Navy lob shells into Lebanon hills

Retaliation for rocket attack on U.S. ambassador's residence

By JACK REDDEN United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — U.S. warships shelled Druze gunmen in the hills overlooking Beirut Tuesday, retaliating for a rocket attack that set fire to the grounds of the U.S. ambassador's residence and forced its staff to evacuate.

A U.S. Marine spokesman said two shells crashed close to the home of U.S. Ambassador Robert Dillon in suburban Yarze, one near the front gate and another by the swimming pool, causing fires to erupt.

artillery attack sparked a total of 20 fires throughout the Beirut suburbs of Yarze and Baabda and that one person was killed and 15 were wounded.

barment by the 5-inch guns of the USS Virginia and USS John Rodgers silenced the attack on Yarze, said Marine Maj. Robert Jordan.

Reagan, Congress cut deal to limit use of Marines in Beirut

By ROBERT SHES United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Reagan reluctantly agreed Tuesday to sign a long-sought compromise congressional resolution that will allow U.S. Marines to stay in Lebanon another 18 months but restrict their role.

off a confrontation over the escalating U.S. military role in Beirut and the 1973 War Powers Resolution, was announced almost simultaneously by Reagan and House Speaker Thomas O'Neill.

extension unless the administration offers "a better justification." Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., agreed, saying he was encouraged by Reagan's concession to the war powers act but that he regards the 18 months "as a blank check for far too long a period."

Reagan, before flying to South Carolina to help raise campaign money for conservative Sen. Strom Thurmond, said he would sign the measure if it passes Congress as it stands.

Hopes for luring Stouffer plant fading

By BOB FREUND Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — No news is not good news for Twin Falls business leaders. Officials of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce slowly are turning more pessimistic about the prospects of attracting a $70 million frozen-foods plant for the city's southeast side.

That may not be good, chamber President Doug Vollmer told members of the business community Tuesday. He said the organization's recruiters now believe the city no longer is the leading contender for the factory.

now appear to be remote prospects. Whichever area lands the plant will get an economic boost in terms of payrolls, jobs, equipment purchasing, taxes, and a host of other items.

Stouffer's officials indicated to me they're talking to Springville for economic reasons," he said Tuesday.

Firm to buy Transwestern

TF school board won't ratify pact

By HARRIET GUTHERTZ Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls school board has refused to formally approve a contract agreement with the district's teachers, citing a grievance filed by four teachers who were not allowed to vote in Monday's ratification election.

the rule had been ignored in previous years. About 58 percent of the district's teachers belong to the TFEA. It is the sole bargaining agent for district teachers.

Rape trial goes to jury

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — A prosecutor in the trial of an Ohio physician who sexually attacked and raped a woman, Tuesday told jurors Tuesday people "became responsible" for their actions when they became adults.

Dr. Edward Jackson Jr., 39, accused of a seven-year series of nighttime attacks in Columbus in which women were tied up, sexually attacked and raped, was acquitted of the acts that drew him the rape and more than 70 related charges.

But he contends insanity makes him innocent of any crime.

Judge Frederick Williams, who instructed the jurors Tuesday for an hour before they began deliberations, rejected Jackson's $30 million bond and ordered him locked in jail. Williams said testimony from mental health experts termed Jackson dangerous prompted the jailing.

Tax case largest in history

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fugitive commodities broker Marc Rich, indicted in the largest tax fraud case in history, may have failed to pay at least double the $48 million in taxes he is charged with evading, prosecutors said Tuesday.

Rich is in U.S. District Court in Manhattan Monday indicted Rich, his partner, and several of his firms on 51 counts, including tax evasion, racketeering and illegally buying oil from Iran during the hostage crisis.

According to the indictment, Rich did not pay taxes of $48 million in 1978 in hidden money.

At a hearing Tuesday, Assistant U.S. Attorney Morris Weisberg Jr. said the ongoing grand jury probe may show Rich and his group were involved in further tax evasion "equal to or larger than the amount set forward in (Monday's) indictment."

LA teachers close to contract

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The school board and teachers union drew closer Tuesday to a compromise that could avert a strike in the nation's second largest school district, leaving wages the last stumbling block in contract negotiations.

Teacher walkouts around the nation, meanwhile, affected thousands of students in Illinois, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, New York and Washington. In Rhode Island, 21,000 students returned to class after teachers reached a settlement ending a two-week strike.

In Los Angeles, the union surprised district negotiators Monday night by suddenly offering to defer for one year talks about the union's agency shop proposal and the district's teacher transfer policy and to quickly settle the wage issue.

Senate stops coal leasing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate voted Tuesday to stop Interior Secretary James Watt from selling federal coal leases for six months while a study of his controversial practices is completed.

"We're in this man insisting on leasing and giving away this country's resources!" said Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark. "He is an arrogant man."

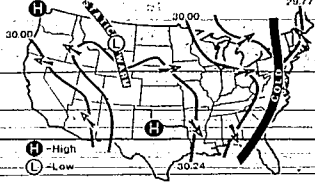

The Senate voted 63-33 on Bumpers' amendment.

Officials said the compromise resolution declares Reagan should have invoked the War Powers Resolution following the deaths of American Marines among the U.S. peace-keepers Aug. 29. Two more Marines have died in shelling since.

The war powers resolution gives Congress the authority to order troops home within 60 days if they are under attack or face imminent hostilities.

While the compromise resolution extends the Marines' deployment for 18 months, Congress could still pass

A Marine spokesman said only Marines were sent to the ridge overlooking Beirut, but a UPI photograph showed a soldier in U.S. Army uniform with the Ranger, Pathfinder and Combat Infantryman's badges.

Despite the photograph, a spokesman for the U.S. Army advised in Lebanon denied any Army troops were there. An Army special forces unit, not directly linked to the Marines, is in Lebanon to train the government's army.

The decision of Marine commander Col. Timothy Geraghty to send Marines to the front appeared related to the U.S. view that the Lebanese army's success in holding the position was vital to the safety of U.S. forces.

"The Lebanese army frankly could not hold some of these forward positions without additional support," a senior Lebanese official said.

 reasons for negotiating the sale at this time.

Meanwhile, Koehl said his airline will gain access to inter-continental markets and add to its fleet of planes. Although it has fewer planes than Transwestern, Horizon's nine Fairchild prop jets are larger, carrying as many as 40 passengers. Transwestern's largest planes carry 19 passengers.

At the same time, the board has opened up the Boise-Twin Falls route to bidders. Transwestern officials have supported that move, saying that the airline cannot fly the route profitably on its own. That also was the reason it cut service, Bagley has said.

The CAB, once again will consider subsidizing an airline to maintain essential service between the cities, Smith said. Airlines have 30 days to make a bid.

Until then, Transwestern will continue one flight a day. Bagley said Transwestern expects to continue service and is interested in bidding for the route if a subsidy is available.

Fugitives demand cocaine

MONTREAL (UPI) — Two fugitive brothers seeking refuge from a police trap said a mother and daughter as hostages Tuesday and — to the cheers of about 500 onlookers — demanded cocaine from police negotiators.

The mother, Therese Deslauriers, 54, was released after three hours, but the gunman — brothers aged 21 and 27 — continued to hold her daughter, Armea, 31.

Sgt. Normand Belair said Deslauriers apparently was in good condition but shaken by the incident.

The fugitives burst into the women's apartment about 3 p.m. MDT, seeking refuge after a police trap to arrest the pair failed outside a building in the tough, working-class neighborhood of St. Henri in south-central Montreal.

Police said the brothers were wanted on suspicion of two armed holdups.

About 75 police officers surrounded the three-story building and reinforcements were summoned to control the crowd of more than 500 spectators.

As word of the purchase was spreading, though, the federal Civil Aeronautics Board issued a long-expected order that could cost Transwestern significant penalties. The commuter airline may face fines for abruptly halting one of its two mandatory daily flights between the Boise and Twin Falls this spring.

The airline was required by law to give 90-days advanced notice, CAB Western Region director John Smith said Tuesday. "In this case, none was given."

The federal board has ordered its legal division to research the case for possible prosecution.

DeMeyer got only slap on the wrist

Back in early July, when former Idaho deputy attorney general Virginia DeMeyer was convicted of manslaughter for killing two children with her car, we wrote that the jury's verdict was a just one.

We wish we could say the same for the sentence DeMeyer received this week from Judge Arthur Oliver.

In our opinion, the 30 days in jail is only a slap on the wrist, which sends a message of weakness to every would-be drunken driver in Idaho.

During the trial, DeMeyer's attorney argued that she will pay for the tragedy the rest of her life. We doubt it. Rather, it looks now that she will walk away in 30 days essentially free of any responsibility for having several drinks at a bar, getting behind the wheel of a car, driving down the highway and killing two children walking on the road.

Those who ask for a tougher sentence run the risk of being accused of wanting blood. No severe sentence, it can be argued, can bring back the two children's lives.

True enough. But despite the visibility of the case, which has brought its own kind of public retribution, we think Judge Oliver could have cut a more middle course between sending DeMeyer to prison and letting her off.

The latter, minus 30 days, is what she got.

A fairer sentence, in our opinion, would have been a year in jail, served in the Ada County Jail, as well as probation, community-service work and suspension of her right to practice law or disbarment.

The suspension or disbarment decision hasn't been made, but don't hold your breath that the legal profession will go out of its way to punish one of its own here.

You can bet the ranch DeMeyer will be practicing law again, just as you can bet some "expert" on drunken driving soon will be telling us how we need "tougher" laws.

Maybe we do, but in this case, we'd settle for tougher enforcement. The law was tough enough and the jury's recommendation a fair one that DeMeyer serve no more than two-and-a-half years in jail for conviction of two counts of manslaughter.

Instead, Judge Oliver gave her 30 days. That works out to two weeks in jail for each child's life. Not much is it?

In American society we give wide discretion to judges to impose sentences in the interest of fairness for both society and defendants. In this case, we think the judge has erred.

"We are surrounded by dangerous paranoiacs, Comrade. — Call in an air strike!!"

War Powers Act: Nothing truly new

WASHINGTON — While the debate is phrased in the loftiest of language, there is more politics than statesmanship in the current wrangle between President Reagan and Congress — largely the Democrats in Congress — over Reagan's failure to invoke the War Powers Act regarding the role of U.S. Marines in Lebanon.

This shouldn't surprise anyone. If it weren't for politics, there wouldn't be a War Powers Act. The War Powers Act seeks to balance the constitutional duty of Congress to declare war and the constitutional duty of the president to serve as commander in chief. The act has fought major wars in Korea and Vietnam since Congress last declared war in 1941.

Nevertheless, any president would be insane to get us into a war that the nation and Congress did not support. The War Powers Act provides one mechanism for demonstrating that support. It is a dubious mechanism, at least part of which is unconstitutional.

This legislation says, among other things, that the president should consult with Congress to the extent possible before engaging U.S. troops in hostilities or in situations where hostilities are likely.

If the president does place our troops in such a position, he should immediately notify Congress. This notification starts the clock running. If Congress simply does nothing, the troops must be pulled out within 60 days, plus 30 more if necessary for their safe withdrawal.

The War Powers Act also provides that if the president fails to so notify Congress, the legislators can remove the troops by passing a concurrent resolution in both houses. A concurrent resolution does not require the president's signature.

In 1973, when the act was passed, Richard M. Nixon was president, and in trouble over Watergate.

The original bill passed the House on July 18, 1973, by a vote of 241 to 170. After the Senate had passed its own version and a conference between the House and Senate produced the final bill, the House passed it on Oct. 12 by a vote of 238 to 123, almost enough to override a veto.

What changed between July 18 and Oct. 12? The Senate Watergate Committee was investigating the Watergate burglary. Five days after the first House vote, President Nixon refused to provide tape recordings of telephone conversations involving the burglary and its coverup. The Senate committee and the special prosecutor both moved to subpoena them.

On July 26, the president rejected the subpoenas.

On Aug. 29, Judge John J. Sirica ordered that they be produced in his federal District Court. On Oct. 12, the day of the House vote, the Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed Judge Sirica's decision.

On Oct. 18, President Nixon vetoed the War Powers Act. He said it was unconstitutional, and this year, in an unrelated case, the U.S. Supreme Court has said he was right. Congress cannot compel him to withdraw troops by a concurrent resolution not requiring his signature.

On Nov. 7, 1978, the House voted 284 to 135 to override his veto and the Senate quickly followed, 75 to 18.

What had happened between Oct. 12 and Nov. 7? The famous Saturday Night Massacre occurred Oct. 20 during which Attorney General Elliot Richardson resigned rather than fire Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox, and Deputy Attorney General William D. Ruckelshaus was fired because he wouldn't fire Cox.

On Oct. 21, the House Democrats agreed to start impeachment proceedings. On Nov. 4, Time magazine said the president had lost the ability to govern and should resign.

So we have a War Powers Act, one half unconstitutional, the other half allowing Congress to force the withdrawal of troops simply by doing nothing. The Democrats say the president must comply with it. He won't. So, what else is new?

Otis Pike, a former congressman, writes for Newhouse News Service.

Society opposes harmful development

Interior Secretary James Watt has taken us to task for what he claims is hypocritical behavior.

"I will appreciate your efforts to keep the National Audubon Society from criticizing the Reagan Administration for policies it obviously so thoroughly embraces for itself," he said in a recent letter to the Society's chairman.

Mr. Watt was responding to our findings — based largely on a "threats and conflicts" survey by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service — that the 411-unit National Wildlife Refuge System is suffering from structural pressures inside as well as outside the refuges. We had charged the Administration with aggravating an already serious problem by pushing hard to increase refuge revenues from cattle grazing, timbering, farming, oil and gas extraction, commercial fishing, hydroelectric power generation and trapping — while the wildlife and wildlife habitat, which the refuges were created to protect, could be lost.

In answering these charges, Mr. Watt stressed that the Audubon Society itself, on its own Rainey Wildlife Sanctuary in Louisiana, has been producing natural gas for many years to the benefit of both its balance sheet and the herons, egrets, alligators, and other wild creatures that live there.

How can we pursue economic activities on our own Audubon sanctuary, Mr. Watt asks, and then castigate him for doing the same thing?

The Interior Secretary is correct in that development can be consonant with wildlife protection. Under carefully controlled circumstances, in some non-wilderness areas, certain economic uses can indeed be compatible. At the Rainey sanctuary, the gas extraction operation has been designed to actually increase the area of freshwater marsh by sealing off access canals created for the drilling platform, thus improving habitat diversity. This development is being carried out under the close supervision of a wildlife manager who determines the timing and conditions under which the drilling operation will be undertaken.

On the national wildlife refuges, however, the priorities appear to have been reversed. On many refuges, development now takes precedence over wildlife protection.

These problems are not new — they've been building for decades — but what is new and especially worrisome is a Reagan Administration policy that relegates wildlife on public lands — including the wildlife refuges — to a secondary status.

A dramatic example is provided by the administration's "stewardship" (a favorite word of Secretary Watt) of St. Matthew Island, a wilderness of arctic tundra jutting out of the Bering Sea about 250 miles from mainland Alaska. Seals, sea lions, walrus and seven species of endangered whales feed along its shores. As many as five million seabirds nest there.

A few weeks ago James Watt conveyed 4,000 acres of St. Matthew to a native corporation in exchange for other lands, a step that would enable the Atlantic Richfield Corporation to lease the native-owned portion of the island and build a major oil-exploration base there.

The Reagan Administration claims the land transfer is in keeping with the ANILCA (National Interest Lands Conservation Act). The Audubon Society claims it is a transparent attempt to circumvent the law and has filed suit to block the action. If Mr. Watt succeeds with this maneuver, none of the lands that Congress included in the national park, refuge and wilderness systems in Alaska will be safe from development.

Yes, Mr. Watt is right when he points out that commercial activity and ecological protection can sometimes peacefully co-exist. But Mr. Watt and the other resource managers of the Reagan Administration have consistently put all-out commodity production ahead of wildlife protection in sensitive areas of the outer continental shelf, in the national forests, and even in federal wilderness areas which the Administration has tried — so far unsuccessfully — to exploit.

Few conservationists oppose development and economic growth per se, as Mr. Watt and his boss pretend. What we do oppose is the kind of development that needlessly degrades and destroys natural values. What we will continue to resist is the use-it-up-now-and-to-hell-with-the-future mentality that lamentably governs the Reagan Administration's approach to our natural heritage.

Russell W. Peterson is president of the National Audubon Society.

Letters

Bible strong counter

Teaching the Bible as literature isn't all that difficult as James Kilpatrick suggests in "Teaching Bible as Literature Difficult," in last Thursday's newspaper. A teacher needs only to read the material and refrain in any efforts at "preaching."

The story of Ruth is the finest little pastoral in all literature. I don't expect any modern genre to come up with anything to equal the elegance of Samson's keep, the maturation of King Nebuchadnezzar sent out to eat grass to cure his pride. No actor has the quality of voice to properly render the "golden boy" oration of Shakespeare's Hamlet.

Shakespeare read the Bible. As a Shakespeare aficionado I can detect the influence of the Bible in his works; like Macbeth referring to our life as a tale that is told; Prospero saying "our little life is rounded with a sleep"; the 11th sonnet echoes the Song of Solomon's "love is strong as death."

Human's emotional department is an important part of the mental; this is literature, music, and art come in.

The Bible is tops in presenting the noblest emotions and countering the Pippant, shallow, and dark. Children reared in an atmosphere where the sublime emotions predominate seldom go too far wrong.

How many Idahoans?

In peace there's nothing so honorable as a person of meditation and humility; but when the sounds of war drift around Reagan's ears, off to Lebanon we go. With thousands of Marines to keep the peace, few seem to notice those who don't die. What of those living with hard-fought rage? What of those who don't make the front page? Where are they from and how can one know? How many Marines are from Idaho?

Family farewell recalls memories of previous departure

Last week I witnessed a minor family drama, watching my daughters say goodbye to one another.

My older daughter was leaving for college. They stood in the middle of the living room and hugged each other for a long time. Wordlessly, the younger sister began to cry. The older one took a step forward with a voice checking her emotions said, "Well, I'd better go."

Thousands of brothers and sisters across the country play out this scenario each fall, as one leaves for college, for the first time. An older sibling leaving younger ones. This moment symbolizes their relationship. A cameo. A moment that raises to relief the comradeship which has developed over the years. A moment which reveals the underlying forces of love and competition between them.

In that moment I met my own departure from family, after high school graduation. My father was stationed in Germany with the U.S. Army at the time, and my parents drove us all to the port city of Bremerhaven, where I boarded a military ship for New York. When I hugged my younger brother goodbye, I didn't cry. I was too excited, too focused on the future, too scared of being on my own. I would no more have shown my fear; or my wrenching from home, to my brother, than I would have shown it to my father. I leaped into my anticipation to hide my emotions. In a sense, I had already left. My mother, sister, and brother were crying. My father and I had "wet eyes." I think I might have said, "Well, I'd better go."

An older sibling becomes an extra parent to younger brothers and sisters. By mere placement in the family. And often an older brother or sister will baby-sit the younger children. At 9 years old I was baby-sitting my brother. It colored our relationship. It gave my being older, taller, and more accomplished at things the imprint of parental authority. I accepted that authority easily. I could be tough on him. Correct him often. Make his mind more closely than necessary. Or warranted.

It allowed me to vent my jealousy for having to share my parents' love with him. We didn't speak that way, of course. I couldn't think that way, then. I had the feelings, but not the words or the concepts, even. Looking back, it feels true to say it.

My brother and I have a good relationship. Although we don't see each other often, we have similar interests and used to have a similar world view. My brother was 23 when he sent me a letter asking me to stop acting like an "older brother." It took that letter for me to see that I was holding on to an old way of relating to him. That I was using the four years between us as a lever of authority. In the guise of knowing more, or having some wisdom.

I decided then that when I had a family I would never let my children baby-sit except in emergencies. I feel that it places an unnecessary burden on sibling relationships. Fortunately, we were able to keep that principle.

The comedian, Bill Cosby, had a routine a number of year ago in which he pretended to be an older brother teasing a younger one. The first time I heard it I wanted to call my brother and have him listen too. He would have recognized us. As I did. Mild teasing between siblings is an interesting strategy of interaction. It is normally only done to someone with whom you share a caring relationship. But, it reveals the loving. At the same time it reveals an underlying aggression, in a socially acceptable manner.

I told my brother scary stories before we went to sleep. These times when we had to share a bedroom. I took pleasure in beating him at games. In using his subordinate position against him, in out-guessing him.

In spite of that we became good friends. For a while we attended the same university. During those years no one knew me better than my brother. We shared confidences. And he learned how to return a tease. Give and take was more even.

My brother, with a precision that comes close to elegance, returned those boyhood years of teasing during a graduate level German language class. I had been an A student, and a favorite of the professor for a number of years. Had even made his language lab tapes in German, but found my interest lagging. My brother had taught himself four languages before he left high school. We were in the same class. I wasn't paying attention when the professor asked me a question in German, so I stalled. My brother leaped over and whispered an answer. I quickly repeated what he had said. Everyone in the class laughed. The professor gave me a nasty look. Then he asked if anyone knew the answer. My brother promptly raised his hand and gave the correct response.

All of us hope our children will grow up to be friends. As I watched the parting between my daughters, I felt their emotions, and relived those between my brother and me at the same juncture. And I realized that all the years of playing together and working together for shared dreams is a strong foundation for the future of their relationship. This parting is only temporary. Merely a step to a mature friendship between equals.

Dissidents upstage pro-Marcos march

FERDINAND MARCOS
Comes under fire

By FERNANDO DEL MUNDO
United Press International

MANILA, Philippines — Thousands of office workers demanding the resignation of President Ferdinand Marcos broke up a pro-government demonstration Tuesday, pelting marchers with coins, rocks, eggs and firecrackers.

Many of the pro-government marchers appeared to be city-employed street sweepers who dropped their "We love Marcos" signs in a mad scramble for the coins thrown by the opposition.

It was the second time in four days the white collar workers paralyzed Manila's Makati financial district.

Marcos vowed not to step down, saying it would take more than speeches and violence to make him give up power he has held for 18 years, including nearly 10 years under martial law.

"The presidency is an august covenant between the people and the president and I will continue to serve in this capacity in accordance with that mandate," Marcos told reporters.

The opposition said several people were willing to testify they saw a uniformed security man assassinate opposition leader Benigno Aquino, contradicting the government's claim he was shot by a criminal "gun-for-hire."

Some 20,000 executives, bank employees and secretaries overpowered 2,000 government workers and schoolchildren who had been ordered to show up at the pro-Marcos rally. They unfurled banners protesting the Aug. 21 assassination of Aquino and pelted the pro-Marcos demonstrators with coins, water balloons, rocks, eggs and firecrackers.

Police said at least two people were hospitalized after being hit by rocks during the rally.

In downtown Manila, some 8,000 students burned effigies of Marcos and President Reagan, who plans to visit the Philippines in November. Aquino's younger brother, Agapito, throttled the Marcos effigy and slapped the Reagan figure in the head.

"If Reagan comes to the Philippines, he's as mad as Marcos," Aquino said.

MOSCOW (UPI) — President Yuri Andropov, ending a 24-day silence, reaffirmed Tuesday Moscow's pledge to freeze deployment of nuclear weapons and warned against new efforts to plunge the world into a Cold War.

Andropov's comments, carried by the official news agency Tass, made no direct mention of the Sept. 1 destruction of a Korean Air Lines 747 by a Russian jet firing air-to-air missiles. All 259 people on board, including 61 Americans were killed in the attack.

But Andropov appeared to allude to Western denunciations of the jetliner incident in his response to an appeal by West German Parliament members for Soviet help ending the arms race.

"Early in the 70s the U.S.S.R. and the FRG (West Germany) were at the cradle of détente together," he said.

Nicaraguan rebels assemble air force

United Press International

Nicaraguan rebels said Tuesday they had assembled a fleet of 15 small airplanes and 25 pilots to carry out a new wave of air attacks against targets in Nicaragua.

Inside Nicaragua, residents of a salt marsh inlet located on the Pacific coast said the military has been smuggling weapons and ammunition to leftist Salvadoran rebels for three years from an island.

It was the first testimony that the Marxist-led Sandinista government has been supplying the Salvadoran rebels, who are fighting the U.S.-backed government.

The arms traffic was the primary reason given by the Reagan administration for its support of Nicaraguan rebels. The Nicaraguan government has consistently denied it supports the Salvadoran insurgents.

In a further sign of how the fighting is spilling over borders, a Costa Rican official said the rebel plane that bombed the airport in Managua Sept. 8 took off from Costa Rica and went to a Salvadoran military base before the attack.

Spokesmen for the army and President Alvaro Magaña said they had no comment on the report.

In San Jose, Costa Rica, the Democratic Revolutionary Alliance or ARDE announced that a fleet of 15 small airplanes and a command of 25 pilots are carrying out air raids against the Nicaraguan government.

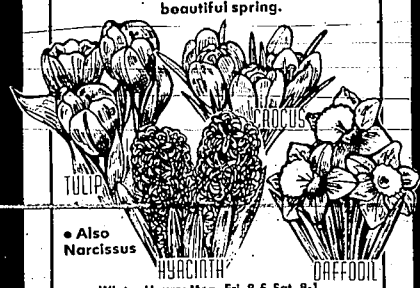

According to the ARDE, most of the 15 Cessna Baron aircraft, which are equipped with rocket and bomb launchers, were bought in the United States and were donated by friends of Ederis Fustera, former Sandinista assistant defense minister, known as Commander Zero.

Pastora, who left the Sandinistas in 1981 because of the government's Marxist drift, now heads the ARDE.

The rebel group said that most of the 25 pilots have been trained to fly at low altitudes to avoid being picked up by the radar — a tactic used in the September 8 bombing of Managua's international airport, the rebels claimed.

Study refutes welfare myth

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — The stereotype that black families on welfare tend to produce welfare-dependent children was shattered Tuesday in a 15-year study by the University of Michigan.

The national study by the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research concluded blacks from welfare-dependent families were no more likely to receive welfare as adults than were blacks from non-welfare families.

Researchers based their conclusions on data collected from 1,255 blacks and whites from a cross section of economic backgrounds who left their parents' homes since 1968.

"Longtime welfare dependency as a child does not cause longtime welfare dependency as an adult, at least among blacks," researchers wrote in their final report summarizing the 15-year study.

Survey director Martha Hill said the survey was done for the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, which will use the report in policymaking decisions.

Mrs. Hill said the survey did not include enough whites from welfare homes to analyze whether poor whites remained dependent on welfare. According to the study, blacks were eight times more likely to be raised in longtime, welfare-dependent homes than whites.

Ms. Hill said another important finding from the survey was that the influence of parents is not an important factor in whether a child will grow up needing welfare.

"It's surprising, but parental attitudes had little to do with whether children ended up on welfare," she said.

Ms. Hill said the study also revealed that 57 percent of both blacks and whites from poverty-level families were not impoverished as adults.

"This is not to say that the poor are not at a greater risk of being poor in the next generation," she said. "Certainly they are. But we observe a great deal of income mobility from one generation to the next, even among the poorest households."

Senate panel rejects freeze, mutual build down proposal

By PATRICIA KOZA
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee rejected Tuesday a resolution calling for a nuclear weapons freeze and defeat on a the vote a measure proposing a mutual "build-down" of the two superpowers' arsenals.

The committee then voted, however, to send both measures to the full Senate with negative recommendations.

During a day-long debate, the committee first voted 10-7 against reporting the freeze resolution to the Senate with a favorable vote.

Sen. Edward Zorinski, D-Neb., joined the committee's nine Republicans in voting against the measure that calls for a "mutual, verifiable" freeze and reduction in the testing, production and deployment of nuclear weapons. It is bitterly opposed by the administration.

resolution chiefly sponsored by Chairman Charles Percy, R-Ill., calling for a "double build-down" of nuclear weapons.

The original build-down concept, labeled "Orwellian" by liberal critics, calls for destruction of two old nuclear weapons for every new one deployed. Percy's "double build-down" would take into account the destructive power as well as the numbers of nuclear weapons, as an alternate to a freeze resolution.

Approval of it failed on a 3-8 tie vote.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who has built his presidential campaign around support for the nuclear freeze, suggested sending both resolutions to the full Senate "without prejudice."

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., Senate sponsor of the freeze resolution, told supporters: "We face an uphill battle in the Senate, and we may not win on the first vote. But I intend to raise this issue again and again until a mutual and verifiable nuclear weapons freeze becomes the policy of our nation."

The committee then voted 10-4 to report both resolutions with negative recommendations.

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., the committee's ranking Democrat, reflected the views of most of his party's colleagues in reaffirming endorsement of the freeze resolution and criticizing the build-down concept as one "which in my view could well lead to a build-up."

Reagan has endorsed the idea of a build-down, but has not agreed to any specifics.

A heavily amended freeze resolution passed the Democratic-led House last spring.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., Senate sponsor of the freeze resolution, told supporters: "We face an uphill battle in the Senate, and we may not win on the first vote. But I intend to raise this issue again and again until a mutual and verifiable nuclear weapons freeze becomes the policy of our nation."

Police probe brutal family killing

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (UPI) — Police said Tuesday they had no suspects in the slaying of a newspaper editor, his wife and son, and beated up patrols in the family's affluent neighborhood.

Police appealed to the public for help solving the slayings of Dan Osborne, 35, editorial page editor of the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel, his wife Jane, 34, and their son, Ben, 11.

Two-year-old Caroline Osborne survived, roaming the house in a bloody nightgown for more than two days after the killings. She was in satisfactory condition after surgery to repair damage from a sexual assault, doctors said.

Allen County Coroner Roland Ahlbrand said autopsies indicate Osborne and his son were probably killed as they slept Friday night or early Saturday.

"They were killed as they were lying in bed, and died from multiple blows to the head," Dr. Roland Ahlbrand said. "In all probability, they never moved."

But, he said, Mrs. Osborne's jaw was broken as she tried to fight off her attacker.

Assistant Police Chief David J.

Allen County Coroner Roland Ahlbrand said autopsies indicate Osborne and his son were probably killed as they slept Friday night or early Saturday.

"They were killed as they were lying in bed, and died from multiple blows to the head," Dr. Roland Ahlbrand said. "In all probability, they never moved."

But, he said, Mrs. Osborne's jaw was broken as she tried to fight off her attacker.

Assistant Police Chief David J.

Racine said there were no suspects or leads in the first triple slaying in Fort Wayne in memory.

Tests were being conducted on a bloody baseball bat and a large portable radio covered with dried blood and matted hair. Crime lab technicians searched for more evidence at the home.

Police working overtime increased patrols in the family's affluent neighborhood, the scene of several recent break-ins, thefts from vehicles and at least one assault. A 24-hour phone hotline was established.

House passes new farm bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House passed by a 300-100 vote and sent to the Senate Tuesday compromise legislation to require earlier announcements of government wheat and feed grain programs.

The compromise, worked out between the House Agriculture Committee and the administration, avoided a vote to override President Reagan's veto of legislation passed by Congress this summer to require earlier announcements.

A veto override vote had been scheduled, but instead House Agriculture Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, called up the compromise for floor action.

Under the compromise, the administration accepted earlier announcement dates in the vetoed legislation. But Agriculture Secretary John Block was given discretionary powers to change the programs within 30 days after each deadline if there is a significant change in the supply of affected crops.

The deadline for announcing the government program for next year's feed grain crops would be Sept. 30, instead of a Nov. 15 deadline in current law. The deadline for the 1985 feed-grains program would be Sept. 30, 1984.

The wheat program for next year already has been announced. The deadline for announcing the 1985 wheat program would be July 1, 1984, instead of Aug. 15.

Youth center may bring legal hassles

BOISE (UPI) — Problems surrounding the Idaho Youth Services Center have left the state vulnerable to civil action, and the juvenile institution might face a court-ordered closure unless corrective action is taken, two consultants say.

Several courts in other parts of the country have closed such facilities, or have transferred certain children out of such facilities, and those types of dangers, with the related danger of civil liability, are indeed possible," said Orlando Martinez, state youth services director in Colorado.

Martinez, a consultant hired by Idaho health and welfare officials to study the controversial eastern Idaho reform school, said a "lack of separate facilities for different classes of offenders poses potentially serious legal problems for the state.

"There did not exist, at least from what I could determine, a very clear classification system," he said.

He referred to various court decisions saying an offender must be placed in the least restrictive environment related to the seriousness of his crime. "The facility needs major renovation or replacement," Martinez added. "And the staffing patterns do not seem to be those of the type that I would think necessary to deal with youth in confinement like this, (and) very limited education is provided."

Martinez, appearing on the Idaho Educational Public Broadcasting System production "Idaho Reports" Monday night, said the Youth Services Center fits a pattern of outdated juvenile institutions in several Western states.

The reform school is in a rural area, "out of sight, out of mind," and beset by friction between younger, newer staff members and long-time employees; the Colorado official said.

"My impression was that it is a facility which needed a great deal of attention and had not been getting it over the last few years," he said.

Health and Welfare Department Director Rose Bowman, who appeared on the same program, said her office is implementing recommendations made by Martinez and another consultant, University of Idaho Professor James Macdonald.

Macdonald said the state is vulnerable to civil action because "sociopathic" juveniles are held alongside those with emotional or drug- or alcohol-related problems.

Arrests for DUI decrease

BOISE (UPI) — Far fewer drunken-driving complaints were filed by law officers during July — the first month Idaho's stricter statute was in effect — than in the previous months of 1983, the administrator of the state Supreme Court says.

Carl Bianchi said an average 1,082 complaints were issued monthly from January through June. But in July, he said, only 738 citations were written — a 32-percent decrease.

The July, 1983, figures also reflected a decrease of 14 percent from the number of arrests logged during the same month a year ago, Bianchi said.

Court officials and prosecutors said the reduction may be due, to heightened public awareness of the tougher law adopted by the 1983 Legislature and to a greater reluctance by police to make arrests in the absence of strong evidence.

Prosecutors in Canyon and Ada counties said more people are now pleading innocent to charges of driving under the influence of alcohol and are demanding jury trials than when the old law was in effect.

"We are finding people are not pleading guilty as frequently as before the new law became effective," Canyon County Prosecutor Richard Harris said.

Ada County Prosecutor Greg Bower said Tuesday his office has "noticed a trend that our dispositions of DUI cases are taking longer — more court appearances and more hearings."

If the trend continues, Harris predicted his agency may eventually be forced "to have one deputy prosecutor, doing DUI cases entirely."

But both men cautioned the new statute has been in effect too short a time to draw any conclusions on its long-term impacts. Officials said August complaint figures were not yet available.

The law stiffens penalties for driving while intoxicated, but raises the blood-alcohol level necessary for conviction from .08 to .10.

Steve Bouch, administrator of the Third District Court in Caldwell, said he believes people are being more careful about driving — more drinking but less driving — after the tougher law.

Jones probes malfeasance

BOISE (UPI) — Attorney General Jim Evans has confirmed his office is investigating possible criminal activity in the Idaho Department of Labor and Industrial Services, whose director was fired last week by Gov. John Evans.

Jones said investigators, at the request of Legislative Auditor Bruce Balderson, have focused the main thrust of their probe on the purchase of miscellaneous equipment for the agency.

He said further details on the inquiry would not be released until the case can be discussed with Ada County Prosecutor Greg Bower late this week or early next week.

Department Director Sam Nettinga was dismissed from his post Friday as Evans made final preparations for a gubernatorial trip to the People's Republic of China.

Aides to Evans have declined to explain why Nettinga was fired. The director will be replaced by former gubernatorial staff assistant George Tway.

Pat Vaughn, Evans' chief of staff, also declined to say why Bob Gee, the department's administrator, was placed on leave with pay last Friday.

Jones said Balderson's office found possible problems in the department during a routine audit. He said the result of the attorney general's investigation has been turned over to the legislative auditor and the governor.

"I have asked the governor and Balderson to keep the matter confidential until I talk to the prosecutor," Jones said Monday.

Balderson said he would not release the results of his audit until it is given to the Legislature's Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee in November.

Meanwhile, Nettinga said Monday, "I just don't have any comment on it at all. I don't know what is going on."

Ford predicts bright future

DEARBORN, Mich. (UPI) — Ford Motor Co. officials Tuesday predicted a 12 to 15 percent increase in industry sales during the 1984 model year, and said they hope to increase Ford's share of the car market to 18 percent.

However, the company's vice president of sales warned the automaker is within 5 percent of total capacity in its plants and there is a shortage of several key components.

Ford Executive Vice President Harold Poling told reporters the company thinks U.S. sales will increase 12 to 15 percent in the 1984 model year, which starts Sept. 28. This would mean total car and truck sales of about 10.4 million units.

Steel relief seen for 1984

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — American steelmakers and steelworkers must suffer through another "grim year" in 1983 but can look forward to some relief in 1984, a prominent industry analyst said Tuesday.

"There's a very good chance we could turn the corner in 1984," said the Rev. William Hogan, professor of economics at Furman University in South Carolina.

Last year was the worst since the Depression for major steelmakers, which lost a combined $3.3 billion. Leading companies were in the red for another half-billion dollars in the first six months of 1983.

But Hogan said the bottom line will look better this year because steelmakers won't incur massive losses through plant shutdowns.

Miner finds giant nugget

BRASILIA, Brazil (UPI) — A giant gold nugget worth $1 million and the biggest ever found in Brazil was dug up by a prospector using the old fashioned panning method, a Mines and Energy Ministry spokesman said Tuesday.

The 137-pound, 80 percent pure nugget, which looks like a gold-plated meteorite, was found by prospector Julio de Deus Filho on Sept. 13.

Deus Filho is one of more than 10,000 prospectors using primitive sluicing and panning methods at the Serra Pelada mine 1,200 miles northwest of Rio de Janeiro.

Appointments may be made by calling the chamber office at 733-3974, Michael Dalton, executive director, said.

Heinz shareholders get more

PITTSBURGH, Pa. — Directors of the H.J. Heinz Co. have raised the quarterly dividend on current shares of common stock to 5 1/2 cents.

The dividend, increased by 17 percent from 46 cents, will be paid Oct. 10 on a pre-split basis to shareholders of record Sept. 23.

CCH pays 43 cents a share

CHICAGO — Directors of Commerce Clearing House, Inc., have declared a third quarter cash dividend of 43 cents a share.

The dividend is payable Oct. 26 to shareholders of record Sept. 30.

Fund account assets double

WASHINGTON — Assets of individual retirement accounts invested in mutual funds more than doubled during the 12 months through June, rising to $9.9 billion.

The Investment Company Institute, national association of mutual funds, said the increase was from $4.3 billion. The number of accounts invested in mutual funds also more than doubled, growing from 1.5 million to 3.6 million.

Of total assets, money market mutual funds had $3.7 billion while all other types had $6.2 billion.

Strike squeezes income

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The income of Americans edged up only 0.2 percent in August and spending skidded by the most in over a year.

Those changes were the result of a telephone strike, record heat and Hurricane Alella, the government said Tuesday.

Personal income increased at an annual rate of $5.5 billion in August

Seasonally adjusted, that is enough to generate $2.75 trillion in yearly income, or $11,749 for every man, woman and child in the U.S.

After-tax disposable income would amount to $10,051 per person in a year. That measure first topped $10,000 in July.

But personal spending, crucially important to keeping the recovery healthy, declined 0.3 percent in August, the department said, the worst reverse since June, 1982.

Spending jumped by 1.7 percent in May, but slumped to a 0.5 percent improvement in June and 0.4 percent in July.

The overall growth of personal income, mirrored by the rise in after-tax disposable income, was the weakest since February.

"That shows you that strikes, especially if they are lengthy, can be damaging to the economy," said the department's chief economist, Robert Ortner, referring to the telephone industry work stoppage that took about $416 million out of August payrolls.

"In the coming months we will see increases in personal income that will do a lot better than the 0.2 in August, and — a resumption in growth and spending," Ortner said.

However, the big gains in personal income recorded earlier this year, including a 1.2 percent jump in May, are probably not going to be repeated, said Ortner, because of a more fundamental moderation of the economic recovery.

Americans increased their savings while trimming spending.

Chicago grain

CHICAGO (UPI) — Tuesday's truck and rail bids for grain delivered to the city were flat, but the change from previous days was a 2-cent wheat advance to 10.30, 1.50¢-1.81¢ up 0.2¢-1.5¢.

No. 1 yellow soybeans: up 15 days, 1.50¢-1.81¢ up 0.2¢-1.5¢.

15 to 20 days, 8.80¢-1.10¢ up 1.5¢-1.81¢.

Dow cracks record as bulls come back

By FRANK W. SLUSSER
United Press International

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrial average climbed 15.25 points to a record 1,249.19 Tuesday.

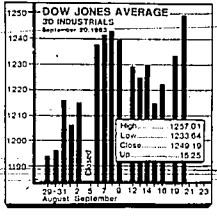

It set the record in a stock market rally triggered by investor hopes for easier credit and lower interest rates.

The Dow average of 30 blue-chip stocks, which rose 8.23 Monday, topped its previous high of 1,248.30 set on June 16 thanks to a late burst of buying. The Dow, which has hit new highs 24 times this year, now is up 472.26 since the bull market began Aug. 15, 1982.

The Dow Jones Tuesday just barely topped 7.20 to 590.02, just below its all-time high of 590.66 set June 27. Technical analysts said it was important for the two averages to move in tandem for the market to sustain its rally.

Brokers were impressed with the gains because many investors have automatic selling programs at the previous mark that blocked the Dow from rising four times in the past three months.

The New York Stock Exchange index rose 0.79 to 97.88 and the price of an average share increased 30 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index jumped 1.63 to 169.25. Advances totaled 1,013,594 among the 1,983 issues traded.

Big Board volume climbed to 103,650,000 shares from 85,630,000 traded Monday as institutions came off the sidelines to adjust their portfolios for the end of the third quarter.

"The market looks like it has gotten conviction after three months of being in the doldrums and we could be starting the second leg of the bull market," said L. Bradford Hay of Robert W. Baird & Co. Milwaukee.

"The fundamental reason for the market climbing is a growing belief the Fed is finally going to ease credit a bit," said a major analyst of Intersect Securities, Charlotte, N.C.

For the second consecutive day, federal funds rate banks charge one another for overnight loans dropped, this time to 9 1/2 percent from 9 3/4 percent. The bond market, rattled as the Treasury's three-day $14.25 billion refunding got underway and found many buyers.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 120,422,400 shares, up from the 99,163,000 traded Monday.

The American Stock Exchange index jumped 1.01 to 237.63 and the price of an average share rose seven cents. Advances topped declines 319,290 among the 821 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 9,137,300 shares compared with 7,552,050 Monday.

The National Association of Securities Dealers index of OTC stocks gained 1.53 to 303.34.

On the trading floor, Bankamerica was the most active NYSE-listed issue, off 1/4 to 2 1/4. American Telephone & Telegraph followed, up 3/4 to 87 1/4.

Diamond Shamrock was third, up 1/4 to 25 1/4. Signal Co. plans to sell its 6.8 million shares of Diamond Shamrock stock for about $164 million next month. Signal stock added 1/4 to 37.

On the Amex, Imperial Chemical led the actives, up 1/4 to 7 1/4. Dupont Holdings was third, unchanged at 1 1/4.

Claremont's active NYSE-listed stock added 1/4 to 17 1/4. The company won a $17.5 million Air Force contract for leasing transport aircraft.

What's what

Q: Why is the standard marathon race 26 miles 385 yards?
 A. Because the first of same, by royal request, started at Windsor Castle. It ended at Shepherd's Bush Stadium. That distance: 26 miles 385 yards. Incidentally, the starting gun was fired by the then 14-year-old Prince of Wales, later to become King Edward VIII. Youngest starter in Olympic history.

Q: Who was "The Rose Man of Sing Sing"?
 A. Charles Chaplin. Nobody promised him a rose garden, so he grew one for himself...in prison. I remember the accounts of him, in particular, to express your finest talents.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today's oncoming full moon finds you in the midst of winding up some conditions that have been confusing to you, so do them in a thorough and thoughtful manner.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)
 Get those duties ahead of you, handled well, then confer with an expert about the future, find out where you are headed.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20)
 Know what you desire the most and make plans to gain your aims, but be sure to confide in your loved ones.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21)
 Know what it is that bigwigs expect of you, as well as kin, and try to please them all. Then handle a civic task.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21)
 You, get ideas that should be whittled down to the practical level and put in motion quickly.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21)
 Handling business matters well is important now, and you can also get other persons in business to be of assistance to you.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22)
 Listen to the ideas of partners as well as express your own and reach a fine accord so that greater success is possible.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)

Flynt to get Christian magazine

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, is responding to publisher Larry Flynt's offer of free subscriptions to "the world's greatest porn magazine" by giving Flynt a subscription to a Christian magazine.

Flynt drew criticism Monday when he announced he was adding congressmen to the list of complimentary recipients to his magazine, which he called "the world's greatest porn magazine."

Grassley quickly replied. His staff released copies of a letter he sent to Flynt.

"Dear Larry," it began, "Since you've sent me a slice of your mind, I'd like to send you a slice of mine: You'll shortly receive your first installment of an annual subscription to Christianity Today. Peruse its pages and you'll give yourself sharper perceptions when dealing with my kind of Iowa mind."

In a letter to congressmen, Flynt said his magazine, Hustler, would keep them "up-to-date" on social issues.

Spokesmen for each of Utah's five Republican members of Congress said each would be writing a note to Flynt, declining the complimentary subscription.

Rep. Howard C. Nielson, R-Utah, was "absolutely appalled" that Flynt had sent the unsolicited copy of the magazine, said aide Bill Arsenault.

Father of quintuplets may get macho image

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The Mexican salesman whose wife gave birth to quintuplets last year and a boy born seven weeks premature — says friends will think he's "macho," but fertility pills had a part in the multiple births.

"With a little luck, all can make it," Dr. Louis Gluck said after he and his 30-member delivery team completed the Caesarean section births in full view of Alberto Garcia, the proud father.

The quint, ranging in weight from 3 pounds, 2 ounces to 4 pounds, were in good condition Tuesday, says Garcia's wife, Lorenza, 25. The couple, who already have a 3-year-old daughter, is from Guadalajara, Mexico.

Asked to speculate on the reaction of his friends, the bearded young father said, "They will consider me a Mexican macho."

Gluck said Mrs. Garcia had taken 100-milligram clomide fertility pills because of irregular ovulation.

"This is not an injected hormone like those responsible for most multiple births," Gluck said. "Multiple births with this particular drug are very unusual. There's even a relatively low level of twins."

After four successive girls were delivered, the delivery team burst into cheers when the final baby arrived. The chances of quintuplets are 1 in every 13 million deliveries.

The babies were named in order of arrival: Regina, Paula, Natalia, Gabriella, and Alberto Jr.

"The quinta are all in good condition," said Gwendolyn Reed, nursing supervisor at the University of California at San Diego Medical Center.

Gluck said the quint, about 7.5 weeks premature, were born at 32.5 weeks of development and a normal term is about 40 weeks.

The pediatrician said he was encouraged by the fact there was no lung disease and that the babies were receiving "almost no respiratory support."

"I cannot believe it," Garcia said through a hospital interpreter. "We knew it was going to be a multiple birth, and before it was a cause of anguish and uncertainty, but now I am very happy."

Robbers scatter loot along road

SAN BRUNO, Calif. (UPI) — Two men who held up a bank looted hundreds of dollars in loot from their speeding vehicle as it raced along a busy freeway.

"It was a ploy to distract everybody and get rid of the evidence," Police Sgt. Joe Lanthier said Tuesday. "We were afraid it would create a terrific traffic jam but it didn't."

Two suspects were subsequently arrested after police stopped their car.

More than $1,800 was taken in the robbery Monday at the Glendale Federal Saving and Loan. Lanthier said police had recovered about $1,300, much of it from along the freeway.

VA doctors can allow patients to die

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new rule allows Veterans Administration doctors, at the request of a dying patient, to give "do not resuscitate" orders barring the use of extraordinary life-saving methods, a VA official said Tuesday.

But doctors at the VA's 172 hospitals cannot just "pull the plug" on terminally ill veterans, she said.

Dr. Dorothy Rasinski, a physician and attorney with the VA, said the revised rule allows doctors at the administration's hospitals across the country to write a "no-code" or "do not resuscitate" order specifying that extraordinary measures not be used for a dying patient whose heart or lungs fail.

She said the rule, which went into effect three weeks ago, replaces a 1970 policy that required doctors to try to resuscitate a dying patient whose heart or lungs failed, and which forbade writing anything to the contrary on the patient's chart.

The "no-code" would apply to a patient who is "terminally ill and where it is anticipated he will die within the course of that period of hospitalization," Dr. Rasinski said. But "no one doing nothing positive to pull the plug," with the new regulation, she stressed.

Dr. Rasinski said the order to withhold extraordinary methods to save the patient's life can be written on a medical chart only after the "patient communicates verbally with the physician beforehand."

Sun Valley Co. sues over option tax issue

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — The Sun Valley Co. has filed a lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of Sun Valley's five-cent option tax.

The suit, filed in Fifth District Court in Halley, maintains that the law passed in 1978 by the Legislature authorizing the tax violates the state Constitution. The constitution, the suit says, prohibits the Legislature from creating any local taxes other than property taxes.

A group of Ketchum lodge and bar owners plan to file a similar suit against Ketchum by next week, says Alan Pennay, a member of the Wood River Lodging Association.

The suit brought by the Sun Valley Co. not only challenges the state law, but also the city's ordinance that created the tax. The suit says the ordinance goes beyond what the Legislature originally authorized the city could do.

Sun Valley Co. assistant manager Chuck Webb says the suit is necessary to end the tax, which his company

Suit angers city officials, squelches work toward compromise

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — City officials in Sun Valley were taking a hard line Tuesday, following the filing of a lawsuit that challenges the city's local option tax on constitutional grounds.

City Council members will recommend that residents approve a 5-year extension of the 5 percent liquor and "bed" tax when they go to the polls in November.

A public hearing on the tax and how it will appear on November's ballot was set for Oct. 4 at City Hall.

Council members also said they would move "decisively" in their efforts to bring together a coalition of Idaho resort cities. The coalition was established recently to lobby the Legislature on issues unique to resort cities, including alternatives to the local option tax.

And Councilman Bob McElfresh went so far Tuesday as to suggest that the city abandon any effort to reach some sort of compromise with Sun Valley Co. and other bar and lodging operators.

McElfresh said he had been in a conciliatory mood to work with the owners to change the tax until the suit was filed.

"But now, I don't think that that effort is warranted," McElfresh also said that any effort the city or the private sector makes in the Legislature will be clouded by the constitutional questions raised in the lawsuit. That cloud will make the lobbying effort more difficult, he said.

Other council members agreed that any effort would be more difficult because of the suit, but they also said the city should not abandon its work with the newly formed coalition.

Mayor Ruth Tieder will attend a meeting of the coalition in McCall next week, to establish a legislative agenda for the group.

"It's a thankless position in light of the lawsuit," she said, "because we were trying to give tax relief to the private sector."

Tieder said she still is committed to the coalition in what it might do for resort cities. But she said she would not give any special attention to the local option tax structure.

believes is too high and is driving tourists away from the Sun Valley area.

He says the tourist and convention business has become aware of the tax, and the Sun Valley Co. sees it as a deterrent against people coming to the area.

Sun Valley Co. is the city's largest contributor to the option tax, which has been collected since December 1978. In the suit, the company claims to have paid out $1.5 million since the tax's creation.

Although it is not stated in the lawsuit, the chief complaint is against the combination of local and state sales taxes, which charge tourists a total tax of 11.5 percent.

On top of the 5 percent local tax, visitors to Ketchum and Sun Valley pay a 4.5 percent state sales tax and a 2 percent state bed and liquor-by-the-drink tax.

In the suit, the Sun Valley Co. says the tax places it at a competitive disadvantage with other Idaho cities.

Other than claiming the Legislature did not have the power to create a local option tax, the suit also claims the local option tax is illegal:

- Because it restricts the tax to resort cities of 10,000 or less population, the law violates the constitution's ban against creating local or special taxation laws, the due-process clauses of the U.S. and state constitutions and the equal-protection clause of the U.S. Constitution.
- Because a law puts no limit on the maximum rate of the tax and does not set sufficient "controls, guidelines or standards," it is a wrongful delegation of the Legislature's power of taxation to the cities.

- Because the law is vague it violates the due-process clauses.

The suit also challenges the city's ordinance on two grounds.

Plugs shine

TWIN FALLS — Workers from the Twin Falls water department have been wiping away the last traces of an era recently.

Crews have been spray painting over the red, white and blue designs that were added to city fire hydrants seven years ago in celebration of the nation's bicentennial.

Don't look for latent symbolism here, says water superintendent Joe Koon. "The work is no more significant than any other 'maintenance program,'" he says.

The designs originally were the work of a variety of individuals, companies and service clubs, Koon says.

But some of the city hydrants have not been painted for 10 to 12 years, and even bicentennial paint does not help preserve them after about four, he says.

During the repainting, at least two hydrants also have been found painted by property owners to match their homes.

Koon says he knows of no city ordinance that specifically prohibits color-coordinating hydrants. And if some people truly have taken the color of their hydrant to heart, the city may be able to work something out on a case-by-case basis, he says.

"But we would like to try to keep them a standard color if we can," and generally, he says, "if we can't, and so far has been 'thank you for painting our hydrants — they sure look a lot better.'"

As for the passing of the bicentennial, "you can only hang on so long," he says.

Public views absent

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — About 30 persons attended a public hearing Tuesday in Twin Falls on state services and their funding. But according to one of those attending, one group was absent.

"The taxpayers public doesn't get here," Rep. Mack Nelbair, R-Paul, told Martin Peterson, the governor's new chief budget officer. "Probably everyone in this group (those attending) represents a special interest."

"The taxpayer public hearings should be held in the evenings to allow more public participation," Peterson, who recently replaced Steve Seward as director of Gov. John Evans' financial management office, told Nelbair last week, "but the hearings will be scheduled during the evening."

Tuesday's hearing was the first of eight such forums scheduled around the state, to present to residents the governor's areas of concern and to gauge public opinion on state spending and programs.

About a dozen persons, including three legislators, commented on the budgets and programs for education, parks and recreation, medical care and services for the elderly.

Carl Butler, the chairman of the Jerome County commission, told Peterson that the counties are in trouble because of reduced tax bases.

The "50-50" homeowners property tax exemption approved by the voters in November and modified by the Legislature last session — is aggravating that situation, he said.

He told Peterson the state could help by adding counties in funding these programs that provide services for the medically indigent. Individual cases can cost counties as much as $100,000, he said.

State Sen. John Barker, R-Buhl told Peterson the indigent program is "a concern that's a bit out of control" for the counties. He said the state should consider taking over responsibility for individual cases after medical expenses exceed a certain amount — such as $10,000.

Barker, the chairman of the Senate Health, Education and Welfare Committee, also told Peterson that there should be a sort of public utilities commission for medical care. Under such an arrangement, hospitals would have to come before an impartial board to request fee increases, he said.

Representatives of school districts and teachers' unions encouraged Peterson to increase funding for education. Union officials stressed the importance of making the salaries of Idaho teachers competitive with the salaries of teachers in other Western states.

An outline of the governor's budget priorities for the next fiscal year was made available at the hearing. Evans will be giving "special attention" to four areas in the state's 1985 budget: reinvigorating Idaho's economy, strengthening cities and counties, excellence in education and protecting the health and well-being of the state's residents, the governor stated.

But if those proposals mean increasing taxes, the governor should be wary.

Barker predicts that the effects of the "50-50" tax initiative, combined with a poor year for agriculture, will result in "special" proposals to signal from business: "Don't pass any more taxes."

It's hard to get a hook on values of trout farms

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

GOODING — The trout industry is unique. And attempts to determine what gives an individual production facility value — for the purposes of property-tax assessment — will meet with limited success, at best, trout producers told assessor officials Tuesday.

The county assessors from Gooding, Jerome and Twin Falls counties and officials from the State Tax Commission met with representatives of Magic Valley trout companies, hoping to learn more about the industry. That knowledge will help them assess the companies, and other taxpayers, fairly, they said.

Members of the Tax Commission and the assessors' offices plan to visit most of the area's trout-producing facilities, in an attempt to establish some guidelines for appraising the properties.

But industry representatives at Tuesday's meeting appeared skeptical.

Larry Cope, the president of Clear Springs Trout Co. of Buhl, said that for tax appraisers to be able to evaluate trout properties, they'd have to spend "six years in fishery school and (have) 10 years experience."

"If I were charged with that same task, I can tell you I wouldn't be able to come up with standards and guidelines," Cope said, adding that he'd seen a lot of variation between different appraisers.

"If you're looking for something to work clean and easy... I don't think you can do that in this business."

"My problem is the law says I will set a value on every piece of property in the county, one way or another," Gooding County Assessor Doyle Pugmire said. "I want to set standards; I want some way to defend myself."

Pugmire, who has been the Gooding County assessor since Sept. 1, arranged the meeting. He says he has noticed irregularities in the way the industry is assessed in Gooding County, one of which is that the industry has not been assessed on its ponds in the past. That topic was not discussed at the meeting.

Earl Lusk, a property tax specialist for the Tax Commission, told the gathering of 25 persons, "All we want is, what is a fair market value on the facility. That's not as easy as it sounds. One of the problems when we come out to you is we don't even know the questions to ask, and we may leave partially informed."

One producer, citing conflicting opinions within the industry on the best conditions and facilities for raising trout, replied, "How are assessors going to find out what's best, when the industry can't decide what's best?"

Lawrence Smith, whose small family operation sells trout to the area's major producers, said his facility is worth less than a similar facility held by one of the larger companies because the market for his fish is less certain than for the larger companies.

Other industry representatives noted that production facilities may represent nearly equal levels of investment, but because of improper design or less favorable natural conditions, one operation may be worth more than the other.

Lusk said the appraisers can, and should, take into account risk factors that may be associated with the size of a particular facility, as well as reduced values that may occur from a slump in the industry, such as one caused by reduced demand.

But he said the tax officials and appraisers need additional information on the industry before they can adjust for other factors, such as superior natural growing conditions or obsolete facilities.

"If a fish farm is worth $108,000 and a house is worth $108,000, they should be taxed the same amount. Cost is just one consideration. The real test is if it went on the market," how would it sell, he said.

First frost nips valley

JEROME — In addition to some frosted garden vegetables, there may have been light crop damage Tuesday in some areas of Magic Valley, according to Robert Oberholser, the Jerome County Extension Service agent.

The temperature probably dropped to 28 or even 26 degrees early Tuesday morning in some areas along the Snake River — cold enough to nip late-maturing beans, "bird's eye" alfalfa and possibly feed corn, he said.

Oberholser said he received calls Tuesday from a number of farmers concerned about possible damage.

"Any of the beans that are cut and in bed rows would be hurt," he said, "but those still in the field and not yet mature could be damaged by the light frost."

In addition, he said, feed corn is dried out by the frost, and unless farmers put water with it when it goes into the silage pit, it could spoil.

Any third-cutting hay that was still in the field and uncut may have suffered a little damage, he said.

"At this point, I think damage would be pretty slight, but gardens may have been hit harder. If the tomatoes weren't covered, they were probably killed," National Weather Service forecasters say the clear, cold conditions should give way to a warming trend today.

Chamber seeks to land jet carrier

MIKE DOLTON Lobbies for carrier

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Business and community leaders in Twin Falls are mounting a letter-writing campaign to attract an airline that uses passenger jets into the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport.

Mike Dolton, the executive director of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, says government officials from Twin Falls and Sun Valley are supporting the attempt, and at least a dozen business interests have sent pleas to potential airlines and the federal Civil Aeronautics Board during the past few months.

The two commuter airlines currently providing service to the airport — Transwestern Airlines and Sky West Airlines — offer good service, but they have not convinced a large segment of the flying public to use them, he says.

"Seventy percent of the people that could use the airport don't," Dolton says. "People like to fly in comfort, whether it's short or not."

The "Magic Valley" also needs a direct jet link to major markets, which commuters don't provide, he says.

The chamber and other officials have concentrated their efforts recently on courting Pacific Express, a Chico, Calif.-based airline with an all-jet fleet.

The Civil Aeronautics Board on Friday opened up the Twin Falls-Boise corridor for bids that could yield a government subsidy for the winning carrier. Pacific Express has said it intends to bid. Also expected to enter the bidding are Sky West and

Emergency-room tours offered

TWIN FALLS — "Know Your Emergency Department," a program of lectures and tours, designed to make the public more aware of emergency procedures, will be hosted by Magic Valley Regional Medical Center this Thursday and Friday.

Emergency-room doctors will explain how to recognize an emergency, what to do, and what happens when the victim arrives at the hospital. Other presentations will cover how to treat fevers in children, home treatment of sprains and major warning signs of cardiac-respiratory problems.

The nursing staff will conduct tours of the hospital's emergency room.

The programs will run from 7 to 9:30 each evening. They are free of charge, but participants should register in advance by calling 737-2167.

Accident brings DUI charge

JACKPOT — A Kimberly man was arrested Tuesday morning after a three-car accident 11 miles north of Jackpot on U.S. 93.

Douglas Duane Starr, 24, of 428 Wilson Road, is being held in lieu of $300 bond in the Twin Falls County Jail. He has been charged with driving while intoxicated.

Before he was booked into jail, Starr was treated and released for injuries at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, according to Twin Falls County Sheriff Jim Munn.

According to the sheriff's report, Starr was northbound at 9:41 a.m., when he began to pass a truck driven by Albert L. Coburn, 64, of Morton, Wash. A van driven by Arthur E. Brant Jr., 56, of Phoenix, Ariz., was southbound and alongside Coburn's van.

When he passed, Starr's vehicle hit the left rear of a trailer pulled by Brant and then it bounced into the left rear corner of a trailer pulled by Coburn.

After the collision, the two out-of-state men stopped on the side of the road. Starr's vehicle continued until it went off the west side of the highway and rolled over twice.

There were no injuries to the other drivers or their passengers.

There was an estimated $1,500 damage to Starr's car and Brant's van, and $3,000 to Coburn's trailer and truck.

Police don't like 'garden'

TWIN FALLS — A 23-year-old man has been accused of doing some illegal gardening.

Edward C. Boyd, of 1050 Parkway Drive in Twin Falls, was arrested Tuesday in Fifth District Magistrate Court on a felony charge — manufacturing a controlled substance, marijuana.

According to the probable-cause statement, an informant tipped Twin Falls police that marijuana plants were being "tended" in the back yard of Boyd's residence. With a search warrant obtained Friday, police observed from a neighbor's yard that there were 14 plants growing in the yard, according to the statement.

On Monday, Boyd turned himself in to police.

Boyd has been released on his own recognizance. No preliminary hearing date has been set.

California escapee arrested

BURLEY (UPI) — An escapee from a Los Angeles County juvenile detention center, who investigators lived nearby the youth camp, was arrested Tuesday in Burley.

Keith Mosley, 18, was a runaway and is "not a suspect in any other crimes," said Sgt. Leroy Chastain said, but he added that investigators want to talk to the young man about the Friday killing of Phillip Vodon.

A spokesman for the Cassia County Sheriff's Department said Los Angeles investigators indicated they would come to Burley to question Mosley.

Vodon, 62, a rancher and retired corrections officer, was fatally shot at his home near the small community of Lake Hughes on Friday morning. His ranch is adjacent to Camp Mendehall, an honor camp for juvenile offenders, ages 16 to 18.

Burley authorities were notified that the teenager might be headed toward Idaho because he has a relative living in Declo.

At 11 a.m. Tuesday, the boy turned himself in at the Burley police station. He was being held later in the day in the Cassia County Jail.

Health council meets today

TWIN FALLS — Sub-area Council IV of the Idaho Health Systems Agency will meet today at 7 p.m. at the Region IV Development Association office, 1300 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls.

On the agenda will be the introduction of the officers elected this summer.

Bob Campbell of Jerome is the new chairman of the group, which is composed with health planning in the Magic Valley. Campbell replaces Everett Ward of Richfield. Janet King of Rupert has been named the vice president, and Audrey Harper has been elected secretary-treasurer.

Other business today will include a report on the council's project to create a handbook of referral information and resources concerning child abuse.

Center offers stress class

TWIN FALLS — The Center for New Directions of the College of Southern Idaho will hold a class on "Stress-Friend or Foe?"

The class will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. on Thursdays in Room 101 of the Shields Building, beginning Sept. 29.

This is an informative class on recognizing and dealing with stress. Instructor Judy McAllister will present some constructive ideas for surviving in a fast-moving world.

The fee is $25 for the eight sessions.

For more information or to register, call 733-9554, extension 381.

BOISE — Don Reading, the director of policy and administration for the Idaho Public Utilities Commission, was identified incorrectly as Don Kramer in a Tuesday Times-News story about the possible sale of Canadian hydro power to Idaho.

Boy is suspect in post-office fire

HANSEN — Investigation into the arson-caused fire at the Hansen post office Monday evening has produced a suspect.

No charges have been filed against the suspect, a boy, who has admitted involvement in the fire, Harold Jensen, the chief deputy for the Twin Falls County sheriff's office, said Tuesday.

Pending charges and jurisdiction in the case will have to be determined by the sheriff's and prosecutor's offices and the U.S. Postal Service, Jensen said.

"They will decide on what action, if any, will be taken."

Federal charges may be involved because the property was federally owned, he said. A Postal Service investigator from Boise joined Jensen at the scene Tuesday.

Jensen declined to release further details about the suspect.

The fire was caused by an unidentified burning object, which was tossed through the mail drop in the front part of the building at about 5:50 p.m. Jensen had no new information Tuesday on this aspect of the case.

A small amount of mail was destroyed, he said, but no damage (figures were available Tuesday night. Jensen had reported earlier that most of the damage was due to smoke.

The post office, located at 101 Main St. N., was open for business Tuesday, he said.

Assistant Hansen fire chief Alton Mothershead and volunteer firefighter Brent Johnson were treated at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center for smoke inhalation as a result of the incident.

Escapee was staying at Twin Falls motel

By the Times-News and United Press International

TWIN FALLS — A suspected bank robber who was arrested at a Twin Falls motel Monday night will be arraigned today in federal court in Boise.

John Anjell, 31, is suspected of at least five robberies in Oregon and California, according to authorities.

Wanted by the FBI, Anjell was arrested without incident Monday evening at the Canyon Springs Inn, off Blue Lake Boulevard North, by FBI agents and Twin Falls police, acting on a tip from an informant, said FBI Agent William Fallon of the Butte, Mont., office. Anjell had registered at the motel under the name of Jason Blair.

Anjell was held in city jail before he was transported by a U.S. marshal to Boise, Twin Falls police Chief Tim Qualls said Tuesday.

The FBI was seeking Anjell for his Aug. 27 escape from the federal Southern Desert Correctional Center at Indian Springs, Nev. At the facility, Anjell was being held for pending bank robbery charges, Fallon said.

Anjell is suspected of robbing two branches of the Bank of Franklin Savings and Loan Association twice. One was in Grants Pass, Ore., where the armed robberies occurred on July 18 and Sept. 13. The other branch was in Cottage Grove, Ore., where the second robbery occurred Sept. 13, the same day as the second Grants Pass robbery, authorities said.

Anjell, who claims to be a German citizen, also is charged with the hold-up of a Weed, Calif., bank on June 16.

Prior to Anjell's escape from the Nevada facility, he was expected to plead guilty to two of the robberies in exchange for dismissal of other robbery charges, said U.S. Attorney Kenneth Baumann in Portland.

The bureau is "continuing to investigate the 'scope of Anjell's criminal activities,'" Fallon said.

Suit

First, the suit says, the city... exceeded its authority in making the Sun Valley Co. and others liable for uncollected taxes and for imposing penalties for any violations of the ordinance.

Second, the city has not used the tax for property-tax relief, as the Legislature mandated.

The company is asking the court to declare both the state's law and the city's ordinance unconstitutional, to stop the city from collecting the tax temporarily while the suit is pending, and, to permanently do away with the tax.

As an alternative, while the suit is pending, the company asks that any collections be deposited with the court.

Pirates keep on winning, but time's running out

By FRED DOWN
United Press International

NEW YORK — Jim Frey, rookie Darryl Strawberry's batting instructor, reached the New York Mets clubhouse even before the news media after Tuesday's 4-0 victory by the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"I told him there are three things you have to do after you have a day like today," Frey said. "First you've got to say to yourself, 'I stunk.' Then you've got to say to the news media, 'I stunk.' Then you've got to forget it."

Strawberry, who has been on a rampage for the last six weeks, is one of the few effective offensive weapons the Mets have. And in the Pirates' victory, left-hander Larry McWilliams almost literally wrapped Strawberry around his little finger.

Using a fastball that had about a 50-50 chance to break a pane of glass but a sharply breaking sinker, McWilliams had Strawberry off-balance all day, striking him seven times and retiring him on a pop to the shortstop on his fourth time.

"Today was an example of a first-class veteran major-league pitcher fooling a young major-league hitter," Frey said.

McWilliams pitched a two-hitter and Mike Easler drove in two runs with a double and a triple. The victory left second-place Pittsburgh two games behind Philadelphia in the National League East. "We're still alive," said Pirates' Manager Chuck Tanner. "But we have a long way to go."

McWilliams, who raised his record to 15-6, struck out a season-high 11 batters.

The Pirates broke a scoreless tie between McWilliams and Ed Lynch when Dave Parker led off the fourth inning with a lowering 430-foot home run to the back wall of the Mets' bullpen in right field. Jason Thompson followed with a double to left-center and scored the second run of the inning on Easler's double to left.

The Pirates added a run in the sixth on a single by Thompson and Easler's triple, which hit the 396-foot sign in right-center field. Shortstop Jose Oquendo's relay hit Easler and bounced behind third base, but the Pirates outfielder was out at the plate.

Dale Berra's single, a sacrifice by McWilliams and a single by Johnny Ray produced Pittsburgh's fourth run in the seventh and chased Lynch, 10-0.

Singles by George Foster and Hubie Brooks in the second and sixth innings constituted the New York attack and Foster was the only Mets player to advance as far as third base.

DETROIT — The Detroit Tigers Tuesday took the first tiny step in their quest to do the impossible.

Detroit got a record-smashing first inning Tuesday night and went on to squash Baltimore 14-1 in the first game of a scheduled double-header shortened to five innings by rain.

"We're one-seventh of the way to a seven-game sweep," Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said of what his team has to accomplish in its seven games against Baltimore — a task that even if accomplished still might not prevent the Orioles from winning the American League East.

"We've got no choice," Anderson said. "They've got us in a pretty good position."

"We lost the ballgame," Baltimore Manager Joe Altobelli said. "It meant a lot."

However, the Baltimore manager said he was not really interested that the Orioles' magic number for clinching the division title stayed the same.

"No, I'm not interested in that, we've got two games to play tomorrow (Wednesday)," Altobelli said.

The second game of the scheduled double-header was also postponed and will be made up as part of a double-header Wednesday night. The decision kept the Orioles magic number for clinching the American League East at seven. Baltimore leads second-place Detroit by 6 1/2 games.

Dan Petry raised his record to 18-9 by allowing four hits in the five innings while striking out three. Dennis Martinez, 7-15, was rocked for seven runs on six hits in one-third of an inning while Jim Palmer gave up nine hits and seven runs, one unearned, in 4 1/3 innings.

Alan Trammell led off the Detroit first with a single and stole second before Larry Herndon walked. Herndon stole second and Trammell scored, with Herndon going to third when catcher Joe Nolan threw the ball into center field.

Lance Parrish then singled, making it 2-0, and Kirk Gibson tripled made it 3-0. Enos Cabell singled, Chet Lemon tripled and Glenn Wilson singled to chase starter Dennis Martinez and give the Tigers a 6-0 lead.

Reliever Jim Palmer was greeted by Wayne Krenchick's flop single to left and Lou Whitaker followed with his 12th homer of the season to like the lead to 9-0. Trammell then singled in his second at-bat of the inning and Herndon hit his 19th homer of the year to make it 11-0 and end the 10 straight hits. The 10 hits in a row had been accomplished only once before in American League history, in 1901, when the Boston Red Sox collected 10 straight hits in the ninth inning against the Milwaukee Brewers.

Philadelphia keeps up the pressure

By JOE JULIANO
United Press International

PHILADELPHIA — Joe Morgan has performed these feats of strength before, using his 5-foot-7, 160-pound frame to lift a team in the heat of a pennant race.

The 40-year-old second baseman went 4-for-5 for the second straight game Tuesday and drove in three runs to spark the Philadelphia Phillies to an 8-5 victory over the Chicago Cubs for their fifth straight win.

The Phillies, who completed their home stand with an 8-2 record, maintained their two-game lead in the National League East over the Pittsburgh Pirates, who snuffed out the New York Mets 4-0 earlier in the day.

Morgan, who had two homers and four RBI Monday night, cracked a two-run single to highlight a three-run fourth inning and later doubled home a vital insurance run in a two-run eighth.

"Personally I've had success in clutch situations, especially in September, my whole career," Morgan said. "With the Reds, last year with the Giants and with the Astros I seem to have had a good month of September. I'm able to pick myself up and concentrate harder. Concentration is the key."

Morgan is hitting .327 with 14 RBIs in September. Manager Paul Owens said he is happy to see Morgan taking charge in the stretch.

"I think they (his teammates) all are ticked to death for him," Owens said. "Even early when he wasn't hitting well, he was swinging the bat well but not getting any breaks. It makes you feel good to see a guy battling and starting to carry you."

The Phillies now begin an eight-game road trip beginning Wednesday night in Montreal.

Detroit's Alan Trammell slides into third with a stolen base during the first inning of the Tigers' 14-1 victory over Baltimore Tuesday night.

NCAA panel considers scrapping freshman eligibility rule

By JOHN HENDEL
United Press International

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — An NCAA select committee plans to suggest that freshmen be eligible to participate in varsity football and basketball programs, a spokesman said Tuesday.

John P. Schaefer, acting chairman of the Select Committee on Athletics Problems and Concerns in Higher Education, said that the 16-member group decided against freshman participation because it could place an undue burden on the students.

Schaefer admitted that this was one point on which his committee, whose members include university chancellors and athletic coaches, had a hard time in reaching a consensus.

The committee also plans to suggest that an academic progress rule be established to check on athletes' academic advancement and that schools operate such a rule under a "sunshine law."

"We believe that the freshman year is the most critical for a student," Schaefer said. "And the kind of start a student gets off to in the freshman year will frequently determine whether or not he'll graduate from college."

Schaefer, a former president of the University of Arizona, said a major football program can easily require 40 hours a week — in practice and other football-related events — of the players.

"Superimpose that type of time commitment on top of an academic load on one who may have gotten into the university as a marginal student to begin with. We believe that this places an undue burden on a lot of students and virtually assures academic failure," he said.

"There are a lot of exceptions to that rule but the committee feels in general it would be better if the freshman did not participate in football or basketball."

Freshmen were granted eligibility in 1972 when the NCAA limited the number of football scholarships to 25 and basketball scholarships to 15. To offset the loss of freshmen on varsity rosters, the select committee suggested the scholarship limit be raised to 104 for football and 16 for basketball.

The committee also said that students be given just three years of varsity eligibility in football and basketball, with a four-year span to complete that eligibility.

Schaefer said the committee realizes that the proposal would be controversial, but the body wanted to put the issue before the NCAA and "make it an issue of discussion."

He added that he wasn't sure whether the proposal would be ready in time for submission to the NCAA conventions next January in Dallas.

The committee, Schaefer said, would rule freshmen ineligible only for football and basketball because the other sports are mainly played in the spring and "having a semester to get your feet wet" was important to the incoming freshmen.

He said that the committee had a strong commitment to an academic progress rule to make sure the student-athletes are "in fact, involved in degree-seeking programs and that their progress is monitored so that we do not find students playing four years of college football or basketball and leaving the college or university essentially uneducated."

The data from this rule would be compiled by the conferences and would be made public, Schaefer said.

"A lot of the problems that we've seen in college athletics is because too much has taken place behind a curtain," he said. "That has allowed things like credits for non-academic courses, phony grades and programs where students aren't taking any courses of academic substance."

Schaefer also said the committee supports the use of standardized tests scores, despite the fact that they are "culturally biased," as admission standards because the use of only high school grade point averages can be misleading.

"Magically, everyone who carries a football very fast suddenly performs up to that level. We think that unless there is a dispassionate measure of academic skills of performance the system is inherently flawed," he said.

Peanut butter a kid pleaser, protein source

Quiz most kids on what they like to eat and one answer invariably is peanut butter. An intelligent choice.

While it has a kid-pleasing taste, peanut butter also is an excellent source of protein, as well as other nutrients. Peanut butter was first promoted as a health food at the Chicago World's Fair almost a century ago. Since then, Americans have consumed more than 300,000 tons in a year.

To earn top marks with the after-school crowd, serve snacks flavored with peanut butter. These chewy bars, moist cake and fudge dessert are sure to rate an "A."

PEANUT BUTTER BARS

A package of Betty Crocker Snackin' Cake mix — applesauce raisin, banana walnut, butter pecan or any variety
3 of tablespoons of margarine, softened

An egg
A fourth-cup of packed brown sugar
A third-cup of peanut butter
2 tablespoons of margarine
A tablespoon of milk
A third-cup of peanuts, if desired
Heat the oven to 325 degrees. Mix the cake mix, the three tablespoons of margarine and the egg until crumbly. Press in an ungreased square pan, 8-by-8-by-2 inches. Bake until almost no indentation remains when touched — 20 to 25 minutes.
Mix the brown sugar, peanut butter, two tablespoons of margarine and the milk in a small bowl until it is well-blended. Spread over the baked layer. Sprinkle with peanuts. Broil about five inches from heat until the topping is bubbly and light brown — about one minute. Watch carefully as the topping burns easily. Cool. Cut into bars, about 2-by-1 inch.

Makes 32 bars.

PEANUT BUTTER DEVILS FOOD CAKE

A package of Betty Crocker Stir 'n' Frost devil-food cake mix with chocolate frosting
An egg, beaten
A half-tub of vanilla ready-to-spread frosting, about one cup
2 tablespoons of crunchy or creamy peanut butter
2 tablespoons of peanut butter-flavored chips
Heat the oven to 350 degrees. Prepare the cake mix as directed on the package except decrease the water to a half-cup and add the egg with the water. Bake as directed and then cool.
Carefully remove from pan. Split the cake to make two layers. To split, mark the sides of cakes with wooden picks and cut with a long, serrated knife.

Mix the vanilla frosting and peanut butter. Spread a half-cup of the frosting mixture between the layers. Spread the remaining frosting mixture over the sides of cake. Knead the chocolate frosting packet about 10 seconds and then spread the chocolate frosting over the top of cake. Sprinkle with peanut-butter chips.

PEANUT BUTTER FUDGE DESSERT

A package of chocolate fudge frosting mix
1.25 cups of Graham cracker crumbs
2 tablespoons of creamy peanut butter
A third-cup of creamy peanut butter
A fourth-cup of sugar
A teaspoon of vanilla

An 8-ounce package of cream cheese, softened
A cup of chilled whipping cream
A fourth-cup of chopped peanuts

Lightly butter a square pan, 9-by-9-by-2 or 8-by-9-by-2 inches. Prepare the frosting mix as directed. Mix a cup of the frosting, the crumbs and two tablespoons of peanut butter. Press in the pan.
Mix the remaining frosting, the third-cup of peanut butter, sugar, vanilla and cream cheese in a large bowl. The mixture will be stiff. Beat the whipping cream in a chilled bowl until stiff. Fold the peanut-butter mixture into the whipped cream. Spoon over layer in pan and spread evenly. Sprinkle with peanuts. Refrigerate until set — three to four hours. Refrigerate any remaining dessert. Makes 9 to 12 servings.

Stores can meet needs of seniors

By JAMES E. ROPER
Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — The supermarket industry has developed a program to cater to the special needs of older shoppers.

That's just good business.

The Food Marketing Institute, a trade association representing almost all chain supermarkets, figures that the nation now has nearly 27 million people at least 65 years of age and that 80 percent of them do their own shopping, spending $26 billion a year for food.

The trade group and the National Association of Retired Persons joined forces to study these older customers. This took a lot of work because, the investigators discovered, older people don't complain to supermarkets very often, even when they are unhappy.

The study's findings and recommendations now have been distributed to store managers across the country. Although intended to address needs of the elderly, the program offers relief for shoppers of almost any age.

Here are some of the problems and proposed solutions.

• SHOPPING CARTS: Carts that are stacked tightly are too hard to pull apart. Some are too heavy, too hard to push, and too deep to use comfortably.
Solution: Store employees should be alert to untangle carts. Stores should provide some smaller, shallower carts and small hand baskets for people buying only a few items.

• SMALL SERVINGS: Too often, stores offer fruit, meat or canned items prepackaged in quantities too large for the elderly who usually buy for only one or two persons.
Solution: Stores should provide small packages as well as the giant, economy sizes, and should post signs offering to repack into single servings the meats and produce that usually come in larger quantities.

• VISION: Reading price information on shelves becomes difficult for older people with fading eyesight.
Solution: Keep closer watch on maintenance of shelf tags, print them in large and bold type, preferably in black or brown on a white background.

• REACHING: Older shoppers (and there are more women than men) have less strength in their arms and find it more difficult to bend or stretch for shelf items.
Solution: Stores should place bags, scales and as many items as possible at easy-to-reach level, and employees should be alert to help customers obtain items.

• LOCATION: Some buyers dislike roaming over an array of store space in search of particular products.
Solution: Post well-placed, detailed directories and print store floor plans. An employee who is asked about the location of an item should escort the elderly customer to the spot, rather than point vaguely to some far corner of the store.

Fall treat

Squash making seasonal appearance

Weather changes such as those we are enjoying now make hard-shell squash — often referred to as winter squash — ready for delicious eating. The most familiar varieties to use for these recipes are acorn, buttercup, butternut and kumata.

PICKLED WINTER SQUASH

4 quarts of winter squash, peeled and cubed
3 tablespoons of slaked lime
2 quarts of cold water
2 tablespoons of whole cloves
3 sticks of cinnamon
A two-inch piece of fresh ginger root
A lemon, thinly sliced
8 cups of sugar
A quart of white vinegar
A half-teaspoon of vanilla extract
In a large enameled pan, dissolve the lime in two quarts of water and add the squash. Add more water if needed to cover and stir. Let stand for two to four hours. Drain and then rinse and cover with cold water. Bring to a boil and cook until just tender, then drain.
Tie the cloves, cinnamon and ginger in a cheese-

Willetta Warberg
On food

cloth bag and add to the squash with lemon, lime, sugar and vinegar. Simmer the squash until it is transparent. Add boiling water if the syrup becomes too thick before the squash is clear. Stir in the vanilla. Remove the spice bag and fruit slices.
While hot, pack into sterilized jars, leaving a half-inch of head space. Seal immediately. This recipe makes seven pints.

WINTER SQUASH MINCED FOR PIES

2.5 to 3 pounds of winter squash, peeled and seeded
3 apples, quartered and cored
2 oranges, quartered and seeded
A package, 1.5-ounce size, of raisins
A pinch of salt

2 teaspoons of ground cinnamon
A teaspoon of ground cloves
A cup of chopped nuts
A fourth-cup of brandy
Using a food processor, coarsely chop the winter squash, apples and oranges. In a large kettle, combine the squash, apples, oranges, raisins, salt, cinnamon and cloves. Bring to a boil and then reduce heat and simmer about an hour or until thick, stirring frequently. Stir in the nuts and brandy.
This recipe makes enough filling for two 9-inch pies.

LEFTOVER BAKED WINTER SQUASH SOUP

3 cups of cooked winter squash
2 1/2 cups of chicken broth
A small onion, peeled and chopped
A pat of margarine
A half-cup of chopped fresh parsley
1 to 2 teaspoons of salt
A pinch of sweet basil

Water wards off winter weather woes

REXBURG — Fall is an important time to water plants in preparation for the winter. When plants are well-watered, they can withstand cold winter temperatures much better.

Sometimes, we neglect watering in the fall because the plants are changing color and losing leaves anyway. Soil is often drier now than at any time during the year, unless we have a lot of rain.

Large trees require a long soaking to reach the deep roots. One of the most effective ways to water trees is with a soaker hose placed around the tree, under the outer edge of the branches. It must be left on for several hours to reach the deep roots. Small trees can be watered more easily in a saucer or basin is created to hold the water. The area near the trunk should be a little higher than the area under the outer branches. The water-absorbing roots are near the outer edge of the tree.

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

Straw, roses, perennial flowers and even lawns can benefit from a deep watering just before cold weather puts them into dormancy. Sometimes, it is difficult to tell how deeply water penetrates without digging a hole with a shovel. In our area, most sandy soils require about an inch of water to penetrate 10 inches. An inch of water will go only six to eight inches into a heavier clay soil.

With good pressure and typical five-eighths-inch garden hose, most sprinklers require about an hour to apply an inch of water. With a half-inch hose, about two hours is required to apply an inch of water. You can check your equipment or sprinkling system by placing straight-sided cans on the ground near the sprinklers. Turn the water on for an hour and measure the amount that accumulates.

Lawns have roots about six inches deep, flowers six to 12 inches and shrubs a foot or more, depending on size. Tree roots can penetrate several feet deep, although most of the water-absorbing roots are in the top two or three feet.

There is still time to plant shrubs, shrubs, bulbs and even lawns before the ground freezes.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College.

Squash

A cup of dried skim milk
In an enameled kettle, blend together the cooked winter squash and chicken broth. In small skillet, cook the onion in margarine until it is lightly browned. Stir the parsley into the onion and cook a minute, stirring. Scrape the onion and parsley into the soup pot, and add the salt, basil and dried milk powder. Whisk and cook until the soup just begins to bubble. Do not boil the soup or it will stick to the bottom of the soup kettle. Serve hot, topped with crostons, chopped chives or shredded fresh spinach. Makes about six servings.

WINTER SQUASH PIE

This has a flavor similar to pumpkin pie.
A nine-inch pie shell, baked.
5 cups of winter squash that has been cooked and mashed.
A half-stick of butter or margarine
A third-cup of raisins
A third-cup of salt
A fourth-teaspoon each of ground nutmeg and allspice
A fourth-cup of light brown sugar
In a kettle, over low heat, whisk together the squash, butter or margarine, raisins, salt, nutmeg and allspice, and brown sugar. When heated thoroughly, pile into the pie shell. Sprinkle the top with cinnamon. Serve while warm. Makes six servings.

THIS WEEK'S BEST MARKET BUYS: Oil products are still climbing in price. Beef has drifted lower in cost. Whole chickens are higher costs. Winter squash will be costing less. Cold weather will make good, tasty apples more available.

She wants to pay for share of date

DEAR ABBY: My parents wouldn't let me date guys until my 16th birthday last April, so this is a new problem to me. Who should pay for the date?

All the guys I've gone out with insist on paying for everything. I've offered to pay for my own pizza, movie or to contribute for whatever it costs, but I'm not allowed to. Some even take my offer as an insult.

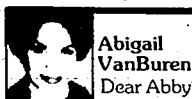

If a girlfriend asks me to eat out or to see a movie with her, I would automatically assume we will go Dutch, right? Why should it be any different with a guy? My parents and always pay. Why should he? I have a job, too, and can pay my own way.

—MONEY MATTERS IN IOWA

attend the wedding. I have always stayed with my son and his wife, who have a lovely home, but I was informed that this time they would put me up in a hotel because the parents of the groom will be occupying their guest room.

Abby, I am a 73-year-old woman and not in the best of health. The parents of the groom are much younger and in better health than I am.

Just what is the protocol in this situation? Don't you think I am more entitled to stay at my son's home than the parents of the groom? Should I express my disappointment?

Clipping while waiting

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

Dear Martin: Doing a good deed for someone can often be rewarding in unexpected ways. I recently drove a friend to the doctor and while I was in the waiting room I was in a hurry to find a "Witcher" basket filled with coupons.

Supermarket Shopper

The doctor's receptionist was truly the clever one! She had brought in the basket and filled it with coupons from the many magazines in the waiting room. What a nice way to occupy the time of those waiting to see the doctor. Finding some valuable coupons can make a long wait seem like time well spent.

While I was waiting I found several valuable coupons. Naturally, I added several of my own to the basket hoping someone else would find them useful. The receptionist proudly told me that many of the people who look through the basket do likewise.

She is also a smart shopper. She uses the basket, too — Joan Brocato, Baltimore, Md.

Dear Joan: Thank you for passing along this interesting idea. Slitting the doctor's waiting room is certainly no picnic.

I can see how a coupon exchange could relieve some of the tension. I hope that your letter will find its way into the hands of thoughtful doctors and the people who assist them.

Here is a poem that was written by Margaret A. Webb of Royal Oak, Mich., for last year's Supermarket Shopper Poetry Competition:

The Checkout Line
I've learned to face it with a grin.
The secret I can't master,
Whichever line I'm standing in,
The other line moves faster.

Supermarket poets, start your creative juices flowing! It's time for my third annual Supermarket Shopper Poetry Competition. Last year I received thousands of wonderful entries from readers who set their shopping experiences to verse.

The competition rules are simple: All poetry used in original, unpublished and legible and must fit comfortably within the usual borders of my column. All entries must be postmarked no later than midnight, Nov. 15, 1983.

The winner of the competition will receive $100. Second prize is $50, and third prize is $25. Ten runners-up will each receive subscriptions to the couponing and refunding magazine, The National Supermarket Shopper. The winners of the competition will be announced in January.

Address your entries to: The Third Annual Supermarket Shopper Poetry Competition, c/o The American Coupon Club, P.O. Box 500, Franklin Square, N.Y. 11010.

Recipe for chili a winner

By MICHELINE MAYNARD
United Press International

WEST BLOOMFIELD, Mich. — Great Bowls of Fire has brought Jeanne Johnson-Lackey her second straight victory in Michigan's chili cook-off.

Her team, which included this reporter, beat back competitors who used everything from gravy mix to Irish Mist liqueur and — shudder — ground beans.

Whole beans are illegal in International Chili Society competitions. They are considered a filler. One team got around the rule by using ground beans as part of the vegetable category.

Five trips to butchers trying to find both lean chuck and beef brisket paid off for our leader, who will represent the state Oct. 23 at the ICS's world-championship at the abandoned Tropico gold mine in California's Mojave Desert.

Ms. Johnson-Lackey will be competing for a $25,000 top prize — a far cry from the $700 check she took home in the state contest.

An added incentive will be the knowledge there has never been a world winner from east of the Mississippi.

A chili cook-off is something like a church bazaar held in conjunction with the Michigan-Ohio State football game. The atmosphere is friendly but the underlying competition is deadly serious.

The state cook-off took place recently in a 200-foot tent on the parking lot of a suburban restaurant.

Forty cooks paid $40 each to enter. Several hundred spectators paid $20 each to attend. Most of the money went to charities.

Cooks were stationed in rows or booths on three sides of the tent. The fourth side was reserved for bars and food.

Some booths had chips, dips, drinks and other incentives to win the coveted showmanship award.

The Johnson-Lackey workplace was all business.

A phalanx of camp stoves, cutting boards and ingredients lined our table. Soon we were wiping our eyes as we chopped, sliced or crushed onions, bell peppers and chiles and garlic.

Two other helpers prepared the beef. Chef Al Largo of the Elmer's Club arrived to help out as the chili juices intensified. "Cooks, start your ovens!"

Ms. Johnson-Lackey tasted bits of beef, Chef Al Largo of the Elmer's Club arrived to help out as the chili juices intensified. "Cooks, start your ovens!"

Opposing chefs stroled by to compare our product with theirs.

Judges took long, deep sniffs of the chili as it cooked, and examined the texture.

Our leader tasted and re-tasted the chili and decided to add a half glass of Old Milwaukee beer.

Cooks were allowed 2½ hours simmering time. After two hours our leader took the kettle off the camp stove, to let the fat congeal and allow the flavors to meld and her team members to spy on the other chefs.

At tasting time, we scooped up about 10 samples of competing chilis and gave them our own rating. Some were sweet, others too tomatoey, some so spicy the flavor could not be discerned.

We thought our chili — a rich, semi-spicy and meaty concoction — topped them all. The judges — cooking editors, television personalities and travel writers — agreed.

Great Bowls of Fire Chili
6 pounds beef (chuck and brisket), chopped
4 medium onions, peeled and finely diced
2 medium bell peppers, stemmed, seeded and finely diced
1 fresh chile pepper, stemmed, seeded and chopped
2 fresh jalapeno chiles, stemmed, seeded and minced
Chopped kidney fat
3 cans heat-and-serve beef bouillon
24 ounces canned tomato sauce
6 ounces beer (optional)
4 tablespoons Rando brand chili powder (made in San Antonio) plus 4 tablespoons any brand of chili powder
2 tablespoons Mexican oregano
4 tablespoons ground cumin
4 cloves garlic, peeled and minced
Salt and ground pepper to taste.

Evaporate meat in large, heavy gauge Dutch oven or stock pot, stirring constantly.

Place vegetables in a pan with a small amount of water and cook, stirring, until soft but not browned. Add vegetable mixture to meat. Add remaining ingredients and simmer 2 hours in uncovered pot. Then, cover, turn off heat and let sit 30 minutes. Skim off excess fat before serving. If you plan to serve the chili immediately, increase heat briefly toward the end of cooking period to evaporate excess liquid. Makes about 5 quarts.
