Syria warns U.S. to halt snelling

By FAROUK NASSAR
The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The U.S. 6th Fleet bombarded the rebel-held ridges outside Beirut for a second day Thursday, after government and rebel gunners traded deadly artillery barrages around the divided and devastated city.

Lebanese and Syrian reports claimed U.S. Navy jets also went into action over the mountains area Thursday, but a U.S. military spokesman denied it.

Syria, whose troops occupy the mountains with the Druse-Moslem anti-government forces, issued an ominous warning to the United States.

"Syria cannot stand neutral watching the barbaric bombardment practiced by the 6th Fleet against Lebanese civilians," the Damascus government radio said. It said the Syrians "may be compelled to react."

The U.S. Embassy here said, meanwhile, it was not yet considering a general evacuation of the estimated 1,500 U.S. citizens in battered Beirut.

About 50 more U.S. Embassy employees and dependents were airlifted out by helicopter Thursday to 6th Fleet ships offshore, U.S. Marine spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks reported. That brought to about 140 the number of American civilians pulled out thus far for transfer to the safety of Cyprus.

The U.S.-supported Amin Gemayel, remained out of sight Thursday.

Gemayel, whose Moslem-Christian Cabinet resigned last weekend, is trying to patch together a new "national coalition" government. But his Syrian-backed Lebanese enemies demand that he resign.

The president's position suffered a major blow early this week when Shiite Moslem and Druse militiamen took control of west Beirut, driving out army troops and Christian militiamen. Thousands of army soldiers have defected to the anti-Gemayel side.

Along the "Green Line" separating Moslem west from Christian east Beirut, sporadic small arms and shell fire was heard Thursday. Local radio reports said army troops also clashed with militiamen in the port area and the Shiite-populated southern suburbs.

Later Thursday, as night fell, Christian neighborhoods in east Beirut came under sustained bombardment, apparently from artillerymen in Syrian-occupied Druse areas.

Artillery of the Lebanese army and Christian militia, meanwhile, pounded population centers in the Druse-controlled hills southeast of the city and in the Shiite suburbs, the Druse-controlled radio said. The Christian militia is an arm of the right-wing Phalange Party, headed by the president's father, Pierre Gemayel.

The 6th Fleet destroyer, Moosebrugger, in response to the shelling of east Beirut, opened up with its five-inch guns, U.S. spokesman Brooks said.

It fired on anti-aircraft positions in the mountains east of Beirut, approximately 10 rounds, Brooks said.

President Reagan, in a policy statement Tuesday announcing that the 1,000 U.S. Marines in Beirut would be withdrawn in the coming weeks, also said 6th Fleet ships would retaliate against anyone firing on Beirut "from parts of Lebanon controlled by Syria."

It was a forceful show of support for Gemayel. On Wednesday, the battleship New Jersey will destroy Eilat ammunition mill targets in Syrian-controlled areas in a half-day-long barrage, more than 150 shells.

Jury favors city

In sewer suit

By DAVID MOFFAT

TWIN FALLS — The city of Twin Falls was awarded $2.17 million in damages Thursday from two manufacturers of equipment that was installed in the municipal sewage-treatment plant in 1976.

The decision — by a one-man, five-woman jury — ended a three-month trial in federal district court in Boise.

The figure represents the full amount of damages allowed by Judge Ray McNichols.

However, the total award could exceed $3 million, after interest and attorneys' fees are included, says John Lezamis, one of three principal lawyers who represented the city. All three work for the firm of Hepworth, Nungester and Felton of Twin Falls.

The chief defendants in the case were California-based Envirotech Systems Inc. and Neptune-Microfloc of Corvallis Ore. The city alleged the companies provided equipment that was not capable of performing as the companies said it would.

The city claimed this was why the $6 million plant failed to meet federal Environmental Protection Agency standards in the late 1970s and had to be rebuilt, at a further cost of approximately $5 million.

The jury awarded the city $1.22 million in damages from Envirotech, the supplier of the plant's sewage-handling equipment. And it awarded $949,000 in damages from Neptune-Microfloc, the supplier of the main components of the plant's secondary biological treatment system.

Jury foreman Larry Donohoo, 34, a Boise-based wildlife biologist for the U.S. Forest Service, said Thursday night that the weight of the evidence showed both companies' products violated their written and unwritten warranties.

He said the jury felt this consideration outweighed allegations by the defendants that the plant failed on account of other factors, including overloading, design error and the WASHINGTON — Administration officials Thursday offered differing justifications for the American shelling of Beirut and the nation's two top Pentagon leaders publicly disputed the White House account of why President Reagan decided to redeploy U.S. Marines in Lebanon.

Meanwhile, one administration official reportedly said the phoned warning to destroy Eilat ammunition mill targets in Syrian-controlled areas in a half-day-long barrage, more than 150 shells.

"The shelling is solely to defend the multinational force in Lebanon and not to prop up the country's tottering government," said White House spokesman Larry Speakes. He said the agreement with Congress authorizes shelling only for this purpose.

But Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said defense of the Lebanese government was in fact one reason for the firing.

Speakes had said Reagan approved the redeployment plan "in principle" Feb. 1, but in an appearance before Congress, Gen. John Vessey, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, turned to Weinberger and said:

"If the decision was made on the first of February, you and I spent an awful lot of time in meetings in the last week to no avail."

In another development, congressional sources said Gen. P.X. Kelley, Marine commandant, was apparently unaware of Reagan's decision to order a phased withdrawal of the Marines in Lebanon when Kelley briefed senators about an hour before the president announced the Tuesday.

The sources, who spoke only on condition they not be identified, said Kelley did not mention the redeployment decision during a closed session of the Senate Armed Services Committee late Tuesday afternoon. Kelley called members of the panel Wednesday to tell them that if he had been aware of the impending news.

'Liberals' blacklisted on speech making

By MIKE FEINSLIBER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States Information Agency said Thursday it was wrong to have kept a list of 84 people who were to be "barred" as ideologically unsatisfactory speakers in overseas programs. The agency said it stopped the practice last month.

The Washington Post reported the existence of the list in a story in Thursday editions and Democrats in Congress leaped on the news with expressions of dismay.

"This action on the part of the Reagan administration's self-confessed electronic Peeping Tom — Charles Z. Wick — is something that we come to associate with Republican administrations over since Watergate and President Nixon used his infamous hit list to single American citizens off special treatment," Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, told the House. He was on the list.

Wick, director of USIA, admitted in January that he secretly typed many telephone calls.

The USIA list of non-participants in the agency's overseas speaking program was compiled after some speakers suggested by the agency's staff were rejected for ideological or personal reasons.

"Many on the list were Democrats or believed to be political liberals. Within the agency, the list became known as the 'blacklist.'"

The list originated in "an ad hoc, mindless, unsanctioned manner," said Leslie Lenkowsky, acting deputy director of the USIA. "There was no clear order, so far as we can tell, to do this. There was certainly none on the part of agency management."

He added, "There's no one on that list who is ineligible to be in the American Exchange program any more and if any of the names that were on that list are suggested they will certainly be considered for it."

Among those listed, the Post said, were broadcasters Walter Cronkite and David Brinkley, economist John Kenneth Galbraith, Post executive editor Benjamin C. Bradlee, columnist Tom Wicker of the New York Times, feminist Betty Friedan, civil rights activist Coretta Scott King and consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

Also among the 84 were presidential candidate Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., Reps. Robert Garcia, D-N.Y., and Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y.

Exuberant spacewalkers save tool amid disappointment

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

Path Challenger will use for landing

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Bundled in their bulky suits, Challenger's exuberant spacewalkers performed an impromptu rescue Thursday, snatching back a piece of equipment as it drifted into space.

They flew about on their backpicks, but the day was not without its disappointment — the latest in a long series for this shuttle crew. The "wrist" on the shuttle's robot arm refused to respond to commands, canceling a docking rehearsal with a rotating object.

"The view is simply spectacular and panoramic," astronaut Bruce McCandless told President Reagan when he made his customary once-a-mission call to the shuttle. "We believe that the maneuvering units, first time working unattached, were literally opening a new frontier of what man can do in space and we're paving the way for many operations on the coming space station."

McCandless was showing restraint with his commander-in-chief. Earlier he had exulted: "Up, up in the bay." His partner, Robert Stewart, said, "Boy, it's awful pretty."

Earlier pessimism that bad weather would again delay or cancel a first landing Saturday at Florida's Kennedy Space Center turned to optimism as an expected weather front stalled over Texas. "Right now it's looking real good for KSC," the astronauts were told.

From mission control came applause when McCandless reached over the side of the spaceship and, like a child pulling at a balloon, retrieved a foot restraint that had broken loose and was floating away. He was on his safety line at the time.

He had help from commander Vance Brand, who gently pulsed Challenger's small steering rockets to move 30 feet closer to the restraint — "just as he would do if he had to rescue a stranded astronaut in a maneuvering unit," mission control said. McCandless, referring to an earlier flight crew's boast, said "We deliver" may have been the STS-5 crew motto, but we pick up also."

McCandless clearly enjoyed the freedom of moving about in his flying machine. One memorable view was of him, feet toward the Earth above, head down to the shuttle cargo bay, suspended in space.

Commenting that it was easier the second time around, McCandless and Stewart quickly settled down to the real business of the day: testing techniques for grappling, repairing and refueling crippled satellites. Such an attempt will be made in April.

The cancellation of the hookup with a large box rotating very slowly on the end of the robot arm was a disappointment, because it had been a major goal of the space walk. The astronauts substituted a metal pin on a work station box and repeatedly practiced floating toward the box and clamping a tube-like device on their jet packs onto a docking pin. The exercise went without a flaw. Earlier in the mission, two satellites deployed from the shuttle failed to reach proper orbit, and a balloon launched for a rendezvous maneuver blew up.

Thursday's spacewalk, lasting 6 hours 17 minutes, was the last of the night. The major tasks still facing the five-man crew is a space-to-ground press conference early Friday morning and the launch.

"Up, up in the bay," said McCandless as he strapped on his jet-pack, discarded his lifeline and scooted around and above the shuttle cargo bay.

He did somersaults with the Earth as a backdrop, and rolled from side to side in a slately no-rope aerial ballet. "Looks like you're having fun," said Jerry Ross in Mission Control. "Looks like some victory rolls up there this morning." "It's really performing nicely," McCandless said. And then, with regret in his voice: "I guess I got to get down to work and do the dockings."

Syria general reported killed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior administration official said Thursday that unconfirmed reports indicated a Syrian artillery brigade headquarters was "apparently demolished" during shelling by U.S. Navy ships off Lebanon.

The official briefed foreign reporters on condition he not be identified and denied Syrian claims that the shelling had hit civilian areas in Lebanon.

"We do know that among other targets that were hit, the Syrian artillery brigade headquarters was apparently demolished," the official said. "I would conclude that, if that is correct — and this is based on some reporting that is as yet unconfirmed — that that would obviously have an effect on their ability and their willingness to fire when we can fire with such accuracy against those targets."

ABC News reported Thursday night that Wednesday's shelling by the U.S. ships killed the commanding general of all Syrian forces in Lebanon and a large part of his general staff.

The network quoted Intelligence sources as saying the bunkers were near the town of Hamana, 15 miles east of Beirut.

State and Defense Department officials contacted by The Associated press could not confirm the report. An intelligence source told the United States has received reports that a Syrian general may have been killed but that there is "no definite proof" to substantiate that information.

The senior official who briefed foreign reporters said: "Our forces have very good intelligence on where firing positions come from, fire originates, where ammunition depots are located, where command and control-communication-centers are located."

The official said American gunners were under strict orders not to fire at a target if it was located in or next to a village.

Andropov reportedly failing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet leader Yuri Andropov underwent a kidney transplant within the past 24 hours and is seriously ill, CBS News reported Thursday night.

The Washington Post, meanwhile, reported that Soviet television unexpectedly changed its scheduled programming to classical Thursday night followed by similar changes in the national broadcast.

The reported programming changes appear to indicate the country is being placed on an emergency footing, the Post reported in a story in Friday editions.

In the past, changes in programming in the Soviet Union have been made before the announcement of the death of a senior political figure. That was the case on the night of Nov. 9, 1982, just before the formal announcement the next day that President Leonid Brezhnev had died.

CBS said that Andropov could not be moved following the reported transplant.

However, analysts also said that the most recent indication of a seriously ill person in the Moscow hierarchy was Defense Minister Marshal Dmitri Ustinov, 75, who canceled a trip to India last week for unexplained reasons. TV programming changes also could be made for Ustinov.

Mobster faces Congress's wrath

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate committee recommended Thursday that the Senate cite Anthony "Big Tuna" Accardo, a reputed Chicago organized crime kingpin with roots in the Al Capone era, for contempt of Congress.

The civil contempt resolution, approved 12-0 by the Governmental Affairs Committee, requires approval by the full Senate and a federal court before action can be taken against the 77-year-old Accardo.

Sen. William V. Roth Jr., R-Dele., chairman of the panel, said he expected the Senate to "act very rapidly" after it returns Feb. 20 from a week's recess.

The committee's action resulted from Accardo's refusal last Nov. 17 to answer questions posed by the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations about organized crime, his sources of income and alleged control of the Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees Union.

Accardo, who had been given a grant of immunity from prosecution, told the subcommittee he would not respond until he received proof that his questions did not arise from information gained through illegal wiretaps.

Aircraft firm's strike ends

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A bitter, 16-week strike against Douglas Aircraft Co. ended Thursday when more than 2,000 strikers ratified a contract that offered less than one they rejected nine days earlier.

The striking United Auto Workers, who walked off the job in a wage dispute, are to return to their jobs at the sprawling aerospace assembly plant Monday, said Dave Eastman, a spokesman for the subsidiary of St. Louis-based McDonnell Douglas Corp.

Eastman said the company was "pleased" at the outcome of the vote.

The vote was conducted by a show of hands at an emotional meeting less than two hours after company and union negotiators reached the tentative settlement, said a woman who answered the telephone at the UAW headquarters in Long Beach.

Johnny Carson signs contract

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Johnny Carson, who celebrating his 21st anniversary as host of "The Tonight Show" last October, has signed a new contract with NBC seven months before his old one expires, the network said Thursday.

Details of the new contract were not disclosed, said Gene Walsh, an NBC spokesman. Carson's current contract expires in September.

"I just talked to Johnny and he's very happy with the new contract," said Jim Mahoney, a spokesman for Carson. "He's entered into a new agreement that will run indefinitely and there're no changes from his previous contract."

Woman guilty of beating son

ALLEGAN, Mich. (AP) — A woman was convicted Thursday of involuntary manslaughter in the beating death of her 12-year-old son at a House of Judah religious cult in Michigan.

Allegan County Circuit Judge George Corsiglia deliberated for about 2 1/2 hours before reaching his verdict in the non-jury trial of Ethel Yarbough.

Mrs. Yarbough's son, John, died July 4, one day after entering a beating camp run by a cult of "Black Hebrew Israelite" Jews.

Mrs. Yarbough sobbed quietly as the judge issued his opinion to the courtroom nearly filled with about three dozen spectators, a third of them cult members.

failure of the city to operate and maintain the facility correctly.

Donohoo said the testimony of Dick Best, an Envirotech employee sent to train city operators, was particularly revealing in the case against that company.

He said the jury learned from Best that city operators could have been trained properly if the equipment had not been breaking down all the time.

The case against Neptune-Microflow was "much more difficult," Donohoo said. But again, he said, the most important fact was that the company made inflated claims in its informational literature, which led to built-in design flaws.

Lawyers for the city have not decided whether they will appeal the ruling by McNichols, made earlier in the trial, that limited damages to what amounted to the sticker price of the equipment, plus related incidental expenses.

At the outset of the trial, the city was seeking nearly $10 million in consequential and punitive damages. These were to offset the cost of rebuilding the plant and for inconve-

Prankster stabbed by friend

CRYSTAL LAKE, Ill. (AP) — A 14-year-old girl who disguised herself as a prowler lurking outside the house to scare her baby-sitting friend paid for her practical joke with a knife in her chest.

Karen Geake, who earlier had made ominous telephone calls to the friend, was stabbed to death by the baby-sitter's boyfriend, a high school honor student.

"The whole thing was shocking to us here because neither was the type you would think to get involved in something like this," said Walter Forsyth, principal of Crystal Lake Central High School.

Police Chief Samuel Johns said, "It started out to be a prank and turned out to be a tragedy." The young man, whose name has not been released, has been charged with voluntary manslaughter in the Jan. 28 slaying. He is free on $25,000 bond pending a preliminary hearing Feb. 15 in McHenry County Circuit Court.

Johns said the prank apparently began when Karen made several anonymous phone calls to her friend, breathing heavily each time. Then she donned her clothing, drew a bead on her chin, pulled a nylon stocking over her head and went to show the disguise to her 20-year-old sister, Lori.

Karen then left her house and walked across the street to the house where her friend was babysitting with her boyfriend. Karen's brother Lyle, said he and his sister had often played similar pranks at the same house when they were younger.

After she rattled the doors and windows of the house, the boyfriend opened the door to investigate.

As Karen jumped out of the bushes apparently intending to shout, "Boo!" — the young man lunged forward with a double-edged knife and stabbed her once in the chest.

It wasn't until Karen gasped, "Oh, you stabbed me," that the youth realized who she was, Johns said. The girl turned away and collapsed on the front lawn.

Jupiter space probe unveiled

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — Hughes Aircraft Co. unveiled its new Jupiter probe Thursday, a $133 million spacecraft destined to make the first trip into the stormy atmosphere of the solar system's largest planet.

The unmanned probe, named Galileo for the astronomer who discovered it in 1610 that Jupiter had moons, is designed to be launched from the space shuttle. It will have a rocket engine different from the ones which failed to boost two Hughes satellites into a proper orbit this week after launching from the space shuttle Challenger.

"Building such a probe to go to the hostile atmosphere of Jupiter is quite a challenge, and we're extremely pleased it's completed," said Hughes spokesman Emery Wilson. "... It's certainly a positive thing for us. We're very proud." Space agency officials tentatively plan to launch the five-foot-diameter probe from the shuttle Atlantis in May 1986. The probe will be connected to a Jupiter orbiter now being assembled at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory near Pasadena, Calif. The lab is managing the Galileo project.

The Galileo probe and orbiter will separate about five months before they reach Jupiter, nearly 500 million miles from Earth. In August 1988, the probe is expected to enter the stormy atmosphere of the planet, which is 10 times the diameter of Earth.

Death penalty debated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted 65-26 Thursday to stop a filibuster by opponents of the death penalty, indicating a bill to renew capital punishment for some federal crimes has a good chance of passage.

The vote, spearheaded by proponents of the death penalty, places a maximum 100-hour time limit on debates that has featured tales-after-tales of grisly murders and mutilations. The 65 votes were five more than needed to limit debate for senators, who will not vote on the bill until after a 10 day recess beginning Friday.

An official of the American Civil Liberties Union who lobbied against the bill acknowledged the margin was "an indication there appears to be votes to pass the bill in the Senate."

But John Shattuck, national legislative director of the ACLU, predicted the measure would not get through the House.

Mondale pans Glenn tax-hike plan

By The Associated Press

Democratic presidential front-runner Walter F. Mondale likened John Glenn's tax plan Thursday to "voting for Reaganomics twice," and said it would cost an "average family" $900 a year in higher taxes by 1989. "I think he's flat-wrong," Glenn shot back, although an aide said the Ohio Democrat's plan would raise taxes in 1985 by $350 for the same family, making $25,000 a year. "We do not deny that there would be sacrifices in reducing the Reagan deficits," said the aide.

The former vice president opened a line of attack on the Ohio Democrat while Sen. Alan Cranston outlined a plan to cut President Reagan's record defense budget for next year by $38 billion and Sen. Ernest Hollings complained that American naval bombardment of Lebanon is "bluff and gusto."

The campaign of a fifth Democratic presidential contender, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, got a boost, meanwhile, when the Federal Election Commission certified him for federal campaign matching funds. The first installment is for $100,000.

And Sen. George McGovern attacked Reagan for an "abandonment of religious faith" in his reelection campaign. "He ignores the Judeo-Christian mandate to feed the hungry and minister to the poor, yet he repeatedly invoked the name of Jesus" in a recent speech before religious broadcasters, McGovern said while campaigning in Iowa.

Mondale joined his Democratic rivals in criticizing Reagan, telling the president to "get on a plane and come back to Washington" to deal with "disastrous" policy in Lebanon and burgeoning federal deficits.

'Bubble boy' doing fine outside of bubble

HOUSTON (AP) — David, the 12-year-old "bubble boy" forced by illness from the sterile chamber which protected him from infection since birth, was doing "much better" Thursday after treatment for vomiting, diarrhea and fever, doctors said. Baylor College of Medicine spokeswoman Susannah Griffin said tests were continuing to determine what was wrong with the child, who was born without resistance to disease and grew up in a bubble-like plastic chamber to protect him from germs.

She said physicians had ruled out infection as the source of the symptoms.

Some of the tests were "probably" intended to learn whether David is suffering from graft vs. host disease, which often attacks patients who undergo bone marrow transplants, she said. David received such a transplant Oct. 20 to give him an immune system.

David, whose last name has never been revealed to protect the privacy of his family, was removed Tuesday from his bubble and kissed his mother for the first time. Doctors said they moved the boy because they feared he would be severely dehydrated by vomiting, diarrhea and fever.

Ms. Griffin said David needed to receive liquids intravenously for several hours and it was impossible to get an intravenous unit into the bubble.

Catholics stop Cabbage Patch doll baptism

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A Roman Catholic archbishop canceled a simulated baptism ceremony featuring Cabbage Patch dolls because such a ritual could lead to "scandalous misinterpretation," church officials said Thursday.

The original ceremony planned at St. Benedict's Church was to be an instructional event for children, who were invited to bring along their dolls, but it "became a much larger thing than anyone intended," said Vince Baglivo, a spokesman for the Newark Diocese, the sixth-largest in the nation with 1.3 million Roman Catholics. "As it turned out, people from other towns and parishes in Newark went to the church," Baglivo said.

The ceremony had been planned by St. Benedict's for Jan. 28 in conjunction with its regular Saturday evening Mass. But Archbishop Peter J. Gerety canceled the event after receiving "misinquiries" about its orthodoxy, Baglivo said.

The baptism of dolls is totally unauthorized and can lead to scandalous misinterpretation," Gerety said in the statement. "The particular ceremony in question was canceled. Notice is hereby given that any such events need not be held in the archdiocese of Newark."

Hard work remains a key to education

"What goes around, comes around" is an old saying about life's repeating patterns, so we're not surprised by some of the recommendations from yet another study on schools, this one by a former dean of Harvard University's School of Education.

Theodore R.Sizer recommends that high schools: 1) limit enrollment to the students who want to be there; 2) reduce course offerings and focus on reading and writing, math and science, literature and the arts, and philosophy and history; 3) expel disruptive students; and 4) drop physical education and vocational-education training.

Now if much of this sounds familiar, it should, because high school as described in the report is close in many respects to what schools used to be like in America several decades ago.

That, of course, was before the high-school-for-everyone trend, which developed in the middle decades of this century and from which many of the conditions have come that now compel reform.

Down to the 1960s, high school was essentially a voluntary experience—a much higher proportion of students didn't get through the academic program; athletics were held on weekends; vocational education was limited to "shop"; and students were grouped by ability into "college prep," "business" and "general."

The structure was admittedly a bit elitist, but in our view, had some characteristics to recommend it, not the least of which was academic quality. Schools were less tolerant of disruption and turmoil, and designed more as settings in which hard learning could occur. Driver education wasn't a credit course. Nor was marriage preparation or the rest of the getting-in-touch-with-your-feelings junk courses that have since crowded out the content offerings.

Schools were premised on the idea that educational resources are too precious to be squandered on those who don't want them or who disrupt others who want to learn.

Ah, you say, its "undemocratic" to toss the troublemakers and non-learners out. Nonsense. Mass education may be a right, but the right doesn't extend to disruption.

The study addresses yet another aspect of education: higher salaries for teachers. It makes the obvious point that raising teacher pay will not, in itself, have much effect on the quality of what is taught. Other changes, involving discipline and the willingness of students to learn, are more important.

That can be observed in virtually any college preparatory school in the country, a high-school model with which Sizer is familiar as the former headmaster of Phillips Andover Academy.

Prep schools aren't a panacea for what is wrong with high-school education in America, but some of the concepts they employ, and which used to be common in public schools, seem to be coming back in vogue. There is nothing new under the sun, says the Bible. Education always has required discipline and hard work, and it always will.

Time for seats at the bargaining table

WASHINGTON—Composing a budget message is like composing a sonnet. A certain prescribed form has to be followed.

Ronald Reagan's message of Feb. 1 fell perfectly within the rules, which is to say, the message was mostly baloney.

Thus the president spoke gravely about "the threat of indefinitely prolonged high budget deficits." That threat, he said, "raised the specter of sharply higher interest rates, choked-off investment, renewed recession and rising unemployment." Perceiving so awful a prospect, did the president recommend ways to halt these deficits, or not?

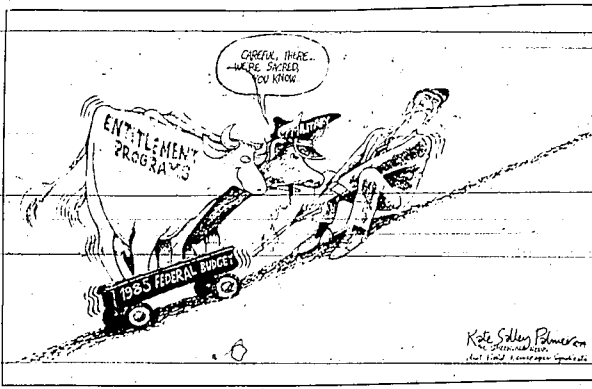

No, indeed. The president's budget projects a deficit of $180.4 billion in fiscal '85, a deficit of $177.1 billion in '86, a deficit of $160.5 billion in '87, a deficit of $152 billion in '88 and a deficit of $123.4 billion in '89. That adds up to $811 billion for the five-year period. On top of the deficit of $183.7 that is estimated for the current fiscal year, the president is talking of an additional debt of just under $1 trillion over the next six years.

In the classic pattern of presidential budgets, those mind-boggling figures are the end product of much wishful thinking. They are predicated partly upon certain increases in revenue and partly upon certain reductions in non-defense outlays. The Congress last year spurned these selfsame increases and rejected the recommended reductions.

In their refusal to grapple effectively with the deficits, both Congress and the White House are cynically reflecting the will of the American people. Responsible public opinion polls find that the people not only oppose an increase in taxes, but also demand continued high outlays for social programs. If the president's "specter" materializes, the people will be getting about what the people deserve. It is a melancholy thought.

How could the specter be averted? Relief will demand bipartisan leadership and bipartisanship, statesmanship, and neither of these commodities is in large supply in this election year. To his credit, the president has taken the lead in urging bipartisan negotiations on the deficit. So, however, do the negotiations will go nowhere.

The president seems to be dead set against a significant increase in taxes. Such increases, he says, "impose unfair burdens on the people, hurt capital formation and destroy incentives for growth." There is a further reason for his opposition. With good reason, Reagan fears that if he consented to an additional $30 billion in a year in taxes, the big spenders on Capitol Hill would spend every dime of it on expanded programs of strong political appeal. There would be no reduction in the deficits.

Kate Selley Peterson

If anything useful is to be accomplished, increases in revenue must be accompanied by substantially identical reductions in outlays. There's the rub. Forty-two percent of federal spending for social services; 29 percent for national defense. Congress is too timid to cut the former; the president is too stubborn to cut the latter.

It's time to make a deal. The specter conjured by the president is not a scary illusion. It is real, and it ought to be dealt with now. Under the best of circumstances, it would be 1985 or 1986 before significant reforms in taxes and spending could be fully reflected in our national accounts.

The president will have to yield on some points. He will have to yield on his request for $231 billion in defense spending this year and $264 billion next year. In his message, he said cheerily that "everyone's tax rates must be reduced." He will have to yield on that pretty prospect, too. But Congress also must yield in such areas as civilian retirement benefits, Medicare, Medicaid, farm subsidies and other entitlement programs. Such compromise will be painful, but if they are achieved through bipartisan agreement, the political pain will be widely shared. Gentlemen, get thee to the bargaining table!

Balance needed in use of Idaho water

In his guest opinion in the Jan. 27 issue of your paper, the public information specialist for Idaho Power Co. appears to have overlooked some of the history written by his company. It is admitted that the power company subordinated its water rights for hydropower generation at Hells Canyon to upstream development. However, the implication is that the subordination for upstream growth and development only extended to Swan Falls. History would indicate that Idaho's originally intended subordination of its hydropower rights to upstream development all the way up the Snake River.

Sen. (then-governor) Len B. Jordan insisted that the power company subordinate its water rights at Hells Canyon to development all the way upstream as a condition for being allowed to build the dams on the Hells Canyon. He knew that water would be needed for growth of our communities in Magic Valley and on up the river, for expanded agricultural development and for industrial and commercial growth. If the subordination were to extend only up to Swan Falls, it would be practically meaningless since there is little consumptive use between Swan Falls and Hells Canyon. Jordan had vision which allowed him to see into the next century and he would not have agreed to such limited subordination.

Idaho Power Co. certainly understood subordination to extend upstream past Swan Falls. R.P. "Pat" Parry, the pioneer Twin Falls water lawyer who represented Idaho Power in the Hells Canyon matter, appears to have agreed with Jordan. In testimony before Congress on the Hells Canyon legislation in 1952 he said, "In the case of the private power company and its low-head dams, there will no conflict (between hydropower and consumptive use) for the company, probably for selfish reasons, has taken the position that power water rights shall be subordinate to all upstream irrigation rights both present and future."

Indeed, Thomas E. Roach, former president of Idaho Power Co., testified before the Federal Power Commission in July, 1952, that: "Our company, for a period of 20 years or more has had a very firm and fixed policy of complete coordination of the use of the Snake River waters for the development of hydroelectric power with the needs of that water for irrigation and has followed the policy of always giving the use of that water for irrigation in the first position to the use of the water for hydroelectric development."

Thus, it seems that all parties were in agreement at the time of the Hells Canyon transaction that upstream development would have priority over hydropower generation in the use of the Snake River waters.

These people knew that Idaho's growth was dependent upon water, as evidenced by the fact that all of the major communities sprung up along the Snake River. They realized that water can be used for many purposes, such as irrigation, running plants, serving communities and generating hydroelectric power.

Memories grow short, however, and when the Idaho Supreme Court ruled in November, 1982 that the power company had an apparent unsubordinated water right at Swan Falls for 8,400 cubic feet per second, the power company started recalling the deal with Len Jordan in a somewhat different light.

Although all parties were surprised with the Supreme Court's decision and although the Snake River had been operated since the 1950s in a fashion which indicated that the power company's water rights were subordinate to upstream development, the power company began denying that there was ever a subordination deal. The written history, however, indicates otherwise.

Regardless of what happened, the fact is that subordination of hydropower rights is crucial to the future growth and development of the State of Idaho. If we expect to have a growing tax base,

Letters/Consolidation articles awaken public to Magic Valley schools

Small schools beneficial

Yes, school consolidation have awakened a public awareness of schools in the Magic Valley.

Trying changes to a sound educational policy is a strategy that pays off, but only if benefits and liabilities can be equally approached. People's feelings about their schools and what they want for their children should be considered.

In one of your articles a reference was made that a music teacher in Bliss was teaching a math class that he was not qualified to teach; you failed to mention, however, that the teacher in question had nine college credits in analytical geometry and calculus and taught a seventh grade math course.

With a lot of effort on the part of the administration, faculty and the community, a small school can offer a sound educational curriculum. The advantage of a 19 or 15 to one student-teacher ratio and a lot of individual attention will certainly be more beneficial to the average student academically than being lost in an overcrowded classroom of a large consolidated school.

Many experts have studied the problem of consolidation and are not convinced that it is the answer to school districts' problems. An article by Jonathan P. Sner in the American School Board Journal discusses some of the same problems we are now having in Idaho.

"Educational improvement and economic efficiency are real challenges, and schools of every size could benefit from efforts in this direction. But there is simply no basis for the belief that making a school bigger is likely to make it better."

He adds, "While some schools and districts can benefit economically or educationally from consolidating, such places are in a distinct minority." After 20 years of the experience with district consolidation, it is clear that consolidation has not lived up to the claims by its supporters. By and large, the benefits have been exaggerated and the liabilities simply ignored."

Small schools have produced generations of successful students who in turn have contributed to the economic health of their communities.

If we now face serious economic problems, let's hope that local school board members and state officials retain their good sense and resist the ill-advised push for school consolidation.

Student welfare put first

I am replying to Kathy A. Curtiss' letter of Feb. 6 and also adding some opinions of my own. First, it would be interesting to know just what her interest is in this problem since she is a resident of Twin Falls.

As to her hope that the people of Kimberly have learned a valuable lesson, I'm sure that in some election time, there will probably be two more people elected who are interested in the welfare of the students instead of keeping a superintendent around who is apparently opposed to upgrading the quality of education in our schools.

In an article in The Times-News dated Aug. 1, 1983, Mr. Powell is quoted as saying, "We all want an A-1 or A-2 curriculum in an A-3 school. We need to realize we can't have that. If I want to give them (my children) something that I know they (Kimberly schools) can't give, I've got to send them to Twin Falls or CSI."

This statement seems to indicate that Mr. Powell is satisfied with things as they are. Why not get busy and do something about the curriculum? Why should we have to go to the expense and trouble of transporting our children to Twin Falls when we could have a good school in Kimberly?

The present superintendent has already earned his retirement money for the sum being circulated. These allegations are untrue and are a disservice to the community and should be denied by the superintendent. The issue is education for our children not the furtherance of anyone's retirement.

It is time to return to the purpose of schools. Our children go to school to receive an education and the basis should be on what they need to live in order that they may get an education, not for the support of people who have lost sight of these facts.

We need a strong administrator who will implement the programs necessary to achieve these goals. Sports programs have a place but should not be a focal point.

How many people go on to play sports after high school? Very few, but everyone uses reading skills, writing, math and speech (oral and written). In these times a knowledge of the past as well as the present is a requisite. It seems that some parents as well as some administrators have lost sight of these things. I think parents do have the welfare of their children at heart but for some reason are not putting the right priorities on their children's activities.

The school years are only a small part of a person's lifetime and should be a preparatory time for life itself. If an education is not obtained at that time, the standard of living is low, the work is hard and a cycle of substandard living is established and the welfare rolls continue to swell.

Therefore, the three members of the school board who are trying to remedy the situation should be commended and receive the support of the parents and the community. They should not be subjected to the type of criticism written by Kathy Curtiss who is a resident of Twin Falls.

Eliminate all lies, deceit

There is no way that the home state of Mr. Reagan could cope with an outbreak of peace. If the $26 billion in military contracts were canceled tomorrow, California would be in a state of economic collapse.

claims to lead the world in its struggle for peace. The supply-side economics of this administration are not working and will continue to fail because its real a parasite feeding on itself, there is no like income, its all on paper.

Contrary to the squirrely statements coming out of the Hazelton area, Mr. Reagan is not sincere and the man has no humility whatsoever. Mr. Reagan's actions are directly responsible for the deaths of the people on KAL 007 and the bombing of the Marine compound in Beirut and I have seen no sign of remorse from him. He only identifies with the kind of things that make him out as a hero. The United States is the loser from this man's presidency. He has even given charisma a bad image.

We had everything going for us when this warmonger took office. All we had to do was keep a cool head.

Now we are going to have to learn to live with debt, death, rusty tanks, obsolete rifles, leaking battle wagons and enemies around the world.

Any one of the Democratic candidates running for election at this time would be a better president than the phony teleprompter and script reader we have in the White House today.

Since Mr. Young knows so much about the Russians, maybe he could tell us how many lives they sacrificed to stop the German's war machine at Leningrad, Kiev, Uman, etc. They turned World War II into a cake walk for us compared to what it would have been had they not helped us. The number is 18 million. I think we better stop the kind of blind, one track, narrow-minded, loyalty displayed by our friend in Hazelton and take a long clear look at the big picture and conduct ourselves accordingly.

Until we eliminate the lies and deceit in our very own government, the word peace will remain a pipe dream.

Undigestible brew cooking

The decision by the city council to eliminate two chief's jobs is the most head-headed, irresponsible act I've ever seen from any one group of so-called intelligent men... but I suspected it.

Overreacting, that might be the theory, when you see the quality of both the fire and police departments plummet because one completely loses a qualified leader and the other only gets the leader part-time. But wait, maybe the city council, which is quickly proving itself the worst we've ever had, will compute this travesty and trot in an outsider. Then both departments will lose morale, trust and any semblance of quality leadership.

Remember Chief McGowan, brought in from California to Jerome, who made a shambles of the Jerome Police Department? It is unimportant, but not alone. But did the city council consider these historic facts? No, they want to jeopardize the public safety both in the areas of fire and police protection to save a buck.

Although I don't believe it's to save a buck, I believe it's because this present council is staffed by men with ambition beyond their talents who wish to gain political leverage in this community.

In the present leadership, I have highly qualified individuals who have control and understanding of the men who serve them. This is vital, particularly in the field of law enforcement where criminals can walk away laughing if the police's initial investigations are muffed. And under a drastic change such as suggested, they will be.

And this business of carrying fire extinguishers so untrained cops can equipt little fires without knowing whether they might end up with a big one is courting disaster.

I say I suspected it? Yes, I knew election night that it wouldn't be long before this new batch of city duds started cooking up undigestible brew.

Public safety department given much thought

With regard to your editorial in Thursday's Times-News, you raised the point of the speed with which the city council made its decision to establish a Public Safety Department which would generally encompass the responsibilities and functions of both the police and fire departments.

The possibility of such a move was discussed by the council the latter part of 1983. Since that time the matter was reviewed with the appropriate members of top management of our city staff in order to get their input. Our city manager visited a city in Utah recently that has a combined Public Safety Department.

I know of no member of the city council that opposed the establishment of a Public Safety Department although one council member indicated a preference for more information and deliberation. I'm sure each member of the council gave the matter a considerable amount of thought and the vote to make this change was rather decisive.

The question of having a public hearing on this matter was raised in your editorial. Public hearings are mandated by the Idaho State Code for various city matters, such as the proposed city budget, zoning items and several other matters.

Public hearings do provide a possibility of input from the public which are welcomed by the council even though our budget hearings are usually attended solely by the council and news media.

However, if public hearings are held on every policy and management decision, our city government would not operate in a very efficient manner. I feel our city council is elected to make decisions such as this and, of course, every member of the council is available for input from the electorate.

The most important question to ask on this matter is not how fast we made the decision, but whether or not it was the correct decision. I believe time will reveal it was an excellent decision, and that when fully implemented, more service will be provided to the community at less cost, and without taking any benefits away from our employees.

Although public safety departments have been created in approximately 60 cities across the nation, Twin Falls will be the first city in Idaho to implement such a change. This should not be surprising because Twin Falls has always been out front and ahead of other Idaho cities in making progress. Look at our downtown area compared to others in Idaho. Citizens of Twin Falls led the way in the passage and implementation of industrial revenue bonds and our local junior college is an institution everyone can be proud of. Inasmuch as we just had three new councilmen take office last month, new ideas and some changes should be expected. I think our present city council can be considered collectively as progressive, decisive and dynamic. We are getting things done and I hope we can continue to make progress and not wait until next Christmas to do so. If anyone, including newspapermen, wished to have more input into policy matters of our city, and be where the action is, the next city council election will be Nov. 5, 1985. For more information on how to enter the contest, call the hottest number in town: 733-0860. We'll see you there.

Stick with Goldwater

On Wednesday morning Sen. Barry Goldwater was asked on television what he thought of the sudden pullout of our Marines from Lebanon. "I'd rather lose a litterface than lose a million men," he said. I agree and so do millions of Americans, I am sure, of all parties. Henry Kissinger and columnist George Will keep insisting that the president should keep our Marines in Lebanon, and strongly disagree with him. Who elected these two men to any office? No one. Let's go with President Reagan and Sen. Goldwater. They have always put America first.

Thanks for listening

This is in answer to Dick Manning's article on Feb. 5.

We would first like to thank Mr. Manning for listening to us, very few people do. None of the teenagers we know are apathetic. We voice our opinions. It's just that no one seems to care how we feel. They think just because we're teenagers, we don't know that we're talking about.

Well, we're not little kids, we're young adults. Which brings us to our second point. We don't appreciate being called "whelps" or "nippers," we respect it very much.

We don't care about changing your opinion about Boy George. We only want the chance to voice ours. Adults always criticize idiots of teenagers.

When my mom was young, it was the Beatles. They were criticized for their hairstyle and the way they dressed and then Elvis for the way he shook his hips. For my grandmother, it was Frank Sinatra and the way he swooned. I only hope when we have kids of our own, we'll remember.

College out of reach

The charging of "fees" at Idaho universities is ostensibly for the purpose of defraying a portion of the cost of maintenance, upkeep, utilities, etc.

Your presumption that if tuition is charged the fees would be reduced is probably without basis. If my reading of the articles in your newspaper is correct, the imposition of tuition would be for the purpose of defraying a portion of the cost of "academic" activities such as increased academic staff, providing for salary increases, more equipment and an expanded curriculum. The imposition of tuition, therefore, can in no way reduce the requirement for fees.

Many of the young people of our state are already having difficulty paying the fees. The imposition of tuition in addition to fees would put attendance at one of our universities beyond their means.

While the quality of higher education might be improved, it would be improved for the lesser number of students who could afford the increased cost at the expense of those who could not afford to attend.

adequate water supplies for expanding communities, new jobs and tax base from water-utilizing plants and industry and the other growth that is necessary to provide us with a vigorous economy, there is going to have to be some water available.

If the power company is allowed to tie up the main stream of the Snake River so that 8,400 cfs can flow through its Swan Falls generators and out to the Columbia River, it cannot have fulfilled our responsibility to future generations. But, on the other hand, we cannot and should not allow excessive depletion of flows for hydropower generation and should take into account the effect of new development on hydrogeneration.

In other words, there needs to be a balance in the future use of our water resource. We cannot allow the power company to lock up our water for the single purpose of hydropower generation, neither can we allow our water resources to be locked up for any other single purpose.

In order to have balanced growth, Idaho needs to apply a wise multiple use policy for its scarce water resources. That is why Gov. Evans and I have proposed legislation (House Bill 458) which would subordinate hydropower generation to upstream development. However, we propose that a balancing test be applied to all future water permit applications to insure that hydrogeneration is not unduly impacted. We believe that this will provide water for necessary future development of southern Idaho but will also insure relatively low-cost power. If the water is tied up by the power company, which does not have to be accountable to public needs and demands, there is no assurance that such a balanced use approach will prevail.

Yachtsman called a 'patsy' for Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty accused former Olympic yachtsman Julian Roosevelt Wednesday of serving as a "patsy" for Soviet interests in a dispute over whether the radio stations could cover the Winter Olympics at Sarajevo, Yugoslavia.

New York investment banker, in protesting the denial of press credentials to 11 journalists the stations have assigned to the games. The stations, once covertly funded by the CIA, get $100 million a year in congressional appropriations to broadcast to Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union from transmission towers in Munich, West Germany. Buckley said the action represented "a collapse of political spine, because the Soviet bloc campaign to attack the radios through the Olympic Committee goes back more than a dozen years. The dispute pits members of two prominent families. Buckley is a brother of conservative writer William F. Buckley and once served in the Senate as a Conservative Party member from New York. Roosevelt won a Gold Medal for yachting in the 1952 Olympics and is a son of the Theodore Roosevelt family. Buckley flew to Washington from Munich to protest the decision at a news conference. Roosevelt said in Sarajevo that his role was limited to casting his vote in a unanimous decision by the Olympic committee board. He said Radio Free Europe had turned down "a very fine solution" under which five of its people would be given press credentials.

Salvadoran soldiers battle rebels for two hours

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — About 1,000 government troops pushed into a northwest area Thursday in search of leftist guerrillas who killed 39 soldiers a day earlier, local military sources said.

In eastern El Salvador, meanwhile, soldiers and rebels fought for two hours Wednesday night on the northern edge of the city of Usulután, a provincial capital 68 miles east of San Salvador, civilians there said. A three-hour battle was reported during the night five miles to the east in the area of Concepcion Batres.

Troops fanned out in northern La Libertad province, southeastern Santa Ana and southwestern Chulatenango, according to sources at the military post at El Paisanal, 24 miles north of San Salvador. All three areas have been targets of recent guerrilla attacks.

Col. Ricardo Cienfuegos claimed 29 of the 39 troops who died early Wednesday at Hacienda Aticoayo, 37 miles northwest of the capital, were killed "after they had surrendered." He said they included 23 soldiers and six civil defense patrolmen.

"Some of the soldiers were executed, but not all of them," a civilian in the area said. Reporters who traveled to the area said six of the bodies had bullet wounds in the head and the rest had been shot in the torso.

The U.S.-backed Salvadoran government formally protested an expression of "moral support" for the Salvadoran rebels by Nicaraguan Planning Minister Henry Ruiz. Ruiz is one of nine directors of the Sandinista National Liberation Front, the leftist government's political organization.

Soviets dock with space station

MOSCOW (AP) — Three cosmonauts guided their spacecraft to a successful docking with the Salyut-7 space station Thursday to become the fifth crew to visit the Soviet Union's orbiting research complex.

The official news agency Tass said the Soyuz T-10 docked with Salyut-7 at 5:43 p.m. (9:43 a.m. EST) — 26 hours and 36 minutes after their liftoff Wednesday from the Baikonur cosmodrome in Soviet central Asia. Pilot Leonid Kizim, engineer Vladimir Soloyev and cardiologist Oleg Atkov restarted the space station's life support systems, removed their space suits and entered the orbiting laboratory, Tass said.

There now are a record eight men in space — the three Soviets and five Americans — aboard the Challenger space shuttle.

The main Soviet television evening news program showed film of the three cosmonauts floating in Salyut-7's brightly lit interior.

Russians covet U.S. labels

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet newspaper said Thursday it had uncovered a state enterprise — manufacturing shopping bags bearing the Marlboro cigarette logo, and suggested the case may be just part of a blossoming copycat business for Russians who love Levi's and Fruit of the Loom.

Soviet authorities have long campaigned against "firnichki" — the people who buy or sell goods with Western brand names. The word is a Russian adaptation of the English word "firm." Some articles have made fun of firnichki who apparently without understanding English wear T-shirts or sun visors emblazoned with phrases such as "I'm flipped out" or sew Fruit of the Loom underwear labels on shirt pockets.

Last spring, Komsomolskaya Pravda, the newspaper of the Young Communist League, reported that a factory in the Siberian city of Krasnoyarsk was mass-producing Levi Strauss jeans buttons, leather labels and other "doodads."

Sovetskaya Iostsiya said the case of a public services enterprise in Istra, near Moscow, came to light when a writer saw a table set up near a Moscow subway station and stacked with plastic bags carrying the Marlboro cigarette logo.

"They sold quickly, for one and a half rubles (about $2.10) each," it said. The writer saw a label of the Istra collective and decided to visit the plant. Planning chief Tamara I. Lebedev received the writer.

"Marlboro plastic bags? It cannot be," she was quoted as saying. The official claimed the plant had made bags with Misha the smiling bear, symbol of the 1980 Olympics held in Moscow.

The writer spoke to Sergei V. Bushlyko, chief of the Istra department of daily public services.

"Yes, we were manufacturing Adidas and Marlboro bags," he said, "so to say for better realization of production. But this manufacture has been stopped and (Istra) was banned from, so to say, advertising goods of Western firms."

"As one can see," the newspaper said, "overseas labels tantalized the heads of the Istra department of public daily services... In the chase for easily fulfilling their (production) plan they blessed the enterprise to manufacture those questionable bags."

Komsomolskaya Pravda described last spring how the goods of the state enterprise General-Consumer-Products-Production-Association were being hawked in a booth outside Krasnoyarsk's central department store.

"Hey, young fellow, don't pass us by: You there, the girl with the madonna's face, don't put too much faith in looks alone. Even if you were born in a hamlet with the unassuming name of Kozulka, you can still adorn your clothes with Levi Strauss buttons. This will give your appearance an overseas refinement."

The walls of Fred Locke's home hold awards and memories from 55 years of involvement with the Boy Scouts

Scouting: 55-year lifestyle for Locke

By CHRISTOPHER WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Memorabilia and awards from a long-time association with the Boy Scouts of America adorn the Main Street office of 55-year Scouting veteran Fred Locke of Gooding.

At his home are more awards and a nearly complete library of Scouting manuals.

Scouting is not just an organization of the 69-year-old Locke has affiliated with over the years. It has been — and continues to be — a way of life.

For 55 of Scouting's 74 years of existence, Locke has in some way been involved with the Boy Scouts. When he was 12, he became a Scout simply because his older brothers were in Scouting.

Since then, Locke has served the Boy Scouts in different capacities, including junior assistant Scoutmaster, as Scoutmaster of several troops, in an advisory status and finally, working on the district level for the Snake River Boy Scout Council.

In addition to working in these ways, Locke has attended seven national jamborees, has been on a "high-adventure" canoeing trip in northern Minnesota and was Scoutmaster of a visiting troop to the world jamboree in Farragut, Idaho, in 1967.

The awards Locke has won are numerous, but among the most notable are the Eagle Scout award, the Scoutmaster's Key, for involvement as a leader and completion of a leadership program; and the Silver Beaver award, which is Scouting's highest honor for community service.

Locke attributes his long-time marriage with Scouting to a "love for kids," and he says it "is always a challenge."

"Young boys, by their very nature, are inquisitive and aggressive, and most of them do not have preconceived ideas or hang-ups. We adults are so set in our ways. It is refreshing to work with these enthusiastic boys."

Locke also credits his association with the Boy Scouts with helping him retain his youth and making him a better person.

"The kids' enthusiasm is contagious and it allows me to keep a youthful attitude.

"The Scouting tradition is idealistic in that it combines all of the Christian teachings along with the practical knowledge of everyday living," he says. "I could give innumerable examples of where my Boy Scout training came to my rescue."

Although Locke says Scouting generally has kept up with the times in its quest to make young men better citizens, he blames technology — and television in particular — for stifling, somewhat, boys' development.

"Kids today spend so much time playing video games and watching television, I think it really inhibits their creativeness and inventiveness. I

County views merit-pay plan

Evaluation test goes to workers

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County commissioners are ready to begin a policy of merit-pay increases for county employees.

Thursday, the commissioners submitted a proposed evaluation form to all county employees.

The commissioners plan to have all elected officials and department heads use the form to divide future salary increases on the basis of efficiency, rather than years on the job.

The form, which will be completed annually for each employee by the elected officials and department heads, is the final step in a reform campaign begun last spring, says Commissioner Judy Felton.

First came a comprehensive personnel policy and a file of written job descriptions.

Then came a 15 percent across-the-board pay increase, designed to lift Twin Falls' salaries to the approximate level of Idaho counties of similar size.

The merit-pay system first was announced in July. Felton says it will go into effect as soon as employees have had a chance to look it over and comment on it. She hopes the first round of evaluations may be completed before the county budget is set late in this summer.

The public should "be able to see, over a period of time, that jobs in the courthouse are being performed more efficiently," Felton says.

Merit-pay systems often raise the fear of favoritism. And the 190 full- and part-time county employees have no employee grievance commission, as does the city of Twin Falls.

But Felton says employees should feel free to air any grievance in front of the commissioners. In addition, if an employee "needs improvement" or is "above average," specific examples have to be given, she says.

Among other things, the form asks whether an employee possesses an understanding and sincere interest in his or her job.

It also asks whether an employee is polite and considerate, loyal, friendly (the cheerful, punctual, tactful, trustworthy, open to criticism and suggestions — and conservative — in using supplies).

And it asks whether an employee can deal with emergencies, is willing to accept extra work, has a good job description and is enjoyable to work with.

Felton says other elected officials reviewed the proposal earlier in the week. Some said they hope the evaluation process will open new lines of communication, she says.

"I don't know if there is a lack of it (communication) now, but I think it (the evaluation process) will be better, because it forces a person to sit down alone with an employee or a supervisor," she says.

Felton says the deviation between employees performing the same job will not be large under the new

Standout teacher ignored tradition

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls High School will close its doors this afternoon to honor the teacher students voted their favorite, year after year.

Delores Dudley, a teacher at the high school for 29 years and head of the English department, died Tuesday from cancer. Students will be dismissed shortly before 1 p.m., so they and the teachers can attend the funeral this afternoon.

The students say Dudley was popular because, unlike typical English teachers who are caught up with rules and form, she bucked convention. Or at least it seemed that way.

"If kids wanted to leave class in the middle of the period or be tardy, she let them," English teacher Connie Woebbe said Wednesday. "At first, they would take advantage of her. But after awhile, they got so caught up with what was happening in class that they wanted to stay. She thought they needed to discover the rules themselves and why they were there."

"She was really cool, easy-going," said senior Tim Crossman. "She let students do their own thing as long as they got their work done."

With such a policy, her classroom more often than not seemed chaotic, Woebbe said. "But it wasn't. It was energy, rampant energy. She wanted each student learning in his own way."

And she got results. Dudley received letters from Utah State University, University of Kansas and Harvard University writing teachers, congratulating her on the quality of her former students' writing, Woebbe said.

Part of her success came from assignments that seemed more fun than work, Woebbe said, like writing a letter to someone who could not answer it. Students would write reams in response to her assignments, revealing their innermost thoughts.

In 1982, Dudley told a Times-News reporter: "If they do something they like, they'll want you to see it, even if it's a graphic description of their last date."

Students learned to express themselves creatively. And since Dudley did not grade writing on technical points, most students took responsibility for their own grammar and spelling, and did a credible job, Woebbe said.

"It wasn't an attitude that, you were going to learn whether or not you wanted to," senior Richard Smith said. "The way she ran the class made you want to learn."

Airline failure leaves behind worthless tickets

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The abrupt demise of Pacific Express has left some Magic Valley travelers holding worthless tickets and travel agencies holding valueless coupons.

But the ripple effects from the airline's retreat into bankruptcy generally have been limited in the Magic Valley, despite substantial use of Pacific Express as a connection through Boise to the West Coast, area travel agents say.

"A lot of people would go to Boise . . . and they (Pacific Express) were about the only thing going to Portland," says Osburn Salisbury, an agent for Magic Carpet Travels in Twin Falls. "We sold a lot of tickets."

On Feb. 3, Pacific Express shut down all service, and its parent company, Pacific Express Holding Co., based in Chico, Calif., filed for reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws.

The airline, which had acquired a reputation as a discount carrier, had taken a fourth-quarter loss of $1.7 million and a total loss for 1983 of $12 million.

"It was a decision by management of the company, and that decision was based on losses attributable to diminishing traffic, because of competitive action by other airlines," airline spokesman Rich Kerley said this week.

Some carriers, such as Horizon Air and Cascade Airways, honored Pacific Express tickets for a few days to help stranded travelers get home. Others, such as Wien Air Alaska and Horizon, beefed up service to cover routes that Pacific Express had flown, such as the one between Boise and Portland.

However, a number of passengers who had made reservations in advance still were stuck with worthless tickets. Travel agencies — along with some of their customers — also had purchased advance coupons for discount fares on Pacific Express routes.

Jim Skeahan, the owner of Epic Travel in Halley, says he was caught with 30 of the $69, reduced-fare

Man fined $250 for fatally injuring teenager

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Donald E. Yragui was given a year's probation and fined $250 Thursday for fatally injuring a Twin Falls teenager last fall when he struck her with his car.

The sentence, ordered by Fifth District magistrate Judge Charles Brumback, followed the recommendations of Fritz Wonderlich, the Twin Falls city attorney.

Under a plea-bargain arrangement, the prosecution had suggested probation, a fine and a 60-day suspended jail sentence in exchange for Yragui's guilty plea to a misdemeanor charge of vehicular manslaughter.

Yragui, 35, of Route 4, Twin Falls, struck Sheila Dawn Smith, 14, as she was walking in the 200 block of Orchard Drive West, on the evening of Sept. 27. Smith died later at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Yragui said Thursday that he had not seen Smith or her companion, who was walking off the road. "It was too late when we did notice them," he said.

According to the police investigation, Wonderlich said at the sentencing hearing, that Yragui was driving more than 40 mph in a 25 mph zone when the accident occurred.

Wonderlich said that Twin Falls police agreed with his recommendation for Yragui, who was taking a full year's probation. Although a death had resulted from the accident, there had been no "gross negligence" on Yragui's part, Wonderlich said.

In addition, Yragui had stopped at the scene and attempted to help the girl.

Yragui's attorney, Leon Smith of Twin Falls, asked for leniency.

"When a person exceeds the speed limit, he should be charged with speeding, not a criminal charge," Smith told Brumback.

Only cases of severe negligence should be reserved for criminal prosecution, Smith said. Cases of simple negligence should be left to the civil courts.

Water tank almost finished

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

FILER — Filer's new $20,000-gallon water tank should be in operation in two weeks.

On Wednesday, a subcontractor, Rocky Mountain Harvestore of Twin Falls, finished constructing the bottom of the steel shell on the 28-foot-high tower, located on the southern edge of the city.

An aluminum dome, which will be assembled on the ground and hoisted with a crane to top off the tower, was delivered Thursday.

Once the tank is ready, city engineer Scott Bybee says it will take about a week to change the municipal water system over from the old, rusting water tank.

"So far, it's gone smoothly, other than the weather," Bybee says.

In addition to the new water tower, three of the city's four wells will be tied into the tank on an automatic system.

Each night, the main booster pump at the tank site will fill the tank, so it is full by 5 a.m. the next morning.

The self-monitoring system will be a big help, Bybee says, to the city's maintenance crew, which has had to regulate the wells manually.

"We're hoping to take that nightmare off his (the maintenance supervisor's) shoulders."

The glass-lined steel tank is being funded with a $46,700 grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, administered through the state Division of Economic and Community Affairs.

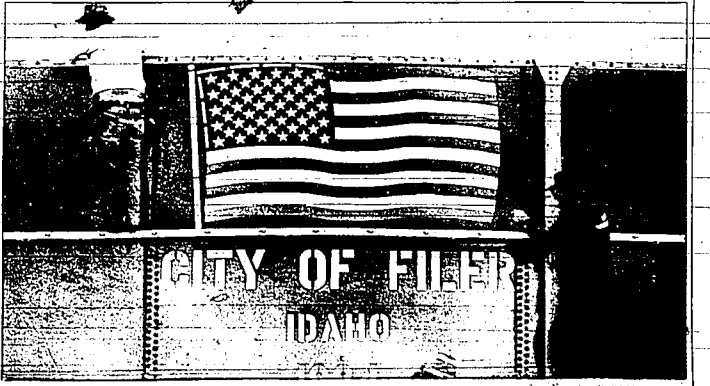

But since it has cost less than expected to build the tank, Bybee says there will be enough money left over to replace water lines on Stevens Street and Fair Avenue, and build new lines around the elementary school, so fire hydrants can be added.

Watching the water tower go up, Pifer officials have come up with some plans of their own for the curved tank, which is 62 feet in diameter.

The inside of the tank, "would make a great roller skating rink," Bybee said recently at a City Council meeting.

"Let's extend the ladder on the tank, and we'll have a heck of a high dive," said Councilman Ron Stokesherry. But the mayor had other ideas.

Replying to a suggestion to christen the tank with a bottle of champagne, he said, "Let's just break it and drink the bottle."

Despise dry spell, it's still wet

TWIN FALLS — Snow depths in the South Hills continued to run well above normal at the beginning of the month, despite a record dry spell. According to statistics compiled by the Twin Falls Soil Conservation District, Magic Mountain reported a snow depth of 67 inches on Feb. 7. This amount of snow contained 24.6 inches of water, 186 percent of normal. Other South Hills measuring sites reported similar record or near-record figures. A headline figure showed 71 inches of snow, Goat Creek and Hole Creek had 20 inches, Coachman Basin 184 inches and Langford Flat Creek had 34 inches. Together, all South Hills snow courses stood at a percentage of normal at the beginning of the month, with some as high as 211 percent of normal.

History group to meet Monday

TWIN FALLS — The South Central Idaho History Council will hold its first bi-monthly meeting of the year next Monday, Feb. 13, in the student conference room of the Taylor Administration Building at the College of Southern Idaho. In the last year, the group considered several directions and decided the group's main purpose should be to serve as a resource for researchers of area history, says Jim Gentry, a speaker for the group. This determination has led to a decision to hold bi-monthly meetings, the purpose of which will be to share information and suggestions, Gentry says. Anyone interested in the history of the Magic Valley or who is engaged in historical research is encouraged to attend the meeting, Gentry says. For more information, call Gentry or Jim Woods at 733-9554.

CSI speech team wins honor

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho forensics squad returned this week from a tournament at Central Arizona College in Coolidge, Ariz., with a first-place trophy in readers theater competition. Fran Tanner, who directed the group, says the CSI team competed against teams from 10 colleges and several large universities. The cast of "The Shell Game" presentation was composed of Boone Wright, of Kimberly, Patty Smales of Elko, Brian Denny of Rupert, Cherie Miltenberger and Kevin Labrum, both of Twin Falls. Helen Thuston of Jerome was in the finals for impromptu speaking. YFCA will hold 'overnighter'

Parents can drop their children off at 7:30 this evening at the YFCA, at 1751 Elizabeth Blvd. in Twin Falls. The children must be picked up Saturday morning by 9.

During their stay, the children will participate in gym, hockey, tumbling, football, free video games, swimming and a movie. A dinner snack and light breakfast will be provided. The fee is $5 per child, and the event is open to the public. Children should bring a towel, swimsuit and sleeping bag. For more information or to register, call 733-4384.

PTSO to host pancake supper

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly Parent-Teacher-Student Organization will hold its annual pancake supper and art show from 5 to 8 p.m. Monday in the elementary school cafeteria. During the supper, a drawing will be held for a Cabbage Patch doll. Teachers and parents will do the cooking. The menu will consist of pancakes, eggs, hashbrowns, ham, coffee, milk and juice, says Marie Ecker, a PTSO spokesperson. Tickets are $10 a family, or $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for children 8 and under.

CSI to mark vocational week

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho is inviting the public to come to the school to celebrate National Vocational Education Week, starting Monday. Orval Bradley, CSI's vocational-technical dean, says he wants the public to have a chance to talk with students and teachers, and observe classes to learn more about the programs offered. A new project — raising tropical fish, catfish and freshwater fish in warm water from the college's geothermal well — should be ready in time for the open house, Bradley says. And the college will be displaying a new mobile computer lab at the Blue Lakes Mall today and Saturday and again next Thursday and Friday. The unit, which is filled with computer equipment, will be used to give workshops across the Magic Valley.

'Country-swing' lessons offered

Convict faces local rape charge

TWIN FALLS — A man accused of raping a Twin Falls woman last fall was bound over Thursday to Fifth District Court.

Richard Ray Bradley, 34, already is serving a 30-month sentence in the state penitentiary for an attempted rape in Ada County.

Bradley was brought to Twin Falls on Thursday for a preliminary hearing on the rape charge he faces here. According to the complaint, Bradley allegedly broke into an apartment off Third Avenue West on Nov. 17 and raped a woman, after threatening her and her small child. At the time of the incident, Bradley was free on bond, awaiting sentencing for the Ada County case.

During the preliminary hearing, the victim told the stand, Vern Cox of Twin Falls, a neighbor of the victim who allegedly saw Bradley earlier that day, also was called by the prosecution, according to court records.

Defense attorney Mike Powers did not call any witnesses at the hearing, which lasted less than an hour.

Magistrate Judge Mel Edwards bound Bradley over to district court for further prosecution on the case. Bradley also has been charged with burglary in connection with the Twin Falls case.

Planning begins for Western Days

TWIN FALLS — Planning has begun for this year's Western Days, to be held in Twin Falls the week following Memorial Day, May 29 to June 3.

Western Days committee co-chairman Jerry Benton says his plans for the event, which was started last year, will be similar to last year's, he says.

A parade is planned for Saturday, the Junior States Western Rodeo for Friday and Saturday, and a barbeque and jamboree for either Saturday or Sunday. Other members of the Western planning ... and we would like people's help and support," Benton says. The schedule of events, which will be similar to last year's, he says.

Days committee are: co-chairman Wesley Gates, Chuck Brown, Doug Johnson, Gina Brooks, Gordon Curtis, Chris Harvey, Steve Brodich, Jeff Crumrine, Marco Reitz, Sandy Thomas, Burnie Carlson and Rick Strickland. Benton says anyone interested in helping should call the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce office, or 734-5838.

Travel agents have been able to find little more than to tell their customers to "hold on for a while, until we can find out what's going to happen to the airline," says Janice Marana, an agent with Sun Valley Travel at Sun Valley, says.

At Magic Carpet Travels, Salisbury offers some hope for his agency's customers getting their money back. Magic Carpet is trying to refund unused tickets by taking advantage of a processing fee at the air industry's clearinghouse, the Air Traffic Conference, he says.

Those passengers may have to wait until Pacific Express clears bankruptcy, Kerley says. He advises passengers holding tickets to send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Pacific Express headquarters, to obtain a form that will put them on the list of creditors. In the meantime, the airline is negotiating to find financing to get back in the air, he says. Pacific Express resumed charter operations from Las Vegas this week.

Through the years, there have been many lasting experiences, but the one that remains most engraved in Locke's mind was a trip to the Charles L. Sommers Canoe Base. On this trip, participants were required to carry all of their own food and spend one week canoeing through the forest lands of northern Minnesota.

Travel agents such as Peggy Holtz, the owner of Sawtooth Mountain Travel at Ketchum, also want the airline to return to business. "I'm just hopeful that they will fly (again) and honor the tickets," Holtz says. The airline offered a low-price alternative to travelers.

Smith said he does not really enjoy English, but he enjoyed the literature class he took from Dudley.

And Dudley seemed to enjoy teaching those students who were not always the most enthusiastic. "She kind of liked the rebels better than the straight-A students," Weeks said. "You could tell she liked the ramblerousers."

Stuart was not the only student who thought of Dudley as a friend. "A lot of times when someone needed help, not just with school work but with a problem, they would go to her," senior Shauna Jones said. "She always took the kids' side," Weeks said. "She was one of the old-time teachers who taught for the love of teaching."

Nevada accident injures two men

JACKPOT — Two Washington state men are injured in a one-car accident early Thursday morning, nine miles south of Jackpot, on U.S. 93.

Lawrence Melasae, 20, of Kirkland, Wash., was reported in critical condition Thursday evening at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls. Melasae's passenger, Daniel Hogan, 21, of Redmond, Wash., was treated at the hospital and released.

The accident occurred at 8:15 a.m., as Melasae was driving north on the highway, according to an Nevada Highway Patrol officer. The vehicle left the road, went down a dirt embankment and got overturned. Melasae was ejected, he said.

Revision sought in resort-town tax bill

BOISE (AP) — Members of the House Revenue and Taxation Committee say they want to revise a bill that would give resort towns local-option taxing power.

Sun Valley Mayor Ruth Leider said the bill would not change the total amount of tax available to the city, but would change the way it's collected.

"We're not asking more money, and I hope that's music to your ears," she said.

She said desk clerks have a hard time explaining to tourists why an 11.5 percent tax is added to their room bills.

But, Rep. Gordon Hillfield, R-Jerome, said he fears approval of the resort plan could be the first step toward granting all Idaho cities local-option taxing authority. That could set up unfair competition between communities that have those taxes and neighboring towns that do not, he said.

However, Rep. Robert Forrey, R-Nampa, said all cities should have the choice of imposing local sales taxes with voter approval. Competition is the lifeblood of the free-enterprise system and would not set up unfair advantages among cities, he said.

Coeur d'Alene city administrator Gene McAdams told the committee his city of 21,000 usually has 2,500 tourists — increasing demand for services such as police protection.

He said the local-option tax would be an effort to spread the tax burden on those demanding the services.

INEL officials say the pond will help reduce the amount of waste entering the aquifer until a long-term solution can be found.

The conversion to the seepage pond was praised by government officials, but environmentalists called the move a political act, and said pollution of the aquifer will continue.

Gov. John Evans, who attended the ceremonies, said the switch was a "milestone in radiation waste management" and a milestone in federal and state relations.

Rep. Rachel Gilbert, R-Boise, said the measure could open the way for too many towns to declare themselves resort areas to get tax benefits. The taxing authority proposed in the bill would be limited to cities under 55,000, and sponsors said that was intended to cover Coeur d'Alene.

Panel rejects change in school-bond elections

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News Capitol Bureau

BOISE — A House committee on Thursday gave no support to a proposed constitutional amendment that would allow school bond issues to be approved by a simple majority of the voters.

The House Education Committee, in a unanimous vote, rejected the proposal, which was presented by the Idaho School Board Association.

Presently, bond issues must receive a two-thirds majority to pass.

Bob Jones, the superintendent of the Lakeland School District in northern Idaho, told the committee that his district has been frustrated in its attempts to finance building improvements for the district's growing enrollment.

The district's bond-issue attempts often have been defeated in elections where a majority of the voters have been in favor of the bonds, he said.

"Persons who vote 'No' have twice the power of persons who vote 'Yes,'" Jones said. "It promotes rule by minority."

Jones said school bond-issue elections should be regulated with "the same degree of fairness" as other forms of public decision-making.

But Rep. Ernest Hale, R-Burley, a member of the committee, said a simple majority would be a fair margin if only property owners were allowed to vote.

Although Rep. Donna Scott, R-Twin Falls, joined with other committee members in opposing the proposal, she said she saw some potential conflict between the requirements for school-district consolidation elections to succeed and elections for bond issues.

She said the Kimberly, Hansen and Marlaugh school districts might decide to consolidate into one district, based on the vote of a simple majority — more than 50 percent of the voters. But the resulting district might not be able to muster the 66.7 percent of the votes needed to pass a bond issue to build a facility to house all of the students, she said.

Such a situation could hamper consolidation, she said.

The committee did approve for introduction another school-funding proposal. With only Scott dissenting, the committee gave preliminary approval to a proposal that would allow school districts to seek three-year maintenance and operations property-tax levies.

Bills address toxic waste

BOISE (AP) — The Legislature — reacting to public concerns over hazardous waste — Thursday advanced three bills that would tighten the state's control over waste transported across or disposed of in Idaho.

The House passed a bill that would allow the state to impose stricter rules than the federal government on waste shipments and disposal.

A Senate committee, meanwhile, voted to introduce two of four waste regulation bills.

But measures to make sure employees are informed about the hazards of substances they handle, and rewarding informants who disclose hazardous waste violations, did not win introduction in the Senate Health, Education and Welfare Committee.

The House bill, which passed on a 40-26 vote, marks a reversal of the position the Legislature took just a year ago. The measure was recommended by a special legislative committee formed to investigate problems with waste disposal at Enviroserve Services Inc.'s dumps in Owyhee County.

The Enviroserve facility at Grand View has been fined by the EPA for violations of certain hazardous waste regulations.

The House bill now goes to the Senate for consideration. It does not name any specific restrictions to be imposed, but would clear the way for them.

Battle brews over claims on intellect

By ROGER GILLOTT
AP Business Writer

LOS ANGELES — A professor of computer sciences has been working all day on a knotty problem. He goes home, frustrated, and at the dinner table the answer suddenly hits him. He's elated; he's found his solution. But is it his?

Or does it belong to his university? Millions of dollars are riding on questions like this, and the issue of "intellectual property" has led to skirmishing between universities and faculty.

As rapid changes in technology offer to shower riches on those who can stay one step ahead, some universities and researchers are taking a close look at updating long-standing rules on their professors' involvement in businesses.

The nine-campus University of California hopes to have a new Council on Intellectual Property — composed of faculty and administrators — operating within the next few months.

The council, which replaces the university's Board of Patents, will try to sort out such issues as when a professor's time is his own and when it is the university's, as well as how much involvement professors can have with business.

Among the other institutions reviewing or revising policies toward intellectual property are Stanford University, the California Institute of Technology, Yale University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"When a professor comes up with an idea at the dinner table, is it his or his employer's?" said Jack Brown, a Phoenix, Ariz., attorney who is an authority on "intellectual property."

"Perhaps a convention will be worked out to split the baby," he said, "and everybody will be happy."

At Yale University in New Haven, Conn., Roger C. Schank, chairman of the computer sciences department, said attempts by some universities to restrict professors' business involvement may be short-sighted.

"When you are sitting on a new technology like computers, you don't want to force brilliant professors to make a choice between teaching and business," said Schank.

In general, universities permit professors to be consultants to businesses or to serve on boards of businesses, but prohibit them from holding operating positions, on grounds that they are time-consuming and distract professors from their academic roles.

Computer scientists, like professors who write books, find their work falls under copyright law, instead of federal patent regulations that have traditionally guided ownership of scientific inventions, including those coming from genetic engineering research.

"Someone can write a book, and that's his," said Dennis Meredith, spokesman for the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena, Calif.

"But if he writes a book and puts a floppy (computer) disc in it, then it's another matter."

Stephen Wolfram, a 24-year-old physicist, and Brian K. Reid, a computer scientist, represent different ends in the dispute.

Wolfram defected two years ago from the California Institute of Technology to the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, N.J., after a bitter dispute with Caltech over ownership of a computer program that Caltech spokesman Tom Branigan said is designed to manipulate very complicated algebraic expressions. Because of its speed, the program was believed to have commercial as well as scientific applications.

Classic books touted Library offering

"It is with books as with men — a very small number play a very great part."
Voltaire

BY ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls librarian David Spencer is hoping area residents will put aside their best sellers twice a month and dust off their set of Harvard Classics.

He plans to lead the first session of a reading and study group devoted to "Great Ideas: The Classics of Western Thought" Wednesday at 7 p.m. downstairs at the library.

The group will meet every other Wednesday following the introductory session, to discuss the ideas of one of history's "great thinkers," Spencer says.

A discussion of four of Plato's dialogues — and what they reveal about Socrates — is first on the agenda. At the next three meetings he plans to continue his look at ancient Greek thought with a discussion of Aristotle, a philosopher; Thucydides, who Spencer considers the world's greatest historian; and Plutarch, focusing on his studies of Lycurgus, Pericles, Alexander and Cicero.

The next four meetings would be devoted to ancient Rome with an emphasis on Cicero, Lucretius, Tacitus and Marcus Aurelius.

If readers are still interested, Spencer says he plans to advance from Rome to the Middle Ages and the Renaissance thinkers, eventually reaching 20th century thinkers like James Joyce and Ezra Pound.

It's a study Spencer is well qualified to lead, although he emphasizes he will only be leading discussions, not giving lectures.

In 1963 the fourth generation Idaho native enrolled in the Institute of European Studies at the University of Vienna, Austria. The next nine years he spent traveling through Europe as a "scholar gypsy."

Since returning to the United States in 1977, he says he spends all his free time reading carefully chosen works.

"Assuming a person can't read everything, they have to be increasingly selective," he says. "I've put lists together for years."

One of those lists includes about 80 writers who he believes were the most influential in developing the great ideas of western civilization. He has skinned the cream off that list to come up with a year's reading for the discussion group: 24 authors who represent classical thought through the mid-19th century.

He is trying to keep the sampling of each writer reasonable too, he says. Readers will need to read 100 to 200 pages for each class — no more than many now read in current fiction. And reading the classics is no more demanding than reading most best sellers, just more rewarding, he believes.

"One wonders what percentage of today's best sellers will still be read 1,000 or 2,000 years hence," he says.

Baritone Robert Newman, 32, has won regional voice honors, but he's eyeing tougher goals

Trying hard to make it

But his voice has competition

By GRANT J. HANSEN
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — Robert Newman is serious about singing — he has spent about $30,000 so far learning his craft and doesn't want to wake up one day feeling he didn't try hard enough to make it.

A University of Idaho graduate student in vocal performance, the 32-year-old Burley man recently won the District Metropolitan Western Audition for 1983 and was a finalist in the regional auditions in January.

The "district" competition includes Idaho, western Montana and eastern Washington and the regional area includes Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana and British Columbia.

Newman, who is a baritone and a University of Idaho master's degree candidate, said although he did not win the regional competition he feels he "came close." He said he and three other singers auditioning in Seattle, Wash., were asked to sing a third time. Of the four, two winners were selected, one a friend of Newman's.

"We performed in Boise together. He's age 35 and the age limit is 35. He had no more chances. I am 32, so I have three more chances," Newman says.

However, Newman says he is not sure if he will try again next year.

"At my age, the baritone voice is just beginning to have a mature and consistent quality. A baritone can sing into his late 60s or early 60s," he explains.

For several years, Newman has been studying vocal performance with Professor Dorothy Barnes at the University of Idaho. He is making a comeback from a 1981 skiing accident that pulled the muscles in this throat. The singer had to have surgery to remove the scar tissue.

"There was a 50-50 chance that I would never sing again," he says.

The surgery was successful, but it put him out of competition for more than a year.

"My goal is to sing opera or concert. Concert people don't pay much attention to you until you have sung opera," he says.

Although Newman says he enjoys living in Idaho, he says if he stays here, he won't get to sing as much because "not being accessible to a larger area. But he adds it would have to be a good opera to make him move some place else.

Newman sang a role in the recent Spokane symphony presentation of "La Traviata" and is planning to appear this spring in "Carmen" with the Boise Opera Company, a fourth appearance with the company.

"Carmen," which will be sung in English, will be held in the new Morrison Center on April 10 and 11.

In his career, Newman has performed in such operas as "The Merry Widow" at the University of Idaho, "Bohème" with the Spokane Opera Company and "Così Fan Tutti" with the Boise Opera Company.

He was a junior majoring in accounting at Utah State University when he became interested in music, having never sung before at all.

Newman says his sisters are both organists at a Methodist Church, and because they practiced in the evenings, he and his brother went with them to the church to practice.

One time when one of his sisters began playing "The Lord's Prayer," he started singing.

"She was quite surprised, stopped playing and asked me where I had gotten such a 'good voice,'" he recalls.

His sister told their mother of Newman's talent and she said she would pay for voice lessons if he would be willing to take them.

"I have taken them ever since. I just wish she would have agreed to pay for them indefinitely, because

Magic Valley Symphony heralds coming of age

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Symphony has come of age.

After a quarter-century of performing two concerts yearly for serious music lovers and giving people from all walks of life an opportunity to participate, the symphony has been accepted as a major cultural attraction in the area with a modest, but loyal, following.

And from among its membership come the volunteer musicians who fill the pit orchestras and stage bands that provide accompaniment for many of the dramatic and choral productions throughout the area.

The symphony will present a celebration concert at 8 p.m. Tuesday in observance of its 25th anniversary. The event will be held at the Fine Arts Auditorium in the College of Southern Idaho and will feature the symphonic composition of Lynette Hart of Halley.

When the symphony's first performance was given Nov. 24, 1959, in the old Vera O'Leary school auditorium, conductor Richard Smith was bursting with pride. Smith, then the director of the string program for the Twin Falls School District, long had dreamed of having a civic symphony, as the group was first called.

The small theater orchestra he gathered that spring to play for the first Dilettante production of "Carusell" served as the impetus for the formation of a permanent group. Smith, now retired, lives in Laredo, Texas.

"We started out on nothing but faith," recalls Jean Sutcliff of Twin Falls, who was business manager for the symphony's first 20 years in addition to playing first violin.

The first music was borrowed from the high school. Eighty patron tickets were sold that year at $15 each, providing a "nest egg" of $1,200, she says.

Patron ticket sales, first handled by a group of some 20 women, many of whom were Twin Falls Music Club members, always have.

"We always lived within our budget," Sutcliff says, adding with pride that government grants never have been needed.

But money aside, at first it was anyone's guess if enough adults who make a living at many other kinds of work during the day would continue to come to the weekly practices and make time for the necessary individual practicing.

But by the time Smith moved to California in 1963, the Twin Falls Civic Symphony was an established part of the cultural scene.

Del Slaughter, the present Twin Falls High School band director, was the next conductor. He continued the tradition of inviting professional musicians from the region to appear as soloists. The appearances were not lucrative; for years, the soloists received a $50 honorarium.

Billie Justice, Robert D. Wilson, Ross Miller and Larry Christopherson, all former Twin Falls residents, and the late Teall Bellini, Mrs. Lloyd Hamilton, Mrs. Charles Allen, Larry Curtis and Cathy Dudley, all of Twin Falls, were among those featured as soloists in the early years.

Mrs. Hamilton's son, David, of Jerome, who still plays with the group, was the first youth.

Galleries slate showings by artists of contrasting styles

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — Promising and established artists with a contrast of painting styles will be the fare at two Ketchum galleries Feb. 16 through March 25.

The Images Gallery, Fourth and Leadville in Ketchum, will show the work of contemporary realists, while at the same time across the street, the Sun Valley Center Gallery will highlight impressionist landscapes.

The two shows were planned as separate events. But both gallery organizers thought the two should be promoted jointly as a "nice blend" of works and as an extra special event, says Gail Severn, Images director and board member of the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities.

Severn says her show offers both young and well-known artists.

"All the artists are considered to be very good investments."

Some of the artists to be featured include John Stuart Ingle, Peter Loftus, Carolyn Brady and Sheila Gardner.

The show at Images will be educational and affordable, with prices ranging from $1,000 to $50,000, she says.

The subject matter of the 25 pieces she has selected for the show should be appreciated by Idaho buyers, Severn says. There are landscapes, cityscapes and still lifes.

The Images show has watercolors on paper done by realists. The realist form of painting is what its name implies. In some cases, the paintings look as real as a photograph.

The 30 or so works at the Sun Valley Center Gallery are oils on canvas. They were done by impressionists that were painted between 1850 and 1940 and even more contemporary California artists, says Kristin Poole, the gallery director. Impressionism is a revolutionary style that was born in France in the 1800s. Critics called it impressionism because they said it only was the "impression of painting," Poole says.

In Impressionist work, light and color are the essential elements, Poole says. The canvases are small because the artists wanted to capture a time of day.

The work of contemporary California Impressionist artists was chosen because it is "very hot," she adds. The demand and appeal for it are great. Poole adds that "it's nice that we can show it here and that people don't have to go to the coast to see it."

The California environment

seems conducive to the French style of painting, Poole says.

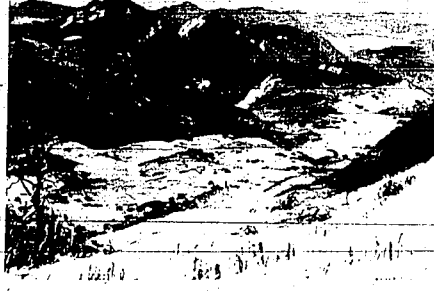

The work of Laddie John Dill, Theophilus Brown, Peter Alexander and Geoff Williams will be shown at the Sun Valley Center Gallery. Prices range from $1,200 to $35,000.

Both galleries are experienced at bringing big-name artists to the Wood River Valley. For this show, Severn visited some of the largest galleries in New York to find who was popular and who was promising. She also had the help of a local collector in selecting the artists and their works.

The Sun Valley Center was able to offer their exhibition through the generosity of a San Diego gallery, Poole says.

Together the show offer an exciting glimpse of contemporary work, Poole says.

"It's unusual that this quality of work is available in a small town."

When Newman decided he wanted to sing, it was too late to change his major at Utah State, so he finished his degree in accounting. After graduation he began taking voice lessons from Mary Walker in Twin Falls.

Walker told him if he wanted to be a serious vocalist, he needed to have a music education background, such as music theory, music history and foreign languages. She encouraged him to apply for admission to the San Francisco Conservatory of Music, he says.

Newman received a scholarship there and attended for two years. When he returned home he met and married Gara Barlow, who is from Burley.

He says his wife shares his interest in music and has a beautiful soprano voice.

"She wanted to go to law school, so I put her through law school and now she is helping me with my music studies," he says.

Newman graduated with a degree in music in 1982 from the University of Idaho, and then enrolled in the graduate program, and has been there for more than a year.

"I have spent $60,000 to learn how to sing. It has been very expensive to learn and not guaranteed any kind of position or remuneration. I am serious about making it into a career," he says.

Newman says he studies and performs in the winter and paints and wallpapers in the summer and autumn to make enough for the next year.

"I would suspect that 85 percent of the people I paint and wallpaper for know what I am doing with the money they pay me. I have been fortunate that they would support me in my music. I am not an inexpensive painter," he says.

Newman says he is motivated by "a burning passion; a driving force" to be an opera and concert vocalist.

"I hope I don't have to make a choice. I don't want to wake up when I am 65 and regret I didn't work harder for it," he adds.

Newman was one of 10 finalists out of 57 participants in the San Francisco Opera Auditions. He won a National District Competition with the National Association of Teachers of Singing and placed second in their regional auditions in Portland, he says.

"I have to feel now that I will go on to bigger city opera. That is the force behind my ambition," he says.

Newman says there is a big myth about the Metropolitan Opera. It is not necessarily the best. Chicago, Houston, San Francisco, San Diego and Miami have good opera. Besides the Met, New York City has two or three others.

Newman says in Magpie Valley, the arts are springing up all over the place. Just one example is the Magpie Philharmonic Orchestra organized recently in Burley. The quality of the arts will improve with the continued support from the people of the Magic Valley, he says.

"The Magic Valley would attract more and a better quality of singers if local opera committees would just even pay expenses. If I had money to get to and from rehearsals, I would audition for their productions in a minute. I would love to do Broadway shows and operetta. Expenses aren't that much per person," he says.

Newman is a 1970 graduate of Minco High School and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Grover R. Newman of Rupert.

Philharmonic Orchestra organized recently in Burley. The quality of the arts will improve with the continued support from the people of the Magic Valley, he says.

Symphony

solists in 1966.

In the fall of 1969, the orchestra held its first concert in the new Fine Arts Center auditorium at the College of Southern Idaho, to which many individual members and the symphony as an organization had donated funds.

While the music was welcomed more elbow room and the improved acoustics, there are fond memories of the cramped quarters on the old O'Leary stage.

Especially the concert, sometime in the mid-60s, when Judd Pettigrove's chair tipped over backward off the risers, thereby disconcerting nearby players. Always the professional, Director Slaughter continued conducting unaffected, but his wife, Juliette, recalls "the violinists were all watching out of the corner of our eye" while Mr. Pettigrove replaced his chair and "came up counting."

In 1970, in recognition of the many members who came from nearly every town in the valley, including several faithful Burley musicians who drove the 80-mile round trip for some years.

Other highlights under Slaughter's direction were concerts combining the talents of the Burley-Rupert and Twin Falls barbershop singing groups and another, with the Magic Valley Chorale, featuring Mendelssohn's "Elijah."

In 1975, Larry Curtis, of the CSI Music Department, took over the baton and led the symphony to new horizons, increasing both the visibility and audience of the symphony. Under his leadership, the orchestra featured big-name soloists, including Jose Greco, the world famous Spanish dancer; violinist Eugene Fodor and the Romero guitarists.

Curtis also arranged for concerts to be given in neighboring Magic Valley communities. The first preceding the Twin Falls performance for several years.

Probably several hundred instrumentalists have played with the symphony over the past 25 years. Many have moved away, some grew weary, others died. Hadley's members who did much to promote the symphony's early development were Helen Colner and Charles Ratcliffe.

Students long have filled in the gaps when adults were unavailable, and this youthful element along with a core of professional music educators probably are the major factors that have kept the organization going.

Three persons now playing in the orchestra were listed on the program for that first concert 25 years ago — Juliette Slaughter, Cheryl Schow Adams and this writer, who has played all but one season since the orchestra began.

This season, with Carson Wong as director, the symphony has increased in size, and under the leadership of Dennis Heidel, symphony president, the board of directors held two special-concerts to commemorate the 25-year anniversary.

Ten composers responded to invitations to write a special symphonic number for the Feb. 14 celebration concert. One of the two winning pieces, "Autumn Symphony" by Lynette Hart of Hailey, will be featured at the upcoming performance. The other winner, Ted Hadley's "Commemorations," is scheduled for the May 4 concert.

Jerome stage group to present 'Oliver'

Theater

JEROME — The Jerome-based theater group, The Northside Playhouse, will present Lionel Bart's "Oliver" June 8-10 and 14-16, says the play's producer Greg J. Fuller.

Directing this year's production is Terry Wood of Twin Falls. He will be assisted by musical director Bruce Whitehead of Jackpot, Nev., choreographer Bonnie Kay of Jerome and choral director Vanessa Ryall of Twin Falls.

Auditions will be held at the Jerome High School April 1 and 2.

Boys auditioning for Oliver, Artful

Dodger Fagin's gang and the workhouse boys are asked to be at the auditions from 2 to 4 p.m. on April 1 or from 7 to 8 p.m. on April 2. All others should report to auditions from 4 p.m. to 5 p.m. on April 1 and 8 to 10 p.m. on April 2.

Wood says adults as well as children are needed for the show.

Roles offered to boys range in age from 7 to 18 years. Boys auditioning for the part of Oliver are asked to prepare to sing either "Where Is Love" or "Who Will Buy." Those auditioning for the Artful Dodger should prepare "Consider Yourself" or "I'd Do Anything." Boys who would like parts as orphans or gang members will be asked to sing one of Oliver's or the Artful Dodger's selections, or "Pick a Pocket or Two."

Girls ranging in age from 12 to 15 years are also being sought to fill roles. In the play "I'd Do Anything," Wood also said girls will be cast in boys' roles if there aren't enough boys trying out.

Women seeking the part of Nancy will be asked to sing "As Long as He Needs Me." Men auditioning for Fagin and Bill Sikes should prepare the songs "Reviewing the Situation" and "My Name," respectively.

The Northside Playhouse needs rehearsal and promotional pianists, set builders and painters and anyone willing to become involved in behind the scenes activities.

All questions should be directed to Cindy Winterhalter at 734-9001 or 324-8193.

Star returns to stage for a one-man show

By JACKIE HYMAN
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — After seven years of performing on television, Emmy Award-winning actor Jack Klugman is returning to the stage in a one-man show, an experience he says is both exhilarating and frightening.

"I've never talked (directly) to an audience before. I don't know how I'll do," said Klugman, who portrays former President Johnson in "Lyndon," a play by James Prideaux based on a book by Merle Miller.

The lack of other actors to provide energy and interaction is the biggest challenge, said the star of television's "Quincy" and "The Odd Couple."

"You really have to pull yourself up by your bootstraps, being in starring roles with him," said Klugman. "I'm scared, boy, I'm scared. Washington, D.C. to open."

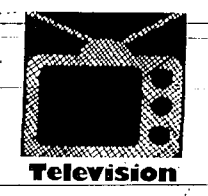

"Lyndon," directed by George Shaefer, runs through Feb. 12 at Washington's Eisenhower Theater before moving on to the Shubert Theater in Philadelphia, Feb. 14-26, and the Wilbur in Boston, Feb. 28-March 11. So far, there are no plans for runs in New York or Los Angeles.

"I said I'm not looking for a hit. If I want a hit, I can go to television," said Klugman. "I want to stretch some muscles."

The actor, who turns 62 in April, has performed on Broadway in such hits as "Golden Boy" and "Gypsy." But he's been absent from live theater for seven years, since last appearing in "All My Sons" in 1977.

He said he decided to perform in "Lyndon" after the script was sent to him by an old friend, Henry Weinstein, who is co-producing with Robert Westmore.

The script, by the author of "The Last of Mrs. Lincoln," impressed him and changed his opinion of the former president Klugman said.

Television

"I had worked for him in 1964 but only because I didn't want (Arizona Republican Sen. Barry) Goldwater," he said. "I felt he (Johnson) was a good man but he seemed to be the typical politician wheeler-dealer. But I've fallen in love with him since. He was a good man who truly cared about poor people."

In researching the role, Klugman went to Austin, Texas, to visit Johnson's library, view films and talk to those who had known the president. He went to Johnson's childhood home in Johnson City, Texas, and toured the Johnson ranch.

"I wanted to try to get him inside me or me inside him. I didn't want to imitate him," Klugman said. "You can get (impressionist) Rich Little to do a... lot better. But I want to get inside him — a lot of the personal anguish about the Vietnam War."

Klugman said his plans for the future are "open to all things," and that he would like to continue to do theater as well as television because of the opportunities for rehearsal.

"The only tool that the artist has is selectivity," he said. "Without time to select, you're not using any artistry. In television you don't have time to select."

L.M. Boyd What's what

Consider the woman whose handwriting slants backwards. If she is interested in any man at all, what interests her most is his money, prestige and looks: It's possible she's impressed by his character, too, but if so, that fact doesn't show up in her penmanship. Or so say those who read significance out of the way we write.

Certain neurotic individuals can't learn to swim. They're too tense and fearful to trust the water's buoyancy. They can't let go. Curiously, they may do fairly well after a couple of stiff drinks. But that can be pretty dangerous. When the liquor wears off, they lighten up again and fight the water. Meantime, they make the same kinds of judgments drunk drivers make — bad ones.

UGLY BONES

Will you buy the claim that all skeletons are ugly? Realize you get on tricky ground with such generalities. "Ugly," too, is in the eye of the beholder. And somebody's bound to come up with a microscopic photo of exquisite coral. Still, you and I might marvel at the beauty fleshed out of the deer and the eagle and the noble human on ice skates, but their bare bones make us turn our eyes, what?

Those of us who still smoke cigarettes — against everybody's better judgment including our own — are being compared by the head doctors now to indecisive roosters. You know how indecisive roosters behave. They peck senselessly at imaginary kernels of corn or whatever. In misdirection, as though to appear busy instead of actually dealing with any real matter of the moment, indecisive roosters, is it? Humph.

Husband jealous of wife's male doctor

DEAR ABBY: I am 38 and my wife is 37. We've been married for 18 years and I love her with all my heart.

So here's the problem—it bothers me that she goes to a male doctor. I have asked her to find a woman doctor, but she says she likes her doctor and doesn't want to change.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

I can't stop thinking about the fact that another man sees my wife's body, and it's tearing me up inside. I know it sounds sick, but I can't help it. I hate to see children—and I don't know how to get through it. I try to hide my feelings, but I always end up hurting her.

I can't for the life of me understand why a woman would want to go to a man doctor. I would never have a woman for my doctor. Never!

Help me deal with this, Abby.

—UPSET IN BALTIMORE

DEAR UPSET: Pity you would never have a woman doctor because one examination by a competent female physician would convince you that her interest in your body is strictly professional.

gets about as "turned on" looking at your wife's body as an automobile mechanic looking for a leak in the radiator. If you can't overcome this hang-up without professional help, I advise you to get it.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't throw this away thinking it's from some foolish little girl because I'm 22 and consider this a serious problem.

My boyfriend is a Seventh-Day Adventist, and he says his religion doesn't approve of jewelry of any kind, so I shouldn't expect a wedding ring!

Maybe I'm silly, but I can't imagine being married without one. Does it say somewhere in the Bible that wedding rings are a sin? I know I won't die without one, but all my married friends have wedding bands, and I won't feel really married without one.

DEAR WANTS: —WANTS A RING
"Wedding rings" in the marriage ceremony of Seventh-Day Adventists. The church frowns on jewelry, but some members do not consider the wedding band "jewelry," and after they are married they wear them on their own. It is not a sin.

You are apparently not a Seventh-Day Adventist, so I advise you to talk to a local pastor of the church and ask for some educational material about what is expected of members.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 28-year-old single female and also an agent with a large insurance company. I am in a predicament facing many single women my age.

My boyfriend and I live together, and because of a previous bad marriage failure, we have decided not to include marriage in our future.

However, we would like to have children. I'm afraid that my company would frown upon motherhood without marriage, but I feel I am within my rights to have a child if it will be brought up in a stable, loving home. We've considered saying we are married to ensure company approval, but we prefer to be honest.

If we choose to have a family, can I be legally terminated for this reason? I can't afford to jeopardize my career. I am paid strictly on a commission basis and nowhere in my contract is anything concerning this matter mentioned.

—NAMELESS, OF COURSE
DEAR NAMELESS: If you want to know your legal rights, consult an attorney, and/or the women's rights advocate in your area. But if you can't afford to jeopardize your career, I advise you to live according to society's prevailing rules and get married before having a family.

U.S. ice miracle hopes Czech-ed

East Germany's Enke zips to skating record

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP)—Czechoslovakia snuffed out the U.S. hopes for another ice hockey miracle by defeating the Americans 4-1 Thursday, a day in which a world record was set in speed skating as the first gold medals were handed out at the Winter Olympics.

But bad weather on Mount Bjelasnica meant Bill Johnson of Van Nuys, Calif. had to wait at least another day for his attempt at a gold medal in the downhill. Blowing snow and 80 mph winds forced postponement of the men's event until Friday.

With Johnson on the sidelines, the biggest news makers of the day were Soviet star goalie Yldislay Tretiak, who received a contract offer from the Montreal Canadiens, and speed skater Karin Enke of East Germany, who set a world mark in the women's 1,500 meters.

The U.S. hockey team, for all intents and purposes, finished its Olympic season with a loss to the bigger, stronger, second seeded Czechs, but U.S. Coach Lou Valvo said his team could hold its head high.

"They worked very hard," he said. "They are a great bunch of players, and worked hard all year long. They are very good boys, and if 250 million people want to point fingers at them, I'm still behind them 100 percent sure."

"I'm behind our team all the way, and if they want to point their fingers at me and say I'm not a good coach, that Valvo is a lousy coach, they can say what they want. But they are backing me into a corner. I have pride and I'm very proud of our team. And our staff and our boys have worked so hard."

"There's always the possibility of losing, you know."

The lights went out in the arena with 7:37 remaining in the first period just after the Czechs scored their first goal. About two minutes after they came back on, the United States tied the score on a goal by Mark Kumpal.

But the flickering flame of a second consecutive Olympic gold medal went off for good on the Americans about three minutes later when Victor Lukatch of Czechoslovakia scored what proved to be the winning goal on a power play.

Canada beat the United States 4-2 in their opener on Tuesday, and — with both of their conquerors now 2-0 — it is all but impossible for the Americans to make the medal round.

If the early demise of U.S. hockey medal hopes was a shock, it came as no surprise that the first speed skating gold went to Enke, whose first love was figure skating before she injured an arm in 1977 and switched to speed skating.

Enke won the women's 1,500-meter event in a world-record time of 2 minutes, 34.2 seconds. The 23-year-old skater has a two chance to win three gold medals, and said after winning her first that she may even try for four by entering the 3,000-meter race.

"I will decide that after the 1,000," she said.

Eric Helden of the United States swept all five of the men's speed skating events in 1980, an unprecedented feat. The most gold medals, ever for a woman in a single Winter Games is four, by Russian speed skater Lydia Skoblikova in 1964.

Affluence vindicates skiing star

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — Karl Schranz, robbed of a gold medal in one Olympics and booted out of another in a dispute with Avery Brundage over commercialism, finds vindication in the growing affluence of Alpine skiing.

"I take some of the credit for what has happened," the 45-year-old former world champion from Austria said. "Now skiers are making a lot of money, all getting rich. They come up to me now and say, 'Karl, we are indebted to you. You made it happen.'"

Twelve years ago, the crusty Brundage, near the end of his 25-year tenure as president of the International Olympic Committee, threatened to throw Alpine skiing out of the Olympic program because of what he termed "commercialism."

He ranted about Alpine skiers flaunting trade names on their skis and apparel and he went into a rage over newspaper accounts of payments to top performers.

His personal target was Schranz, the best in the world at the time. Schranz, from the small mountain village of St. Anton, won between 60 and 70 major events and was World Cup champion in 1969 and 1970. He was a favorite going into both the 1968 Games at Grenoble, France, and the 1972 Olympics at Sapporo, Japan.

At Grenoble, Jean-Claude Killy, a favorite son, won the first two gold medals but lost the final slalom race to Schranz under controversial circumstances. A figure crossed the Austrian's path, forcing him to doctor. With this distraction authenticated by witnesses on the hill, he was given another win, which he completed in winning time.

He was accepted at first, but the French protested and, under pressure, the jury threw out the winning run on a charge that Schranz had missed two gates. Thus Killy got his skiing slam.

"In your country, you would call it home cooking," Schranz said wryly.

Four years later, Karl came to Sapporo with overpowering credentials, having won two World Cup events in a row. There he found Brundage on the warpath, making threatening gestures because of reports that Schranz had collected $25,000 from a ski manufacturer.

"People wrote things about me which were not true," Schranz said. "I was a soccer shir which advertised itself. It was a small company that couldn't pay anything. Other Austrian skiers were the same shir. But Brundage zeroed in on me."

Interviewed in a Sapporo shop, Schranz lambasted the IOC president.

"Brundage is a rich man who has no concern for the athlete," he said. "If he had his way all competitors in the Olympics would be aristocrats, gentlemen who could afford to pay their own way."

Hamilton considers remaining amateur skater

By TERRY TAYLOR
AP Sports Writer

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — Scott Hamilton, heavily favored to win a figure skating gold medal, said Thursday he was considering remaining an amateur for two more years instead of turning pro after the Olympics.

"I'm a good amateur, I'm not sure I'd be a good professional," said the three-time world champion, considered a sure shot to be the first U.S. men's gold medalist since David Jenkins in 1960.

"I will definitely go to Ottawa for the 1984 World Championships in March and I'm considering staying in skating two more years," he said during a news conference attended by the other U.S. champions.

"It would be like giving something back to the sport," Hamilton said.

Figure skating in the XIV Olympic Winter Games opens today with the compulsory dance during the afternoon and the pairs short program at night. Competition ends Feb. 18 with the women's championship.

As for the other U.S. skaters: Rosalynn Summers, 19, the U.S. and world champion, brought along her psychologist but didn't pack enough cans of tuna and chicken or enough of the men's downhill on Saturday, Feb. 18, which is an open date on the skiing schedule and the next-to-last day of the Olympics. There is precedent for such action. At the 1960 Olympics in Squaw Valley, Calif., the men's downhill was postponed early in the Games' was postponed until late in the competition because of heavy snow. The only other postponement came at the men's downhill on Saturday, Feb. 18.

The Olympic women downhillers had those two training runs for Thursday, but then, too, were called off because of high winds on nearby Mount Jahorina. The two runs were rescheduled for Friday.

Hank Tauber, FIS technical delegate, said even if Friday's practice runs for the women can't be held, the race would go on as scheduled Saturday, weather permitting.

Johnson, a free-spirited Californian who has emerged in the last month as the United States' first legitimate downhill threat on the World Cup circuit, is one of the favorites for the men's downhill gold medal, along with Swiss veteran Peter Mueller.

Johnson, 23, of Van Nuys, Calif., has been impressive in the four training runs. He won one of them and finished second in two others. On Jan. 15, he became the first American to win a men's World Cup downhill race, and he followed that up with a solid fourth-place finish in the most recent downhill at Cortina d'Ampezzo, Italy.

Mueller, 26, was the World Cup downhill champion in 1980 and near-titlist in 1982.

"In her right ankle, Peter, 22, her brother and pairs partner, is just fine."

Judy Blumling, 26, and Michael Selbert, 24, the ice dancing couple, brought their sports therapist to help them deal with the mental pressure. Selbert said he was feeling "100 percent" recovered from mono-nucleosis.

Hamilton, 25, brought along an air purifier and, of course, his sense of humor.

"I don't want to say anything about the food," he joked, his voice trailing off. "But the air is kind of interesting. I have an air purifier in my room. I hold my breath all day, then I go back to my room and breathe."

"Turning serious," he said, "I'm just taking each day at a time and trying to keep my performances consistent."

"I thought I'd come in here and get protective and pull out my guns, but things went so well in Paris (where he was training) that I don't think I've been nervous yet," he said to a roomful of about 200 reporters.

"If I turned professional, I don't know if I would enjoy it as much. I feel like I belong in this atmosphere," Hamilton said. "I could just go another two years — I do everything two years at a time — it would be wonderful."

Eventually, he said, he will try being a pro for a while, then he'd like to go back to school to study sports psychology.

Weather delays Johnson's downhill medal bid

By JOHN MOSSMAN
AP Sports Writer

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — The question of whether Bill Johnson can make good on his promising training runs was put off for 24 hours Thursday when officials postponed the Olympic men's downhill ski race because of high winds and poor visibility on Mount Bjelasnica.

Winds going to near 80 mph in the upper sections of the course combined with blowing snow and fog for postponement of the first Alpine event of the XIV Winter Games.

It was rescheduled for Friday, but the forecast for then was for continued gusty winds and snow showers on the mountain.

Marc Hodler, president of the International Ski Federation (FIS), said if the race can't be run Friday, there are several options.

"We can't very well hold the race Saturday, because that's the day of the women's downhill," he said. "My solution would be Sunday. The jump is at about the same time, but perhaps we could coordinate those two events."

The only remaining alternative might be to hold the men's downhill on Saturday, Feb. 18, which is an open date on the skiing schedule and the next-to-last day of the Olympics. There is precedent for such action. At the 1960 Olympics in Squaw Valley, Calif., the men's downhill was postponed early in the Games' was postponed until late in the competition because of heavy snow. The only other postponement came at the men's downhill on Saturday, Feb. 18.

District scoring mark to fall tonight

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

CAREY — As far back as Brad Tingey can remember, his off-school time has been spent "setting the water, shooting baskets and going back and forth to the water."

It would be up to an irrigator to judge his performance as a water-setter. But 6-foot senior has all kinds of acclaim from coaches throughout Magic Valley and the state about his shooting.

"Tingey, who currently holds the Carey High School career record, will erase a 15-year old District 4 or Magic Valley single-season scoring mark tonight. It will come in the second or third quarter against the Blue Devils at Dietrich, where 1969 graduate Randy Lee set the career record of 577 points.

Tingey goes into the game with 563 points this season — in his scoring 42 points in a game — and 1,445 in three years as a varsity starter. The latter figure eclipsed the school mark of 1,381 points established by Mike Bame. He built these with statistics that include 48 percent shooting from the field and 76 percent at the line. He's had as many as eight three-point goals in a game.

"I never thought about it (a district record) because I didn't know there was one," Tingey says. "I started thinking about the school record this year because there is a list in the gymnasium that has the top 10 scorers in Carey's history."

The man Tingey will supplant as this area's scoring king was a four-year starter at Dietrich, participating in the winter days of the Ballard boys, Ben Knowles, Byron Welsh and others. The Blue Devils won a state championship and were nipped by a point in the following year's semifinals by eventual state champion Murtaugh.

Lee, who holds the single-game scoring record of 57 points, matriculated to the College of Southern Idaho where it appeared he would become the fifth starter on Coach Jerry Hale's first team that included Bob Stewart, Steve Hegans, Tim Bassett and Albert Davis and the next year Victor Kelly and Ralph Palomer — all of them eventually drafted by NBA teams.

But before his freshman season started, Lee ran into personal problems and wound up enlisting in the Army. He later was wounded in Vietnam, a mine injuring his left arm and leg, and at last report was working on a ranch in Nevada.

"No, I can't say I ever have," said Tingey, when asked if he'd ever heard of the 6-foot-1, 185-pound jumping Jack Lee, who despite his point record was best known for his defense.

Tingey says he wasn't thinking of Magic Valley records when he started tagging along with his father and older brother for hoop shooting in the evenings.

Father Blaine Tingey came to Carey as a coach several years ago and Brad has found that a boon. "It's always kinda helped to have him at school and home to help me keep things sorted out," Brad said. "He introduced the game to me. He was a pretty good player himself and he and my older brother would go out and shoot together and that helped me."

Although he has a personal high of 44 points and two games of 42, Tingey believes he played the best all-around game of his career against Camas County in the Panthers' 63-37 victory on Feb. 3. "I had 27 points, but I had some steals and quite a few assists," he said.

"My biggest thrill was in the state tournament last year when we wore down by 14 points in the fourth quarter and came back to beat Greenleaf (Friends Academy)." He scored nine points in that rally.

Brad also participates in football and track — well enough in the latter that a year ago Carey was setting records as part of the 800-meter relay team and might have been state champion had not an injury hit its anchor man.

"But I enjoy basketball the most... the whole game. I like the team concept. It's not as individualized as track and it's fast paced," Tingey said. "He admits to no other vices or hobbies outside of athletics, noting "I probably averaged two hours a day since I was little. Any time I got a chance to shoot I'd go do it between the farm work."

"Things like district records are pretty vague, carried only in the heads and on pieces of scratch paper in old notebooks in old sportswriters' desk drawers. If it isn't written down, it isn't used. And the records aren't trotted out until their demise is imminent because such knowledge tends to put more pressure on the individual involved."

Carey Coach Scott Peck was informed of the record threat last weekend and he decided to leave it to Brad's dad to decide whether the lad should carry the attendant pressure or simply let it be announced as a fait accompli.

"Dad told me about it Monday," Tingey said, adding he didn't feel any different after the news than had before.

So, sometime Friday night, when that 15th point goes through the hoop, he'll be alone at the top of the scoring heap. A lot of excellent players have come and gone through this district without attaining that position.

"For that reason we have to know if anyone is interested," Trenkle said. "Ricks will have no trouble selling them through their box office but they are offering CSI fans choice seats for the first time. If anyone is interested they should contact the CSI athletic office immediately."

Olympic's audience lagging

NEW YORK (AP) — Audience levels for ABC's first two nights of coverage of the Winter Olympics lagged far behind those of the Lake Placid Games four years ago, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. revealed Thursday.

On Tuesday night when ABC's broadcast was dominated by taped coverage of the United States' 2-2 hockey loss to Canada, the network finished third in the national ratings. ABC had an average rating of 11.6 and an average share of 18 for the three hours of prime time.

These figures represented a ratings decline of 43 percent from opening night four years ago, when the United States tied Sweden in its first ice hockey game on the way to winning the gold medal. That night, ABC received a 20.9 rating and a 31 share.

ABC, which paid $93.5 million for broadcast rights at Sarajevo, has said its ratings fortunes are strongly tied to the fortunes of the U.S. hockey team.

"This was only the first night," said Donn Bernstein, a spokesman for ABC Sports. "But I think the ratings for these Olympics will be down compared to the last one."

Coaches enter Hall of Fame

NEW YORK (AP) — Duffy Daugherty, noted for his wit and wisdom as head coach at Michigan State for 19 years, and the late Jim Tatum, who coached with success at Oklahoma, Maryland and North Carolina, are the newest members of the National Football Foundation's College Football Hall of Fame.

Daugherty will be inducted at the foundation's annual dinner Dec. 4, while Tatum will be inducted posthumously next fall on one of the campuses where he coached.

Their elections were announced Wednesday.

Daugherty compiled a 109-69-5 record as the longest-serving and winningest head coach in Michigan State history: His 1965 and 1966 teams were unbeaten during the regular season and won the Big Ten Conference championship both years.

CSI jumper sets record

TWIN FALLS — Sophomore Ray Mitchell has one school record and CSI track Coach Karl Kleinkopf believes a couple of more are on the way.

CSI, which attended the Vandal Indoor Invitational last week, currently is working through the indoor season with 29 individuals.

Mitchell provided the early spark who knocked off the 7-foot-7-inch pole vault record.

"He was over 7-3 twice but clipped it with his heels both times," the coach said. "I think we can expect Ray to get 7-3 or 7-4 and maybe 7-5 sometime this spring."

Kleinkopf is most certain that the school's 1,600-meter relay record for women will fall. The foursome of Angela Knight, Sally Butts, Mercedes Simmons and Candy Ford already have trimmed that mark to 3:55 "and I think by this spring, 3:45 is within their reach," Kleinkopf said. "We also have the option here of getting Miller who is a sprinter concentrating on the triple jump. But I think if she gets in shape, Miller could challenge for a spot on that team."

"Two years ago the national outdoor championship for women went for 3:56 in the 16-hundred," the coach continued.

Miller already holds the women's triple jump, getting off a 36-11 at Idaho State. "I would have to think that 36 or 37 would be in the realm of a national championship but it's a new event and who knows," Kleinkopf said. "Macie hasn't been close to that since. We don't have a decent runway and she's been hurt a few times. But I would assume she is capable of getting back to the 36-37 area after some decent practice weather."

Kleinkopf said CSI didn't take many places in the meet.

"They have most of the track universities from the west and a large number of the better track clubs there," he said. "There were some great athletes in all the events."

Knight ran a 57.1 to place fifth in the 400-meter dash while Butts won her heat in 59-flat but went unplaced. Miller got off a 17-5 long jump, well below her best.

After Mitchell, the CSI men's best showing was a 1:55 by sophomore Doug Hopster in the 800-meter run.

Kleinkopf said the teams will run in a triangular at Idaho State against the Bengals and Ricks next Wednesday. He added that 3:55 1,600-meter time has ended an invitation for women's relay to run in the Simplot games.

"I believe they can be competitive there because we've beaten BYU, ISU, Utah State and some very good women's relay teams," the coach said.

Kleinkopf said he started with 43 men and women but that has dwindled to 29 to this point.

"We always seem to have about a 25-percent attrition rate," he said. "We've had four or five graduate (at mid-term), a couple get married, three or four drop out of school, things like that."

Kleinkopf added that Joe Romatshski, a December graduate, has enrolled at Abilene Christian which competes in both NCAA Division I and NAIA track.

"It was a good move by Joe," Kleinkopf said. "They've been moving him around the country for a lot of meets and he'll be entered in both the NCAA and NAIA national finals this year. Next year (because of the NCAA age limit on foreign athletes), he'll have to go strictly NAIA."

What do you play behind dummy, at a suit contract, if dummy plays a singleton and you have the ace? If you have no answer without more information, you're on the right track.

West leads a trump because the bidding tells him that North is short in spades. It seems that South will need some spade ruffs in dummy to succeed at four hearts.

Dummy's 10 wins the trump lead and dummy's spade seven is led. What should East do?

If East takes his spade ace, South has an easy road. He will ruff one low spade in dummy and hold his losses to one trick in each side suit.

What happens if East ducks the singleton spade? South wins his low spade but his troubles just begin. If he ruffs a low spade now, he will have no entry back to his hand so South must try one of the following.

Neither of these works too well as East wins a diamond finesse (or a club) and shoots back, a second trump. If South wins, ruffs a spade and draws trumps, he will still get two spade tricks to go with his two minor suit winners and the game falls by one trick.

Afrail, lose the spade ace? The chances are
