Soldier returns to unit

Kidnap victim found in barn

By BRIGITTE WAIDHOFER
The Associated Press

SCHWABISCH-GMUND, West Germany (AP) — An American soldier who reported himself kidnapped by a German group opposed to nuclear missiles was found unharmed in a Bavarian barn Sunday and then reunited with his wife.

Police and Army officials said they were treating the case as a kidnaping but also were investigating other possibilities.

A farmer and his mother found Spec. 4 Liam Fowler, 21, of Daytona Beach, Fla., huddled under a blanket in their barn shortly before dawn near Rosenheim, in the Munich area.

Fowler was treated for exposure at a hospital near the farm and escorted by German police back to Schwabisch-Gmünd, about 140 miles to the northwest, where he was reunited with his wife, Nikki. He left the hospital leaning on the arm of a German policeman and did not speak to reporters.

German police said U.S. Army officials asked that no information about Fowler's disappearance be released until military authorities had a chance to question the soldier.

"Everything we have points to an actual kidnaping, but at the same time, the thing (the abduction) was handled in such alibid fashion that it couldn't have been done by anyone who knew what they were doing," said one source close to the investigation, who asked not to be identified.

Fowler was escorted by an Army doctor at Schwabisch-Gmünd and then was transferred to the Army's 5th General Hospital in Stuttgart for 24 hours' observation, military officials said.

Fowler disappeared Friday afternoon after finishing guard duty at his base in Schwabisch-Gmünd, the Army headquarters for a Pershing 2 missile battery.

His wife told police she received a telephone call at 2:35 a.m. Saturday from Fowler saying he had been kidnapped by six Germans threatening to kill him unless the U.S.-made Pershing 2 nuclear missiles deployed here last month were dismantled.

A German-speaking man called the West German news agency DPA some 11 hours later to say the soldier had been abducted. He hung up without giving further details, police spokesman Gerhard Koller said.

Authorities said Fowler telephoned his wife again at 3:30 p.m. Saturday to ask if she had complied with the kidnapers' demands not to call police and to have relatives in Florida publicize German opposition to the new medium-range missiles.

Flaming cross

With arms raised skyward, members of the Aryan Nations salute a burning cross while swearing an oath to their cause. The event, held on the evening

Reagan says safer world buildup goal

By TERENCE HUNT
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, trying to calm fears about the risk of war between the United States and Soviet Union, says his big buildup in military spending "is making the world a safer place" and putting America in a strong position to forge a "realistic" relationship with the Kremlin.

In a speech two weeks before his expected re-election announcement, Reagan says, "I believe 1984 finds the United States in the strongest position in years to establish a constructive and realistic working relationship with the Soviet Union."

The president will make the remarks in a nationally broadcast address at 8 a.m. MST today from the East Room of the White House. Excerpts of the address were released in advance.

White House advisers who insisted on anonymity said a chief purpose of the speech was to try to dispel any image of Reagan in this election year of being "warlike" or a "warmonger."

In Moscow, the official newspaper Sotalsitchevskaya Industriya (Socialist Industry) said Reagan's speech was a campaign ploy to convince voters he was not "fanning up tensions" and said that superpower relations had reached "the lowest point" possible.

In the past, Reagan has labeled the Kremlin "an evil empire" whose leaders resort to lying and cheating. He was expected to soften his tone in Monday's speech and appear more conciliatory.

In his prepared remarks, Reagan alluded to three years of large increases in Pentagon spending, which includes funds for production of the 10-warhead MX nuclear missile and the B-1 bomber.

"America's deterrence is more

TV networks to carry speech

WASHINGTON (AP) — CBS, NBC and the ABC television networks plan live coverage Monday of President Reagan's speech on the state of U.S.-Soviet relations, spokesmen for each of the three major networks said Sunday. Network coverage and the speech, which the president's press office says will be delivered from the White House East Room, are scheduled to begin at 8 a.m. MST.

credible and it is making the world a safer place; safer because now there is less danger that the Soviet leadership will underestimate our strength or question our resolve," the president said.

"Neither we nor the Soviet Union can wish away the differences between our two societies and our philosophies," said Reagan.

"But we should always remember that we do have common interests and the foremost among them is to avoid war and reduce the level of arms," Reagan added. "There is no rational alternative but to seek a course which would call credible deterrence and peaceful competition; and if we do so, we might find areas in which we could engage in constructive cooperation."

Reagan's speech comes against the backdrop of a suspension in U.S.-Soviet negotiations for curbing long-range and medium-range nuclear weapons and reducing conventional forces in Europe. The president is expected to urge Moscow to return to negotiating table.

The timing of the speech is complicated by the fact that the

'No concessions,' Shultz declares

By BARRY SCHWEID
The Associated Press

LONDON — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, about to launch a new drive to thaw U.S.-Soviet relations, told British officials Sunday he would not offer concessions to get stalled nuclear disarmament talks resumed.

Shultz told Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe that he will, like a tough line when he sees Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko during the European disarmament conference in Stockholm. The conference opens Tuesday and Shultz is expected to meet Gromyko on Wednesday.

American officials said the meeting could be the current Reagan administration's last move to ease East-West tensions before U.S. elections in November.

"The United States is seeking a broad and open dialogue with the Soviet Union," Shultz told reporters after he met with Howe. "They agreed this could not and should not be carried forward by making concessions to the disadvantage of the United States and its allies."

The official, who declined to be identified, told reporters, "You'd be mistaken if you thought the administration is going to make concessions on any front to get arms control started again."

U.S.-Soviet negotiations in Geneva to reduce both medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe and ocean-spanning rockets have been in suspension for nearly two months. The Soviets walked out of the talks on medium-range rockets and refused to schedule another session in the negotiations on long-range missiles.

"The impasse is one of the major issues Shultz plans to take up with Gromyko, but," Arms control should not dominate the dialogue," the official said.

Shultz met with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher for nearly two hours and also separately with Howe, whom he will see again in Stockholm tonight at a dinner with all the NATO foreign ministers.

There they intend to polish a six-point program to reduce the risk of conflict with the Soviet Union and then present it to the 35-nation disarmament conference.

Available student aid funds decline sharply

WASHINGTON (AP) — The amount of financial aid available for college students, after two decades of rapid growth, has dropped by $2 billion in the past two years, the College Board said Sunday.

The decline from a peak of $18 billion in 1981-82 is even greater if inflation is taken into account, according to "Trends in Student Aid: 1963 to 1983," a study prepared by the board's Washington office.

Allowing for inflation, the real value of student aid has dropped 21 percent in the 1980s, the board said in the study funded by the Ford Foundation.

The report traced most of that decline to the 1981 decision by the Reagan administration and Congress to phase out Social Security benefits for college students, to restrictions on eligibility for Guaranteed Student Loans and to a drop in the use of veterans benefits.

But that diminution comes after a period in which the federal government became by far the largest contributor to student aid. Almost 80 percent of total assistance now comes through federal programs; less than 40 percent of aid in the early '60s was federal in origin," the study said.

The amount of aid from federal, state and institutional sources surged from $46 million in 1963-64 to $4.5 billion in 1970-71, to $10.5 billion in 1975-76 and to more than $18 billion in 1981-82. It dropped to an estimated $16.1 billion in the current academic year.

Even after adjusting for inflation, the growth in student aid has been dramatic. In terms of what the dollar was worth in 1962, there was $1.7 billion in aid available in 1963-64, $10.9 billion by 1970-71 and $18.2 billion by 1975-76, the study said.

The value of student aid dipped for several years until Congress passed the Middle Income Student Assistance Act in 1978; then "fell off again at the beginning of the 1980s," it said.

Veterans' benefits began to decline in the mid-1970s as Vietnam-era veterans began to exhaust their eligibility. The study noted that veterans and Social Security benefits grew "faster than other sources in the 1960s and early '70s and have declined more precipitously in recent years."

Congress established the Basic Educational Opportunity Grants in 1972 to provide outright grants based on need. The 1978 law extended this aid to middle-income students and also made students eligible for subsidized loans, regardless of income.

New Jersey, destroyer retaliate for attack on Marines

By MONA ZIADE
The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The battleship New Jersey and a destroyer shelled artillery positions in the hills east of this city Sunday after an attack on U.S. Marines ignited a fuel depot and forced the closing of Beirut airport, a Marine spokesman said.

Maj. Dennis Brown reported no American were wounded in the shelling.

He said both the New Jersey, the world's only operational battleship, and the 6th Fleet destroyer Tattini fired 5-inch guns. Marines on the ground also fired back at the positions attacking the American base.

Brooks said Marines at the eastern and southeastern portions of the airport came under "intense 23mm anti-aircraft fire."

"As U.S. forces responded with 81mm mortars, they were attacked by a heavy concentration of mortars and rockets, which damaged a fuel supply depot of the U.S. contingent of the multinational force," Brooks said.

He reported the three-hour battle ended at about 6:30 p.m. local time. He did not say how many rounds the ships fired. It was the third time the World War II-era battleship had fired since it moved near the Lebanese coast last September to protect the Marines. Brooks said the ship did not use its mammoth 16-inch guns, which have been used only once in Lebanon, on Dec. 14, to pound anti-aircraft batteries shooting at U.S. reconnaissance flights.

The naval bombardment was the first since Dec. 18, when the guided-missile cruiser Ticonderoga and the Tattini fired 60 rounds of 5-inch shells at anti-aircraft positions that had shot at U.S. reconnaissance flights over Lebanon's central mountains.

The chairman of Lebanon's Middle East Airlines, Salim Salam, said the fighting forced the airport to close for about three hours, but there were no reports of casualties among passengers or airport employees.

It was the first time Beirut airport was hit since Dec. 16, when Lebanon's warring factions declared it a "neutral zone" in an agreement reached in Damascus, Syria.

The Marines had come under fire last Friday. At the time, the Americans responded with fire against a two-story building occupied by anti-government Druse militiamen east of the Beirut base.

On Sunday, battles broke out between Lebanese army troops and Druse militiamen on the mountain ridges overlooking Beirut and on the foothills east of the airport an hour before the attack on the Marine base began.

Police sources said four civilians were wounded in the village of Marfahma during the artillery, mortar and machine-gun exchanges.

Meanwhile, Donald Rumsfeld, the U.S. special Middle East envoy, met Sunday with the Israeli defense minister, Moshe Arens, and the Foreign Ministry director general, David Kimche.

Rumsfeld held talks in Syria and Israel last week in a bid to break the deadlock over a Saudi-mediated security plan to separate Lebanese civil war combatants in Lebanon. The Druse, who are backed by Syria, oppose the plan.

50 arrested at nuclear plant

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — Police arrested 50 people for trespassing at the Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant Sunday after a march of 1,000 demonstrators protesting licensing of the facility, authorities said.

Forty-two people were arrested at the plant's main gate and eight others who sneaked onto Pacific Gas & Electric Co. property from back roads earlier in the day also were arrested, said Sheriff's Sgt. John Devlin.

The afternoon march and arrests at the main gate culminated an otherwise low-key weekend of protests that had resulted in seven other arrests Friday and Saturday.

"PGE" hopes to receive a license next month that would allow it to start a nuclear reaction at the plant for the first time to test operations at 5 percent of the plant's capacity.

Strike halts Israeli trains

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Rail and postal employees Sunday began an indefinite strike and the powerful labor federation threatened a general walkout unless workers each get a monthly wage increase of $45.

Trains came to a halt, stranding thousands of soldiers making their way back to bases after the weekend and halting the transport of other supplies and other freight from southern Israel to ports in the north. It was the second rail strike this month, with workers demanding a 30 percent pay hike.

Civil servants are demanding pay hikes to offset inflation.

The Central Bureau of Statistics announced Sunday that inflation registered 190.7 percent in 1983 — the highest in the country's history.

Leaders miss Islamic summit

CASABLANCA, Morocco (AP) — Moroccan officials expressed disappointment Sunday at the absence of several key Middle East figures from the summit meeting of Islamic countries.

The summit, which opens here today, was planned to seek new approaches to peace in the Middle East, the Lebanese conflict and Iraq-Iranian war.

Nearly all the world's Moslem nations will participate in the three-day conference, but many of the heads of state announced they would be represented by their deputies or other officials.

Those not attending include King Hussein of Jordan, President Amin Gemayel of Lebanon, President Hafez Assad of Syria, President Saddam Hussein of Iraq and Algerian President Chadli Bendjedid, according to the Moroccan.

Iran is boycotting the summit and has given notice it will reject all decisions taken in its absence. Egypt has been barred from the 44-nation Islamic Conference Organization since 1980 because of its peace treaty with Israel, and Afghanistan is excluded because of its Soviet-imposed regime.

Ecumenical rites, dinners mark date of King's birth

By KIM MILLS
The Associated Press

The nation marked the birthday of the late Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. Sunday with ecumenical church services, memorial dinners, concerts and tree planting ceremonies, while the widow of the slain black civil rights leader called it a day to "celebrate a life."

"I hope from this day we will recommit ourselves to the dream of equality and... freedom for all of God's children," Coretta Scott King said during a reception at the First Annual New Jersey Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Holiday Concert in Newark.

"I'm sorry to say that in the state of Georgia, we don't have a Martin Luther King Jr. holiday," said Mrs. King, referring to her husband's home state. King, who won the Nobel Peace Prize, was assassinated in April 1968. He would have been 55 Sunday.

King's birthday became a new Jersey state holiday in 1977. The federal holiday honoring King, created by controversial legislation signed by President Reagan on Nov. 2, does not go into effect until 1986.

"We waited 10 years, we can wait a little while longer," Mrs. King said of the legislative victory.

At least 18 states and the District of Columbia observe an official Martin Luther King holiday.

Mrs. King was in Atlanta on Friday night at a "Salute to Greatness" dinner in honor of one of her husband's early followers, Mayor Andrew Young. Some 1,500 people paid $150 a plate to attend the gala whose proceeds were to benefit the Atlanta-based Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change.

Former President Jimmy Carter, who named Young United Nations ambassador after winning election in 1976, lauded Young and King as peacemakers and diplomats.

"Martin Luther King Jr. and Andy Young taught us what greatness is, that it comes from strength, an inner strength... but not from weapons of war," Carter said.

The dinner and an earlier march and rally were the highlights of King Week '84. The celebrations also marked the 16th anniversary of the King Center and the passage of the national holiday.

An estimated 2,000 people, including actress-activist Jane Fonda and her husband, Tom Hayden, comedian Dick Gregory and Atlanta Falcons football star Billy "White Shoes" Johnson participated in an ecumenical church service Saturday morning at Ebenezer Baptist Church. The service was followed by a mile-long march to the state capitol, where speakers rallied in support of state legislation that would make King's birthday an official holiday in Georgia.

Pocatello contestant receives Idaho crown

BOISE (AP) — A 29-year-old Pocatello woman was crowned Miss Idaho U.S.A. 1984 in the Capital High School Auditorium late Saturday night.

"It feels wonderful," said Valencia Blyea, a brown-eyed blonde, shortly after being crowned.

"I'm really surprised because there is a lot of great competition," she said.

for the crown in swimsuit, evening gown and police interview competition.

The first runner-up was 21-year-old Cindy Bowman of Coeur d'Alene. Second runner-up was Michaela Bonney, a 21-year-old from Boise. April Stevenson, a 19-year-old from Hayden Lake, was third runner-up and 24-year-old Collette Johnson of Boise was fourth runner-up.

Miss Idaho U.S.A. 1983, Kerry Damico of Coeur d'Alene, presented Miss Blyea her crown.

The new Miss Idaho U.S.A. will attend the Miss U.S.A. pageant in Lakeland, Fla., in May. The winner of the Miss U.S.A. pageant will go on to the Miss Universe Pageant in July. A location for that pageant has not been set yet.

Drug raid in Boise snares 3

BOISE (AP) — About 25 federal, state, county and city law enforcement officers raided a house here Sunday morning, arresting three men suspected of manufacturing and drug manufacturing equipment.

Federal Drug Enforcement Agency special agent Bob Dunne said Jerald Jagger, 28, Ronald Pridden, 30, and Steven Alvord, 25, all of Boise, were taken into custody and charged with conspiring to manufacture and distribute drugs.

Between one-half and one pound of methamphetamine, commonly known as speed, was confiscated in the 10 a.m. raid, Dunne said.

The arrests were the result of an investigation lasting more than a year by the DEA, FBI, Ada Idaho Department of Law Enforcement, Ada County Sheriff and Boise Police, he said.

Jagger and Pridden were arrested at the scene when officers arrived with a search warrant. Alvord was apprehended trying to escape in a Van. Dunne said the operation was non-violent, but dangerous.

"There are weapons in the house and there were weapons in the van when it was stopped," he said.

Law enforcement officials were led to the drug laboratory by informants and neighbors who complained of the smell coming from the house, Dunne said.

He said the investigation would continue and that up to six more people were being sought. Officers were serving warrants Sunday afternoon.

"Jagger, Pridden and Alvord were being held in Ada County Jail Sunday night."

Administration is ready to send Congress a report charging that the Soviets have violated at least three arms agreements and probably have broken others.

The administration is concerned that the report, coming on the heels of Reagan's conciliatory speech, will send out a confusing signal about the president's interest in improving relations with the Kremlin.

The address is aimed at three separate audiences: the Kremlin, an American electorate nervous about the icy state of U.S.-Soviet relations, and Europeans particularly concerned about the breakthrough in arms talks and deployment of new U.S. nuclear missiles on NATO soil.

"The fundamental purpose of the president's address will be to present in a clear and comprehensive manner his objectives, which is to solve problems with the Soviet Union and to improve the state of this crucial relationship," said a senior White House official, who insisted on anonymity.

The official said the speech also is designed to help set the stage for Secretary of State George P. Shultz' meeting on Wednesday with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, which the administration hopes will be a step toward improved relations.

Debate ends in verbal battle

By EVANS WITT
The Associated Press

HANOVER, N.H. — John Glenn, transforming the first Democratic presidential debate of 1984 from discussion to confrontation, said Sunday he was "disgusted and tired of all the vague promises" and "gobbley-gook of nothing" from Walter Mondale.

The defeated frontrunner exploded, saying "Bainbridge."

"The debate matched eight Democratic presidential candidates in a three-hour, nationally televised marathon at Dartmouth College.

Mondale paid a price for his lead in the public opinion polls. Practically all the contenders took him on until the waning moments George McGovern said, "I object to this tendency in every campaign to clobber the frontrunner."

Mondale was spirited in his own defense, and he had to be. For example:

Gary Hart, sitting next to Mondale on stage, turned to the former vice president and said, "You cannot lead this country if you have promised everybody everything."

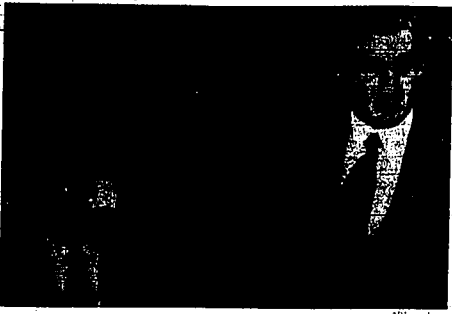

Mondale said he hadn't done any such thing.

"Then he added, 'America is nothing if it isn't promises. That is what America is about.'"

The exchange with Glenn, currently Mondale's prime challenger, began when Mondale ticked off several proposals to reduce budget deficits, but neglected to put a price tag on any of these.

"That's the same vague gobbley-gook of nothing we've been hearing throughout the campaign. We haven't heard any specific numbers except 'cut it by half.'"

"Is this going to be a Democratic party that promises everything to everybody? ... I'm disgusted and tired of all this vague promises. I wish the former vice president would get some figures down," said the Ohio

Walter Mondale gestures to emphasize an angry rebuttal.

He said Mondale was backing proposals that could add as much as $170 billion a year to the budget.

Mondale became extremely angry. He sought a point of personal privilege, not necessary since there were no rules in the debate, and asked, "Who has the floor? Who has the floor?" He took it.

"I've listened to about a six-minute speech — all of it baloney." He then said, "Mr. Glenn voted to create these $300 billion deficits" by voting in 1981 on behalf of President Reagan's spending and tax cuts. He accused Glenn of using "voodoo numbers."

Moments later, Mondale said he favors cuts in the budget for the military and agriculture program, as well as a program to hold down health care costs, all totaling $75 billion in savings.

He also said he favors raising taxes by about $60 billion, and adding about $20 billion for selected social programs.

He disputed Glenn's accusation that his program would cost $170 billion.

Elsewhere in the three-hour debate the eight Democratic presidential candidates argued defense strategies and agreed that a woman should receive strong consideration as a running mate before "waging the finger-wagging discussion over economic proposals that broke into the Glenn-Mondale dispute."

Mondale, who leads in the public opinion polls, had expected to be the target of the other's barbs, and at one point he had considered passing on the debate — sponsored at Dartmouth College by the House Democratic Caucus.

Highlights from the debate:

- Only Jesse Jackson said flatly a woman would be on his ticket, but Alan Cranston seemed to be leaning in that direction.
- There was more agreement than controversy when the candidates dealt with a nuclear weapons freeze — until Ernest Hollings said Alan Cranston's emphasis on the freeze would make him a failure in the White House.

South Carolina senator said he is as committed to peace as anyone, "but I'm not going to give away the store." He said that Sen. Cranston would, and that the Democrats cannot win with an "over-anxious and immature" approach to the threat of nuclear war.

• The candidates criticized the U.S. military position in Lebanon, but there was no consensus on how to get out.

"I said it was time to get our ground forces out of there and I believe I was right," said Mondale. Glenn disagreed. He said he had learned as a Marine that to announce such a withdrawal is to invite the Syrians to bide their time and strengthen their hand later.

• When a questioner asked about President Reagan's reshaping of the Central Intelligence Commission, Mondale said he'd fire everybody Reagan hired, hire those the president fired, and reestablish the commission's role as a defender of equal rights. Sen. Gary Hart accused Mondale of playing to the audience.

"I'm exactly right," said Mondale.

"The main thing we have to keep our eye on is beating Ronald Reagan — get him out of the White House so we can reverse some of those policies, start this nation moving right again," said Glenn after taking one of his more mild jabs at Mondale.

The debate was broadcast on public television and radio. Mondale and Glenn were not happy with the plans for three hours of questions and answers, the longest such debate in recent memory, with a format closer to a television talk show than a news conference. Many questions could not be addressed by all the candidates.

The debate precedes the kickoff Feb. 28 New Hampshire primary by six weeks. The candidates used the occasion to roundly criticize the unannounced opposition — Reagan.

Soviets, agents keep region astrir

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said Sunday that he and members of his commission on Central America favor a peaceful political solution to problems in that region but the Soviet Union and its surrogates won't allow it.

Kissinger, speaking on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley," said there are thousands of Soviet, Bulgarian and East German intelligence agents in Latin America, along with more than 10,000 Cuban soldiers who are creating unrest there.

"Yes, we want a peaceful solution, but we are prepared to face the fact that without security, that will not work," said Kissinger, chairman of the National Bipartisan Commission on Central America that reported to Reagan last week.

"The military emphasis (in the region) is not given by the United States," he said. "There are 15,000 tons of supplies from Cuba and the Soviet Union that enter Nicaragua each year. That's about five times as much military assistance that the United States is sending into the entire area."

Among the commission's recommendations was a call for increases in both military and economic assistance to El Salvador, whose conservative government is fighting leftist insurgents.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., who appeared on the same program as Kissinger, said he favored the idea of more economic aid to El Salvador, but said increased military help will only strengthen the resolve of the rebels.

"I think the administration has made a major error in not supporting that historic diplomatic effort," Dodd said.

Missing uranium totals 1,700 pounds

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — More than 1,700 pounds of enriched uranium — enough to make 85 atomic bombs — has been reported missing since 1947 from a government nuclear weapons plant at Oak Ridge, according to a public release Sunday.

Even after security and accounting procedures at the top-secret Y-12 plant were tightened five years ago, records showed that about 176 pounds of uranium went unaccounted for between 1970 and 1982, the Scripps-Howard News Service said in a report published Sunday.

Government documents don't suggest that any of the uranium has been stolen, the article said.

In the past, when uranium has been missing at other government facilities, officials have blamed faulty bookkeeping. They also have said that bits of the element could have been accidentally thrown out with radioactive garbage, blown out smokestacks or become stuck in the machinery and miles of pipe at the plants. The production area at the Y-12 plant, which still carries its World War II code name, covers more than 200 acres.

Spokesmen for the Energy Department, which operates the Y-12 plant and two other energy facilities at Oak Ridge, declined to comment on the article Sunday.

"We will neither confirm nor deny those figures, nor whether any material is unaccounted for," Wayne Range, an Energy Department spokesman at Oak Ridge, said Sunday. "However, we have found no evidence nor any reason to believe that any materials or parts have been taken from the plant."

Rep. Marilyn Lloyd, a Democrat whose district includes Oak Ridge, said she would seek a congressional investigation.

The government keeps close tabs on its bomb-grade uranium because as little as 20 pounds of it could theoretically be used to make a nuclear weapon.

Recognition of Israel should be envoy price

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan should ask Pope John Paul II to recognize Israel before the United States resumes diplomatic ties with the Vatican, Moral Majority leader Jerry Falwell said Sunday.

"I would like to see the president put one condition to this," he said. "There should be some requirement for the Vatican to reciprocate ... by recognition of the state of Israel."

The Vatican doesn't recognize Israel on grounds that the papal state recognizes only states with fixed, undisputed borders. However, it has a representative in Israel, without diplomatic status.

Falwell said he thought Reagan's motives were "very sincere and pure" but that appointment of an ambassador to the Vatican was "a practical mistake."

He said he was against such a move and that "if the Southern Baptists were asking for an ambassador to Nashville, I'd be opposed to it."

Falwell appeared on the CBS-TV "Face the Nation" program, where Bishop Gene Swales, president of the National Council of Churches, said he thought Reagan's action smacked of a "political ploy" to get votes in an election year.

"There is a hassle," said the Protestant clergyman. "You can never separate the Pope from the Vatican, the Vatican from the Pope, the Pope from the Roman Catholic Church. ... This could lead to divisiveness in our country at a time when we need more unity than ever."

He charged that formal recognition of the Vatican "opens an avenue of preferential treatment of one denomination over another."

Bishop James Malone, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, said some Catholics were concerned that the new recognition will bring due efforts by the Reagan administration "to influence Vatican opinion relative to the church in the United States."

Pool of reporters receives backing

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House spokesman Larry Speakes says the Reagan administration could have permitted a small group of reporters to accompany U.S. troops in the invasion of Grenada last year without worrying about maintaining the secrecy of the operation.

"Now, I think we probably could have preserved secrecy with a very small pool of reporters involved from the first," Speakes said in a radio interview. "I think we probably could have been ready to announce a plan for bringing the press in very early after the action took place, and I think we could have begun to bring them in somewhat earlier."

Report may aid nation

Consensus within the ranks of the Kissinger commission on a bold, expansive, tough-minded policy to build democracy and preserve U.S. security interests in Central America will not automatically produce a consensus within this country.

We agree with Henry Kissinger, who in turn disagreed with the commission's majority, in questioning the wisdom of setting conditions on aid to El Salvador in a manner that could lead to a Communist takeover.

In the body of its report, the commission succinctly noted that the beleaguered Salvadoran government is involved in a two-front war — one against leftist insurgents and the other against rightwing terrorists tied uncomfortably close to elements in the Salvadoran army.

Since the commission accepts the thesis of the two-front war, its demand that aid be made strictly conditional becomes an exercise in piety. But we would caution the administration not to get hung up on this matter and lose sight of larger objectives.

If President Reagan has to swallow the kind of certification process for Salvadoran aid he has tolerated for three years, then let him swallow.

Of greater importance is the commission's opinion that the Central American crisis directly affects U.S. security. Critics have repeatedly chided the president for casting a small regional conflict with indigenous roots in a global East-West context. But consider the bipartisan panel's findings: a sharp buildup in Soviet military aid to Cuba; an imposing Cuban presence in Nicaragua; a Nicaraguan threat that intimidates its neighbors; a deteriorating situation in El Salvador.

What the commission cannot prove is that even expanded aid will bring stability in Central America. In recent years, the trends have all been the other way. World recession, exploding populations, unfulfilled expectations, political upheaval and armed mayhem have led to serious declines of up to 25 percent in gross national product. The commission's modest goal is merely to re-attain the 1960 standard of living by 1990. Nothing more.

If it does nothing else, the Kissinger report may help to concentrate this nation's mind. Central America presents problems that demand something better than the emotional reflexes developed during the highly polarized Reagan era.

Some pupils returned Gideon bibles

The Gideons came and they brought their bibles. They brought their Bibles to all the fourth graders at Long Rapids, Mich. — a north-country farming town not big enough to merit a post office.

And every fourth grader present eagerly accepted one. I suspect they did so not out of a hunger for the light of the gospel, but more because any new possession was considered desirable by the pack-rat mentality of those farm kids. A shiny new Bible would look real neat on display with the collection of frog skeletons, T.H. ribbons and the model B-28 bomber that was last year's Christmas present.

But the day after the Gideons came, something happened. It must have been important because I still remember it 24 years later, and I have very few memories of my fourth-grade class.

The next day about a third of our class, as if on cue, marched obediently to the teacher's desk and relieved themselves of the Bibles they had eagerly accepted the day before. They were Catholic, and their parents had told them to take the Bibles back.

Something odd happened that day. Before then, we had all been just one religion, but now we were different in some of our classmates was that their last names were harder to spell than ours.

But distributing those Bibles in that class brought a new and disturbingly adult element into that 9-year-old world. We were beginning to learn our parent's habit of dividing people into groups and, worse, judging them on that basis.

That whole incident came back clearly this past week when I learned that the Gideons are still at it. A Jerome man, Joseph Ripplinger, has filed suit in

Dick Manning

Federal District Court asking the court to stop the practice.

Good for Ripplinger. Taking that sort of unpopular stand in a small town takes guts. The family is bound to suffer all sorts of abuse in the coming months, so in an attempt to blunt some of that, let me say this to Mr. Ripplinger: There is at least one person backing you in the Magic Valley.

My fourth-grade experience and all I have learned subsequently have led me to the conclusion that the Gideons have no business trumpeting their message in our public schools. The practice offends me.

It offends me because my spiritual beliefs are my own business. I am guaranteed, as an American, the right to believe or not believe what I choose and no one has the right to dictate to me.

I am further allowed the right of passing on those beliefs or lack of beliefs to my child as I see fit. Religion is a private and family affair in this country. No one has the right to intrude on that relationship by proselytizing to someone else's children.

That is particularly true in our public schools. Public education is an institution in which we all participate. Because of that, it falls under the protection of one of our wisest constitutional rights — the separation of church and state.

That doctrine guarantees that I can send my child to school — a state endeavor — and not have him come home totting the tenets of someone else's religion.

Fact is, you and I disagree with that. Let's put that aside on the other foot for a moment. If we are to grant access to our schools to one set of spiritual beliefs, we must grant access to all. That principle is well established in law governing public endeavors.

So, if you feel, as a parent, if your child came home chitchatting several atheist pamphlets written by Madeline Murray O'Hair?

How would you feel if your child were greeted at school by a couple of Hare Krishnas, Magicians, a pair of Mormon missionaries, Jehovah's Witnesses with all complement of "Watchtowers," Jerry Fallwell's representative on earth, an emissary from the Holy See, Moslems complete with burmesees, a Baptist preacher, two Taoist monks and a Zoroastrian thrown in for good measure?

If we are to take this situation to the logical conclusion, it would not be long before the halls of our schools would look like the halls of our airports.

The point is that we cannot let all religious beliefs into our schools. So, in fairness to your beliefs and to mine, we must let it none.

Thank what Ripplinger is trying to do is commendable with his suit. I am glad he has filed it and I wish him Godspeed.

Teaching values the biggest challenge

BALTIMORE — Last week Judge John Carroll Byrnes of the Baltimore Juvenile Court took the unusual step of asking a grand jury to look into the role of local schools in teaching "values."

No one is in a better position than a judge to see the grave social consequences of the lack of values or even worse, perverted values among young people today. It is this same concern which has led President Reagan to mount a national campaign which — entirely too simplistically, in my thinking — focuses on prayer and discipline in schools. This concern inspired many states to explore explicit instruction in values in an effort to shape the behavior of children by inculcation of moral standards.

Almost no one would quarrel with these aims. To people like Byrnes, who grew up in a religious environment and attended schools which explicitly taught values, their own experience is incontrovertible evidence of the crying need for values education today. They yearn mightily to return to the day when there was no debate over such matters as, let us say, teaching honesty. It was wrong in the eyes of God and the community, it was condemned, and that was that.

Such critics correctly perceive the existence of a profoundly serious social problem — a moral malnutrition, as it were — at the point where values training is supposed to take place in our schools. They would shift the role to teachers. It is not likely that Byrnes refers to this approach; rather, he sees it the last frail hope in a genuine crisis. He knows that if the teachers fail, the child soon reaches his court, often as a teenage killer.

But the problem inevitably arises when it comes to the actual teaching of values. It seems that formalizing values education is doomed from the outset for the simple reason that schools must begin by excluding the principal source of values common to most people, which is religion. This must be done because courts do not permit entanglement of religion and public schools.

Let me use an example. In the New Testament we encounter a number of celebrated women of low repute, including Mary Magdalene and the Samaritan woman at the well, but most notably the woman who was about to be stoned to death after having been caught in the act of adultery. Even though his closest associates were decidedly uneasy, Jesus showed no reluctance to involve himself with such women.

In fact, he used the case of the adulterous woman to deliver his most penetrating denunciation of hypocrisy and self-righteousness. "That one of you who is faultless," he said, "shall throw the first stone." The words sounded the accusers into abandoning their bloodthirsty enterprise. He then tells the grateful woman to go and sin no more — counsel which she no doubt followed.

The "values" implicit in this story — that forgiveness carries far greater healing power for a concerned than vengeance — scarcely needs elaboration. But it is generally felt that the story cannot be taught in school because of its religious origin; the strict separatists would surely seek out "teaching the Bible." After all, courts have even declared it unconstitutional for schools to post the Ten Commandments on classroom bulletin boards.

How, then, may we teach the "values" the Biblical story seeks to convey? Well, as good a way might be to assign students some well-chosen chapters from Cervantes' great work, "Don Quixote." In that classic for all ages, Alonsoza the hero becomes the peerless Lady Dulcinea simply because a crazy old man insists upon treating her like a lady. Even her own objections that his gentle insanities "rob me of singer and give me despair" will not shake the noble Don. In the end, Alonsoza has no choice in the matter; Quixote has made her a lady. She can only go, and sin no more.

It is not precisely the same story that is told in the New Testament. Indeed, it would be hard for any teacher to properly discuss the Quixote-Dulcinea relationship without alluding to the "value" that had first been taught by Jesus in his three encounters with whores. No doubt, allegorical parallels could be found in most major religious scriptures of a value: a bankruptcy one.

It is impossible to teach literature — from nursery rhymes to fairy tales to Aesop's fables to Shakespeare, to Hawthorne, Melville, Twain and Faulkner — without teaching values. Indeed, to say that teaching should avoid values is itself an expression of a value: a bankruptcy one.

But the challenge is to teach values without the foreclosing of beliefs. A few years ago, Paul A. Freund, the great Harvard law professor, addressed this very subject in a memorable lecture on religion in the schools. His words bear repeating: "Moral education... might be called atmospheric. This is a function, above all, of the teacher. Reverence for what we know, humility in the presence of the unknown, awe in the face of the unknowable — these are pervasive moods of the spirit that transcend religious differences and make of moral education a value: a bankruptcy one."

"There is the story of Willard Gibbs, the great Yale scientist, standing before a blackboard on which he had worked out an abstract equation, tears streaming down his cheeks, and the class staring at the board with the gaze of one who had just seen angels. No one... stands in the way of that kind of moral and spiritual experience. All that stands in the way is our indifference or inadequacy to meet the challenge."

Letters/ Latin American neighbors are important to Magic Valley

Peace, freedom lure many

I lived in Honduras, Central America, during the past four years. As a native of Idaho, I would like to make several comments to the people of the Magic Valley.

On education: To the teachers: Be thankful. Schools in Honduras have 60 children in each classroom, no books or supplies, no libraries. Teachers earn $10 a month and must work in one school in the morning and another in the afternoon in order to earn enough money to survive.

To the parents: Be thankful. Your children can attend free public schools. To get a quality education in Honduras, it's necessary to attend private schools, paying $75 a month or more per child plus books, supplies and uniforms. Even then, the quality of education is often far below the education your children receive here.

To the community: Be thankful. Education is available for all. Don't take it for granted. In Honduras, in the country, only about 20 percent of the people enter grade school, and of those who enter, over 60 percent never finish grade school. Half the population is illiterate. Only after living in an uneducated country can you fully appreciate the value of education. Take an interest in what your children are learning. Support your educators in every way you can. Your children's future is in their hands.

On immigration: I lived as an immigrant in another land. I know what it is to feel prejudice because I was a foreigner. There were those who said I had a job that a Honduran should have had. There were those who hated all Americans without looking at me as an individual.

But the great majority of the people loved and accepted me as a person. Racial prejudice is almost non-existent in Honduras. People of all nations have moved there and live peacefully, side-by-side.

I learned to love the country as my own. I'll never forget the kindness shown me by so many.

Now, I ask: How do immigrants feel about living in the Magic Valley? Would they return to their home countries full of praise or full of bitterness? What difference does it make?

The difference between war and peace? It is those that we who live here in the Magic Valley recognize the importance of our Latin American neighbors. War is coming ever closer to home. Our attitudes and opinions are important.

Why do immigrants come here? For the same reasons our ancestors came — seeking peace, freedom and jobs.

Do you know where Honduras is? It's in the center of three nations torn by civil war: Guatemala, El Salvador, and Nicaragua. A U.S. military pilot was shot down and killed in Honduras Jan. 11. Does that matter to you?

Perhaps tomorrow it will be a son, a husband, a brother or a friend of yours. It's time to wake up and take an interest in the Latin American world so close to home. Immigrants are coming, not only from Mexico; they're coming from all over Latin America. They're coming because unemployment is over 50 percent. They're coming to escape war. They're coming to find freedom. They would rather stay in their homelands. But until we begin to take an interest in U.S. politics in Latin America, immigrants will continue to come.

Recreation district favored

To those in the Gooding Recreation District: Property owners in the Gooding City limits: You will be paying the tax rates for recreation in the recreation district than you have paid as a Gooding City property owner.

If you vote "yes" for the repeal of the recreation district, you will raise your taxes because your country cousins will no longer be willing to share the expense of maintenance of existing recreation facilities.

Property owners outside the city limits of Gooding: Since you have not paid taxes for recreation, you would be lowering your property taxes with a "yes" vote. I realize that property taxes place a burden on persons owning large amounts of land and I wish that there were a more equitable way of taxation. Please consider that having a community pool and a wholesome, healthy, supervised recreation program helps make this community a better place to live and raise children. The pool provides not only recreation, but summer employment for local youths, particularly girls. Salaries of pool and recreation employees will be spent in Gooding. I, too, am opposed to oppressive taxes over which we have no control and reap little or no benefit.

Should we? How do we? Well, I wish that tax monies will be spent in Gooding and administered by an unalarmed board of directors to whom we have access.

Opportunism brings reproof

In response to Steve Symms: It's not surprising to see you take the time to write a letter to The Times-News since it's hard to get a letter to the editor. You should have a lot of knowledge about

"hit lists." You you your election during the "Anybody But Church" campaign, one of the biggest smears backed by big money that ever hit Idaho.

So now the teachers are slapping your hands together saying "No, no?" and you don't feel they're right? I wish always told that I never hurts to listen to someone else's opinion, they might just know something.

I love Idaho. I'm proud to be from Idaho. When Idaho makes the NBC, CBS or ABC evening news, I get excited, but who is going to put it on? George Hansen and his financial problems diagnosing Idaho any longer? I'm sick of it!

Idaho people need to take the time to listen to Richard Stallings. Who is Richard Stallings? He's the professor from Ricks who ran against George Hansen and lost election and almost beat George. To me, Richard Stallings, if elected this year, will be a man Idaho can really be proud of!

So, in conclusion, Steve Symms, why don't you start thinking of what good you can do for us? Instead of you trying to put the people first instead of being "opportunistic." You need more than a slap on the hands from the NEA.

Specially-trained sex crime investigator Wanda Nevland fills a valuable role with the Blaine County sheriff's office

Reassurance

Woman deputy eases strains of sex offense investigations

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

HAILEY — The investigation immediately following a rape is the most critical period in putting the case together from the standpoint of the police.

However, it is also the time when the victim is the most vulnerable. The woman has just been intimately, psychologically and physically violated, perhaps violently, and what must be done in the hospital emergency room is another violation of her self-esteem and privacy.

Doctors and investigators must conduct a medical examination, collect evidence, take pictures of any physical injuries and question the victim about what happened. And the medical and police work are often done by men, creating an even more difficult situation for the female victim and, often, for the police officer involved.

"It is a difficult time for a male officer and a rape victim," says Blaine County Sheriff Dennis Haynes, who has found himself in that situation before. A barrier that prevents the victim and police from communicating often hinders a thorough investigation of the case, he says.

To help break down these barriers, Haynes has a specially-trained woman deputy, Wanda Nevland, for investigating rapes and other sex crimes. She is available to help any Blaine County jurisdiction that has a sex crime problem.

Haynes says the presence of a woman helping the police with the investigation seems to reassure the victim.

Nevland's role in a rape investigation is the same as any other police officer. She helps other investigators collect evidence and information that will lead to a successful conviction of the rapist.

She is not a counselor, although her job includes reassuring and helping the victim understand the need for what is happening to her from the standpoint of the police, during the initial investigation and the often drawn-out legal proceedings leading up to a trial and sentencing.

"Unfortunately, the problem with these victims is that they are victimized so many ways after the fact that it's important to have a support," says Nevland, 33, a three-year veteran of the sheriff's office.

Typically, she says, the victim is in a state of fear, wondering "What's going to happen to me, now?"

"I can realistically sit down with them and tell them what they can expect to happen and why it's needed," she says.

Nevland's training in the area of sex crimes helped in 1982 when Keith Donahoo pleaded guilty to a charge of rape and was sentenced to 15 years in the Idaho State Penitentiary.

Nevland followed the case from the beginning, working with the victim throughout the investigation and hearings before the Donahoo pleaded guilty to the crime without having to go to trial.

As do many victims of rape, Donahoo's victim had a difficult time dealing with what had happened to her. She lost her boyfriend, job, friends and home. The crime completely devastated her life.

"(Rape is) not something that goes away in a month, it stays with them all their lives," Nevland says.

Often, the victim's husband and family are as victimized as she is, Nevland says. In her role, Nevland will spend a great deal of time with the victim, helping her live with what has happened and it is happening to her. Normally, when the case is completed, she will stay in touch with the victim and help when needed.

Haynes says the need for a woman sex crimes investigator becomes apparent when male police officers have a difficult time dealing with the situation. Often, he says, the male officer will "stumble" through the investigation.

And, he says, male officers are sometimes unsympathetic with the victim, asking themselves "What did she do to provoke this?"

Together, the unsympathetic male ego and the victim's sadness can lead to an incomplete investigation of a case. Seeing this, Nevland's husband, Cal, who is Ketchum police chief, encouraged her to become involved with sex crimes. With the support of Haynes, she went to a special sex crimes training school at the FBI Academy in Quantico, Va., in January 1982.

Since then, she has attended numerous other classes on sex crimes and now works with schools and the local office of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare in matters of incest and sex crimes against children.

Nevland also plans to take her knowledge to the public, instructing doctors, nurses and teachers on what to look for to identify sex crimes.

Haynes is also considering making sex crimes a part of his neighborhood watch program.

Cross flames over hayfield near Jerome

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

JEROME — Clad in the white robes of the Ku Klux Klan, Wayne Jones of Hansen put a torch to the fast-soaked burlap of a 20-foot-tall cross.

He lit the upright first, then ignited each side of the crossbeam. The cross blazing above him, Jones faced the brethren gathered in the Jerome area hayfield for a service of the Aryan Nation Church Sunday evening.

"The powers of the Anti-Christ are in our land," he spoke forcefully. "They have honored our enemy among the patriots of our nation!"

The "enemy" was the late Martin Luther King Jr. The dedication of Jan. 15, the birthday of the slain civil rights leader as a national holiday had brought 14 men and women and one child to the snow-covered hay field on a Sunday evening in 6-degree weather.

"He is not a member of our nation because you gain membership (only) through genetic inheritance," Jones said. Then, swearing oaths of fidelity to Yahweh (God), Jones, John Miller — a pastor in the Aryan Nations Church — and two other men lifted a short, ceremonial "doubled-edged" sword toward the cross.

The followers of the Aryan Nation Church in this area conduct the outdoor cross-burning services once or twice a year. Sunday's service was to be one of many held across the country by the Ku Klux Klan, another white supremacist group that shares many of the Aryan Nation's beliefs.

At Miller's farm southwest of Jerome, the event itself lasted no more than 15 minutes. But its symbolism contained both worship and warning.

As the service began, the followers circled the cross, walking through its moonlit shadow. "The circle represents the unending chain of life," Miller intoned. The genetic chain of life gave Aryans — white supremacists — their right to be a nation, he said. The Aryans, he said, inherit their superiority through genetic inheritance. Jones

Former engineer organized group

By HAL BERTON
Times-News writer

JEROME — The Aryan Nations group, which sponsored the Sunday cross burning, was founded by Richard Butler, a former Boeing engineer from Lancaster, Calif., who moved to Kootenai County, Idaho in the early 1970s.

Butler and his followers in the Magic Valley have advocated a doctrine of racial superiority and advocated the forced expulsion of all non-whites from the United States.

Wayne Jones, a Hansen-area resident who serves as a group spokesman, says the group also questions the authority of government officials.

"The current system of government does not fit into God's law," contends Jones.

"The whole government structure is suspect. Our task is to establish God's law as the law of the land."

Jones says that group members might, at some point, use violence to achieve their goals.

"If it's the way it is — so be it," he said in an interview last week.

In the southern Idaho area, Jones claims the Aryan Nation group now has members in Burley, Jerome, Twin Falls, Boise, Pocatello and Glenns Ferry.

Area law enforcement officials report that they have not detected any type of paramilitary operations conducted by the group's Magic Valley members.

"To date we have no knowledge of any of the military type actions," says Dan Adamson, the Jerome County prosecutor.

"As long as they keep to themselves on private property, and do not try to intimidate and harass other citizens, they will be left alone — but we'll be watching them closely," Adamson said Friday.

However, in Kootenai County Sheriff Larry Broadbent reports that police had uncovered two target ranges apparently used by Aryan Nation members for rifle and handgun practice.

One range contained black silhouette targets shaped like humans. Each target had a star of David at its center. The other range contained a mock city with silhouette targets that popped up in windows, according to Broadbent.

Broadbent said both ranges have been dismantled by authorities.

Butler, the group's founder, was involved with other militant organizations, such as the Christian Patriots League and the Posse Comitatus, before starting the Aryan Nations in 1970, says Broadbent.

To date, Butler's only run-in with Idaho authorities occurred in 1980 when he was arrested in Boise for disturbing the peace, Broadbent reports.

But other members of the Aryan Nations group have been identified as

For Twin Falls City Council

Pool heads meeting agenda tonight

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls proposed new swimming pool will be the prime topic of discussion at tonight's regular city council meeting.

The council is expected to take up pool matters that were not resolved at a work session Tuesday.

Among these are whether the council will retain the architectural firm of Gile-Armstrong.

The council also must decide whether it wants to hire a special pool consultant, and whether it wants to re-evaluate the pool design.

Today the council also is set to discuss offering a reduced land-lease rate to potential developers of an automata night service center at the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport.

At its work session this past Tuesday, the council split three-to-three on retaining Gile-Armstrong. The vote followed allegations Gerry Armstrong misrepresented his credentials in order to get the contract.

Councilman Gale Kleinkopf, who was absent from the meeting, is expected to return Monday, and could cast the deciding vote. The city has paid the firm $12,000 out of its $29,500 contract.

Whether or not the firm is retained, the city is considering hiring a special consultant to assist in technical decisions, such as selection of mechanical equipment.

That recommendation came from John Wiggins, a YMCA pool specialist, who met with city staff members Jan. 6.

The YMCA Buildings and Facilities Service, for which Wiggins is employed, has offered to serve as consultant, for a fee of 2.5 percent, of Gile-Armstrong's fee now works out to 3.9 percent, at a pool cost of $750,000.

City Manager Tom Courtney has recommended the council retain a specialist.

He also has recommended the council meet with the architect and the consultant to review the design. Such a review could include the possibility of School District 411 joining the project, he said.

Furthermore, Courtney has advised the council to set a maximum cost for the project, and require that the architect and the specialist fit the facility to that purchase.

Several members said they want to know what other sites were discussed and why the one near the Jerome Recreation District park was chosen.

Committee member Vic Camozzi said he heard a lot of criticism at election time on the price-of-the-land-the-district-planned-to purchase.

"When there is land at the edge of town that is selling for $4,000 to $4,500 an acre, it's hard to convince the voters, or any of us, that matter, that the school district has to pay $9,000 an acre," Camozzi said.

Alternative plans that may have been considered by the school board and discarded prior to proposals for building and site bond, elections were also asked.

Primarily the board wanted mainly classroom space," he said. "The board was looking at a whole new building in a new location," he said.

Thuseon said the board has asked the committee for its ideas and does not want to impose any influence. Thuseon said schools are crowded beyond state school standards in nearly all elementary buildings.

Barbara Stone said many people in the community are not convinced the district needs new schools. She said school additions to existing schools or building on present school sites would be preferable in view of current economic conditions.

LeRoy Craig said he does not believe it is the elderly on fixed incomes who defeated the bond issues.

"It is the people who didn't go to the polls. If we can come up with a good plan and if we are able to get the majority to vote it will pass," he said.

Rescuer sustains injury

NORLAND — A rescue attempt for a man stranded in a snow who suffered an apparent heart attack also led to one of the rescuers being hurt.

Jack Taylor, Norland, was in Minidoka Memorial Hospital following his illness. Bu, hospital personnel would not release any information on his condition.

According to Cpl. Bob Connor of the Idaho State Police, Taylor was feeding his livestock in Norland when his pile of got stuck.

When rescue stopped to help, they discovered Taylor had chest pains and called the Minidoka County sheriff for help.

However, sheriff's deputies could not reach Taylor because of snow drifts on the road, Connor said. The officer then called a friend, Kaye Young, who owns a snowmobile, and sent him to help the ailing Taylor.

But Young wrecked his snowmobile in the blowing snow and injured his leg.

Connor and another friend, Jack Parkins, then got their snowmobiles and rescued Young, taking him back to Connor's house and sending him to the Minidoka hospital in a four-wheel-drive vehicle, Connor said.

The two men then rescued Taylor with their snowmobiles, taking him four miles to Idaho 24 where they met an ambulance, Connor says.

Taylor was a patient in the hospital as of Sunday night.

Special bond committee at Jerome asking for guidance

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

JEROME — A special committee appointed from the community to help break the trend of outdated bond issues for school improvements in Jerome has asked the Jerome school board for more direction.

In its first meeting this past week, the committee postponed naming a permanent chairman, vice chairman and secretary. The committee did agree, however, to ask school board members and Superintendent Stephen Young to meet with them this Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

The 23-member committee indicated it has a number of questions to ask the school officials and wants more background on actual school needs and decisions in the past that prompted bond issue proposals. The committee members were selected recently by the school board. The members represent community leadership, said school board Chairman Nancy Churchman.

She said they are being asked to find out what the residents of the school district want in the way of building plans, and what type of plan would be likely to pass another bond issue election.

Admitting in the first meeting last week that their assignment is not an easy one, members discussed numerous ways of carrying out surveys and establishing study committees.

Members want to know just how overcrowded the schools are now and in what areas overcrowding is most severe. They also want projected enrollment figures and information on what prompted the board to fund a bond issue this fall for a site purchase only.

Several members said they want to know what other sites were discussed and why the one near the Jerome Recreation District park was chosen.

Committee member Vic Camozzi said he heard a lot of criticism at election time on the price-of-the-land-the-district-planned-to purchase.

Auction aids causes

TWIN FALLS — The South Central Medical Auxiliary has distributed party—$2,000 in proceeds from the 10th annual Christmas auction of homemade and handcrafted items, Margi Humphrey, auxiliary president, reports.

This year's auction, which was under the direction of Dr. Fred Surbaugh and Diane Nicholson, netted $2,952.33. Of this amount, $1,476.17 was donated to Volunteers Against Violence and $726.98 each to the Twin Falls Public Library and St. Benedict's carenal rental program.

The number of unique items and the enthusiastic bidding made this auction one of the most productive the group has ever had, the president said. Items included a handcrafted kindling box full of wood and a stained glass kaleidoscope.

The auction, held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Rod Swartling, was attended by some 50 of the auxiliary's 72 members.

The auxiliary also is active in fund raising and community education for the "Kids in Carcets" safety program.

What's what

The Taj Mahal in India is white marble. The monarch who built it, Shah Jehan, thought, wouldn't it be nifty if I had another one in contrasting black marble just across the Jumna River? And the two could be connected by a silver bridge. I'll do it! I'll do it! But he never got around to it. Some men never finish anything.

That U.S. city wherein the most people per capita read girls' magazines is Des Moines, Iowa. One out of every 12 people there buys either of the two leading nude-photo publications.

Overhead: "Look, if my daughter wants to learn how to drive, I'm not going to stand in her way."

Dinosaurs, too, had arthritis.

WALKING POINT
Q. What do soldiers mean by "walking point"?
A. It's the front position in an infantry patrol.

Men in the platoon are dispersed in the shape of a diamond: the rest in two skirmish columns that bulge out in the middle but converge at front and back. During a 15-second fire fight in the Vietnam War, the life expectancy of the man "walking point" in a combat patrol was 0.9 seconds.

Q. What's "street furniture"?
A. Trash baskets, mailboxes, fire hydrants. In the lingo of the city planners.

Q. What do sardine packers use to hehead the sardines they pack?
A. Scissors.

Ono still struggles with Lennon death

LONDON (AP) — Yoko Ono says she still hasn't come to terms with the 1980 murder of her husband, ex-Beatle John Lennon, and the couple's young son has stopped talking about his father to avoid upsetting her.

"I thought I would be the last person to be like this, meaning after three years still feeling very involved, still feeling that I can't get over the whole experience," Ms. Ono said in a British Broadcasting Corp. radio interview aired Saturday.

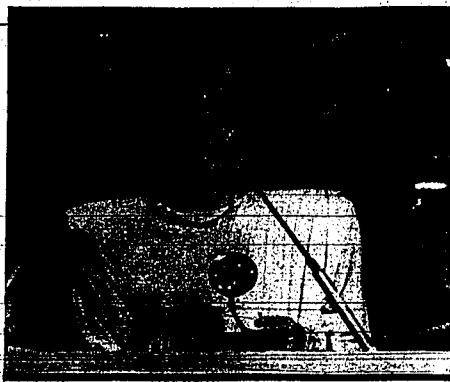

Ms. Ono said she has tried to blot out the memory of Dec. 8, 1980, when her husband was fatally shot outside their New York apartment, by working hard. But she said, "Part of me is really not relaxed at all. . . . I still haven't resolved with John's death."

The hour-long program, taped in her Tokyo apartment, included an interview with their 3-year-old son, Sean, and the first broadcast of tracks from a new album, "Milk and Honey." The album contains six previously unreleased songs Lennon recorded shortly before his death and six of her own recordings.

While Sean initially "went through some really hard times" after his father's death, he has adapted "beautifully," she said, "avoiding discussing Lennon's murder, she said.

"In the beginning, he used to feel that I was too gentle about how I expressed myself in public about 'Chickenheart,'" she said.

Wolfman Jack back on LA air waves

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — After an absence of a dozen years, Wolfman

Jack is again howling over Los Angeles airwaves in the darkest hours of the night.

The gravelly-voiced disc jockey, whose wolf howls made him a radio legend in the early 1960s, has brought his unusual style to station KRLA in Pasadena, where, beginning early Sunday, he began haunting the midnight-to-5 a.m. shift six nights a week.

"They'll be howlin' in L.A., baby," said the Wolfman, who will be 45 on Jan. 21.

The Wolfman gained fame at XERB, the station that blasted all across the western United States in the 1960s from its 250,000-watt transmitter nine miles south of the Rio Grande in Mexico.

For much of the past decade he was a fixture on the NBC's old late-night television program, "The Midnight Special." His syndicated radio show is heard on some 180 U.S. outlets and more than 1,400 stations in 52 countries.

But it's been a long time since his trademark "Aaaa-oooooo" wolf call has been heard live in Los Angeles.

GOP senators win in tennis tourney

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — The Republicans drubbed the Democrats 86-43 in the 11th annual U.S. Senators' Cup tennis tournament here, and GOP team captain Charles H. Percy said the lopsided score may be an omen for 1984.

"We've been saying all along that this is an important year to win because it's an election year and everything counts," said Percy, R-Ill. "We hope this is symbolic of what will happen in November. Of course, the Democrats aren't buying it. They're saying this has nothing to do with November. But we say it's a good indication."

The Democrats trailed 57-24 by the 1 p.m. lunch break and "I was all downhill from there," said Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., who served as his party's team captain for Saturday's game.

Despite the huge early lead, Percy would not concede victory, nor Johnston defeat — even though most of the 500 fans in attendance left after the celebrity doubles matches featuring television talk show host Merv Griffin and former Secretary of State Alexander Haig against comedian Lonnie Shore and actress Eva Gabor.

Salvation Army can help in locating missing persons

DEAR ABBY: I was told that the Salvation Army locates missing relatives who haven't been heard from for years. Is that true?

I lost track of my brother 19 years ago. He was my only living relative and I would give anything to find him. He cut me off because I moved to another state, got married and now I go by my husband's name, which my brother doesn't know.

Please tell me if the Salvation Army can help me, how I go about requesting the service. — M.A.G.

DEAR M.A.G.: It's true. The Salvation Army is expert at finding long-lost relatives. Its Missing Persons Locator Service extends to 86 countries and will make a search for the modest fee of $5. (Yes, $5.)

Most people are not aware of the following basic guidelines:

1. The person you want to locate must be a close relative — not a friend.
2. You must be able to provide essential information about the missing person.
3. The Salvation Army reserves the right to reject any request based upon consideration of reasonableness, feasibility or motive. (For example, it will not track down people for the purpose of collecting debts; neither will it hunt for men or women who have deserted their families. And it will not search for people in adoption situations.

To obtain information and/or a missing persons inquiry form, contact your local Salvation Army office or write to the nearest territorial headquarters: 830 N. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. 60610; 120 W. 14th St., New York, N.Y. 10011; 1424 Northeast Expressway, Atlanta, Ga. 30329; 30840 Hawthorne Blvd., Rancho Palos Verdes, Calif. 90274.

P.S. If the Salvation Army comes through for you, please let me know that I may rejoice with you.

DEAR ABBY: Dudley and I are planning our wedding. It's going to be a formal church wedding and we want it to be perfect in every detail.

We agree on everything with one exception: Dudley hates to wear a necktie.

What do the fashion experts suggest as a compromise? — DUDLEY'S DARLING

DEAR DARLING: The tie that binds in a wedding has nothing to do with what the groom wears around his neck. If Dudley hates neckties because they're uncomfortable, he can leave the top button of his shirt unbuttoned. But the fashion experts say there is no compromise. A man is either formally attired or he isn't.

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to you last week regarding a very personal problem. Since then, I have been living in fear — if not complete terror — that my letter might be printed.

I requested a personal reply, but if for any reason my letter were to appear in your column, that would be the end of me and my husband's career. We live in a very small town and are well-known here.

Please reassure me. Thank you. — LOSING SLEEP

DEAR LOSING: Have no fear. If you requested a personal reply and enclosed a stamped, self-addressed envelope, you will receive a personal reply. Pleasant dreams.

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's booklet. Send $1 plus a long self-addressed stamped (5¢) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Towing trucks stuck on pass

'Vultures' provide service

MULLAN (AP) — Truck drivers often don't know they must get their permits, but Don Elliott says he and others who line up along Lookout Pass in the winter provide a needed service.

Elliott is among those who take their pickup trucks to the pass on the Montana-Idaho border and keep an eye out for tractor-trailer rigs that get stuck.

"They provide the needed tow, but the service doesn't come cheap. It costs $50 in cash for a new customer, but lets repeats off with a bill for the same amount if he knows their credit is good.

The tow operators have gained the nickname, "vultures," among truckers and law officers familiar with the 4,000-foot pass. And Elliott says it doesn't always seem the service is appreciated.

"I've had a few truckers thank me for things," he said. "But it's a bad business. When a guy is spun out or jacked up there, he's not in a good mood. People are so gripey. They don't appreciate nothing.

"Ninety percent of them don't need a tow. They need to learn how to drive their trucks.

The tow operators were recently criticized in a letter to Gov. John Evans and the Idaho State Police. Keith Smith, of Roundup, Mont., contended they were operating without licenses and often caused truck-trailer accidents by driving too slowly in front of the truckers.

Elliott denied the charges, saying almost anyone can get a license for $35 dollars. "They'll even license a suburban or a Bronco," he said.

The 24-year veteran of the pass also said he has never seen any tow operator cause an accident, but added "Of course, if I was doing it, I wouldn't let my competition see me."

The tow operators did an especially brisk business in the 1960s when the pass was just a two-lane blacktop road.

The grade "was like a bobsled run, except you'd be using a car," said Pinehurst Police Chief Irv Sisson.

Tow truck operators fought over victims, he said, who those being towed in turn often became so enraged at the prices that they would break lights or be ready to fight, themselves.

Law officers say things have quieted down on the pass, but Elliott says business is still good.

Asked if there is any spot along the pass that gives truckers the most trouble, Elliott had an easy answer: "Yeah, from the top to the bottom. A trucker can get into any kind of trouble up there."

Bus driver abducted

MINEOLA, Mo. (AP) — A Continental Trailways bus driver told police she was raped and robbed by two men who forced her into a tractor-trailer at a Kansas truck stop and held her for nearly 18 hours before releasing her.

The 23-year-old driver, whose bus was empty after she finished a charter assignment, was pulling away from the Kansas City, Kan., truck stop at about 11:30 a.m. Friday when the men motioned to her that her bus had hit their truck, police said. When the woman got out to check, she was forced into the truck, officers said.

The woman was released on Interstate 70 near Mineola in eastern Missouri about 175 miles east of the truck stop. She walked about two miles to a rest area and phoned police about 6 a.m. Saturday, said Sgt. Don Wells of the Missouri Highway Patrol.

She was taken to a hospital for observation, authorities said.

The bus the woman had been driving was found with its engine running at the truck stop Friday afternoon after Continental Trailways notified authorities that the bus was late.

The truckers took less than $100 from the woman, Wells said. He said no arrests had been made.

Sandinistas may be trying to avoid antagonizing U.S.

By ELOY O. AGUILAR
The Associated Press

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — The restraint shown by the Sandinista government here took after its troops killed a U.S. helicopter pilot last week emphasizes its desire not to antagonize the Reagan administration further.

“Maybe they are learning something,” a foreign diplomat here said, adding he was surprised by the government’s formal statement, which he believed to be apologetic. He spoke on condition he not be further identified.

“I wish the government would use the same language internally to achieve peace among Nicaraguans,” said Maria Arzuena Ferrey, vice president of the opposition Social Christian Party.

Officials in Washington and at the U.S. Embassy in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, said Col. William Olin III, Jeffrey C. Schwab, 27, of Joliet, Ill., was killed by gunfire from Nicaragua after his helicopter made a forced landing Wednesday about 200 yards from the Nicaragua border — inside Honduras.

The Pentagon said the United States made an official protest holding Nicaragua responsible for Schwab’s death. Sources in Washington said some military retaliation was discussed, but ruled out, as a response to the shooting.

The Nicaragua statement issued Wednesday night said its soldiers could not see any markings on the helicopter and did not know it was a U.S. aircraft. It also expressed hope that the incident would “not be used as an excuse to worsen the already critical situation in Central America.”

The helicopter incident came at a time when the Sandinistas were trying to avoid a direct confrontation with the United States, easing some internal restrictions in a gesture to appease domestic and foreign critics. A source who knew about the meeting of high-ranking Nicaraguan officials who prepared the government’s statement, said, “They are concerned, almost afraid, that this would be taken in the United States as a provocation.”

U.S. officials say the helicopter was “blown off course” by a windstorm that pushed it near the Nicaraguan border. Nicaragua claims the helicopter was flying over military installations inside its borders.

The Nicaraguan government deplored the incident, expressed condolences to the family of the dead pilot and said it hoped there would be no more U.S. blood spilled on Central American soil.

The helicopter was flying over an area that has been the site of intense fighting between Sandinista army units and CIA-supported Nicaraguan rebels, although American troops participating in a joint military exercises with the Honduran armed forces were not supposed to come near the border.

In the past, the Sandinistas have used lurid language to denounce “U.S. imperialism” and the rebels.

Provincial capital attacked

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas launched a heavy mortar attack on the capital of Chalatenango Province in northern El Salvador, but the army reacted quickly and had the threat under control before dawn Sunday, military sources said.

The Defense Ministry press office said rebels attacked Chalatenango capital of the province of the same name, at midnight, but the army controlled the city by 6 a.m. Army sources in the city said some fighting occurred in the area.

Chalatenango city, with a population of about 50,000, is about 45 miles north of San Salvador. The province is a stronghold of the Popular Liberation Forces, the biggest and most radical of the four guerrilla organizations locked in a 4-year-old civil war with the conservative, U.S.-backed government.

At midnight, guerrillas began a heavy mortar barrage on the city’s military garrison, a telephone operator at the barracks said.

He said one of the shells hit the garrison but many fell nearby.

“If there had not been more troops here when they attacked, this place would have fallen,” the operator, who asked not to be identified, said.

He refused to say how many troops were on hand at the garrison, one of the country’s most important military facilities. The garrison usually has about 1,000 troops assigned to it, but at any given time several hundred soldiers may stay on patrol.

On Dec. 30, in the biggest guerrilla assault of the war, the insurgents overran the military base at El Paraíso, headquarters of the 4th Infantry Brigade, killing at least 100 soldiers and capturing as many as 200. El-Paraíso is 15 miles west of Chalatenango.

A nurse at the Social Security Hospital in Chalatenango said in a telephone interview Monday that fighting had ceased in the streets of Chalatenango.

Israel hopes Haddad unit will remain

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Cabinet paid tribute Sunday to the late Maj. Saad Haddad, and official sources said they hoped his 1,000-man militia would be integrated into the regular Lebanese army.

Haddad, a Lebanese army officer who first created his force to fight Palestinian guerrillas in the 1975-76 Lebanon civil war, died of cancer Saturday at his hometown of Marjayoun. His militia, in a narrow enclave of Lebanon bordering Israel, acted as a buffer between Israel and Palestinian guerrillas.

Israeli sources, who spoke on the condition they not be identified, said Israel and Lebanon were holding “delicate negotiations” aimed at having a regular Lebanese army officer assume command of the Haddad force.

The sources said President Amin Gemayel’s government now had a chance to extend its sovereignty into south Lebanon. Such a move would also be a major step toward implementing the May 17, 1983, Lebanon-Israel accord mediated by the United States, the sources said.

The accord called for creation of a special Lebanese army territorial brigade in south Lebanon. Side agreements reported at the time called for Haddad’s force to be incorporated into the new brigade and Col. Elias Khallil to be placed in charge, with Haddad as his deputy.

Pete hopes to improve his French after meeting in Montreal

By NORM CLARKE
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Free agent Pete Rose, shopping for a new team to continue his assault on Ty Cobb's all-time major league hit total, indicated Sunday that he could sign soon with the Montreal Expos.

Rose, 301 hits shy of Cobb's record, said he will fly to Montreal Monday for further negotiations.

"We'll probably have to do some head-knocking, but it looks good. They've got a good team and I'd like to play up there," Rose said during an interview at Los Angeles International Airport. He was in California for an athletic banquet at Santa Maria on Saturday night.

Released by the Philadelphia Phillies in October after five seasons, Rose, who turns 43 in April, has held discussions with Montreal, Pittsburgh and the Seattle Mariners.

But the Mariners, who recently have added the fat salaries of Gorman Thomas and Barry Bonnell to their payroll, said last week they were no longer interested in Rose because he requested too much playing time.

Rose, a lifetime .300 hitter whose fiery leadership helped Cincinnati win World Series titles in 1975 and 1976 and Philadelphia in 1980, batted a career-low .245 last year in 151 games, with 121 hits. He surpassed Stan Musial's National League hit record of 3,630 in 1981 and now has 3,990.

But, at Montreal, the 20-year veteran either would be vying with veteran Al Oliver at first base or would be playing in an outfield that already has Tim Lincecum in left field and Andre Dawson in center.

Oliver batted .300 last year and Raines is the Expos' leadoff hitter and one of the most prolific basestealers in the major leagues. Warren Gromard, who played 101 games in the Expos' outfield last year, mostly in right field, has since signed a contract to play in the Japanese league.

Montreal has been grooming young outfielder Terry Francona, son of former major leaguer Tito Francona, for a regular spot in its lineup.

Rose played only 35 games in the outfield at Philadelphia last season after spending most of his five years with the Phillies at first base.

Hot-shooting Eagles put away Utags

LOGAN, Utah — Five College of Southern Idaho players scored in double figures here Saturday night to give the Eagles an 88-73 non-conference victory over the Utah State junior varsity.

Fred Emerson led the scoring parade with 16 points, followed by Bob Shropshire with 15. Ralph Williams with 13 and Larry Brown and Lowell Cisowski with 11 apiece.

"It was the first time a lot of our kids had played in an arena like that (Utah State's 10,000-seat Spectrum) before a big crowd," said Coach Fred Trenkle. "There were about 3,000 people there for our game, which was played before the Utah State-Nevada-Las Vegas game, and I think it made a difference in the way we played."

"The Eagles' took an early lead behind the shooting of Shropshire and the rebounding of Emerson, and stayed eight to 14 points ahead throughout most of the first half. The Aggie juniors cut the margin to 10 points, at 41-31, going into intermission.

"We shot exceptionally well," said Trenkle. "Shropshire was 5-for-6 from the floor, and he hit some long ones. I thought we played a good game, defensively too. We had six steals at halftime and 11 by the end of the game."

CSI again expanded its lead to as much as 14 points in the second half before Utah State trimmed the margin near the buzzer.

"The final score was in no way indicative of the game," said Trenkle. "We got a chance to use a few kids off the bench, including Cisowski who had a real good game."

"The Aggies were best in scoring by guard Brian Hays, who had 20 points. CSI hit 36-for-58 from the field — 53 percent — but only four of 10 opportunities from the free throw line.

was free throws," said Trenkle. "Utah State was 19-for-23 from the foul line."

Both teams picked up 26 rebounds, six by Emerson. The 6-foot-7 sophomore also had three blocked shots.

The victory improved the Eagles' season record to 14-1 going into Tuesday night's contest against Snow College in Ephraim, Utah.

"Snow lost to Dixie 90-68 on Saturday night, but that was after Coach (Ron) Abeggian had been thrown out of the game," said Trenkle.

(Dixie) Coach (Neil) Roberts told me he thinks Snow has more major college ballplayers than any team he's seen this year."

The Badgers, pre-season favorites to win the Intermountain Collegiate Athletic Conference title in league which includes Richland, will take a 13-3 record into the CSI game.

The Eagles will return home this week to host the Weber State junior varsity on Friday night. The Utah juniors will reciprocate with a Jan. 24 game in Twin Falls.

Last Thursday, CSI defeated Colorado Northwestern Community College 76-58 in Twin Falls.

Mandlikova ends Navratilova's win streak at 54

By STEVE WILSTEIN
The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Martina Navratilova's winning streak was ended at 54 matches Sunday, two short of Chris Evert Lloyd's record, under a powerful assault by Hana Mandlikova 7-5, 3-4, 6-4 in the final of the Virginia Slims of California tennis tournament.

Mandlikova, ranked No. 7, had lost her last nine matches in a row against Navratilova, the world's top-ranked player and a former Czech compatriot.

But this time she survived three set points in the first set tiebreaker, overcame a fierce attack by Navratilova in the second set and broke Navratilova on her final service in the third set of the two-hour match.

Tense McEnroe outduels Lendl in Masters — B3

"I came down fighting," Navratilova said. "She won the match, I didn't lose it."

In one of the finest matches women's tennis has seen in years, both players showed aggressiveness, control, power and finesse. It was reminiscent of the serve-and-volley matches between Billie Jean King and Margaret Court in the 1960s.

Unfortunately for Navratilova, the outcome was affected somewhat by the call of the chair umpire in the ninth game of the third set. The umpire called a forehand by Navratilova long, putting her behind 15-30 on her serve, even though the linesman did not signal it out. Navratilova argued for the first time all day, but to no avail. A strolling-cream salesman further delayed play after the call.

Navratilova seemed to lose control, but recovered to go ahead 40-30. At 40-30, Mandlikova won the next two points and gained the crucial break with a superb forehand return crosscourt and a passing shot that Navratilova miss-volleyed.

Mandlikova then served out to win, capping the victory with a striding-forehand volley. It was her second tournament triumph of the year and added $30,000 to the same amount she won last week in Washington, D.C.

Asked how it felt to see her record bid end just two shy of Lloyd's 1874 streak, Navratilova replied: "Rotten. That's a dumb question."

Mandlikova had earlier beaten Navratilova since 1981, when he won two of their three matches, including a fourth-rounder, at the U.S. Open.

Mandlikova had said earlier that the only thing she'd learned from Navratilova since was "how to shake hands." Obviously, she learned more.

"I always thought she's human," Mandlikova said. "I always thought there's no one in the world who I can't beat. I always wanted to beat her and I was always very close."

Down 1-4 in the first set tiebreaker after an ace by Navratilova, Mandlikova placed a delicate drop shot for a winner. That brought resounding cheers from the packed crowd of 8,377 at the Oakland Coliseum Arena. She fell behind 3-6 after Navratilova held service, but then withstood three break points by winning five points in a row to take the tiebreaker 8-6.

There were six breakers of service in the first set, as each struggled with their first serve. Navratilova acknowledged later that the first serve was the weakest part of her game all match.

Mandlikova coasted a little in the second set, suffering a break in the first and ninth games. But they settled down in the brilliant third set, neither cracking until Navratilova's break in the ninth game.

Big Sky Country too cold for comfort

By The Associated Press

Big Sky Country was cold last week — a good time for staying home where things were warm and friendly.

Just ask any Big Sky Conference basketball team. Of eight games last week involving all eight league teams, the old maxing about home-court advantage proved prophetic in all but one.

Only Boise State managed a road breakthrough, slipping — by scrappy Montana State 64-56 Saturday night in Bozeman. Rawn Hayes tossed in 19 points and pulled down eight rebounds to pace the Broncos to only their second road triumph of the season.

Both the Broncos and the Bobcats ended the week with 1-1 conference records. Boise State fell to league-leading Montana 62-52 on Thursday, while MSU knocked off Idaho 78-51. The figures against the Vandals.

Idaho, 0-7 on the road this season, fell to 0-2 in conference play and 5-9 overall — last in the league. The Vandals' last non-conference foe Eastern Washington Tuesday night at Cheney.

Weber State Improved its record to 2-4 against Big Sky opponents, 11-4 overall with a 66-54 victory over Northern Arizona Saturday night in Ogden, Utah. Forward Randy Wooster scored a game-high 17 points and grabbed seven rebounds to help the Wildcats' protect their second-place position in the league.

The Lumberjacks finished the road trip 0-2 in the league and 7-8 for the season. They dropped their Big Sky open to Idaho State Thursday night, 62-65.

Idaho State finished a perfect week of conference action at home in Pocatello against Nevada-Reno Saturday night, holding off a second-half Wolf Pack run for a 69-60 victory. The Bengals improved their league mark to 2-0 and their overall record to 6-11.

It was UNR's second loss of the week on the road. The Wolf Pack fell behind, State in Ogden 60-42 on Thursday.

"The victory gave Weber a 2-0 mark after the first weekend of conference play. The Wildcats are 11-4 for the year, and NAU fell to 0-2 in conference and 7-8 for the season.

Weber trailed only one time in first half, 19-18, then Shawn Campbell and John Price, who each finished with 10 points, ignited a Weber rally that gave the Wildcats a 29-22 lead at intermission.

After the break, Weber extended its lead and fought off a Lumberjack rally that brought NAU back to within four, 53-49, with three minutes to play.

That was as close as they could get. Leading NAU were Jeff Altman and David Allen with 13 points each. Andy Huerfano had 12.

Ken Hagan had 13 points for Weber.

Cooper gets third place

By NESHA STARCEVIC
The Associated Press

MARIBOR, Yugoslavia — Sun Valley's Christin Cooper finished a close third in a World Cup slalom-race here Sunday, her best performance of the season.

Cooper, who is coming off a knee injury, finished behind world champion Erika Hess of Switzerland and American Tamara McKinney.

Hess made a daring second run to win in 1 minute, 26.94 seconds.

Cooper, 24, said she was "very nervous" during the race.

"The second run was more difficult. You really had to dig in your ski edges and keep a tight line," she said.

Cooper was downhilled injured, a year ago in Garmisch training, at Les Diablerets, Switzerland, and had to miss the rest of last season's World Cup circuit. Her injury, a fractured bone below the knee, "would have ended many a skier's career," said a U.S. team official. Cooper had a hip bone removed and inserted to replace the smashed leg bone.

"My confidence is not completely back, but it is returning," Cooper said after her best performance this season. She had finished sixth in a slalom at Badgastein, Austria Saturday, while McKinney was fourth there.

Fullerton St. upends No. 13 Bulldogs

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Senior guard Ron Wood scored 26 points to lead Fullerton State to a 53-51 upset victory over No. 13 Fresno State Sunday in Pacific Coast Athletic Association basketball.

Wood made two free throws with 14 seconds left in the game to give Fullerton a 52-51 lead. Fresno State had a chance to tie the game with 48 seconds remaining, but Bernard Thompson only made one of two free throws.

Fresno added another free throw with 18 seconds and Fresno had a chance to tie the game, but Mitch Arnold's shot bounced off the rim with two seconds left to play.

Fresno had a 26-25 lead at the half, but Fullerton took the lead 37-25 at 19:29 in the second half. The lead changed five times in second half.

Thompson finished with 19 points and Ron Anderson added 14 points for Fresno which fell to 1-5 overall and 2-1 in the conference. Fullerton is 13-2 overall and 4-0 in the conference.

Nevada-Las Vegas 93 Utah St. 88

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Forward Richie Adams scored 18 points and pulled down eight rebounds while freshman Fred Banks sank eight straight free throws in the last 2 1/2 minutes to help 14th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas to a 93-victory over Utah State in Pacific Coast Athletic Association play Saturday night.

UNLV opened an eight-point lead midway in the first seven minutes of the second half and then withstood a late rally by Utah State to raise its record to 14-1 overall and 5-0 in the conference.

UNLV led 61-53 before Utah State guard Vince Washington, who led the Aggies with 20 points, hit a 17-foot jump shot with 3:45 left to tie the game at 73.

But Adams countered with five of the next seven points for UNLV to help the Rebels to an 80-75 lead.

Utah State led to 8-5 overall and 2-2 in the conference.

Ed Catchings scored 15 points and pulled down seven rebounds, while Eric Hooker and Frank James scored 13 for UNLV.

For Utah State, McMullin had 17 points, Greg Grant had 15 points and nine boards and Michael McCullough scored 13.

Jack Miller led Hawaii with 13 points. Greg Hicks chipped in nine.

The Rainbows converted only 12 of 26 free throws.

UTEP raised its record to 15-0, 3-0 in the WAC. Hawaii slipped to 7-7 and 1-2 in the league.

Texas-El Paso 74 Hawaii 54

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Kent Lockhart scored 14 points to pace eighth-ranked Texas-El Paso to a 74-54 victory over Hawaii in Western Athletic Conference basketball Saturday night.

Lockhart scored 10 of his points in the first half and UTEP led 31-25 at halftime. The Rainbows had taken a 2-1 lead after a basket by William Colston.

Hawaii, which shot 49 percent, was held to two points the rest of the half. The Rainbows cut the margin to four points early in the second half but could get no closer.

Kevin Hamilton contributed 12 points and 10 rebounds for the Miners. Juden Smith and Luster Goodwin added 10 points apiece.

Jack Miller led Hawaii with 13 points. Greg Hicks chipped in nine.

Milwaukee ends Celtics' five-game win streak

By The Associated Press

Lorenzo Romar scored nine points and Junior Bridgeman added eight as the Milwaukee Bucks went to a 91-80 tear in the third quarter that carried them to a 106-87 National Basketball Association victory over Boston Sunday. The loss snapped the Celtics' three-game winning streak.

With Milwaukee clinging to a 47-44 halftime lead and a 61-60 edge midway through the third quarter, Bridgeman came off the bench and sank two baskets during an 8-0 run to open the nine-point lead. Milwaukee built a 74-64 advantage at the end of the period.

The Bucks settled things early in the fourth quarter, outscoring Boston 8-2 in the first three minutes to open an 86-66 lead. Boston could get no closer 86-71 on Danny Ainge's 12-foot jumper with 1:13 remaining.

Marques Johnson, who went over the 10,000 mark in career points, topped the Bucks with 24. Sidney Moncrief contributed 19. Bridgeman 16, Romar 15 and Bob Lanier 11 as Milwaukee improved its record to 21-16.

Boston, 29-9, was led by Ainge's 18 points. Larry Bird, Boston's leading scorer with 23.5 points a game, was held to eight.

NBA

Milwaukee opened a 32-18 first quarter lead with spurts of 14-3 and 10-4. The Bucks led 39-22 on Kevin Grevey's 18-footer with 7:58 left in the half, but the Celtics outscored the Bucks 17-3 over the next five minutes to pull within 41-39.

In Dallas, Mark Aguirre scored 10 of his game-high 25 points during a second quarter stretch which led the Dallas Mavericks to a victory over the Denver Nuggets. Dallas, which had six players in double figures, led 42-39 early in the second quarter before Aguirre keyed a 22-11 Dallas spurt that pushed the Mavericks to a 62-50 lead and helped them raise their home record to 17-2.

San Antonio 126, Portland 111 In San Antonio, Texas, George Gerwin scored 34 points to lead the San Antonio Spurs to a victory over the Portland Trail Blazers. Gerwin had 20 points in the first half and played only nine minutes in the second half.

Kansas City 109, San Diego 98 In Kansas City, Mo., forward Mark Oberlander poured in 23 points and pulled down 15 rebounds to power the Kansas City Kings to a victory over the San Diego Clippers. Eddie Johnson also scored 23 points and Steve Johnson added 17 for the Kings.

New Jersey 140, Indiana 138 In Indianapolis, Albert King scored 14 points in the fourth quarter and then added four more in overtime to finish the night with 24, sparking the New Jersey Nets to a comeback triumph over Indiana. Otis Bivins led New Jersey with 28 and Darryl Dawkins also had 24 for the Nets, who trailed by 13 points early in the fourth period.

Phoenix 110, Washington 101 In Phoenix, Larry Nance scored 25 points as the Phoenix Suns beat Washington, sending the slumping Bullets to their sixth straight loss. Behind 60-42 at halftime, and 88-73 after three quarters, the Bullets got back into the game in the fourth period, thanks to the 15-point performance of Jeff Malone.

Mahaffey takes Hope in playoff with Simons

By BOB GREEN, The Associated Press

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — John Mahaffey had already started moving to the next playoff hole when Jim Simons missed a three-foot putt that made Mahaffey a sudden death winner Sunday in the Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic.

"It surprised me when he missed that putt," Mahaffey said. "It's a good putt. A very good putt. It never entered my mind that he'd miss it."

But he did.

Simons, who had forced the playoff with a gritty effort on the 90th hole — the last in regulation in this five-day tournament — and Mahaffey both missed the green on the second extra hole.

Mahaffey came out of a bunker to about eight feet and Simons chipped up to three.

Lee Trevino, who lost this title to a 90th-hole Mahaffey birdie in 1970, made a quick appraisal for a national television audience.

"It John makes his Simons' putt is gonna look six feet long instead of three," Trevino said.

And Mahaffey made his, rapping it confidently into the back of the cup.

Simons, a deliberate player, crouched over the little putt he had to have to prolong the playoff. He held the pose — then backed away. He stepped to it again and, quickly this time, stroked the ball. It missed on the right.

And, despite a 30-month victory drought, Mahaffey's first words were of Simons.

"I feel sorry for Jim," said Mahaffey, whose career went into a decline after he lost to Lou Graham in a playoff for the 1975 U.S. Open title. "I wanted to win. I've said, 'I feel sorry for Jim. I've been in that situation before and it's a very empty feeling.'"

Mahaffey, a former PGA champion, came from four strokes off the pace with a 6-under-par 66 at the Bermuda Dunes Country Club course and finished regulation play with a 340 total, 20 under par.

He then stood by the 18th green and watched while Simons holed a 15-foot birdie putt to force the playoff.

Both parred the first extra hole and Mahaffey was moving to the third when Simons' little putt that would have prolonged it slid by the cup.

"It's a shame we couldn't both have won," said Mahaffey, who gained his seventh title in 14 years of PGA Tour activity and his first since 1981.

The triumph was worth $72,000 from the total purse of $400,000. Simons collected $43,200 for second.

Johnny Miller, one of golf's great front-runners, ran afoul of a balky putter and could not sustain the one-stroke advantage he held at the end of the third and fourth rounds. Miller could do no better than a round of par-72 and was third at 342, two away from the playoff.

Curtis Strange, with a 68, and Peter Jacobson, with a closing 68, were next at 343.

Tied at 344 were Jack Renner, Gary Koch and Tim Norris. Koch had a closing 67, Norris 68 and Renner 72.

Mahaffey did not make a bogey during the long day, and did not have a 5 on his card.

He took the lead alone with a birdie from about 8-10 feet on the 16th hole but Simons, playing behind him, answered from the same distance.

Mahaffey regained control on the 18th, again making birdie from about eight feet.

Simons then had his work cut out for him. He used a medal-wood for his second shot on the par-5, got it in the fringe, holed his tee shot, then made a 15-footer to send it into overtime.

The Times-News reported last week that Mary Lee Roberts and Rick Haberman, two Magic Valley runners who have raised $3,000 apiece to bring the Olympic torch to Twin Falls and Jene on route to the 1984 Summer Olympics in Los Angeles, would participate in the torch relay whether or not the route comes through the Magic Valley. Roberts said she would not carry the torch unless the route comes through Twin Falls.

BOISE — Rick Harder of the Twin Falls Judo Club took home two first place trophies at the Boise Capital Judo Tournament last weekend. More than 150 contestants entered in the tournament representing clubs from around the state. Harder's first place honors were in the 13-14-year-old heavyweight division and in the senior white belt lightweight division. Doug Underwood of Twin Falls took third place in the senior white belt lightweight division, while Jackie Devers finished third in the senior women's white belt competition. Jerry Olsen of Twin Falls finished third in the senior white belt middleweight competition.

U.S. skating showcase in Salt Lake

BY KEVIN McCULLEN
The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — A group of figure skaters widely acclaimed as among the best ever produced by the United States will display their talents this week in the National Figure Skating Championships, the meet that will determine the U.S. team for the Winter Olympics.

More than 200 skaters are to compete in novice, junior and championship events in men's and women's pairs and ice dancing Tuesday through Saturday, just two weeks before the Winter Games open at Sarajevo, Yugoslavia.

The championships are expected to draw at least 10,000 spectators to Salt Lake City's 12,000-seat Salt Palace and the nearby Bountiful Recreation Center, where fans will watch the skaters compete for their 18 spots on the American squad.

"I'd say this may be the best American Olympic team ever," said Ian Anderson, acting executive director of the United States Figure Skating Association. "There is strength in every category."

The championships will be the last opportunity for such stars as three-time men's world champion Scott Hamilton and rivals Rosalyn Sumners, the defending women's world champion, and 1982 winner Elaine Zayak to display their dazzling routines before their rendezvous in Sarajevo.

"The thing about our sport is that because it's so individual, we have to wait until the last minute to select our team. That's a great deal of pressure to put on our skaters, but it's the only way to do it," said Anderson.

Indeed, the competition could be more intense than at the Olympics, said Ida Tateoka of Salt Lake City, a co-chairwoman of the national championships organizing committee and one of four Americans who will judge skating at Sarajevo.

"For our skaters to be in the top three in the championship class and earn an Olympic berth, they have to be very good," said Tateoka, who will judge the Olympic men's program.

Those expected to vie with Hamilton for a spot on the American men's team are Brian Boitano and Mark Cookrell. Challengers to Sumners and Zayak are 18-year-old Tiffany Chin, Vikki DeVries and Kelly Webster.

Kitty and Peter Carruthers are considered a solid bet for a medal in the pairs competition at Sarajevo. The brother and sister team from Wilmington, Del., placed third in the 1982 world championships.

Lee Ann Miller and Bill Fawcett, and Jill Watson and Burt Lancon are among the other pairs teams that will challenge for berths on the American team.

Elissa Spitz and Scott Gregory, who finished second at last year's nationals, and 1980 Olympians Carol Jean Fox and Richard Daley are the top American ice dancing teams.

The Marianne Taheri Chair is to perform at the opening ceremonies. The pairs championships are set for Thursday, the men's final and women's short program for Friday night, the women's championships and ice dancing final for Saturday. The champions will skate in an exhibition Sunday.

NOTICE OF INTENDED RULE-MAKING
In compliance with Section 67-203(1)(1), Idaho Code, notice is hereby given that the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, Division of Welfare, is proposing to amend the rules governing the Low Income Energy Assistance program under Section 66-202 and 39-108, Idaho Code, for the purpose of implementing the provisions of Section 2002, Title XXVI, Public Law 97-203, effective as soon as possible.

The following is a descriptive summary of the substance of the intended action and of the principal issues involved:
1. Low Income Energy Assistance payments will be extended to a number of low-income residents with emergencies being attended to by local agencies. The current fuel rates will be used and a percentage of low-income households' energy needs will be paid.
2. Within the time limits specified below, any person who wishes to comment on the proposed rules is encouraged to submit written comments to the Department. Copies of the proposed rules will be made available upon written request to the Department.

For assistance on technical questions concerning the proposed rules, contact Pennie Bjornstad, Department of Health and Welfare, (208) 334-4340, Boise, Idaho. All written comments must be received by the Department no later than the date specified in the proposed rules. The proposed rules must be directed to the undersigned and must be postmarked or delivered on or before February 9, 1984. A written comment can be presented at the above noted public hearing. DATED this 22nd day of December, 1983.

The following is a descriptive summary of the substance of the intended action and of the principal issues involved:
1. Discontinuing AFDC to children effective with the month of their eighth birthday; and
2. Reducing AFDC to children from fifty five percent (55%) of need to thirty-four percent (34%) of need.
Due to a projected shortage of funds used to make AFDC Payments, the Department is also proposing changes to income eligibility limits in order to reduce the number of persons eligible for AFDC participation in the cost of long-term care. In order to accomplish the necessary reduction, the new income limit is reduced to four hundred fifty dollars ($450) a month from the previous six hundred ten dollars ($610) amount implemented by March 1, 1984.

New Cowboys owners could include Landry

DALLAS (AP) — A group led by Dallas businessmen W.O. Bankston and Vance Miller has emerged as the leading candidate to purchase the Dallas Cowboys and plans to include Coach Tom Landry and General Manager Tex Schramm as partners. The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.

Schramm has been put in charge of finding a new owner for the National Football League club by present owner Clint Murchison, who is selling the team because of health reasons and a desire to settle the estate of his brother, John, who died in 1979. Schramm said he had "not insisted on (being a part-owner)."

The sale price for the team might reach $75 million for the team, property owned by the Cowboys and additional real estate owned or controlled by Murchison. The News reported.

The newspaper quoted a source close to the negotiations as saying the names of Bankston and Miller could be submitted to NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle for approval as early as today.

also proposing amendments to the Medicaid description drug program coverage to Department eligible clients. The current pharmacy benefit maximum of thirty dollars ($30.00) per recipient per month would be reduced so that only those recipients below the current benefit of $21 would be eligible. This would exclude adults from any coverage under Medicaid. For nursing home recipients, prescription drugs would be included as an allowable cost item in the amount of the per-diem rate.

The amendments also include changing legend drug status to ancillary cost to a content of care cost for Medicaid clients in nursing homes. Pharmacy costs would be paid at the room rate rather than as a separate item billed by the individual pharmacist. The public hearings concerning the proposed action will be held as follows:

January 23, 1984, at 10:00 a.m. in a hearing room to be held in the City Administration Building, 1118 "F" Street, Boise, Idaho. THE ACES BOBBY WOLFF

"Be yourself! Is about the worst advice you can give some people." - Tom Masson.

The decliners who lose today's game fall because they commit two mistakes. First, they take a finesse better not taken and second, they paint a clear picture for the defense. Dummy's spade ace and a trump led to South's ace. South cashes his spade king, ruffs his last spade...

South could have kept his spade king hidden so as not to give a clear picture for West, but he could have also refused the trump finesse. With only two losers in the diamond suit, South could afford to lose a trump. Playing the trumping-on the second trump lead makes the hand unwieldy when East has four trumps, but clinches the game against the more likely 3-2 break. Clearly, South should...
