Report upsets school-fund theories

Bell: More money won't mean better education

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Education Secretary Terrell Bell released Thursday a broad ranking of public school quality across the nation which he said shows that the states which spend the most don't necessarily provide the best education.

Bell said he expected to get "kicked around" for publicizing the data, which includes high school dropout rates and college entrance exam scores.

But he said the public does not get enough information about how schools perform, and he challenged states and local school districts to disseminate more of their own test scores and other rankings.

Many of the statistics have been published previously, but Bell's crowded chart included the first-ever release of state averages on the American College Test (ACT) and new figures showing that high school dropouts have increased.

Bell also released figures on state poverty rates and the percentage of minority and handicapped students, and cautioned, "Some states have more hard-to-educate students than others."

Bell said states in the top half on education spending generally ranked in the top half on college admission test scores. But he said such low-spending states as Idaho, South Dakota and New Hampshire were among the leaders in test scores. "The highest spending states are not necessarily the highest achieving states," said Bell, who expressed hope that the statistics would serve as a benchmark for states trying to improve their schools.

"If problems are opportunities, we have a huge number of opportunities right now," Bell told the scores of reporters and two dozen camera crews who packed into the most crowded news conference ever held at the Education Department.

The figures showed that among 26 states where college-bound students customarily take the ACT, the best average was compiled by Wisconsin, followed by Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska and Colorado.

Among 22 states where students usually take the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT), the leaders were: New Hampshire, Oregon, Vermont, California and Delaware.

The states with the worst ACT average were: Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, West Virginia and, in a tie for the fifth lowest, Kentucky and Tennessee.

From 1972 to 1982, college entrance exam scores fell in every state; only the District of Columbia registered an increase. The SAT and ACT scores were for both public and private school students.

In that same period, the percentage of public school ninth graders who stayed to get their high school diploma fell from 72.2 percent to 72.3 percent. No private school figures were available.

Says public not informed

Bell has also challenged states to raise their graduation standards, improve teachers' pay and create new career ladders for "master" teachers, and to boost students' college entrance test scores back to the 1965 level.

In Tallahassee, Florida Education Commissioner Ralph J. Arlington hailed Bell's rankings as a "breakthrough" that would inspire

Torn families causing increase in dropout rate

By MARY STEVENSON

BOISE — A nationwide drop in college test scores and a rise in high school dropouts reflect the troubled state of the American family, some Idaho educators say.

One lawmaker says the lower scores reflect a problem with the educational system itself.

Statistics released Thursday by Education Secretary Terrell Bell ranked the 50 states on their dropout rates, test scores, teacher salaries, and other measures, comparing 1972 to 1982.

The statistics showed that Idaho's dropout rate went up, college test scores dropped, and the average teacher salary more than doubled in that period.

In Idaho, the average score on the American College Test dropped from 19.9 in 1972 to 18.9 in 1982, giving Idaho a 40th-place tie with Kansas, among the 29 states whose students usually take the ACT.

Idaho ranked 11th in 1972. More Idaho students took the test in 1982 — 55.3 percent compared to 45.2 percent in 1972.

The percentage of Idaho ninth-graders staying on to graduate dropped from 84.7 percent in 1972 to 78.9 percent in 1982.

That gave Idaho a 19th-place rank nationwide compared to 10th in 1972. The average salary for Idaho teachers rose from $7,352 in 1972 to $15,146 in 1982. That pulled Idaho's rank from 46th to 37th.

The state's pupil-teacher ratio showed an average of 20.9 pupils per teacher in 1982, compared to 22.6 in 1972. Nationwide, Idaho's ranking dropped from 33rd in 1972 to 45th in 1982.

Jerry Evans, state superintendent of public instruction, said none of the statistics are new.

"Our scores have not gone down as rapidly as scores across the country," Evans said. "In terms of our relation to the (other) states we've improved our position."

"We're testing a larger number of students, which to some extent lowers the score."

On the dropout rate, Evans noted that, "There is less real guarantee of good jobs at the end of a degree than there was a few years ago."

John Kelsor, president of Boise State University, said the higher dropout rate and lower scores are "partially a general reflection of the instability in society."

He said the divorce rate was "pretty much exploding" in 1972.

"It's pretty difficult to do the types of things school systems demand if you've got no support at all," he said.

JERRY EVANS
Statistic aren't new

"I think it's very difficult to ask the schools to be surrogate parents and also educators, and yet that is what in effect we've been asked to do," he said.

Rep. Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls, a high school teacher, also said the statistics are a reflection of society, citing a higher divorce rate, and drug and alcohol use.

"I don't think your families are as strong as they used to be," he said.

He said families interested in education and in their children will encourage their children to attend school and do well.

Winter skirts

Israel, Syria plan for Mideast peace

By MONA ZIADE
Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Government and military officials said Thursday that Syria and Israel had agreed to a new security plan for Lebanon that would separate the country's warring factions and establish a solid ceasefire.

The aim is to establish disengagement zones in the battered southern suburbs of the capital and in the nearby Chouf Mountains, with the eventual help of 800 observers from Italy and Greece.

The officials said there were a few "technical but non-essential details" to work out in the Saudi-mediated plan, but that President Amin Gemayel probably would announce it by Friday.

But Wafiq Jumblatt, the leader of Lebanon's Druse, said the Islamic sect would insist on a comprehensive political settlement before Lebanese army troops would be allowed into Druse areas.

The Lebanese officials, who spoke on condition they not be identified, stressed that the plan was not meant as a basis for any reduction in the multinational force — but that this might come later "at our request."

They said, in fact, that Gemayel would seek assurances from the United States, France, Italy and Britain.

Utilities pan rate hike, but motives questioned

By MARY STEVENSON
Associated Press

BOISE — Two major power companies said Thursday they'll ask the Public Utilities Commission to raise an order that opens the way for massive rate increases.

But PUC President Conley Ward Jr. says their arguments are "nonsense." And a spokesman for the consumers coalition Idaho Fair Share says the utilities are using "delaying tactics" in an effort to head off possible legislative action that would prohibit the increases.

The controversy stems from a December 1983 Idaho Supreme Court decision.

The PUC says that ruling requires ratepayers to foot the bill for utility construction work in progress, or CWIP — facilities that are being built but aren't complete.

The PUC has never allowed those costs to be used in figuring what ratepayers should pay. Instead it has waited until a project is completed and working before allowing some of the costs to be passed on to ratepayers.

The PUC Says Idaho Power Co. customers could face a 14.8 percent rate increase; Washington Water Power Co. customers could face a 78.2 percent rate increase; Utah Power & Light Co. customers could face a 15.9

Legislator predicts scrap over budget, tax hikes

REP. MACK NEIBAAR
Says $480 million tops

By HAL BERNTON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Rep. Mack Neibaar, R-Paul, says he does not expect the state's 1985 budget to be more than $480 million, some $80 million less than the $560 million budget Gov. John Evans has proposed.

Neibaar also predicts a tough upcoming legislative session that will be a "setup" all the way, as legislators and the governor's office seek to reconcile widely differing budget proposals for fiscal year 1985.

Neibaar, the vice chairman of the powerful Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee, says the 1984 Legislature probably will approve no more than a $15 million increase over the current $465 million budget for fiscal 1984.

"I think that a budget figure of $475 to $480 million represents a good, realistic increase," Neibaar said Wednesday.

According to the veteran Republican legislator, the additional state revenue required to finance any budget increase best could be raised through two tax measures.

First, he is recommending that the state's sales tax be broadened to include Idaho National Engineering Laboratory contractors, some service and repair businesses, and certain other enterprises that now enjoy exemptions.

Second, he is recommending small increases in the tax rates of some income tax brackets.

However, Neibaar does not favor extending the temporary 1.5 cent sales-tax increase that was approved by the 1983 Legislature.

"We made a commitment to the people that the tax was temporary, and we should stand by that," he says. "Legislators already have enough of an image problem."

Due to budget constraints caused by the state's still-weak economy, Neibaar says the Legislature cannot afford to approve anywhere near the $36 million increase in educational funding proposed by Evans in December.

"We probably won't make any large strides (in increasing educational funding) this year, but when the economy gets back in stride, we are going to have a lot more money."

Neibaar believes that increased educational funding should be linked to certain reforms in the public schools. These should include, he says, implementing teacher-performance evaluations, granting teachers greater authority to discipline students in school and shifting more responsibility for the educational process back to parents.

Increased funding and reform should be connected, Neibaar says, because "before you can get the right people to stay (in Idaho), you have to have money, but you also have to have the right atmosphere in the classrooms."

The governor has said that the Legislature should first grant the funding increases and then take up the task of school reform.

Turning to environmental issues, Neibaar says that in the wake of the problems experienced at the Owyhee County nuclear dump, he would support increased funding for state regulation of toxic-waste disposal. And he says he might support some kind of mining-industry tax to help finance more stringent state inspections.

Earthquake rocks Wyoming

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — A minor earthquake with a preliminary magnitude of 3.0 on the Richter Scale was felt by residents of Jackson, Wyo., Thursday afternoon, the National Earthquake Information Service reported.

The quake, which occurred at 1:10 p.m. MST, was described by scientists with the U.S. Geological Survey here as an aftershock to the 4.5 magnitude earthquake that struck Jackson on Dec. 26, 1983.

There were no injuries either from Thursday's quake or the Dec. 26 quake.

Suit filed by Challis parents

BOISE — The parents of a Challis boy injured when a Challis Post Office table fell on him are seeking $740,000 in damages from the federal government.

The lawsuit claims Harlan Hayes, now 7, suffered a lacerated liver, a ruptured spleen, psychological damage and other problems after he was pinned under a 200-pound table last February.

According to documents filed with the court, the Hayes boy is believed to have tripped and grabbed the table to steady himself. The suit claims postal workers negligently put the table in a place where they knew children would congregate.

In addition to $740,000 in damages, the Hayes want reimbursement of costs, including medical expenses and the cost of the lawsuit.

Reagan ponders temporary tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, studying whether to press for higher taxes in his upcoming spending plan, has received an appeal from his chief economist for a "temporary" tax increase starting the next fiscal year to help pare the enormous budget deficits.

Martin Feldstein, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisors, said that sustained economic expansion in 1983 and 1984 would be "more likely" if Congress agreed on a tax package that would raise about $3 billion a year for not more than three years.

"The prospect of continuing deficits of unprecedented size is hurting the chances for a sound recovery in 1985 and beyond," he said in a memo to the president.

Moreover, if the recovery is weak, it is more likely than we predict or if interest rates fail to come down, the budget deficits will be even larger than we have projected."

'Nuke' trucks to be routed

LEWISTON — Trucks carrying radioactive materials will no longer use U.S. Highway 12, the scene of two accidents involving semi-trucks carrying tons of slightly enriched uranium over the past seven months, a U.S. Department of Energy official says.

The agency has received a verbal commitment that Joylev radioactive metals destined for the Hanford Nuclear Reservation in Washington will no longer be transported on U.S. 12, spokesman James M. Peterson said Wednesday.

The agency received a verbal commitment from Ryder-F.I.E., the general contractor for the uranium shipments, that interstate highways would be used, Peterson said.

Idaho officials have said the accidents on the narrow and often icy passage between Missoula, Mont., and Lewiston posed no public safety problems despite the radioactive cargoes.

Lawmakers pan redistricting

BOISE — Idaho legislators say they don't like the "floating districts" provision of the legislative redistricting plan approved by District Judge Dar Cogswell.

The Idaho Supreme Court on Wednesday upheld Cogswell's ruling striking down the state's newest redistricting plan. That was adopted in 1982 after much political bickering.

"Political impact of the decision wasn't immediately clear. I don't think it will favor anybody," said Rep. James Stotcheff, D-Sandpoint.

The "floating districts" are designed to iron out population differences, for the legislators each will represent about the same number of people.

Lawmakers unanimously denounced the "floating district" proposal.

"That's an assinine plan," said Stotcheff. His district touches the Canadian border. He said if floating districts were created, a legislator would have to represent an area stretching from the border to Lewiston.

Another floating district in the Cogswell plan in western Idaho is 225 miles long and about 100 miles wide.

Reagan blasts Castro pledge

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan sought to tell the Cuban people Thursday they are systematically denied access to the truth about their own country, including its involvement in foreign adventures on four continents.

In a radio address broadcast to Cuba and the rest of Latin America by the Voice of America, Reagan said the promises of Fidel Castro's Cuban revolution 25 years ago "have not been kept."

"We share many of the same ideals," Reagan said in the prerecorded speech, "especially a common longing for a world of peace and justice. We are both proud peoples, proud of what we have achieved through our own efforts."

The White House had sought to keep word of the broadcast from leaking because Cuba frequently jams VOA broadcasts, and the administration hoped to prevent that by surprise. However, Cuba News Network reported during the afternoon Reagan would make the address at 8 p.m. EST, and White House officials persuaded the network to refrain from further announcements until after the speech.

The address was broadcast over VOA's AM and shortwave frequencies at 7:10 p.m. and simultaneously translated into Spanish.

Reagan said Cuba's economy "is incapable of providing you and your families your most elementary needs, despite massive subsidies from abroad" and that the Castro government continues to sentence people to long prison terms for political dissent.

educators to do better. "If you removed all the scoreboards from the nation's ballparks, attendance would drop and the interest of the players and even the coaches would diminish," Burlington said. "We need scoreboards."

But Mary H. Futrell, president of the National Education Association, the nation's largest teachers' group, said Bell's "suggestions that pupils from high-spending states do not achieve as well as those from low-spending states is a fallacious argument and one that could seriously damage public support of education."

On pupil-teacher ratios, New York fell from fourth to 21st, while Oregon dropped from 18th to 41st. Georgia jumped from 58th to a tie for 31st, while Massachusetts improved from 20th to a tie for eighth. West Virginia climbed from a tie for 40th to a tie for 19th. South Carolina tumbled from the 16th to the 33rd. Utah pulled up the rear in both years.

On teacher salaries, Alaska remained far out in front with an average salary of $29,000 in 1980-81, up from its pace-setting $15,124 a decade earlier. Vermont fell from 28th to 38th, while Wyoming rose from 22nd to sixth and Washington from 15th to fifth.

The Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J., first disclosed state-by-state SAT scores two years ago. The American College Testing Co. of Iowa City, Iowa, refused to release state averages to Bell, and he said he had to go to state education officials to obtain the averages.

The Educational Testing Service has cautioned the public about misinterpreting the figures. The average scores are usually highest in states where the lowest percentage of students — the cream of the crop — take the exam.

But Bell said he believes that it does not matter how many students take the exam, provided that at least 30 percent do so. He did not provide figures for Washington because fewer than 20 percent took the SAT or ACT there.

that they would keep their forces in Lebanon as an expression of faith in the plan.

Beirut radio, meanwhile, said the army garrison at Souk el-Gharb overlooking the U.S. Marine base at Beirut airport was fired-on by anti-government forces for two hours, Souk el-Gharb would be one area covered under the security plan.

Syria and Israel occupy almost two thirds of the country. Syria controls eastern and northern Lebanon while Israel, which invaded in June 1982, occupies southern Lebanon up to the Awail hills, 30 miles south of Beirut.

Officials said Lebanese army intelligence chief Col. Simon Kassis returned from a trip to Damascus Wednesday with Syria's full approval of the plan, while the Israeli government of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir sent word with a special emissary that it had no objection to the scheme.

There was no confirmation or denial from either Syria or Israel.

The highlight of the plan, as reported by the Lebanese news media, are:

- Christian militiamen are to pull back to the Christian hinterland north of Beirut from all positions they moved into after Israel's invasion including positions in the Chouf Mountains.
- The army is to maintain current positions around the town of Souk el-Gharb in the mountains populated by the Druse.
- Police are to be deployed in the Sunni Muslim Kharrub region that borders the Awail River, with Lebanese army patrols only during the day.
- The army is to take over the coastal highway linking Beirut with the Israeli-occupied south.
- Shiite Muslim militiamen are to withdraw from Beirut's southern suburbs, and Christian militiamen from hills overlooking the Shiite neighborhoods.

Today's weather

Mostly cloudy, with fog and light rain

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas: Mostly cloudy and foggy today, with a chance of light rain in the morning. Highs from 35 to 41; lows tonight of 30 to 35. Cloudy and breezy tonight and Saturday. Chance of light rain on Saturday.

Warner with high in the middle 40s.

Camas-Franklin, Halley, Wood River Valley: Continued areas of low clouds and fog today and tonight. Some rain in the morning, with a chance of freezing drizzle. Mostly cloudy above the fog. Highs 30 to 40; lows tonight near 25. Cloudy and breezy on Saturday. Chance of rain or snow showers. Highs 40s to 45. Northern Nevada and Utah:

Foggy nights and mornings, with partial clearing in the afternoon and evening today and Saturday in Nevada. Highs of 35 to 42; lows from 15 to 25.

Decade fog and low clouds over Utah through Saturday. Fog also above the fog layers. Highs of 30 to 35; lows of 25 to 30.

Spokane: A large high-pressure system aloft and at the surface continues to dominate the weather picture in Idaho, according to the National Weather Service.

The stagnant air that has been trapped in many southern valleys for some time is expected to be flushed out late today or early Saturday, as a storm system moves from the Pacific into the state. Most of the rainfall will be in the north, with scattered showers in the south.

At mid-afternoon Thursday, skies were cloudy at many reporting stations.

Fog has been a problem, especially in southern Idaho, where visibility has been less than a hair's breadth in many valley locations.

Winds were light over most of the state Thursday, but Sirevel had gusts of near 17 mph in the afternoon.

At the time of this report, temperatures to be much warmer than those in the south Thursday. Readings there were mostly in the 40s, while in the southern valleys, the mercury was in the 20s and 30s. The state's warmest reading was 51 degrees at Lewiston.

Precipitation around the state was light Thursday morning. Drizzle was reported in some locations, with only minimal receiving measurable precipitation, 0.1 inch.

The low cloud Thursday morning were mostly in the 25 to 35 range. Lewiston had a mild low of 41 degrees, while Sun Valley was the coldest at 10 degrees.

The extended forecast for the Magic Valley and southern Idaho calls for Sunday and Monday to be mild, with a chance of rain in the valley. Fog and snow in the mountains is likely on Tuesday. Highs will be in the 40s, with lows in the upper 20s to middle 30s.

Elsewhere in the nation on Thursday, the warmest temperature reported was 80 degrees at Santa Ana, Calif. The coldest was 14 below zero at Alamosa, Colo.

Idaho road report

BOISE, (AP) — Highways in Idaho remained mostly wet Thursday, with snow flurries reported at higher elevations.

Road conditions were as follows:

- U.S. 96 — Wet, fog, icy spots.
- Interstate 84 — Icy spots, fog; Lookout Pass, snow floor, chains advised for towing rigs.
- U.S. 12 — Wet, fog in some areas.
- Idaho 21 — Icy spots, broken snow floor.
- Interstate 84 — Bare wet, fog with fog in some areas; Lookout Pass, snow floor.
- U.S. 30 — Occasional icy spots; Arco in Salmon snow floor; Lost Trail Pass, snow floor.
- Idaho 75 — Icy spots, fog; Galena Summit, snow floor and fog.
- Idaho 51 — Wet, icy spots and fog.
- Interstate 86 — Fog, ice; Monida Pass, broken snow floor.

percent increase; and Pacific Power & Light Co. customers could face a 4.6 percent increase.

On Thursday the PUC issued an order allowing the utilities to apply for the rate hikes Jan. 25.

Hours later, Idaho Power in Boise and Washington Water Power in Spokane announced they would each request a stay of the order, and reconsideration.

Idaho Power spokesman Larry Wyler said his company has never sought CWIP costs, and doesn't agree with the PUC interpretation of the court ruling.

"Our ratepayers benefit better under the system we have," he said, adding that "we do not think the Supreme Court was saying what WWP spokesman Rob Streng said. WWP doesn't think the PUC properly interpreted the high court ruling."

"It's the rate impact on our customers, we're concerned with here," he added.

If CWIP costs were approved, for WWP, it would include passing on some of the costs of two terminated Washington Public Power Supply System nuclear plants, according to the PUC.

The high court ruling came on an appeal filed by UP&L in a previous case. But spokesman Grant Pendleton said UP&L has no plans to file immediate for CWIP costs.

Pacific Power & Light had no immediate comment.

Ward of the PUC, an attorney, rejected claims that the commission misinterpreted the ruling.

"They (the utilities) know and we know that the court ruled as a matter of law that CWIP has to be included, and presumably will rule that way in the future if we try to dodge the ruling."

Solution proposed for Central America

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kissinger Commission on Central America, preparing to submit its report to President Reagan, is expected to say that $1 billion in economic and military aid — coupled with free elections — are the keys to peace and prosperity in the region in the coming years, U.S. officials say.

The report is due to be completed next week. But it was not clear whether the panel, made up of a broad range of political views, will be able to reach a consensus on all issues, the officials said.

They added that the commission is still far from finishing its work, raising doubts as to whether its Jan. 10 deadline will be met.

The panel is understood to have reached agreement on the broad outlines of its policy recommendations but has had difficulty in achieving a consensus on how much weight should be given to its more controversial proposals.

For example, all agree that protection of human rights should be a high priority concern for the United States but there are contrasting views on the degree of emphasis this area is to be given relative to security issues, one informant said.

According to the sources, who asked not to be identified, the commission is not expected to depart significantly from the Central American policy now in place.

One official, pointing out that the commission will call for $1 billion in economic and military aid over several years, said that sum is roughly the same that the United States has spent in the region over the past few years.

However, State Department figures show that the United States allocated $1.157 billion to Central America in 1982 and 1983 alone, with more than 70 per cent tacked for economic aid. This would suggest that the Kissinger commission is recommending a decrease in aid levels, but the officials said it was not clear what time frame the panel's proposals cover.

According to one official, the panel will recommend that the bulk of the aid be earmarked for economic assistance, consistent with present policy.

Warm snap spurs flooding

By The Associated Press

Rivers bloated by heavy rain and an unusual January thaw overflowed their banks and isolated some communities Thursday in the Pacific Northwest where hundreds of people fled to the hills and many highways were blocked by landslides or high water.

Elsewhere, two school buses collided with other vehicles on icy roads in two northern Georgia counties Thursday morning, killing one adult and injuring two, but no children were hurt. Police said highways were glazed as temperatures dropped below freezing following a night of rain.

About 5,000 homes in Houston remained without water, although the record Texas freeze that burst hundreds of water mains last week had given way to top-down, sunny weather with highs in the 70s this week.

The warm snap in the Northwest and upper Midwest follows a frigid December in which the average temperature for the month was the coldest ever. In more than two dozen cities from the Rockies to the Great Lakes to the Gulf Coast,

Rape suspect freed; prosecutor out of money

PONCA CITY, Okla. (AP) — A man charged with first-degree rape has gone free because state budget cutbacks left a district attorney too broke to try the case, and the attorney general says prosecutors no longer can afford to "fight every battle."

Joe Wideman, district attorney for Kay County, said Thursday a 25 percent reduction in his office's budget last month led to the dismissal of the charge against Toby Dewey, 24, who was accused of raping a Ponca City woman in May.

The president of the state District Attorneys Association said the Kay County case was probably the first in which a charge involving a violent crime had been dismissed because of money problems.

Wideman said his office could not find the alleged victim, who had moved to Texas, nor could it afford to bring her to Ponca City if they had located her.

The prosecutor's office also could not pay the $250 it would cost to obtain a transcript of the victim's testimony from an earlier hearing.

"We wanted to go to trial with the transcript because we felt that would sustain our case," Wideman said. "So we zipped out and had to dismiss."

The prosecutor said if the alleged victim can be located, the state could again press charges within a seven-year statute of limitations. Conviction of a charge of first-degree rape is punishable by a jail term ranging from five years to life.

"The case occurred during the worst possible financial month," he said. "If the trial had occurred at a different time, something else might have been done. It was just a case of no dollars and bad timing."

A shortfall in revenue that began with a downturn in oil revenues in late 1982 forced state agencies last month to cut their budgets 26 percent. County district attorneys, whose budgets are set by the state, had to furlough or lay off 456 people. Wideman said his office furloughed two assistants and two paralegal assistants.

The Oklahoma Legislature convened Tuesday to cut an estimated $54 million from the current state budget of $1.69 billion and $250 million from the 1984-85 appropriation.

Wideman said his office's budget is being managed month by month. "This month, we're in pretty good shape, with a shortfall of only 12 percent. We probably won't have to furlough anyone."

Broke farmer lets 167 cattle die

BODE, Iowa (AP) — A farmer who neighbors said may have "snapped" under financial pressure abandoned his cattle in subzero weather while he and his family headed to Florida, authorities said after finding the remains of 167 cattle scattered on the farm.

An anonymous telephone call to Humboldt County Sheriff Marvin Anderson alerted authorities last week to the dead animals on the farm of Warren Wood. Investigators found at least 167 dead cattle in barns and throughout the farmyard and believe they either starved or froze to death in weakened conditions.

Carcasses were strewn around the feed lot, some stacked against the other as the weakened animals tried to seek warmth in subzero temperatures last month.

"It was probably a case of negligence," Dr. Merle Lange, state veterinarian with the Iowa Department of Agriculture, said Thursday.

"Some of them starved to death and some (who) died in their weakened conditions were victims of the cold. It's a real sad situation. It's the worst case we've encountered this year."

Neighbors blamed the situation on increasing financial problems experienced by Wood, but livestock experts said the case was an extreme exception.

"For today's cattle feeders, there is a small amount of profit," said Bruce Berven, executive vice president of the Iowa Cattleman's Association. "The case that we're speaking of here is a most unusual one."

Chuck Levitt, senior livestock analyst with Shearson-American Express in Chicago, said despite a huge sell-off by cattlemen in the face of bad weather, a shortage of feed and the new federal dairy herd reduction program, the meat markets have remained strong.

Heterosexual hit by AIDS

NEW YORK (AP) — The discovery of AIDS in an elderly Florida couple provides the strongest evidence yet that the disease, most commonly found in homosexuals, can be spread through heterosexual contact.

Doctors at the University of Miami said Thursday that a woman in her 70s with none of the risk factors for acquired immune deficiency syndrome appears to have contracted the illness through sexual contact with her husband of 50 years.

The husband, a hemophiliac, presumably got AIDS through blood products given to him to treat his hemophilia, said Dr. Arthur Pitelkin, professor of medicine at the University of Miami. Transfusions of such blood products have been recognized as a likely means of transmitting AIDS, doctors said.

Good time to study geothermal limits

The state Department of Water Resources has taken a wise, and in our judgment, overdue step in looking at ways to better regulate the geothermal aquifer that underlies much of the Magic Valley.

The department's director, Ken Dunn, says he will decide by the end of January on whether to create a special geothermal water management district, a move that has the support of Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, and others.

We think Dunn should create the special district.

The aquifer's existence has been known for decades. Hot springs are relatively common in the region, suggesting young geologic formation.

Until recently, pressure on the aquifer's capacity was modest, consisting of a few hot-baths and home heating systems.

But in the past few years, however, major development potential has been explored, and in some cases is now being used. For example, the College of Southern Idaho uses geothermal water to heat buildings. The Twin Falls School District is at least thinking about the same use for its new elementary school.

The city of Twin Falls recently was granted a state permit to tap the aquifer for the city's new pool.

Yet, no one really knows the aquifer's extent and capacity for regeneration. Some indications are that the pool of hot water is limited.

Further permits, in our opinion, should be issued with special caution, pending a lot more study of the aquifer's capacity. The Water Resources Department now is undertaking that kind of study.

This is not to say there is no more room for geothermal development in the valley. Hardly.

But with pressure growing for how to best use this geothermal resource, we think the department is wise to begin to establish some regulatory guidelines before problems develop, not after.

Triumph doesn't alter diplomacy rule

WASHINGTON — The Rev. Jesse Jackson brought off his mission to Damascus with all the success of the Great Gatsby, scoring three goals in a single night. Jackson won the release of Navy Lt. Robert O. Goodman Jr., the left President Reagan with egg on his face; and he revived a Democratic presidential race that was about to expire from terminal boredom.

This was a triumph. Under the rules of the game, Jackson is entitled to writing every possible ounce of publicity and political advantage from his enterprise.

His private audacity succeeded where the government's formal diplomacy had failed. He-he-he; and as Everett Ruess used to say, heh-heh-heh as well.

But before the waves of adulation subside, this must be said for the record: Jackson's success in this particular instance ought not to detract from a long-term public policy. It is simply tactics — if it also unfolded — for private citizens to negotiate with foreign governments. This has been the rule for nearly 200 years, and the rule is sound.

The wisdom of the rule is not diminished by the success stories we remember. The first of these stories, involving a pacifist and conscientious objector by the name of George Logan, is strikingly similar to the story of Jesse Jackson. Just as the United States and Syria today are embroiled in an undeclared war in Lebanon, so the United States and France in 1979 were locked in an undeclared war at sea. Just as Syria had captured Lt. Goodman, so the French had captured a number of American sailors. Even the political situation offers parallels. Logan was an ardent internationalist, a liberal Democrat by contemporary labeling; the president was Federalist John Adams, a progenitor of today's Republicans.

Logan went to Paris on his own. He talked with Foreign Minister Charles Talleyrand. He wined and dined with Philippe Merlin, head of the Directory, and exchanged toasts toward peace with him. Logan won the sailors' release and brought back messages from Talleyrand. Jefferson later acknowledged that Logan's efforts "did much toward preventing declared war with France. Adams saw things differently. He denounced the "temerity and impudence of individuals affecting to interfere in public affairs between France and the United States." The Senate passed a resolution asserting that messages carried by private individuals rather than by accredited representatives should be rebuffed. Such interference would produce confusion and disorder, and would "separate the people from their government."

In 1979, as a direct consequence of Logan's mission, Congress adopted what has become known as the Logan Act, forbidding such negotiations by private individuals. Undeterred, Logan undertook another mission in 1810; this time with England — and this time he failed.

Since then dozens of private citizens have played a hand at diplomatic tables. Cyrus Eaton appointed himself as ambassador at large to the Soviet Union. At the time of the Cuban missile crisis, John Scall, who was then an ABC correspondent at the State Department, served as a conduit between the White House and the Soviet Embassy.

No one ever has been prosecuted successfully for violation of the Logan Act, and it is a lead-pipe certainty that no charges will be brought against Jesse Jackson. "Nothing succeeds like success," goes the maxim, and Jackson's success will vault him at least temporarily into third place among the Democratic contenders.

But there is another proverb worth recalling. It is to this effect, that success ought never to be confused with talent. Let us be grateful that the Syrians, for whatever reason of their own, decided the time was ripe either to pursue peace or to play a game of political put-down with Reagan. Jackson's mission provided a handy opportunity for Syria to make a diplomatic move without embracing a diplomatic commitment.

The gentleman's charismatic pleading, we may fairly assume, had little to do with the resulting gesture. Even so, let us hear a round of cheerful applause. Welcome home, lieutenant. And thank you, Jesse.

James Kilpatrick writes his column, "A Conservative View," from Washington.

A woman candidate would have to run for vice president

BOSTON — Whatever you think of Jesse Jackson — and this is a week when grudging respect has been wrung out of all sorts of detractors — the man has shown grit. He has gone out there, and I don't mean just out to Syria. He's gone out on the line running for the presidency.

Ellen Goodman

Jesse Jackson didn't sit politely waiting until "the time was right" for a black candidate. He didn't sociably agree that he would hurt the cause. He wasn't intimidated by the common wisdom that the first black would have to be overqualified. He turned himself into a real live candidate, and Robert Goodman isn't the only American who's gotten it better by the by.

Fear this not because I have jumped on the Jesse-for-President team. Over the years, I have found his political statements more complex than a bumper sticker but on a par with a 60-second television commercial. As President, he'd make a great ambassador.

the absolute inaction in the so-called campaign for a woman vice-president.

Back in October the Democratic National Convention set the national Organizational Women convention and promised to consider a woman for the second spot. Soon, women were being mentioned in the press: congresswomen, mayors, lieutenant governors.

After much "consideration" and "mentioning," after demure statements by women that they might be interested, the whole thing came to a dead halt. I have only heard of one woman actually running for the Democratic nomination for vice-president, on a "campaign for a positive future," and Barbara Moran Hubbard is not what you would call a contender.

Traditionally, no one is supposed to run for the vice-presidency. The winner is supposed to be tipped. But then traditionally, the vice-president isn't a woman. This year, I am convinced, any woman who wants the office is going to have to actually run for it.

A woman's campaign for the Democratic vice-presidency would be a tricky business. There are at least two worst-case scenarios for party members. In one of them, a popular female candidate loses at the San Francisco convention and a number of the delegates, especially women, do home angry. There goes the gender gap and possibly the election.

In the second scenario, a woman wins the second spot and the ticket loses. If the polls show that she was a factor in defeat, it could take as long for the next female candidate as it took for John F. Kennedy to replace Al Smith.

Jesse Jackson campaign, it appears that you can't wait for the right time; you have to make the time right. (There, doesn't that sound like Jesse?)

The greatest handicaps that a woman faces in a national campaign are those of recognition and public confidence in her own life. A woman who wants to make it has to become a familiar name and face and voice. A candidate for the job has to break away from the presidency news exposure to stay the residue of insecurity about women in the Oval Office.

I know that qualifications are often a matter of public relations. The highest office Abe Lincoln held before winning the presidency was as a one-term congressman. The vice-presidency is a job formerly held by Sears, Roebuck and the Brooklyn Daily Eagle. But a woman's qualifications are going to be studied more carefully than those of a male counterpart.

It takes time to make the unusual seem familiar. It takes time for people to make a transition from the anonymous idea of "a woman" to the personal idea of this woman. It takes an early, long and hard campaign. The troubles of such a race include money for openers and for closers. Many of the "mentioned" already have offices to lose. It's hard to run for the post of running mate. Candidates and conventions like to match political spouses. Winning is a long shot. Ask Jesse about that.

But if women sit around waiting, they'll be "discarded" and "mentioned" right into the next election. The problem with women in politics isn't that too many lose; it's that too few make the race. It is possible that 1984 could bring in the first woman vice-president in our history. But the only way to get from here to there is to run the whole way. Run, ma'am, run.

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe.

Daily, we trust Russians

Lately, I've been hearing a lot of people saying that they don't want nuclear weapons, but that we can't do anything about it because we just can't trust the Russians. An interesting paradox.

In reality, we trust the Russians every day of our lives. We trust that the Russians value life just as much as we do. Daily, we trust that the Russians even though they definitely have the capability, won't blow us off the face of the earth.

America "is not Mexico"

Ron Martinez, this is not Mexico. This is the United States of America.

The advantage that Mexican people have here is not because of any accomplishment of your people.

The public schools, the hospitals, the churches and places of employment — all of these things and more did not come about because of the interest and efforts of Mexican people who eagerly take advantage of the opportunities made available by many years of work and dedication of American citizens.

The special "rights" of which Mexicans seem to think they are entitled can range from ignoring a leash law to causing an all night disturbance from excessively loud music, loud voices and car horns honking to getting jobs that belong to Americans to any well-meaning benefits they can obtain.

As to the "write ups" about Mexicans in our newspapers, we could easily do without any of them and never feel like we have missed anything of importance.

Laws can entrap the nation

It is impossible to thoroughly discuss the complexity of our laws in 300 words, therefore, this continuance.

This nation had gotten itself so entrapped in its laws that it seems a mystery to lawyers and their cohorts in that profession. Let's take a look at some of the confusing angles of "justice."

First we have laws calling for the death penalty for certain crimes. However, that law hasn't been enforced for years. It has become a hollow playing of press and lawyers alike and used only for publicity.

We stand at attention as we recite the Pledge of Allegiance with its last words "with liberty and justice for all." Over the years we have seen the word justice prostituted by the depth of the purse. We see the same justice furtively peeking from behind her blindfold to better gauge the pile of silver on the tray listening carefully for the clink of other pieces being dropped.

A lawyer will take the case of an admitted criminal and after looking into that person's wallet will find "new and vivid evidence" that may prove the person's innocence or the public and the lawyer comes into court and unconstitutional. In any event the murderer, the embezzler, banker or professional drug peddler goes free or at best will serve two days in jail at his convenience. So many times, the new and vivid evidence never gets beyond the public and the lawyer comes into court with a jerry-built conviction of coached witnesses, vague claims and vicious assertions. The tapes that mysteriously came to life, the eye witness found hiding behind the woods have disappeared.

We must ask ourselves what the justice is that is paraded before us. It is based on solid fact or does it rest with that pile of coins so dear to the itchy fingers of lawyers?

Granted that every person is entitled to his day in court but can security be based on a definition of justice with the legal charade we face today? A charade that has been foisted upon us by lawyers and legislators alike. In fact most of the laws that are essential to the well-being of our nation have already been enacted and now, like ghouls prowling the graveyard, lawyers are promoting legislation that is nitpicking and little else but concealing getting their fingers in the gravy boat. A case in point is the Sullivan case with its ten years of appeals and the final decision being based on the finding in the first trial.

What to do about this mess of legal entanglement? Elect people to state and national offices pledged to fight for sanity in our legal system. Who will fight for repeal of frivolous laws that permit the filing of a $10,000 suit over a broken fingernail or coffee stains on the public and the lawyer comes into court with a jerry-built conviction of coached witnesses, vague claims and vicious assertions. The tapes that mysteriously came to life, the eye witness found hiding behind the woods have disappeared.

Hungry wildlife eat up fund

By MARY STEVENSON
Associated Press

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's winter has been so harsh that the state already has spent what it usually disburses during its entire season on emergency wildlife feeding to top officials say.

Jerry Conley, director of the state Department of Fish and Game, said Thursday the agency has spent about $150,000 since the snow and cold hit in December. That's what Idaho spent the two previous winters.

Conley said the money goes for food, and for planking to protect haystacks from elk, deer and other animals forced to leave their traditional wintering grounds in search of food.

The question of when to feed animals and when not is one that has aroused occasional disagreement between Fish and Game and the public.

"Wildlife officials don't want to feed the animals if it isn't necessary. And sometimes the public thinks it's necessary when it really isn't," Conley said.

"We would prefer obviously not to feed animals," he said. "When you do, you encourage the animal to come back next year whether it needs to be fed or not."

Conley said it costs a minimum of $40 to feed one animal all winter.

Often, the feed formulas aren't finely tuned to the animal's needs, and a herd can suffer a lowered reproductive rate the following year.

Further, when the animals are bunched in one spot for a feeding program, that increases the chances of disease and draws predators, he said.

How does the department decide when to feed the animals?

"When it looks like the animal is starting to go downhill very rapidly," Conley said.

"A lot of times people make up their minds an animal is in poor shape or should be because of the cold. They don't realize the animal can handle it," he said.

Conley said that if people want to feed wildlife on their own, they should first contact the Fish and Game Department.

Idaho has about 100,000 elk and at least 250,000 deer.

He said the public is more aware of elk this year because the herd is "literally exploding" in size due to stringent hunting regulations and better herd management.

Economy gets good forecast

BOISE (AP) — After three days of testimony from economists, businessmen and industry representatives, it appears Idaho's economy is recovering and the state will show at least 5 percent growth this year, says Sen. Vearl Crystal, R-Idaho Falls.

Crystal chairs the Legislature's Revenue Projection Committee. It has been taking testimony in Boise this week and next Wednesday will estimate Idaho's tax revenue for the 12 months starting July 1.

"The economy will be better this year than it was last year," said Crystal. "It appears the recession has bottomed out."

Crystal and Rep. John Brooks, R-Gooding, were conducting the session, but Brooks left Tuesday after the death of his father in Arizona.

He won't be back until next week, a couple of days after the 1984 legislative session convenes on Monday.

Crystal said the committee will wind up testimony Friday, but won't work on the revenue projection until Brooks returns and has had time to review the testimony.

The revenue estimate is the figure used to set the next state budget.

Legislative Auditor Bruce Balderston said that, after testimony is complete, he will make a computer study and comparison with last year's testimony.

By Monday morning, Balderston said, all 10 committee members will have a computer study analyzing the testimony.

Officials fear spring floods

BOISE (AP) — The potential for serious spring flooding in Idaho is more severe than it has been in years, the state disaster services director says.

But Darrell Waller said Thursday that only time will tell the full impact, and it appears officials are doing everything they presently can to prepare for flooding.

Waller, hydrologists, Idaho National Guard representatives and other state and federal officials met Thursday to discuss the flooding situation.

"We were just trying to see where all the areas were and pinpoint problems — if there are any," Waller said.

He said the Big Lost and Little Lost rivers could join the list of usual trouble spots this year because of decreased flows after the October earthquake that shook central Idaho.

"Early flooding problems are common on the Walker, Salmon, Portneuf and Teton rivers, and those could be trouble spots again this spring," Waller said.

"Most people, particularly the operators of reservoirs, are doing everything they can to draw down (water level) in anticipation of increased flow," he said.

Businessman marks 75th

GARDEN CITY (AP) — Idaho potato magnate J.R. Stimpert says he'll live to be 100 years old.

Stimpert made that vow Wednesday night in Garden City at a party celebrating his 75th birthday.

"I have no damn reason for being here except I kept it at it," Stimpert told 500 guests. "I hung on and stayed with it. I didn't melt out."

"We're going to expand, expand, expand," he added.

Stimpert angled into Micro Technology, his venture into computer chips, as his biggest accomplishment of the past year.

He said the company will make history in the computer chip world. Guests, including Gov. John Evans and U.S. Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, helped Stimpert celebrate.

Salvador complies with U.S. demands

By ARTHUR ALLEN Associated Press

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — The removal from Salvador of two officers linked to leftist death squads is an "encouraging sign" that the Salvadoran military is complying with U.S. demands to clean up its human rights record, an American official said Thursday. The military high command bowed to U.S. government pressure at a time when the war against leftist guerrillas is going badly for government troops. State Department officials in Washington say they are preparing requests to Congress for substantial military aid. They say, however, that the increased aid will not be granted unless the Salvadoran government cracks down on right-wing death squads and improves its record on human rights.

The two officers reassigned to posts outside of El Salvador were identified by a government official late Wednesday as Lt. Col. Aristides Alfonso Marroque, former national police intelligence chief, and Maj. Jose Ricardo Pazo, former treasury police intelligence chief.

Soviets set school reform

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has announced the first major overhaul of its educational system since 1956 — reforms that call for more years of school, improving technical skills and smaller classes for its more than 13 million students.

Pyodor Fanchin, first deputy minister of education, told the official news agency Tass on Thursday the reforms to be implemented during the next six years will "improve... deepen and perfect" Soviet education.

A lengthy draft of the education reforms was published Wednesday in the Communist Party daily Pravda. Included in the draft reforms was a call for improved instruction in Russian in the Soviet regions where other languages are spoken.

Tunisian soldiers fire guns into rioters

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Soldiers opened fire on rioters trying to burn a supermarket in the heart of the city's shopping district Thursday in the latest outbreak of violence over food price hikes. Unofficial reports said 17 people have been killed in a week of nationwide rioting.

Troops fired on a group of youths who stormed the Magasin Generale, on the edge of the Medina, the labyrinth of tiny market streets in the heart of the old city. The casualty toll was not known. But an Associated Press reporter saw three wounded demonstrators carried away as security forces used automatic weapons, pistols and tear gas in a 30-minute barrage that drove away the crowd. The Medina was sealed off by tanks and the area was reported calm less than an hour later. The Magasin Generale carries both food and clothing.

Sporadic fire from automatic weapons also was heard around the south coast city of Monastir, birthplace of President Habib Bourguiba, and demonstrations were reported in other provincial towns including Kram, La Goulette and La Marsa north of Tunis.

Ex-president in custody

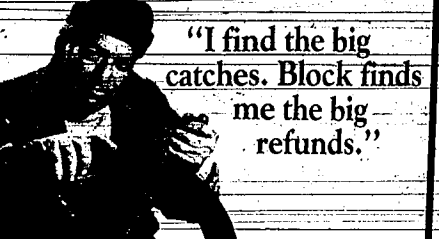

PLAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Nigeria's new military ruler, Maj. Gen. Mohammed Buhari, declared Thursday that the country's deposed leaders will be kept in jail until the Supreme Military Council decides whether to put them on trial. The 41-year-old Buhari did not indicate when Nigeria's Africa's most popular leader will be released to civilian rule but he was reported to get tidie factories working again and install a "sense of ethics" into Nigerian workers.

of at least 50 percent in prices and many vendors have refused to comply, prompting violence in some markets. The Nigerian News Agency said military authorities in the central city of Jos reported a soldier was shot to death in a fight in the marketplace.

Buhari said Alhaji Shehu Shagari, the elected civilian president ousted from office Saturday, was in military custody, and that the new regime was determining whether he and other former government leaders should be kept in jail.

No-win fight hits Angola

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Deep within Angola, two guerrilla movements, an estimated 20,000 Cuban troops, the Marxist Angolan government and the powerful army of South Africa are embroiled in what appears to be a no-win struggle for supremacy.

The recent flurry of diplomatic signals and initiatives on Angola and neighboring South-West Africa seem unlikely to resolve the basic political disputes. South African military spokesmen declined comment Thursday on the status of the army's month-old offensive, which has included the bombing of a guerrilla headquarters 180 miles inside Angola and ground action 150 miles north of the border.

South Africa says its targets are guerrillas based in Angola who are fighting to end South African rule of South-West Africa, also called Namibia. A desert territory of 1 million people, Namibia is larger than Texas and lies between South Africa and Angola. The League of Nations gave South Africa control over South-West Africa after World War I and South Africa has ignored repeated United Nations resolutions to grant the territory independence.

For 17 years the South-West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO), backed by the Angolan government, has waged a low-key guerrilla war against rule by the white-minority government of South Africa. South Africa says its latest offensive against SWAPO bases in southern Angola, launched Dec. 6, has claimed 108 guerrilla lives with the loss of 10 South African troops.

White the Angolan army contends with South African troops in the south, it faces an equally serious threat elsewhere in the country. Jonas Savimbi's guerrilla movement, the Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA), claims growing success in driving against the Angolan capital.

Rebels bomb strategic port

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Rebels in planes and speedboats bombed and strafed a port in the Gulf of Fonseca Thursday, killing at least one person and wounding eight, military sources said.

It was the third attack in as many days on Potosi, 110 miles northwest of Managua by Honduran-based rebels who are backed by the CIA, the sources said. The attack came hours before U.S. special envoy Richard Stone arrived in Potosi to negotiate with the leftist Sandinista government. On his fifth trip through the area since President Reagan named him in April, Stone arrived in Managua saying he came "with something specific in mind" to find out whether the tentative signals there just taken or whether they signify something more important.

The Sandinistas have made gestures in recent months they say are aimed at defusing tensions with their domestic and foreign critics. Stone announced a planned trip to Bogota, Colombia, and Alfredo Laun, a U.S. Embassy official there. He said Stone was en route to Washington after his visit to Managua. No further details were given.

Fourth-grader Taml Jones finds that day-dreaming is the best way to pass the 60 seconds while gargling with fluoride.

Children battle way to better teeth

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—It is not likely that there will be a Jane Fonda workout book for teeth or that dental care will become as popular as aerobics. But Magic Valley youngsters still are being taught how to take care of their mouths.

The South Central District Health Department, schools and dentists are cooperating to present a dental-education program, and more recently, with parental approval, they have been providing a regular fluoride rinse to fight tooth decay.

The efforts apparently have paid off, because a survey shows a decrease this year in the number of cavities, missing and filled teeth in area schoolchildren, according to Eloise Mercer, this district's dental hygienist.

In a 1978-79 survey of 3,678 elementary children statewide, 4.2 percent had tooth troubles. In a 1982-83 study of the same number of children, the number fell to 3.58 percent. Of the 900 Magic Valley children who were tested, the results were even better, Mercer says.

"It doesn't sound like a whole lot, but it's a remarkable figure," she says.

In addition, the Magic Valley has an advantage because of the amount of fluoride found in area water systems, particularly in Buhl and Ellier, Mercer says.

And there is more good news. During her duties teaching dental health and doing follow-up checks on elementary students, Mercer says she is finding cleaner mouths. That is, there are fewer signs of a decay breeding ground material called plaque.

She believes the fluoride rinse program in the various districts is responsible. Because the students are rinsing each week, they are reminded about taking care of their mouths and probably are brushing their teeth better, Mercer says.

In the Magic Valley, about 6,000 children — from kindergarten through sixth grade — participate in the rinse program.

Mercer does find some discouraging signs, however.

"For instance, some children she has talked with don't even own toothbrushes, she says. Some parents apparently don't believe there is a need to brush "baby teeth," which eventually will fall out, she says.

Another bad sign is bleeding and puffy gums, which Mercer attributes to poor diets. The economy might have something to do with this, she says.

One girl told Mercer that she did not have anything to eat all week but potatoes because her father was unemployed.

In teenagers, bleeding gums may signal a tobacco chewer. Tobacco contains caustic material that acts like a "scoop" on gums and exposes the roots of the teeth, she says.

Unfortunately because of scheduling and other problems, dental care is not a priority in junior high and high school, Mercer says.

Mercer presents programs and provides her expertise in the 16 Magic Valley school districts that have contracted with the health department for health services. In all, more than 2,000 elementary students have received some dental-care education through the district, she says.

Mercer also works as a resource person to teachers and non-contracting schools. In some districts, school nurses, dentists and their assistants have been teaching dental care.

Defends 'Nebraska?' Hansen backs Baptist school

By HAL BERTON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The plight of the "Nebraska?" may not have become a national cause yet, but it has managed to attract the attention of Idaho Rep. George Hansen.

In recent weeks, Hansen has sprung to the defense of the seven Baptist fathers, who have been prosecuted by Nebraska officials for sending their children to an unaccredited church school.

On Thanksgiving Eve, after refusing to testify at a hearing, the fathers were sent to jail by a state judge for contempt of court. They have yet to be released.

"It's mind-boggling what's happening there," Hansen said Thursday.

In December, Hansen made two trips to Louisville, Neb., to visit with the seven men, and he has helped rally support for their cause from members of fundamentalist churches.

Hansen says that the court proceedings during a portion of the trial reminded him of the movie "To Kill a Mockingbird," which portrayed the trial of a wrongly accused rapist in the South.

"In years past, Hansen has traveled to Iran and Bolivia on behalf of jailed Americans.

Hansen says his involvement stems from his position as coordinator of the Coalition for Religious Freedom, an ad-hoc group of religious leaders.

The real of the coalition, according to Hansen, "is to make sure that the First Amendment rights are protected and that the state keeps its hands off religion."

"Because we are interested in this case, I decided to go to Nebraska to see what was going on."

Following his first trip, Hansen began to lobby the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights to intervene with state officials on behalf of the jailed fathers. Hansen says that he also has met with Secretary of Education Terrel Bell to discuss the case.

On Wednesday, Melvin Jenkins, the commission's regional director met with representatives of Nebraska Gov. Bob Kerrey's office. Later Wednesday, Clarence M. Pendleton, the commission's national chairman, • See HANSEN on Page A8

Jackson Lake to be lowered

By HAL BERTON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Beginning Oct. 1, the federal Bureau of Reclamation will reduce dramatically the level of Wyoming's Jackson Lake, a key storage reservoir for Magic Valley irrigation waters.

Sieve Wade, a bureau spokesman, says the action is necessary to eliminate the risk of catastrophic flooding that would result if the unstable Jackson Lake Dam fails.

The water-level reduction also will make easier the repair of the dam, an $81-million project that could take up to four years to complete, Wade said Thursday.

According to Wade, the lake, following the October drop, will retain less than a third of its original storage capacity.

When filled to capacity, Jackson Lake provides some 97,000 acre-feet of storage capacity in the Twin Falls Canal Co.'s 186,000-acre-foot-to-the-Minidoka-Project and some 200,000 acre-feet to the North Side Canal Co. But the reservoir has not been completely full since 1977.

In 1978, engineers reported that the dam probably would not withstand a major earthquake in the fault-ridden Jackson Lake area. If the dam broke, it would unleash flood waters that could jeopardize tourists, downstream residents and some $120 million worth of property, according to bureau studies.

So to reduce the flood potential, the • See LAKE on Page A8

Gooding struggles with flood dangers

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — High-water problems faced the new Gooding City Council this week.

Residents of the 700 and 800 blocks of Montana Street asked council members to take measures to prevent a recurrence of last week's flooding of the Little Wood River in that area.

Twelve homes had their basements flooded, in some cases ground levels flooded, in what officials called a unique situation, last Wednesday through Friday.

Fire Chief Pat Bishop said that jams of ice and silt that raised the relatively low river flow to the flood level.

"These attending Tuesday night's council meeting said some homeowners experienced damaged furnaces and water heaters and lost personal effects.

The homeowners suggested that the city could repair and raise the level of an existing retaining wall, drag the river channel to remove large rocks and debris, remove narrow bridges and use a "clam shell" to remove large pieces of ice.

"One we have sandbags now to get ready before it floods again," one of the residents asked, reflecting the sentiment of the group.

Mayor Gene Heller asked if the affected property owners would be willing to help fill and place the sandbags when the supplies are available. The group agreed.

Councilman Bud Moline said that aside from funding, the biggest problem facing the city's efforts to repair the river will be access to the area. • See COUNCIL on Page A8

19-year-old spends night in snow; found dead

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — An Ohio woman who went vacationing in Sun Valley died early Wednesday, apparently from hypothermia, after trying all night in the snow.

The temperature dropped to about 15 degrees below zero during the night.

Sherri Ann Knauf, 19, of Bay Village, Ohio, was found about noon Wednesday by a jogger.

She had disappeared from a group of friends Tuesday evening, according to Cal Nevland, the Ketchum police chief.

Knauf was pronounced dead at 1:40 p.m. Wednesday, at Moritz Community Hospital in Sun Valley, after efforts to revive her failed.

An autopsy is being performed to determine the cause of death.

"At this point in the investigation, there is no sign of foul play," Nevland said Thursday. He said the woman probably fell down a 15-foot bank along Warm Springs Road, on the edge of Ketchum, and spent the night in deep snow.

Nevland said she might have been found for several hours when she was found.

Knauf was visiting Sun Valley with the family of a college friend from California. She was a student at Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, Nevland said.

On Tuesday night, Knauf and some friends were at the Creekside Bar and Grill in Ketchum when she disappeared from the group at about 8:30 p.m.

Nevland said her friends searched for her for a while before returning to a bar. After the bars closed at 1 a.m., they continued their search, thinking she might have gone to another bar.

At 2:40 a.m. Wednesday morning her friends reported her missing to Ketchum police, who watched for her throughout the night, Nevland said.

"Then at about 12:30 p.m. Wednesday, a jogger found her body at the bottom of a bank off Warm Springs Road, about a half-mile from where she disappeared.

Nevland said that Knauf apparently was walking west on the north side of Warm Springs Road, crossed the road and climbed up about a three-foot snow bank before falling down the bank.

There were signs that Knauf struggled in the deep snow but was unable to get back to the road, he said.

Nevland said that the woman probably died from exposure because there was no evidence of foul play or any other cause of death.

The autopsy will be completed by early next week, says Russ Mike, the Blaine County coroner.

Teachers still seek funding

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley-area Idaho Education Association leaders say they will continue to lobby for higher funding for education despite Thursday's announcement by Terrel Bell, the secretary of the U.S. Department of Education.

Bell revealed Thursday that Idaho students rank fairly high in their college entrance test scores, although the state ranks relatively low in funding of public education. (See related stories on the front page.)

At a Thursday press conference, West Minier Junior High School teacher Peggy Richards pointed to earlier statements by Bell that higher funding levels are feasible.

Idaho, especially, has the money to spend on education, said Richards, who heads the IEA's committee on financing education.

The IEA is proposing that the state spend an additional $30 million in the coming fiscal year, raising teachers' salaries to the level of those in surrounding states.

In 1981, Idaho ranked first among the 11 Western states in percentage of personal income remaining after state and local taxes were paid, she said, citing a study by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The study was completed before Idaho's sales tax was raised 1.5 cents last year, but no studies reflecting that increase or changes in other states' taxes are available. In the IEA, said Terry Gilbert, the IEA's director for this region.

In the 1981 study, Idaho residents had almost 91 percent of their income remaining, while the lowest-ranked Western state, Wyoming, had just more than 85 percent.

However, Speaker of the House Tom Stivers, R-Twin Falls, said earlier this week that adjacent states are not an appropriate comparison for Idaho.

"I don't think we should be required to pay that. The cost of living (in Idaho) is less than in California, Wyoming or Nevada. They have to pay them to get them down to that Godforsaken place," Stivers says, referring to Rock Springs, Wyo.

IEA officials say their funding-increase proposal can be paid for by making the sales-tax increase permanent and by the removal of some sales-tax exemptions.

"We believe the sales tax has been well-accepted by Idaho taxpayers, and without the additional revenue of the one-and-a-half percent increase, Idaho will lose $70 to $75 million," Richards said.

She also said that the majority of sales in Idaho are not taxed now. Among the exemptions are auto repairs, haircuts, laundry service, cable television and the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Besides the sales-tax proposals, the IEA, the officials said Thursday, also will lobby the Legislature for the following items:

- The elimination of the two-thirds majority now required to pass school bond issues and plant-facility levies.
- Legislation allowing the recall of school board members.
- A legislative bill requiring every school district to develop a discipline policy.

Man learns finders aren't keepers

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man has been ordered to serve a two-year probation for stealing a purse last summer.

Ricky Shawn Hoffman, 19, of 2155 Alta Vista Circle, was convicted of grand theft for keeping a purse he found June 2 in the parking lot of a Twin Falls store.

Last Friday, in Fifth District Court in Twin Falls, Judge Theron Ward ordered Hoffman to pay $1,365 in restitution for the items in the purse that weren't recovered.

Public defender Mike Powers, who represented Hoffman, questioned the value of the items, as stated by the owner of the purse.

Ward said that a different figure would be allowed if the state Bureau of Probation and Parole and a victim could agree on another amount.

"It's going to be rough," Ward told Hoffman, "but that's what you're going to run with it."

In another case heard last week, the probation of 31-year-old Sherry Fulkerson, of 339 Will St. in Twin Falls, was extended by 18 months because of some probation violations.

Fulkerson had been serving a two-year probation for writing a bad check.

Fulkerson admitted in court that she had failed to visit her probation officer, file monthly reports or make restitution payments since September.

Her attorney, Kathy Epelid, said Fulkerson had a suspended driver's license and had to rely on others for transportation.

Dennis Vothness, the deputy Twin Falls County prosecutor, suggested that Fulkerson spend a weekend in the Twin Falls County Jail. Epelid recommended an extended probation.

Ward sentenced Fulkerson to a week-in-jail for the violations, but then suspended it. But he said the first time she fails to meet the terms of her probation, she will spend 21 to 28 in jail.

Thief takes cash from unlocked house

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man told police Wednesday that someone entered his home and took $1,200 in cash, probably after he left the house unlocked.

Marvin Morrison, of 332 Tyler St., said his home was entered between Dec. 22 and Jan. 1.

Police said they could find no evidence of a forced entry.

The cash was taken from a bedroom, according to Morrison.

bureau reduced the level of the lake from 2,795 feet to 2,730 feet.

The reduction planned for October will take the lake to the 6,745-foot elevation, removing water pressure from an unstable section of the dam.

In a dry year, North Side Canal Co. manager Ted Diehl says the reduction could cause some serious shortages for his company's shareholders.

"This really hurts us; it takes away all of our storage," Diehl said Thursday.

Jackson Lake currently accounts for about 22 percent of the company's total storage capacity.

Since 1973, when the canal company used all of the water it had stored at Jackson Lake, to meet the demands of its customers who irrigate about 170,000 acres. And even then, there was not enough water to fully satisfy shareholders' needs, Diehl says.

But in extremely wet years, such as 1983, the canal company is able to get by without using any of its Jackson Lake capacity, he says.

Diehl believes that 1984 will be another good water year, but he says that it is impossible to predict what Mother Nature will do during the four-year period required to repair the dam.

If winter snowfall is modest, then farmers could be forced to cut back on planting potatoes and other water-intensive crops, he says.

The Bureau of Reclamation was advised to reduce the lake's level by its own in-house engineering staff and by Wyoming Gov. Ed Herschler, who fears for the safety of residents living downstream from the dam.

Paul Cleary, an aide to Herschler, says the governor hopes the dam can be rehabilitated as quickly as possible.

"The recent earthquake in south-central Idaho has re-emphasized the need to get the job done as quickly as possible," Cleary said Thursday.

A small earthquake, measuring about 2.0 on the Richter scale, also rumbled through the Jackson Lake area Thursday afternoon.

If Congress approves funding for the project this year, the Bureau of Reclamation hopes to begin repair work in the summer of 1985. This work, which will involve the installation of thousands of compacted pillars to reinforce the dam's foundation, could then be completed by 1989.

Once the dam is repaired, the lake's level will be restored to its original elevation, Wade says.

Council

City Superintendent Lloyd McLeod reported that city workers had met resistance in past years from property owners who did not want the city entering their property.

"We will need an easement or be allowed access to work on the problem. Resident cooperation will go a long way to help," Moline said.

He also pointed out that any alteration in the river channel requires the approval of the State Department of Water Resources.

The council agreed to consult with the city's consulting engineer, Bill Block, to consider long-term methods for dealing with the problem.

The citizens agreed to consult with their neighbors on the access problem.

The citizens also commended McLeod and the city crews, and Bishop and the volunteer firefighters who helped with the cleanup.

McLeod reported that the water level is down this week and the problem has eased for the moment.

Teeth

In this area, dentists are extremely cooperative, Mercer says. Teachers also reinforce the need for proper dental care during regular studies, she says.

It is a pity, however, that dental care isn't talked about in the media, except for toothpaste commercials or during Dental Health Week in February, Mercer says. "If people don't learn as children about taking care of their teeth, then as adults, they can't pass the information on to their own children."

Moline was re-elected president of the city council.

'Fiddler' to open Thursday

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Just in time to rid us of the post-holiday blues, director Tony Mannen of the College of Southern Idaho is working fast and furious with his troops of students and local talent to stage four presentations of "Fiddler on the Roof."

Mannen says he's been working at the task of auditioning, set assembly and rehearsing since late October. Along with his friends, Dick and Polly Kendrick of Easton, Pa., Mannen will have put several hundred hours of time into his labor of love when the curtain finally rises Thursday.

At least Mannen will see the fruits of his labor when curtain time arrives. The Kendricks will have returned home to Easton, where Dick will resume his profession as technical director at Lafayette College and Polly will continue her business as a costume designer.

While here, Kendrick designed the sets for the musical while his wife used her considerable talents designing costumes for the local cast.

Kendrick says he's terribly disappointed his holiday break from Lafayette is ending and he and his wife will have to return to Pennsylvania before the musical begins.

He praises Mannen, whom he's known since they were both graduate students at the University of Colorado, for combining the talents of students and townspeople to fill the many roles in "Fiddler."

"Tony's had to struggle to keep people working through the Christmas holiday. And the weather!" he says, adding that it was extremely difficult for those who had to commute for rehearsal.

Tony Moe, as the fiddler, is lifted into the air during one of the many dance numbers

At the start of all this, Mannen says he held five auditions in one week to fill the roles with CSI alumni, students and other Magic Valley residents.

A glowing musical, "Fiddler on the Roof" not only set ablaze the theater of the 1960s, but also added to the canon of great works of the American musical stage.

The characters of Tevye the dairyman, his unimpressed wife, his five daughters and other dwellers in the village of Anatevka, located in Caspian Russia, first came to light in the stories written in Yiddish by the popular fiction writer who called himself Sholom Aleichem.

The stories appeared in various publications in eastern Europe and then spread to Yiddish publications in America and elsewhere during the early part of this century. They became world-favorites in many languages as the years went on.

Because his stories so vividly rendered the folk tales and the actual lives of east European Jews at the turn of this century, they won for Sholom Aleichem an enthusiastic following, not only in the "shetls" — villages with considerable Jewish

TWIN FALLS — Sharon McKenna, Renaissance Academy artist-of-the-month, is a local artist with high aspirations.

An exhibit of her work, now on display at the academy, 511 Second Ave. E., contains a variety of watercolor and acrylic works including realistic portraits, landscapes, impressionism and optical abstracts. The show continues through January.

McKenna holds an associate of arts degree from the College of Southern Idaho and has had her works shown several times locally. She also sports a blue ribbon won at the Twin Falls County Fair.

Though she dabbled in sketching and painting as a child, McKenna did not become seriously involved in painting until about 12 years ago.

"I have taken watercolor classes from Lafayette professor of art at CSI for a long time," says McKenna. "He has taught me many of the basic techniques."

"I also have to give credit to Gloria Adams and Ron Varek," she says. "They look me under their wings and offered me encouragement to enter shows."

"The time spent on each individual piece varies," says McKenna. Sometimes a painting is finished in a relatively short period of two hours; other times, up to 65 hours can be spent on a single work of art.

"Many times I'll think I'm finished, but I'm really not," says McKenna. "I'll sit back and look at the painting and just know there is something wrong with it so I'll keep working on it until I think it looks right."

McKenna says she paints "for enjoyment as the longer time it takes me on a painting the longer before the enjoyment runs out."

Although McKenna's paintings are on diversified subjects, she says she has a penchant for horses and old withered trees.

"I would describe myself as some-

SHARON McKENNA
Artist-of-the-month

what of a historian," she says. "My paintings have sort of a nostalgic melancholy feeling to them. They are kind of impressionistic."

McKenna says her favorite media to work with is watercolor because it is freer than other mediums and it dries quickly.

"(Watercolor) is very challenging," she says. "I like the finished product better, and I am allergic to oil so I can't work with that."

Though several of her paintings have been sold to area residents and one as far away as Florida, McKenna is not consumed with the selling end of art. She says she is satisfied to make enough money to break even on the matting, framing and time involved in painting her creations.

"I'm just not well-established enough to charge exorbitant prices," she says. "Even if I was, I would not be happy over charging people."

But McKenna does have other high ambitions. She hopes to someday have her work in such distinguished places as the Smithsonian.

Ceramics exhibit benefits students

By DEBRA JOHNSON GELET
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — "If you want to see what's going on in the field of ceramics in the United States, it's here. This exhibit shows an incredible amount of variety," said Sun Valley Ceramic Center Director Kevin Enjalbal at the summit up the Third Annual Ceramic Benefit Exhibition at the gallery located at Fourth and Leadville in Ketchum.

More than 40 visiting artists and alumni of the center's ceramics department have donated the work they are exhibiting at this event through Monday.

Poole says the exhibition boasts a collection of work by some of the country's finest ceramists.

The artists include Phil Cornelius, Judith Salomon, Jenny Lind, Jim Romberg, David Shamer and Larry Clark. Dan Doak and Gayle Frutkin, current co-chairmen of the Sun Valley Center's ceramics department, are also exhibiting their works.

All proceeds from this annual benefit — and exhibition — are donated to the scholarship fund of the Salt-fired pitcher in exhibit

Sun Valley Center ceramics department to help qualifying students continue their education.

"The exhibit speaks very well of the reputation of the ceramics department at the center," Poole emphasized. "All of the pieces here were donated. Some are worth around $2,000. I think that is very, very generous of the artists."

The benefit is free to the public, and the gallery opens from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

Don't see 'Sudden Impact' unless you're Dirty Harry fan

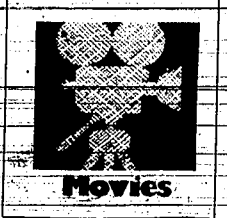

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In the preview of "Sudden Impact," a mean-looking Clint Eastwood grins his teeth and points the gigantic barrel of his magnum at the viewer.

"Go ahead, make my day," says Clint. That is about the best part of "Sudden Impact," the fourth film about Dirty Harry — Caliban Harry is the San Francisco policeman whose idea of justice is to shoot the criminals first and read them their rights later. In "Sudden Impact," Harry is on the case of a man who was found shot on a lonely stretch of beach road. He is known to the police as a mysterious woman is involved. But nothing ever goes easy for Harry during an investigation. Having harassed a Mafia boss into a hours attack in SISKIYOU PARK, benchmen are pursuing him all over town. And Harry, being the good shot he is, leaves bodies all over town. Those familiar with the Dirty Harry films know the police hierarchy diallike Harry's shoot 'em up method, but he does solve cases.

So instead of being kicked off the force, Harry is banished to a working vacation in a small town where a string of murders, similar to the one on the beach road, begin appearing.

"Sudden Impact" is pretty standard as far as Dirty Harry films go and below standard as far as good films.

The norm for this series is graphic and sadistic violence. And, nothing is different about "Sudden Impact," except that it is above average in this respect. Director Eastwood seems to like bodies flying, tough criminals, psychotic killers who sweat and hysteria.

All that blood might be forgivable with a good cast, but "Sudden Impact" relies on the same old group of tired cops and bobbie characters that has appeared in past Dirty Harry films. The one exception is in "The Execution" when the Dirty Harry is Dayle as a spunky female detective. The woman in "Sudden Impact" is Sondra Locke, a lovely fem fatale out for revenge. Locke's fragile beauty and acting talents seem a little off key in this film. But she does have some good moments. Locke, by the way, has become a fixture in Eastwood films. Kind of like the Woody Allen-Diane Keaton combo, but not so creative or fun.

Basically, the only reason for seeing "Sudden Impact" is if you happen to see Clint Eastwood fan. And admit it, there are many of you out there. Although Life magazine once described him as a graduate of the Mount Rushmore School of Acting, Eastwood does have charisma, even when speaking some of the bad dialogue in this film. "But, if you aren't a fan, miss "Sudden Impact" because it misses the mark by a mile.

Fiddler

populations — but wherever emigrants from those communities had begun to settle.

The stories continued to evolve into the late 1950s when that indomitable milkman of — Anatevka actually climbed onto a stage in the play, "Fiddler and His Daughters," by Arnold Kohn.

This prompted playwright Joseph Stein to believe the Tevye stories could be made into a musical — "Fiddler" was the result.

Jerry Block wrote the music for the Broadway hit while Sheldon Harnick created the lyrics.

Tevye can best be described as an early-day Jewish Rodney Dangerfield, who has a shrewish wife, five unmarried daughters and a horse that complains of a sore leg.

In one of his many colloquies, he churlishly complains, with eyes uplifted to his God, "With your help, I'm starting to die."

In this musical comedy, when he first heaves into sight trundling his cart cluttered with milk cans, he is less Mother Courage than Father Cornucopia.

But his complaints are good-natured, to be sure. For Tevye is on such intimate terms with God that he can foresee the next non-blessing God is going to give him, well ahead of time, and so he doesn't argue about it.

Tevye seems to believe that, with God, you shrug and stay friends.

On a more serious note, the musical tells what it is like for poor Jews living in turn-of-the-century Russia and of how tradition is their strength and solace. Tevye explains that, without tradition, their life would be as shaky as a fiddler on the roof.

The word, as well as the first song and dance, "Tradition," Arms-up-raised, feet moving in an age-old dance pattern, the entire company gives "Tradition" — the veneration, dignity and strength which bind together the robust humors of this distinctive musical.

Howard Miller, an O'Leary Junior

High School teacher, will play the lead role of Tevye and Sylvia Walters of Twin Falls will play his wife, Golde.

Mannen, who has been with CSI for nine years, praises the local talent and is especially proud that many of the characters in "Fiddler" will be performed by CSI alumni.

For himself, he makes no bones about why he's involved with this type of work. He says he does it for "self-satisfaction."

The curtain will raise January 12, 13 and 14 at 8 p.m. A matinee will be held Sunday, January 15, at 2 p.m. Mannen welcomes senior citizens and others who may not frequent the night hours to attend the matinee.

Whitcomb 'turned on' for 18 years

By DON MCLEESE
Chicago Sun-Times

At the height of the British Invasion, Ian Whitcomb captured the airwaves with a high-pitched, heavy-breathing novelty number called "You Turn Me On." Whitcomb himself remains something of a novelty: a one-hit wonder who refused to fade.

In the 18 years since his brush with fame, Whitcomb has produced a record by the name of "You Turn Me On." A collection of BBC documentaries, established himself as a Tin Pan Alley scholar (on disc and in print) and continued to record at least one ringtoned album per year. He's currently on the road, promoting a book (his fourth) and himself.

"I always have a book going, ever since 1966, when I started a book called 'After the Ball: Pop Music From Rag to Rock,'" said the dapper Briton, aging gracefully at 42, during a recent visit to Chicago. "I generally make an LP a year, sometimes two a year. They never sell, and they become collectors' items in seconds.

began to say they liked that stuff, I'd much rather have made the book, frankly, my own personal experiences."

Within the book, Whitcomb traces English rock from its roots in music-hall and skiffle, through the R & B revival that gave the Beatles the Rolling Stones their start, through the rock explosion heard 'round the world. Moving to America, he takes on surf-rock, folk-rock, psychedelic rock and all the other fads and movements that gave the mid-60s scene so much of its crazed vibrancy.

In the middle of all this, he explains how a young history student, who fancied himself a rhythm & blues purist, came to international attention through a fluke called "You Turn Me On." The song was a mistake, said Whitcomb, never intended for release, but he went along for the ride. It turned out to be a short ride, but an eventful one.

"You Turn Me On" changed my whole course," he said. "Immediately became a novelty act, definitely a one-hit novelty."

Wheelchair users appreciate civility

DEAR READERS:

"Four-Wheeler" asked why someone hasn't written a booklet on wheelchair etiquette. Well, someone has. The Scholtz Medical Center in Waterloo, Iowa, has prepared a pamphlet titled "What do I do when I meet a person in a wheelchair?" It offers suggestions for non-wheelchair users who encounter wheelchair users.

Below are the 12 guidelines from that booklet:

1. Always ask the wheelchair user if he or she would like assistance before you help. Your help may not be needed or wanted.
 2. Don't hang or lean on a person's wheelchair because it is part of the wheelchair user's personal body space.
 3. Speak directly to the person in the wheelchair, not to someone nearby as if the wheelchair user is not there.
 4. If conversation lasts more than a few minutes, consider sitting down or kneeling to get yourself on the same level as the wheelchair user.
 5. Don't demean or patronize the wheelchair user by patting him or her on the head.
 6. Give clear directions, including distance, weather conditions and physical obstacles that may hinder the wheelchair user's travel.
 7. Don't discourage children from asking questions about the wheelchair. Open communication helps overcome fearful or misleading attitudes.
 8. When a wheelchair user "transfers" out of the wheelchair to a chair, toilet, car or bed, do not move the wheelchair out of reaching distance.
 9. It is OK to use expressions like "rushing along" when speaking to the wheelchair user. It is likely the wheelchair user expresses things the same way.
 10. Be aware of a wheelchair user's capabilities. Some users can walk with aid and use wheelchairs because they can conserve energy and move about quickly.
 11. Don't classify persons who use wheelchairs as sick. Wheelchairs are used for a variety of non-contagious disabilities.
 12. Don't assume that using a wheelchair is in itself a tragedy. It is a means of freedom that allows the user to move about independently.
- The center will be happy to send the pamphlet free to anyone who requests it with a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope. Write the Public Relations Office, Scholtz Medical Center, Kimball and Ridgeway Avenues, Waterloo, Iowa 50702.
- DEAR ABBY: Twenty years ago, I was the "other woman." I thought I was lucky when he divorced his wife and married me. I was 24 and he was 35 at the time.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

Now 20 years later I'm miserable. He never changed. He just changed wives. All the heartaches he caused his first wife with his lying and cheating are now mine. His first wife didn't lose when she lost him—I lost when I got him.

Abby, please tell women to think hard and long before they get involved with a married man. I can speak only for myself, but it wasn't worth it. Too many people were hurt. First, she was hurt, and now I am hurting.

FOOLISH IN FLORIDA
DEAR FOOLISH: Your sad story is not new. Moral: You can't build happiness on the sorrow of others.

DEAR ABBY: Gill and I are living together to see if we are compatible enough for marriage. The one big problem is that he absolutely refuses to use any kind of birth control.

I am afraid of the side effects of the pill and I do not like any of the other contraceptives. We can't afford a family right now, but someday we probably will, so Gill doesn't want a vasectomy, and I don't want to have myself sterilized.

Otherwise we get along great. We really love each other.

He says birth control is the woman's responsibility. I say it is just as much the man's responsibility as the woman's. Can you settle this?

FIGHTING IN FULLERTON
DEAR FIGHTING: The responsibility should be equally shared. Don't assume the role of the "victim." You have a choice. You can always say no. In the meantime, visit your nearest family planning clinic and take Gill with you. You both have much to learn.

Sun Valley Center gets 2 grants

SUN VALLEY — The Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities received two grants from the Whittemberger Foundation at the foundation's yearly award luncheon recently.

A grant of $1,000 was awarded in general support of the Wood River Valley Music Festival; tentatively scheduled for July 1-15 in Sun Valley, Ketchum and Hailey.

The Music Festival will again feature the Broken String Quartet as well as members of the Minnesota Orchestra and the Saint Paul Chamber Orchestra. The Institute of the American West, the humanities division of the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities, received a grant of $1,750 to fund meals and lodging stipends to allow 10 Idaho school teachers to attend the Northern Rockies Folk Festival Aug. 24 in Hailey.

In addition to outdoor folk music concerts, the folk festival includes workshops aimed at training teachers to use folklife and folk art in their classrooms.

Twenty-six million adults can neither read nor write

TWIN FALLS — Illiteracy may be one of America's least recognized tragedies. Twenty-six million adult Americans cannot read or write, while another 30 million are only marginally literate.

Hosted by Johnny Cash, "Capital Cities Special Report: Can't Read, Can't Write," will be presented at 7 p.m. tonight on KTVB, surveys the scope of illiteracy in America.

Aimed at providing a forum for action as well as information, the documentary features a toll-free illiteracy "hot line" which will be flashed at regular intervals during the program. Viewers may call the number to find ways they may become involved with literacy efforts in their own communities.

"Can't Read, Can't Write" profiles a number of adults who have faced the embarrassment and isolation of illiteracy and successfully overcome their handicap. The program also focuses on some of the key organizations attempting to combat illiteracy nationally.

Through interviews across America, "Can't Read, Can't Write" documents a variety of personal illiteracy experiences, ranging from sugar cane plantations in Louisiana to cities in the Industrial Northeast. The stories tell of the isolation illiteracy creates for those who cannot live by society's conventional algorithms and have consequently been forced to develop cunning methods for disguising their handicap.

Education experts discuss the cyclical nature of illiteracy in many families, while also critiquing the state of English instruction in our schools.

"Can't Read, Can't Write" examines the politics of illiteracy through conversations with Secretary of Education Terrell Bell.

Also interviewed is Barbara Bush, an activist in the fight for literacy, as is Anthony Alvarado, chancellor of the New York City board of education. President Ronald Reagan is represented by excerpts of a recent speech on literacy initiatives, given before a group of leading educators at the White House.

Johnny Cash starred as an illiterate in the 1981 CBS made-for-TV movie, "The Pride of Jesse Hallam." Over the years, he has developed a personal interest in adult illiteracy, dating back to his experiences as a field hand in Arkansas, where he witnessed the cheating of fieldworkers unable to read the weight markings on scales.

"I have a bit of egomania there I guess," says McKenna. "But I think it would be marvelous to show in the Smithsonian."

Among her other goals is to earn the respect of her peers. McKenna says she feels she is doing this through the quality of her work and through shows such as the Renaissance Academy display.

Even if her paintings achieve great popularity, McKenna says she will not relocate to another area of the nation. She says she very much enjoys life in Twin Falls, and that the area is artistically stimulating. "There are a lot of diversified artists in the area and it really helps me to create when I'm around such creative people."

CBS wins rating race

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS' highest-rated show made it only to fifth place, but the network maintained its claim on the top spot in the Nielsen ratings for the sixth straight week.

ABC's spiky Wednesday duo, "Hotel" and "Dynasty," grabbed the top two spots in the Nielsen ratings and NBC took third and fourth, but CBS, with four shows in the Top 10, won the week ended Jan. 1.

Nos. 3 and 4 in the Top 10 were taken by NBC's "The A-Team" and its presentation of the Clint Eastwood movie "The Enforcer." CBS's highest-rated show for the week was fifth-place "60 Minutes," but the network had three others in the Top 10.

Second-place ABC also placed four shows in the Top 10 and NBC had two.

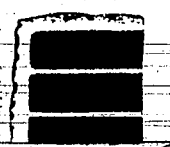

It was the first appearance at the top of the chart for "Hotel," the sleek, glamorous anthology series set in a San Francisco hotel. The show is one of the few hits among the series introduced in "the fall" and "twice finished" in second place. James Brolin and Anne Baxter star.

Oilers may lose stalwart runner

HOUSTON (AP) — Hugh Campbell may be in as the new coach of the Houston Oilers of the National Football League but Al-Pro running back Earl Campbell still wants out.

And even the Oilers' possible signing of coveted free agent Canadian Football League quarterback Warren Moon isn't deterring Earl Campbell from his desire to be traded.

"I'm sure they are going to get Warren Moon now, no doubt about it, but I still feel the same way I did during the season," Earl Campbell was quoted in Thursday's editions of the Houston Post.

The Oiler veteran also reacted angrily when asked by the Post to explain his disenchantment with the Oilers.

"I'm tired of bearing every week how I'm too dumb, washed up, too dumb to read holes, can't block, can't catch the football," he said.

"Well, I'll tell (former head coach) Eddie Blaes and anybody else who feels that way the same thing. Look at my credentials. They're a helluva lot better than he (Blaes) was as a coach."

Blaes was 8-23 as Oiler head coach. Campbell was angered last season when he was removed from a game in the second half. He complained about his removal and on Oct. 6, after the taping of a television show, said he wanted to be traded.

Hugh Campbell, who led the Edmonton Eskimos to five CFL championships, was named Oiler head coach on Tuesday.

Moon, who quarterbacked the Eskimos during Campbell's tenure, played out his option in Canada and plans to jump to the NFL.

Earl Campbell said signing another player would not change his mind. "I don't think so, sure enough not another player."

The Oiler running back said he had not met the new coach.

"I can work with anybody, but I don't think it's going to change my situation just because Coach Campbell is here," Campbell said.

"I don't know, well, bump into each other eventually — if not here, somewhere else. He may OK me out of here. He may think they're better off by letting me go. Nothing good lasts forever."

Hugh Campbell has said that if it's best for his fallback to play elsewhere, then he'll accommodate Earl's wishes.

Jump ball

Shoshone's Julie Hibbard, right, controls the fourth-quarter jump ball over Kimberly's Carla Colfax Thursday night. However, Colfax and her Bulldog teammates succeeded in maintaining their undefeated record, defeating the Indians 47-38 in a Bigwasa Canyon Conference dual at Shoshone's gymnasium. Details on this high school game and others follow on Page C2.

A new thing: Bruins open title defense

By LARRY HOVEY Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — No one has said this for 29 years.

The Twin Falls Bruins open defense of their Gem State Conference basketball championship by hosting Pocatello and traveling to Minico this weekend.

The Bruins, who tied a school record with 17 regular season victories last year, haven't been a defending conference basketball champion since Dr. Gary Simmons, Knute Westergren, Dr. Rob Ridgeway, Bob Lydum and Stan Howell won the Big Six title under then-coach Dan Foltkin in 1953-54.

"That group, however, didn't set the school record. It was 16. The 1983-84 team ran up Twin Falls' first 17-3 mark and was second by a game.

The way isn't simple to repeat for a team that plays just one away game within its own district in a home-court oriented sport. Last year the Bruins lost two league games — to Idaho Falls at home and at Skyline — on the same weekend last year.

"The facts, as Coach Astorquia sees them, are that this Bruins have the potential to repeat but the other teams have the potential to stymie them.

Twin Falls goes into league play with a good bunch of shooters who should be able to shoot well. That was expected to be a problem for Twin Falls, which isn't bad for average height but doesn't have the brawn of a year ago.

A month ago, Pocatello figured to be a good conference opener since Coach Jerry Koester is starting four juniors and a sophomore. But the young Indians, with 6-6 Clint Young as the only returning starter, have proven precocious.

"They are much further along than I thought they would be with their years. They're really very patient offensively and have been in every game that they have lost. They had a couple of late defensive letdowns or they might have beaten Burley in their return game during the holiday break. They beat Burley in the season opener and Burley is a very good team."

"They've hit more three-pointers than anyone in the conference. They made 84 percent and shot 31 percent doing that. Take that to 50 percent for shooting two-pointers and I guess it's about break even for them. But they've made a lot of them at critical times," Astorquia said.

The lead three-point candidate is Kip Helgeson who is averaging 17 points while point guard Marc McCune is leading the Gem State in assists. Younkun ranks in all rebounding categories.

"Size-wise we match up pretty well with them," Astorquia continued. "They definitely can't be overlooked, even on the home court."

Saturday night figures to be an emotional battle at Rupert where the Spartans currently enjoy a 4-1 record and will be at Blackfoot Friday night.

"They definitely are a much improved team from the first time I saw them to the last time," Astorquia said. "Against Burley, they played without (Ken) McKenzie and at 64

Mushers confront Panthers, Tingey

By CHRIS HAFT Times-News writer

FAIRFIELD — It wouldn't be right to call tonight's Carey-Camas County showdown a confrontation solely between the Mushers and Brad Tingey, Carey's prolific marksman.

But it's tempting. The Panthers, 4-2 overall and 1-0 in the Northside Conference, have received strong performances by others besides Tingey, particularly center Mark Conrad. Still, it's impossible to overlook Tingey, whose scoring figures recall those of Wilt Chamberlain compiled in the early 1960s.

The senior guard is averaging 34.5 points an outing, more than half of Carey's 66.5 per-game production. After opening the season with what remains a season-low 28-point effort against Oakley (since equaled once), he set a record in Camas County's tournament with 108 points in three games, including 42 points against the Mountain Home Juniors and 40 against Dietrich. His Mountain Home highs — included — six three-point baskets.

Camas County Coach Ed Blankenship says had the opportunity — or minutes — depending on your point of view — to see Carey and Tingey play three times this season. Those observations brought him to a definite conclusion.

"It's very obviously a one-man-oriented situation, but it's a very good situation at the same time. The key is Tingey, period," Blankenship said. "He's an excellent ballplayer. He shoots well, he plays good defense, he's the key to their show, no doubt about that."

Interviewed Wednesday, Blankenship hadn't decided how the Mushers will defend the Panther nonpareil. "We're playing with a number of things, experimenting with them in practice," he said. "We may use a combination or variety of things. If one thing doesn't work we won't beat our heads against the wall — we'll try something else."

Camas County's specific plan may not be set, but the general strategy is, "We're just going to play tough, hard-nosed defense on Tingey, try to force him to do things he doesn't want to — and hold him to 25 points," Blankenship said.

If defeating Tingey ranks as a paramount priority for the Mushers, who stand 2-2 overall and 1-0 in league play, curtailing Conrad's effectiveness is almost as important. The 6-2 senior has overcome injuries to his left knee, as evidenced by his 17 points in each of Carey's last two games. He also grabbed a total of 34 rebounds in those contests. "If Conrad is effective at all, we'll definitely have to control Brad," Blankenship said.

The Panthers aren't a one-man team. They're a six-man team, or at best a seven-man squad, due to illnesses. Danny Parke, struck with mononucleosis, hasn't played all season, though he returned to school Wednesday. Jack Jolley, a starter, missed Wednesday night's victory over Gooding State with a bad fever. He may be ready tonight.

Yogi pleased to obtain 'proven winner' Yanks sign free agent Niekro to 2-year pact

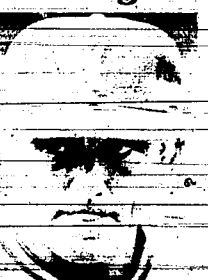

ATLANTA (AP) — Former Atlanta Braves pitcher Phil Niekro agreed to a two-year contract with the New York Yankees Thursday, his agent and the club announced.

"We are pleased to announce we have reached an agreement with the New York Yankees and consider it an opportunity for Phil to continue his distinguished career with an excellent organization," agent Bruce Church told The Associated Press.

Church said the agreement was for two years. Although he refused to disclose terms, it was believed the base salary was for slightly less than $900,000 a year with substantial incentives.

Yankees Manager Yogi Berra said Niekro's "knuckeball" would "fit in nicely with the makeup of the rest of our staff. . . he's a proven winner. He can field his position, and I'm counting on him to be one of our five starters."

Murray Cook, the Yankees general manager, indicated the acquisition of Niekro could free a starter from the staff to go to the bullpen, taking the place of free agent Rich Gossage.

"While Niekro figures to be a starting pitcher on our club, his addition will allow the manager the flexibility of going in several different directions with our group of pitchers," Cook said.

Published reports have speculated that left-hander Dave Righetti would leave a primarily left-handed starting rotation to take Gossage's job of short relief.

Niekro, a knuckeball-throwing right-hander, became a free agent following the 1983 baseball season

Gossage will decide soon

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Free agent relief pitcher Rich Gossage moved closer to a decision on a new contract Thursday.

"We expect a decision shortly, probably within the next 24 hours," said Gossage's agent, Jerry Kapstein.

Kapstein said five clubs remained in the chase for the pitcher who declared last month that he would not return to the New York Yankees. San Diego, Toronto, California, Pittsburgh and Atlanta were reported to be the finalists.

"We've had face-to-face meetings with San Diego and Toronto in the last day or so," said Kapstein, who has been with Gossage in San Diego since last Wednesday, examining offers.

when he asked for and received his unconditional release from the Braves.

Niekro, who will be 45 on April 1, had an 11-10 record with a 3.97 earned run average with the Braves in 1983.

The Oakland A's, Pittsburgh Pirates, Chicago White Sox and St. Louis Cardinals also had expressed interest in acquiring his services.

Is Idaho Falls district nudging Bruins out of Gem State?

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Bruins, and perhaps Minico, should be getting the message from the Idaho Falls school district: It isn't particularly interested in seeing the Bruins in the Gem State Conference any longer than the near future.

At least, that's the impression one has to get when reviewing their "suggestions" to the state for implementing ways to survive the 85-percent attendance rule that goes into effect next year.

The two most critical points, so far as this assumption goes, is (a) reducing basketball seasons to 16 games and (b) suggesting a distance limit of 150 miles.

In the past, it is well remembered that the Idaho Falls schools have long had a history of self-serving that stretches back to our first contact with them in the late 1950s and early 1960s. They go yod in and out of the Southern Idaho Conference as their talent cycled up and down. Idaho Falls was the only school to the city at the time.

They helped put together the ill-starred Eastern Idaho Conference, then bounced back to the SIC when games became difficult to schedule and finally landed in the Gem State.

While all this was going on, Uncle Sam's nuclear dollars flourished Idaho Falls into a position where Skyline had to be added and Bonneville, for many years simply an agricultural district that kept an elementary system and paid tuition for Idaho Falls High School to educate its children, grew sufficiently to provide its own high school.

At the same time, Blackfoot continued to grow and lately it has been Madison of Rexburg's turn. The Ebdocents will be going A-1 next year, it appears.

What you're looking at right now is the two Pocatello schools, Blackfoot, three Idaho Falls schools and Madison in an eight-team league. The 150-mile "suggestion" would have kept Minico in that group. And it also handsomely keeps Rigby, a good gate, on the football schedule. To keep Rigby there in basketball, Minico would have to be dropped.

From an inside standpoint, neither of the Idaho Falls schools ever has voted for the "transportation equalization" rule of the Gem State Conference whereby all the schools put X-many dollars in the kitty and it is parcelled back according to the number of miles traveled. Since Twin Falls sits on the extreme end of the alignment, the Bruins get the most bucks.

"We have three friends who have consistently voted for the transportation equalization rule but there is no doubt that four of the schools would definitely like to get rid of it," says Twin Falls Principal Frank Charlton.

"I have never felt that they particularly cared whether we lived or died down here," says basketball Coach John Astorquia. "Of course, I was one of the few who voted to go the other way (into the Boise affiliation) when the Gem State Conference idea first came up."

One thing Twin Falls hierarchy can agree upon, however, is that a 16-game basketball limit would take an already depleted athletic budget below the poverty level.

If that restriction were adopted and Twin Falls remained in the Gem State, all its games would be in the league. This would eliminate things like the Twin Falls-Jerome game of last week.

"We took in $1,308 and in these days, that's an awfully big gate," said Astorquia.

The other surety, at least in the next couple of years, is that baseball probably will be dropped by the Gem State.

"We've been told by both the Idaho Falls and Pocatello schools that if it weren't for Minico and Twin Falls, they'd drop their baseball programs today," says Bruin baseball Coach Bill Ingram.

The option, of course, is to return to the SIC fold, which now includes the four metro schools. But it also puts Twin Falls back in the position it voted to get out of — playing those teams in football.

There might be the option for the Bruins there was at the time of the SIC Gem State split, however, since the Boise-area school claim to have fallen on hard times at the gate. They no longer get those $10,000 gates for the Borah-Bals football game and gymnastiums are not packed when they meet in basketball.

While the Boise-area schools surely would like to have their football team restored to the degree of one game per fall, Twin Falls remains an extremely tight budget that might be so attractive in other sports in the days of reduced budget and 90-percent attendance requirement.

But then, the rule is never promote a promoter. Twin Falls hasn't been in the business of negotiating itself into a winning position as long as Idaho Falls and the lack of experience shows again.

DECLO — An 18-0 scoring spurge in the first half and a 20-point fourth quarter left Gooding as probably the best challenger standing between Kimberly and the Canyon Conference championship Thursday night.

In a high-scoring battle of press and counter-press, Coach John Toone's young Senators topped the Declo Hornets 75-54 to take sole possession of second place in the conference after the preceding and undefeated Kimberly Bulldogs.

At the end, however, Toone wasn't making any predictions although his Senators have two games with Kimberly still on the schedule. "I'm not going to say," was his wisest remark if the Bulldogs actually were catchable.

The coaches, Toone and Declo's Lynn Payne, had two things in common. First, neither thought the press would be particularly effective against their teams and, two, neither thought their press would provide the plethora of scoring that transpired.

Gooding was the first to show pressure as the Hornets jumped out to a 10-4 lead. Immediately Declo turned it over against the press and Karla Skabronski hit six points and Julie Clemons and Joyce Jacobson added two each to lift Gooding into a 14-10 advantage.

Early in the second period, Declo's 6-foot leading rebounder-scorer, Lynn Darrington, went to the bench with her third foul but Payne couldn't protect her there for long because Skabronski hit six more points to burst Gooding into a 23-10 lead.

Darrington came back at that point but it appeared much too late. Skabronski hit three points in the first 24 points, subsided after two more field goals but in the closing minutes, Clemons picked up nine points and Lisa Graves banked in a three-pointer at intermission to make it 32-18.

"We weren't passing the ball like we should and we got a little rattled," said Payne, who probably didn't feel like bringing his team back in the second half. At least the crowd was ready to go home at that point.

But Payne not only brought his Hornets back on the floor, he put them in a press. "I don't know how well it works," he said, "but we've got some good ball-handlers." But that's how we got back against the wind and got after them.

Toone wasn't worried since "the press has never really hurt us because Skabronski and Graves are very good dribblers. But they got to us tonight because of our passing. We couldn't get the in-bounds pass."

The press didn't take immediate effect although Gooding managed nothing more than a Skabronski free throw in the first three minutes while Declo picked up six points. Then Declo scored six points in perhaps 20 seconds, attaining the first pass three straight times and getting crumpled from Darrington and Cathy Wheeler. Declo kept coming back, missing to within 48-42 before Skabronski hit the three-point shot of the third quarter and Joyce Jacobson hit the final with two more points. A reverse three-point play — Dee Bailey hitting the first free throw and missing the second to set up a put-back by Darrington — crowded the Declo comeback at 54-49. But Skabronski replied with a fast-break bucket and Becky Hill scored with 4:38 to play. Clemons' field goal gave Gooding a 60-49 advantage and Declo wasn't closer than the final margin after that.

Min. Home 42, Jer. 23
 JEROME — A horrendous second-quarter slump cost Jerome clearly Thursday night, as the Tigers fell to Mountain Home 42-23.

Terrill, 9-11 overall, failed to score in the second period, while Mountain Home averaged 18 points for the third quarter, but the visitors pulled away in the waning minutes of the final stanza.

Mountain Home captured the junior varsity preliminary. The Bulldogs, 10-0 overall and 9-0 in the conference, sank 10 of 15 churlies in the final quarter. "Every time we'd come back close they'd get a free throw," Shoehoe Coach Ed Sandy said.

Shoehoe, which dropped to 9-5 overall and 3-6 in league, received 13 points from Fred O'Malley, and 12 from Lisa Loger. Characteristically, Kimberly benefited from balanced scoring; five players scored seven points more.

WOOD RIVER 24, BURLEY 17

WOOD RIVER — The Wood River Wolverines overcame a scoreless first quarter and held Burley to a pair of points in the final quarter to down the Bobcats 24-17 Thursday night.

"Burley's man-to-man defense shut us out in the first quarter," said Wood River Coach Pat Shumway. "It was our offense that won the game for us at the end when they created some turnovers in the final quarter."

Wood River boosted its record to 4-7, while Burley fell to 1-11.

Jerome thrashes Buhl, 81-34

BUHL — Five Jerome players scored in double figures Thursday night as the Tigers thrashed the Bulls 81-34.

Shawn Black scored 11 points for the Tigers, while four teammates had 10 points.

Jerome jumped out to a 15-0 lead and led by 30 points at the half. The Tigers boosted their lead to 40 at the end of the third period.

Jerome outrebounded the Indians in the contest 36-18.

Buhl won the preliminary 54-42.

BLISS — Shawn Exon and Steve Sears combined for just seven points, but they were important ones as Bliss downed Gooding State 45-41 in a Northwest Conference game Thursday night.

With Gooding State threatening late in the fourth quarter, Sears scored his only basket and Exon notched his key hoop. Exon also contributed a key steal in the waning seconds.

Three players reached double figures for Bliss, led by 54 point guard Richard Smith's 14. Richie Graves had 12 for the winners, while teammate Larry Wilkins clipped in 10.

Bliss improved to 2-5 overall and 1-1 in league. The decision broke a five-game losing streak for the Bears. Rod Cabbage had 10 for Gooding State, 1-5 overall and 0-3 in league.

Impressive Wendell sweeps

GOODING — Previously unheralded Wendell proved it is a force to be reckoned with, as the Trojans won two matches in a triangular with Gooding and Jerome's junior varsity.

Wendell topped Jerome 38-28 and Gooding 36-33, as five Trojan grapplers won twice. Jerome nipped Gooding 34-32 in the other match.

The match is a lot of improvement over last year's. Gooding Coach Bob Milligan said, praising the Trojans. "He (Coach Steve Matthews) has done a good job with them. They have more kids out now than they had last year. They're stronger. It's the best team he's had since then."

Gooding hosts a tournament Saturday, featuring all Canyon Conference teams except Declo and the JV squads from Burley, Buhl and Jerome.

think," he said. "Ed's got more depth than I've got; he'll try to make that a factor, I believe. Camas will press us, but I anticipate being able to handle that."

Fullerton State tops Utah State

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — Senior guard Leon Wood scored 20 points and had seven assists Thursday night to lead Fullerton State to an 82-65 victory over Utah State in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association basketball opener for the season.

Utah State held an early 7-4 lead but Fullerton rattled off the next 11 points to take a 15-7 advantage and go ahead for good. It was 37-26 at halftime. The Aggies weren't closer than eight points in the second half.

Fullerton made 58.3 percent of its field-goal attempts to 40.0 percent for Utah State and outrebounded the Aggies 41-29.

South had an easy time with today's game. But it didn't have to be. Study how the play went and you be the judges-of-who-went-wrong. Who gets the Jashes, East or West?

West's club-king held as East signaled-for-a continuation with his nine. South ruffed the second club, drew trumps and took a diamond finesse. East won—and switched to hearts, but it was too late. South won the ace and ran the diamonds, giving the defenders only two tricks. Who gets the blame?

There is nothing West could have done without the use of mirrords. Had he led a low club to begin with, East would have won the ace and might have found the heart shift. However, East didn't need mirrords. He was leading at the long diamonds in dummy and it should have been obvious that defensive heart tricks were of vital importance.

Instead of signaling-at-trick one, East should have overtaken with his ace of clubs. A heart-lead at this point would prove most embarrassing. Regardless of what South did, East would lead another heart when he won his king-of-diamonds and South would lose
