Rebels wage fierce battle in Beirut

By FAROUK NASSAR
The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Anti-government Muslim militiamen seized most of west Beirut in furious street battles with the Lebanese army Monday and demanded the resignation of Christian President Amin Gemayel.

As night fell, a gunshot and two planes of the U.S. 6th Fleet turned their firepower on "rebels" who rocketed the U.S. Marine base at the International airport on Beirut's southern edge, a Marine spokesman reported.

One Marine was wounded and a French soldier was killed in the new explosion of fighting, which plunged the American-backed Gemayel administration into its worst crisis since it took office two months ago.

Two other Frenchmen and eight Italian soldiers in the Beirut multinational peacekeeping force were also reported wounded.

Police said at least 90 people were killed and 300 wounded Monday fighting, pushing the overall toll to about 160 dead since the latest round of Lebanon's intermittent civil war broke out last Thursday.

Hooded Shiite Muslim irregulars and their Druse allies drove Lebanese army units from most of their checkpoints on Moslem west Beirut's main commercial thoroughfares and residential neighborhoods.

At sundown, an eerie haze of smoke and cordite shrouded this city of 1 million people. Thunderous blasts of artillery, rocket-propelled grenades, Katyusha rockets and mortars echoed among the high-rise buildings. The shellfire, falling on major crossing points between east and west Beirut, drew a crescent-shaped belt of flame through the city's heart.

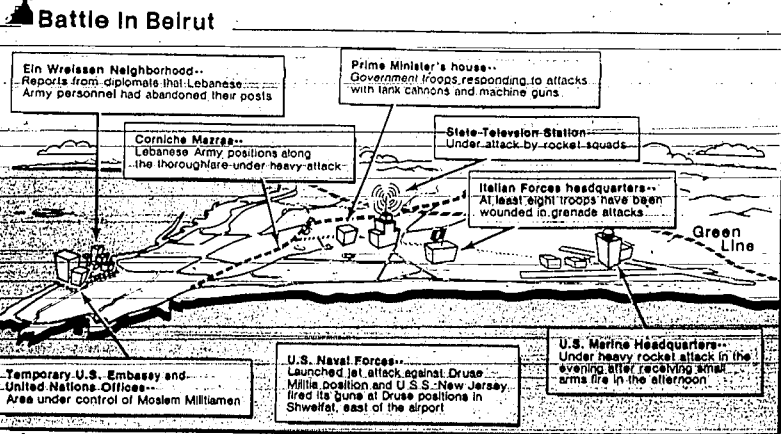

The fierceness of the fighting was reminiscent of the 1975-76 civil war.

For the first time Shiite Moslem leader Nabih Berri called on Gemayel, a Maronite Christian, to resign.

"The battle is about to end, Lebanon's little shah (Gemayel) is on the verge of collapse!" Berri, leader of the Shiite movement Amal, declared in a radio broadcast.

Gemayel's Sunni Moslem prime minister, Shafiq Wazzan, had refused to resign.

Gemayel in trouble, army unravels

By TERRY A. ANDERSON
The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Druse and Shiite militiamen gave their reply Monday to President Amin Gemayel's offer of major political concessions. They demanded that Gemayel resign immediately and mounted an assault that won them control of half of his capital.

When the battle started about noon, a senior Lebanese official was briefing Western reporters at the presidential palace.

In the president's speech Sunday night after the resignation of his Cabinet, the official said Gemayel had offered to talk about anything — more power-sharing with Moslems, Cabinet seats for opposition leaders Walid Jumblatt and Nabih Berri, and abrogation of the Lebanese-Israeli withdrawal agreement of May 17, which enraged Syria and the Syrian-supported opponents of Gemayel.

The Maronite Christian president had been trying to form a national coalition Cabinet, since Moslem Prime Minister Shafiq Wazzan first offered his resignation last September, the official said.

No Moslem leader was willing to join.

Neither Gemayel's efforts nor those of U.S. special-Middle-East envoy Donald Rumsfeld over the past six months had been able to extract any compromises from Jumblatt's Druse, Berri's Shites or the Christian right bloc headed by Gemayel's father, Pierre.

Nor had there been any softening by Syria, Israel or the United States.

Syria bitterly opposed the May 17 agreement with Israel, which granted the Israelis political and military concessions in exchange for an eventual withdrawal of its army in the south. The Syrians refused to consider a parallel withdrawal, and backed the Druse and Shites in their fights with the army.

Israel refused to begin its withdrawal unless Syria agreed to do the same, and refused to renegotiate the agreement with Lebanon. The United States backed the Israelis.

With political progress completely balked, Gemayel has been left with only one hope — the Lebanese army, growing rapidly in size with a national draft, and in potency through infusions of U.S. equipment and training.

For the second time in six months, the hope has failed.

Shiite leader Berri called on the Moslems in the army — 60 percent of its 57,000 enlisted men — to stop fighting.

On Monday, the army seemed to melt away in west Beirut — in the face of the combined Amal-Druse assault. Preflights were fought all over the Moslem half of the city.

Hunger in U.S.

BOSTON (AP) — Hunger "has returned to America" because of unemployment and government policy, according to a study released Monday that differs sharply with the recent conclusions of a White House task force.

The commission of educators, physicians, religious leaders and social workers who conducted the study concluded that malnutrition is a serious problem spreading to new groups of Americans.

"We have found that hunger is widespread and increasing," the authors wrote. "Hunger is the result of clear and conscious actions taken by government leaders."

The 112-page report of the Citizens' Commission on Hunger and Malnutrition, which was set up by New England's state legislatures, unemployment and government policy.

It added, "We have found concrete evidence of hunger in every state we have looked. We found hunger and it wasn't hard to find."

At the White House, deputy press secretary Martin Fitzwater said no one in the administration had seen the report.

"All we're offering is a no-comment at this point," he said.

The President's Task Force on Food Assistance announced in January that it could find no evidence of "rampant hunger" and saw no need for new assistance programs.

The commission said its members used questionnaires and statistics conducted five months of field investigation in New England.

Chairman Larry Brown of the Harvard School of Public Health said the members also reviewed every public and private study of hunger in the United States conducted since 1980.

Shuttle having its problems Second bird lost in botched up launch

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The space shuttle astronauts launched a second shuttle Monday, but it ended up in a useless orbit, like its twin launched three days ago, suggesting a common technical problem in the satellite rocket motors, an official said.

The orbits are so similar that it's eerie," said Richard B. Brandes of Hughes Aircraft Co., which built the Indonesian Palapa satellite and its twin, Westar VI.

The two satellite failures cast a shadow across the triumph of the space shuttle just as astronauts Bruce McCandless and Robert Stewart prepared for the most challenging spacewalk ever attempted — today's free-floating excursion 300 feet from the shuttle without a lifeline.

The North American Aerospace Defense Command located the Palapa B2 satellite about seven hours after its ejection from the shuttle Challenger in an elliptical Earth orbit so low that it "cannot perform its mission," said Brandes.

Judging from the orbit, the satellite rocket's motor apparently fired for only eight to 15 seconds, then stopped abruptly, its flame snuffed out, Brandes said. To reach the intended "parking" orbit, 22,800 miles over the equator, the rocket engine had to fire for 85 seconds.

The orbits of Palapa and Westar VI are too low for the satellites to be useful.

Two similar failures after 18 successful space firings obviously suggest a common technical problem may have existed with these two (rocket) motors," Brandes said.

The Palapa was in an orbit that was 750 miles at its high point and 172 miles at the low point, roughly the same as that of the Westar VI launched earlier for Western Union.

There is no way the satellites can be rescued or brought into useful service because they lack the grappling fixtures necessary to pull them into the space shuttle.

Charles Orlish, vice president of McDonnell Douglas Corp., which makes the 57 million rocket stages, speculated that "there was some problem with the nozzle of the motor."

He suggested that the motors may have ruptured because both "terminated and essentially snuffed (which) would indicate pressure in the motor dropped abruptly." To cause that, he said, "would require an increase in an opening on the motor."

The government of Indonesia called the failure "a major disappointment."

Shuttle program manager Glynn Lunney expressed the same sentiments for NASA and said "it is too early to tell and unfair to speculate where the problem was, and wherever we find it to be, we hope it will be soon."

Flight Director Harold G. Deaton said the astronauts did not ask about the satellite and were not told of its failure.

Western Union said its satellite cost $30 million and that other expenses pushed its loss to $75 million. Presumably, the nearly identical Palapa cost about the same.

The third major failure on the trouble-plagued flight cast a pall over the most daring part of the mission. Tuesday's scheduled first spacewalk by astronauts not wearing a lifeline.

House passes remap bill, governor's veto likely

By BOB FICK
The Associated Press

BOISE — The Republican-dominated House, ignoring a veto threat from Democratic Gov. John Evans, has overwhelmingly endorsed a legislative redistricting plan that a lone GOP critic said invites a court challenge.

"What we have here is a sack of hand grenades," warned Rep.-Dean Haugenson, R-Coeur d'Alene. "We're going to get it back. But the pins will be pulled when we get it back."

With little debate Monday, the House voted 49-20 to expedite action on the redistricting bill and then by the same vote approved the proposal and sent it to the GOP-controlled Senate.

"We did what we could and when you're stopped, you're stopped," said Rep. Melvin Hammond, D-Rexburg, the House Democratic leader. "We still don't believe the bill will ever become law."

The plan, a response to the court-voided 1982 redistricting proposal, calls for retention of 35 legislative districts. But it includes three so-called multicounty "cluster" districts and a provision that one of them in eastern Idaho have residential zones.

Candidates from that cluster district would have to live in a certain zone to be eligible but would have to be elected in a district-wide race.

deviation is the population difference between the largest and smallest districts.

SIII, Rep. Vard Chatburn, R-Albion, an author of the plan. "The percentage would still pass muster under the U.S. constitutional standards."

Hammond contended that the plan left the northern Idaho counties severely underrepresented in the Legislature. Evans made the same claim when he issued his veto threat late last week.

Following three weeks of work, a special House-Senate committee approved the plan last week on a 7-6 vote that again severely underrepresented in the Legislature. Evans made the same claim when he issued his veto threat late last week.

The state Supreme Court upheld a lower court ruling late last year that declared the 1982 plan in violation of the state constitution because it divides counties between legislative district.

to come up with a new plan because failure to do so will mean the 1984 elections will be held under a plan created by First District Judge Dar Cogswell. Although legislative Democrats are split over that plan, some Republicans believe it would favor Democratic candidates in the upcoming balloting. That plan also increases the size of the Legislature to 42 districts.

Hammond, among those opposing the Cogswell plan, said he still held out hope that a legislative solution to the redistricting mess can still be worked out. He indicated support for another plan that would actually reduce the Legislature's size to 31 districts.

But the debate over redistricting, reminiscent of the battle fought two years ago over the same issue, has already led many officials to predict cancellation of this spring's presidential primary and rescheduling of the state primary to late August. The House has already passed legislation to do just that.

Mormon apostle has cancer
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Bruce R. McConkie, a member of the Mormon Church's Council of the Twelve Apostles who underwent colon surgery Jan. 20, is seriously ill with cancer, his brother said Monday.
 Doctors who operated on McConkie, 68, "look out some cancerous bowel" but found the disease "was more widespread than they had anticipated," said Oscar McConkie, a Salt Lake attorney.
 He said doctors had detected a spot on McConkie's liver which they had planned to treat during the colon surgery, but after opening him up "they determined there was no reason to treat the liver."
 Instead, he said, McConkie will be treated with chemotherapy once he regains sufficient strength.
 Oscar McConkie termed his brother's condition serious but said he could not be more specific without speaking to his elder brother's doctors.

TV shows target of drug probe
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police narcotics officers investigating alleged cocaine use on the sets of CBS-TV's "The Dukes of Hazzard" and "Simon & Simon" have arrested one person and expect additional arrests, officials said Monday.
 "Our investigation is not limited to these two shows, but our most current information was about individuals associated with these programs," said Capt. Bob Blanchard of the Los Angeles Police Department's special Entertainment Task Force.
 "We are investigating what is reported to be flagrant use of narcotics (in the industry in general)," he said.
 Blanchard refused to identify the person who had been arrested from "The Dukes of Hazzard" crew, but said it was not one of the stars.

Soviets support Latin America
MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union announced the formation Monday of a Committee of Solidarity with Latin America to support people fighting "U.S. aggression" in Central America.
 The official Tass news agency said the organization will coordinate the mounting movement of the Soviet people in support of the struggle of the Latin American democratic forces against U.S. actions in the region.
 It said Alexander Chakovsky, editor-in-chief of the writers union's weekly newspaper Literaturnaya Gazeta, was elected chairman of the committee.
 Soviet news agencies said the committee will be used to support government policies and arrange trips and other activities by committee members.
 Tass said Alexander Subbotin, secretary of the state trade union council, addressed the inaugural meeting of the Latin American committee.

Panel tracks EDB in Idaho
BOISE (AP) — A government panel plans to track use of the newly banned pesticide EDB in Idaho, and the state health officer is warning physicians certain alcoholic patients may face special risk.
 State health officer Fritz Dixon also has called on the panel to circulate information about EDB, or ethylene dibromide, which is suspected of causing cancer.
 On Monday he met with a task force representing state and federal agencies responding to the Environmental Protection Agency's EDB ban.
 Dixon said users of Antabuse, a prescription medicine for alcoholism, may be especially vulnerable if exposed to EDB through their jobs.
 Laboratory tests indicate the combination of EDB and Antabuse multiplies the pesticide's toxicity. Dixon said he will advise Idaho physicians to determine whether Antabuse users may have been exposed to EDB through their jobs.

McGovern fears regional war
WASHINGTON (AP) — George McGovern said Monday he fears President Reagan will get the United States involved in a war in Central America if he is elected to a second term.
 "It's quite possible that given the falling effort in El Salvador and Nicaragua, he'll commit American forces," the presidential hopeful said. "We could be drawn into a regional war in Central America. I think the whole thing could blow up."
 Reagan has said repeatedly that he would not rule out the use of U.S. troops in Latin America, but he has refused to speculate when questioned about the circumstances under which they would be used.
 McGovern also said the Democrats have an even chance of beating Reagan in November.
 "I think we have a 50-50 chance," said McGovern. "He's extremely vulnerable on foreign issues. He has the federal deficit, the gender gap and he's looked on with a jaundiced eye by blacks and Hispanics. For those reasons, the Democrats have a shot."

Men get slap for enslavement
TYLER, Texas (AP) — A federal judge, criticizing the Justice Department for "flooding the Southwest with illegal aliens," gave probation sentences Monday to three men convicted of enslaving 19 Mexicans after transporting them into the country illegally.
 U.S. District Judge William M. Steger placed Steven Lane Crawford, 21, and Randall Craig Waggoner, 22, on five years' probation after he fined each $1,000, and issued suspended five-year prison terms.
 A jury convicted them in December of 19 counts of transporting illegal aliens from the Mexican border and holding them in involuntary servitude.

 signed with his eight Cabinet members Sunday to clear the way for a national coalition Cabinet to try to end the conflict, which pits the army and the Christian right-wing Phalangist militia on one side against Syrian-supported Druse and Shiite fighters on the other.
 In the United States, President Reagan issued a statement Monday deploring "the actions of those who would destroy the legitimate government of Lebanon" and blaming the Syrian government for the attacks.
 White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the Reagan administration hoped Gemayel "will quickly be able to form a responsible, broadly representative government."
 Special Middle East envoy Donald

Rumsfeld and other U.S. officials held urgent talks with Gemayel at the presidential palace in suburban Baabda, Lebanese state radio said. Secretary of State George P. Shultz, in Brazil, said the Reagan administration would be reviewing its Lebanon policy in the light of "what emerges."
 Walid Jumblatt, leader of the Druse Progressive Socialist Party, said in a statement issued in Damascus, Syria, that any political settlement with Gemayel's government was "impossible" and the president's resignation was necessary to solve the country's crisis.
 Both Jumblatt and Berri accused the 42-year-old president of helping the Phalange Party of his father, Pierre Gemayel, to dominate the army and the government.
 At the root of Lebanon's unending conflict is the demand by the Shites, Druse and other non-Christian communities — comprising the majority of the population — for a greater role in running the country.
 Gemayel said Sunday he was inviting the warring Muslim and Christian factions to new reconciliation talks Feb. 27 in Geneva, Switzerland. He promised sweeping reforms to give Moslems a greater say in government, and suggested he was willing to scrap Lebanon's eight-month-old troop withdrawal pact with Israel, as demanded by his opponents and their Syrian backers.

 The 6th Fleet flotilla stationed off Beirut went into action about 7 p.m. Monday, after the Marine base at Beirut airport came under rocket fire. Marine spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks said two A-6 Intruder fighters from the aircraft carrier Kennedy and the guns of the U.S. frigate Garcia pounded insurgent artillery — apparently Druse positions — in the hills east of the airport.
 Pentagon officials said it was the first U.S. air strike here in two months, since 28 planes of the 6th Fleet attacked what were described as Syrian anti-aircraft positions Dec. 4. Two planes were shot down then and a pilot was killed.
 Brooks denied a local radio report that the battleship New Jersey had fired its guns Monday.
 The major said no Marines were injured in the rocket fire, but one was wounded in an earlier small-arms attack and was evacuated for treatment aboard the amphibious assault ship Guam.
 Amal's Shiite militiamen, Lebanon's largest paramilitary force, and Jumblatt's Druse irregulars took to the streets shortly before midday.

 capital. But other army units put their guns aside and left in hand their weapons to militiamen. By nightfall, almost no soldiers were to be seen in west Beirut.
 Last August, when Muslim militiamen took over west Beirut in a similar assault, Gemayel had three brigades — 10,000 men — of U.S.-trained troops already forming in east Beirut for an attack on the Druse in the mountains above the city. He simply turned them around, and in one day, his tanks had driven the militiamen back underground and the army was apparently in control again.

Now, the core of those 10,000 men, the 8th Brigade, is committed to the mountains, where it has been battling the Druse ever since. The brigades that had been holding west Beirut are scattered or refusing to fight.
 Monday's fighting also has left the multinational force in untenable positions, isolated from the government they are here to support. The U.S. Marines are at the international airport, surrounded by Shites and Druse. So are one company guarding the American and British embassies in militia-held west Beirut. The Italians are in the Shiite and Palestinian slums. The French are in their headquarters at the racetrack on the old "green line" frontier between east and west.

Beirut turmoil at a glance

By The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Anti-government Moslem militiamen seized most of west Beirut in furious street battles with the Lebanese army Monday and demanded the resignation of Christian President Amin Gemayel. As night fell, a gunshot and two warplanes of the U.S. 6th Fleet turned their firepower on rebels who rocketed the U.S. Marine base at the international airport on Beirut's southern edge.

DIXON, Ill. — President Reagan, during a birthday visit to his boyhood home, renewed his vow Monday that America's commitment to Lebanon "remains firm and unwavering."

BRASILIA, Brazil — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Monday the United States is reviewing its policy toward Lebanon in the wake of Monday's battles, the most severe challenge yet to Gemayel's government. Shultz said at a news conference, "What possibilities there are have to be evaluated, and we have to suit what we do to the situation that emerges there. We have to see what emerges (in Lebanon) and take our position in light of that."

DIXON, Ill. — Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes urged reporters "not to read anything" into Shultz's statements. "There's been no change in the U.S. position as regards the multinational force," Speakes told reporters traveling with the president.

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., called for removing American Marines from the Beirut International Airport and perhaps stationing them on Navy ships offshore. He added "there's no question in my mind that somewhere along the line the president will take them out. But I say why not now?"

WASHINGTON — Gen. John Vessey, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was asked at a congressional hearing if the United States had plans to move the Marines to safety if the situation continues to deteriorate in Lebanon. Vessey replied: "We have contingency plans to take care of our forces, yes, senator." He did not elaborate.

Shultz: U.S. reviewing Lebanon policy

By GEORGE GEDDA
The Associated Press

BRASILIA, Brazil — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, reacting to the new turmoil in Lebanon, said Monday the United States is reviewing its policy toward that country and will make any necessary changes, while President Reagan renewed his commitment to Lebanese sovereignty.

At a news conference here, Shultz appeared to leave open the possibility of a withdrawal of American Marines from the multinational "peacekeeping" force in Lebanon but made no specific reference to that option.

"What possibilities there are have to be evaluated, and we have to suit what we do to the situation that emerges there," Shultz said. "We have to see what emerges and take our position in light of that."

It was the first time that Shultz had suggested that the administration's Lebanon policy, which has remained essentially unchanged for well over a year, is being reviewed.

President Reagan earlier had denounced Syria as being responsible for the new outbreak of "indiscriminate killing and suffering" and renewed his vow that America's commitment to Lebanon "remains firm and unwavering."

Other officials, who insisted on anonymity, said the new crisis probably will end with much greater influence for Syria over the Lebanese government, even if President Amin Gemayel, a Washington favorite, remains in charge. They said it probably also dooms the Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal agreement crafted by Washington last year and opposed by Syria.

Reagan, in a statement in Dixon, Ill., said "men and women of good will throughout the world... join me in deploring the continued shelling of innocent civilians and the actions of those who would destroy the legiti-mate government of Lebanon."

Reagan left no doubt he blamed Syria, which only last month won plaintiffs from Washington officials for releasing captured American Navy Officer Robert Goodman Jr.

"I call on the government of Syria, which occupies Lebanese territory from which much of the shelling of civilian centers originates and which facilitates and supplies instruments for terrorist attacks on the people of Lebanon, to cease this activity," Reagan said.

State Department officials said they had taken the position that the United States should not get involved militarily to defend the Gemayel government unless the Marines peacekeepers in Beirut were directly attacked.

"It's not a good idea to create the impression that we are partial to one side or the other," said one official.

GEORGE SHULTZ Talks to newsmen in Brazil

O'Neill wants troops at sea

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said Monday that "everything has fallen apart" in Beirut and called for U.S. Marines stationed there to be sent to the safety of ships lying offshore.

Senate Majority leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., stopped short of advocating a pullout, but he said the situation in Lebanon reflected "a serious new set of developments" in which "American Marines are covered on three sides by hostile fire" and "the government in effect is up for grabs."

Baker said he had asked the State

Department for a briefing on the fighting and political situation in Beirut and did not want to make any further comment until he had received it.

Asked what the United States should do if the government of Lebanese President Amin Gemayel collapses, Baker said: "I don't know."

Asked about the political crisis in Lebanon, O'Neill said: "I think it's very tenuous for a awfully long time, as a matter of fact, and that's one of the things I keep asking myself. What good are our Marines doing over there?"

Your phone bill has a surprising new look.

Your telephone bill is now longer than before. But there's no cause for alarm. The increased size simply means more detailed information than previous bills.

The new bill lists equipment and long distance charges in separate sections with a complete cost breakdown for each service. There is also a section for local charges and other calling features. And each section has its own number to call for information. But just as before, all charges are totaled together for one payment.

For detailed information on the new bill, be sure to read The Special Message Brochure enclosed in your latest bill.

Lebanon's collapse imperils peace force

The Reagan administration has hinted broadly that it is in no hurry to bring American troops home from Lebanon; but the collapse of the Gemayel government could bring that about.

Events have moved in that direction in the past few days. Over the weekend, Lebanese Prime Minister Shafiq Wazzan and his cabinet resigned in a move designed to pave the way for a new cabinet to end the fractious civil war.

The result has been the opposite. Gemayel's government is teetering this week, following new assaults on the Lebanese army by Druse and Shiite Moslem militiamen, who took control of much of Beirut on Monday.

Lebanon's army, never a cohesive fighting force even by Mideast standards, seems to have collapsed in the past few days. Moslem units refused to fight and handed over their weapons to Moslem militia.

The evaporation of the Moslem part of the army has left Gemayel with a divided military force and little territory left to defend.

If that's the case, what are we, the French, the Italians and the British doing there?

In theory, the multinational force's presence does not depend on the Gemayel government's continued existence and viability.

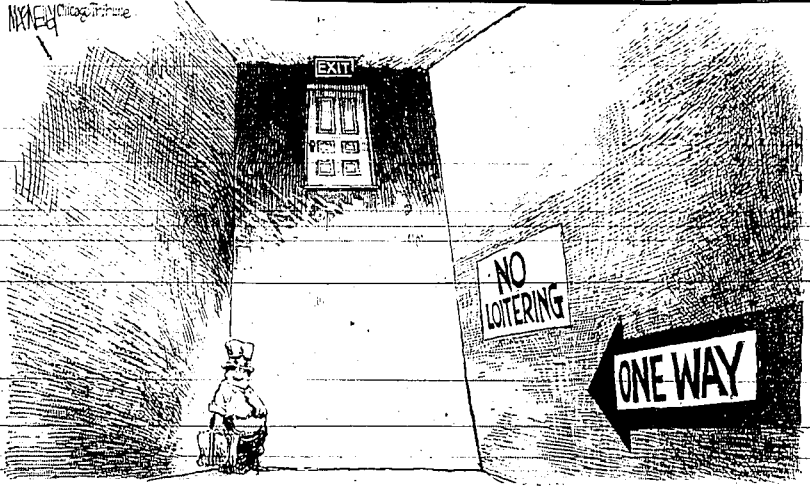

But it is hard to imagine how the force's members could make a case for staying if the nation we are there to defend has, in effect, ceased to exist.

With Syria and Israel already occupying part of Lebanese territory, the final step may not be far in coming. If that happens, the two could well be at each other quickly.

In any case, a further deterioration of the situation for the United States seems inevitable. Our mission there never was defined clearly, and now with the nation collapsing into warring factions, the logic for staying is even less.

Under other conditions — such as part of a United Nations peacekeeping force — the United States might remain on the scene, or return.

But that point, the weight of events now suggests, is far in the future.

The Lebanon Dilemma

Media should report 'what happened'

I have recently had the opportunity to attend two public meetings where the managing editor of the Times-News, Stephen Hartgen, spoke. Both times the topic partially centered on the responsibility of the media, the press, television, etc., to the public for balanced, unbiased reporting. The accountability of the media to each citizen for their actions or misdeeds was also discussed.

Inevitable comparisons are drawn between other professions with the public, such as doctors, politicians and lawyers.

Of course, the sinless are always invited to cast the first stone. While public duties of other professions are significant issues and worthy topics of independent discussion, the media must learn to take the medicine they dish out. Accordingly, Mr. Hartgen invited this response.

First, I have had occasion to examine the journalists' various codes of ethics. These codes proscribe standards of conduct that impose general requirements of fairness and unbiased reporting on the media. Nevertheless, the public has little ability to ensure that the "press" they are subjected to is presented according to these expectations. Attorneys, for example, are routinely disciplined, some losing their right to earn a living as lawyers. Such actions are precipitated by public or individual complaints.

Guest opinion
Mark D. Stubbs

What can the public do to hold the media to their code? Left with no outside remedy, we cannot control the media, point out problems with the media, except through the media. After all, as the American Society of Newspaper Editors code states, freedom of press belongs to the people. What about freedom from the press itself?

Editor Hartgen routinely, in the guise of "public awareness," aggrandizes and heaps self-laudation on the media in his Sunday column. Other professions must buy the space to laud their causes. The media are in a unique position to defend themselves; screen bad reviews; retract on the back page the reputation-destroying misprint or misquote. The media, unlike any other profession, can, by the very practice of their profession, insulate and guide public opinion away from criticism and indictment.

The general public is no longer on the Watergate high of the past few years. Sixty minute TV magazines and banal editorial comment daily insult our intelligence and ability to analyze the effect of daily happenings on our own lives. Occasionally, John Q. Public braves the "Letters to the Editor" page and risks social disdain and righteous diatribe, but in reality, he has few remedies or alternatives.

I propose no solution to the problem other than to suggest that the media have a much higher duty to report facts, inform the public and avoid bias and slant than they daily demonstrate. I appreciate the First Amendment but respect it only equally with the many other protections to my freedom built into the Constitution and its amendments.

I agree with Editor Hartgen that the media have seen their role in the last half of the 20th century as the "fourth branch of government" but disagree with the proposition that it ought to actually be the fourth branch.

Perhaps as when it was suggested we "kill all the lawyers" there are some drastic solutions.

For now, I will only suggest as did Theodore H. White in his recent book, "In Search of History," to let the media supply the raw material of the facts and events, let them tell "what happened"; let the scholars attempt to explain it and let us, as ignorant or knowledgeable as we, the public, may be, decide what it all really means.

Human mind still our only weapon

BOSTON — If there is a favorite fantasy for those of us who share the foreboding clock-in-the-morning fears of nuclear war, I suppose it is the fantasy of some ultimate safety, some impenetrable self-defense. It must be the same fantasy that fueled the imagination of those who once built castles, moats, city walls, even the Great Wall of China.

To calm the jitters of our own nuclear generation, our fantasy would have to include a shield for our whole country, our whole continent. And indeed, it has.

It's been almost a year since Reagan's "Star Wars" speech. He had a vision that day of a "future which offers hope," a program of self-defense. He led us to believe there could create a protective perimeter out there in space to shoot enemy missiles out of the sky.

At the time, I found some video-game humor in the idea, but also some comfort: Why not spend some money on defense, instead of offense, for a change. Maybe it would work. Surely it's harmless.

But I'm not comforted anymore. Nor am I convinced that this fantasy, which has become defense politics, is so harmless. It seems to me now that the whole "Star Wars" project maintains the truly central fantasy about war: that it is the business of technicians, a question of the right hardware.

—Harold Brown, Jimmy Carter's secretary of defense, once said, "Our technology is what will save us." Last week, the New York Times ran a long story about the young Star Wars technicians at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory who believe they'll be our saviors. They were nothing if not believers.

"We're working on weapons of life," said one of these young men who is convinced that he is in this research to end nuclear war. "Why not find technical solutions to a technical problem?"

I understand the psychology behind his question. Scientists generally have more faith in technocracy than in bureaucracy to solve world problems. Physics is pure science; politics guarantees the concrete answers that elude the students of human and foreign relations. It engages scientists in seductively interesting intellectual pursuits: the Manhattan Project, the Star Wars Project.

I am sure there is something pleasing to the military as well in the idea of a "Star Wars" peace. It suggests that we don't really have to negotiate with the Russians. It promises to become invulnerable without giving up a single advantage.

The high-tech peace wouldn't mean a nickel less for the Pentagon budget. A high-tech protection, after all, is so much more expensive than a few tech conference. The arms race could go on without fear of resolution until we were utterly bankrupt.

There is something fundamentally perverse about pinning our hopes for the future on hardware. It prevents us from resolving conflicts, discourages us from thinking about the real reasons for this arms race.

Last month, Thomas Powers wrote in The Atlantic Monthly about his attempt to discover what the arms competition between the Soviet Union and the United States is finally, actually, about. Our political differences don't explain the risk of annihilation. There is no victory or conquest in nuclear war.

So he asked over a hundred people a deceptively simple question — "What is it about?" — and rarely received more than a blank stare from Americans or Soviets engaged in thinking about the arms race. "It was questions about hardware that interested them."

Powers finally came to the conclusion that "it was about fear, fear of each other's power. We fear each other. We wish each other ill," he wrote. "All the rest is detail."

Is there a technological solution to fear? Of course not. Even if we could make nuclear bombs bounce off our national chest, a wildly dubious proposition, our mutual ill will would take the form of chemical warfare or "conventional" warfare.

The notion that we will be safe — that we can forget about the Soviets, that we can have our war games and security of the same time — is a dangerous delusion. The reality is that we are stuck here on Earth with the most human of problems: how to save ourselves. Our only weapon is that familiar and flawed software called the human mind.

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe.

Letters Southern Idaho situated between Mountain Home and INEL

Write Hansen, senators

I think the last time I wrote, it was on the same subject—the United States of America's abuse of one of its states—Idaho.

This is a democracy. If those detached politicians vote for it back there, we can get stuck with it out here!

I read in The Times-News on Feb. 2, "New radar scheduled at air base." That is Mountain Home Air Force Base. George Hansen got his name mentioned. They are going to spend $18 million for the preliminary work on an advanced radar system.

This tells me the federal government is going to put the NFR (nuclear production reactor) at INEL (Idaho National Engineering Laboratory).

Why else does southern Idaho deserve such protection?

If we do have a nuclear conflict (I hate the word "war"), I think the Comies will hit Chicago. Killing a bunch of people is good for a psychological effect. Then like in most conflicts, they'll try and destroy our munitions. That will be INEL. If they put in the NFR. Actually, INEL is a target now, because of the research being conducted, and more protection probably is already needed.

So we get a mushroom at Mountain Home. We'll call it "George" because he wants credit for the economic boost. And we will call the other one, the one at INEL (Idaho Falls), Jim, because Senator McClure is pushing so hard for the eastern Idaho vote.

Mountain Home is upwind. INEL is up stream. Where does that leave us?

Southern Idaho is worth saving! Isn't it?

Write Jim, George and Steve!

Time here to say 'Thanks'

Most of us by now know that former Sen. Frank Church has cancer. Many of us have not known how seriously ill he is.

When life ebbs low, there is nothing so heartening as the expressed caring of a friend. So, to the many Idahoans who have lived, admired and respected Senator Church through his lifetime of service to his state and his country, I suggest you send a note, or letter, telling him you care.

His wife, Bethene, needs our love and concern, too.

Long-term parking needed

To Twin Falls city planning department: I am enclosing a check for $30 for these parking tickets. This is my daughter's wedding week and she certainly didn't need to fuss with this.

It is a shame that a city that claims to be as progressive as you do is still in the Dark Ages as far as providing adequate parking for those who work in the downtown establishments; who cannot at rush hours put another coin in your bandit machines.

Adequate long-term parking should be provided without penalty or fee to those employed downtown. Or provide stickers so that eager meter minds won't pounce on a car at the first sign of a red flag.

Weary of double standard

The humanistic battle cry of "separation of church and state" is a one-way street. They scream separation when the Glidens hand out Bibles. They cry separation when high school students attempt to meet for pre-school prayer. They yell separation when an effort is made to reinstitute prayer or even a moment of meditation in public schools. They thunder separation when the word creation is dared breathed in a public school.

But a deafening silence issued from the liberal camp when seven parents are jailed in Nebraska for believing in church schools. No inordinant outcry is heard from them when parents, knowing what it best for their own children, hold home schools and are continually harassed by humanistic, self-serving school boards. The ACLU doesn't rush in when children are arrested on contempt charges for refusing to testify against their home teacher parents. Liberal picket signs sloganing "Separation!" were strangely absent when Faith Baptist Church was padlocked by the state.

I, for one, am sick and tired of the self-defineation of judges and their double standard in interpreting the law.

Don't need closed meetings

Taxpayers alert. There is a bill proposed in the Senate to take away another taxpayer right. The Idaho Hospital Association wants to exempt county hospital boards from open public meetings. Taxation without representation? — Remember the Boston Tea Party? They want to spend your tax dollars unaccountably and answer to no one.

In this state, hospitals have been taken over by private corporations because of mismanagement of public funds. At the present time, the situation is evident in Gooding County. Our board has spent unwisely and unaccountably many thousands of dollars of public funds.

The Citizens Committee is trying desperately to salvage our hospital and we are over meeting with resistance. Thousands of tax dollars down the drain and we cannot stop them because they are an appointed board and answer to no one.

Now the Idaho Hospital Association wants all board meetings private to really spend your money and take over at their discretion.

We do not need private meetings, we need elected boards to be sure that the taxpayers are represented over all, not a group from any one segment of the county. Let your state representatives and senators know how you feel about the "Big Brother" knows best theory."

Fed, Feldstein give warning of danger in huge deficits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve board Monday joined the president's embattled chief economist, Martin Feldstein, in sounding a warning about the dangers posed to the economy by the high budget deficits projected in the administration's new budget plan.

Meanwhile, the stock market fell sharply at its opening Monday and then leveled off at the lowest levels since last summer, in a slide that analysts attributed to concern over the deficits and high interest rates.

The renewed worries about the deficits were sparked by last week's official unveiling of President Reagan's spending blueprint for the upcoming 1985 fiscal year which starts Oct. 1. The plan projects deficits of about $180 billion over the next few years. The red ink hit a record $195.4 billion in 1983.

point of publicly calling into question Feldstein's new economic report.

They all, though, did urge Congress to join in Reagan's call for bipartisan negotiations to come up with a $100 billion, three-year package to trim the deficits. Those discussions are expected to start Wednesday.

Responding to the public squabbling, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., wondered aloud, "Does the president have an economic adviser? If so, who is he? If it is not Martin Feldstein, who is he taking his advice from? If it is Mr. Feldstein, why is Mr. Feldstein an unwelcome spokesman for the administration."

In his testimony Monday, the economist appeared to rebut Reagan's critical remarks — while not directly taking them on — about the economic report, saying the views on the deficits were "very standard economics."

Indeed, Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker and his Fed colleagues, in a semi-annual report to Congress, spelled out similar concerns that the red ink tends to keep interest rates higher than they might otherwise be.

"Put another way, they are an offset to other forces working toward lower interest rates," the report said.

In the aftermath of the budget release, the president's key advisers offered differing views of how seriously the administration supports the spending plan and the effect of the deficits on the economy.

Feldstein, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, and budget director David Stockman gave only lukewarm support for the budget plan, apparently angering Treasury Secretary Donald Regan to the

Lon and Anne Grabowski of Portland soak up 70-degree sunshine on an Oregon beach

Record cold sweeps Dixie

By GHAHAM VINK
Associated Press Writer

Record-breaking cold air surged into the South Monday, spinning off snowstorms that clogged roads from Alabama to New England and leaving behind at least 31 dead, many of them motorists who were stranded by blowing snow.

Temperatures dropped below freezing as far south as Louisiana and Alabama. The icy air was expected to reach Florida by Monday night, threatening citrus groves already decimated by a hard freeze in December.

The arctic blast that invaded late Saturday killed 22 people in Minnesota and North Dakota alone, paralyzing highways with windblown snow that cut visibility to zero. The Plains were mostly clear Monday, but as the huge surge of cold air moved slowly south and east, it gave New England and the central Atlantic states a dose of snow.

"It's beautiful, but I'm not sure we need it," said Massachusetts State Trooper Chris Conig in Pittsfield, where more than a foot of heavy, wet snow Monday morning closed schools and colleges in the Berkshire Hills. Ten inches of new snow fell in Bennington and Rutland, Vt., and a winter storm warning was posted for the state.

"I would think you'd have to call this winter," said National Weather Service forecaster Ray Burgess in Nashville, Tenn., where the mercury slipped to 9 degrees Monday morning and the frozen body of a 66-year-old transient was found outside Nashville Electric Service headquarters.

Reagan celebrates in hometown

EUREKA, Ill. (AP) — President Reagan celebrated his 73rd birthday with thousands in his hometown Monday, and then told students at his alma mater — that America — has emerged from "an era of paralyzing self-doubt" that enabled some nations to threaten the United States without fear of consequence.

"We've changed this," the president declared. "We're trying to see to it that American citizens — and it doesn't matter whether they are Navy pilots in the Gulf of Sidra or medical students in Grenada — can no longer be attacked or their lives endangered with impunity."

The president addressed students at Eureka College after being feted at a community birthday celebration, complete with parade, in his hometown of Dixon, Ill., about 100 miles from here.

Although Reagan is the oldest president in history, he appears fit and in good health.

As he was driven in his new armored limousine to his former homestead at 815 S. Hennipin Ave., Reagan passed several groups holding signs. One expressed birthday wishes, while another said, "Get the U.S. Out of Central America."

The president and his wife, Nancy, paused on the porch of the white frame home and waved to speculators several hundred yards away. A few people broke into a spontaneous round of "Happy Birthday," and Reagan shouted, "Thank you."

He was given the key to the house in a gold case. In the snow-covered front yard was a flagpole with an American flag and a sign that read: "Boyhood

Home of President Ronald Wilson Reagan — His Patriotic Years"

Once inside, Reagan walked into the living room, looked around and said, "I know it's the same room but it looks so much smaller. Isn't it funny what memory does to you?"

Thousands of people braved 4-degree temperatures and waited for hours to see the president and watch the parade. It was so cold that trumpets and trombones carried by band members froze up.

Crowds along the parade route were mostly friendly. But as the parade passed the country courthouse, several hundred protesters chanted, "Out the door in '84!" The audience at the reviewing stand was more receptive. "Four more in '84," they said.

St. Helens tremors ease

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Earthquake activity leveled off at the Mount St. Helens volcano early Monday after a steady increase, but scientists stood by their prediction that a potentially explosive eruption was only hours away.

"That kind of puts us on hold. We're not seeing a gradual slope of activity rising up to an eruption," said Rick Benson, research scientist at the University of Washington geophysics center in Seattle.

However, he added, "it's pretty well predicted that something will happen."

Scientists have interpreted the pattern of frequent quakes as meaning molten rock or magma was pushing upward inside the volcano in southwestern Washington.

On Sunday night the university and the U.S. Geological Survey issued an eruption alert, predicting the 8,900-foot volcano would erupt within 24 hours. That followed an eruption advisory issued Saturday night.

An explosive eruption nearly four years ago left 57 people dead or missing, devastated a 154-mile square area and threw out a plume of fine volcanic ash around the globe. It also blew away the top of the mountain.

Jury sought in rape case

FALL RIVER, Mass. (AP) — Potential jurors answered a two-page list of questions Monday on what they knew about the case of six men accused of raping a woman on a barroom pool table, as jury selection began for two simultaneous trials.

An initial pool of 75 people was summoned in what was expected to be a difficult selection process because of the case's notoriety. A total of 32 jurors must be selected for two trials.

The six defendants are accused of raping a 21-year-old woman at Big Dan's tavern in nearby New Bedford on March 6, 1983. Police say the woman was assaulted for over two hours while other patrons in the bar cheered on her attackers.

The case became national news and a rallying point for women's rights. A candlelight protest march staged a few days after the arrests attracted some 2,500 people.

Because of widespread news coverage in the past 11 months, court officials have anticipated difficulty in finding impartial jurors.

When Young asked the potential jurors Monday if they had a prior opinion about the case, 14 people stood up. They were all excused.

ANTIPODES
Q If I could dig straight down from the middle of the United States all the way through the earth where on the other side would I come out? In China, right?

A. Not right. In the Indian Ocean west of Australia. You'd come out in China if you started from South America.

Q. Twins don't usually learn to talk as early as single children, right?
A. They talk as early. But not with as many words, usually. Twins speak to each other a lot, naturally, so they teach each other less than they'd learn if they talked more with older people. They soon catch up in school, however.

Fans besiege Jackson on visit to zoo

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singing star Michael Jackson, whose scarp was burned last month during filming of a commercial, was besieged by fans during a weekend visit to the Los Angeles Zoo.

Jackson left the zoo after the crowds swelled around him near the gorilla exhibit, Lora LaMarca, zoo curator of education and information, said Monday.

"He really likes animals and apparently he just came in to visit, and stayed about an hour," said LaMarca. Jackson's outing Saturday afternoon caused a stir among the 8,000 or so other visitors, and "some of them" followed him around, she said.

Jackson, 25, is recuperating from an accident Jan. 27 when his hair caught fire from special effects fireworks during filming of a musical commercial for Pepsi-Cola. He suffered second- and third-degree burns on the back of his head.

LaMarca said Jackson has visited the zoo a few times before.

"I have also heard he really does like animals. He has a cockatoo himself," she said.

Jordan's monarch finds health good

CLEVELAND (AP) — Jordan's King Hussein left the Cleveland Clinic during a mild snowstorm Monday after a week of tests, and his doctor said the king was in "good general health."

The monarch, wearing a dark overcoat and fur hat, smiled and waved to reporters and photographers before stepping into a limousine for the trip to the airport, but made no comment.

Hussein, 40, accompanied by his American-born wife, Queen Noor, checked into the clinic Friday night for a complete physical, with special tests of his cardiovascular system and digestive tract.

His personal physician, Maj. Gen. Dr. Samir Farej, issued a brief statement saying the king's results were satisfactory and his majesty is in good general health.

Clinic spokesman Frank Weaver said doctors had pinpointed Hussein's gastrointestinal problem, but declined to elaborate. It was "not a serious problem. No treatment was necessary," he said. "The king and his personal physician wish to keep that a personal matter."

Hussein was hospitalized in Jordan last month with some intestinal bleeding and pain.

Lawmakers protest 'bawling brat' puppet

LONDON (AP) — Two lawmakers protested Monday against a new television puppet which portrays 19-month-old Prince William as a bawling brat.

The puppet, depicting the son of Prince Charles and Princess Diana, was made for a late-night satirical show called "Spitting Image," which will be shown nationwide on independent television later this month.

The show will also include puppet caricatures of Queen Elizabeth II, her husband Prince Philip, Charles and Diana, and other famous people.

"It is one thing to caricature people in public life who can defend themselves, but another to caricature a baby who can't," said Conservative lawmaker Jill Knight, adding she found it "wholly offensive."

So naturally we can't leave out the most famous baby, Prince William. And we believe his parents have a good sense of humor."

"The show is certainly not malicious but it is satirical," he said.

At age 63, woman earns her degree

LEWISTOWN, Mont. (AP) — A 63-year-old woman who bucked the tradition of her faith will receive a college degree in special education this spring.

Anne Stahl is a member of the "Cavers-Hutterite Colony" east of Lewistown.

For virtually all Hutterites, formal education ends at the eighth-grade. Mrs. Stahl, however, took correspondence courses to get her high school diploma — in 1948 — and then began college-level courses.

Mostly, she said, she took courses that would directly benefit the colony, such as tax preparation and meat-cutting. But they also included history, psychology and literature.

Although she had some college credits, getting a degree was impractical for many years because she could not live on a campus. But when the College of Great Falls opened a Lewistown branch, she decided she could make the 50-mile round trip two evenings a week.

Chocoholics swarm in SEATTLE (AP) — There was chocolate fudge, chocolate popcorn and chocolate fortune cookies. There were chocolate-scented Frisbees and lipsticks. Hugar-flavored fudge sauces and recipe books.

Mayor Charles Rayer offered a toast with chocolate milk in a champagne glass.

Two large meeting rooms at the Seattle Center resounded with the echoes of smacking lips as a slow-moving line wound past demonstration, sample and sales tables at the World of Chocolate Expo & Extravaganza, which boasted something for "chocoholics" of almost every persuasion.

More than 4,000 people paid $3 apiece to visit the fair Sunday, some waiting more than two hours in line, said Louise Draker, 30, and Terry Azusa, 32, co-chairwomen of the chocolate committee for Women's American Organization for Rehabilitation Through Training.

"Dedicated chocoholics will wait for anything to get their fix," Ms. Draker said.

She said the event raised about $12,000 for worldwide vocational and technical rehabilitative training. Her group claims to have helped support more than 100,000 students in more than 30 countries.

Despite almost spring-like weather, the indoor event was jammed with "just really average-type people" from the top down to the punk rockers," said Darryl Weiss of Susie's Sweets in Mountlake Terrace.

Exiled poet asks Soviets to let dad go

NEW YORK (AP) — Exiled Russian poet Joseph Brodsky, who tried privately for 11 years to get his ailing father out of the Soviet Union, went public Monday in an appeal to Soviet leader Yuri Andropov signed by prominent authors and intellectuals.

Considering the current state of Russian-American relations, Brodsky said he is acting "not so much out of hope but of despair" for his 80-year-old father, who lives alone in Leningrad with no relatives. The elder Brodsky's wife died last March.

The letter to Andropov asks for an exit visa for Aleksandr Brodsky. A reunion with his only child "is specifically provided for in the Helsinki declaration," according to the letter.

It was sent directly to Andropov, as well as through the U.S. Embassy in Moscow and the Soviet Embassy in Washington.

Among those signing the letter were authors Simone de Beauvoir, Saul Bellow, Nadine Gordimer, Philip Roth, Susan Sontag, Stephen Spender, William Styron and John Updike, as well as university presidents John H. Garvey of New York University and Michael Sovern of Columbia. Episcopal Bishop Paul Moore Jr., and publishers, journalists and public officials.

The younger Brodsky, 43, generally considered to be one of the greatest modern Russian poets, was exiled from the Soviet Union as a "social parasite" in 1972 after three stints in prison or work camp and two enforced stays in mental hospitals.

He is now a professor of literature at Columbia. Two books of his poetry, translated into English, have been published to critical praise.

The Soviets have refused to let his father go, Brodsky said, "because they have an axe to grind with my humble self — and because of their general pattern of treating people, 'respectably Jews.'"

This doggie bag held no leftovers

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A man who asked restaurant cashier for a doggie bag escaped with $700 after he pulled out a gun and demanded that the bag filled with money, police said.

The man apparently waited until all the customers were gone from Don Jose's Restaurant about 2 a.m. Saturday before approaching cashier Shannon Frederick, said police Sgt. Tris Swan.

The bandit stuck a steel-plated handgun in the cashier's side while the bag was being filled, Swan said.

Ex-official claims coverup

By ROBERT PARRY
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An ex-U.S. ambassador to El Salvador charged Monday that the Reagan administration had "created" rightist Salvadoran leader Roberto D'Aubuisson as a serious presidential candidate by concealing evidence tying him to "death squads."

"How can people cast a free vote if vital information is denied them?" asked former Ambassador Robert E. White about El Salvador's March 25 elections in which D'Aubuisson is a leading contender.

In sworn testimony before the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Latin America, White also disclosed the names of six Miami-based Salvadoran exiles who he alleged have financed and directed rightist "death squads" in El Salvador.

White's allegations came under sharp attack from committee Republicans.

Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., asked the former ambassador if he might not be "the victim of misinformation" and whether the United States has the right to pick a nation's leader just because it objects to his morals.

"Should we ask (Soviet Premier Yuri) Andropov to resign because he was head of the KGB?" remarked Solomon.

"Our dollars don't go to support Andropov," answered White, referring to U.S. military aid to El Salvador's rightist government in its war with leftist guerrillas.

Last week, White, now a professor at Simmons College in Boston, accused the administration of concealing evidence that D'Aubuisson arranged a lottery to pick the military officer who would have the "honor" of assassinating El Salvador's Roman Catholic Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero, who was gunned down March 24, 1980, while saying Mass.

"The Reagan White House took on a great responsibility when it chose to conceal the identity of the Archbishop Romero's murderer and not to use the evidence ... to write 'finish' to the political fortunes of ... Roberto D'Aubuisson," White reiterated Monday.

Denying a coverup, administration officials say all relevant information had been given to Congress and that the evidence against D'Aubuisson is not conclusive. D'Aubuisson has denied involvement in the still-unresolved assassination of Romero, who was considered by Salvadoran rightists to be sympathetic to the left.

In his testimony Monday, White elaborated on his charges against D'Aubuisson, citing the former intelligence officer's ouster from the military in 1979 for human rights abuses, evidence tying D'Aubuisson associates to attacks on the U.S. embassy, and documents captured from him in 1980 showing that he was stockpiling weapons.

Ethiopians expelled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Ethiopian diplomats were ordered to leave the United States following the expulsion of four U.S. envoys from Ethiopia, the State Department said Monday.

Alan Romberg, the State Department's deputy spokesman, refused to speculate on the reasons for the expulsions, saying "no specific reasons were given on either side."

Ethiopia's pro-Soviet government disclosed the expulsions two days after Ethiopian radio confirmed that 10 people had been arrested for distributing anti-government leaflets in the capital city of Addis Ababa.

The four U.S. diplomats left Ethiopia were informed of their expulsions last week and have already left the country. Charge d'Affaires David Korn, the top U.S. envoy in Addis Ababa, remains on the job.

Gelayay Zawde, one of the Ethiopians ordered expelled from Washington, has "severed his connection" with the Ethiopian government and has asked to remain in the United States, Romberg said, adding the request is under review.

The other Ethiopian was identified by Romberg as Belay G. Tsadik, the embassy's first secretary.

Romberg identified the four Americans as Ernest Grant, the first secretary; Paul Bradley, second secretary; Timothy Welles, commercial officer; and Robert Kragle, vice consul.

Rebels seize 9 villages, province blacked out

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas seized nine villages over the weekend in northern Chalatenango province and the province remained blacked out for the fourth day, rebel and civilian sources said Monday.

A military spokesman said Sunday the army had sent 1,000 troops into the province in an operation he described as a "sweeping" offensive to clear the area of insurgents.

Chalatenango has been a rebel stronghold throughout the 4-year-old civil war. On Dec. 30, insurgents attacked the military base at El Paraíso, 36 miles northwest of San Salvador, killing more than 100 soldiers.

The rebels' claimstline Itaulin

Farabundo Martí said a guerrilla battalion occupied nine villages in the central part of Chalatenango and "conducted propaganda actions with the inhabitants, unmasking the electoral myth of the puppet regime."

The rebels say they will not participate in national elections scheduled for March 25 because their candidates' lives would be endangered during the campaign.

The nine villages named by the guerrillas have been abandoned if the government's security forces for more than a year, and the guerrillas met no resistance, the radio said.

But the broadcast said insurgents clashed with government troops Saturday on Mount Macaco, 24 miles northeast of the capital. It gave no information on casualties on either side.

Chinese strive to eliminate sea of paperwork

PEKING (AP) — Senior Chinese officials — fed up with "reams of bureaucratic forms, have ordered subordinates to attend exhibits of "pompous and impractical documents" and learn to draft simpler papers, the China Daily reported Monday.

The paper, English-language sister publication of the Communist Party's official People's Daily, said the displays were organized by five ministries and Peking Mayor Chien Xiang.

Chien also ordered his staff to cut the number of city documents by a third.

"The municipality is showing 74 official reports and circulars to illustrate ineffectiveness, delay, formalism, and evasion of responsibility," Chien Daily said.

It said the exhibits are needed because "some ministers are weary of 'swimming in oceans of meetings' by day and 'climbing through mountains of paper' at night, instead of engaging in more practical work."

The exhibits show "typical examples of pompous and impractical documents" along with instructions on how to write proper papers, the newspaper said.

Peking's Foreign Affairs Office denied a journalist's request to view the exhibits, saying they are "internal."

The Chinese, who invented paper, the printing press and the government seal, known as the "clerk," always have been known for their slow, formidable bureaucracy. The Chinese Communists' 35-year-old government added millions of functionaries and a formidable array of forms ranging from residence certificates to bicycle license applications.

Council combines fire, police; allows mall

Public safety director will eliminate 'chief' jobs

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

EMERY PETERSEN
Thinks city will save money

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council has decided to combine the city's police and fire departments into a single public safety department by March 1.

Among other things, the move will mean the elimination of the positions of police and fire chief and the creation of a public safety director.

The vote was 6-1 for the change Monday night, with Councilman Gale Kleinkopf casting the lone vote in opposition.

Mayor Emery Petersen said at Monday's council meeting that he believes the re-organization will allow the police and fire departments to save money by operating more efficiently. He also said it will provide greater service to the public through cross-training of personnel.

If policemen could carry fire extinguishers and other equipment while cruising in their cars, they could put out many of the routine "kitchen and mattress fires," he said.

Similarly, the move might see one firefighter at each city station to do police work while on duty but not in the field, he said.

In the motion approving the merger, council members directed City Manager Tom Courtney to draw up an administrative proposal for its operation.

The biggest question in that proposal may be the disposition of existing personnel.

After Monday night's meeting, Courtney said he has not considered • See MERGE on Page B2

Mall construction could begin in late summer

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council has given final approval to Price Development Corp. for a 400,000-square-foot shopping mall, to be built northwest of Pole Line Road and Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

Bob Palme, a Twin Falls attorney who represents the Salt Lake City-based developer, said Monday night that ground-breaking could begin in August.

He also said the major tenants will include three of the following four retailers: J.C. Penney's, The Bon, ZCMI and Sears.

City Council's decision Monday night officially allows Emery Petersen to sign a developer's agreement with the company.

That agreement already has been signed by John Price for the company. It sets forth conditions for the construction of the project, which is to include a main mall building and eight "outbuildings."

It also includes written guarantees for the widths of setbacks and landscaped buffers along Blue Lakes Boulevard and Pole-Line Road, and provisions for a perimeter road around the north and east sides of the development.

The agreement also gives the company one year to provide the city with a final plan of the development.

The final potential snag before signing concerned the schedule for dedicating right-of-way to the city for the perimeter road.

The city had wanted 60 feet of right-of-way before signing. But Palme said the company preferred to delay because problems remain concerning the road's intersection with Blue Lakes and the exact location of the mall's main building.

These will be worked out, he said, through negotiations with the state Department of Transportation and Neilson and Co., a neighboring property owner, and as the result of a survey and rock-testing, planned for this spring.

After the meeting, Palme said the company is currently arranging financing for the project with Wells Fargo.

The beginning of construction will be influenced by the desire of the three major tenants to stage a "grand opening," he said. Once that date has been set, it normally takes 18 to 20 months to build a mall, he said.

Sewage trial winding down

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

BOISE — For $6 million, the city of Twin Falls bought a sewage-treatment plant that did not perform the job it was purchased for, attorney John Hepworth told nine jurors Monday in federal district court in Boise.

In addition, the plant emitted an odor that was offensive to plant workers and neighboring property owners, he said.

"How can you spend that much money, and it doesn't work?" Hepworth asked the jurors. "Put yourself in the position of the city manager and the City Council of the city of Twin Falls," he said.

Hepworth made the comments as part of Monday's closing arguments in the three-month-long court trial of the city's lawsuit to exact the standards required by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, under the federal Clean Water Act, he said.

But Hepworth said Envirotech knew all along these standards could not be met using the heat-treatment and vacuum-filter systems the company proposed and eventually built.

Envirotech engineer Orrie Albertson had testified, earlier in the trial, that the plant was designed to meet the standards.

blems with the plant were the result of "deliberate misrepresentation" by Envirotech of its treatment system's capabilities.

Hepworth spoke for more than four hours Monday. He stalked the courtroom in a highly dramatized pace. His voice ranged from a loud whine to a near-whisper, and included all volumes in between. He would pound the podium, pace, turn abruptly, point at the jurors, wave his arms and toss his briefcase in the directions of the opposing attorneys.

In the course of this display, Hepworth told the jury of six women and three men that the plans and specifications issued by the city for the plant in 1974 required specific performance from the successful contractor.

The successful vendor was to construct the plant so that water leaving it would meet or exceed the standards required by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, under the federal Clean Water Act, he said.

But Hepworth said Envirotech knew all along these standards could not be met using the heat-treatment and vacuum-filter systems the company proposed and eventually built.

Envirotech engineer Orrie Albertson had testified, earlier in the trial, that the plant was designed to meet the standards. • See SEWER on Page B2

Sun Valley Center hires new director

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — The Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities has hired a Utah folk-arts director to run its annual folk festival and to develop a regional folk-arts program.

Hal Cannon, 45, has spent seven years as the director of the Utah Folklore Center in Salt Lake City. He also is a folklorist and a musician who plays traditional Western music.

He is on a year's leave of absence from the center to work with the Sun Valley Center.

As director of the center's newly created regional folklore program, Cannon will oversee the Northern Rockies Folk Festival and the folk-arts program, as part of the Institute of the American West, which is the humanities division of the Sun Valley Center.

"We're absolutely delighted that he would take the job," says Richard Hart, the director of the Institute of the American West.

Cannon was the first choice for the job, Hart says, which may develop into a full-time position.

Cannon has been an adviser to the annual Holey folk festival since it began in 1978, and he has performed in it several times as a member of the Desert String Band, a group that specializes in 19th century Western music.

Hart says Cannon's expertise will help assure the success and growth of the Northern Rockies Folk Festival after he leaves the institute at the end of the summer.

But Cannon's primary duty, he says, will be to develop a regional folk-arts program for all the Western states.

Cannon says about 10 Western states, not to mention all-time folk-art directors, who have met the last few years to discuss developing a regional program.

Under a regional program, he says, programs of folk art and culture that "cross state lines" can be developed without regard to those boundaries.

He also says he will work in states not having directors to help set up folk-art programs. • See FOLKLORE on Page B2

Idahoan taught English in Honduras

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — After living four years in the Central American country of Honduras, Lorna Droegemeier has returned to her parents' home in Jerome County with some firm beliefs.

She wishes that Americans would learn more about their neighbors to the south. She thinks that education, not just money, is the key to prosperity for the impoverished nation. And she says that a purely military solution is no solution at all to any of the region's problems.

A native of Holey, Droegemeier and her two daughters, Heidi, 12, and Amy, 11, now live with their parents, Vernon and Olive Kendall.

It's been less than two months since she moved back to the United States, hardly enough time to forget the cultural woes of the poverty-ridden country that she thinks could become a tourists' paradise if given the chance.

"The U.S. should encourage tourism," she says, "and stop saying that there are communists all over down there who are killing people. We should invest in the country. Honduras has the natural and human resources to be successful, but the people can't do it. They need education."

Droegemeier admits to a certain prejudice concerning education since she spent her four years in Honduras teaching English and acting as director of courses for Centro Cultural-Sampedrano, a U.S.-funded cultural center, in San Pedro Sula.

Her odyssey began in Logan, Utah, where she was working in a store at which many Honduran students attending the University of Utah did business. She befriended many of the students and decided to spend a month's vacation with them when they returned to Honduras.

While there, she decided to apply for a job at the cultural center, and she was quite surprised when center officials told her they wanted her to come aboard as an English teacher.

College-educated, but without a teaching degree, she says her sole qualification was that she could speak English, and the center was in a real need for English teachers.

She says it's extremely important for Honduran women to learn English because about the only employment "for them" is as "secretaries" with English-speaking employers.

She had her automobile sent down and bought a three-bedroom house in a subdivision. All of the newer homes, she says, are made of poured concrete and have indoor plumbing but no hot water.

"At first, I'd boil the water to wash dishes with," she says. "But eventually, I gave up and did it like everyone else."

Peasants' homes in the countryside are grass shacks, she says, and any nearby stream becomes a clothes washer, bath and drinking fountain. Communicable diseases are common. Droegemeier, herself, suffered from hepatitis for six weeks.

Nevertheless, she describes her stay as a beautiful, pristine country as beautiful, with pristine beaches, mountain coffee plantations, botanical gardens, Maya Indian ruins and a non-racial society with friendly, easy-going citizens.

Easy-going, that is, except when residents are trying to get into a movie theater or any place where a line should form.

"They don't know what a line is. They're animals when trying to get to a ticket counter. You just get pushed out of the way."

Presently, Droegemeier finds herself in a "Catch-22" situation. She is not certified to teach in the United States, and the center she worked at

Prosecutor to review policy of manslaughter by vehicles

Charge against senior reduced in auto death of 8-year-old girl

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A misdemeanor charge of vehicular manslaughter against a 79-year-old man, who caused an accident that resulted in the death of an 8-year-old girl last fall, has been dropped.

In addition, the case against Herbert E. Thieme of Twin Falls has resulted in the Twin Falls County prosecutor's office reviewing its policy concerning future prosecution of vehicular manslaughter cases.

The accident took place on U.S. 30, west of Twin Falls, on Oct. 19. Thieme pulled onto the highway from a country road and did not see an oncoming car, driven by 19-year-old Bounhonne Sibounheuang of Twin Falls. One of Sibounheuang's passengers, 8-year-old Samnara Sibounheuang of Twin Falls, died later at a Utah hospital.

"We took a long, hard look at the case," says Dennis Voorhes, a deputy Twin Falls County prosecutor.

Thieme could have been prosecuted under the charge, but manslaughter, even when it is vehicular, is a "heavy wrap," Voorhes says.

After talking with several judges and Thieme's lawyer, Fred Planky, the charge was reduced to one of inattentive driving, also a misdemeanor.

In reviewing Thieme's case and any in the future, the prosecutor's office has decided to look for conduct that goes beyond mere negligence, Voorhes says. Conduct that will be prosecuted as vehicular manslaughter should approach recklessness, he says. And this was not the case with Thieme, Voorhes says.

"Mere negligence alone can't be used as basis to prosecute vehicular manslaughter," he says.

Planky says that under the current state law, "some slight error in judgment" could be prosecuted as vehicular manslaughter if a death results. "That's wrong," he says.

Planky says the charge should not have been filed in the first place.

Monday, in Fifth District Magistrate Court in Twin Falls, Thieme pleaded guilty to inattentive driving. He was fined the maximum, $300, and placed on a two-year probation.

Two misdemeanors, one felony charge headed for courtroom

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Three other men in Twin Falls County currently are facing charges of vehicular manslaughter for their alleged parts in auto accidents that ended in fatalities.

Donald E. Yragui, 35, of Route 4, Twin Falls, will be sentenced Thursday on a misdemeanor charge of vehicular manslaughter.

Yragui struck and fatally injured Shella Dawn Smith, 14, of Twin Falls, as she was walking in the 200 block of Orchard Drive West last Sept. 27, according to the complaint filed in Fifth District Magistrate Court.

Yragui allegedly was driving over the speed limit when the accident occurred.

In a plea-bargaining agreement,

Yragui will plead guilty to the charge, says Fritz Wondlerich, the Twin Falls city attorney. "The prosecution," in exchange, will recommend that the court impose a suspended 60-day jail sentence, a $250 fine and a year's probation.

The maximum penalty for a conviction is a year in jail and up to a $2,000 fine.

Wondlerich says that Yragui had no past criminal record and has "suffered quite a bit" because of the incident.

In another case, 53-year-old Maurice Guerry Jr., a Castleford area rancher, will go on trial March 27 on a misdemeanor charge of vehicular manslaughter.

According to the complaint filed with the court, Guerry struck a 19-year-old Chad Lopez of Twin Falls on Sept. 21. The accident happened when the boy rode his bike onto Falls Avenue, near the College of Southern Idaho.

The complaint also alleges that Guerry was driving faster than the speed limit. In addition, his vision may have been obstructed because of bright sunlight and a dirty windshield, it says.

Guerry originally was charged with a felony count of vehicular manslaughter, which later was reduced to the misdemeanor level, because of a lack of evidence, according to prosecutors.

The third case of vehicular manslaughter involves 23-year-old Martin H. Perkins of Twin Falls.

Perkins has been charged with a felony count. According to the complaint, Perkins was driving on Falls Avenue when he struck a 19-year-old Chad Lopez of Twin Falls on

County road records two mishaps

JEROME — Two Jerome County drivers and a passenger were taken to St. Benedict's Family Medical Center Monday morning after injuries that occurred in simultaneous accidents in the same area.

The Jerome County sheriff's office investigated the first accident, and Idaho State Police officers assisted by investigating the second.

A sheriff's deputy said the accidents occurred just after midnight, about six miles northwest of Jerome.

Yael Levi Twitcheil, 25, of Jerome, was arrested on charges of injuries that occurred in the same area.

North when his vehicle went off the left side of the road, hit a fence, skidded about 45 feet, went into the air, again and came to rest in a canal bed.

The vehicle was damaged about 150 feet of fence on the Ken Fuller farm was torn out. Damage to the fence has been estimated at $500.

Twitcheil was treated at the hospital and released.

At about the same time, a second car, also westbound on 300 North, went out of control a short distance down the road.

According to ISP Cpl. Gene Bolton, the driver, Jerri Hartman, 23, was hospitalized overnight and released later Monday. A passenger in her car, Ronnie Adams, 30, of Jerome, was treated and released.

Bolton said the car Hartman was driving left the road and went into the air as it jumped the intersection of 300 North and 300 West. It landed in a pasture, traveling another 300 feet and then crashed into a tree, demolishing the vehicle.

Hartman has been cited for driving under the influence of alcohol. No charges had been filed against Twitcheil, as of Monday.

Man found guilty of fraud

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man was found guilty of filing a false insurance claim in 1982.

After a two-day trial, a jury found Bob G. Patterson guilty, after deliberating less than an hour. Patterson faced a felony charge of falsifying insurance documents.

According to the complaint filed against him, Patterson submitted a false claim to the Allstate Insurance Co. in May 1982.

Patterson will be sentenced at a later date.

The maximum sentence for the crime is five years in prison and up to a $5,000 fine.

Teenage birth-class offered

TWIN FALLS — A childbirth course for teenagers will begin at 3:30 p.m. today at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

The class will meet on Tuesdays through March 20 in the second-floor conference room.

The free course is designed for girls in their sixth to seventh months of pregnancy, and it will include the following topics: the specific needs of a teenage mother, relaxation and breathing techniques, preparation for delivery, hospital procedure and infant care. A "support" person is encouraged to attend.

the issue yet—although he said he would prefer to hire a current employee as director, if possible.

As for other employees, "it does not mean that the individuals would not be working for the city, just that they would not be working in the same position," he said.

The council has set Feb. 18 as the date for a special meeting to discuss staff changes.

Police Chief Tim Qualls, who was at the meeting, said he would have no comment until the change had been implemented.

"There's no use me fearing for my position," Fire Chief Bobby Bippert said. "If it's eliminated, it's eliminated."

The changes have not been discussed with him much so far, Bippert said, but he knew that they might be coming.

Courtney said that cross training would be done on a voluntary basis, so individuals would not be forced to do a job they were not hired to do, or lose their seniority benefits.

On an attrition basis, the city can hire personnel with skills in both areas, he said.

Sixty percent of the city's budget goes to the forest and police protection, Courtney said.

Seminar teaches coping with 'cabin fever'

TWIN FALLS — The Snake River Center for Family Counseling and Human Relations will sponsor a free workshop, "Cabin Fever," Wednesday at 7 p.m.

The workshop will be given by professional social workers and counselors Joseph West and Reed Fitzgibbon at their center, at 1625 Addison Avenue East.

According to West, it will focus on helping participants identify the sources of depression and finding ways to alleviate it.

"It will be an informative workshop and will have participatory exercises to identify depression," West says.

"We will also try to create an action plan—someone who is depressed can alleviate that depression."

employee, he said. According to Hepworth, John Best, an instructor who was to teach city employees to operate the system said, "Possibly I should teach truck-driving, as opposed to filter operation."

Hepworth said the company violated its "expressed warranty" when it failed to remove the system from the site and return the city's money.

The company, he said, has attempted to blame the system's failure on inadequate personnel employed by the city and on the type of waste to be processed.

But Envirotech employee Best called the city personnel "capable" and "highly motivated," Hepworth said. And the attorney said the contract between the city and the company stated that "the equipment furnished shall thermally condition all sludges without chemicals."

"It doesn't matter what kind of sludge," he said. "They were contractually bound to treat—without chemicals—any sludge."

trial, that he knew the system as proposed would not work as soon as he looked at the specifications, Hepworth told the jury.

But rather than decide not to enter a bid, the company engaged in "calculated deceit" by holding a "risk-evaluation conference" to assess what the liability would be if it was awarded the contract, the Twin Falls attorney said.

"They knew it wouldn't work," Hepworth stressed.

He said the company's sales policies were "if you must deceive—deceive. If you must misrepresent—misrepresent."

Above all company sales personnel were instructed to get the contracts, he said.

The process the company proposed to do with Twin Falls sewage was unusual, Hepworth said. It was supposed to work without chemicals—a major expense in waste treatment, he said.

"Had it worked, it would have been for waste treatment what the Salk vaccine was for polio," Hepworth said.

The process also was to work without emitting odor, Hepworth said. But this was clearly not the case, he said.

"Not one person you heard from on that witness stand said it did not have a horrible odor," Hepworth said.

"When that heat-treat system was on, all you had to do was cross the Ferris Bridge when the winds were to the east, and you knew that heat treat was on."

The offensive odor from the plant prompted lawsuits from nearby property owners, he said. And another lawsuit stemming from the system's failure was brought by 50-some area residents, to stop the city from hauling wet sludge to an area near the Twin Falls airport, Hepworth said.

Folklore

Cannon's first project will be a program on cowboy poetry, which is tentatively set for Elko, Nev., in about a year.

Cannon says he also wants to bring a regional focus to the Halley folk festival.

"My hope is to really change the direction of the Northern Rockies Folk Festival, to make it regional in interest."

That change, however, will not mean the festival will leave Malley, which Cannon thinks is an ideal setting for the event. But it might spread out "I might see elements of it happening in different parts of the (Wood River) valley."

The festival will try to expand on authentic folk-art performers, rather than trying to attract commercially successful performers, Cannon says.

"I think it's a real good base to start out on."

Cannon says he plans to hold a town meeting in the near future to examine ideas on the festival with area residents.

—Green Markle, the director of the Sun Valley Center, says the hiring of Cannon will mean an expansion of the folk-art program of the institute. The center already has an extensive fine-arts program.

Markle worked with Cannon on the East Coast, where Cannon attended the Rhode Island School of Design, and in Utah, and he is excited about his new employee.

"He's one of the best, literally, and he knows his business better than most," Markle says.

Honduras

San Pedro Sula now is privately funded and no longer hires foreigners to teach.

If she had stayed, she says, her job would have been secure, but having that, she could not get behind if she wanted to. The only work she's doing now is as a volunteer in the Jerome schools, teaching English to Laotian students.

Droegemeier gives two reasons for leaving Honduras. She was afraid her two daughters might be falling behind U.S. educational standards. Second, she felt it appeared imminent that the United States was about to invade Nicaragua, and she feared that the violence would spill over into Honduras.

"I think an invasion was actually planned, but that after the media got hold of it, public opinion stopped it. I decided I better get out while I could."

Droegemeier says that Hondurans like Americans, but that both nationalities have a rather distorted picture of each other.

Droegemeier says she says, lump Honduras—with other, more-troubled countries in Central America, while it is, she says, quite calm—much as the eye of a storm.

For their part, she says, Hondurans are overwhelmed by American movies and television shows.

"They see all the same things we see, but they believe them. With all the drugs-and-violence-on-air programs, they think we're nuts."

Lack of flood aid brings verbal prod

SEN. STEVE SYMMS Itaps Evans' inaction

SALMON (AP) — Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, said Monday federal aid to flood victims along the Salmon and Lemhi rivers is "dead in the water" because of inaction by Democrat Gov. John Evans. Search and Rescue personnel remained on alert along the Salmon and Lemhi rivers as ice jams continued keeping the Salmon well above flood stage. "We're keeping an eye on it," said Salmon Search and Rescue spokesman John Perry. "We're just sitting and waiting. There's nothing more we can do until the temperature changes." Symms said Evans had failed to make a formal request to the Federal Emergency Management Agency for flood aid.

Symms said a member of his staff was in Salmon Monday to meet with local officials and citizens seeking federal assistance. He said his office was prepared to help expedite the request once Evans makes it.

Commission for blind post to Ugaki

By MARY STEVENSON
The Associated Press

BOISE — Amid controversy over the role he played in the firing of the director of the state Commission for the Blind, Jack Ugaki won Senate confirmation Monday to the commission's board. The 23-13 vote came as a number of blind people sat in the Senate gallery to listen to the debate.

Ugaki disputed that statement. Deputy Director John Cheadle was fired later on Friday by Interim Director Howard Barton Jr. During Senate debate on Ugaki's appointment, Senate Majority Leader Mark Ricks, R-Idaho, a long-time acquaintance and early supporter of Ugaki, said his dismay over last week's events forced him to vote against confirmation. Ricks said he had called Ugaki last week and asked him if they would delay the vote on Mrs. Walhof until the Senate had acted on his confirmation.

Barton, a past commission director, declined also to discuss why Mrs. Walhof was fired. Asked what needs to be done differently at the commission, Barton said there will have to be an evaluation to determine that. He said that on Monday, the first day back to work for people following Mrs. Walhof's firing, some of the staff were happy, some weren't. He also declined to say whether he would seek to become permanent director.

Several dozen blind people gathered in front of the state capitol building earlier Monday to protest the Friday firing of Ramona Walhof. And national representatives of the National Federation for the Blind also came to the state capitol. Ugaki, of Idaho Falls, declined in a telephone interview to explain why the board fired Mrs. Walhof last Friday, but said Mrs. Walhof knows why.

"But he just refused to do it," Ricks said. "It would have been easy if I was looking for the easy way out, with my confirmation, it'd be easy to keep quiet and turn my back and let the confirmation go through," Ugaki said. "It was a decision I felt that had to be made at that particular time."

Mrs. Walhof's firing follows a controversy over an unsuccessful attempt to have the commission moved from the jurisdiction of the Governor's Office to the jurisdiction of the Department of Health and Welfare. Gov. John Evans had endorsed that plan, which Mrs. Walhof had fought. Mrs. Walhof said that Evans has "let the blind of the state down" because he did nothing to prevent her firing.

Senate approves lid on utility rate hikes

BOISE — With little debate and only one "no" vote, legislation aimed at averting widespread utility rate hikes has cleared the Idaho Senate and is on its way to the House. The bill, drafted by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission and endorsed by Gov. John Evans, won 24-1 approval Monday in the Senate. The legislation, with a few exceptions, prohibits utilities from charging ratepayers for the cost of uncompleted facilities, known as construction work in progress, or CWIP.

It reverses the effects of a 1983 state Supreme Court ruling. Sen. Walter Yarbrough, R-Grand View, was the sole senator to vote against the bill. He said that waiting until a facility is completed before starting to pay it off can increase the total cost over a 30-year period by 25 percent. And he said he favors leaving the CWIP question to the discretion of the PUC. The PUC has for the most part in the past refused to allow CWIP costs to be added to utility rate bases. Following the high court ruling last December, the PUC predicted rate hikes throughout the state of anywhere from 4 percent on up to 78 percent if CWIP costs were added in. That 78 percent rate hike was forecast for customers of Washington Water Power. The bill, sponsored by Sen. Vern Lannen, D-Pinehurst, and 21 other senators, allows the PUC to authorize CWIP costs in utility rate bases only in extreme emergencies, or for short-term projects. An identical bill in the House has been tabled pending Senate action.

Pay funds insufficient

BOISE (AP) — The State Board of Education bowed to pressure from the Legislature Monday and approved a plan that would require students in state-subsidized health-care programs to pay back part of their education costs. But the board stopped short of requiring students to repay one-third of the costs — the amount sought by the Legislature. As a result, the plan faces rough sledding from some lawmakers, said Assistant House Majority Leader Robert Geddes, R-Preston. Geddes, who earlier this week threatened to push the subsidy programs "down the tubes," if a pay-back plan was not enacted, said the board's program won't sufficiently reimburse the state.

The Legislature has 45 days to either accept or reject the board's plan. If the Legislature fails to take any action, the plan automatically goes into effect, said Board President H. M. Montgomery. "I'm sure I'll go for a higher amount (of payback) from those doctors who go out of state," Geddes said. The board's plan, proposed by Janet Hay of Nampa, creates a loan fund that will allow students to borrow up to 25 percent of the total cost of their education, and would obligate students to repay the amount borrowed. It places no penalty on students who study at state expense but don't return to Idaho to practice their professions in Montana. Although the plan does require payback, it also offers more assistance to students through the loan fund.

Repayment plan given OK

BOISE (AP) — A Boise-based citizens group concerned about education says a sweeping public education reform bill doesn't have enough money for raising teachers pay. At a news conference Monday, spokesmen for People for Schools said the group endorses the bill but wants to see more funding for teacher pay hikes. The bill, the product of a special legislative interim committee, would appropriate $20.3 million next year to raise teacher pay. The committee's intention is that the following year, an additional $3 million would be appropriated to bring the average teachers salary in Idaho up to the national average of $20,693.

"We feel there should be additional funds to raise teachers to the regional average," said Bev Harrad, chairman of People for Schools. The regional average, based on teachers' salaries in the six states surrounding Idaho, is $21,623. The reform bill also clears the way for local school districts to establish career ladder programs that will promote and increase the pay of deserving teachers. The measure has passed the House and is in the Senate.

Arm of U.S. law reaches every state

DEAR ABBY: When "Kathleen" asked you if because her son and his first cousin had gone to another state to marry, then returned to live in Massachusetts, would they be living in sin in Massachusetts, you replied, "A valid marriage is valid in every state."

Abigail Van Buren
Dear Abby

Then Elaine Trudeau, the registrar in the Registry of Vital Records in Boston, challenged your statement with "Wrong! Not in Massachusetts!"

Your response: "Mea culpa. Mea maxima culpa."
For the record, Abby: Article IV, Section 1, of the Constitution of the United States clearly and unequivocally states: "Full faith and credit shall be given in each state to the public acts, records and judicial proceedings of every other state."

Thus a marriage valid in any state is valid in all states; and public officials who deny this are violating their constitutional oaths, which ac-ording to Article VI, paragraphs 2 and 3, take precedence over all state law and constitutions.

—ROBERT J. TURNER, HOPEWELL, VA.
DEAR MR. TURNER: As I told Ms. Trudeau, "I learned a lesson today. When it comes to law, never assume anything."

Now, how does one go about rescinding not only a "mea culpa," but a "maxima culpa"?

DEAR ABBY: I lived with a woman for six months, and we had sex just like married folks do. We had a fight and I didn't see her for about three months. I stopped at her place one night, and she let me in. I asked her for sex and she said no. I got angry and forced her to have sex with me against her will. She claims I raped her. I say that because she willingly had sex with me several times before, she can't all of a sudden holler "rape."

ME IN IOWA
DEAR ME: She is. It doesn't matter how many times she consented previously, if you forced her to have sex with you against her will, you are guilty of rape.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column you recommended psychiatric treatment for a couple married 45 years who lived in a house so cluttered that no one could turn around. After 50 years and seven children, my wife and I would like to add our thoughts.

Our home has approximately eight bedrooms. Two rooms are filled with textbooks because our children all graduated from college with Ph.D.s and master's degrees. One room is filled with old radios, games, sports equipment and trophies. All the hats—drawers—are filled with children's things.

The cellar is filled with old furniture, which I plan to restore when I get old (I am 78 now). My wife still has all the letters, Christmas, Easter and birthday cards received over the last 50 years—plus thousands of snapshots of our seven children and 18 grandchildren.

We are savers, so much so that our children know exactly where to go to borrow anything, including money.

We admit we need psychiatric help—about four doctors with brooms, mops, shovels, scrub brushes and buckets.

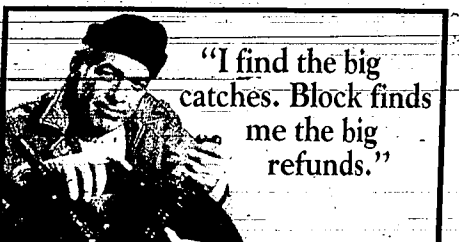

The answer to all this is obvious: Buy another house and leave everything to the kids.

Battle rages; hockey players axed

By D. BYRON YAKE
AP Sports Editor

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Five players were ruled out of the Winter Olympics on the eve of the XIV Games Monday in a confusing compromise that settled the hockey eligibility dispute but left unsettled the question of just what is a professional.

It also produced some more fiery words in the dispute between the United States and Canada, who meet Tuesday in first-round competition.

The International Olympic Committee ruled that any player who has ever signed a National Hockey League contract is ineligible to play in the Winter Games.

That meant that two Canadians, two Italians and one Austrian were barred from the Olympics. A Finnish goaltender was left home after he was declared ineligible by the IOC.

The settlement came just hours before the first hockey games — Austria vs. Finland and the United States vs. Canada — open the XIV Olympic Winter Games. Formal opening ceremonies are scheduled for Wednesday.

Meanwhile, California's Bill Johnson continued to raise American hopes for a medal in downhill skiing, finishing second in a trial run with a time of 1:37.06. He had the best time on Sunday after finishing seventh the first day. Pirmin Zurbriggen of Switzerland was first Monday, with a time of 1:46.84.

The women's downhill racers made two trial runs Monday, their first, and the best of the Swiss team won them both: Maria Walliser and Michela Figini took the heats.

Doble Armstrong of Seattle, Wash., had the best U.S. finish in the first heat with a time of 1:16.14, while Holly Flanders of Deerfield, N.H., was the top American in the second run at 1:15.40.

The United States' best contenders for gold in women's figure skating, Rosalynn Summers of Seattle, Wash., and Elaine Zayak of Paramus, N.J., pronounced themselves ready for their dance on ice.

"I believe it, and I think if I believe it I can achieve it," Zayak said of her chances for a gold medal. "Hopefully, everything will work out."

Said Summers: "I think my toughest competition, other than myself, will be Elaine Zayak of the U.S. and Katarina Witt of East Germany."

The IOC had a lot of competition for its five Monday.

"It approved an extension of the Winter Olympics from 12 to 16 days for the 1988 Games at Calgary, apparently to give ABC three weekends to televise events. ABC paid $309 million for the U.S. television rights to those Games."

"It heard progress reports from the Calgary group and the Los Angeles Olympic Committee, which will host the Summer Games this year.

—And it made the decision on hockey eligibility, although it was a fuzzy one at best.

Though the matter was momentarily clear, the IOC's decision did not address the issue of hockey players who have been paid professionally for playing in leagues other than the NHL.

Canadian hockey officials were bitter at the Americans for bringing up the matter, but said the decision would be beneficial to Olympic, and specifically Canadian Olympic, hockey in the future.

"This makes it easier for 1988. It's opened it up substantially," said Alan Eagleson, executive director of Hockey Canada. "We will take more steps to get a more open tournament. We can make arrangements with the NHL to have players in the minor leagues with American or Central League contracts to get them ready for this event. There was a cloud over our heads because of the way we handled it."

Then, Eagleson let the United States have it. "The Yanks hid behind the Finn's skirts and let them take the entire rap for it. ... The USA made the snowballs and gave them to Finland to throw," Eagleson said. "The Finns got 99 percent of them back in their face."

He was referring to Finland's telegram of inquiry about the eligibility of nine players on several teams which was formally accepted by the IOC as a protest. But the Finns also lost goalie Hannu Kampure, declared ineligible for having played one game in the World Hockey Association in 1978.

"I'm convinced all of these players would have played if the Finns and Americans had not done this," Eagleson said.

But Larry Johnson, general manager of the U.S. team, said the Finns "did their own deal. We never talked to the Finns."

Guard adds depth ISU's asset

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

POCATELLO — The term "swingman" in basketball refers to a player who is too tall to play guard, too short to be a forward and too good to sit down.

The word might have been coined for Buck Chavez.

"Buck Chavez is a very versatile basketball player," says University of Montana Coach Mike Montgomery. "He's active, and difficult to defend, but he can shoot and he can jump inside and rebound. There's no question that his best position is at guard, but he can do more than that. He gives Idaho State that extra dimension."

Chavez is the only player in the Big Sky Conference at this point in the season to rank in the top 20 in four of the top-five individual categories: scoring average (11.8), rebounding average (4.3), assists (4.5), steals (2.2), that despite missing nine of the Bengals' first 24 games with a log injury.

But most coaches admire Chavez not for what he does on the court, but what he knows. He's a street-smart basketball player.

"Buck comes from a great athletic family," says Weber State Coach Neil McHardy. "I went to school in Vallejo (Calif.) with his uncle, and his father was an excellent basketball player — a high school All-American. The Chavez family used to pile in the car every night and go down to the schoolyard and play four-on-four or five-or-five. That's how Buck learned his basketball."

At 23, Chavez retains a schoolyard quality. He's not above a behind-the-back dribble, but he doesn't fall for head fakes either. He's seen all the moves before.

"At 6-5, Buck's hard to handle," says his coach, Wayne Ballard. "He can handle the ball, but if you put somebody smaller on him he can get around them."

Last week in the Bengals' 85-81 victory over Boise State, Chavez matched up with the Broncos' 6-foot-5 senior guard Vince Hinchin, the leading scorer in the Big Sky. By late in the game, both players had four fouls. At a critical juncture late in the second half, Boise State got

"Buck Chavez is too tall to play guard, too short to be a forward and too good to sit down the ball to Hinchin who drove to the baseline and put up a six-foot jump shot and went through the hoop. When Hinchin came down, it was on top of Chavez, who had positioned himself perfectly under the basket. Hinchin drew the charging foul, lost the basket and had to leave the game. A few minutes later, Chavez got the ball 15 feet from the basket, passed up an easy shot and drove to the baseline that was being guarded by the Broncos' other guard, 6-2 Frank Jackson, Jackson, trying to block the shot, jumped a split second before Chavez, who floated an eight-footer into the basket. Jackson bumped into Chavez in the process, and Chavez got the bucket and the ensuing free throw to give ISU an eight-point lead with less than four minutes to play.

"Chavez is a little more mature than most of the players in this league, and it shows," says Montgomery. "Look at the guys who come back from (LDS) missions, like (Brigham Young University's Devin) Durrant. They just have so much more poise."

Buhl streaks Tigers tumble

By CHRIS HART
Times-News writer

JEROME — Streaks prevailed and so did Buhl Monday night as the Indians defeated the Jerome Tigers 33-27 in the Fourth District A-2 Girls Basketball Tournament.

The decision forced the event into a seventh and final game Wednesday night when Jerome travels to Buhl for another rematch, the district championship and a spot in next week's state tourney in Coeur d'Alene.

The relatively close score belied the absence of a duel in its typical sense. When one team performed effectively, the other didn't. Unfortunately for the Tigers, their final slump proved most taxing.

After holding a slender lead through half of the third quarter and entering the fourth period behind by just 23-22, Jerome assumed a 24-23 edge with 7:30 to go on Margaret Bonagosa's follow shot. That was the Tigers' last basket for the entire game and their final points until Tiffany Crist sank two free throws with 44 seconds left.

"We missed our shots," said Jerome Coach Kuit Bradley, diagnosing his team's fourth-quarter woes. "We tried to hurry it, and we didn't take good shots."

over nearly five-and-a-half minutes. Gina Smutny's 15-footer opened the rally at 6:20 and put the Indians on top 25-24.

The surge continued as Lori Easton made a free throw and Stacy Walker dropped through two more charities and scored underneath. At 1:57 Jerome's Debbie Van Bek traveled, complained, and drew a technical foul enabling Smutny to sink another free throw. With 54 seconds remaining Michelle Bonagosa sank both ends of a one-and-one, expanding Buhl's bulge to 33-24 and ending the Indians' binge.

While Bradley lamented Jerome's shooting, Buhl Coach Janet Smutny praised the Indians.

"We shot much better (than Thursday night, when Jerome surprised Buhl 35-28)," she said. "I haven't looked at the shot chart yet, but we were better."

Giant-killer Declo slays Kimberly

By SCOTT TUDEHOPE
Times-News writer

WENDELL — With two of its starters fouled out, Kimberly fell to giant-killer Declo 43-37 in the semifinal game of the District 4 girls' Class A-3 basketball tournament here Monday night.

The upset was Declo's first victory this season over the Canyon Conference champion Bulldogs, who must face Gooding tonight at 8:15 in a loser-out game.

Gooding earlier in the evening summarily dismissed Valley from the tournament, 57-41. The winner of tonight's Gooding-Kimberly tilt has the privilege of taking on Declo for the league title on Wednesday, at the same time. If Kimberly wins that game, the two teams must play again on Thursday night.

Coach Lynn Payne of Declo was positively jubilant after the victory, a game in which Kimberly's Natalie Eilers and Lisa Crethers fouled out, greatly aiding his side's chances.

"We talked about how fouls might be important to us," he said. "We just wanted it tonight. We had a lot of form and the girls had a super attitude." Kimberly appeared to be fighting off lethargy all night, but she made finding its niche under the basket — usually the Bulldogs' specialty — and allowing Declo's Lynn Darrington to dominate the defensive boards.

Fouls became a problem early for the Bulldogs. ISU lost four starters after their infraction before the end of the first period. Yanked from the game, she watched her replacement,

ISU football to have JC quarterback, bench of freshmen

POCATELLO — There will be yet another junior college quarterback at the helm of Idaho State's football team next fall.

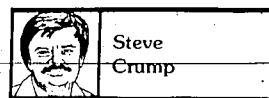

But after four years of being dominated by JC transfers, the Bengals' football program will have a decidedly freshman flavor for the next couple of seasons.

That's the word from ISU head Coach Jim Koetter, who will announce Wednesday that he's signed 15 or 16 freshmen to replace the 19 lettermen he'll lose to graduation this spring.

Koetter has brought in two JC transfers, and may sign one more.

That's a startling departure from last year, when then-Bengal Coach Dave Kragthorpe brought in 14 junior college players.

"Our needs will be to graduate this spring. Koetter has brought in two JC transfers, and may sign one more.

Steve Crump

quarterback in the school's air-oriented history. As a replacement, Koetter and his staff saw that a redshirt in their own program, Vern Harris.

Harris, a double transfer from Fullerton (Calif.) Community College and San Francisco State, came to ISU a year ago, but because of the NCAA's double-transfer rule he could not participate in spring drills. He would have been eligible to play last season; however, when Peterson went down in ISU's season opener against Texas-El Paso with a severely bruised throwing arm, Koetter considered using Harris the following weekend against Eastern Washington. But Peterson's arm mended, and Harris was redshirted.

"Harris' assets are tremendous arm strength and experience in a very good program," says Koetter. "Last year Fullerton won the national junior college."

"How well he will perform in a game we were right up there. We were very pleased by what we saw from him last year. I feel we have a quarterback who's compatible with our system and, being in the program last season, he's already learned a lot of it."

Koetter says Harris, a foot-1, 185-pound native of LaMirada, Calif., has better foot speed than either Peterson or his predecessor, Mike Machurek, now with the Detroit Lions of the National Football League.

"How well he will perform in a game situation is anybody's guess," says the coach. "But he had good leadership abilities at San Francisco State and at Fullerton and he had a good coach at San Francisco — Mark Haglren — who was an assistant at BYU."

Harris' heir-apparent status is so certain that the only quarterback with experience in the ISU program, Don Horn, has left the school. If Harris falters, that leaves the Bengals with only untested sophomore Boyd Sutherland.

"We may get one more JC transfer this year, and if we do it will be a quarterback," says Koetter.

The two JC transfers on campus are Bill Mahar, a 5-foot-9½, 175-pound defensive back from California's El Camino College; and Larry Wolig, a 6-3, 181-pound wide receiver from Rice College who played high school football at Idaho Falls' Bonneville High School.

"We feel that Mahar can step in for Courtney right away," says Koetter. "Wolig has exceptional size for a wide receiver, yet is an area in which we may need help because of the injuries to Tad Pearson and Nick Olsen."

Koetter says he expects to sign five Idaho high school players.

"We really won't know until Wednesday," he says. "You have the three Idaho schools going after essentially the same bunch of kids, so we won't know for sure that they're coming here until they sign their letters of intent."

Koetter doesn't expect to have to use any of the new freshmen next year, barring injuries. In addition to Peterson, ISU lost four starters on offense: Lackle Ken Harlowe, tight end Ken O'Neal and wide receivers Michael Thompson and Blake Stamer. Marboe is likely to be replaced by junior Dan Nicholson, who redshirted last season after an injury, while junior Jody Griswold — who saw considerable action last season — will replace O'Neal. In addition to Wobig, Pearson and Olsen, ISU has one other returning wideout in senior Ed Scott.

If Mahar replaces Courtney, ISU will have to fill four positions on defense. The biggest losses are Larn Gale at inside linebacker and Carl Qualls at outside linebacker, but they are likely to be replaced by two seniors with experience — Earl Davis and Rich Grimmer. Free safety Reggie Chaman will be replaced

Dawkins shines, spurs Nets victory

By The Associated Press

Darryl Dawkins had what his coach called "his finest day" and New Jersey had a pretty good Monday night after the 6-foot-11 center scored 26 points and grabbed 11 rebounds to lead the Nets to a 115-112 National Basketball Association victory that snapped the Boston Celtics' nine-game winning streak.

The Nets led by as many as 22 points midway through the third period before the Celtics rallied behind Larry Bird, who scored 19 of his 23 points in the second half.

"They're a dangerous team when they're down," Dawkins said. "You know they're going to come back and make a run at you. You can never count them out. You just have to hope you can hold them off."

The Celtics, losing for only the 10th time in 48 games, cut the New Jersey lead to a single point twice in the hectic fourth period. A jumper by Bird at 8:55 pulled the Celtics within 89-88. But New Jersey managed to spurt ahead again, scoring six straight points on baskets by Michael Ray Richardson, Mike Gminski and Buck Williams — to take a 100-92 advantage.

"Everybody was involved," Williams said. "They came back at us, but we never gave in to their pressure. We made the big shots down the stretch. Hopefully, we can build on a win like this."

The Nets, who blew a 17-point lead in a loss to Boston last Monday, have won three of their last four games. "I felt we were going to win toward the end," said Bird, who missed a three-point field goal with nine seconds to play and was off-target with a half court shot at the buzzer. "We had our defense working and once we got it under 10 I really thought we could pull it out."

New Jersey coach Stan Albeck said: "We couldn't knockled under but down the stretch we matched them big play for big play."

Albeck also said Dawkins had his "finest day" and "as long as he plays like that, we're a very good basketball team."

The Celtics, who got eight points each from Bird and Gerald Henderson, got back again, closing it to 113-110 on a driving layup by Henderson with 31 seconds to play, and again moved within a point of the Nets on a pair of free throws by Henderson.

However, the Celtics were forced to foul on the ensuing inbounds, and Kelvin Ransey's two free throws with three seconds remaining wrapped up the victory.

Ransey added 16 for the Nets, while Williams and Gminski each had 13. Henderson and Cedric Maxwell each had 22 for the Celtics, while Robert Parish added 20.

New York 116, Golden State 94

In New York, Len "Truck" Robinson and Bill Cartwright each scored 22 points and Bernard King scored 15 of his 19 points in the third quarter as the New York Knicks broke open a tight game to defeat the Golden State Warriors for their sixth straight victory. Cartwright, the Knicks' 7-foot center, also had 11 rebounds as New York boosted its record to 28-11 while extending its longest winning streak of the season.

Seminoles engineer upset of Louisville

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Al Gipson scored 19 points and freshman Randy Allen had 16 as Florida State upset 15th-ranked Louisville 75-60 in Metro Conference college basketball Monday night.

The Seminoles, handling Louisville's first loss in conference play, took the lead from the start and were behind only once, at 11-10, with 13:26 left and by halftime had a 32-29 lead.

Gipson led all scorers with his 19 points and controlled the defensive boards with seven rebounds. Dean Shaffer, a junior college transfer from North Carolina, helped put Louisville in a hole from which it couldn't recover.

The Seminoles boosted their Metro Conference record to 5-2 while Louisville is 7-1.

The largest crowd in Seminole history, 6,987, attended the game. The Cardinals, trying to break through a Seminole man-to-man defense, shot only 43 percent from the floor. They were out rebounded by the Seminoles 36-33.

Center Charles Jones, guarded by Allen, contributed 13 points for Louisville. Milt Wagner added 12 and Barry Snyder added 10.

Judge helps Olympic squad

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A blare-eyed Audun Endestad was sworn in Monday as a U.S. citizen hours after a 6,000-mile journey from Yugoslavia, where he will return as the newest official member of the American norfolk ski team at the XIV Winter Olympics.

"I would like to thank everyone involved in getting my citizenship," the former Norwegian said in a heavily-accented statement to a packed federal courtroom just moments after being sworn in as an American citizen.

The 10-minute ceremony before U.S. District Judge David Winder ended Endestad's 27-month quest for citizenship and a berth on the U.S. Olympic team. The 31-year-old Endestad's non-stop flight from Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, took over 24 hours. He arrived here Sunday night.

It took a special act of Congress and President Reagan's signature last Tuesday to gain a waiver of the final nine months of the three-year waiting period for a citizenship hearing. The process was accelerated so Endestad could compete for the American team in Sarajevo this week.

After signing Endestad's naturalization papers, the judge warmly pumped the new citizen's hand, saying, "Mr. Endestad, congratulations. We're pleased to have you as a citizen of this country."

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Don Redden's six-foot bank shot with two seconds left in overtime led No. 20 Louisiana State to escape with a 61-59 victory over Tennessee Monday night in a Southeastern Conference basketball game.

Redden's two free throws with 1:04 remaining in the five-minute overtime had LSU knot the score at 59-59 and after a Tennessee turnover with 21 seconds to play, the Tigers played for the final shot which Redden hit with three Tennessee players guarding him.

Jerry Reynolds led LSU with 19. Redden finished with 17 and Leonard Mitchell added 10 as LSU built its record to 14-6 overall and 7-4 in the conference.

Fresliman Tony White scored a career-high 21 points to lead Tennessee, 13-10 and 4-7. Fred Jenkins chipped in with 14. They were the only two to hit in double figures.

After racing to an early 11-point lead, LSU's offense stalled and the Tigers went the final 8:50 without a field goal and Tennessee fashioned a 31-30 halftime lead.

Kentucky 77
Mississippi St. 58

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Kenny Walker scored 14 points and Jim Master hit 12 during a first-half explosion that launched sixth-ranked Kentucky to a 77-58 victory over Mississippi State in Southeastern Conference basketball Monday night.

The Wildcats took the early lead on 6-foot-11 Melvin Turpin's two baskets and never were in serious trouble against the out-rebounded and cold-shooting Bulldogs.

Kentucky built a 31-point lead, 43-12, with 1:33 left in the first half and were ahead 56-16 at the half.

The victory gave Kentucky a 17-3 record, 8-3 in the SEC, and kept the Wildcats in second place in the conference, a half-game behind idle Auburn.

Mississippi State fell to 7-13 and 2-9 in the SEC. Master finished with 22 points, while 7-1 Sam Bowler hit 20 and Walker wound up with 16 for Kentucky.

The Wildcats shot 55.2 percent of their field goals in the pivotal first half, while Mississippi State suffered with 24.1 percent. And Kentucky held a 2-1 edge in rebounds.

Twin Falls gymnasts first

POCATELLO — Three young Twin Falls gymnasts won first places in a meet held here last weekend.

Ryan Whitesides of Twin Falls took a first place in the vault and on the high bar in his division, while teammates Johnny Anderson and Jerry Dellard also won their events. Anderson was first on the rings with 9.1 points, while Dellard finished first in floor exercise with 8.8 points.

Whitesides' scores were 9.4 on the high bar and 9.3 in the vault. State Gymnastics, for which all three of the youngsters compete, finished second in the three-team competition, hosted by SportsWorld of Pocatello.

Whitesides finished sixth in the all-around competition, while Anderson took second in the floor exercises and fifth on the high bar to finish fifth all-around. Dellard also placed third in the vault.

Tennmate Scott Points took fifth place in floor exercise.

Young leads bareback riders

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Jerome's Mickey Young is ranked first in bareback riding in early-season ratings released by the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association this week.

Mickey has won $6,408 in competition in the first month of 1984, leading runner-up Steve Dunham of Turner Valley, Alberta, by nearly $800. Young finished second in the PRCA bareback ratings, which are based upon earnings, last season.

Kent Cooper of Declo is off to a fast start in saddle bronc riding, ranked second in earnings at the end of January. Cooper has won $6,129 this year, compared with $3,759 for event leader Jon Scorial of San Diego.

Cross-country carnival set

TWIN FALLS — A cross country ski carnival will be held at Magic Mountain Feb. 18-19.

Sponsored by Blue Lakes Sporting Goods and Magic Mountain, the event will include a 3-kilometer citizen's race, a telemark slalom and a Nordic ski challenge.

Skiers of all ability levels are welcome. The citizen's race will be held on Saturday, Feb. 18, with the Nordic ski challenge capping the weekend on Sunday afternoon. The latter competition will require participants to pick their way through slalom gates while sking uphill, downhill and on flat surfaces; climb over a simulated fence; and remove a ski and hop across a simulated road.

Further information can be obtained by phoning Blue Lakes Sporting Goods at 733-6446 or Magic Mountain at 735-2547.

Donkey basketball at Filer

FILER — The Filer Chapter of the Future Farmers of America will host a donkey basketball game here tonight.

The Filer FFA will take on a team from radio station KLIX of Twin Falls in the Filer High gym.

Tickets are available at the door, priced at $2.50 for adults and students and $1.50 for children.

Game time is 7:30 p.m.

Experience carries Montana past rival

By The Associated Press

Experience for a college basketball team can be a blessing or a curse. If you've got it, you either win or make excuses.

It turned out to be a blessing for the University of Montana last weekend as the Grizzlies upended cross-state rival Montana State 65-51 Saturday in Missoula. The victory gave Montana a 5-2 Big Sky Conference record and a share of the league lead.

"They're just a very experienced team, and it showed," said MSU coach Stu Starner after his Bobcats'

Big Sky record' dropped to 4-3. "Selvig, Hurler, Glass have been around so long. They make a lot of good decisions."

But it was sophomore Larry Krystkowiak who led the Montana attack. The 6-foot-9 forward scored 21 points to help lift the Grizzlies' season record to 17-3. Montana State fell to 10-10 with the loss.

Weber State had to sweat a little harder to overcome a tenacious Boise State team looking for a lead breakthrough on Saturday. The Wildcats needed a last-second shot off the glass by guard John Price to preserve a 56-53 victory over the Broncos. BSU coach Bobby Dye was duly impressed.

"An off-balance, diving shot. A great shot. A typical Price shot," Dye said. "He's the type of player that can make that type of play."

It was a pivotal week for both teams. Weber boosted its record to 5-2 and pulled into a tie for the Big Sky lead by dropping both Idaho and BSU. The Broncos, meanwhile, lost to the Wildcats and, on Thursday, to Idaho State. Weber's overall record stands at 13-6. Boise is 2-5 in the league, 11-5 overall.

Still further south, free throws helped Nevada-Reno overcome Northern Arizona 69-57 in Flagstaff Saturday. The Wolf Pack's John Welch sank six of eight charity shots and Curtis High added five of six in the final two minutes and 20 seconds

Tar Heels lead ratings, Kentucky slips to 6th

By DAVE KAPLAN
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Kentucky Wildcats, no longer the intimidating beast it was earlier this season, tumbled to sixth place in the weekly Associated Press college basketball poll announced Monday — its lowest ranking this season.

The plunge from third place came after Kentucky, 16-3, lost to Alabama 66-62 Saturday for its third loss within three weeks.

No. 1 North Carolina continued to dominate. The Tar Heels, for the third time in four weeks, collected all 62 first-place votes from the panel of sportswriters and broadcasters, and 1,240 points.

North Carolina easily handled Clemson, Furman and the Citadel to raise its record to 20-0, the 14th consecutive season that a Dean Smith-coached team has reached a 20-victory season.

No. 2 DePaul, 17-0, remained unbeaten by edging St. John's 59-57 in overtime in its only game last week. The Blue Demons amassed 1,174 points in a system based on 20 points for each first-place vote, 19 for second, etc.

Georgetown, Nevada-Las Vegas and Houston each leapfrogged a position to Nos. 3-4, and 5, respectively.

The Hoyas, 19-2, collected 1,090 points, while the Rebels, 20-1, received 999, and the Cougars, 19-3, 969.

The lone newcomer to this week's Top 20 is Washington at No. 17. The improving Huskies disposed of previously 20th-ranked UCLA 89-81 in three overtimes and the Bruins fell from the poll.

Elsewhere in the Top 10 there was no change among Nos. 7-9, as Texas-El Paso, Illinois and Memphis State each won twice during the week.

Gill signs with Concordes

MONTREAL (AP) — Turner Gill, who quarterbacked Nebraska to within one game of a national title, signed Monday with the Montreal Concordes of the Canadian Football League rather than waiting for a problematical offer from the United States' two professional football leagues.

Gill, the subject of a year-long campaign by Concordes officials, who sent CFL decals and promotional literature to him in Nebraska, signed a four-year contract estimated at close to $2 million.

Gill had several other options.

He was drafted by the Houston Gamblers of the United States Football League but said he never was really interested because the money wasn't attractive and, in Jim Kelly, they already had a first-string quarterback. He could have waited for the National Football League draft in May and he could have pursued a baseball career — several major league teams were said to be interested.

But, he said: "I wanted to go somewhere where I could play right away."

Gill, whose scrambling style is suited to the CFL and its wide fields said that with the help of agent Ed Kenting, he finally made up his mind Saturday night that he was coming north.

"I'd been around to see some of the city and I'd met with the owners and coaching staff, and I was impressed," said Gill. "Back at the hotel, my agent sat down and analysed everything."

THE ACES BOBBY WOLFF

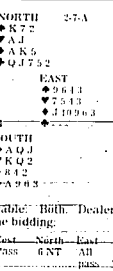

You can observe a lot just by watching. Yogi Berra.

Take a good look at the way South played today's game. See if you can observe a lot just by watching.

Dummy's hearty jack won and South quickly led dummy's club queen. East discarded, and the slam was gone before South got started.

Obviously, South should play the club suit with greater care. Why? South can count on eight top tricks, without the club suit it must therefore plan on winning four club tricks.

Whichever club has all four club—the safety play work, against East also. The first dummy hon goes to East's king and later a

Chrysler challenge hits snag

By MICHAEL J. SMIFFEN
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department told a federal court Monday it supports a motion to dismiss Chrysler Corp.'s suit against the proposed joint venture between General Motors Corp. and Toyota Motor Co.

Court to file a friend-of-the-court brief on Feb. 13 spelling out the reasons why the government supports General Motors' motion to dismiss Chrysler's private antitrust suit.

private antitrust suits plaintiffs must show injury of the kind suffered by consumers.

Hecla reports 1983 its second best year

WALLACE (AP) — Hecla Mining Co. reported Monday that 1983 was the second best in the firm's history, even though fourth quarter earnings were off considerably from the previous three quarters.

sent a 426 percent increase over 1982 earnings of $5.1 million, or 29 cents a share, the company said Monday.

Unaudited net earnings for the fourth quarter totaled about $1.4 million, or 9 cents a share. That compares with earnings of almost $7.1 million, or 46 cents a share, in the fourth quarter of 1982 and more than $7.7 million, or 41 cents a share, for the third quarter of 1983.

The firm's total 1983 silver production was a new record 6.8 million ounces.

Deficits, Fed policies hand stocks drubbing

By Joe SIMNACIER
Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — Albertson's Inc. plans to enter the already highly competitive Dallas-Fort Worth market with seven 62,000-square-foot supermarkets within the next 12 months.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took its worst pounding in more than a year Monday, with the continuation of a sell-off that has rolled up $133 billion in losses over the past month.

Analysts blamed the slide on a growing perception that huge deficits and a restrictive Federal Reserve Board would combine to keep interest rates high, making returns more attractive for bonds than stocks and cooling off the pace of economic growth.

Albertson's will "jump into" the Dallas market first with suburban locations in Richardson, Plano, Bedford, Mesquite and Irving by the end of 1984, followed by stores in Arlington and Garland, which should open by February, 1985.

The 62,000-square-foot stores will be among the largest in the area.

Albertson's, industry insiders are particularly interested in the new company's effect on Skaggs Alpha-Beta.

Bolinder said the locations represent pockets of opportunity in an otherwise tough market.

"This is a big store," Glovsky said. "Combination stores run 55,000 square feet. These are a good 10 percent larger. They'll impact all the major players in the market."

Skaggs began in Dallas as a drugstore in 1958 and joined Albertson's in 1970 to expand into the operation of combination food-and-drug stores. The two dissolved their partnership in 1977.

"I think its going to have a dramatic impact on the Dallas market," said Charles Glovsky, food

While all chains may be in competition with each other, they have a 10 percent price advantage in carrying on a "business."

Albertson's has been studying the Dallas market for several years, planning its move. Bolinder said. Over the next five years, Albertson's plans to have 15 to 20 stores in the Dallas market, he said.

Office-at-home deductions slippery

In 1983, three different Federal Circuit Courts of Appeal reversed three court decisions involving office-at-home deductions.

Sylvia Porter
Fourth in series

The winning taxpayer was a violinist who played with the Metropolitan Opera. He set aside one room of his five-room New York City apartment as a music studio, furnished it entirely with musical instruments and didn't use it for any social or personal purposes.

The husband and wife spent 40-plus hours a week at these persons' home offices, managing their investment portfolio of more than $13 million. This involved much financial reading, investment decisions, help from a part-time secretary/bookkeeper. The lower court found these persons were "active," not passive, investors, and therefore were in "business."

The Metropolitan Opera didn't furnish an individual practice studio, although most musicians had to practice to meet the orchestra's standards. The taxpayer claimed an office-at-home deduction for the studio portion of his apartment expenses.

The Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit agreed they were active investors, but that is not the correct test. They had to be "traders" to be considered in-business. Traders engage in short-term activities and their income is primarily from buying and selling securities, not from dividends and interest income.

The Tax Court upheld the IRS' disallowance of his deduction because the studio wasn't his principal place of business — a prerequisite for an office-at-home deduction. He spent less time at the opera house than in his studio, but the opera was still his principal place of business.

The IRS has decided not to follow the Second Circuit's decision. So even if you're in a similar situation, if you claim the deduction, you can anticipate an IRS challenge and expect the IRS to force you to litigate the issue in the courts.

Another of the Circuit Court reversals dealt with the question of whether an active investor in stocks and bonds could take an office-at-home deduction for the room in which the securities activities were handled.

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals reversed for the simple reason that the tax rule required the office be used for customers, clients, and the like. Using the room ordinarily means having physical contact with the room. Clients who phoned were not using the room for the required purpose. Thus, no office-at-home deduction. No matter how much relief we received in 1983, office-at-home deductions are still a slippery area. Proceed with care.

Union Pacific work train dumps gravel along edge of Great Salt Lake to protect its track against rising waters.

Railroad to elevate line along Salt Lake

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Union Pacific Railroad has announced plans to raise its rail line on the south shore of the Great Salt Lake two feet to protect it from rising lake waters.

The project will begin immediately and will involve 15 miles of main line about 15 miles west of Salt Lake City, officials said.

The project will cost $3.8 million. The railroad said $6 million was spent last spring on elevating an 11.8-mile stretch of the track by nearly two feet, with the roadbed widened to 35 feet into the lake.

The lake's rise last year brought water to within two feet of the main track. It was closed three times when wind-whipped waves battered the rails.

Water now has risen beyond the
