Soviet leader new, but old tensions remain

By GEORGE GEDDA
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Konstantin U. Chernenko takes over as Soviet Communist Party chief at a time of severe strain in U.S.-Soviet relations, and American officials do not believe the leadership change foreshadows an easing of tensions over the short term.

Analysis Chernenko's views — A4

There is little to suggest that Chernenko sees the world much differently from the way Andropov did. "The best guess is that there will be no major change at the outset," one official said. He added that the kinds of problems the United States and the Soviet Union confront are not amenable to quick solution.

Monday to the Communist Party Central Committee when he pledged to strengthen Soviet defense capacity as a means of cooling "the hot heads of militant adventurists."

The State Department, however, chose to underscore the more conciliatory aspects of Chernenko's speech in its initial reaction. It welcomed his expressed readiness to lessen tensions through "practical deeds."

It also found encouragement in an article, written before Andropov's death, in which Chernenko said "it is more important than ever before to multiply our efforts toward mutual understanding."

Chernenko is viewed here as a somewhat colorless bureaucrat, less given to grand gestures than was Nikita Khrushchev, the Soviet leader of the late 1950s and early 1960s.

He also shares some of Andropov's liabilities. At 72, Chernenko is four years older than Andropov was at the time of his accession—andropov was still during much of his 15-month tenure and U.S. officials say Chernenko also suffers from potentially debilitating illnesses, including emphysema and cardiovascular problems.

Some analysts believe American interests were best served by the emergence of a Soviet leader who is aging, cautious and in questionable health, because he probably will be incapable of instituting the kind of reforms necessary for rejuvenation of the Soviet system.

Other observers said the appointment of a younger, more dynamic leader could have caused different kinds of problems, if he pursued innovative policies that alienated too many power centers, the prospects of miscalculation would be higher, creating at least the potential for political instability in Moscow. That, one official suggested, is not in the interests of either side.

Chernenko's rise to power comes at a time when Soviet-American relations are at rock-bottom. Talks on limiting intermediate-range and intercontinental missiles have been suspended and the Soviets, having entered into a close association with Syria, appear to have better opportunity to influence developments in the Middle East than at any time in recent memory. Other sore points include the continued Soviet occupation of Afghanistan and perceived Soviet meddling, by way of Cuba, in Central America.

U.S. skiers strike gold

Ketchum's Cooper is a winner

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — "Now America's got it."

Debbie Armstrong won her gold medal, the first for the U.S. Team at the Winter Olympics, with a tough, twisting tour down the side of a mountain on Monday. Ketchum's Christin Cooper was a close second, winning the silver.

"America has been waiting for this," someone shouted to the beaming Armstrong at the finish line immediately after her victory became apparent. "Now America's got it," Armstrong fired back.

After days of poor hockey, weather delays for events in which the American team was expected to do well and poorer than expected performances by some team members, Armstrong, Cooper and the other members of the giant slalom team came through in record-smashing fashion.

Cooper was the leader after the first run, holding a slim one-tenth of a second lead over Armstrong. Two of the fastest American skiers, Tara McKinney and Switzerland's Erika Hess, had virtually skied themselves out of the medal picture. McKinney was eighth after the first run, and Hess was 11th.

On the second run, Armstrong put together another near-flawless effort. Cooper, slipping immediately after her, slipped at the fifth gate, falling back on to her skis. She recovered, but the mistake cost her precious seconds. Armstrong's second run was clocked in 1 minute, 12.01 seconds; Cooper came in at 1:12.51, a half-second slower.

Cooper, 24, admitted her slip "probably cost me the gold. In general, I just didn't ski as cleanly that second run. It hurts a little to be so close — (to the gold), but I'm happy with the silver."

Cooper, when asked if she had lost the gold or won the silver, replied, "I'll find myself playing catchup," she said.

Armstrong's combined time for two runs was 2:20.38. Cooper finished at 2:21.38; Pelen at 2:21.40 and McKinney at 2:21.83.

McKinney clocked the best time on the second run, a 1:11.72, but it wasn't enough to get her a medal. Perrine Pelén of France claimed the giant slalom bronze medal for the second — straight — Olympics, and McKinney was in fourth place.

Armstrong's gold medal was the first for an American woman in 32 years in the giant slalom and the first in any Alpine event at the Winter Games since 1972.

She was an unlikely hero.

At 20, Armstrong is a relative newcomer to international competition.

Bankruptcy court refuses to shield Ellis from his creditors

TWIN FALLS — Ken Ellis has lost his latest, and probably last bid to continue operating three financially troubled trout businesses under the protection of federal bankruptcy law.

Monday, federal bankruptcy Judge Merlin S. Young approved an Internal Revenue Service request that will remove two of the companies — Magic Springs Inc., a trout processor, and Farrago Inc., a fish feed supplier — from the protection of Chapter 11 bankruptcy, which would have allowed Ellis more time to reorganize the firms' finances.

The two companies were placed in Chapter 7 liquidation status, in which a court-appointed trustee will be empowered to sell their assets. Young then approved another IRS motion to dismiss a third company, Valley Trout Farms Inc., from Chapter 11 status, an action that will allow all creditors to try and seek repayment of debts.

Two other legal actions involving Ellis's troubled trout companies also have taken place within the past week.

On Feb. 8, a Twin Falls County Judge gave the go-ahead for a sheriff's sale to liquidate real estate owned by both Valley Trout Farms and other properties owned by Ellis and his wife, Brenda.

Monday, Jerome County held a sheriff's auction that resulted in the sale of Ellis's Royal Catfish farm, located near Twin Falls, to an Oklahoma-based insurance company for $620,000.

Young's decisions represented a major setback for Ellis, a Buhl-based trout entrepreneur, who had hoped to win more time to reorganize his companies' finances. But Young brushed off efforts by Ellis's attorneys to forestall the liquidation order.

Ellis's companies have been in bankruptcy for two years.

"Isn't it obvious from your own accounting that this isn't a viable business concern?" Young asked the attorneys.

"There's not one item of evidence in the record that indicates this debtor can formulate a reasonable (financial) plan."

Gerald Sunville, a Salt Lake City attorney who represented Ellis in bankruptcy court on Monday, argued unsuccessfully for an extension of Chapter 11 protection.

He told Young that Ellis had "a new team of players — professional players" — to make the reorganization successful. A reorganization plan could be prepared in 90 days, Sunville said.

And Ellis, the president and majority stockholder of three companies, testified that he was spending all of his working time preparing a new reorganization plan and seeking new capital. He said he had contributed more than $500,000 in personal funds to the companies since he filed for protection under Chapter 11 guidelines.

His creditors would be served better by a court decision allowing his companies to reorganize, Ellis said.

Senate kills Swan Falls bill using parliamentary tactic

By MARY STEVENSON
The Associated Press

BOISE — Amid accusations of unfair parliamentary procedure and interference from Idaho Power Co., the state Senate has effectively killed key legislation related to the Swan Falls controversy.

The bill, which would have put water use for power production second to water use for other purposes on all Idaho rivers, was tabled by the Senate 15-10 on Monday.

The measure would have reversed the effects of a 1982 state Supreme Court decision some say has closed off development of the river.

Idaho Power President Jim Bruce called the legislative action "a victory for ratepayers."

"That's what the issue is — a question of higher rates," he said.

The subordination bill, passed last week by the House, was tabled under a special parliamentary maneuver during what would have been routine action as the bill was received from the House.

Sen. Dave Little, R-Emmett, moved that the bill be tabled, and a division was taken — senators rose to show their support or opposition, and a head count was taken with no official recording of who voted how. Gov. John Evans, state water resources Director Ken Dunn, and Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, accused Idaho Power of being behind the action.

"We will not let Idaho Power Co. or any other utility control the destiny of the state," said Evans, who has publicly endorsed the bill.

Marine withdrawal within thirty days

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has set in motion plans to withdraw the U.S. Marines from Lebanon before mid-March, officials said Monday.

"The White House has made a decision to get the Marines out of Beirut and on the amphibious ships offshore within 30 days from last Saturday," said an administration official who spoke only on condition he remain anonymous.

"The clock started then" added this official, who said the decision was made after Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger delivered the Marines to the White House last Friday.

Such a timetable would bring the 1,200 to 1,300 Marines serving in the multinational force from their positions at the Beirut International Airport to the ships by March 12.

Officials said that several hundred U.S. military personnel would remain to guard the U.S. Embassy, train the Lebanese army, teach counterterrorism tactics and handle communications and other tasks.

Sources said Weinberger presented three options to the White House Friday for withdrawing the troops — one for a brief pullout lasting a few days, a second for a withdrawal taking 30 days, and a third that would stretch the process out, possibly over several months.

As these sources described it, Weinberger would have preferred somewhat more time for coordination but that he agreed finally to the 30-day time frame drafted from last Saturday.

Vice President George Bush has called the power shift a possible "turning point" in Soviet-American relations. Reapportionment hits snag

BOISE (AP) — With a final vote only moments away, the Idaho Senate delayed action on legislation supporters hoped would get the state's reapportionment dilemma off dead center this election year.

The majority Republicans announced Monday they would delay for a day a final vote on a reapportionment bill put together by a special joint legislative committee.

Senate Majority Leader Mark Ricks, R-Rexburg, said the minority Democrats had asked for the time to try to come up with a compromise bill.

The bill has already passed the House.

The Idaho Supreme Court last year ruled that the state's 1982 reapportionment plan is unconstitutional because it divides county lines.

The high court said that if lawmakers don't get a new law on the books, this year's elections will be held under a controversial plan approved by 1st District Judge Dar Cogswell.

The Cogswell plan has 42 Senate districts and uses huge, flateral districts to apportion the state.

The bill before the Senate, drafted by Ricks and Rep. J. Vard Chabrun, R-Idaho, contains 35 Senate districts and three multi-county cluster districts.

"We feel like we need to give the minority an opportunity to negotiate further," Ricks told the Senate.

"I would hope by delaying this today that they can come up with something that would be acceptable to this side of the aisle."

Ricks said that unless the Democrats give the Republicans "a strong reason to delay," the pending bill will be acted on Tuesday.

Ricks later said Republicans agreed to the one-day delay because the Democrats "keep telling us that the bill's going to get vetoed. If it's just going to get vetoed, we're going to be turning our wheels."

Senate votes partial repeal of Little Davis-Bacon Act

BOISE (AP) — Spurred by demands for increased spending on public education, the Idaho Legislature has given final approval to repeal of the requirement that tax-financed schools and colleges pay the "prevailing wage" for construction work.

"That rate can be 20 to 30 percent higher," said Sen. Terry Sversten, R-Catdalo, the assistant GOP leader. He claimed repeal of the so-called Little Davis-Bacon Act "can give more dollars to our schools in these tight economic times."

Following that reasoning, the Idaho Senate Monday voted 22-12 for the House-passed repealer that critics say is destined for a veto by Democratic Gov. John Evans. Evans objected to a similar, but broader, measure last year.

"It does sound like it would be a grand scheme to improve education," said Democratic Senate Leader Kermit Kiebert of Hope in unsuccessful arguing for defeat of the bill.

"But I think there's a better way, it would be my intention to find that better way."

The Republican majority stood solidly behind the limited repeal and was joined by Democrat Gail Bray of Boise, who said her vote was cast in the interest of forcing changes in the prevailing wage law.

Under the law, tax-financed construction projects must include labor wage rates set by the federal government to reflect the prevailing wage in a region.

Critics contend the federal rates fail to account for specific local economic conditions and therefore are inflated throughout the state. If the rates were brought in line with the local economy, they claim millions of dollars can be saved statewide on school construction or the extra money can be spent on even more facilities.

Organized labor, which has been fighting the legislation for years, counters that the claims of excessively high wage rates are overblown. Leaders also point out that on-site labor accounts for only one-sixth of a project's total cost so that any savings would be relatively small in relation to overall expenditures.

Committee OKs hospital secrecy

BOISE (AP) — An exemption for public hospitals from Idaho's open meetings law, that the Idaho Newspaper Association claims will turn the law into a "sham," has been endorsed by the Senate State Affairs Committee.

Another Senate committee Monday delayed action on a proposal that would strengthen the open meetings law by beefing up the enforcement provisions. The Judiciary and Rules Committee agreed to postpone a recommendation on that measure.

The hospital exemption, which now goes to the full Senate, permits directors of public facilities in competition with private health care providers to discuss policy matters in secret.

John Hutchinson of the Idaho Hospital Association said the exemption, which could affect as many as 33 public hospitals in the state, is not intended to permit "secret meetings to plan and do things the public would not do."

He said it only allows discussion of strategy in what has become a highly competitive area.

House passes employee raise to Senate

BOISE (AP) — State employees, who last year got no general pay increase from the Idaho Legislature, may fare better this year.

With only minimal debate, the House voted 42-5 Monday for a resolution granting 5 and 10 percent raises to state employees. And it approved another 1 percent for department chiefs to grant merit raises.

The measure now goes to the Senate.

Rep. Robert Geddes, R-Preston, raised the only objection. He called the raises, which will cost $22.8

million "untimely" and "unpopular."

"There just isn't the money in the budget to warrant pay raises of this magnitude," said Geddes.

Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome, said the raises were reasonable, because state employees get no blanket increases last year, when the state was in a budget crunch.

"This is a reasonable recommendation, and the state employees deserve the increase," said Hollifield. He headed a special subcommittee on state employee pay and fringe benefits.

Hollifield said the bulk of the larger pay raises go to lower-paid employees.

He said 3,564 state employees will get 5 percent raises effective July 1, and 4,315 will go up 10 percent.

The resolution also approved "reallocation," or changing the values for certain jobs.

Included are employees in the state brand inspector's office, certain members of the Idaho State Police and therapy technicians for the Department of Health and Welfare.

Rydalch, Smyser, Sversten, Trounson, Watkins, Williams and Yarborough.

Republicans against (0) — None.

Tax rebel sues Idaho

BOISE (AP) — A Boise man jailed for 139 days because he refused to submit an acceptable state tax return has filed a lawsuit claiming his constitutional rights were violated.

Rick Mitchell, 26, is seeking more than $7 million in damages in a U.S. District Court lawsuit that names the Idaho Tax Commission, its attorney, a district judge, the Ada County sheriff and the county commission.

Mitchell claims he was denied his right to liberty, property and due process of law. He said in the suit that he suffered anguish and harassment, and was ridiculed and scorned through the news media.

Mitchell was jailed June 22 for failing to obey a court order that he file an acceptable tax return.

Mitchell claims that while he was jailed "a confession of lies was forcibly obtained under threat, duress and coercion of torture by solitary confinement."

Bopp 'retirement' deserved closer look

The Twin Falls City Council, in our opinion, appears caught between conflicting objectives in its drive to consolidate the city's fire and police departments.

On the one hand, council members should not allow personal past involvements with the Fire Department and Chief Bobby Bopp to determine what will happen to Bopp in the department reorganization.

Both Mayor Emery Petersen and new Councilman Jack Miller admit that past fire-code issues have shaped their current thinking on Bopp's performance. In Petersen's case, one of the disputes involved requiring special fire safety features as part of an addition to his own Western-wear store.

That leaves Petersen and the council open to the implication, if not the fact, that there are personal scores to be settled. Petersen denies that's the case, but nonetheless, we think the council should avoid looking like it is out to "get" the chief.

At the same time, the council and City Manager Tom Courtney are right in looking at Bopp's performance in evaluating whether he should stay on in any reorganization.

It is perfectly appropriate for them to ask why fire officials ordered nine exit signs for the foyer of Robert Stuart Junior High School and a sprinkler system in a hospital operating room.

It is also right for them to raise questions about Bopp's apparently successful effort to qualify for a state-fire-pension-while-holding-onto-his-job-as-fire-chief.

While Bopp did nothing illegal, wonder why the council in 1980 would let his one-day "retirement" pass uncontested. The result is now costing taxpayers an estimated $14,000 annually in pension payments, while Bopp continues on as fire chief at a salary of $29,000.

In these days of so much concern about "double-dipping" into pension plans, particularly in the public sector, we wonder why the council would agree to hire Bopp back, thereby pushing additional costs onto the taxpayers.

In our opinion, the council's failure here is in not looking out for the taxpayers. It is inexcusable and borders on mismanagement of public funds.

For the record, Courtney says Bopp was entitled to the benefits if he retired. True enough, but was the council obligated to hire him back? We think someone should have told Bopp he could have his pension or his job, but not both.

"Someone" are the council members at the time: Mayor Henry Woodall, Chris Talkington, Mary McClusky, Alan Wubker, Paul Newton, Bud Cheney and Tim Smallwood.

Soviet Union continues its advance

In Britain today, the Soviet stance on various issues is often presented to the public in a distorted light, to put it mildly. The Soviet people and the Soviet Communist Party harbor no secret intentions or malicious designs. We are open to the world.

Naturally, we are mainly concerned with our home affairs. We are concentrating on constructive tasks, such as advancing socialist democracy, developing industry, science and technology, agriculture and culture. Our progress in these fields is truly spectacular.

Contrary to our ill-wishers' talk about a "decline of communism," we take a long stride forward every year. As far as its economic and intellectual potential is concerned, the Soviet Union of the 1980s differs strikingly not only from the young revolutionary Russia of the 1920s, but even from what it was 20 to 30 years ago.

This is not to say that we have no difficulties. They do exist, and the Communist Party frankly admits them. This, incidentally, is what helps the Soviet Union to cope with them successfully and to scale one summit after another in its progress. My country is getting richer and more advanced culturally, and its people have a higher standard of living than ever before. These are the fruits of the Soviet peoples' work for themselves and for society in conditions of freedom. In its foreign policy, the Soviet Union aims at the top major safeguarding and strengthening peace and is determined to end the arms race.

We are in favor of an active and fruitful dialogue with nations living under a different social system to ours, the United States and Great Britain in particular. To work patiently so as to create a climate of trust and accord on Earth is what my country is calling on other nations to do.

The bitter experience of wartime ideals has caused us to be vigilant. The Soviet Union has great public respect and esteem for meeting any challenge effectively. We hope that nobody will be tempted to test the Soviet Union's strength again. We are not seeking military superiority, of course, but we will not concede to any nation gaining such superiority over us.

KONSTANTIN U. CHERENKO
Mutual understanding important

Guest opinion Konstantin U. Chernenko

Our implicit faith in communist ideals is rooted in social reality. Of course, every Soviet citizen has a life path unmistakably his or her own. In one common area, however, the experience of millions of individuals is identical — socialism, a dynamic and strong social system, is also a fair system, which brings education and culture within reach of all, offers everyone a job of his choice and excellent opportunities for advancement.

My own life story is an example in point. I was born into a large and poor peasant family in the Krasnoyarsk region of Siberia in 1911. I left my mother when I was a young boy. At 12 I went to work for a wealthy master to earn my living. New Soviet life was just coming into its own and I felt its fresh winds when I joined the Young Communist League.

That was back in 1926. We studied and held down our jobs at the same time. We were underfed and poorly clothed, but the dreams of a radiant future for all fascinated us and made us feel happy.

That was a time of tension. Now and then there were press reports about conflicts with foreign intruders raiding Soviet borders. So I volunteered to join the border guards. After some delay, my request was granted. I joined the Communist Party in 1931 during my term of service with border troops and was soon elected a party secretary. Nazi Germany's attack on my country found me in the post of secretary of the Krasnoyarsk Territorial Party Committee. I immediately volunteered for front-line duty, but all my requests were turned down.

Siberia became one of the nation's arsenals in wartime. Industrial plants evacuated from areas threatened by Nazi invasion had to be promptly brought back into production and geared to the war effort. Thousands of refugee families arrived in Siberia. All had to be accommodated, given jobs and encouragement. We made every effort to relieve their plight.

After the war in 1943, the tide of hostilities in the Soviet theater of war. After the battle of Stalingrad, victory came into clearer view on the far horizon. It was time the party gave attention to peacetime problems, which were bound to be quite formidable in a country devastated by war.

I was sent to advanced training courses for party functionaries under the CPSU Central Committee. Later I served as secretary of the Penza Regional Party Committee and as chief of the propaganda department at the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Moldavia.

For over two decades now I have served in top party and government jobs in Moscow. What I wish to say in conclusion is an expression of not only my view, but the view of the Communist Party and the entire Soviet people: Today it is more important than ever before to multiply our efforts toward mutual understanding. The imperative need to preserve peace and to guarantee every nation the right to free and independent development has priority over anything else.

I would like the people of the Soviet Union and Great Britain to be partners in making progress toward these goals.

Konstantin U. Chernenko is the newly-named general secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. This exclusive article by Chernenko was written for the Sunday Times of London as an introduction to his published speeches, to be published in Britain on March 5.

The solemn incantation of Mr. Wayne Jones during the 15-minute ceremony intoned, "The powers of the anti-Christ are in our land." This announcement, Mr. Jones, was precise and correct. But your reference was wrong. The spirit of Miller had been present right there in the John Miller hayfield and not in the dedication of Jan. 15 as a national holiday, honoring the life and teachings of a black man by the name of King.

I believe that there are thousands of people in Idaho who, like myself, find it almost impossible to believe that at this late date in the 20th century, we still have a few deluded souls who preach a philosophy of a master race. Citizens in our area have remained extremely passive, and the militant opposition in the Hayden Lake area has been credited to other rival extremist groups.

Many years ago, there was a very sincere and dedicated man of the Aryan Nation-type who was also possessed of a "breathing out of threatening and slaughter" against people he regarded as enemies of God and the nation. Something happened to this man, and for three days in his blindness he did not eat nor drink. In a moment of time, his blindness was cured, and Saul of Tarsus began to accept the people whom, in all good faith, he had been trying to kill.

There are many students of history and of religion who feel that civilization progressed in the direction of the missionary journey of St. Paul. And the most neglected and backward nation in the world was the one which last of all received the gospel — Africa.

Device to aid deaf explained

Some people do not understand how a telecommunications device for the deaf (TDD) works. A person calling to talk to a deaf person over the phone who uses a TDD must have one of his own, or he should call the Deaf Message Center at 734-3015 to have them repeat the message on a TDD. Whenever a call comes in on a TDD, a person calling will hear an electronic beeping sound. He will know it's a TDD call and that we cannot answer back unless he has a TDD, too. I have notified my friends about this, but there seems to be someone who keeps calling back every time we hang up. Our area also has a light that flashes whenever the phone rings to let us know when someone is calling. We also have a light which comes on when someone uses our doorbell. This is why we answer even though we cannot hear it.

Dangers warrant raising drinking age to 21 across nation

BOSTON — At some point in the late 1960s, when thousands of young men were being drafted to fight in Vietnam, the country became embarrassed about the checkerboard of laws that ruled the lives of 18, 19 and 21-year-olds.

A young man was old enough to die for his country, but not old enough to vote in it. A Marine could return from the Mekong Delta and then get carded at his hometown bar. In that climate, support grew for a uniform age of responsibility. In 1971, the voting age was lowered to 18 and in the next few years many states lowered the drinking age to 18.

In retrospect, it seems odd that we simply accepted the draft as the baseline, the duly designated point of adulthood. Instead of raising the military age, we lowered everything else to match it. We were embarrassed about the wrong thing.

Nevertheless, we allowed 18-year-olds to drink legally and openly. Soon, the lethal combination of alcohol and gasoline, drinking and driving, inflamed the fatality statistics.

In New Jersey, for example, when they lowered the drinking age in 1973 from 21 to 18, the number of highway deaths of people under 21 tripled. On the average, teen-agers have been two-and-a-half times as likely as the average driver to be in an accident involved with alcohol.

Gradually now, states have been raising the drinking age again and watching the accident rates go down. Today only four states still allow 18-year-olds to buy all kinds of alcohol. In 11 states the legal drinking age is 19, in six states it is 20, and in the rest it's 21.

Now there are two bills wending their way through Congress which would establish a national drinking age of 21. Last week, the bill sponsored by Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., passed the House committee. Some have opposed this legislation as an example of federal intrusion.

The need for uniformity seems obvious. But there is a legitimate controversy about raising the age further again. For openers, there's nothing magical about the number 21. If we were concerned solely with safety, we could reasonably ban the sale of booze to anyone under 22 or 25. On the other hand, we could forget about drinking and raise the driving age to 21 — an idea which appeals to me enormously as the parent of a 15-year-old.

More importantly, there is the notion of a single age of responsibility. Isn't it rather insulting to tell a bona fide voter that he or she isn't old enough to bely up to the bar?

I see the contradiction. Yet despite all the talk about a single age of adulthood, there are all sorts of uneven laws regulating the uneven process of maturity. Today, in many states, you can become "emancipated" from your parents by becoming a parent, even at 15. In most states you can get married with parental consent before you can vote. On the other hand, you cannot become a member of the House of Representatives until you are 25 or a U.S. senator until you are 30.

The recent case involving jury selection, brought to the Supreme Court by the Riverside Press Enterprise, involved the rape and murder of a teen-age girl.

The prosecution persuaded the judge to close the jury selection process on the grounds that public questioning of the jurors — about their views on the death penalty, for example — would cause them to give inaccurate answers about their own views.

Saying that open jury selection was common in both England and in this country for centuries, Chief Justice Warren Burger stated that public knowledge of jurors' views "enhanced public confidence" in the fairness of the criminal trial system.

In this case, the dangers warrant raising the drinking age. The number 21 is no more magic than a familiar compromise figure. Even the 18, 19 and 20-year-olds seem to accept it. In the recent Gallup poll, they favored a federal drinking age of 21, by 58 to 38 percent.

I have no illusions that we'll stop young people from drinking entirely. Nor will we silence them from drinking about city age. Yet it has been estimated that we can save 1,250 lives each year with a new minimum age for legal drinking, and that's worth a try.

What then of the person convinced that any 18-year-old who can die for his country ought to be able to drink in it? Tell him that 18 is much, much too young to die for the country.

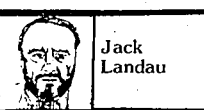

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe.

Notion of 'personal privacy' could lead to secret sessions

WASHINGTON — If you were being considered as a juror in a rape case or a murder trial involving an insanity plea, you probably would ask that the courtroom be cleared of spectators while you were being questioned about whether you had ever been involved in a rape or were being treated by a psychiatrist.

However, if you were simply a spectator interested in the outcome of the case, you probably would oppose clearing the courtroom during jury selection because you might want to know if the potential jurors were biased against rape suspects or were hostile to psychiatrists.

Those two different points of view — one from a potential juror concerned about privacy, the other from a citizen concerned about the fairness of a jury's composition — came into play before the Supreme Court recently in the continuing controversy over public access to courtrooms.

Jack Landau

In its fourth decision in four years on the issue, the high court ruled in a California case that all jury questioning generally should be conducted publicly, except if a jury candidate is going to be asked very "personal" questions.

While most media lawyers and Supreme Court reporters interpreted the decision as a major victory for broad public access to courts, a few have disagreed. The dean of the Supreme Court reporters, Carl Stern of NBC, has warned that the decision establishes for the first time a constitutional right of privacy for potential jurors which could be used to close the courtroom.

He argues that jurors are key players in the trial, and that if the public can be excluded from a courtroom during jury questioning, then personal questions put to other key players — such as witnesses — for openers, the defendant — could be used as a justification for closing the courtroom.

Four years ago, the Supreme Court entered the controversy of public access to court proceedings by giving trial judges broad discretion to close courtroom during pre-trial hearings in criminal cases. If the judges believe that the information from the hearing might make it difficult for a suspect to get a fair trial.

The decision prompted strong objections, and the next year the Supreme Court ruled that trials must almost always be open except for emergencies that could not be handled any other way.

Last year, the justices said that even juvenile testimony in a sex trial must stay open to the public unless the witness was so terrified that he or she absolutely could not testify before spectators.

The recent case involving jury selection, brought to the Supreme Court by the Riverside Press Enterprise, involved the rape and murder of a teen-age girl. The prosecution persuaded the judge to close the jury selection process on the grounds that public questioning of the jurors — about their views on the death penalty, for example — would cause them to give inaccurate answers about their own views.

Saying that open jury selection was common in both England and in this country for centuries, Chief Justice Warren Burger stated that public knowledge of jurors' views "enhanced public confidence" in the fairness of the criminal trial system.

This presumption of openness "may be overcome only by a showing of interest based on findings that closure is essential to preserve higher values" of fundamental fairness, Burger said.

One of these values, he said, would be a "sense of respect for a prospective juror when interrogation touches on deeply personal matters that a person has legitimate reason" to keep secret from the public.

Therefore, the decision requiring jury selection to be open to the public "could be a double-edged sword. But its real impact may not be known for several years, depending on how trial judges read the opinion; either as a strong wall against court secrecy, or an opening for secret proceedings based on the vague notion of "personal privacy."

Boy burned saving brothers worries over their condition

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A 12-year-old boy who ignored flames to save his two younger brothers from their burning bedroom fretted about them Monday despite painful burns that cover half his body.

William Holsclaw remained in the intensive care unit at Southern Nevada Memorial Hospital, across the hallway from his 3-year-old brother Jimmy.

William, with burns covering his back, face, arms and legs, was upgraded from critical to serious, while Jimmy was reported in stable condition.

William ignored flames licking up his back early Friday to hand his 4-year-old brother Brian out the bedroom window of their burning mobile home at the nearby community of Jean.

The boy then searched through the flaming bedroom until he found Jimmy, and passed him through the window to their father before jumping to safety.

Despite the painful burns, William's attention remained on his brothers.

"He asks about the boys all the time," Linda Holsclaw said Monday, pacing the hallway of the hospital's burn unit. "Yesterday he heard Jimmy crying and he made me leave the room to see about him. He wasn't worried about himself, he just wanted to make sure Jimmy was alright."

"He's all that's kept me going."

Mrs. Holsclaw said.

When the two younger brothers visited William on Sunday, he joked about them "getting the best end of the deal," said their father, Jim Holsclaw.

Jimmy suffered burns on his left arm and both legs. He is expected to remain hospitalized for several days. Brian suffered only slight burns. He was treated and released.

William faces some skin-grafting and is in almost constant pain, his parents say. He lies on his stomach, one of the few areas of his body that was not burned. His arms are extended and he can only mumble words softly.

Nicaragua asks Jackson to visit

FORSYTH, Ga. (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson said Monday he has been invited to Nicaragua next Tuesday to help celebrate the rise to power of the leftist Sandinista regime there and will decide by the end of the week whether to go.

If he goes, the visit would come one day after the Iowa caucuses and exactly a week in advance of the New Hampshire primary, where Jackson is pushing for a strong showing.

Jackson said the invitation came from the Nicaraguan ambassador to the United States.

Asked whether the timing had political overtones, the Democratic presidential candidate told reporters traveling with him on a voter registration sweep through Georgia. "I didn't invite me to go to Nicaragua and I didn't set Feb. 21st as the date for celebration."

Jackson's campaign got a boost earlier this year when he traveled to Syria and secured the release of a U.S. Navy flier who had been downed during a flight over Syrian positions in Lebanon.

JESSE JACKSON
Decision later in week

The Sandinista government, which overthrew the U.S.-backed government of the late rightist President Anastasio Somoza in July 1979, has said it will announce on Feb. 21 the date for election of a president, vice president and a 90-member legislature charged with writing a new constitution.

That day is the anniversary of the slaying of Oscar Arnulfo Sandojo, who fought against U.S. Marines occupying Nicaragua in the 1930s. The Sandinistas take their name from Sandojo.

The U.S. government supports rebels from the Nicaraguan Democratic Force who are fighting to oust the Sandinistas, who the United States accuses of helping leftist guerrillas fighting the U.S.-backed government of El Salvador.

"We're losing both the war and our credibility trying to overthrow them," Jackson said of the U.S. policy to overthrow that government. "It establishes such a bad precedent."

Asked whether a visit would make it appear he was backing the Sandinista government, Jackson said, "I'm more than Vice President George Bush going to Russia and linking him with the Communist government."

U.S. plans Jordan missile sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has quietly informed Congress it intends to sell up to 1,500 anti-irrat missiles to Jordan while trying to persuade Israel to go along with plans for a U.S.-armed Jordanian strike force, sources said Monday.

The proposed sale surfaced as Jordan's King Hussein held talks with President Reagan, Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Robert C. McFarlane, Reagan's national security adviser, on U.S. policy toward Lebanon. President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt was scheduled to follow suit Tuesday.

Reagan hailed Hussein as a reliable friend whose support for allies in the Persian Gulf "demonstrated his capacity for deeds as well as words."

The king, in response, said "the challenges before us are indeed tremendous, but the determination is there to strive for a better tomorrow." Administration sources "did not want to be identified, said the classified notice of the missile sale reached Capitol Hill late last week, beginning a process that gives Congress 90 days to block the deal. If either the Senate or the House fails to mount a veto in that time, the sale will go through.

The Israeli government, which is weighing an administration appeal that it go along with the strike force, is preparing to campaign against the Stinger missiles.

"They can very easily fall into undesirable hands," said an Israeli official here, who spoke on condition, he remain anonymous. "You can imagine the damage the PLO (Palestine Liberation Organization) could do with 20 of them."

Justice won't act in Nebraska school case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Supreme Court justice Monday refused to free from a Nebraska jail six fathers of students attending the controversial Faith Christian School.

Justice Harry A. Blackmun rejected an emergency request aimed at freeing the six men, who have been jailed since Nov. 23.

Noting that the Nebraska Supreme Court Feb. 9 dismissed appeals by the six men "for lack of an appealable order," Blackmun said, "I have no jurisdiction to act."

His brief order did not preclude the possibility that he could later act on an identical request.

His denial was made "without prejudice to any further application; if necessary, if and when the cases return in a more favorable posture," Blackmun said.

He said arguments raised by the six fathers "did not appear to be substantial."

Lawyers for the fathers said that without Blackmun's help the men jailed Nov. 23 for refusing to answer questions about the school might remain incarcerated "for at least several months or a year."

Transit office gets 'Fleece'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire gave his "Golden Fleece" award Monday to a federal office in Fort Worth, Texas, for "flatly mismanaging $64 million," but an agency official said the timing of the award was unclear.

Proxmire, D-Wis., said he gave his monthly award to the Fort Worth regional office of the Urban Mass Transportation Administration for its handling of $64 million of capital improvement projects between January 1981 and May 1982.

"I think it's unfair for us who are presently here to be hit with that report," responded Scott Tuxhorn, the office's deputy administrator. He said the problems cited by Proxmire arose before he and the current regional administrator took office last summer.

"We were brought in for a reason, and I'll let you reach your own conclusion," he said. "We're really attempting to improve."

The problems originally were raised in a Department of Transportation audit issued last July, Tuxhorn said.

In announcing the award, given for what Proxmire considers wasteful or ridiculous use of taxpayers' money, the senator called the situation in Fort Worth "a classic case of runaway federal spending."

Over a 29-month period office managers took only seven trips to visit projects that were funded but took 44 trips to attend various conferences and meetings, Proxmire said.

What's what

Q. You said Indians' filmmakers can't show on-screen kissing. If sex is out, is violence, too? A. Sex isn't out. Just on-screen kissing. India's movies depict love scenes. Plus rape as well as other brutality, sadism, torture. Murder is usual.

Am told most dinosaurs were the size of chickens.

What to do about the dogs is a puzzle, isn't it? China's Peking banned them, again, and killed off about 200,000. Sweden hasn't banned them, but it's made it tough on the pup owners. If they scoop up their canines' droppings, they have to take said droppings back home with them. Under the law, the sanitation workers don't have to empty street wastebaskets containing such.

WRITERS AND GIN
F. Scott Fitzgerald drank gin. He called it "the writer's vice." Maybe so. It was Ernest Hemingway's drink, as well. He called it "the giant killer." List William Faulkner here, too. He didn't call it anything. Just for more of it. They all chose gin, while they still had choices.

In their search for the perfect potato chip, the major makers have put under contract a sizable variety of experts: structural, electric, chemical and genetic engineers plus computer analysts. The big-budget approach is peculiar, isn't it? Am told it has never occurred to those management wizards to check out every short-order cafe in town and then hire the best fry cook.

First Iron-clad ships were built by the Koreans.

FLAGSTAFF
Arizona's Flagstaff might have been the movie capital of the world, but it snowed. That happens in Flagstaff. Film pioneer Jesse Lasky in 1907 sent a camera crew to Flagstaff to get some footage for an early movie. Bad timing. A storm forced the crew to go on toward the sun. They stopped, finally, at a place called Hollywood.

PRINCESS DIANA
Returning from Norway

Princess expecting 2nd child

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana, 22-year-old wife of Prince Charles, is expecting their second child in late September.

"We are all very pleased. She is very well," said Charles' father, Prince Philip, at the annual dinner of the Windsor Rugby Club. He was the only member of the royal family with a public engagement Monday night. The baby will be third in line of succession to the 1,000-year-old throne, behind 35-year-old Charles and the couple's first child, 19-month-old Prince William. Charles' 23-year-old brother, Royal Navy pilot Prince Andrew, will drop to fourth.

Diana, who returned to Britain Sunday night from a one-day solo trip to Norway, "is in perfect health and certainly we are going to try to make sure that none of her planned engagements is canceled," said a Buckingham Palace spokesman Monday.

Early in her first pregnancy, the princess canceled several engagements at the last minute because of morning sickness, saying nobody had warned her it could be so debilitating. There also was concern over Diana's health in the months after William's birth on June 21, 1982, when she appeared to be losing weight too rapidly. The palace has maintained that she is the picture of health.

Both Diana and Charles expect to continue public engagements until early August, but have canceled a scheduled trip to Italy in October, the palace spokesman said. Diana gave no hint of her pregnancy while in Oslo, where she attended a special London Ballet Company performance of "Carmen" on Saturday night and planted a spruce tree outside the British Embassy on Sunday. It was her second royal engagement abroad without Charles, the other being the funeral of Princess Grace of Monaco 17 months ago.

Buckingham Palace announced the pregnancy at noon, in time for midday television and radio newscasts.

Within minutes, photographers gathered at the gates of Kensington Palace, the couple's London residence, hoping for a glimpse of the expectant princess. But she stayed out of view and scheduled no public appearances until Wednesday, when she and Charles are to tour a British car factory.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Anna Anderson Manahan was convinced she was the "resurrection" of Anastasia, the youngest daughter of Russia's last czar, her biographer said Monday. Mrs. Manahan, the wife of a retired University of Virginia professor, died at Martha Jefferson Hospital here Sunday, said hospital spokesman Clay Thompson. She was 82. She claimed to be the only member of Czar Nicholas II's family to escape execution by Bolshevik soldiers at Ekaterinburg in the Ural Mountains on July 17, 1918. "Most people in the U.S. were not aware how serious this claim was. It was taken very seriously by people in Europe," said Peter Kurth, author of "Anastasia: The Riddle of Anna Anderson."

The book, published in 1983, supports Mrs. Manahan's claim to be the sole survivor of the czar's immediate family. "Her lawsuits for recognition in West Germany went all the way to the country's supreme court, which (in 1970) said it could neither be proved nor disproved," Kurth said by telephone from his home in Burlington, Vt. From his conversations with Mrs. Manahan, Kurth concluded that she "was sick of the whole thing. She was quite certain she would not be recognized for what she was in her lifetime." Her life was the basis of the fictionalized movie "Anastasia," for which Ingrid Bergman won an Oscar in 1956. In claiming to be Anastasia, Mrs. Manahan had said she was shot by Bolsheviks, was nursed back to health by a sympathetic soldier who smuggled her out of Russia to Romagna, where they were married. She claimed her husband later was murdered in Bucharest by Soviet agents and their only son disappeared after being taken to an orphanage. Her claim to being the grand duchess gained public attention in 1922, when she was recovering in Berlin from a suicide attempt, but it was not until 1933 that she began to press her claim in the courts. Kurth said other members of the royal Romanov family resolved in the 1920s to dismiss the claim. In 1977, German handwriting and forensics experts said comparisons of photos of the young Anastasia and Mrs. Manahan and of their handwriting showed them to be the same person.

Boy reacts to transplant.

HOUSTON (AP) — David, the 12-year-old boy recently removed for the first time from his sterile bubble, has developed a common reaction to a bone marrow transplant, but his condition is not considered serious, doctors said Monday. Tests on a tissue sample taken Sunday revealed that David, who was born with no immunity to disease, had developed inflammation caused by a graft-vs.-host reaction to the bone marrow transplant he received from his sister last fall, Dr. William T. Shearer said. "David's condition is not considered serious and we are encouraged because the presence of a graft-vs.-host reaction means that the bone marrow transplant he received in October is alive in David's body," Shearer said.

W-2 forms list 10,000 people 'dead'

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — According to their W-2 forms, all 10,000 employees of the East Baton Rouge Parish school system are dead. "It's a serious confusion and a mess," said Richard Raether, financial officer for the school board. He said the fault lies with a printer. An X was supposed to be printed to indicate that the employees participate in a pension plan. "The printer left off 'qualified pension plan,'" he said, so the X was left without a heading, next to the title "deceased."

However, he said, the mistake was only on the printed forms — not on the official magnetic tape sent to the Internal Revenue Service. "We checked with the IRS, and we don't think it'll cause anybody any problem," he said.

Forget flowers, try .38 special

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A Nashville store is urging men to forget flowers and candy for their valentines this year and instead give their loved ones a handgun. "For a lasting gift of love, insure her with Colt," said an advertisement in The Tennessean's Sunday Showcase magazine. The ad for Small Arms Weaponry said a women's handgun training class is included with the purchase of a Colt Agent .38-caliber Special. The pistol with 100 rounds of ammunition sells for $214.95. Chernenko for 'peaceful coexistence'

MOSCOW (AP) — Konstantin U. Chernenko, who was named leader of the Soviet Union Monday, vowed in his first speech to maintain the country's military strength as a counter to "the hot heads of militant adventurists."

But the 72-year-old successor to the late Yuri V. Andropov said he supported the Soviet policy of seeking "peaceful coexistence" with the West. Vice President George Bush, in Moscow for Andropov's funeral, has said the Kremlin power shift could be a "turning point" in Soviet-American relations.

Chernenko, lifelong ally of the late President Leonid I. Brezhnev, is the oldest man ever to become general secretary of the Communist Party. When Brezhnev died in November 1982, it was widely believed that Chernenko was Andropov's rival for the party leadership. After Andropov was it appeared that Chernenko's political future was in doubt, but he retained enough influence in the top party ranks to grasp the top party post.

Chernenko was chosen by his 11 fellow members of the ruling Politburo. Unanimous approval Monday by the Central Committee was announced by the official news media at 2 p.m. (4 a.m. MST), as heads of state and government leaders from around the world gathered to attend Andropov's funeral. The funeral will be today in Red Square.

The new general secretary does not yet have the additional title of president, with which Andropov and Brezhnev consolidated their power. The presidency probably will remain vacant until the Supreme Soviet — or parliament — next meets, and elections for the new Parliament are scheduled for March 4.

Tass said Chernenko opened Monday's special session of the Central Committee, which praised Andropov as an "outstanding leader of the Communist Party and the Soviet state, an ardent patriot, Leninist, a tireless fighter for peace."

In his own speech, Chernenko made no specific proposals for resumption of U.S.-Soviet dialogue.

Rifle fire crackles in Beirut

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iran shelled six Iraqi border towns Monday and Iraq retaliated by directing its artillery fire on the southern Iranian city of Abadan for the second straight day, said an official Iraqi communique.

Twenty-two Iraqis were killed in Monday's shelling, bringing to 36 the number killed since Sunday, the communique said. It said 22 were injured, bringing that total to 140.

There was no immediate confirmation from Iran of shelling by either nation.

The Iranian barrage covered the southern Iraqi provincial capital of Basra and the central border towns of Mandali, Khanaqin, Twelah, Khormal, Mandali and Zarbatya, according to the communique released by the general command of the Iraqi armed forces.

"Let the criminal rulers in Iran know that we will strike the targets which were previously designated as well as other targets at the suitable time as long as they daily continue to reaffirm the extent of their rancor, crimes, and their failure to feel responsible toward their people," the communique said.

It said 14 civilians were killed and 36 others were injured in Basra, about 12 miles west of the front line with Iran, which has an estimated population of 500,000.

Panamanian president steps down

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — President Ricardo de la Esparrella resigned Monday and the head of the Supreme Court immediately swore in Vice President Jorge Illueca to replace him.

Illueca also is president of the 38th U.N. General Assembly.

There was no immediate explanation of the change in leadership, which came three months before the presidential election scheduled for May 5 — the first since a coup in 1968. The national guard, Panama's army, has ruled the country either directly or through selected presidents since the coup.

The government-owned television network Televisora Nacional first announced de la Esparrella's resignation, quoting official sources, and a few minutes later Illueca confirmed the report. He said on national radio that he had been sworn in as president and that de la Esparrella "resigned for personal reasons."

"We spoke very cordially and he told me that he had made this decision," Illueca said.

De la Esparrella, 50, sent a letter of resignation to Congress at midday, the television network said. It quoted the letter as saying only "I communicate in this way for pertinent reasons that I have decided to resign the presidency as of Feb. 13, 1984."

Shells batter border towns

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Saturated exchanges of sniper fire between the Lebanese army and Muslim militias crackled through the Lebanese capital Monday, and the army for a second day allowed dozens of trucks to carry food and fuel to the trapped residents of west Beirut.

Brig. Gen. Lutfi Jaber, Shiite commander of the army's 6th Brigade, ordered his soldiers to report to duty in west Beirut within 48 hours and take over security of the besieged Muslim sector of the capital. The spiritual leader of Beirut's Shites called for "absolute cooperation" with the brigade to restore law and order.

The move will give the army its first presence in the predominantly Muslim sector since militiamen took control a week ago in heavy fighting. The 6th Brigade had refused to fight at the height of the battle.

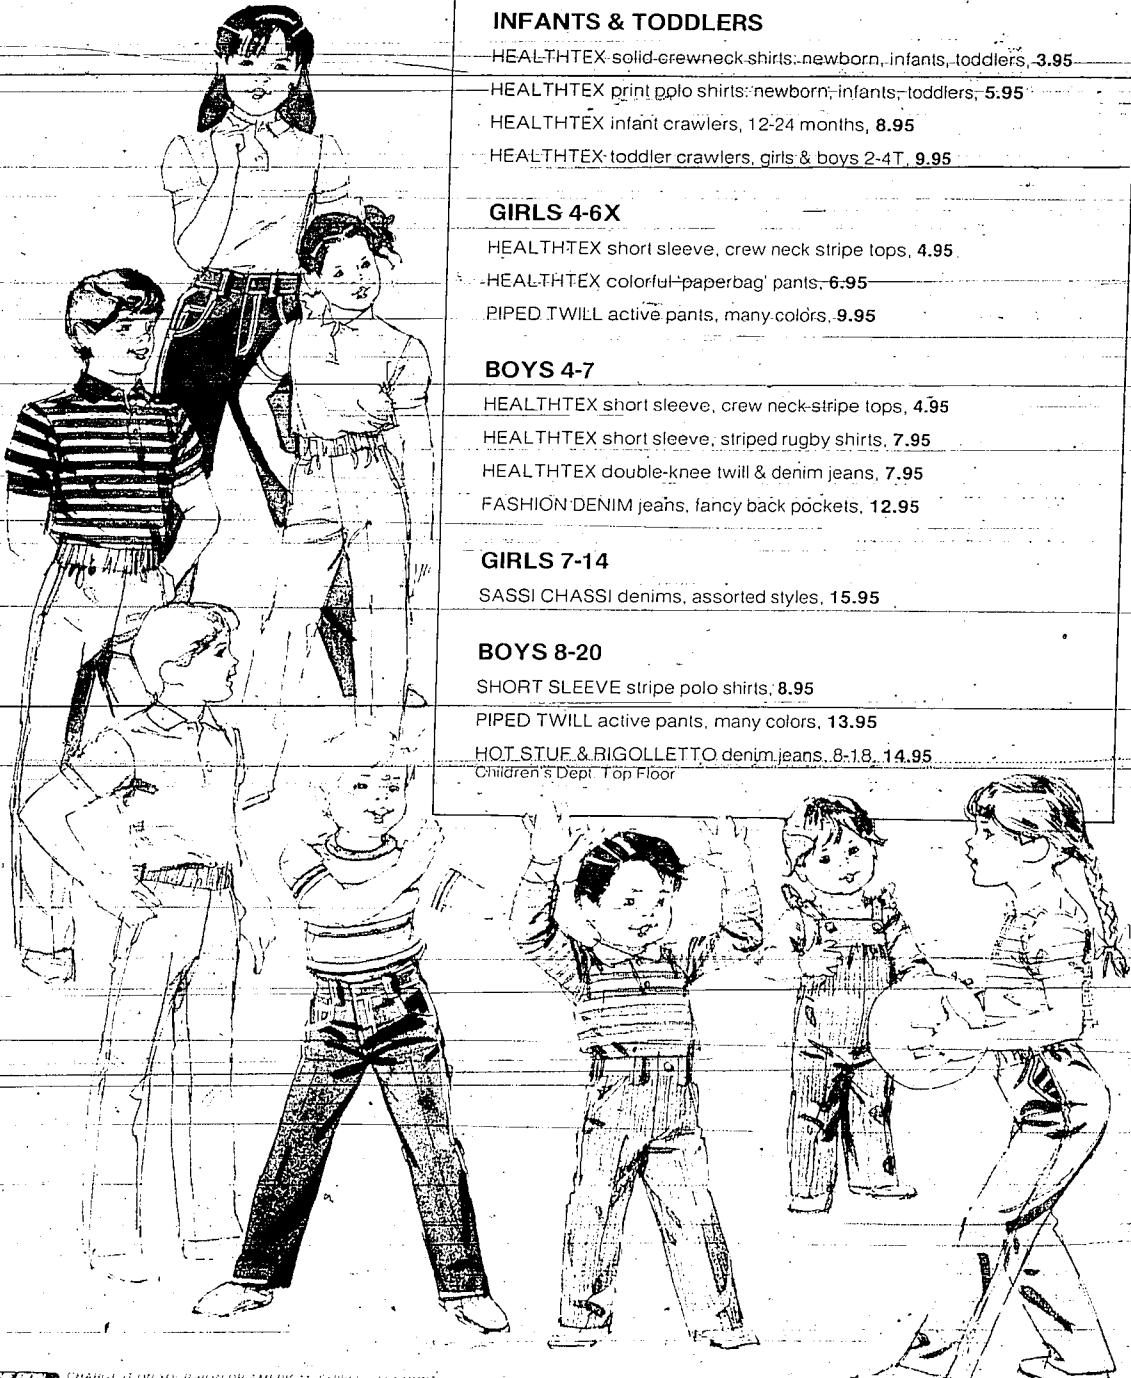

The move came a day after President Amin Gemayel called for a national reconciliation conference within two weeks and put forth a plan to reunite the war-torn nation.

Governor stepping into IFF waste dispute

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

BOISE — Gov. John Evans has met with representatives of Idaho Frozen Foods and the state Department of Health and Welfare to discuss the state's response to violations of a compliance agreement between the state and the company.

The agreement governs the performance of the company's potato waste-treatment facility in the Snake River Canyon.

In December, the Twin Falls office of Health and Welfare's Division of Environment compiled a report listing areas where the company's operation of the system has failed to meet the standards set forth in the agreement.

Evans is stepping in to make sure the company has "every opportunity" to make the system work before action is taken on compliance, according to Dave Porter, chief of the governor's Division of Economic and Community Affairs.

Porter, who was present at the meeting, held Feb. 3, says he was called in to serve as an "ombudsman," to ensure that the company had a chance to make its best case.

Following the meeting, state officials were directed not to discuss details of the meeting or the state's decision, The Times-News learned Monday.

Porter says officials were told not to comment because the governor is anxious to work the situation out "without a big public fuss," because that then poisons the whole process.

But Porter says the governor's concern does not mean there will be leeway in the regulations. The governor is concerned with enhancing three values: employment, water quality and the Snake River Canyon, Porter says.

Paul Cunningham, the governor's natural resources assistant, emphasized the economic side in a comment he made Monday. "IFF is a rather large employer in your community," and the governor hopes to find some resolution, "to the problem."

Others present at the meeting included IFF President Lee Odenwald, Health and Welfare director Rose Bauman and Division of Environment chief Lee Stokes.

"The spirit is of them sitting down to work things out, go through the technical aspects of the system and the consent order," Porter says.

The objective is to have "a good business climate with a clean environment," according to Porter.

He says the group was concerned with getting the "amenable result" of a working system. "I expect these prospects are high, and there aren't huge problems on the horizon."

Stokes refused to comment on the meeting Monday or any possible action under the compliance agreement.

"I am not going to discuss an enforcement action that is not in any formal stage," he said.

Gary Harkett, a Division of Environment engineer who works out of the Twin Falls office, says he received a request for more information, including sketches of the system, from the Boise office after the first meeting.

Mike McMasters, the head of the Twin Falls office, had said in December that possible action under the agreement could include fines, a request that the company modify the system or a renegotiation of the agreement, should IFF choose to seek it.

Compliance violations include waste test results that exceeded the limits set forth in the agreement, although so far, the results have been inconsistent.

Odenwald has said the company is committed firmly to making the system work, but he was unavailable for comment Monday night.

Fire

Blaine fire protection in doubt

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Blaine County needs to do something about its fire protection, which is inadequate to meet the needs of a growing and spread-out community, fire officials say.

At present, two populated and growing areas — a part of East Fork and Board Ranch, west of Ketchum — are outside any fire district, and existing fire teams say they are not equipped adequately to respond to fires in outlying districts.

"I think it's very serious," says Bill Miller, the Ketchum fire chief, about the state of fire protection in the county.

Wood River Valley

Miller, who had nearly 30 years of firefighting experience in California communities before a fall from a ladder ended his career, points to two areas in Blaine County where fire protection breaks down.

First, he says, an attitude exists in the Wood River Valley that fire protection is an unnecessary expense.

The attitude is reflected in the actions of officials facing pressure from developers and people building homes who are trying to cut costs, he says.

Second, there is inadequate equipment, facilities and manpower throughout the county for proper firefighting, says Miller, whose Ketchum department also serves as the Ketchum Rural Fire Department, under contract with the city.

Miller says that during the four years he has been in the county, he has encountered an attitude that "the best fire protection is a good insurance policy."

The attitude, he says, is found at all levels — the general populace, developers, architects and elected and appointed officials.

Miller, who says he is openly critical of the situation only because he wants to make people aware of the problems and begin thinking about them, disagrees with the attitude.

It does not take into consideration the human element, he says. It "writes off" a person trapped inside a burning building. And an insurance policy does not replace jobs or the economic impact on the community if a commercial building burns, he says.

What is needed, Miller says, is to require developers to provide water storage and lines for fire protection, and for home builders to put in fire detectors and suppressors — to put out or hold a fire until help arrives.

These requirements, he says, should be included in county ordinances and enforced.

Miller discounts the complaint that the county is under heavy pressure from developers who say they cannot afford to put in adequate fire apparatus.

"I don't have an awful lot of sympathy for them. If they don't have the money to put it in, maybe they don't have the money to develop."

Ed Nipbor, the county zoning administrator, is conducting a study at the request of the county's Planning and Zoning Commission, and the county commissioners — to answer the question — "Are we requiring too much in the way of fire protection?"

Nipbor is compiling comparative information and should have his report done in a couple of weeks.

"If he goes back and tells them that they are doing too much, I'd be shocked," Miller says.

Miller says rural fire-district infrastructures must be redone to give adequate protection throughout the county.

Currently, all of the firefighting equipment is located in towns, and most of it is inadequate for fighting fires in outlying areas, he says.

Large tankers to carry enough water are needed. You can't shuttle water to a fire and expect to save a house, he says.

And satellite fire stations and volunteers in the outlying areas also are important to cut down the amount of time it takes to get to a fire, Miller says.

Dave Aden, the county's building inspector whose duties include being its fire official, says the county may be moving toward consolidating its three rural fire districts — Carey, Wood River and Ketchum.

However, that may be down the road another 20 years or so, he says. And he also says that one district may or may not fit the needs of the county.

Proper equipment and satellite stations are something the county needs,

Some seek aid from Minidoka

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

HAILEY — A small group of Blaine County residents are hoping to get fire protection from "Minidoka County," because they are too isolated to get it from their home county.

About 20 families, who live on ranches only a few miles from the city of Minidoka, just north of the Snake River, are petitioning the Blaine County commissioners to allow them to join the Minidoka County Fire Protection District.

"We are hoping that we could have fire protection in the area," Miller, a resident of the area. "We just don't have any."

The commissioners will consider the request at a public hearing set for 2 p.m. today at the Courthouse in Hailey.

Dave Aden, Blaine County's fire administrator, says the idea began about two years ago when the residents approached Minidoka officials.

He says joining the Minidoka district is the only way they can get fire protection.

The area, known as the Yale Precinct for voting purposes, is 65 to 70 miles southeast of Carey, where the nearest rural fire district in Blaine County is located — across roadless desert and lava beds.

The Yale Precinct, part of what was Alturas County, was left as a part of Blaine County when the rest of the Alturas was split into parts of Power, Camas and Butte counties between 1833 and 1847.

However, the area's agricultural economy and heritage is directly tied to Minidoka County and the Rupert area, Miller says.

Thayne Taylor, the fire marshal for Minidoka County and Rupert, and a firefighter with the county-wide fire district, says the county is willing to include the area in the fire district, even though it would dilute its tax base.

"We feel like the people need some protection out there."

The area often has grass and brush fires that endanger homes, Taylor says. Several new homes, barns and equipment sheds have been built in the region in the last few years, he says.

Idaho law, Taylor says, requires the area's residents to petition their home county for the right to have an election to determine if they want to join an out-of-county fire district.

If a majority of residents vote to do so, they must be accepted by the other county's district, he says.

If all roads in the small group of Blaine County residents also will have a representative on the district's board of commissioners, to comply with state law, Taylor says.

The law states that if a fire district crosses county lines, no more than two of its three commissioners can come from the same county.

The district would meet that requirement when the first opening came up on the board, Taylor says.

Love interviews

Short and long views of love are given in interviews by these three couples. Gene Springsted and Laura Wagen, above left, have been engaged for a month. In contrast, Carl and Blanche Estep of Jerome, left, have been married for 45 years. Wedded for three years are Jamie and Jayce Halliwell of Elko, Nev., above. With them is son Daniel, age 6 months.

Love: A many splintered definition

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — What is love? To a songwriter, it's a many splintered thing. To author Erich Segal, it's never having to say "you're sorry."

"To Garfield the Cat, it's a plate of lasagna. On Valentine's Day, thoughts usually turn to love and its meaning. And some Magic Valley residents have some definite ideas on the definition of the word.

Gene Springsted, 22, of Twin Falls, says that it is "making sure that the person I care about is happy." The person whom he cares about, 20-year-old Laura Wagen, also of Twin Falls, will become his wife in June.

"Love is just being really happy with a person, always," Laura says. "It's waking up next to someone and not being bored."

The meaning of love has changed for Gene, he says, since he became engaged to Laura in January.

"It didn't have as much depth before. There was no commitment or involvement, where it does now."

Jayce and Jamie Halliwell of Elko, Nev., who were visiting in Twin Falls on Monday, say that their feelings about love have grown tremendously with the birth of their son, Daniel.

Jayce, 26, describes love as "total trust and having understanding." Jamie says it is the total "sharing of emotions and feelings — and the freedom to release them."

Carl and Blanche Estep of Jerome also say that understanding and thoughtfulness are the main components of love. They have been married for 45 years, and they say there's still the sparkle of

Bean market bogged down by low exports

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Americans are biting into more beans, but Idaho growers still may want to think twice about raising pinks, whites and pinks in 1984.

Bean markets still are bogged down by low export demand and competition from other parts of the United States, says Harold West, a former administrator of the Idaho Bean Commission.

West, who still runs the commission's promotional thrusts as a consultant, told 150 Twin Falls County bean farmers on Monday that the 1984 bean market remains a question mark.

Prices have perked up substantially from last year's lows of $8 for a 100-pound bag. Yet, despite a 40 percent cut in national production last year, prices have not risen much beyond production costs — between $17 and $20 an acre.

The reasons are tied to national bean supplies, he says.

Export demand has been sluggish, Mexico, which purchased huge quantities of American beans in 1980 and 1981, is not importing any now, West says.

"The government has not approved any bean purchases." In fact, Mexico has geared up its own bean machine, he says. Now, "they are actually exporting beans to Cuba."

European countries also are not importing American beans for financial reasons. The high value of the U.S. dollar overseas has forced them to pay higher prices for American-grown beans. Now countries such as England, which imports white beans, Spain and Italy are giving more of their bean business to other nations with better rates of exchange.

"We have not yet seen a good, strong demand in the market for our beans," West says. "Hopefully, that's going to change."

Domestically, demand is up. The popularity of ethnic foods that contain beans has been growing. But more growers in other parts of the country also have been planting beans. Idaho gets some business from that because it raises much of the bean seed used in the United States.

However, domestic demand overall still is too low to offset the amount of beans available. West says, much less those that Mexico used to import.

"If we can build up per-capita consumption of beans one pound (a

Arrest made in armed robbery

TWIN FALLS — A 23-year-old Heyburn man has been charged with armed robbery in connection with last week's holdup of the Mr. Gas service station in Twin Falls.

The suspect, Joe Garcia of 530 Birch Drive in Heyburn, was arrested Monday. His vehicle had been impounded by Twin Falls police following the robbery, which occurred last Wednesday night.

Two men, wearing ski masks and armed with handguns, robbed the station attendant and two customers who were in the building, at Blue Lakes Boulevard North and Heyburn Avenue.

Police Chief Tim Qualls said only one arrest has been made, but the investigation is continuing.

Garcia was being held Monday night in the Twin Falls County jail.

No bond has been set, pending arraignment in magistrate court.

Forgeries bring second arrest

JEROME — A second suspect in a series of forgeries in Jerome was arraigned last week on 11 felony charges.

According to Jerome police, Richard Allen Jones, 22, of Wendell, was taken into custody Wednesday night at their request.

Jones has been charged, along with Ted Anderson, 20, of Wendell, with forging 11 checks and cashing them in Jerome grocery stores.

The checks were written on an account of Harold Koscoe of Wendell, who contacted officers to report that checks were being written on a closed account.

Anderson was arrested last Monday.

Jones was released on his own recognizance following his arraignment Thursday before magistrate Judge Roger Burdick.

Two schools win national honor

BOISE (AP) — Two Magic Valley schools are among 10 Idaho secondary schools that have been nominated for consideration in a nationwide program to find public schools that are doing "an exceptionally fine job."

State education officials said Monday that Wood River High School in Halley and Jerome Junior High School are among the select group.

Others nominated for the honor include Boise's Capital and Bergh high schools and the high schools in Moscow and Mullen. Four other high schools were nominated: Silver Hills in Wallace, Lake Hazel in Meridian, Caldwell's Jefferson and Moscow Junior High.

The schools were picked by a committee headed by David Steadman, the state accreditation supervisor for the Department of Education.

It's part of a program launched by Terrell Bell, secretary of the U.S. Department of Education, to identify "distinguished" public schools.

Winning schools will be recognized by the president and will receive a flag and plaques.

Fire

Adonagrees: — The unprotected areas of the county, which also include pockets throughout the Big Wood River corridor, could be placed in a fire district before too long, he says.

But to annex an area that has no value to a district because budgets cannot be increased under the restrictions of the One Percent Inflation — only spreads men and equipment thin, he says.

Miller suggests a possible way around that problem is to create homeowners' associations in unprotected areas, which could contract with a fire district for protection and pay directly for facilities or more equipment.

Love

romance.

"It's different now, than in younger people. It's deeper," says Carl, who is 70.

Blanche, who will celebrate her 74th birthday today, says the "longer you live with someone, the closer you become."

"But when it comes to defining love, Blanche says: "I hadn't really thought about it. We do things that we both like to do, and I think that's love more or less."

Jay Snyder, the justice of the peace in Jackpot, says that he's seen love among couples in all age ranges — from 18 to 66.

He's also seen different reactions to wedding ceremonies. Some folks are embarrassed, others are sincere and some think it's funny.

The ones who take it lightly usually show up later in the newspaper when their divorces are announced, he says.

"But you can easily see when a couple is in love. And I do receive great enjoyment from a couple that truly are in love."

Magistrate Judge Charles Brumbach, of Fifth District Court in Twin Falls, has handled "many" divorces cases. He says that love can be expensive.

On a more serious note, Methodist minister Barbara Upp of Filer says that to her and husband, David, who also is a minister, love is "deep and sustained mutual support. Our definition is not just a feeling; it's a commitment."

The bottom line, she says, is that love is a "channel of God's grace. When 'pop' gets into these channels, that's where the love really flows."

Beans

It would dramatically affect the market.

One advantage Idaho continues to have, he says, is good freight access to the metropolitan markets of the Southwest, such as Los Angeles. Many competing states have to ship beans farther to market, increasing their costs, West says.

"The Bean Commission" has been moving to fill up more shopping bags with beans by using recipe promotions in newspapers and magazines, he says. It also provides filmstrips to home-economics classes.

White interest in beans is growing, whether beans will beat potatoes or other crops in price remains uncertain.

"We hope that the market will turn around . . . and you'll be back in the bean business in Idaho," he told the growers.

TWIN FALLS — The Center for New Directions at CSI will co-sponsor a sharing group for a newly organized PMS organization.

According to center director Rita Larson, at last premenstrual syndrome has come out of the closet and is recognized as the cause of depression, stress, distress, mood swings and many physical illnesses. Sixty to 80 percent of all women suffer from PMS to some degree or another, she says.

The purpose of the support group is to reassure women there are others who experience the same frustrations. There will be no charge for joining. The group will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. this Wednesday in Room 106 of the Shields Building.

Be a sweetheart this Valentine's day

DEAR READERS: Can you believe it's St. Valentine's Day again? Well, it is, so here's my updated annual message.

Be a sweetheart; call someone who's lonely and say, "I'm thinking of you." Or better yet, say, "I'm coming over to take you to lunch ... or to run some errands ... or to give you a ride." Visit someone in a nursing home or a prison.

Say a prayer. Donate some blood. Adopt a pet. Will your eyes, your kidneys and all your usable organs to someone who can use them after you're gone. Quit smoking. Listen to your teen-ager. Write a fan letter. Tell your parents you think they're great.

Pay your doctor. Spay your dog. Neuter your cat. Forgive an enemy.

Register to vote. Hug a child. Listen to a bore. Send a donation to the Salvation Army. Care or to the charity of your choice.

If you love someone, tell him or her now; don't wait until next Valentine's Day to be a sweetheart again. — Love, ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago my mother died of a lingering illness. Now my father will soon remarry. The big problem: He is planning to take the diamond out of Mother's wedding ring and have it reset for his new wife.

My sister and I both voiced our objections for sentimental reasons. By the way, my mother promised the ring to my sister, but toward the end, she told Dad (in our presence) that if he needed to sell it for financial reasons it was OK with her.

I am shocked that Dad would actually give that diamond to another woman. He said it was just a piece of jewelry. When we told him that we disagreed with him on this point, he held to his position.

Dear Abby

Abby, this woman my dad is marrying has been married before (she's a widow) and is not in need of any more jewelry. Is Dad wrong? Or are we? Where's the ring?!

—MAD AT DAD
DEAR MAD: You say that your mother promised the ring to your sister unless your dad needed to sell it for financial reasons, so since your dad did not sell it, the ring "belongs" to your sister, which is what I would tell your dad were he to ask me. However, he didn't ask me for your ring. So my advice to you is to forget it unless you want to take your father to court for breaking a verbal contract, which I think is unthinkable.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 29-year-old married woman (no children) and do not have a job outside my home. My husband and I are very happy with our lives and we have an excellent relationship.

When I meet people for the first time, they usually ask, "And what do YOU do?"

I don't want to say, "I'm just a housewife." And I don't want to say,

"I don't do anything," because actually I do a lot of cooking, cleaning, shopping, laundry and entertaining. I make a nice comfortable home for my husband and myself.

Abby, do you know of some witty comeback?

—AT A LOSS FOR WORDS

DEAR AT: Don't say, "I'm just a housewife." Say proudly, "I hate to brag, but I'm a housewife."

Lonely? Get Abby's updated, revised and expanded booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages. Send $2 plus a large, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

SUN VALLEY — Family and friends of Christin Cooper reacted with jubilation Monday over the Sun Valley skier's Olympic silver medal that she won in the giant slalom at Sarajevo, Yugoslavia.

"We're just happy to see that she was able to do it," said Gretchen Fraser, a close friend of Cooper's and the first American woman to win an Olympic gold medal in skiing.

Fraser said the 24-year-old Cooper's finish — was especially commendable because she has had to overcome the psychological and physical handicaps of serious injuries during the two previous World Cup seasons.

"She's just a tremendous athlete and very dedicated," said Fraser, who won the special slalom (now giant slalom) in 1980 at the Winter Olympics at St. Moritz, Switzerland.

Christin's brother, Cam, 21, and sister Kelley, 25, were celebrating their sister's success in Ketchum, where Cam is recovering from a ski injury.

"We're really excited," she said Monday afternoon. But the skier racer's brother was just as quick to acknowledge the first- and fourth-place finishes of Americans Debbie Armstrong and Tamara McKinley.

"It must be making them (the Europeans) so mad," he said. Corby Dibble, director of the Sun Valley Ski Education Foundation — with which Cooper skied from grade school until she joined the national team at age 16 — also expressed her enjoyment of Cooper's success.

"We are so excited and thrilled for her," Dibble said. "It wasn't entirely unexpected."

Dibble said she was also excited for women's team coach Michel Rudgzo, a Sun Valley resident who once coached the foundation's team, and for Maria Marichek, who is a native of Sun Valley and will compete in the downhill event later this week.

Cam Cooper believes his sister's chances for a second medal in the slalom — which will be run Friday — are excellent because she will be relaxed now that she has won one medal and the pressure is off.

"And when she's relaxed, she's the best," he said.

Cam Cooper said that this is probably his sister's last year in competition and that she is making a special effort to do well in the Olympics.

"She's really going for it this year," he said.

It is Christin Cooper's second Winter Olympic Games. She finished seventh and eighth in the giant slalom and slalom, respectively, in the 1980 Olympics at Lake Placid, N.Y.

Yankee pressure released

By NOHM CLARKE
The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — "You could hear Americans howling in the streets downtown when they announced it," said Pat Ahern, a Nordic-combines member of the American Olympic team.

"I actually got chills up my back," bobblester Bob Hiteley said.

"The groom was gone—America's first gold medal had finally arrived." Yankees in the Olympic Village were jumping with joy after the 1-2 U.S. finish by Debbie Armstrong and Christin Cooper in Monday's women's giant slalom.

Congratulatory telegrams poured in, flowers piled up, and teammates uncorked champagne salutes.

"The cloud that was hanging over the Olympic Village just parted," said Ed Knigge, spokesman for the United States Olympic Committee.

"It's really got us psyched," 22-year-old downhill skier Tiger Shaw of Stowe, Vt., said. "We're ecstatic."

Women's luger Bonnie Warner was at the ABC center reviewing tapes of her performance when the dramatic medals had developed.

"Everyone stopped what they were doing to watch. Twenty television monitors were suddenly switched to the same channel. The place was a zoo."

"On their way back to the Olympic Village, she bought a bottle of 'Yugoslav' champagne, some red, white and blue flowers and a card for Armstrong that read: "For a future luge teammate."

"I was just kidding about that, but I've told her I'm going to recruit her for the luge team," said Warner.

She said Cooper's silver and Tamara McKinley's fourth-place finish, less than a half second out of third, was "just lying on the cake."

"At the USOC office, the phones steadily rang," said Warner.

"Sports Illustrated just called. The girls are on the cover," chirped a secretary.

"It was great. Just super," fastriding downhill star Bill Johnston said as he walked through the Village.

Ahern was entering the team quarters with a bouquet of blue and white flowers for Armstrong.

"I was downtown with my parents and we saw it through a window at a radio-television store," he said. "It lifted a lot of pressure off the team."

Figure skating star Elaine Zayak, elated by the news, saw it as a confidence booster for the entire U.S. squad.

"I think it's possible for us to win medals in the rest of the skating events. And maybe skiing, too," she said.

Dan Simoneau of Eugene, Ore., was the top American, finishing 18th in 43.03.4. Bill Koch, also of Eugene, faltered after three kilometers and finished 27th. Tim Caldwell of Putney, Vt., was 29th, and Todd Bostra of Eagan, Minn., was 51th.

East Germans Joerg Hoffmann and Jochen Pietzsch had the fastest time in the first day of men's double luge trials, and Americans Frank Masley of Newark, Del., and Raymond Bateman of Nesmanite Station, N.J., were in ninth place, about seven seconds off the pace, with the final run on Thursday.

Hamilton, America's main man in figure skates, did something Monday he had never done before — win all three parts of the compulsories.

"That placed him in even better shape than he had hoped in his bid for gold in the men's singles."

"This is a goosebump competition to end all goosebump competitions," said the three-time world champion, referring to the Olympics in general.

"Let us wait with that until the Games are over," the 22-year-old economics student said, confirming that she would enter the 3,000-meter race and try for a fourth medal and a third gold.

Lydia Stephens of North Brook, Ill., was 13th.

Sweden's Gunde Svan, his performance running four years ahead of schedule, won a gold medal in the men's 15-kilometer cross-country race. He defeated two Finns.

"I never counted on 1984," Svan said. "I thought I might win in 1988 when I would be better trained and have better experience."

Even hockey team wins in the romp

By D. BYRON YAKE
The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — The Americans dealt a cold hand early, finally showed their mettle at the Winter Olympics, with Debbie Armstrong winning the gold in the women's giant slalom Monday and teammate Christin Cooper taking the silver.

Armstrong earned the United States its first gold medal of the Games with her heroics on the slopes of Mount Jahorina. She and Cooper boosted the U.S. medal count to three, following the silver medal won in pairs figure skating by Kilty and Peter Carruthers of Wilmington, Del., Sunday night.

Add to that a commanding performance by Scott Hamilton in the compulsory figures of the men's figure skating.

Toss in a dash to fourth place by Tamara McKinley in the giant slalom, two Americans in the top 10 after the first double luge trial and a third-place spot in ice dancing for Judy Blumberg and Michael Silebert with free dancing remaining.

Sprinkle in a bit of success by the U.S. hockey team, which defeated Austria 7-3 Monday night behind Pat LaFontaine's three goals, and you have a U.S. Olympic team on a hot streak.

"I was beginning to think we were snake-bit," a hoarse William E. Simon, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, said. "This is just great for the United States."

The Americans and other athletes also got relief from a chronic snow storm that turned the Alpine events schedule into turmoil. It seemed promising, at last, that Californian

Bill Johnson would get a shot at the gold medal in the men's downhill on Thursday.

In hockey, Canada, Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union clinched berths in the medals competition.

Canada defeated Norway 8-1, while Czechoslovakia beat Finland 7-2 to gain berths from Group B.

It was the fourth straight victory for the Canadians, who have a solid chance for a medal.

The U.S. team, which failed to make the medals round, finally won a game after losing its first two and tying the next one. Its Olympics will be over on Wednesday after it plays Finland.

In other hockey, Sweden defeated Poland 10-1, Yugoslavia beat Italy 5-1, and the Soviet Union clinched a berth in the medals round from Group A with a 6-1 victory over West Germany.

With their new-found medals fallout, the United States was tied with Sweden for fifth place in the standings.

East Germany, which picked up a gold and silver Monday in the 1,000-meter skating, was in first place with 13 points, including six golds, six silvers and two bronzes.

The Soviet Union had 13 points, with three gold, four silver and six bronzes; Finland had eight points, Norway four, and Sweden, with two gold medals, also had three points.

East Germany's Karin Enke became the Games' first triple-medal winner, taking her second gold medal to go along with a silver in speed-skating. She won the 1,000-meter competition in an Olympic record time of 1:21.61 and edged out her teammate, Andrea Schoene.

Scott Hamilton shows best form

Idaho JV will have varsity look against Eagles tonight

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It's good news for fans, but not so good news for College of Southern Idaho's Golden Eagles when they square off against the University of Idaho junior varsity tonight.

The team that lines up against Coach Fred Trenkle's Eagles might look suspiciously like the Vandal varsity.

"We hear," said Trenkle, "that Idaho is bringing down everyone but the two seniors (Stan) Arnold and (Pete) Prtge and (Freeman) Watkins."

That means it could well be a good game for spectators, but as Trenkle points out, "what I didn't need was to take two days of preparation for Idaho when I would have preferred to have had the whole week getting ready for Ricks."

The 9 p.m. game will cap a double-header at the CSI gymnasium with the Bull Indians taking on the Wood River Wolverines at 6:30. The sophomore teams from those high schools will play at 4:30.

Idaho is taking advantage of the Big Sky Conference forfeit that Idaho State presented to it two weeks ago.

"I understand what Coach (Bill) Trumbo is doing," said Trenkle. "He has a young team and he wants to get as much game experience in them as he can. The forfeit actually took one game away from Idaho."

"I guess they're getting a little fired up for the game," too," he said with a smug.

(Assistant Coach Pat) Hoke (who coached at Jerome last year) and Trumbo scouted us

Friday night (at Coeur d'Alene when CSI played North Idaho College). They might have been up there looking for recruitable talent.

"If what we hear about who they are bringing is right, we're going to be giving up quite a bit in size and they'll have good depth," he continued.

Fellest of the visitors is 6-foot-11 sophomore Pete Riehl, but Idaho's roster also carries 6-5 junior Zane Frazier, 6-6 Junior Frank Garza, 6-6 sophomore Mark Hoke, 6-4 sophomore Matt Haskins, and freshmen Steve Adams (6-5), Ernest Sanders (6-2), Ulf Spears (6-4), Tom Stallek (6-7) and Chris Carey (5-9). All of these have started at one time or another for the Vandal varsity this year.

"We watched Idaho against Montana in Moscow Thursday night and they obviously are putting a lot of emphasis on their freshmen this year," Trenkle said. "Even if they were bringing only the freshmen, their experience factor would be very similar to ours. But if Garza, Frazier, Haskins and some of those guys show up with them, we'll be considerably behind in experience."

Although CSI lost its Region 18 battle at NIC Saturday in overtime, Trenkle said "Realistically, it didn't change our season much. Regardless of that win we still have to beat Ricks at Resburg (next Saturday) and North Idaho here (Feb. 25). Had we won the game, we would have had an alternative if North Idaho had beaten Ricks in Coeur d'Alene. But we're still where we want to be — in control of our own destiny. If we lose it (the rights to the regional) now, it will be because we didn't perform."

"But even then," Trenkle added, "it still boils down to having to beat one or both of them again in regional because one or the other or both are going to show up against us there."

The regional format takes the top four teams from Region 18 to the site of the best team based on regular-season standings. It would appear now the fourth-place team will be Clackamas Community College of Oregon City, Ore., or Treasure Valley Community College of Ontario, Ore.

In the regional tournament, the champion — in addition to having the home-court advantage — will play the No. 4 team in the first round while the second and third-place teams meet. The two winners' advance to the finals with the champion moving to the national tournament in Hutchinson, Kans. There is no bi-regional tournament this year.

Two share Big Sky honors

BOISE (AP) — Weber State forward Randy Worster and Boise State guard Frank Jackson have been named the Big Sky Conference's basketball players of the week, league officials have announced.
Worster, a 6-foot 7-inch junior, guided the Wildcats to victories over Northern Arizona, 73-63, and Nevada-Reno, 62-56, as Weber State took sole possession of first place in the Big Sky standings.
Jackson, a 6-foot-2 junior from Carson, Calif., led Boise State to a pair of home victories over Montana State, 75-53, and Montana, 75-71.

Eye delays Leonard bout

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard's Feb. 25 comeback bout against Kevin Howard was postponed Monday when the former welterweight champion's eye doctor told him to rest for at least 10 days, the fight's promoter said.
Dr. Edward Ryan at the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary in Boston examined Leonard's eyes Monday morning and found "some preventive work needed to be done in one of Ray's eyes," said Dan Doyle, president of KO Inc. of Hartford, Conn.
Doyle said he had no details of the nature of Leonard's eye problem or which eye was examined.

Jerome sets baseball meet

JEROME — The Jerome Baseball Association has scheduled its general meeting for Tuesday, Feb. 21.
Current and prospective players and coaches are urged to attend the meeting, slated for 7 p.m. in the cafeteria of Jerome High School.

Locals place in Judo meet

ONTARIO, Ore. — Three Twin Falls competitors were winners in the Ore-Ida Judo Tournament here last weekend.
Mike Fuller of Twin Falls took second in the 8-year-old lightweight division, while Bertson George of Twin Falls was second in the white-belt middleweight class. Danne Jensen of Twin Falls took third place in the black-belt heavyweight division.
More than 200 competitors from Idaho, Oregon and Washington participated in the tournament.

Burley lad wins Elks finals

MOSCOW — Joseph Whitley of Burley took first place in the boys' 10-11-year-old division at the Idaho Elks Hoop Shot state finals here last weekend.
Whitley won the right to advance to the regional competition of the nation-wide contest by hitting 23 free throws, outdistancing Paul Williams of Mountain Home who hit 17.

Volleyball tournament held

PRESTON — The Twin Lakes Volleyball Association will host its third annual Adult Volleyball Tournament here on Saturday, March 17.
The tournament, which will be held at Preston and West Side high schools, will feature teams from southern Idaho, northern Utah and northern Nevada. It is open to any team wishing to participate.
The event will be limited to 20 teams.
Further information can be obtained by phoning Jim Boyce at 747-3295.

Late layups lift Kentucky over Gators

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Freshman James Blackmon hit two fast-break layups within 25 seconds to go to break open a one-point lead and lift No. 6 Kentucky to a 67-65 Southeastern Conference college basketball triumph over Florida Monday night.
Blackmon's layups, at 2:09 and 1:44, gave Kentucky a 66-61 lead. Dicky Beal added a free throw, but the Gators got back into it on a field goal and a pair of free throws by forward Ronnie Williams.
However, a tying, last-ditch shot by freshman guard Andrew Moten bounced off the rim and the Wildcats pounced on the rebound to preserve a hard-fought grudge victory over the Gators, who prevailed 69-57 in Gainesville last month.
Center Melvin Turpin, who also sank two straight baskets in the final five minutes to snap a 58-58 tie, led Kentucky with 15 points, while forward Sam Bowie fouled out with 12.

Blackmon, a 6-foot-3 guard from Marion, Ind., scored only six points, but they came with Kentucky clawing to hold onto a lead that had been cut to 62-61 when Bowie was called for goaltending at 2:25.
Maryland 61
Dayton 59
COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Ben Coleman dropped in a five-foot baseline jumper at the buzzer, giving 13th-ranked Maryland a 61-59 victory over Dayton in college basketball Monday night.
Coleman, who finished with 36 points, rebounded a shot from the opposite corner by Jeff Adkins and put the ball back up as time expired.
The triumph ended a three-game losing streak for the Terps, now 15-6.
Dayton is 13-8 after having a six-game winning streak snapped.

Maryland led only twice, at 9:7 and 56-55, before Coleman's winning basket. Len Bas scored 15 points for Maryland, which at the time trailed 36-24 with two minutes left in the first half.
A basket by Ed Young gave Dayton a 58-57 with 3:05 remaining. After Coleman tied it at 59-59, the Flyers tried to control the ball for a last shot but Adkins stole the ball from Larry Schellenberg.
After calling a timeout, the Terps set up Adkins in the corner with about five seconds left. His shot hit the rim and Coleman was there for the rebound.
Roosevelt Chapman led Dayton with 20 points giving him a career total of 1,963 which broke all-time Dayton record of 1,930.

Jay Murphy had 24 points and Stu Primus 12 for the Eagles, 15-8 and 6-6, who have lost three straight games.
Bill Worthington had 15 points for St. John's, which trailed at halftime 37-36.

Spurs outpace Pacers

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — George Gervin scored 26 points and Artis Gilmore had 20 points and 10 rebounds to lead San Antonio over the Indiana Pacers 117-108 Monday for the Spurs' third straight road victory.
San Antonio, which trailed by as many as 12 points in the first quarter, had won only two of its first 24 road games until it began its current road streak.
Indiana, led by Jerry Sichting's game-high 28 points, opened a 27-15 lead in the first quarter and maintained a 10-point advantage early in the second period.
San Antonio bounced back to take a 47-40 lead on a Gene Banks layup with 3:36 left in the first half. Gervin led the Spurs' second-quarter rally, scoring 11 points to help San Antonio to a 58-58 tie at halftime.
The Spurs grabbed the lead for good when Gilmore scored on a hook shot to open the second half and built the lead to eight points, 84-76, on another Gilmore basket with 2:03 left in the third quarter.
Indiana twice closed to within two points in the fourth quarter. But after the Pacers narrowed the margin to 96-94 with 7:51 left, Mike Mitchell, John Lucas and Gilmore scored to build the Spurs' lead to eight.
Mitchell scored 16 points, Fred Roberts had 13 and John Lucas added 12 for San Antonio.
Herb Williams scored 20 for Indiana, which lost for the sixth time in the last seven games. Clark Kellogg and Butch Carter added 17 points each for the Pacers.

Late shots no problem

BOISE (AP) — So far this season, Big Sky Conference basketball teams have taken nearly 3,400 shots from the field in 33 conference games.
But only three have been too late. Through last weekend's games, there had been only three violations of the 45-second clock used as an experiment by the Big Sky this season.
The league said Monday more than 81 percent of the shots have been taken within the first 20 seconds of possession, and less than 4 percent have been taken within 9 seconds of the expiration of the shot clock.
With just five games to go on the conference schedule, the individual scoring race has developed into a battle between Boise State's Vince Hinchen and Montana's Larry Krystkowiak.
Hinchen is averaging 18.5 points per game and has a lead of 35 points over Krystkowiak. A pair of Northern Arizona players, David Allen and Jeff Altman, are next at 13.8 and 13.0 respectively, but neither seems to have a realistic chance at catching Hinchen.

Opening lead: Spade queen

South covered West's spade queen with dummy's king, hoping that dummy's spade 10 could be promoted to a winner. East took his spade ace and returned a trump, dummy winning. A spade was ruffed by South, the diamond ace was cashed and a diamond was ruffed in dummy. Another spade ruff failed to drop West's jack and South's last diamond was ruffed in dummy. Dummy's last spade was ruffed and the club suit offered the final chance. Nothing good was in store for South and, with South starting the club suit, the defenders scored three club winners to beat the game by one.

South makes the game if he allows West's spade queen to win the first trick. West switches to a trump which dummy wins. A spade ruff is followed by the diamond ace and a diamond ruff. Another spade ruff and a diamond ruff set the stage for the elimination play. Dummy's spade king is played and when East's ace covers, South discards a losing club. East has no safe lead and most either yield a

FTC gives Texaco-Getty merger approval

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The largest corporate merger in American history won tentative approval Monday from the Federal Trade Commission.

The commission voted to allow Texaco to buy Getty Oil Co. for $10.1 billion.

Shortly after the FTC acted, Texaco, the nation's third largest oil company, bought 4.4 million shares of Getty's stock for $5.68 billion. That gave it control of 56 percent of Getty, the nation's 14th largest company.

The purchase was made in two steps.

First, Texaco paid $4.49 billion for the 35.1 million Getty shares that stockholders had submitted for payment under Texaco's offer of $128 a share.

Texaco then bought the 27 million shares held by the J. Paul Getty Museum under terms of a contract signed in early January. The museum's stock was purchased for the same $128 a share, or $1.19 billion in all.

Texaco is expected to buy the rest of Getty's stock soon. That would be done by buying the 31.8 million shares held by the Sarah C. Getty Trust for $128 apiece, or $4.07 billion, under a contract already signed.

That would leave only the 3 million publicly held Getty shares that had not been submitted as of Monday for payment under the tender offer.

The regulatory agency's approval of the merger does not become final for 60 days, but Texaco was authorized to start buying Getty stock immediately.

so long as it operates the smaller oil company as a separate entity until the merger is finally approved.

"Getty will cooperate fully with Texaco during the transition to help assure that the merger is accomplished with a minimum of disruption," Getty spokesman Jack Leone said.

The interests of the stockholders will best be served by expediting the merger.

FTC chairman James Miller said the merger was recommended unanimously by the agency staff and was approved 4-1 by the commissioners at a meeting early in the day, before stock markets opened.

By midday, Texaco stock was selling for $39.50, down 25 cents, while Getty was trading at $125.25, up 75 cents.

Commissioner Michael Pertschuk, who was the lone dissenter, said he was worried that independent California refiners who had bought crude oil from Getty in the past might lose their source of supply.

The agreement signed Monday ensures those supplies for the independents for five years, but Pertschuk termed that guarantee a "dubious half-measure."

He said approving the Texaco-Getty merger might serve as an invitation to other major firms to acquire smaller companies with large oil reserves.

Pertschuk suggested that Congress study the situation "with an eye toward imposing clearly defined limits on oil company mergers."

Timothy J. Muris, director of the FTC bureau of competition, said the agreement signed with the commission requires Texaco to supply $3 billion worth of crude oil to 17 independent refiners in California.

"We feel confident with the situation," Muris told reporters.

Texaco also agreed to sell the Getty oil refinery in El Dorado, Kan., and the Texaco Eagle Point Refinery at Westlake, N.J., within one year.

Texaco will sell Getty's interest in pipelines related to the El Dorado refinery, including Texoma Pipeline Co., Usage Pipeline Co., Boyer Pipeline and the Oklahoma-Kansas portion of Getty Pipeline.

Nine Getty wholesale gasoline terminals and 1,900 service stations in the Northeast also will be sold, as well as Getty marketing, refining and sales operations in 15 Midwestern states.

Muris said he could not be sure of the value of the properties to be sold, but he estimated the total at several hundred million dollars.

Texaco will keep the Getty refinery in Delaware and about 30 other properties in the Northeast.

Under federal antitrust laws, the commission had to take some action by Monday, which was the deadline for filing suits to block the merger. The FTC had temporarily delayed the merger in late January by seeking more information from Texaco and Getty.

Texaco originally offered $125 per share for Getty stock and later raised that to a tender offer of $128 a share for 28 million of the 73.1 million outstanding shares of Getty stock. The total rose to 35.1 million shares Monday.

Stocks continue downward slide

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — The stock market suffered another broad loss Monday.

It resumed its recent slide in the lightest trading in almost six weeks.

A slow pace of activity had been expected, with many banks and other investing institutions closed in observance of Lincoln's birthday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 10.57 to 1,150.13, its lowest close since it stood at 1,145.32 on April 12 of last year. Since Jan. 6 the average has fallen 136.51 points.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 78.46 million shares, down from 92.22 million Friday and the lightest total since a 71.34 million-share day on Jan. 3.

The daily count on the Big Board showed nearly three losers for every stock that gained ground, and the exchange's composite index slumped .70 to 98.28.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 91.84 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials fell 1.64 to 174.18, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 1.35 at 154.95.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market lost 3.47 to 250.57. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 205.02, down 1.95.

The latest corporate earnings reports did little to bolster sentiment among investors. Ford Motor slipped 1/4 to 37 1/2 in Monday trading, even though the company reported fourth-quarter earnings of $4.29 a share against a loss in the like period a year earlier.

Eastman Kodak, which posted substantially lower fourth-quarter profits, tumbled 1% to 68 1/2.

Other point-plus losers among the blue-chip and technology stocks included International Business Machines, down 1/4 at 108 1/2; General Electric, down 1/4 at 52 1/2; Burroughs, off 1/4 at 46 1/2; and Telecity, down 1/4 at 158 1/2.

Sears Roebuck, which raised its dividend, managed a 1/4 gain to 35 1/2.

Getty Oil rose 2 1/2 to 127, while Texaco dropped 3/4 to 99 1/2. After working out arrangements with government regulators, Texaco said it was proceeding with its plans to buy Getty's stock.

Long Island Lighting, which announced late last week that it was withdrawing from a nuclear power project in Oswego, N.Y., fell 1 1/2 to 6 1/2 in heavy trading.

Record year for Ford Motor

By EDWARD MILLER
AP Auto Writer

DEARBORN, Mich. — Ford Motor Co. said Monday it earned a company record $1.67 billion in 1983.

That brought the year's profits for the recovered auto industry to a new summit which may reach $6 billion.

Chairman Philip Caldwell, announcing the profits, said "many more good years lie ahead," but he cautioned that high-interest rates brought on by the rising federal budget deficit could put the auto recovery in jeopardy.

He called on the government to slash the deficit by cutting the defense budget. He said America could do that by charging foreign nations, notably Japan, a "user charge" for defense and by working "something out with the Russians" on arms control.

Caldwell declared that Ford, after three straight years of huge losses, had become "profitable at home and abroad."

The Ford earnings broke a record of $1.67 billion set in 1977. The 1982 total came to $10.29 a share excluding a three-for-two stock split last October. Figuring in the split, the earnings per share was $9.61.

The earnings compare with a loss last year of $67.8 million, or minus $3.64 a share.

In 1981, Ford lost $1.06 billion and the year before that set a company loss record by dropping $1.54 billion. That was 1980, when the U.S. car industry lost a staggering $4.2 billion.

General Motors Corp. last week said it earned $3.73 billion in 1983, so GM and Ford by themselves have racked up around $5.5 billion for the year, breaking the record of $5.18 billion set in 1977.

Chrysler Corp., the third-largest U.S. automaker, and No. 4 American Motors Corp. have yet to report their earnings. When they do, later this month, the industry total is expected to go much higher.

Ford put its worldwide factory sales of cars and trucks for 1983 at 4,944,231, up nearly 16 percent from 4,267,587 in 1982.

Chairman Philip Caldwell discusses record 1983 profits

Ford's earnings for the fourth quarter of 1983 were $781 million, or $1.29 a share, compared with a loss of $236 million, or $1.30 a share a year earlier.

The profits were made on worldwide sales of $4.4 billion. GM's made it clear that it wants a share of the profit.

A statement released by the union and attributed to UAW Vice President Stephen Yokich, said, "there is a wide gulf between the amount earned by companies and the amounts paid to company executives."

The investment banking firm Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loew Inc. in New York estimates that GM and Ford will be paying each production worker an average $23 an hour in wages and benefits by September.

Caldwell, who made his remarks at a news conference at Ford's headquarters in Dearborn, said he and the union were "communicating."

He added in his address that "It is necessary, however, for all of us to keep these results in perspective," and went on to say that Ford still needs to build up its "financial strength."

Caldwell said the earnings will create a profit-sharing pool of $69 million, which would work out to an average $40 payment to hourly employees and lower-level salaried workers who don't get bonuses. That's $200 less than GM paid out. The profit sharing was won by workers in contract talks last year.

An even bigger fund, $83 million, will be used for bonuses for 6,200 executives. Caldwell, who will be at the top of the bonus list, declined to speculate on how much money Ford's directors will vote him next month.

Through the bad years, Ford leaned on its profitable overseas operations. But of 1983's $1.67 billion in profits, more than $1.5 billion came from North American operations.

Swine sale at CSI Friday

TWIN FALLS — The Southern Idaho Pork Producers Association will hold its 40th annual Purebred Swine Sale on Friday at the College of Southern Idaho.

Thirty-nine gilts and boars from a number of breeds have been consigned for sale, says association secretary Jim Miller.

The event will begin Thursday with a carcass contest for other hogs at the Independent Meat Co. yards. A banquet is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at North's Chuck Wagon at 1829 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls.

The consigned gilts and boars are scheduled to be judged at 10 a.m. Friday at the CSI Expo Center. Auctioneer Lyle Barton of Paul will start the sale at 1 p.m.

Compare those itemized deductions on your tax return

It is no more than common-sense curiosity to compare the deductions you're claiming on your 1983 income tax return with the national averages claimed on returns filed in 1982.

The following averages, prepared by the Research Institute of America, are rough guides — since the average for each state can vary, according to the state's own tax structure. But the averages can be extremely helpful to you for two reasons:

(1) While the Internal Revenue Service is close-mouthed about what standards it uses to pick returns for audit, it must use as one factor whether the deductions you claim are abnormally high. Average deductions average, you must reread your claims. Have you overlooked some items you could legally deduct? Are you aware of all the claims you could make? Re-examine the return you're preparing with great care!

The information below is merely from a statistical table. It can give you the deductions found in the official sales tax table in the instructions for Form 1040 — but you cannot use the numbers from the unofficial table in this column. You can claim only the actual amount you paid.

NOTE: Most of you should be reporting a lower medical-expense deduction than the average claimed by taxpayers on the returns filed in 1982.

With AGI of $25,000 to $30,000: average medical-expense deductions of $672; average deductible taxes of $1,983; average deductible contributions of $697; average interest deductions of $31,122.

With AGI of $30,000 to $40,000: average medical-expense deductions of $605; taxes of $2,496; contributions of $834; interest, $3,483. (These and all following figures are averages for deductions on 1982 returns.)

With AGI of $40,000 to $50,000: medical expenses, $553; taxes, $3,211; contributions, $1,079; interest, $4,282.

With AGI of $50,000 to $75,000: medical expenses, $676; taxes, $4,400; contributions, $1,507; interest, $5,586.

With AGI of $75,000 to $100,000: medical expenses of $850; interest of $6,637; contributions of $2,512; interest, $8,312.

With AGI of $100,000 to $200,000: medical expenses, $1,250; taxes $10,013; contributions, $4,807; interest, $12,170.

You will find yourself in these brackets. Check your deductions for 1983 against the averages for '82 returns with the warnings heeded. You can use these averages for your own advantage. Do so.

As it is no more than normal curiosity to compare your deductions, so it is no more than normal concern to wonder whether the return you're filing this year will be picked out for an audit. Take comfort

The odds of your being chosen out of 100 taxpayers, depending on your income and business status, are overall extremely low.

On the basis of 94 million returns filed for '81 incomes, the odds were only 135 out of 100 or 155 out of every 10,000 returns filed. This percentage rises as your income rises, both as an individual and business.

Out of every 100 taxpayers, your odds of being audited are:

• If you weren't in business, had less than $10,000 of total positive income and filed on Form 1040A, 25; if you didn't file on Form 1040A, 58; from $10,000 to under $25,000, and if you used itemized deductions, 2.45; if you used the standard deduction, only .57; from $25,000 to under $50,000, 3.97; $50,000 and over, 5.61.

receipts under $25,000, 1.68; from $25,000 to under $100,000, 3.97; $100,000 and over, 5.94.

Next: Sales taxes; purchases of cars.
