Reagan taps 'point man' to fill slot

By MAUREEN SANTRI
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan Monday nominated Counselor Edwin Meese III, long the hard-nosed point man for the president's conservative philosophy, to succeed William French Smith as attorney general.

Meese, 53, one of Reagan's "Big Three" aides at the White House, said he hadn't sought the post and "was really very happy with the job I had" as a policy-maker and the president's closest liaison with the political right.

But "I'm grateful to the president for giving me the opportunity and I will try to do as outstanding a job as Bill Smith did," said Meese, who was in Santa Barbara, Calif., to deliver a speech.

A White House aide, speaking on condition he not be named, said Meese "wanted this for a long time — from the first year."

Meese shares with Smith a law-and-order approach to the nation's judicial problems, favoring stiff sentences including capital punishment, relaxed rules for evidence in trials and less taxation for the wealthy. He has pronounced the progressive income tax "immoral," for example.

The consensus among congressional leaders was that Meese would win confirmation from the Republican-controlled Senate, although hearings are likely to include a heated review of the Reagan administration's civil rights and antitrust policies.

Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and who will preside over Meese's confirmation hearings, praised him as "an able man and dedicated person ... He would make an excellent attorney general."

But House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.,

D-Mass., said Meese's philosophy "is bad, to be perfectly truthful."

Meese said he believes the Senate will "act responsibly" on his nomination.

"My views are in the mainstream of American thinking, and when people hear them (at the Senate confirmation hearings), they will have a different view," Meese told reporters in Santa Barbara, where he spent the weekend as a guest of a member of Reagan's "Kitchen Cabinet," Holmes Tuttle.

Although Meese's nomination wasn't publicly announced until Monday, the president

Law enforcement a lifelong passion for conservative Meese

By MIKE FEINSLBER

WASHINGTON — When he was a deputy district attorney back in Alameda County, Calif., Edwin Meese III spent much of his spare time riding in patrol cars.

At home, he'd tune into police radios as a collection of big statues — a symbol of the derogatory term radicals applied to the police back when Meese was battling protesters at Berkeley.

Meese, the longtime confidant and counselor to President Reagan, was tapped Monday by Reagan to succeed William French Smith.

As a conservative following a conservative Meese is not likely to initiate any sharp changes of direction. But he will have the chance to apply his ideas about law enforcement matters on a national scale if he wins Senate confirmation. Law enforcement and police work are lifelong interests, almost passions.

He'd be a tough law-and-order man at the Justice Department and, judging by his record, one bound to plunge into occasional controversy. He has strong opinions and not much of an inclination for sugar-coating them.

He is for capital punishment, for closing down the government-funded program which provides lawyers to poor people, for denying parole boards the power to shorten some sentences.

He favors giving judges additional power to detain suspects before trial, relaxing rules on what evidence can be admitted in trials, and, it appears likely, amending the Constitution to allow victims of crime to be present and to be heard when accused people go on trial.

The constitutional amendment attracted little attention when it was proposed early last year by the President's Task Force on Victims of Crime.

The idea hasn't gotten anywhere, but with

Snow damages building

Safety questions

By HAL BERNTON
Times-News writer

HAZELTON — The snow-laden roof of a Hazelton bean warehouse, which had been buckling slowly over the past week, collapsed Monday morning.

The accident caused extensive damage to the building, but there were no injuries to some 30 plant workers, who were evacuated safely.

Clips Barlow, a co-owner of the Conida warehouse complex, which includes several buildings, said Monday afternoon that the accident involved an 80-by-40-foot building that included a storage area, a small office, a break area, a restroom and a laboratory.

"The outside (support) pillars buckled, plus the inside ones buckled," he said.

Emma Murphy, who works as a bean picker in a room separated from the collapsed area by a plywood wall, said she heard a loud crash as the roof caved in at about 9:30 a.m.

"We opened the door to the warehouse, and the room was full of dirt and dust, and the men were hollering for us to get out," Murphy said.

"We were all very lucky and got out OK."

Barlow said that the section of the complex with the collapsed roof probably will be a total loss, but that workers probably can return to the other sections of the complex later this week.

No damage estimates were available Monday afternoon, Barlow said.

The roof collapse ended a week of growing concern about the stability of the building, according to Barlow and plant employees.

"We noticed on Thursday that the steel (support) beams were starting to warp a lot," he said.

An engineer who inspected the building Friday concluded that the building was in no danger of collapse, Barlow said. But the engineer said that reinforcing beams should be installed.

"There was no indication that the building was unsafe in any way," Barlow said.

The beams were ordered Friday, he said, and workers were clearing the warehouse area on Monday morning, so the beams could be installed as soon as they arrived from the contractor.

But the additional two to three inches of snow that fell Sunday probably taxed the roof to the breaking point, Barlow said.

After the accident, Barlow said that he sent all 30 warehouse workers home for the day, and he asked engineers and insurance agents to inspect the damage.

Murphy said that she became increasingly concerned for her personal safety last week, as the warehouse roof gradually began to buckle.

According to Murphy, the door to the bathroom had to be shaved off a little bit each day in order for it to close against a sagging door jam.

On Thursday, Murphy said she called a state industrial inspector in Twin Falls to report her concerns.

However, Murphy only was able to leave a message with an answering machine at the inspector's office, she said.

On Friday, the inspector left a message with her fiancé, advising Murphy to contact the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration, since the matter was not within his jurisdiction.

Also on Friday, Murphy said that Barlow assured her and other employees that there was no danger of the building collapsing.

But by Monday morning, Murphy said, "we weren't even closing the bathroom door for fear that the extra movement would make the building go. You could hear the walls creaking, and you could see them pull back away from the restroom, and the dirt was falling down through."

Pretoria's lobbyist covers Symms tab

By HAL BERNTON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sen. Steve Symms is touring South Africa, courtesy of a foundation that is a registered agent of the South African government.

The Idaho senator's two-week trip to South Africa, which will end Wednesday, includes meetings with government officials, union leaders and opposition politicians, as well as visits to the disputed territory of Namibia and a naval installation in Capetown.

John Chettle, a spokesman for the South Africa Foundation, told The Times-News on Monday that his organization is paying for Symms' trip, as well as the costs of six U.S. House members who are on the tour.

Roger Fontenella, a Justice Department official, said Monday that the South Africa Foundation is registered as a lobbyist and foreign agent for the government of South Africa.

Chettle said that he did not know the cost of Symms' South African tour, but he said that "not one dime of it" came from the South African government.

Chettle said that his foundation is funded by donations from some 8,000 corporations and private individuals.

Due to potential conflict of interests, senators are required to have all foreign trips paid for by foreign governments or private organizations approved by the Senate Ethics Committee.

Ann Miskovsky, a Senate Ethics Committee aide, said Monday the committee did approve Symms' trip because it was considered an educational and cultural experience. However, Symms will be required to report the financial details of the trip on a Senate disclosure document, she said.

Ken Thompson, a press spokesman for Symms' office, said Monday that he was not aware of the South African Foundation's status as a registered lobbyist for the South African government.

Thompson said he did not know whether Symms had been informed of the group's status.

Symms has been a strong supporter of the South African government in the U.S. Senate. He recently took credit for helping to cut off U.S. aid to Zimbabwe, an African nation that has been a vocal critic of U.S. policies and

Idaho Power pans Swan Falls plan

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
The Associated Press

BOISE — The governor and attorney general Monday announced legislation they claim will settle most of the controversy over competing demands of Idaho Power Co. and other users of Snake River water.

But that's not the way Idaho Power analyzed the proposal. It subordinates the utility's water rights upstream from Swan Falls Dam in southwestern Idaho.

"If they try to use the police powers of the state to take our property we're going to resist every way we can," said Idaho Power spokesman Larry Taylor.

The company said the Idaho Public Utilities Commission, forecasts a $54-million annual increase in Idaho Power rates if the company loses Snake River water rights and hydroelectric generating capability.

Taylor said company officials hadn't read the entire proposal Monday, but based on what they knew about it, it appeared to mirror a subordination plan submitted to the 1983 Legislature.

Jones and Evans explain their plan at a Monday meeting

The legislation to be introduced this week would require the Idaho Department of Water Resources to perform a cost-benefit analysis on all water rights applications, Jones said.

He said that would include determining the extent to which hydroelectric generation could deplete water resources for other uses.

The legislation would "put the state back in control of Snake water rights" and is superior to "the Idaho Power piecemeal proposal," Evans said.

The plan addresses the controversy that arose after the Idaho Supreme Court ruled in 1982 that Idaho Power has water rights at Swan Falls Dam in southwestern Idaho, and has a right to defend them.

Idaho Power has named 7,500 water users in a suit the company filed on grounds it had to defend its water rights, or face possible legal action from stockholders claiming their interests weren't protected.

Taylor said the PUC has calculated a massive annual increase in water rates if Idaho Power loses its Snake River rights, but Jones claims that reflects a worst-case situation that would never happen.

"I'm afraid that's a matter of opinion," Taylor said. "If you look at the applications on file now, that would be issued if subordination came about. I think even the Department of Water Resources will admit that would dry up the river."

Sen. Laird Nash, R-Kimberly, flanking the governor during Monday's announcement, said the Swan Falls issue is not one of ratepayers vs. agriculture or other development.

"It's a question of control over the crucial resources of the state," he said.

Texaco cleared for takeover

LONDON (AP) — Texaco Inc. said it raised its $9 billion offer for Getty Oil Co. by more than $200 million on Monday, and won court approval removing a roadblock to the deal.
In an announcement from its White Plains, N.Y., headquarters, Texaco said it was raising its offer for common shares of the Getty Oil Co. by more than $200 million. The company said the tender offer expires Feb. 9 unless extended.
Getty Oil has 79.1 million shares of common stock outstanding, making the total value of the deal worth $10 billion.
Texaco also said at the same time that all Getty beneficiaries "have agreed to support fully Texaco's bid to acquire Getty."

Radioactive steel on market

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A building supply company said Monday it unknowingly sold 60 tons of possibly radioactive reinforcing steel made at Mexican foundry, while Arizona physicists said the steel may contain 35 times the radioactivity first reported.
The radioactive steel was already in place at some construction projects in both states, officials said.
"This has been a real nightmare," said Michael Smith, manager of the Albuquerque-based Smith Pipe and Steel Co. "We don't usually carry around Geiger counters in our business."
Smith said he bought three truckloads — about 70 tons — of reinforcing steel, known as rebar, from the Aceros de Chihuahua foundry in Chihuahua, Mexico, and sold all but about 10 tons before learning some of it contained low levels of Cobalt 60, a radioactive isotope used for radiation therapy in hospitals.

Whooper suffers gun wound

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A rare whooping crane, one of about 100 living in the wild, is being treated for a shotgun wound at the Rio Grande Zoo in Albuquerque, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service officials said Monday.
The bird was found Saturday at the Bosque del Apache National Wildlife Refuge south of Socorro where three shotgun pellets in its upper leg and lower abdomen, said Tom Smylie, agency spokesman.
"It looks like the bird is picking up just a little bit as of 3 p.m. this afternoon, according to the zoo veterinarian," Smylie said.
The whooper was captured at night in a roost site on the refuge with the aid of a spotlight and a large net, he said.
The bird was examined at the refuge headquarters and it was determined that it was in such poor condition that it needed further examination and recovery at the zoo.

zoo, Smylie said. It weighed about 9 pounds — down from a normal weight of about 15 pounds, he said.

ACLU fights secret ruling

DENVER (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union, claiming a violation of the First Amendment, was "working hard" Monday to enter a case in which an appeals court blocked publication of a ruling by a federal judge.
The ruling in question had identified Justice Department lawyers who might have been guilty of misconduct.
He also said the appeals court's order is "the worst kind of prior restraint."

Temperatures up, profit down

BOISE (AP) — Intermountain Gas Co. says warm temperatures hurt profits during the first quarter of fiscal 1984, but predict that colder-than-normal weather will boost second-quarter earnings.
Profits for the first quarter, which started Oct. 1, were $1.2 per share, down 7 percent from the same period in the previous year, officials said on Monday.
Walter Smith, president and chief executive officer, said the company's service territory was 12 percent warmer for the period, despite colder-than-normal weather in December.
The first three weeks of January, the heaviest month for gas usage, have been colder than normal, which should boost company earnings in the second quarter, said William Chapman, director of communications.

Child awaiting transplant

BOISE (AP) — A 3-year-old Nampa boy who needs a life-saving bone-marrow transplant is back home — wearing a blue surgical mask — to wait until the operation is scheduled.
Cody Taylor and his mother, Kimberly Wade, returned home from the University of Minnesota hospital in Minneapolis on Monday.
Ms. Wade said the tiny surgical mask is to protect Cody from catching anything that could prevent the operation, which could be performed in the next two to six weeks.
Ms. Wade had hoped to be the donor for the transplant. But she said doctors want to find a new donor whose cells are a better match with Cody's.
But if they don't find a new donor by the time the operation is to be done, they will use her.

dent actually told Meese of his decision on Thursday, a day after Smith let Reagan know he wanted to resign.
Nancy Clark Reynolds, a well-known Washington lobbyist who once worked with Meese and remains close to him and his family, said "I think he's probably one of the best articulators of Reagan's philosophy... He knows the mind of Ronald Reagan. I think, better than anyone, as far as policy goes."
Meese's departure from the White House will mean a realignment of the White House staff, which has been beset at the top with friction among the so-called Big Three. Besides Meese, they include chief of staff James A. Baker III and deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver.

The main beneficiary of Meese's departure was expected to be Baker, the leader of the "pragmatic" faction and the base of conservatives.
But when presidential spokesman Larry Speakes was asked whether Meese's departure will leave conservatives with a void at the White House, he replied: "All of us are conservatives over here."

Speakes said that Smith, who presided over the change in the Justice Department, met for 20 minutes with Reagan last Wednesday in a session that was described on the president's private schedule as "personal business."

Speakes said the president was surprised "in a way" by the resignation.

Meese

Meese at Justice, the entire area of victims' rights and victims' compensation could come in for a new airing. The task force found that the nation's system of justice "protects the criminal while turning its back on the innocent victim."

Meese favors relaxing the "exclusionary rule" that forbids the use of evidence against defendants that was gathered by illegal searches and seizures if the police were acting in reasonably good faith.
The rule is "an absurdity in the name of justice," says Meese, who believes that evidence should be admitted if police were acting in reasonably good faith.

Before coming to Washington, Meese founded and directed "The Center for Criminal Justice Policy and Management at the University of San Diego Law School, a research center for criminal law."

Meese was Ronald Reagan's closest aide during Reagan's days as governor of California. He served as Reagan's on-the-scene representative when violence erupted in 1969 at San Francisco State College and the University of California at Berkeley.

At Meese's urging, Reagan declared a state of emergency when Berkeley protesters demanded that a tract of land be turned into a "people's park."

Meese supervised the arrest of 700 "free speech movement" demonstrators. One of them, James Rector, was shot by a sheriff's deputy who said Rector had been throwing rocks.

Ten years later, Meese was asked about the incident, and said, simply, "James Rector deserved to die."

His view was the antiwar campus uprisings of the era constituted "the greatest threat to academic freedom" and testified in Washington 1966 in favor of a bill to make it a crime to aid Communist forces in Vietnam. "Basically those demonstrations prolonged the war and cost a lot of American lives," he said.

has served as a staging ground for the growing guerrilla resistance to South Africa's white minority government.
When Symms returns to Washington on Wednesday, the Senate is scheduled to consider legislation that would curtail U.S. bank loans to South Africa and suspend the continued sale of South African gold coins in the United States.

As a member of the Senate Finance Committee, Symms also will be involved in international and strategic affairs, according to Mark Davis, another Symms press aide.
Durnisan Kumalo, a spokesman for the American Committee on South Africa, a New York-based humanitarian group, said Monday that if Symms really wants to learn about South Africa "he should go at his own expense" rather than at the expense of taxpayers.

U.S. Justice Department disclosures of documents obtained by Kumalo indicate that the South Africa Foundation has lobbied a presidential speaker, an assistant secretary of state and presidential candidate, U.S. Sen. John Glenn, as part of its activities as a foreign agent of the South African government, he said.

Kumalo says the foundation's primary goal is to promote U.S. investment in South Africa.
However, Chettle says the purpose of his organization is to "promote international understanding of South Africa," and he says his group hopes to act as a "catalyst for revolutionary change."

He said that similar previous South Africa tours have been accepted by high-ranking European government officials, including the current West German defense minister.

However, none of these officials accepted a tour while they actually were holding public positions, he said.
"It was during periods of time when they were not serving in office,"

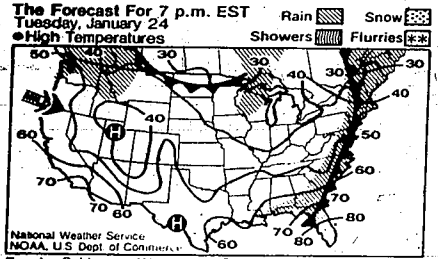

Chettle said, "because it would be difficult for them to accept a private invitation of this kind."

In years past, the foundation has sponsored tours for other U.S. congressmen, including Rep. Les Aspin, a liberal Democratic from Wisconsin, according to Chettle.

Abortion

Opponents place 6 senators on target list

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tens of thousands of abortion foes rallied Monday as leaders of their movement pledged to support President Reagan's re-election bid but work to defeat six senators they consider the enemy.

The National Park Service put the turnout of the "March for Life," marking the 11th anniversary of legalized abortion, at 50,000. City police put the figure at 30,000 as the abortion opponents gathered on the Ellipse behind the White House.

They carried signs reading "Abortion is the ultimate child abuse," "Stop killing babies" and "Before you're born is much too soon to die."

Beforehand, 30 of the march leaders met with Reagan at the White House.

Countering the abortion foes, feminists who believe abortion should be a woman's choice held their own rally.

Before meeting with the president, six leaders of the National Right to Life Committee told a news conference they backed a second term for Reagan because of his anti-abortion stand.

Erma Clardy Craven, the committee's liaison for blacks, said, "Ronald Reagan is the only president we've had to support the unborn child."

Added Sandra Faucher, director of the group's political action committee, "It would be a substantial setback for us if Ronald Reagan is not re-elected. He has appointed many people... who have been solidly pro-life and have done a great deal for the movement."

The anti-abortionists also named six senators they hope to defeat next year, but conceded some of them probably could not be beaten.

Ms. Faucher and the right-to-life group's legislative director, Douglas Johnson, said their movement would work to defeat Sens. Max Baucus, D-Mont.; David Pryor, D-Ark.; Charles Percy, R-Ill.; Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan.; William Cohen, R-Maine, and Carl Levin, D-Mich. Ms. Faucher and Johnson said these lawmakers have taken pro-choice positions.

While the list was not based solely on one vote, Johnson specifically cited the votes of the six against a proposed constitutional amendment last June. The measure, defeated 49-50, would have allowed Congress and the states to ban or restrict abortions.

Ms. Sasso said she wasn't particularly bothered by the abortion opponents.

"It's a free country," she said. "They can be on the sidewalk as well as we can be on the sidewalk."

Saturday, Right to Life of Idaho held an anti-abortion rally on the Statehouse steps.

Representatives of both Magic Valley chapters of the National Organization for Women — the Wood River Valley and the Malheur Valley — participated in both the demonstration and in NOW's legislative day.

"It was a lucky accident," state coordinator Jean Jensen of Halley said of the two events coinciding.

She said that in addition to the demonstration, NOW members were performing a grassroots lobbying effort Monday at the Statehouse — contacting their representatives on issues of concern to the organization.

Specifically, the group is asking that the state rewrite its sexual-assault legislation and investigate its childcare licensing practices, Jensen says.

Another observance in Idaho, a national leader of the Right to Life movement was scheduled to address a rally in Rexburg Monday.

Right to Life counters demonstration in Boise

BOISE (AP) — Demonstrators advocating the abortion stand taken by the U.S. Supreme Court 11 years ago quickly drew counter-demonstrators from Right to Life of Idaho and other groups here.

Monday's demonstration by the National Organization for Women and the counter-demonstration by abortion foes took place without incident in front of the Boise Republican headquarters.

That site was chosen because NOW opposes President Reagan's stand on women's issues, said Lynna Sasso, a NOW spokeswoman from Boise.

"Another term probably would give the president the opportunity to appoint more conservative (Supreme Court) justices," said Ms. Sasso.

About a dozen NOW leaders from around Idaho gathered for Monday's demonstration. An observance of some type is held annually during the anniversary of the Supreme Court's abortion ruling, Ms. Sasso said.

An abortion opponent who was asked whether the counter demonstrators had a permit to picket was told a permit wasn't necessary.

Utah poachers killing deer for 'thrill' at feeding stands

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Starving deer gathering at troughs set up to feed them during severe winter weather are being shot, apparently by poachers, who are doing it just for the thrill, state officials say.

The state launched the feeding program, funded in part by donations from the public, to keep the deer alive during this unusually early and harsh winter.

The weather has forced the deer down the mountains and into urban areas in search of food, and they make easy targets for poachers.

Some animals have been wounded and left to die slowly.

The Utah Division of Wildlife Resources has received reports of poaching from five of the 10 counties in which the animals are being fed, said Paul Woodbury, chief of law enforcement for the division.

Authorities have arrested five people who were in possession of deer believed to have come from feed lots, Woodbury said.

"We usually do have a lot of poaching in the winter," Woodbury said, but many of the current reports have been of deer shot at feeding stations set up to keep them from starving to death.

Shots have been fired within sight of Utah's Capitol and in Salt Lake City residential areas near the foothills, said Robert Elwood, a law enforcement officer with the division.

Up to 35,000 deer are being fed throughout northern Utah, Woodbury said.

"We don't know how widespread it is," Woodbury said of the poaching. The deer are "so accessible they could be taken and we would never know it. Our concern is that it will become widespread."

High court makes it easier to send murderers to death

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in its latest venture into the legal quagmire of capital punishment, made it easier Monday for states to send convicted murderers to their deaths.

The justices ruled, 7-2, that death sentences may be meted out even when state courts do not try to determine whether others convicted of similar crimes were treated more leniently.

Writing for the court, Justice Byron R. White said the Constitution's bar against cruel and unusual punishment does not require the "comparative proportionality review" that a lower court demanded for every death penalty case.

The decision reinstated the death sentence of California murderer Robert Alton Harris for the 1976 slaying of two teen-agers in San Diego.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals had thrown out his sentence, saying a proportionality review was needed to make sure Harris was not being punished arbitrarily and capriciously. The Supreme Court reversed that ruling.

It may be months before the ultimate effect of Monday's decision on the nearly 1,300 men and women on death rows nationwide is assessed.

But aside from apparently clearing the way for Harris' execution, the decision could have immediate repercussions in Texas, where some 170 people are on death row.

It was just over three months ago appeal papers waiting to be filed there, and said arrangements have been made to take the appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary.

Despite Antone's persistent claims of innocence, he was condemned as the middleman in the 1976 contract slaying of former Tampa vice detective Richard Cloud, a feared underworld opponent gunned down in the doorway of his home.

In a prison interview Monday, Antone told interviewers, "I have no fear of death."

"As far as I'm concerned, there's no such thing as death," said Antone, who added that he has a firm belief in metaphysics and meditation. "You just discard your vehicle and go on."

He still denied the crime, stating, "I have never killed anyone."

Carr said the claims raised Monday, chiefly that of ineffective counsel, had been argued fully and denied two years ago in other courts, including his.

McCoun argued that there were new grounds. He said he himself had been ineffective on the earlier appeal because he didn't have enough time to fully prepare the case and find witnesses who could testify on Antone's behalf.

White spared the life of condemned murderer James David Autry, who was already strapped to a wheeled cot in the Texas death house awaiting a lethal injection.

The last-gasp legal argument raised by Autry's lawyers was comparative proportionality review, and White said he should be kept alive until the Harris case was decided.

Texas officials said White's order last October effectively blocked all executions. It appears the state now is free to reschedule Autry's execution, and others as well.

"There is no basis in our cases for holding that the comparative proportionality review by an appellate court is required in every case in which the death penalty is imposed and the defendant requests it," White said.

Judge refuses to delay execution

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Just 15 hours before his scheduled execution, a federal judge refused Monday to spare Anthony Antone from the electric chair, ruling that no new grounds were raised to merit a stay.

U.S. District Judge George C. Carr declined to block the 5 a.m. MST execution of Antone, 66, at Florida State Prison at Starke. The ruling came after a two-hour hearing.

Carr directed results of the hearing be telephoned immediately to the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeal in Atlanta. Antone's lawyer, Thomas McCoun, said another attorney had appeal papers waiting to be filed there, and said arrangements have been made to take the appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary.

Despite Antone's persistent claims of innocence, he was condemned as the middleman in the 1976 contract slaying of former Tampa vice detective Richard Cloud, a feared underworld opponent gunned down in the doorway of his home.

Failure of our will has caused deficit

Now that the federal deficit problem has grown all out of proportion, we find it ironic that the same president who campaigned for office by running against the deficit is now shunning criticism of the shortage as the work of "doomcraters."

The Reagan administration has won much praise, most of it deserved, for the fortuitous way in which it has brought down both inflation and unemployment while keeping interest rates relatively stable.

But, virtually every economist in and out of the administration acknowledges that the success is partly a sleight of hand that hides a deficit that is growing at the rate of nearly $200 billion annually.

In effect, we have purchased a rosy present with a note due in the future, but certainly not until after the 1984 election.

Looking further into the future and perhaps displaying our cynicism, Reagan — assuming he runs and wins — will be 78 when he leaves office. It is younger generations that will pay for this deficit in the decades ahead, long after Reagan is gone.

He already has committed himself against any tax increase to cover the revenue shortage, preferring instead to point again to "bureaucratic waste" in government.

Where is it? The administration would have us believe it is all still to be found in the pockets of welfare queens and college loan cheats. But let's look at the record.

How about the $94 billion in the military pension system, which is bloated with people in their 40s and 50s drawing huge pensions while holding full-time jobs in the private sector? The most common retirement age in the military is 40. Think about what that means, then think about who is paying for it. P.S. Check the mirror.

Or what about the huge subsidies in agriculture? The PIK program benefited thousands. So does a dairy price-support compromise that has left thousands of farms in business that shouldn't be if the supply and demand of dairy products were allowed to work in anything approaching a free atmosphere.

Or look at the dozens of pipsqueak military bases across America that no longer have any role in our defense system except to support the local economy of their towns.

Most are protected by pious senators and members of Congress who take time on their trips home to glad-hand the local Rotarians on how they stand for cutting waste and fraud, then drop quickly into the local military base to polish the brass. Think of that the next time you read about a "fact-finding" tour of an "essential" base.

The bottom line is that deficits matter a lot more than the administration will admit publicly.

The deficits are there — because neither the administration and the Congress, nor we the people have either the will or the courage to say "no."

'Boston Zapper' gets ready to strike

BOSTON — Last week, the Supreme Court decided that I am not a criminal after all. This came as an enormous relief to me and to the nine million other owners of video-cassette recorders who had been accused of breaking the copyright law in our living room.

During an eight-year suit by American filmmakers against the Sony Corporation, VCRs had acquired a reputation as the most heinous demimonde. Jack Valenti, the colorful head of the Motion Picture Assn. of America, once compared VCRs to "millions of little tapeworms" eating away at the American movie industry. Another time, he said the machines "are to the American film industry what the Boston strangler was to women."

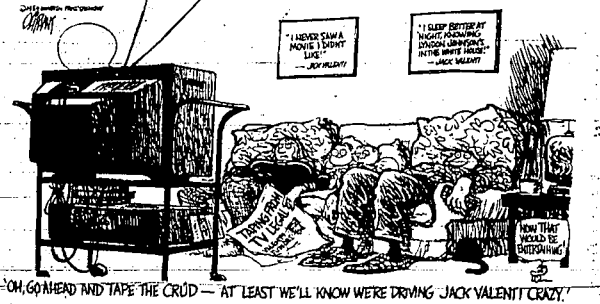

"As VCR owners, we were accused of being 'commercial pirates.'" At the very least, we were aiding and abetting the stranger.

The notion behind the suit was that the mere existence of a home recorder forced law-abiding citizens into pushing bad buttons. We would tape a movie on television and "library." It away for endless replays. This would cut into — or should I say choke — the movie resale and rerun business. It was a very tough case, the one behind this argument. The idea that we would watch 88 video-cassettes of "Gidget" if our re-viewing pleasure was a bit bizarre. How many movies can you bear to see twice? Okay, besides "Casablanca"?

But now that we are off the hook, or the docket, and no longer need fear the video cops, I think it is time for nine million of us to confess the real motive for our almost-crime: Revenge. The VCR is the only weapon for the citizens' revenge against television.

Think about it for a minute. What is it that you hate the most about television? I'm not talking about a dreadful program. We've always had a weapon against that: the off button. What is it that you hate about television you want to watch? My guess is that the tube is fundamentally anti-social. It's bossy. It waits for no one. We have to be there when the program is there, or we'll miss it like a one-time bus.

How many family conversations have been cut short by the urgency of "I'll miss my program"? How many telephone calls have not returned "when it's over"? How many dinner hours are planned around the news, how many kids are tucked in during commercials, how many parents compete for attention with the video-dictator? Justice Stevens wrote that the average family uses the VCR for time-shifting, to watch a program at a more convenient hour. True, but I have a hunch that time-shifting is really control-shifting. A program on tape is like a book. We can pick it up and put it down. We can stop the show, move the wash into the dryer, settle a fight and start again. We beat the tube.

ON, GO AHEAD AND TAPE THE CRUD — AT LEAST WE'LL KNOW WE'RE DRIVING JACK VALENTI CRAZY.

Ellen Goodman

But the sweetest piece of revenge comes from the word that didn't make it into the Supreme Court brief: zapping. Zapping is what we in the shadowy world of VCR owners do to commercials. We push the fast-forward button right through the buggers. Some of my moments of greatest personal pleasure in the six months since we adopted a VCR have been spent zapping hemorrhoid commercials on the network news. I now zap all the commercials.

I zap to the memory of white tornadoes past. I zap headaches, arthritis, bad breath and laundry detergent. I zap diet-drink maidens and hand-torned mittens. Decades of despicable commercials now motivate the hand that zaps for fun. If it ever becomes illegal, they will find zap-tracks on my forefinger.

I am far from alone in this thrill-seeking adventure. One study shows that a full 80 percent of the VCR owners fast-forward past the commercials. The Supreme Court may have ruled us innocent, but we zap the entire economic basis of the television industry. After years of being passive viewers, we experience a thrill that is somewhere between naughty and downright evil. Call it vengeful.

Any day now, I am sure the entertainment moguls will be in the halls of Congress trying to get them to rework the copyright laws and put a royalty fee on video-tapes. But they are wildly beside the point.

With rippling to Jack Valenti, the proponent of that library of tapes could strangle the movie industry. It's that wiping out commercials could entirely and joyfully upend the TV industry. Take the word of The Boston Zapper.

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe.

Silkwood ruling may spur more suits

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court hit the nuclear power industry with a heavy financial club in upholding the $10 million punitive damage award in the Karen Silkwood case, punishing a plutonium factory for failing to strictly adhere to all required federal safety standards.

The evidence in the case showed that plutonium worker Silkwood was contaminated because of carelessness on the part of the factory operated by the Kerr-McGee Corp.

But more than likely, part of the jury verdict reflected a widespread public hostility toward the nuclear power industry which has developed since the accident at Three Mile Island.

This is because punitive damages are designed to make an example of the offender. In the case, the plutonium factory. Compensation damages, however, are designed only to recompense a person for the actual dollar cost of the injury, including the resulting physical and emotional pain.

The winner in the case was the family of Silkwood, whose name has become a symbol for the political movement to stop the construction of nuclear power plants.

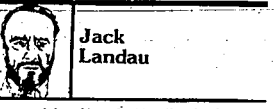

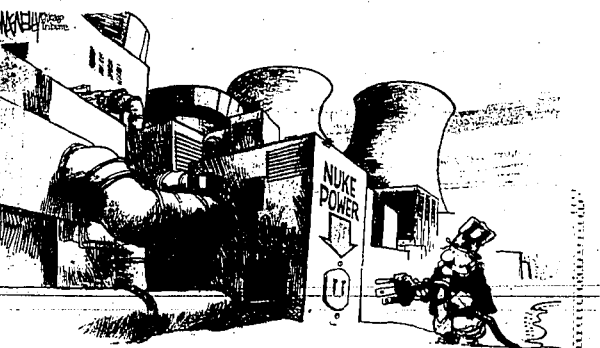

Silkwood was killed in an auto accident while she was on her way to meet a New York Times reporter, and her friends and relatives have long maintained that her death was not an accident.

The trial showed that she was repeatedly contaminated in the factory, although each time the management declared her free of any radiation residue.

The main issue was whether Kerr-McGee was intentionally or knowingly careless in the manner in which it operated its plant. Kerr-McGee said that its plant was controlled by federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission standards, and that while it could be fined by the government for being negligent, it could not be fined by a jury in a personal injury case.

If the jury can impose a heavy punitive damage award, the company said, then the jury — rather than the federal government — is in effect enforcing federal law concerning the safety of plutonium plants.

The Supreme Court, however, said the federal government's power to regulate and fine plants that are maintained carelessly has not voided the right of a person injured in a plant to collect for damages under state laws, which allow employees to collect for work-related injuries and deaths.

The 5-4 decision, written by Justice Byron White, was strongly criticized by Justice Lewis F. Powell in his dissent. He said the decision allowed juries in each state, in effect, to enforce federal radiation safety laws and then fine companies for violations.

Allowing individual juries in each state to set their own standards as to what is safe and then to enforce these standards with heavy damage awards will create confusion and chaos in the nuclear industry, because no factory owner will know with any certainty what to expect in any accident situation.

This in turn, said Powell, will deter investment, and the nation may once again fall back to its heavy dependency on foreign oil.

The Silkwood case also developed another legal controversy which did not come before the Supreme Court. While the movie of the Silkwood incident was being made, Kerr-McGee subpoenaed all the interview notes of one of the young co-producers of the film.

The result in the Kerr-McGee case will certainly encourage other persons who are subject to radiation at nuclear plants to sue in the hope of winning multimillion-dollar damage awards.

Jack Landau writes on the law for Newhouse News Service.

Letters/ Teacher pay not only area of concern in education

Improve parents as well

The quantity of publicity about a raise in teacher's salaries has obscured the total educational improvement objectives. Let us examine a more complete picture with added areas of concern.

Parents need education in understanding just what the formal school system is all about, its limitations and responsibilities, as well as the things that detract from or aid an education.

Kindergarten, do we really need it or just want it? If we need it, every child should have it. If present children are not as bright as they used to be, let's be sure, then build, staff, tax, fund and operate accordingly, taking 13 years for students to get 12 years of schooling.

Conversely, many educators believe serious thought should be given, and investigations performed, including tests, relative to students starting and finishing a year earlier. This subject is easy to quantify and analyze if we have the nerve. Think about it, this has tremendous ramifications.

School boards — one of the most important and yet weakest links in the school system. Unfortunately, most boards are poor planners, exceed in incompetence in this area only by the public utilities (both have captive incomes). Their best homework is done after bond fundings, with little patience or understanding of the public. They follow well-established rules, lack clear or innovative thinking and contribute to their own problems such as Murtaugh (personnel) and Jerome (land acquisition board).

Teachers' pay — a raise will have absolutely no influence on the overall quality of education. To think otherwise is trying to justify the increase on the wrong grounds. Teachers, as a whole, are underpaid and deserve the raise for what they are doing now. If this requires part of the "temporary" sales tax, so be it.

To raise the teachers' level of performance, the teacher's capabilities must be increased in subject knowledge, direct and indirect, as well as improved presentation skills and techniques. Experienced and newer teachers should have to pass new, much tougher certification tests. Teachers, like modern technology engineers must continually upgrade their capabilities. All increases in salary would be incentive and connected to real product improvements, not years of service.

These things will cost the taxpayers, but if we want quality educational products, we must pay accordingly. The analogy is we cannot produce a first class product with second-class machinery. This includes parent improvements as well as school board and settle the kindergarten debacle.

Gideons' work appreciated

I am thankful for such freedom in the United States that groups like the Gideons can distribute Bibles in the schools. In my mind America has stood for freedom of expression and discussion: "I don't agree with what you say, but I will defend with my life your right to say it." Exposure to differing views has made America what it is.

I worked for a time in a country where there was "freedom of religion" — everyone was free to practice the religion he was born with. Since nearly 100 percent of the people were of the same religion, exposure to differing views was practically nil. The one Christian church that was established was leveled. Thankfully in America we haven't had such a xenophobic outlook.

It is a privilege to be exposed to differing views. Of course, with such privileges comes the responsibility of evaluating for ourselves what is said and training young people to do so as well. How much poorer the next generation would be if they never had the opportunity to be exposed to one of the greatest books ever written — The Bible.

Crimes against Palestine

More than forty years after, hindstight is given expression by U.S. news media, concerning the internment of Japanese Americans during World War II in what was called "war relocation camps" in Idaho and California. Those of us who had the courage to protest at that time were held up to scorn. That Japanese Americans were a proud fighting force in Europe did not deter our government. Funds and assets of these Americans were expropriated by our government and not returned until decades later, after pressure was brought to bear, and without benefit of interest on those funds. Yet forty years ago the news media fostered and promoted such activities!

Will hindsight one day present the case of Palestine, where millions were dispossessed of their homeland and the State of Israel might be born in 1948? It's ever-expanding boundaries and suppression of the Palestinians have been made possible through U.S. financial and military aid provided by Americans through tax-exempt organizations and U.S. grants and loans. So we are all part of crimes being committed across the sea. And good media coverage is given those who preach about Biblical prophecy, including evangelicals such as the one who recently lauded Menachem Begin and expansionist Israel, with little sympathy expressed for the 1600 Palestinians murdered at Sabra and Shatila by the so-called "Christian Phalanx," stooge for Israel. To right self-righteous evangelicals the "right to life" demands that for the unborn does not apply to Palestinians, living or yet unborn!

Doubling Thomases should read the 1983 report of the General Accounting Office entitled U.S. assistance to the state of Israel, being in mind the size and population of Israel as compared to its neighbors. Re-

Foreign Military Sales and as to fiscal year, in part:

"Since 1974 Israel has been the recipient of more FMS assistance than any other country. Through FY 1974 to 1982, Israel received almost $13.5 billion in FMS assistance. Of this total, $5.4 billion was in the form of grants and $8.1 billion was in the form of loans."

In FY 1982, Israel was in long-term loans in FMS financing, which was 33 percent of the total U.S. military assistance program. "Also, Israel obtains more FMS grants than any other recipient, 'has long-term loans, some at special rates and is allowed to order military equipment under special financing arrangements before full funding is authorized by Congress.'"

Whereas the United States gives economic and military aid to Israel, countries of the Arab world have been forced to acquire defensive weaponry from the U.S.S.R., since the United States has refused to sell it to them; all this while Communism thrives in Israel through the kibbutz system, whereas most countries of the Arab world have refused to succumb to its inroads.

It is to be hoped that Americans will display some foresight as to the Middle East; that hindsight will not be employed after forty years, as it has apparently now as to Japanese Americans.

Reagan: USSR violates arms pacts

By HOWARD BENEDETT
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan Monday accused the Soviet Union of violating seven provisions of arms control agreements and told Congress that this "raises doubts about the reliability of the U.S.S.R. as a negotiating partner."

The violations include testing a new intercontinental-range missile, building an anti-thrust missile radar system, using chemical weapons and testing nuclear devices more powerful than allowed by treaty.

The White House provided reporters with a public version of the classified non-compliance report that Reagan sent to the Capitol. It repeated the list of violations that a senior administration official, speaking on condition that he not be identified, had outlined for reporters 10 days ago.

"After a careful review of many months, and numerous diplomatic exchanges with the Soviet Union, the administration has determined that with regard to seven initial issues analyzed, violations and probable violations have occurred with respect to a number of Soviet legal obligations and political commitments in the arms control field," Reagan said in a message accompanying the report.

"Soviet compliance is a serious matter," he said. "It calls into question important security benefits from arms control, and could create new security risks."

Reagan said the United States will continue "to press its compliance concerns with the Soviet Union through diplomatic channels, and insist upon explanations, clarifications and corrective actions. At the same time, the United States is continuing to carry out its own obligations and commitments under relevant agreements."

Drug net bags 62

ATLANTA (AP) — Sixty-two people have been indicted in the "largest nationwide narcotics investigation ever," with 30 of them accused of smuggling five tons of cocaine worth $3.8 billion into the United States.

Los Angeles.

The 30 named in Atlanta were accused of operating what a Justice Department official called "the largest cocaine trafficking ring in the nation's history."

The 62 were named in indictments unsealed Monday in Atlanta, Los Angeles, Miami and Little Rock, Ark., with some defendants indicted in more than one city.

"We believe... it is the largest nationwide narcotics investigation ever," FBI agent Jim Nelson said in Associate U.S. Attorney General Lowell Jensen said the ring smuggled about five tons of cocaine from Colombia into Georgia, Florida, Tennessee and Pennsylvania between June 1982 and September 1983. Of that amount, authorities seized 2,700 pounds valued at $340 million, he said at a news conference.

Congress back but much legislation unlikely

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid election-year jitters over the swelling federal deficit and military involvement in Lebanon and Central America, Congress Monday convened a short 1984 session likely to be even shorter on legislative achievement. The Senate started with a debate over residential phone bills, but took no action.

"access fees" for tying local service to long distance lines. But fellow Republicans Robert J. Dole of Kansas, Charles H. Percy of Illinois and Barry Goldwater of Arizona said Congress needn't get involved in the issue for now, noting that the Federal Communications Commission just last week delayed the proposed $2-per-month charges until mid-1985.

"I don't look for a raft of legislation out there," said Democratic House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. as the House officially ended the seven-week recess.

In the Senate, the second session of the 98th Congress opened sluggishly; it took more than two hours to locate enough members to call the chamber to order officially.

And Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. acknowledged that in a presidential election year, the congressional session is cramped by nominating conventions of the two political parties and the election campaigns for the House and Senate.

In the Democratic-controlled House, the session opened on a bitter partisan note as conservative Republicans unsuccessfully sought quick votes on legislation covering voluntary school prayer, abortion, a balanced budget amendment and the president's veto authority over spending bills.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., argued for a two-year moratorium against

The debate is likely to resume today.

Minister's children to defy judge, stay silent

MINOT, N.D. (AP) — Three children of a Baptist minister plan to disobey a judge's order that they testify against their parents in a trial involving an unapproved Christian school, a defense lawyer said Monday.

couple's children, ages 16, 14 and 11, have decided they will not testify in the trial, set to begin today at Minot.

The children's decision will likely place them in "a contempt situation," Moore said.

The parents are charged with keeping their children out of a school without certified teachers, a criminal "infraction" less severe than a misdeemeanor.

Graves teaches 21 students under the Bible Baptist Church's individualized instruction program, affiliated with a widely used national curriculum called Accelerated Christian Education.

Moore said North Dakota has no civil procedure to close the school, Ward County Court Judge Gary Holm ruled Saturday that the children must testify.

Moore criticized the weekend ruling, saying that while there may be value in children testifying against parents in certain felony cases, such as incest, the insubstantial charge in this case makes the situation different.

What's what

Average newspaper carrier in the United States earns a higher annual income than half the people on earth.

"The Last Man in Europe" was the name of George Orwell's classic novel before he changed the title to "1984."

Did you know that highway patrol officers nationwide hand out more traffic tickets at night than during the day?

There are people who don't remember their dreams, but there are no people who don't dream.

Do you recall the actor Edmund Gwenn? His last words were: "Dying is easy. It's doing comedy that's hard."

OLYMPIC COLORS

Q. You said the five interlocking Olympic rings are black, blue, red, white and yellow. Why these colors?

- A. Because at least one of them appears on every national flag.
- Q. What's a cowhide worth now?
- A. About $7, if properly trimmed and brine-cured.
- Q. Are X-rated movies shown in China?
- A. Only rarely. First such was a Japanese film about a girl sold into prostitution in 1978. It stirred some debate.
- Q. Wasn't Chief Pontiac the head of the Auto tribe?
- A. The Ottawa? That he was.
- CAUSE AND EFFECT
- The Rule of 80-20 seems remarkably universal. This is the "Law" which decrees that 20 percent of the cause is responsible for 80 percent of the effect. You may recall that twenty percent of the fishermen catch 80 percent of the fish, twenty percent of the salespeople write 80 percent of the business. It's now also claimed that 20 percent of a product line produces 80 percent of the profit.
- Most any Seasoned Citizen will tell you the 60-year-old wears shoes a size larger than said soul wore at age 30. Or at least a size or two wider. Yes, our feet spay, too.
- San Francisco law stipulates you can't lead an elephant down Market Street unless it's on a leash.

Prince to vacation in Kalahari Desert

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles will take a wilderness vacation in the Kalahari desert in southern Africa to get away from it all for awhile, the Daily Express reported Monday.

"We have nothing to say about the report," a Buckingham Palace spokeswoman said.

The Daily Express said Charles, 35, will disappear into the Kalahari, which stretches across southern Botswana, after a four-nation southern Africa tour in April.

"He will trudge in the footsteps of philosopher and explorer Sir Laurens van der Post on a 10-day ordeal away from civilization," the newspaper said.

South African-born van der Post, a mentor to the prince and a godfather to his 15-month-old son Prince William, "has apparently wanted for some time to get Charles away from the trappings of monarchy, the constant round of public duty and the attentions of the press," the paper said.

Irish actor thinks he understands bombing

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Richard Harris, the Irish actor who takes offense at being referred to as "English," says he thinks the bombing of Harrods department store in London at Christmas by Irish nationalists was wrong but understandable.

"I'm not saying it's right to bomb Harrods, but the provocation comes from the other side . . . That arrogant lady (Margaret Thatcher) wants to keep the trouble (in Northern Ireland) going," Harris told the Fort Lauderdale News.

Harris, 53, who often speaks of "the Irish question" on TV talk shows, was interviewed before he opened during the weekend at a Fort Lauderdale theater as King Arthur in "Camelot."

"You talk about the Russians in Afghanistan. If those were Russian troops in Northern Ireland, the U.S. would consider the IRA freedom fighters," said Harris, who was born in Limerick, Ireland.

One-time secretary runs chopper fleet

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Five years ago Marilyn Larson ended a 20-year career as an executive secretary to get married, but found she was bored without her job — so she learned to fly a helicopter and now runs a fleet of three, all pink and white.

She says her new occupation was "never in my wildest dreams."

She moved from Phoenix about five years ago to marry hotel executive Mel Larson, who flew a helicopter.

"I flew with Mel but never really had an interest in learning how to fly," she recalls. "He wanted me to learn how to put the helicopter down and take it off in case he was unable to fly, in case something should happen to him while we were flying."

Then she decided she might as well "learn it all."

They started their Action Jetranger Helicopters in August 1980.

"I was bored," she said. "I had been a busy professional person and missed the lack of a challenge."

Mrs. Larson, 44, spends most of her time running the company with three full-time and two part-time pilots.

"I'm not licensed to take people on tours," she says. "I just haven't had time to get around to taking the lessons and putting in the required hours to get that type of license."

Police clamp down after vague threat

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — Police beefed up security at the Bismarck Civic Center this past weekend to protect Gov. Allen Olson and Gov. William Janklow of South Dakota from a vague threat.

Boys high school teams from Bismarck and Pierre, S.D., played in the Governor's Cup on Saturday night and both governors attended.

Audithors had received information from out of state about a vaguely worded threat against "a governor," Col. Norman Evans, superintendent of the North Dakota Highway Patrol, said Monday.

He refused to say where the warning came from or who provided the information. The extra security included four additional police officers and five patrol officers, said Evans.

"We checked out any suspicious persons and provided security inside the building and outside the building to make certain that we were trying to cover all ends," he said.

Cold puts freeze on honorary degree

WEST HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — The weather got in the way of former New York Times editor and correspondent Harrison Salisbury's plan to accept an honorary degree at the University of New Haven.

Salisbury was one of four people designated as honorary degree recipients at the school's winter graduation Sunday, but he never made it.

The weekend's subzero temperatures at his home in northwestern Connecticut kept his car from starting, a university official said.

Rescued boy wakes after 8-day coma

CHICAGO (AP) — Jimmy Thielwicz, the 4-year-old boy who was submerged in icy Lake Michigan for 20 minutes, emerged from a coma Monday.

He was also taken off a respirator for the first time since a sliding accident nine days ago.

Doctors had induced the coma with drugs to control pressure inside his skull. The boy had been withdrawing from phenobarbital since Wednesday, when doctors stopped giving him the drug.

"He's out of the coma," said Jane Crowley, spokeswoman at Children's Memorial Hospital. "He's off the respirator."

Miss Crowley said Jimmy's condition had been upgraded from critical to serious. She added that Jimmy, who remained in the intensive care unit, was awake but had not yet spoken.

Hospital officials say Jimmy, who first opened his eyes Friday, has been making constant progress since the Jan. 17 drowning accident that plunged him into the lake, but it was impossible to determine now whether he has suffered brain damage. Preliminary results of a brain scan taken a few days ago showed his brain function normal.

The boy's father, Terrence, who tried to rescue Jimmy when he fell into the lake, and his mother, Kathy, have maintained an around-the-clock vigil since their son was rescued.

Jimmy's recovery has captured the attention of hundreds of people who have sent the boy's parents cards, letters, gifts, flowers and words of encouragement. Mayor Harold Washington sent Jimmy a blue teddy bear.

"So many people are concerned about him," Jimmy's mother said Sunday. "Some of them don't even sign their names. They just want to say they're thinking about Jimmy."

Trust funds of $20,000 each also were established last week by the city's two major newspapers to defray medical expenses when Jimmy was learned Jimmy's father had no medical insurance.

The Chicago Sun-Times fund was at $1,150 Monday. No figures were available from the Tribune.

Jimmy fell through the ice that covered Lake Michigan and into the 32-degree water after trying to retrieve a sled that fell down an embankment.

She hit jackpot

ALTON, Ill. (AP) — Rosaline Finn put a quarter in a machine and won the big payoff — but all she wanted at the East Alton Post Office was a few stamps, not 2,525.

"The stamps would not quit coming out," she said.

Police gave postal officials the wayward stream of 5-centers, valued at $126.25.

In all the excitement, Finn forgot to get her stamp.

Woman facing prison for slaying seeking clemency from governor

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — Rosemary Cox is blind in one eye, has a heart condition, degenerative arthritis in her hip and high blood pressure. At 67, she also has a murder conviction and may spend the next 20 years in prison.

A Will County jury in 1962 convicted Mrs. Cox of the 1960 love-triangle murder of her former boyfriend, Willie Hatten.

Her first appeal has been denied, and now the Illinois Supreme Court and Gov. James Thompson are all that stand between her and prison, where she fears she would die.

"The eternal triangle, not unlike the ageless ballad of Frankie and Johnny, appears to have claimed yet another victim," the 3rd District Appellate Court said in its recent decision.

Lawyers are preparing an appeal to the Illinois Supreme Court, and a request for clemency was sent to Thompson last summer. The man who prosecuted her doesn't object to clemency, saying Mrs. Cox "shouldn't die in prison."

Thompson spokesman Dave Fields said the petition was before the governor, but he said no action had been taken.

"I wouldn't live long" after being sent to prison, Mrs. Cox said in a telephone interview. "I hope and pray" that the governor will grant clemency, she said.

Trial Judge Robert Bucher, forced by law to hand down at least a 20-year sentence, said it was "unfortunate that . . . now at the twilight of her lifetime that she must stand convicted as a murderer and must be imprisoned."

Mrs. Cox, who didn't testify at her trial, has never admitted killing Hatten. The murder weapon, a small-caliber revolver, was never recovered. Neighbors testified that they saw Mrs. Cox leave the murder scene with a gun in her hand.

Mrs. Cox and Hatten had been companions for several years and had separated shortly before the shooting.

Another woman was at Hatten's home when the shooting occurred.

Jean Herigold, the assistant state appellate defender now representing Mrs. Cox, said she argued before the appellate court that Mrs. Cox had not been proved guilty of murder beyond a reasonable doubt, and that "there was a 'deficiency' in the instructions to the jury.

Free on an appeal bond since her conviction, Mrs. Cox lives alone, often confined to bed. She passes the time by listening to the radio, and she goes to church when she feels up to it.

Moroccan rioting claims 60 victims

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — At least 60 people were killed in riots protesting planned food price increases in Morocco, diplomatic sources said Monday.

The rioting caused King Hassan II to cancel the government price hikes.

In the eastern Moroccan town of Nador, hard hit by the violence, a general strike by residents shut down all shops and schools Monday, according to reports reaching the adjacent Spanish enclave of Melilla.

The Spanish news agency EFE said about 90 percent of Nador's population backed the strike. It said that in Zabo, a town about 20 miles from Nador, a demonstration was staged to protest the killing of an 8-year-old boy during a charge made by troops on a group of people last week.

The government made no announcement on casualties. But diplomatic sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said the death toll from the disorders last week included 20 dead in Tetouan, 20 in Nador, 15 in Al Hoceima, and three in Fez, all northern cities along the Mediterranean coast.

The sources said two demonstrators were killed during student demonstrations in Marrakesh in central Morocco.

They said Spanish press reports that as many as 200 people had been killed in the coastal region, a former Spanish colony, were "greatly exaggerated."

In his Sunday night address on national television and radio, the king canceled scheduled food price hikes and denied rumors of increased education fees, saying all primary and secondary education in Morocco would remain free.

Widespread rumors of increases in both areas had fanned the flames in this normally placid North African Arab nation.

The Moroccan government has expelled foreign journalists seeking to visit riot-struck areas, and the International Press Institute in London Monday called on Hassan to lift a "virtual news blackout."

Concern over increasing the price of basic foodstuffs had only weeks before shaken Tunisia, whose people, like those in Morocco, enjoy a greater amount of personal freedom and democracy than those in much of the region.

Lebanese militias battle in hills again

By MONA ZIADE
The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Druse and Christian militias battled in the hills south of Beirut Monday and authorities warned that the fighting may be cut to four hours daily because of fighting around the country's main power plant.

A government official was quoted as warning that the multinational force that includes U.S. Marines "will suffer painful blows from the Lebanese resistance" if it does not soon withdraw from Lebanon.

But Maj. Abdel-Salim Jalloud, whose country backs anti-government militias in Lebanon, did not make clear whether he was making a threat or a prediction, said the Kuwait News Agency.

Jalloud was quoted as denying any Libyan involvement in the truck-bomb attacks against the multinational force last year.

The battles in the mountainous Kharroub province northeast of Israel's Awali River front, 22 miles south of Beirut, erupted in late afternoon. The mountains rise from the coastal town of Jiyeh, site of Lebanon's main power plant.

Authorities announced Monday they will have to cut Beirut to four hours of electricity a day from the previous six because repairs at the power plant, which was damaged during fighting the first week of January, are not yet complete.

The power shortage has severely hampered commerce in the Beirut area and has created problems for people who depend upon electricity pumped water.

Lebanese state radio reported that a 4-day-old baby named Zahra Ghazzawi died in her incubator at a Beirut hospital when power was cut off and the hospital's emergency generator faltered.

Around the capital, Druse gunners lobbed artillery shells and rockets, on army troops stationed in Khaldie, just south of Beirut airport, and in the mountaintop villages of Souk el-Gharb, Alalt and Kalfoun, nine miles to the east.

A Druse spokesman said the anti-government militiamen fired at the army troops because "the soldiers were 'consolidating their positions' around Druse regions. The spokesman would not give his name.

State Lebanese television said the attacks around Beirut tapered off at 4 p.m., but six hours later the state radio said army troops in Souk el-Gharb under "shelling" and fired back "with appropriate weapons."

Druse leader Walid Jumblatt warned Saturday in a newspaper interview that the fighting in Lebanon will not stop until Gemayel's Cabinet resigns. Jumblatt Sunday phoned reporters in Damascus to deny he had called for Gemayel's resignation, saying he was referring just to the prime minister and Cabinet.

But Monday, his party's Foreign Relations Bureau issued a statement quoting Jumblatt as saying, "I reiterate my demand that Gemayel resigns before he destroys Lebanon with his stupid policy."

Washington adds Iran to terrorist nation list

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration officially designated Iran as a terrorist nation Monday in the wake of "convincing" evidence that the Iranians are encouraging terrorism beyond their borders.

Administration officials had previously said the Iranians were partly responsible for the bombing of the U.S. Marine headquarters in Beirut that killed 241 Americans.

Iran joins four other countries — Syria, Cuba, Libya and South Yemen — on the U.S. government's list of terrorist nations. Syria also is believed to have played a role in the Oct. 23 bombing by allowing Iranian-backed terrorists to operate behind its lines.

The designation of a country as a terrorist nation imposes rigid restrictions against exports of military goods or products that could be used for military purposes, such as civilian aircraft.

In Iran's case, the designation is largely symbolic since the government of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini had not been receiving any U.S. goods with military potential anyway, said John Hughes, the State Department spokesman.

Hughes said the United States does not import some oil from Iran but that this would not be affected by the terrorist designation.

Hughes said the designation of Iran as a terrorist country was "based on convincing evidence of a broad Iranian policy of encouraging terrorism beyond its borders, including public statements by Iranian officials supporting those acts."

Iraq, which has engaged in a long war with Iran, was removed by the administration from the terrorist list in 1982.

Germans free in deal

BERLIN (AP) — A secret deal between the rival German nations allowed six East Germans who sought asylum in the U.S. Embassy in Berlin to cross the Communist wall, officials said Monday.

The six refugees remained in seclusion Monday in West Berlin, and West German authorities refused to discuss the arrangement that brought them to the West.

The four East Berlin men and a married couple from Potsdam arrived in West Berlin Sunday night in a convoy of three East German cars.

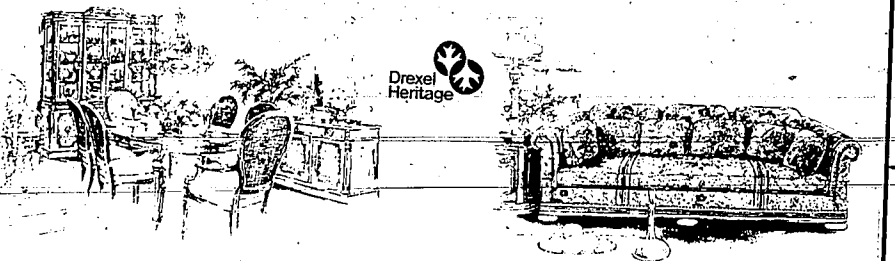

The six, whose ages ranged from 19 to 43, were accompanied by the West German government representative in East Berlin, Hans Otto Braeutigam, and East Berlin lawyer Wolfgang Vogel, who is said to be a close associate of Communist leader Erich Honecker.

The refugees spent two days at the U.S. Embassy in East Berlin, refusing to leave until they were given asylum. In an open letter to President Reagan, they said they wanted to flee a country "whose complete lack of freedom is an unbearable burden."

West German government spokesman Peter Boenisch refused to say if Bonn had paid East Germany to permit the six to leave or if it has swapped East German agents imprisoned in West Germany.

Lawmakers split on college tax expansion

By RICK SHAGHNESSY
Times-News Capital Bureau

REP. DONNA SCOTT
Thinks it will spread taxes

BOISE — A proposal to expand the taxing districts of the state's two community colleges resulted in almost immediate division among Magic Valley House members Monday.

The bill would add Blaine, Carnas, Cassia, Gooding, Lataha and Minidoka counties, as well as portions of Elmore and Owyhee counties, to the College of Southern Idaho taxing district, which presently includes Twin Falls and Jerome counties.

Introduction of the measure was approved by the House Education Committee, where it was presented by Reps. Robert Scates, R-Post Falls, and Donna Scott, R-Twin Falls.

"I think it would roll back the levies on the counties that are now paying the tax and spread it around a little," Scates said of the proposal. Scates lives in and represents Kootenai County, the location of Idaho's other community college, North Idaho College, and the only county that provides property-tax support for that school.

Neighboring counties are supposed to provide support to the school on a per-pupil basis, but at times, they have been delinquent in those payments, Scates says.

Another problem with this type of support is that students from other counties often establish residency in Kootenai County, which relieves their former home counties of the responsibility, he says.

Scott says the proposal would begin to implement the recommendations of the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry's Task Force on Higher Education.

The proposal may require some modification before an equitable distribution of the financial burden is found, she says. But the bill addresses a situation that needs to be resolved, she says.

Magic Valley counties have not been delinquent in their payments to CSI, says Jerry Meyerhoeffer, the school's president. In fact, those counties have been quite cooperative in working with the school, he says.

But if delinquent payments have not been a problem, changes of residency have, according to area legislators who support the bill.

Rep. Lawrence Knigge, R-Filer, says the official count of students from Magic Valley counties other than Twin Falls and Jerome is understated — at 13.6 percent. He says that without the changes of legal residency that commonly follow enrollment at CSI, the percentage of Magic Valley students from the eight affected counties would be closer to a third.

And Meyerhoeffer says that students from other areas are not indicative of the services the school provides the affected counties. The school runs senior-citizen and regional transportation programs for the area encompassed by the proposed boundaries for the taxing district, he says.

But the opponents seemed vehement on Monday. "I've killed this bill a hundred times," said Rep. Ernest Hale, R-

Burley. "If it takes in Cassia County as a part of the taxing district, I'll oppose it."

"This is going back to the committee, and that's where we'll have to get our horses together to fight it," he said.

But organized resistance may not be needed if the bill is assigned to the House Revenue and Taxation Committee, chaired by Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert. Antone said his initial reaction to the bill was negative.

Knigge says assignment to Antone's committee would signal the death of the bill.

"I would imagine if that bill goes into the Revenue and Taxation Committee — knowing who the chairman of that committee is — it won't see the light of day."

But the bill has yet to be assigned to a committee by Speaker of the House.

City seeks grant to pay for swimming pool

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city of Twin Falls plans to apply for a two-year, $200,000 grant to build its new pool.

Twin Falls City Council members voted unanimously at a special session Monday afternoon to apply for the money, which would come from the state's share of the federal Land and Water Conservation Fund.

Also, at a special session following the special meeting, the council listened to, but took no action on, two staff reports analyzing the possibility of having private investors build the pool under a lease-purchase agreement.

The council put the city's pool-building plans on hold last week — after a Salt Lake City bond counsel refused to certify the results of the city's November bond-issue election. The council now is trying to develop alternate plans for financing the project.

LeMar Orton, the city's community-development director, said the state expects to receive $600,000 from the Land and Water Conservation Fund this year.

The money comes from the sale of surplus federal property, motorboat fuel taxes and receipts derived from the federal Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act.

Idaho's share is distributed to local governments by the state Department of Parks and Recreation, to help build recreational facilities, as outlined in the state's comprehensive outdoor recreation plan.

Land and Water Conservation Fund grants can pay up to half the cost of a project, Orton said Monday. He said a $200,000 grant would represent 23.8 percent of an $840,000 pool.

Orton said the city would ask for $100,000 this year, and $100,000 in 1985. He said the city will not know whether its application is successful until mid-summer.

The city applied for a Land and Water Conservation Fund grant last year to install new docks at Dierkes Lake, but it was turned down.

City finance director Bryce King presented one of the two reports on the lease-purchase option, which currently is the council's preferred funding alternative.

It showed a lease-purchase agreement to be the least expensive method of paying for the pool over the long run.

The report compared the costs of a four-, a three- and a two-year agreement. All were more cost-effective over the long run than either bonds or a property-tax override, both of which would require a special election.

Furthermore, King said he has talked with representatives of several local banks and has found them receptive to the idea of forming a consortium to provide the funding.

The advantage of a lease-purchase agreement from the investor's point of view is that it can provide tax-exempt income, if structured properly, he said.

Councilman Doug Volmer said several individuals also are interested in becoming involved in the project.

Former Councilman Alan Wubker, who attended the meeting, said he also has an interest in becoming involved.

In the other report, city attorney Fritz Wonderlich wrote that both a lease-purchase agreement and a conventional loan are "viable possibilities" from a legal point of view. He recommended the city submit any agreement to a professional bond counsel, however.

Wonderlich said such an agreement would require a "funding out," or non-appropriation clause, that would avoid obligating the city beyond a particular budget year.

State law prohibits local governments from making such obligations, he said.

Such a clause adds considerable risk to the investment, he said. It calls for the termination of the agreement if the city misses a payment.

Wonderlich said he had talked to the state attorney general's office, a Boise bond counsel and a Boise investment banker in researching his report.

Board renames hospital

Name to suit role

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — St. Benedict's Hospital in Jerome will change its name this Sunday.

Starting then, it will be known as St. Benedict's Family Medical Center.

The hospital's board chairman, Roger Burnett, says the board voted earlier this month to change the name to more accurately describe the institution's role.

North Side

According to Robert D. Campbell of the hospital's chief executive officer, the goal of the hospital is to provide health care for the entire family — from infants to nursing-home residents.

"Over the past few years," Campbell says, "the services being offered at St. Benedict's have become more and more centered around the family unit."

The hospital has undertaken an extensive remodeling program in the past year to provide high-quality health-care technology, to serve a broader scope of family health needs, Campbell says.

The remodeling began with addition of a birthing center.

Next, the hospital added a modern critical-care unit, with the latest in monitoring equipment and one-on-one nursing care for seriously ill patients.

There also is an acute-care surgical unit and a long-term-care unit, where elderly or disabled patients receive constant care and personal services.

A home-health program also operates out of the hospital, serving a wide area of the Magic Valley.

This service takes registered nurses to the homes of patients who need checkups, medication and other assistance that only requires nursing care. This helps cut costs by reducing or replacing hospital stays in many instances, Campbell says.

Also last year, the hospital opened a new regional kidney dialysis center, and the X-ray and pharmacy departments have been expanded.

Campbell says the new name will better reflect these increased services and the hospital's Christian health-care policies.

OAKLEY — Making clothes with leather, which started as a hobby for Lilz Payton in 1979, has turned into a growing business.

"As far as I know, I am one of the few people working with leather in Utah, Wyoming, Washington and far away as New York. Lilz, and her husband, Chuck, own Sew and Sew Fabrics and Leather Works in Oakley, which they opened in May 1982."

"They turned out really nice. Then people saw them and asked for more. So we established a joint board to oversee the issue, Pica said."

Tupperware plant cuts 80 employees

'Layoffs will be according to seniority'

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

JEROME — The Tupperware Co. will lay off 80 workers for an indefinite period after they finish their shifts on Friday, plant manager John Forbes said Monday.

The layoffs are necessary to bring inventories back into line with sales, he said.

Although departments across the plant will lose staff, most of the affected workers will come from the molding department, the main production line, Forbes said.

The layoffs will be made according to seniority, he said. Many of the newer workers are on the second and third shifts.

Although a program of voluntary layoffs has been successful in the past, Forbes said he did not take that approach this time because he does not know when the layoffs will end. "This one could be a little longer," he said.

"Once again, sales are a little bit less than we anticipated, and as a result of that, we have to adjust inventory."

The Jerome factory has had three smaller layoffs during the past year for the same reason. One was a year ago, another was in March and the third was in October. Its production force numbers about 675 employees.

The 11-year-old plant manufactures and distributes Tupperware's well-known kitchenware throughout more than 40 percent of the continental United States, as well as in Alaska and Hawaii. It is one of four U.S. plants. Others are located in small towns in Tennessee, North Carolina and Rhode Island.

The company also operates 17 foreign factories, including ones in Canada and Mexico. It is a subsidiary of Dart-Kraft Inc., a food-processing conglomerate that posted sales of more than $7.1 billion during the first nine months of 1983.

Twin Falls hospitals form joint committee

By ANNETTE CARLY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Just in case there are any arguments about who gets which patient, the two Twin Falls hospitals are forming a joint committee.

"If there is a complaint or problem with a patient who did not end up in the correct hospital, the committee will handle it," Bill Burns, the administrator of Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, told board members Monday night at their monthly meeting.

"They (the Twin Falls Hospital and Clinic) wanted to make sure we did not pull anything, and that we would continue (the county ambulance service) with the same level of service," Burns said.

Donald Pica, the chairman of the executive committee of the private Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital, supported last week's appointment of MVRMC to provide the primary ambulance service in the county. But he asked that an agreement be worked out to let patients choose freely between the two facilities.

"Later Monday evening, Pica said that MVRMC has agreed that ambulance attendants will ask patients or their family with which hospital their doctor is affiliated.

Besides settling disputes, the committee will help with planning on-going training of ambulance personnel and make suggestions concerning ambulance care, Pica said.

"Obviously, they (MVRMC) are in control of the ultimate situation, since they are in control of hiring and day-to-day operations," Pica said. "But we will have the same voice on the committee."

The clinic will be represented by assistant administrator John Hayden, Dr. Allen Sinclair and chief nurse Gill Silberman. Pica says one more member may be appointed.

For MVRMC, Steve Fisher, the assistant administrator; emergency department physician Steve Borstad; and one other doctor will serve on the committee, says hospital publicist Suzanne Summers.

In other business at the Monday board meeting:

• Jack Claiborn of Kimberly was elected board chairman for the second year. Dave Munroe was elected vice chairman; Robert Valentine was elected treasurer; and Frank Arana was elected secretary.

They replace Doll Smith as vice chairman and out-going board members Melba Cook and Don Sharp as secretary and treasurer, respectively.

• Woody Pierce was given a plaque

At I-84 rest stop Trucker held for attempted rape

JEROME — A truck driver from Sunnyside, Wash., is in the Jerome County Jail, in lieu of $50,000 bond, facing charges of kidnapping and attempted rape.

Marc Alan Burnett, 28, was arraigned Monday afternoon in Fifth District Magistrate Court in Jerome, after his arrest earlier in the day at a rest area off Interstate 84, about five miles east of Jerome.

Sheriff's deputies were called to the rest area about 4:50 a.m. by a truck driver, who said a woman had been attacked and a suspect was being held at the scene.

Deputies took Burnett into custody at the rest area.

Chief Deputy Larry Webb identified the victim as Judy Tapp, about 36, of Caldwell.

She and her husband were traveling to Idaho to visit when they stopped at the rest area, Webb said. Mrs. Tapp, who was driving, went to the restroom. Her husband was resting in the car and was not visible from outside. He told officers that when he sat up to see his wife being thrown to the ground, and he went to her assistance. Two other truckers helped detain the suspect until officers arrived, Webb said.

The complaint against Burnett charges kidnapping with intent to commit a felony — rape.

Allegedly, he stopped the woman as she walked from the restroom and asked her for directions to Twin Falls, then grabbed her and threw her to the ground, holding his hand over her mouth.

The first-degree kidnapping charge alleges that he detained the woman against her will, with intent to commit rape.

Burnett told the court he would obtain his own attorney.

A sheriff's deputy said the same rest stop was the scene of the beating and rape of a 27-year-old Oregon girl in 1980. A Lincoln County man was convicted of that crime.

United Way elects '84 officers

TWIN FALLS — Richard Boyd has been named the 1984 president of the Magic Valley United Way.

Boyd, who is director of senior programs at the College Southern Idaho, was chosen, along with other officers, at a United Way board meeting last week.

Boyd will be completing his second and final three-year term on the board of directors.

"I'm greatly looking forward to the challenge," Boyd said. "There was a lot of work done by a lot of good people in 1983, and I don't see any of that changing in the future. It will be a total community effort."

This year, Boyd says, he would like to see the money collected increase, so the different agencies can continue to be funded at the level they feel they should be.

"I think he (Boyd) will make a very good president," says Sandy Thomas, the United Way executive director. "He has a lot of experience and has worked with other communities in the area to help establish the Magic Valley program."

Jack Miller will be the vice president for 1984. Miller is a three-year member of the board. In the past, he has been involved in soliciting United Way contributions from large businesses.

Jeff Harris will be this year's associate-campaign chairman. A four-year member of the board, Harris has been special events chairman and community-relations director in the past.

Jerry Dodds has been named agency-relations chairman for 1984, and Mary Shank has been appointed community-relations chairman. Dodds has served two years on the board, while Shank has been a member for three years.

For the second year, Janelle Johnson will serve as board secretary, and R. Curtis Anderson will be treasurer for 1984. Anderson is a three-year board member and has had previous experience working with United Way finances.

Lee Wegner, last year's president, will serve on the executive officers board.

Paul sugar-plant pond floods area

PAUL — Water from a lime pond at the Amalgamated Sugar Co. plant near Paul was blocking railroad tracks at the plant Monday night and spreading into a potato storage building across the tracks.

A break in a 30-foot bank around the pond occurred about 7:30 p.m. Monday, according to the Minidoka County sheriff's office.

The factory is located a mile east of Paul.

Galen Richford, the head mechanic at the Paul plant, said inspectors and repair crews were at work Monday night, attempting to determine the cause of the break and make repairs.

The pond covers about eight acres and is six to eight feet deep, he said.

Water is treated with lime for purification and then allowed to settle in the pond to eliminate the lime before it is pumped into the factory, to be used in the sugar processing.

"We can still operate the plant," Richford said. "There is plenty of water left in the pond to keep us going."

Richford said he and other plant officials believe the weather may have had something to do with the break.

It has been awfully cold, and this is the first warm day we have had," he said. "It may be the warmer temperatures today softened the bank and allowed it to give way."

Car and bus collide on icy Perrine Bridge

TWIN FALLS — Ten persons escaped serious injury early Monday morning when a car and bus collided at the south end of the Perrine Bridge, north of Twin Falls.

State police investigated the accident, which occurred about 6:30 a.m. Officers said a car driven by Kathlene Hokomb, 39, of Twin Falls, apparently skidded on the icy highway and slid into the side of a northbound Sun Valley Stages bus.

There were eight passengers on the bus, driven by James Wesley Miller, 54, of Twin Falls. Officers said all occupants of the bus escaped injury, and another bus was sent to pick them up for the remainder of their trip.

Hokomb suffered minor injuries but was not hospitalized. Officers said Hokomb was traveling south toward Twin Falls when the accident occurred.

Damage was estimated at $2,000 to her vehicle and $1,000 to the bus.

"My greatest accomplishment is leaving a facility that now meets all life-safety codes," he told the board. "The new board members don't have to worry about fitting the budget; expenditures for facilities to meet the code. They can devote their time to the quality of health care at the hospital."

Replacing Pierce, Sharp and Cook on the board of directors are Jean Hawkins, Marge Ashenbrenner and Jerry ...

The board voted to purchase the three ambulances the hospital now is borrowing from the Idaho Falls Fire Department — County law requires bids for purchase of more than $10,000. But because the county commissioners earlier had declared an emergency situation, the board was able to buy the ambulances for $17,000 without taking bids.

Two more ambulances will need to be purchased, and the board will ask for bids on them, Burns says.

The board approved appointments to the medical executive committee for 1984: Dr. Harry Brumback will serve as president of the staff; Dr. Paul Miles will serve as president-elect; and Dr. John Boaz will be the secretary and treasurer.

"I had to slack off working with leather while I got the sewing business going, but now I am starting to take more orders," he said.

She sews mainly leather coats and jackets, but she also has made vests, shirts, skirts, garment bags, purses, wallets, belts, picture frames and a lather tool case.

She works with cabretta — a soft goatskin — cowhide, sheepskin, deer hide, elk hide, pig skin and ultra suede, which is a synthetic leather. She says she is going to work with rabbit skin in the near future.

All of the items are tanned. They have to be tanned for garment use, she says, because if they are not, they will split.

"I learned to work with leather by trial and error. Actually, some of my first pieces of clothing were some of my best."

According to Fayton, leather is harder to work with than cloth in the sense that if you make a stitch where you shouldn't and take it out, it leaves a hole.

"It is not that hard to work with. You have to use different methods. You don't pin the seam lines. I either use tape, staples or glue."

CSI

Stivers was attending a legislative tour of the Mountain Home Air Force Base on Monday afternoon and was unavailable for comment.

The proposal places Reps. John Brooks, R-Gooding, and Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome, in a tough position. The change would reduce the taxes of Jerome County property owners, but it would increase the tax bills of property owners in Gooding, Camas and Lincoln counties, who also reside in District 23.

"In the beginning, that's the way it should have been," Hollifield said of the proposal. "The same thing should have happened with the regional airport board."

"On the surface, I'd have to oppose it."

"The thing that disturbs me here is we're legislating higher property taxes for persons in other counties," Brooks said, explaining that the residents of those counties previously elected to not be a part of the taxing district.

And with taxes rising on farms in Gooding County, "it's the wrong time to even think of such a proposal," Brooks said.

N. Idaho legislator offers bills revamping state taxes

Times-News Capitol Bureau

BOISE — Citing a need for monumental tax reform, Rep. James Stoicheff, D-Sandpoint, introduced three bills Monday that would drastically restructure public finance in Idaho.

Stoicheff's proposals include: repealing the production exemption from the sales tax, "eliminating taxes on personal property and increasing the grocery tax credit."

"If we don't do any tax reform this year, I'll never be done," said Stoicheff, a six-term lawmaker, considered a maverick by many for his often unpredictable and independent manner.

Stoicheff says the state could collect an additional $31 million from sales taxes imposed on producers. The current exemption applies to manufacturers, agriculturists and other businesses who purchase goods or commodities to be used in a product that ultimately will be sold at retail.

A committee that met prior to the legislative session had proposed ending some exemptions to the sales tax but not the production exemption.

"The only exemptions they recommended don't amount to a hill of beans," Stoicheff said. "We could almost double the take on the sales tax."

Stoicheff says that producers and others would be relieved of about $34 million a year in current taxes by repeal of the tax on tangible personal property. And he says local taxing districts would not be hurt by such a repeal.

First, they would derive additional revenue from their share of a larger state sales-tax collection, he says.

And if combined with repeal of the 5 percent growth limit on local governments' budgets, the repeal of taxes on personal property could add to their budgets by allowing local taxing districts to raise the tax levy on the remaining property on the rolls.

Stoicheff is proposing an increase in the grocery tax credit or refund — from $15 to $25 — because the amount hasn't been altered in years, he says.

"If voted on today, it would be 68 to 1 (against the proposals)," he predicted Monday.

Lemhi floodwaters receding

SALMON (AP) — icy floodwaters from the Lemhi River continued to recede Monday, but officials kept a wary eye on the Salmon River, fearing it could cause even worse flooding "if the dam breaks again."

Dean Jackson of the Salmon Search and Rescue Unit said an ice jam had formed on the Salmon about 7 miles upstream from town, forcing water into surrounding fields and threatening some nearby homes.

Jackson said the real danger would come from a rapid warming trend that would break more ice floes loose, increasing the size of the jam and forcing more water over the river banks.

If that occurs, he said, the water would likely begin flowing into drainage ditches that lead directly to the main part of Salmon.

"We're hoping for a real easy moderation in the temperature," Jackson said.

The National Weather Service said temperatures should continue to moderate over the next several days.

Salmon saw a low of only 9 degrees Monday, well above the bone-chilling 25-below-zero readings of last week that caused the Lemhi to freeze solid in its channel. Just above its confluence with the Salmon,

Officials said that at present there is little anyone can do but wait. "Mother Nature's done this, and she's not going to let us have to cur-

It," said Lemhi County Sheriff Bill Baker.

Jackson said the Lemhi rose slightly Monday afternoon, but while officials were keeping a close watch on it, there had been no further sandbagging or evacuation of homes.

A total of 127 residences in Salmon, a town of 3,200 about 50 miles south of the Montana border, had been evacuated by late Saturday.

'Human services' covers ground

BOISE (AP) — A new name, such as "Department of Human Services," might better describe her agency, Health and Welfare Director Rose Bowman says.

She told a legislative committee Monday that "health and welfare" doesn't adequately describe the wide-ranging functions of the agency.

Stressing human services, she said, would "reflect what the department is really doing," she said, in an appearance before the Legislature's Finance Appropriations Committee.

Bowman, the agency's director for the last eight months, said the agency offers a wide range of human services, from birth to death. "We deal with human concerns every day."

The agency has had a variety of names. Idaho used to have separate departments of health and welfare before they were merged in the early 1970s.

In a government reorganization in 1974, the agency became the Department of Environmental and Community Services (DECS) but later resumed its old name, Department of Health and Welfare.

By any name, the agency requires a lot of tax dollars.

The budget request for the fiscal year starting July 1 is for $219.9 million, including $74.5 million in general state funds, nearly $121 million in federal funds and $13.4 million in funds from dedicated sources.

Current spending is $203.8 million, including $66.6 million from the general fund.

Bowman said the agency is seeking funding for 72 new jobs in the next fiscal year. Included will be 23 more persons to handle food stamps.

She said new federal rules require households receiving food stamps to make monthly reports on income.

Nampa gets work-release center

BOISE (AP) — A work-release center that sparked controversy in two eastern Idaho towns will be built in Nampa instead.

The Idaho Board of Corrections voted for Nampa unanimously on Monday after a legislator from the Canyon County city said people there would welcome the facility.

"We think Nampa is an ideal site," said Sen. Terry Reilly, R-Nampa. And State Corrections Director Al Murphy concurred the location has a lot going for it.

Murphy said there are prospects for inmates to work at the Idaho State School and Hospital in Nampa.

He also said it may be possible to cut the project's estimated $450,000 construction cost by having inmates from the penitentiary at Boise assemble a pre-cut structure for use as a work-release center.

The board also said Nampa, where state land is expected to become available, is a favorable choice in terms of Idaho's population distribution.

The controversy over site-selection continued for months last year when both Pocatello and Idaho Falls were considered. But disputes over zoning matters and possible effects from an influx of inmates flared.

"The next time we want one in eastern Idaho, people aren't going to fool around," said board member Chuck Hall of Boise.

The selection of a site on Monday wasn't part of the board's regular agenda. Reilly made arrangements earlier in the day to speak to the board. After listening to him, both Hall and board member Kent Remington of St. Anthony said they were ready to make a decision.

"There was no opposition in Pocatello — until we got there" and the center seemed a bit closer to becoming a reality, Remington said.

"If Nampa will go with us, I feel like let's go with it," he said.

One work-release center — in Boise — has been built out of the seven proposed in a 1981 state plan.

But corrections officials say the number may diminish because of other proposals. One would allow probationers and parolees to divide their time between work and home while reporting frequently to state officers.

'Circus' out for Gem executions

BOISE (AP) — In a concerted effort to avoid creating "a circus" of any future execution, the Idaho Board of Corrections has endorsed a set of regulations specifically outlining procedures to be followed.

In addition, Corrections Director Al Murphy told the board it should consider seeking legislation that would prohibit condemned men or those convicted of "heinous crimes" from profiting from books or movies made about them.

"These are things we should be talking about before we get into the actual situation and screw it up," said member Charles Hall. "I don't want to make a circus out of this thing."

The board's action Monday on the procedures Murphy outlined came only three days after the state Supreme Court stayed the Jan. 31 execution of convicted-murderer Lacey Sivak. There has not been an execution in Idaho since 1957, although seven men are now on death row.

But before that stay to allow review of Sivak's case by the U.S. Supreme Court, Warden Darrol Gardner discussed the procedures with Sivak and his attorney. Murphy conducted a "practice" of the impending execution. The result, they said, was a number of changes in the procedures that will ultimately be used.

"It was quite obvious to us that practices were quite necessary," Gardner told the board in heading off criticism like that at least one other state has suffered for holding an execution "practice."

"There were some problems there," the warden said. Once another firm date for an execution is set, Gardner said another practice will be held.

Overall, the procedures are intended to allow corrections officials to exercise strict control over the process and avoid or eliminate the possibility of any disruption.

The state attorney general's office is also setting up a confidential telephone line that will be available to any judges with control over the case so any last minute stays or reprieves can be received. A special verbal code will be required, Murphy said.

The new rules also change the hour of execution to 12:05 a.m., from 9 a.m. Murphy said the earlier time makes more sense in terms of managing the roof-of-the-inmate population.

Love notes belong with dead letters

"DEAR ABBY: I've been thinking about the letter you published recently from a woman signed 'Crushed'."

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

"She thought she had an ideal marriage, but after her husband died, his secretary delivered his personal belongings and among them were some 'love letters' from two women. These letters nearly destroyed her and consumed her with hate due to her husband's deceit."

"Having been a secretary for many years, I wonder how necessary it was for the secretary to have included some 'love letters' with the rest of his belongings? Why didn't the secretary do the decent thing and destroy them?"

I wonder how other secretaries feel.

—PAT IN KEARNY, ARIZ.

"DEAR ABBY: While reading the letter from 'Crushed,' who was presented with love letters from other women after her husband died, a little bell rang in my mind.

I was reminded of a confidence trick whereby the con artist sends hard-core pornography to a man he knows to have recently died. (The obituary column provides this information.) The widow, profoundly shocked and desperate to avoid scandal, pays the bill — usually huge and supposedly representing several months of a long-standing account.

Although no monetary gain would be involved in the case of "Crushed," anyone with malice toward the dead man or his wife could manufacture these "love letters." "Crushed" should examine the postmarks, if any, on the envelopes, and if they postdate her husband's death, she should be like me... —SUSPICIOUS IN CANADA

"DEAR ABBY: I was reading this 'Crushed'."

I, too, have been married to a wonderful, honorable man (for almost 33 years) and I have never questioned his faithfulness. If he should die before I do, and someone would bring me evidence of his unfaithfulness, I would be suspicious of the bringer.

Has it occurred to you that the secretary could have cared for your husband and been jealous of his devotion to you? What better way to hurt you than to bring you "evidence" that would break your heart and desecrate his memory?

Are you absolutely certain that these letters are legitimate? I do not believe they are. And you should not believe it either —A FRIEND IN ILLINOIS

"DEAR ABBY: Here are my thoughts about the widow signed 'Crushed'."

"You were right to tell her that 'Crushed' she had a good marriage, she had one — regardless of what she learned later."

And now I have a message for all secretaries: Should your boss die suddenly, if you have never been snoopy before, now is the time to be snoopy. Look through his "personal things" and conveniently throw away anything that would cause undue grief to his widow.

If the wife was not aware that her husband had been playing around while he was alive, what good would it do her to know after he is dead?

Male hair transplants sometimes effective

"DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband is only 25 years old and is losing his hair. He has a full head of hair, except the top is getting much thinner."

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

"Please tell me about hair transplants, treatments or hair waxes that he could use. Are they expensive? Which ones are permanent? Are there any other options?"

"DEAR READER — I always recommend that the person who is having hair loss see a dermatologist. However, your husband probably has common male baldness. The problem is within each hair follicle itself. Some specific hair follicles are prone to be affected by male hormones. The hair shaft gets smaller and shorter until it just falls out."

"The hair follicles commonly involved are those at the forehead and at the back or crown portion of the head. As those at the hairline begin to grow smaller, the typical receding hairline occurs. Eventually, if all of the follicles from the hairline to the crown of the head are involved, the man will develop the typical bald pate with the fringe of hair around the sides."

"When that is the cause in men, about the only thing that produces permanent effects is a hair transplant. The follicles on the side of the head do not respond in the same way to male hormones. Plugs of these follicles are replaced to the top front of the scalp. Since each follicle takes all of its own genes and characteristics with it, they flourish in their new location.

"The other alternative is a hairpiece. But many people are victimized by unscrupulous ads and it's important to check out the credibility of these hairpieces. Some treatments that may really work are being studied, but there really is nothing available yet that has proved to be significantly useful in treating male baldness.

The problems of baldness in men and women is discussed in more detail in The Health Letter 12-6, Hair Care, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1531, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

"DEAR DR. LAMB — Many Mexican people both in New Mexico and here in southern California, where I live, have the idea that it's bad to drink milk with fish or shrimp."

"I've never heard this before, but I'm interested as it could affect my 4-year-old granddaughter. I don't want her to have any unnecessary superstitions about eating."

"DEAR READER — This idea is not limited to Mexicans. It's a common old wives' tale. There is certainly no reason why a person can't have fish and a glass of milk or fish with a milk-containing dessert.

The only requirement is that both the fish and milk be of good quality and not contaminated with bacteria.

Versatile Georgetown dumps Boston Col.

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Except for Patrick Ewing, it doesn't seem to matter who starts for Georgetown's fourth-ranked college basketball team.

"I don't know anybody who gives you room, board and tuition to anyone who can't play," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson after Monday night's 82-63 Big East Conference victory over Boston College.

Ewing, a 7-foot All-American center, scored 15 points, grabbed 13 rebounds and blocked seven shots — three in the last minute to withstand a Boston College challenge as the Hoyas raised their record to 16-3 and 4-1 in conference play.

— It was the third straight victory and 11th in the last 12 starts for Georgetown. The Eagles, dropped from the rankings this week, fell to 19-5 and 5-3.

Junior Billy Martin with 18 points and 10 rebounds and freshman Reggie Williams with 17 points, including six-for-six from the free-throw line in the last 1:54 led the Georgetown.

"They're 10 deep and there are no soft spots there," said Boston College Coach Gary Williams.

"They go deep and they keep coming at you," said Jay Murphy, the Eagles' 6-foot-10 center, who led all scorers with 26 points and 11 rebounds.

In fact, Georgetown's five reserves outscored Boston College bench 44-4.

The Hoyas got off to a disastrous start as Boston College trailed 4-2 and ran off 13 consecutive points aided by coach Georgetown Coach John Thompson. The Eagles built their biggest margin to 19-7 with 15:34 remaining in the first half, but the Hoyas battled built led by Williams and Martin.

Michael Jackson's three-point play brought Georgetown into a 39-33 tie with 59 seconds left in the first half and the score was tied at halftime 41-41.

Georgetown had three quick field goals to open the second half, but the biggest lead they could build was eight points and with 6:15 remaining four consecutive free throws by Jay Murphy cut the Hoyas' lead to 49-37 and that was the closest Boston College could get. With 2:36 remaining on the Hoyas led 79-71 and hung on thanks to Williams' accurate free-throw shooting and three blocked shots by Ewing in the final minute.

Murphy, a 6-foot-10 center, paced Boston College with 25 points. Martin Clark added 17 points and 12 rebounds for the Eagles, while Michael Adams scored 14, Roger McCready 12 and Dominic Prestrey 11.

David Wingate added 12 points for the Hoyas.

Louisiana St. 80
Mississippi St. 64

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Forwards Leonard Mitchell and Jerry Reynolds led a pair of 11-point surges Monday night that lifted 10th-ranked Louisiana State University to an 80-64 victory over Mississippi State and into a tie for the Southeastern Conference basketball title.

Mitchell hit five straight shots during a three-minute span of the first half as LSU went from an 11-10 deficit to a 21-12 advantage.

Reynolds, with two steals and a layup, led an 11-2 spurt with four minutes remaining in the second half. That put LSU up 77-58, with just under two minutes to go.

Reynolds finished with 18 points. Mitchell, saddled with four personal fouls for the game's final eight minutes, finished with 18.

Don Eades, LSU's 12-point guard and Derrick Taylor had 10 for LSU, 12-3 overall and 5-2 in the SEC.

Butch Pierre led Mississippi State with 19 points, while Kevin Hildreth added 13 for the Bulldogs, 7-10 and 2-6.

Memphis St.-57
Tulane 50

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Phillip Haynes sparked a second-half Memphis State surge as he scored 18 points and led the 13th-ranked Tigers to a 57-50 Metro Conference basketball victory over Tulane Monday night.

It was Memphis State's fifth straight victory and upped the Tigers' record to 13-3 overall and 5-0 in the Metro. Tulane fell to 10-6 and 2-3.

A tightly played first half produced seven ties as Tulane's John Williams, the game's leading scorer with 22 points, kept the Green Wave close.

But in the second half the Tigers, with Haynes hitting from the outside, opened up a 51-37 lead.

Tulane then made a furious comeback, closing the gap to five points, 55-50, with a minute to play.

Again it was Williams who sparked the comeback, scoring eight of Tulane's first 10 points in the second half.

Andre Turner added 10 points for Memphis State. The Tigers' All-America forward, Keith Lee, was plagued by foul trouble and could manage only four points.

Texas-El Paso 62
Air Force 52

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Donnell Allen was nine-for-nine from the free-throw line and added two field goals to lead eighth-ranked Texas-El Paso to a 65-52 Western Athletic Conference victory over Air Force Monday night.

The Miners broke to a 28-15 halftime lead and in the second half padded their lead by as much as 18 points. Allen made seven of the free throws in the second half.

The victory improved UTEP's record to 17-1 and its conference mark to 5-1. It was Air Force's eighth straight defeat and 12th WAC loss dating to last season. The Falcons are 2-10 overall and 0-6 in league play.

Air Force's Todd Beer had a game-high 16 points.

Georgia Tech 72
Virginia 71

ATLANTA (AP) — Bruce Dalrymple got his first field goal of the game early in the third overtime, then Anthony Byrd added four free throws as Georgia Tech defeated 19th-ranked Virginia, 72-71 in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball Monday night.

Dalrymple also made two free throws and John Salley added one in the third overtime. A 26-footer by Otwell Wilson of Virginia bounced off the rim at the final buzzer.

Tech had a chance to win the game in regulation time as both teams played the delay game after the shot clock was turned off with four minutes remaining. With the game tied 51-51, Wilson missed a jumper and Yvon Joseph rebounded for the Yellow Jackets.

Tech held the ball until nine seconds were left, called time out and then casually tried for the winning shot. Mark Price's 28-footer fell short at the buzzer.

Ricky Stokes made six free throws in the second overtime period as Virginia took a five-point lead. But Price's 25-footer, a tap-in by Salley, a jumper by Joseph and Joseph's two free throws tied it 63-63, as the Cavaliers got two free throws from Wilson and one of two from Rick Carlisle. Tech was trying for a last-second shot when Byrd lost the ball out of bounds at the buzzer.

Price led all scorers with 22 points for Tech, 19-2 overall and 5-1 in the ACC. Joseph added 19 points and 10 rebounds and Dalrymple got 12 points.

Surprise: Super Bowl ratings down

NEW YORK (AP) — Ratings for Super Bowl (XVIII) were markedly lower in selected major cities than the near-record numbers recorded for 1983's edition of the National Football League championship game, two major rating services said Monday.

Overnight surveys by the Arbitron Ratings Co. showed that an average of 43 percent of the television sets in New York, San Francisco, Dallas, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Miami, Los Angeles and Washington were tuned to Sunday's game, in which the Los Angeles Raiders trounced the Washington Redskins 38-9.

Meanwhile, the A.C. Nielsen Co. said its overnight for the CBS telecast were lower than last season in New York and Chicago, but much higher in Los Angeles.

"That's the chance you take," said Linda Keyes, manager of editorial services for CBS.

BIG SKY

Layher named player of week

BOISE (AP) — Montana State forward Phil Layher has been named the Big Sky Conference's basketball player of the week, says league commissioner Ron Stephenson.

Layher, a 6-foot 7-inch junior from Jackson, Calif., had 37 points and 10 rebounds as Montana State split on the road last week.

In a 59-57 loss at Northern Arizona, Layher was 10 of 13 from the field for 22 points, had five rebounds, two steals and one blocked shot.

In the Bobcats' first Big Sky road breakthrough of the season, a 63-59 victory at Nevada-Reno, he had 15 points and five rebounds.

Others nominated for the weekly award included Boise State guard Vince Hitchen, Idaho center Pete Prigge, Idaho State forward Mike Denkers, Montana forward Rob Hurley, Nevada-Reno guard Curtis High, Northern Arizona forward David Allen and Weber State forward Charles Carradine.

ISU undefeated in conference

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Idaho State University leads the Big Sky Conference standings with a 3-0 record after the first two weeks of action.

But it must be a team effort — because the Bengals have only two players in the league's top 20 scorers.

Boise State's Vince Hitchen continues to lead individual scorers with an average of 17.9 points per game, in latest statistics released Monday.

Mike Williams of Idaho State is fourth with an average of 13.2 points, and Buck Chavez is the only other Bengal in the top 20, with an average of 10.8 points per game.

Weber State's Charles Carradine, 6-3 junior from Mississippi, has taken the lead in field goal accuracy. He's hitting nearly 64 percent from the field.

Montana's Larry Krystkowiak is second in scoring, 15.6, fourth in free throw percentage, first in rebounding and seventh this week in field goal accuracy.

This year the Big Sky is using a 45-second shot clock as an experiment. And charts kept on the shot clock indicate Big Sky teams are holding on to the ball longer.

The first week under the 45-second clock, 82 percent of shot attempts came in the first 20 seconds of possession.

Last week that figure fell to 74 percent, with a lot more shots coming with 10 to 24 seconds left on the shot clock.

So far, in 14 Big Sky games, there has been only one violation of the shot clock, by Weber State in the Wildcats' opening game.

A's sign Sorensen to pitch

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Oakland A's picked up another starting pitcher when free agent Larry Sorensen agreed to contract terms Monday.

The contract is for one year at $150,000, with a club option for a second year, the American League team announced.

Sorensen, 28, was 12-11 for the Cleveland Indians last year and went into baseball's re-entry draft after the season. The A's were one of several clubs choosing the right-hander in the draft.

He will be among at least nine pitchers competing for spots in the starting rotation. The A's open spring training in four weeks.

Sorensen broke into the majors with the Milwaukee Brewers in 1977. The following season he was 18-12 with Milwaukee and pitched in the All-Star Game. He was traded to the St. Louis Cardinals before the 1981 season and sent to Cleveland in another trade a year later.

Three other veteran pitchers, Bill Caudill, Ray Burris and Tim Lincecum, have been acquired by the A's since last season ended.

When Sorensen's signed contract is received, the A's will have to make a move to create a vacancy for him.

Fee on tags may finance winter feed

BOISE — Scores of sportsmen jammed the Idaho Fish and Game Department headquarters late Monday, most of them urging the Fish and Game Commission to endorse the auctioning of big-game tags to the highest bidder.

"We're not selling our fish and game," argued Steve Blackburn of the Gem State Sportsman's Association. "We're selling the opportunity to hunt our fish and game, and that only means more hunts for the rest of us."

On the eve of the commission's expected decision on whether to support that controversial legislation only Willard Pollock of the Idaho Trappers Association spoke out against it.

"This is outright selling of game," he said, claiming the plan amounts to "cutting the small rian out for the rich man."

Despite the overwhelming support at the hearing for the proposal, sponsored by Rep. Pamela Bengson, R-Boise, one commission member has already predicted the five-man panel will reject the proposal as it has in the past. Two others voiced concerns about it at the hearing.

Fred Christensen of Nampa said his mail and telephone calls are split evenly on the issue, and Norman Guth of Salmon raised questions about possible abuse of an auction program.

At one point the hearing turned into a mini-debate between some commission members and people in the audience.

The bill would earmark the money from the auction of one additional tag for each big-game species for research and enhancement of big-game animals.

Used in other states, Ms. Bengson discounted the criticism, telling the commission that her bill would deny no hunter a chance for a big game tag and in fact would probably increase those chances as auction receipts are used to help herds grow.

There was more unanimity, however, between sportsmen for a special fee on big game tags to finance emergency winter feeding of struggling big game. The state is spending hundreds of thousands of dollars so far this year to feed a rising population of game. In just the past week the number of animals being helped has jumped 25 percent.

On that issue the commission appeared to be leaning toward endorsement of a fee although some members remained leery for fear it would result in an annual feeding program whether the weather demands one or not.

"The day you put a dollar or two dollars on a big-game tag, you're locked into a winter feeding program," said Commissioner Pete Thompson. "The public likes to see you feed and they're going to want you to feed animals even if they don't need feeding."

But Commission Chairman Keith Stonebraker said the proposed fee, which requires legislative approval, would give the department the extra money to finance emergency feeding when needed without devastating other fish and game activities.

"Every winter isn't going to be like this," he said.

Fish, game citations double

BOISE (AP) — Intensified enforcement efforts over the past decade have more than doubled the number of citations for fish and game violations.

Based on past studies, Dale Baird told the Fish and Game Commission Monday, "We detect 5 percent or less of illegal big game harvests that occur."

That means probably one of every three elk and one of every five deer killed in Idaho last year was taken illegally, Baird said.

While urging the commission to conduct further research to verify those statistics, Baird said that if true they mean that a total 12,000 deer were taken illegally in Idaho during 1983, "a significant part of management in terms of harvest."

But because of new enforcement programs, improved training and increased personnel, Baird said citations for violations jumped from about 1,900 in 1972 to more than 4,000 in 1982. Last year the number dropped to just 4,000.

Over the same period, the conservation officer force has increased from 65 to 81, intensified officer training has been instituted and the so-called CAP, or Citizens Against Poaching, program has been created.

Non-game financing urged

BOISE (AP) — Citing competition from other tax-backed interests, Idaho's non-game program manager is urging the state Fish and Game Commission to maintain its commitment to that effort.

"These programs will keep non-game programs in public view and hold on to the momentum until the federal government gets its act together," Martel Morache said Monday.

Morache called on the panel to continue financing programs like the caribou migration study and public information and education proposals to keep public interest in non-hunting programs alive until Congress decides to fully finance a 1980 law encouraging non-game activities.

He pointed out that in 1981, the first year Idaho allowed taxpayers to earmark a dollar of their state taxes to finance such programs, about $106,000 was contributed. In 1982, when the non-game check-off began competing with one to help finance the U.S. Olympic effort, non-game contributions dipped to $90,000.

Tar Heels on top; 'new' teams ranked

NEW YORK (AP) — Like the previous week, No. 1-ranked North Carolina was the only first-place vote in the weekly Associated Press basketball poll. But this also was a week of fallout, as five "new" teams entered the Top 20 thanks to several surprises in conference play.

A nationwide panel of 80 sports writers and broadcasters retained the Tar Heels and DePaul, both 14-0, and Kentucky as the nation's 1-2-3 teams.

In beating Atlantic Coast Conference rivals Duke and Virginia, the Tar Heels received a perfect 1,280 points. DePaul collected 1,130 points and Kentucky, which set to Florida but beat seventh-ranked Houston, amassed 1,053.

The points system is based on 20 points for each first place vote, 19 for second, etc.

Five familiar names re-emerged in this week's poll as Oregon State, St. John's, Boston College, Fresno State and Purdue all dropped out.

After a rocky start this season, Louisville began to pick up steam and emerged at No. 14. On Sunday, the Cardinals, now 11-4, streaked by UCLA, which in turn dropped six notches to No. 15.

Also re-entering is Arkansas, which comes in behind the Bruins at No. 18. The other newcomers are Georgia, Virginia and Syracuse, placing at Nos. 18, 19, 20, respectively.

Allen shines in post-season action

By ALAN GOLDSTEIN
The Baltimore Sun

TAMPA — Don't ask Marcus Allen how he can transform a broken play into a game-breaking 74-yard run. It's as foolish as asking Pavarotti why he sings like an angel.

It's a gift, a rare, indefinable one that Allen used in running through, around and between the bedazzled Redskins for 191 yards Sunday to become the MVP in the Raiders' 38-9 rout of Washington in Super Bowl XVII.

All season, Allen had listened to the taunts of Los Angeles football fans who suggested that he had lost his place as the town's top banana to Eric Dickerson, the dynamic rookie who single-handedly made contenders out of the Rams.

It was a long and frustrating year in which Allen, at one time, complained to coach Tom Flores and Raider honcho Al Davis that he wasn't getting a chance to run enough. To which Davis, tartly replied, "Want to run more? Go. Jog in the park after practice."

Needed into proving that he was more than a freshman sensation. Allen turned the post-season into a breathtaking canvas worthy of Michelangelo.

MARCUS ALLEN
Thanking his Pumas

In the AFC semifinals against Pittsburgh, he exploded for 121 yards on 13 carries, setting a Raider record of 9.3 yards a rush. A week later, he was even more devastating in denting Seattle's defense for 154 yards on 24 carries and grabbing seven passes for 62 yards.

With a true artist's temperament, he saved his best for last, and the giant stage of the Super Bowl. Against a tough Washington defense, Allen romped for 191 yards and a pair of touchdowns on 21 carries, sending the Redskins to the happy hunting grounds with a scintillating 74-yard run that gave LA a 35-9 cushion at the end of the third quarter.

It was the longest run in Super Bowl history, eclipsing the mark of 58 yards set by the Baltimore Colts' Tom Matte in 1969. But it actually covered close to 100 as Allen first bounced off quarterback Jim Plunkett on the huddle while starting to the left, found his path blocked by Redskin safety Ken Coffey, reversed his field, cut right, then slanted up the middle and easily outdistanced cornerback Anthony Washington.

"It was my fault it ended up that way," said Allen. "I should have been inside, but I was outside. Just thank my Pumas—that I was able to run that far."

Talking of his MVP honors, the California native said, "I thought about it, but I thought more about winning the game. The award was just the icing on the cake. I'm more happy for guys like Lyle Alzado, Charlie Hannah, Greg Pruitt and Shelby Jordan. They're the older guys who have never been to a Super Bowl; I talked to Lyle on the sidelines with two minutes to go, and there were tears in his eyes."

"The long run? We call that a '17 Bob Trail.' The tight end and tackle double-team the linebacker, and the guard pulls. Mickey Marvin threw a great block, and I should have followed him. But someone grabbed me from behind, I reversed my field and found an open alley. You always dream about things like that happening, especially on this level of competition."

Although he has won a Heisman Trophy and starred in the Rose Bowl for Southern Cal, Allen has always had to prove his toughness. He gained 2,342 yards as USC's tailback his senior year in 1981, and yet a number of NFL teams passed over him, leaving the plum for Davis's Raiders.

Golf

Short putt offsets big check

PHOENIX (AP) — Corey Pavin picked up a check for $42,300 in his second start as a full-fledged member of the PGA Tour.

That's good.

He also picked up a memory. And that's not so good.

The memory he acquired is of a 15-16 foot birdie putt on the 72nd hole that came up short of the hole.

"That's gonna stick with me," the 24-year-old rookie from Camarillo, Calif., said after he, like the birdie putt, fell just short of a victory in the $400,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament. He lost by that stroke, the one that fell short, to outwitting Tom Purtzer, who got the birdie he had to have on the same hole moments later.

Pavin, who won three times on a globe-trotting circuit last year before he qualified for his American PGA Tour playing rights, had led or shared through the first three rounds of the Phoenix tournament.

And the slender young golfer led or shared the lead through most of the last round, surrendering only on that final hole.

"I'm a bit disappointed, yes," he said. "But I guess you just have to chalk it up to experience."

"I was nervous. A little too eager. I didn't want to leave it short. But I did. It was not the bravest kind of putt."

"But if I'm in that position again, I can assure you it won't come up short."

"Just nervous, that's all. Just lack of experience."

Pavin, a poised and controlled young man, has more experience than the average rookie, however.

He's played in three U.S. Opens, and has made other spot appearances as a special invitee at other tour events. After failing to gain his American playing rights at the tour's Qualifying School, he took his game on the road in 1983, winning the South African PGA, the German Open and a small tournament in France.

He qualified for the American tour late last year. He was playing in only his second event as a full-fledged member of the tour in Phoenix. And he very nearly won it.

The lack of experience, he said, may be the reason the title got away.

"I'm pleased to have played as well as I did."

"But there's disappointment, too."

"On the tour, you only get so many chances to win. This is only my second tournament on the tour, so I'm happy to have had the chance to win."

"Maybe next time I'm in that position I can win."

He paused briefly, and smiled.

Commodity traders exchange orders on a typical day in a Chicago Board of Trade pit AP/Lambert

Rumors

Confirmed or not, rumors strong fuel for surges, declines in markets

By CAROL WILLIAMS
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The rumor rocketed across the floor of the Chicago Board of Trade in the spring of 1982: an end to the Falkland Islands war was imminent. Traders scrambled to sell their soybean stocks, fearing there would be a flood of South American beans once shipping in the South Atlantic returned to normal. It was a classic case of anxious traders losing thousands of dollars because of a rumor that later proved to be false. This past Oct. 25, when the United States invaded Grenada, prices rose on the New York Stock Exchange against many people's expectations that stocks would fall at the news of a military battle and heightened world tension. It was a classic example of how even the analysts do not always know what to expect from developments around the world. Rumors and news — sometimes a combination of the two — provide the foundation on which investors and financial analysts form opinions of economic trends, which in turn guide their decisions to buy or sell. Rumors are most prevalent when the commodities trading in light and the market needs a jolt to give it some life, says commodities analyst Jack Boyd of the investment firm Drexel Burnham Lambert in New York. "Let's suppose a floor trader sees a dull, offbeat declining market. There's no fun in that for him," says Boyd. "So he starts a rumor on the Comex (New York Commodity Exchange) floor."

A quick story planted among commodities dealers that rainfall is down in the wheat belt in the United States can boost grain prices instantly. If the price of wheat goes up sharply, a false story to manipulate stock and commodities markets violates exchange rules and federal laws. Robert Anthony, a lawyer for the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, said a broker or dealer can be suspended and criminal proceedings may result if there is proof he or she violated anti-fraud statutes of the SEC Act. However, Anthony concedes, rumors are virtually impossible to trace and the anti-fraud statutes are but slight deterrent to a trader bent on manipulating the market. One factor complicating enforcement of the "rumor rule" is that truth and myth are often mingled. "Usually the rumors have some fact to them," says Anne Christiansen, an analyst and trader for A.G. Becker in Chicago. She points to the premature report of an end to the Falklands conflict. AP statement had been issued from the United Nations on the war, but it made no prediction of when the hostilities would end. A "bloodbath" ensued for those traders who sold their beans before the U.N. official unveiled cleared up the confusion, Christiansen says. Daily financial ups and downs are often attributed to coinciding news events, but the fluctuations are not always a direct result. "The market is pretty much inured to a lot of things — the latest developments in the Middle East or the economies of Latin America," says Raymond F. DeVoie, a market strategist for the Baltimore-based brokerage firm of Legg Mason Wood Walker. On the other hand, DeVoie says, if President Reagan died suddenly, "the market would sell off 75 to 100 points because his re-election is already in the market."

New rule by FTC expected to curb debt collection abuse

Sylvia Porter

After almost 10 years of deep controversy, the Federal Trade Commission soon will issue a rule that forbids certain abusive debt collection practices and eliminates some of the harshest remedies collectors have had available to catch consumers in debt. The rule is to become effective a year after its publication in the Federal Register — slated for early February — assuming that it is not challenged in court and that Congress doesn't pass a law overriding it. Is this a signal for rejolting by consumers and consumer-protection forces? That depends on how widespread you believe the most abusive collection practices have been. The rule does prohibit the worst of the practices; these have been concentrated in ghetto areas, in regions where outsiders are generally ignorant about even common-sense buying and have been the target of unscrupulous lenders. To that extent, the FTC finally has come through and is acting to protect the public. But after almost a decade of pushing and pulling, the rule meets the approval of finance companies, retailers, credit unions, banks and other lenders. It represents a compromise that decent creditors can easily accept. To that extent, the protection may be against abuses that are restricted to creditors whose prime goal is to exploit the consumer. To be specific, the new rule: • Prohibits on loan contracts what are known as confessions of judgment. This means it forbids contract language in which you, a borrower, waive all right to any notice to contest a court judgment and to defend yourself. • Forbids contract language that allows the creditor to bypass the courts and to go straight to your employer to assign some of your wages and, in that way, compel you to repay your debt. Under the new rule, the contract also must give you the right at any time to revoke your permission for a creditor to get in touch with your employer. Your credit-

Brew-haha heading for judicial decision

By MARK HEINRICH
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Coors is a kind of beer. Coors's is a kind of soft drink. But Coors contended most people couldn't tell the difference between the sound of "Coors" and the sound of "Coor's," so in due course, it took Coor's to court. Adolph Coors Brewing Co. said in its federal lawsuit that the two names linguistically and phonetically indistinguishable, and that the names are confusing that Coor's Natural Beverages Inc. is profiting from the fame of Coors. Coors charged usurpation of its trademark and unfair competition. But that's not the view of Coor's. Officials of Coor's Natural Beverages charged Monday that Coors sued because Coor's products are rapidly gaining ground in markets served by both. A trial has been tentatively scheduled for March. James Van Santen, an attorney representing Robert J. Coor, owner of the soft-drink company, said that if Colorado-based Coors really is worried about trademark infringement by the smaller Coor's, the brewer could have sued years ago. Coors had 1982 gross sales of $1.03 billion; Coor's had 1982 revenues of $1 million. Van Santen accompanied Coor, a 36-year-old former truck driver, at a news conference Monday to explain the soft-drink company's stand against the federal suit filed by Coors. In October, Coors representative investigated his company in 1980 but "indicated that he saw no problem" after learning the soft drink firm was named after a real individual. Since then, Coor's has expanded from a single product line — Glasse Rush Soda — to eight naturally flavored sodas sold in groceries and health-food stores in every U.S. state except Bermuda and Ireland. Its strongest market, Coor said, is in Colorado. But Coors' recent addition of health-food products to its flagship beer business has caused it more concern about its growing presence in food stores than about alleged trademark infringement. Van Santen contended. A Coors spokesman in Denver who asked not to be identified said the average consumer could not phonetically differentiate between the two names. The spokesman would not say, however, why Coors was suing five years after Coor started his company. Coors charges that Coor has "willfully and knowingly sought to profit on the Coors trademark." The brewery's suit asks for a permanent injunction ordering Coor to change his company's name and destroy products labeled with the current name. "We proceeded with planned expansion and didn't hear another word from Coors until last October," Coor said. "We had relied on the inaction of Coors to greatly expand. It would cost me a minimum of $1 million to (change the product name)."

Stock prices plummet to lowest mark of '84

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices took their sharpest drop of the new year Monday in selling blamed variously on an interest-rate worries, technical market factors and even the outcome of the Super Bowl. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial fell 16.66 to 1,244.45, bringing its loss since Jan. 6 to 42.19 points. It was the largest daily decline for the average since it dropped 18.59 points Oct. 28. Volume on the New York Stock Exchange slowed to $2.01 billion shares from $3.38 billion Friday. The NYSE fell 0.2% to 24 and Prime Computer lost 1% to 19 1/4. Digital Equipment moved up 1% to $7 1/2. Among blue-chip chips, International Business Machines was off 1 at 116; Merck was down 1 1/4 at $8 1/4; Alcoa was down 1 1/4 at 45, and International Paper was off 1 1/4 at 55 1/4. Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 3 to 1 in the daily tally on the Big Board, and the exchange's composite index fell .81 to 95.32. Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 96.56 million shares. Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrial dropped 1.61 to 185.82, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 1.34 at 184.87. The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market fell 4.21 to 290.20. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 224.48, down 2.23.

Strike talks stumble

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Renewed negotiations broke down Monday after only 90 minutes of talks between the Phelps Dodge Corp. and 13 striking copper unions representing 2,300 workers who have been off the job six months. The first negotiations since talks broke down Nov. 23 ended abruptly at 11:30 p.m. when federal mediator Sam Franklin emerged from a hotel 1, a strike that has been marked by violence.

Heat demand hikes diesel price

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Consumers are paying more for heating oil and diesel motor fuel in areas hit by the winter's record cold, but gasoline prices continue to drop, oil industry analyst Don Lundberg says. Heating oil and diesel motor fuel are "one and the same product," known as distillate No. 2, "so the runup in prices is a realistic showing of where the product has been. Demand and the demand highest," Lundberg said in a Sunday interview. But in warmer parts of the country, diesel fuel prices continue to drop along with the national average for other grades of gas. Diesel normally follows unleaded gas prices and is 70 cents higher, Lundberg said — but only in warmer regions," Lundberg said. In the freezing East, Midwest and Rocky Mountain states, diesel prices rose 2 to 5 cents a gallon since Jan. 6. In areas exempt from bitter cold such as Tucson, Ariz., and Portland, Ore., prices have fallen as much as 86 cent. For heating oil, price hikes in the past two weeks ranged from 6.4 cents in Pennsylvania to 8.3 cents in New York City and 8.5 cents in New Haven, Conn. Lundberg said that for purposes of comparison, "there's been almost no such comparable seasonal phenomena because we've never had such cold weather. It's greatly exaggerated the situation." At wholesale prices, distillate No. 2 sold as diesel fuel is cheaper than heating oil — 55.4 cents a gallon compared to 96 cents a gallon. But 21.8 cents in gas taxes are added to diesel by the time it gets to the pump, Lundberg said. Lundberg's shrewdly graded of gasoline service stations nationwide showed a drop of gasoline averaging $1.18.7 a gallon, down nearly a third of a cent from Jan. 6. At self-service stations, which now make 73 percent of all gas sales, individual grades averaged $1.07.5 for regular, $1.15 for unleaded, $1.33.4 for premium leaded and $1.27.7 for super unleaded. Lundberg said patrons of full-service stations are paying an average 19 cents more per gallon. Preliminary state sales figures also indicate total U.S. gasoline consumption increased last year for the first time since 1979, when we burned 115.31 billion gallons. Lundberg estimated motorists used 101.03 billion gallons last year compared with 100.69 billion in 1982.

PIK cuts into corn stockpiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. corn inventory on Jan. 1 totaled 1.53 billion bushels, down 41 percent from a year ago, reflecting the drought, shriveled 1983 harvest and the government's payment-in-kind program, the Agriculture Department said Monday. Of the total, 2.1 billion bushels were stored on farms, 48 percent less than a year ago, and 1.83 billion bushels in elevators and other off-farm locations. Down 17 percent, the department said in a quarterly report. Soybean inventories, at 1.29 billion bushels, were down 23 percent from Jan. 1, 1983, with farm stocks at 631 million bushels, 40 percent less. Off-farm soybeans were reported at 659 million bushels, down 12 percent from a year earlier. The Jan. 1 wheat supply was 2.32 billion bushels, down only 8 percent from the record level of a year earlier, the report said. Farm inventories were reported at 1.01 billion bushels, 13 percent less, while off-farm supplies were down 3 percent from Jan. 1, 1983.

The lender deducts the late charge from your next payment, which means that your regular payment won't cover the amount you owe that month. The result: You are subject to another late charge, which is passed on to the next month — and on, and on. Under the new rule, lenders can assess the late charge only once, unless you again fall behind in paying. • Requires a notice to a co-signer that he or she may be liable for the debt and is subject to the same collection methods used on the principal debtor.
