National Housewares Manufacturing Association. Yellow is still the main color for kitchens, but white and off-white, wood tones, almond and beige are upcoming kitchen colors. Blue remains the most popular color for the bathroom. Country, traditional and modern rank first, second and third in popularity as kitchen decors.

BEAUTY BRIEFS: The woman who is searching for a cool, green fragrance for this hot summer may find just what she wants by wandering over to the men's cologne counter. Citrus or sandalwood colognes are refreshing and light.

If you've tarried too long in the sun, add a cup of cider-vinegar to your tepid bath water. It will soothe the skin and perk up your spirit, as well.

TIMELY TIPS: Having trouble untangling that gold chain that you wear around your neck? Use two straight pins. Place one in the center of the knot and hold firmly. Use the other straight pin to untangle the knot.

DEAR DORSEY: Here are uses for nylon stockings and pantyhose that have runs: My mom always cuts them into strips to stuff soft, washable, non-allergic pillows. A small Piece of nylon can substitute for a tea strainer, when held tautly over a cup. You can fill knee-high stockings with dried flowers and spices. Knot the end around the neck of a hanger and place in closet for a natural, sweet-smelling room deodorizer.

BARBARA SCHRUETT

DEAR DORSEY: Instead of discarding nylons, I use them for our favorite flower, gladiolus. I cut the nylons into two-inch strips, lengthwise, and use them to tie the gladioli to the fence. They are almost invisible and do not affect the beauty of the garden.
