U.S.-backed pullout junked

By FAROUK NASSAR The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — President Amin Gemayel has agreed to scrap Lebanon's U.S.-brokered troop withdrawal pact with Israel, Beirut radio reported, in an effort to save his disintegrating army and government. The state radio said Thursday night that Gemayel had agreed to an eight-point Saudi peace initiative that includes renouncing the May 17, 1983, agreement between Lebanon and Israel. It added that Foreign Minister Elie Salem had communicated the decision to Saudi officials in Riyadh. The development came as the Syrian-supported Druse and Moslem militias stepped up military and political pressure Thursday to oust Gemayel, who turned to Saudi Arabia to salvage his crumbling position. Druse militiamen pushed the Lebanese army out of the Chouf Mountains and rolled down the coastal hills to link up with Shiite Moslem allies controlling west Beirut. At their camp in the capital, U.S. Marines and Italian troops were packing their equipment and preparing to pull out. A senior White House official said the Marines would begin withdrawing to U.S. Navy ships off the Lebanese coast in two or three days. The official, who spoke on condition he not be named, said the redeployment of about 1,200 Marines should be completed within 30 days from Friday. He said 500 personnel — Marines, Army trainers and others — would stay in Beirut to guard the U.S. Embassy and perform other functions. Earlier in the day, American officials in Washington expressed skepticism that the Saudi-mediated plan would work. Druse opposition leader Walid Jumblatt said in an interview he would veto it. He called it "too little, too late." "There will never be a compromise with us and Gemayel," Jumblatt said in the telephone interview from Damascus, Syria, which was broadcast by Independent Television News in London. "Gemayel is to be judged for crimes against the Lebanese people. There is no way to have a deal with Gemayel." Beirut radio said Gemayel received two telephone calls late Thursday, one from his foreign minister, Salem, in Saudi Arabia, the other from Saudi mediator Rafik Hariri, telling him Saudi Arabia had received Lebanon's go-ahead. He said Saudi Foreign Minister Prince Saud al-Faisal would fly to Damascus on Friday to obtain Syria's approval. The report said Gemayel had informed the parties of the national reconciliation conference of details of the Saudi initiative and sent a written message about his decision to former President Suleiman Franjeh, a member of the National Salvation Front that includes Jumblatt and former Prime Minister Rashid Karami. It said he also was in touch with the speaker of the Lebanese Parliament, Kamel Assad; his prime minister, Shafiq al-Wazzan; and former Prime Minister Saeb Salam. Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said in a television interview earlier in the day that scrapping the Israeli-Lebanon accord would be a "catastrophe" for peace in the Middle East. Evans sells his program

By BOB FREUND Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho's business climate is hospitable, with a solid state government that spends within its means. But issues concerning education, a state commerce agency, equitable taxation and water rights need solutions in the coming weeks of the Legislature to help maintain the state's appeal, Gov. John Evans said Thursday evening. Evans was seeking the support of close to 500 members of the Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce for his legislative program, stressing sound financing and education. "Regardless of the final figures of the budget this year — unlike the federal budget, Idaho will have a balanced budget," Evans said. With a debt rate of 321 per person — the lowest in the country — and a per-capita tax rate far under the U.S. average, state government ranks among the best credit risks in the country, the governor told those attending the chamber's annual banquet. Yet, business leaders also are concerned about the education systems that will teach their employees' children and that will train their workers, he said. While Idaho can offer a good education, it must push forward with school reforms and put more dollars into teachers' pockets, he said. Legislation to increase teachers' salaries represents an "important first step in our efforts to improve the public school system," he said. • See EVANS on Page A2

Snow Storm drops 10 inches in valley

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Just about everyone in the Magic Valley, with the possible exception of skiers and snowmobilers, is getting their fill of winter. The latest assault Wednesday and Thursday dropped from one to 10 inches of snow in various parts of the valley, with the Mini-Cassia area receiving the most. The storm closed schools in several districts and blocked rural roads and two major highways. Idaho 75 north of Shoshone was closed from about 4 a.m. until 4 p.m. Thursday, and U.S. 20 from Fairfield to Hailey still was closed late Thursday. All available snowplows were working to keep the other roads open. Roads in all directions out of Twin Falls were either snow-covered or icy, officials said. In Minidoka County, the schools closed at 9 a.m. Thursday, the result of heavy drifting. Between eight and 10 inches of snow fell during the night in some areas of the county. The Valley School District in Jerome County closed its doors before noon, again due to drifting. Superintendent Arlyn Bodilly said school would resume today unless the wind picked up during the night. Minidoka school officials said the same. In Lincoln County, schools did not open at all in the Shoshone, Richfield and Dietrich districts. And nearly all county roads remained closed Thursday evening. Gooding schools also were closed all day; Wendell opened but sent its students home at 9 a.m. The storm brought the usual number of ice- and snow-related accidents, but no serious injuries were reported. One Twin Falls school bus slid off Pole Line Road, but there were no injuries.

Blizzards, winds stifle West

By The Associated Press

The latest in a chain of major winter storms fanned by cold winds with gusts gusting to 60 mph Thursday in the mountains of the West. The storm dropped up to 20 inches of snow in the Sierra Nevada of northern California, and up to 8 inches in the mountains of Oregon and Idaho. Residents of the central Rockies — particularly in the mountains of Utah — were warned to batten down for up to 2 feet of "new snow" driven by powerful winds. "That's quite a storm coming," said Nolan Duke of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo. As heavy snow spread into northern Nevada and Utah, winds were gusting from 40 mph in the valleys to 60 mph in the mountains. The Utah Highway Patrol reported near-blizzard conditions in some mountain areas. A winter storm warning was posted for all of Utah when a statement from the National Weather Service said, "This storm is poised to move into Utah with a vengeance." Up to 2 feet of snow was forecast for Utah's mountainous areas, and the weather service said the Alta Ski Resort east of Salt Lake City has received a record 89 inches of snow since Nov. 1. Typical snowfall during an entire winter at Alta is 480 inches, the weather service said. High winds prompted a travelers' advisory Thursday evening for northwest Arizona. The weather service posted similar advisories for snow squalls and strong winds in Arizona's central mountains and the northeast part of the state.

Jesse's strategy attracting Midwest farmers

By RACHEL LAWRENCE The Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa — The Rev. Jesse Jackson's "Rainbow Coalition" is developing an added hue — the white Midwestern farmer. Feeling the pinch of high interest rates and low commodity prices, many farmers in Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas are saying Jackson just might be their man because he's not tied to the politics of the past and knows how to get things done. His appearance on televised debates in New Hampshire and Des Moines apparently turned a few heads and changed some minds. The black civil rights leader's appeal beyond the black community also is reflected in a national Gallup Poll released Thursday that shows him in a virtual tie with Sen.

Latest poll shows Jackson in tie for second — A5

John Glenn for second place in the Democratic presidential race — both well behind Walter F. Mondale. Merle Hansen, who raises cattle and grows corn and soybeans in Newman Grove, Neb., says he joined Jackson's national steering committee because he "is bringing into the political process new and important people that can beat Reagan. ... Agriculture cannot solve its problems alone. We look around for other victims." David Rafael, director of Rural America in Washington, D.C., said he can understand why some farmers would be attracted to Jackson.

"Jackson has spoken and can speak on farm issues as a social-justice issue. That must have a certain appeal to farmers who are feeling hard pressed," he said. Gary Lamb, a Chelsea, Iowa, farmer who is supporting George McGovern for the Democratic nomination, says he nonetheless can understand Jackson's rural appeal. "I think Mr. Jackson realizes naturally, being a black, that there are people in this country being discriminated against because of the color of their skin, and it's that factor, perhaps, that enables him to realize there are other segments of society that are being discriminated against because of their heritage or their occupation as a farmer," said Lamb. "That may be the identifying link that may be getting people to support him." David Ostendorf, who runs the Midwestern office of Rural America, said many farmers he works with out of his Des Moines headquarters have shown a great deal of interest in what Jackson is saying. Ostendorf said if Jackson had campaigned more in Iowa, he would have been quite successful in rural areas, because he's addressing issues in a way some of the other candidates aren't. The difference is Jackson himself. He's forthright, outspoken, and hits the nail right on the head." The stereotype of the hard-core, conservative Midwestern farmer isn't necessarily so and Ostendorf has a theory on why. "The whole Populist movement didn't come out of the heartland. It came out of North Dakota and other Plains states in the early part of this century," he said. "The Populist fervor is still alive among many rural areas of this country. If the politicians think they can write off the rural vote because it's small in number or because it's conservative, they're barking up the wrong tree and they'll realize their mistakes come election time, no question."

Lawmakers appear following own interests on Swan Falls

Editor's note: This is the second of two articles in this issue of personal interests held by legislators that could affect the Swan Falls issue.

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY Times-News Capitol Bureau

BOISE — Last week, Rep. Dwight Horsch, a southern Idaho irrigator, debated in favor of subordinating Idaho Power's water right at Swan Falls Dam. But before the Aberdeen Democrat launched into his defense of the interests of potential new irrigators, he briefly stated how his personal interests would be affected by the legislation. During last year's regular legislative session, Sen. David Little, R-Emmett, also addressed the issue of subordination. He told the Senate Resources and Environment Committee that someone needed to look out for the interests of the utility's shareholders. And on Monday, Little did look out for those interests. When the Senate received the subordination legislation, after its passage by the House, Little made a motion to table the measure. The motion succeeded, effectively killing the bill. But on neither of those occasions did Little mention that he is an Idaho Power shareholder. Idaho Power's water right at Swan Falls is an asset of the company and its stockholders, he says. And subordination, which would diminish that asset, would represent a loss to the stockholders — at the hands of "the police powers of the state," he says. Little freely acknowledges that he owns 100 shares of Idaho Power stock and that he has similar stock holdings in other Idaho corporations. But that does not affect the way he votes on issues affecting those companies, he says. Little says his personal interests are more affected by being an electric customer than a stockholder. Asked this week if his Idaho Power stock holding constitutes a conflict of interest, the six-term legislator responded, "I never even entered my mind. "It's a good question. I would guess in my history of issues that involve companies I own stock in, I've probably been against them — on the more-outward-looking issues — more often than I've been for them." Little, Horsch acted on Swan Falls in a number of ways that were not in his interests. Horsch and members of his family have

Israeli troops move past defense line

By MAX NASH
The Associated Press

SIDON, Lebanon — Israeli tanks and armor moved north across Israel's defense line Thursday and Israeli officers said the army had reached an area near Damour on the coastal road.

The move came as Lebanese anti-government Shiite and Druse militiamen thrust south from Beirut to drive the Lebanese army and Christian Phalangists out of Damour, 10 miles north of the Awall River.

Israeli military sources, meanwhile, estimated 12,000 refugees had crossed the Awall River into Israeli-held territory since the fighting started along the coastal highway Monday night.

Israeli military sources said an Israeli convoy moved north from the Awall River defense line along the coastal road about six to seven miles. But they said the Israeli column was expected to return by nightfall.

A Phalangist officer told reporters at the Awall bridge that there was heavy fighting around Damour and that Christian militiamen had taken over from Lebanese soldiers in opposing the advancing Druse and Shiites.

The Christian militiaman, who refused to give his name, said the Christian town was captured by the Syrian-backed rebel force with the help of Palestinian guerrillas during the night but that Christian militiamen were still battling on the perimeter.

He said 1,000 Phalangists backed by tanks and 100 armored personnel carriers had taken over from the remnants of the Lebanese Army's 4th Brigade, which collapsed and left its weapons in the field. The militiaman said he and many of his fighters were from Christian East Beirut.

"We have taken over fighting in Damour from the Lebanese Army which no longer exists and we, contrary to them, will fight," said the militiaman who was wearing a bulletproof jacket and was standing next to a jeep with three other fighters.

The Phalangist said he had come south to consult with the Israelis. "We are going to fight the Palestinians, us and the Israeli," he told reporters. An Israeli officer, however, said "we will not move unless provoked."

The Israelis invaded Lebanon June 6, 1982, ostensibly to drive the guerrillas out of southernmost Lebanon, but pressed on to Beirut and drove the Palestinians out of their stronghold.

Marine withdrawal slated within days

By MAUREEN SANTINI
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Marines, who were sent to Beirut 17 months ago as part of a multinational peacekeeping force, will begin withdrawing to American Navy ships off the Lebanese coast in two or three days, a senior White House official said Thursday.

The official, who briefed reporters on the condition that he remain anonymous, said the redeployment should be completed within 30 days from Friday.

However, 500 people, including Marines and Army trainers, will remain in Beirut to guard the U.S. Embassy and perform other duties.

The official said. But even after the Marines, perhaps 1,200, are relocated on the ships, they will remain as members of the multinational force, the official said.

The timetable for withdrawal of the Marines was submitted to the White House Thursday by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, who included a provision for removing the Marines more quickly in the event of an emergency.

The White House official said Reagan would formally approve the plan Friday.

"I am confident that we will be able to complete this redeployment in the projected time frame," the official said.

The initial phase of the redeployment has already begun with the moving of some equipment from the Beirut airport to ships offshore.

While maintaining there was always some risk to the Marines in their current situation in Beirut, this official nevertheless sought to minimize the danger.

But asked whether the Marines could be removed more quickly than the formal plan envisions in the case of emergency, he replied: "The secretary's proposal included assurances that plans have been made for ensuring safe redeployment under any circumstances."

At the same time, the official said, the United States believes that sending a United Nations peacekeeping force to the area "would be very useful, particularly with regard to ensuring the safety of Palestinian refugee camps."

He indicated, but did not state directly, that the Marines would be officially considered part of the multinational force until the Lebanese government tries "to establish their own control, at some point."

Battered Lebanese flee under assault

By JEFFREY ULBRICH
The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The Lebanese army withdrew the battered remnants of its 4th Brigade by sea Thursday from the coastal town of Jije-us anti-government militiamen threatened an assault on Souk el-Gharb, the last government stronghold in the center of Lebanon.

About 800 to 1,000 soldiers of the 2,400-man brigade were taken by boat from the Jije, 15 miles south of Beirut, back to their barracks in the capital's Christian eastern sector, according to army sources.

The brigade's collapse in the face of a two-day assault by Druse and Shiite Moslem militiamen, who drove down the mountains to seize a long stretch of coast south of the capital, left beleaguered President Amin Gemayel with less than half his army still in action.

Early Thursday the Druse expanded their offensive, taking the Christian coastal town of Damour and the neighboring hilltop Mishref barracks of the rightist Christian Lebanese Forces militia about 11 miles south of Beirut.

Western sources said the army was considering asking help from the U.S. Marines and Navy to rescue more than 20 tanks and dozens of armored carriers abandoned by the fleeing soldiers.

But the sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said rightist Christian militiamen who also are fighting the Shiites and Druse were demanding that the new, U.S.-supplied equipment be turned over to them. Jije is the main coastal base for the Christian Lebanese Forces' militia.

The army sources said more than 250 members of the 4th Brigade simply fled to their homes in Israeli-occupied south Lebanon. They indicated as many as 1,000 others in the brigade have defected to the Druse and Moslem militias or fled north to west Beirut, now held by the anti-government forces.

The brigade had held key positions in the mountains southeast of Beirut, the Klaidie highway—intersection south of Beirut's airport and a 10-mile stretch of coast — all now controlled by the Druse and Shiite militiamen.

The rout was blamed in part by the Western and army sources on treckery, with a false retreat message broadcast on the army's command over the radio. Troops were advancing and reclaiming positions they had lost earlier. The retreat message, which confused army units, was followed by a jamming of the network, the sources said.

The sources also claimed Israeli ships off the coast turned back army reinforcement and supply shipments during the fighting. There was no reason given for why Israel might have decided to take such an action.

The debacle left the army in control of only one mountain position — Souk el-Gharb, on a ridge about nine miles southeast of the capital.

Clouds just fine for budget outlook

From some people's perspectives, a year without a tax increase is a day without sunshine. But we like the clouds just fine when it comes to what the Idaho Legislature is thinking about for the 1985 budget.

Gov. John Evans has asked for a budget of $560 million, more than $100 million more than the $455 budget approved for the 1984 fiscal year which ends June 30.

Wisely, the Republican-controlled legislature has already said a budget of that size won't fly, even with the already-acknowledged need to infuse education funding with an additional $20 million to bring teacher salaries closer to the national average.

Republicans are looking at a budget of about $496 million which in theory could be funded without additional tax increases. That amount would include the $20 million for teacher salaries; $224 million for public schools, up from $215 million this year; and $76.5 million for higher education, up from this year's $73 million, but less than the $84 million sought by Evans. State employees would get a 6 percent raise at a cost of $9.5 million, less than what they sought.

On the revenue side, the Republican plan would be funded, in part, by most of an estimated surplus of $25 million which is expected to be in state coffers at the end of the fiscal year. That would avoid a tax increase and would allow the temporary one and one-half cent sales tax to expire.

Neither the Democrats nor the governor is likely to support this proposal. Both are pushing for keeping some or all of the temporary sales tax in place under the theory that since y'all out there are used to it, the pain is less now and we'll just keep the taxes, thank you, sir.

The Republican figure has some flaws, to be sure. It may not be enough, for example, to fund higher education at the level of what the need genuinely is in Idaho's colleges and universities.

Those schools have suffered in the past few years and major improvements are needed in a host of departments if the schools are to remain competitive for top faculty. The same deterioration over time has occurred at the College of Southern Idaho.

But from where we stand, the Legislature should be cautious about asking the people of Idaho to do too much at once.

Major improvements in educational funding are coming in the form of a teacher salary bill. That represents a major ongoing commitment from the taxpayers of the state.

The Republican budget of just under $500 million may, in the end, be a bit too low. But we hope legislators in both parties resist the allure of an election year's grab bag and turn down substantially larger amounts.

Keep on flying through the ice storms

BOSTON—Those who poll the political consciousness of a country are a little bit like gold miners following the glitter. Sometimes they get the real thing and sometimes they come back with a wheelbarrow full of fool's gold.

For the past several years, these people have been digging away at the rich vein of opinions about women in politics. They keep emerging with nuggets of data about how much our attitudes toward female candidates have changed.

In 1940, for example, only one-third of Americans would have considered voting for a "uniquely qualified" woman for president. In 1977, 77 percent would vote for her. By 1983, most of us thought that there were too few women in public office, and the overwhelming majority claimed that they would not be at all influenced by the sex of a candidate. If anything, more said they were prejudiced in favor of a female candidate than against.

But it turns out that some of this is glitter. We are now beginning to mine the mother lode of the political subconscious. Florence Skelly of Yankelevich, Skelly and White has just completed a limited study of some 200 voters for the National Women's Political Caucus. The early results suggest that the biggest gap of this political era may be between our principles and our behavior.

To put it simply, some three-quarters of those interviewed for the study said that the sex of a candidate has no influence on their vote. But when these people chose between hypothetical candidates for governor, they were highly influenced by traditional sex stereotypes. They tended to vote for men and only voted for women when they were clearly more qualified than the men.

A large margin of men agreed that a smaller margin of women agreed that men in high office were better at making decisions under pressure, better at dealing with big budgets, and at public speaking. Women in high office, on the other hand, were said to be more "humane" and to have a "human" side of issues, at bringing new and fresh ideas into office and at keeping well-organized.

After hearing this data, political consultant Bob Squiers fantasized the perfect commercial for a female candidate. In one 60-second spot, she lands a multi-million dollar jet plane in an ice storm while caring for the male co-pilot who becomes suddenly ill. She then makes a brilliant presentation on a deal that involves millions, and whips the cash out of her briefcase while her name flashes across the screen. Decisive, caring, organized and able to deal with big budgets—the best of both sexes—she wins the election.

The study was not all bad news. Male voters didn't overwhelmingly favor male candidates, and women were more inclined than men to judge female candidates openly.

But there is this gap between our principles and our behavior when we face a choice between male or female politicians. I suppose that most of us knew or suspected this. After all, most of us know people who talk a better line than they feel. We've all been caught short by our own lingering prejudices.

Today, prejudice against women in public life is less acceptable. It's no longer fashionable to admit that you won't vote for a woman, no longer fashionable to wonder out loud if a woman can handle big budgets or crises. So our views have gone underground, to the subconscious.

I don't think we are necessarily lying to the pollsters, or even to ourselves. We are not hypocritical but, perhaps, hopeful. We know intellectually that it shouldn't make any difference if a candidate is white or black, male or female.

Florence Skelly reads into the data "a profound hunger to do the right thing," and I think that's accurate. Our ideals are often a step or ten ahead of us. As usual, we are struggling to catch up.

This time, if we close the gap between how we think and how we vote, we may also close the gap between men and women in public life. Right now, though, women have to keep flying airplanes through the ice storms.

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe.

Time to rise above materialism

RE: The Ripplinger case against the Jerome School District concerning the passing out of Bibles on school grounds.

If people invested an equal amount of energy and effort, were half as concerned and a fraction as indignant about the greater issues which threaten the world with extinction, as they are about issues such as the possible violation of personal rights as is evinced in the Ripplinger vs. Bible/School District case, we all might have a better chance of survival. The real violations go unchallenged.

I suggest that the mentality of opportunism and self-interest, which is responsible for the threats—currently facing us environmentally, socially and politically, is also at the base of this affair. Would, the secularized righteous indignation of Mr. Ripplinger be nearly as aroused, if he could not seek ten thousand dollars in punitive damages and an unspecified amount of way of compensation?

Aside from the fact that the heinous crime in question is the alleged reading of passages from the Bible in the classroom, the danger, both on the part of the lawyers and their client. This is the shadow of capitalism—the wolves have donned their woolen cloaks of innocence and ideals and now, in the name of liberty and personal freedom, are working their way through the legal system in search of the fat of the land.

And there is a lot of fat! I believe we need desperately to examine our lives and our lifestyles to discover those attitudes and values which, through daily practice, are bringing us, as individuals, as a nation and as a world, ever closer to annihilation. Our standard of living may be purchased at the high price of life itself. From our consumption of chemical products, many of them harmful and unnecessary, as additives, fertilizers, insecticides and household items, to our consumption of items which we implement selfishly, if not encouragement, to industrial pollution, acid rains, the rape of the world's forests, the mediocre and monopolizing medium of television.

There are enough issues of far greater importance, of a much more urgent nature, than that of this Ripplinger/Bible affair. Of course, the courts should try it and find justice, now that it has been introduced into the choked-up legal system.

But, regardless of the verdict, there should be no gain or profit involved. That would only encourage the greed of the "whiplash" reaction, which so many have cluttered the courts with already.

Rather than to sue the world around us, let us examine our own lives and put ourselves and our way of life on trial first. Then, perhaps we shall be less threatened by the prospect of war, threatened others less with belligerent national insistence on the American point of view, and be less touchy about matters of such minor impact. It's high time to rise above the materialism of our present age and help create a new era in its place. Let's begin at home.

Teacher's view of 'reform bill'

So you believe that the IEA, its members and directors are faithless, untrustworthy, doubting Idaho citizens, because we attended a hearing and expressed teacher concerns regarding career ladder and employee evaluation procedures. You think we are defaming and cheating the public of their confidence in the legislature because we have spoken up and out to our legislators on an issue that is to affect our daily profession as teachers.

I ask you, Mr. Editor, just how much time did you yourself spend reading the actual "Education Reform Bill"? Could you honestly say you would be willing to have your pay raise based on how much extra frill and money you put out to decorate your desk and work area in competition of the desk of your co-worker?

If the co-worker were to attend a journalism workshop at Disney World, yet promised to bring good notes to you back in Twin Falls, would you be willing to see that person receive additional pay for their career developing efforts? Should that co-worker sign up for "Journey into Journalism through Mexico" for two weeks and upon returning say, "My time was spent promoting The Times-News in Acapulco," would you be willing to see a part of your newspaper's accounted funds for the year be spent in reimbursing the co-worker's illustrated-vacation? Or suppose a subscriber said, "Oh, I will only buy a copy of The Times-News if the top ten journalists are hired to write for the Times-News." I ask you, what would become of the other 90 percent of the current writers of your staff? Would they become less qualified and less of a journalists? If so, Mr. Editor, would they be labeled justly?

In terms of dismissal, Mr. Editor, how often do you wear an employee of negligent work—in late stories, unprofessional dress, breach of journalism ethics, a simple oversleep, dirty wastebasket, worn out typewriter ribbon, or a messy desk top? Do you have a written method of warning or probation period or is it automatically "You're fired." If you did have such a list of standards, would that list be used as standards for hiring or firing? Would the motive of your action be clear to those most affected by the list of standards... your employees?

In summary, I ask you, Mr. Editor, if you were to be evaluated for work success or pay raise, would you not want to know who would determine your effectiveness and your work plan acceptance or how frequently such a decision would be made? If that evaluation were not conducted in a fair, consistent, and regular manner, would you want written somewhere the description of what the result would be if the evaluation were not conducted in a fair manner? Should that co-worker or yourself decide to "Journey into Journalism through Mexico" as a means of professional development, would you want it spelled out clearly just what how professional development were to be defined? Or would you be willing to wait and leave the decision to chance?

The bill and its proposals affect not only teachers, clients, taxpayers and children. It affects your future subscribers. For if you, Mr. Editor, cannot support teachers and their efforts to better inform the profession which in turn educates the children in areas of reading and thinking responsibly, I question just how Mr. Editor, you expect future subscribers and thus future business.

Preserving universal phone service in company's interest

Many observers have been expressing concern that increases in local telephone rates could erode the concept of widely affordable telephone service in this country—a concept known as universal service.

Mountain Bell firmly believes the facts do not warrant such alarm. For this reason, I would like to offer the following perspective on universal service and its future.

Local residential subscribers have been held artificially low until now because they have been supported by revenue generated by other services such as long distance, Yellow Pages, higher rates to business customers and other premium services. That financial support was possible in a regulated monopoly situation and worked very well.

But recently, national telecommunications policy has created a more competitive market. As a result, the revenue flows from monopoly services are being gradually reduced and will soon be eliminated. The rate for basic local service must go up to more nearly reflect the cost of providing the service.

This does not mean an end to universal service.

Guest opinion C.E. 'Gene' Hill biggest part of many phone bills—are expected to begin falling soon. Competition is already bringing down the cost of telephone sets and other customer equipment. So the total cost of telephone service for many customers will be the same or even lower with these changes taking place.

Equipment and interstate long distance services will be available through more and more sources in the future, offering a wide variety of prices and choices for customers.

Consumers will also have other options for controlling the cost of their local phone service. Rate plans—such as Measured Service—are available in most of Idaho at prices considerable below those for premium flat-rated, unlimited calling service.

Measured Service is an option already reducing the cost of service for nearly 9,000 Mountain Bell customers in Idaho and is available to more than 30 percent of those in Mountain Bell's service area. The structure of Measured Service also provides a low-cost alternative to flat rate for those wanting ongoing emergency access—a form of so-called "brilliant" service—for as little as $1.32 a month.

service is not going to be prices beyond the reach of those who have that service today.

Universal service is a concept that benefits everyone. The logic behind it is that the central idea is that the greater the number of persons who have access to good, economical phone service, the more valuable the service is to everyone. That value can be found by consumers who seek, investors who make a profit from it and the system as a whole, which literally could not function without an integrated communications system.

The changes that are taking place in the way telephone service is priced are not totally regulated by the FPC. And it will continue to be. They are the natural and inevitable consequences of competition being introduced into the telecommunications industry by the federal government. Action by Mountain Bell and the Idaho Public Utilities Commission are in response to the Federal Communications Commission and the federal courts.

In the face of such a change, Mountain Bell in Idaho is still as committed as ever to the concept of universal service. We helped invent it. We helped create it and still support it as a corporate policy and a national policy.

Preserving universal service—keeping our customers— is as much in our interest as it is in the public interest. As Mountain Bell makes a transition to a competitive industry structure, which includes the necessary changes in pricing policies, there is certainly a need for careful scrutinizing by government authorities. But we believe it is best to give competition a chance to work. Mountain Bell itself will continue to be regulated by the FPC. And it will continue to be the responsibility of the FPC to balance the interests of the public and the financial will being of Mountain Bell in its rate-setting decisions. We believe that the public will be able to enjoy the benefits of both competition and universal service if the adjustments to the new telecommunications environment are allowed to take place at a reasonable pace and in a reasonable manner.

Jackson in second place tie with Glenn

By The Associated Press

Sen. John Glenn, who has slipped into a second place tie with the Rev. Jesse Jackson in the Democratic presidential race according to a new poll, accused front-runner Walter F. Mondale on Thursday of lying about his involvement with Alaska pipeline legislation.

Mondale was quickly — and with continued assertions that the former vice president lobbied for the pipeline.

"I never lobbied, I never lobbied in my life," Mondale said in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. "He has said three of four things that are absolutely false."

The new charge, counter-charge came hours after publication of a new national Gallup Poll that showed Jackson continuing to climb and Glenn continuing to slip — and Mondale holding essentially steady far ahead of the field.

Jackson's support rose from 9 percent to 14 percent between Gallup samples taken in mid-January and this week — while Glenn was falling from 16 percent to 13 percent in the same polls.

Given the roughly 6-percentage-point margin of error associated with results based on about 500 interviews, the one-point difference between Glenn and Jackson in the new poll can only be said to be roughly a tie.

The new Gallup survey put all the rest of the pack in the 2-to-3 percent category.

Mondale had the backing of 49 percent of the 521 Democrats interviewed, up slightly from his 47 percent in two January surveys.

"I'm not discouraged at all by this,"

Glenn told reporters in Richmond, Va., late Thursday. He said he had not seen the latest poll, but that his own show at least a third of the voters "not locked in."

"I wish more people would pay more attention to what we're saying than what some polls show," said Glenn.

Jackson welcomed the poll, but said, "It's not something I put a lot of confidence in. My approach has been to let the pollsters and the analysts deal with the counting and predicting."

Blast rips coal miners

COMMODORE, Pa. (AP) — An apparent methane gas explosion a mile deep inside a Pennsylvania coal mine early Thursday injured 10 miners and left three unaccounted for. Officials said they feared the missing men were dead.

Rescue teams with air tanks and portable lights found large pockets of gas deep in the mine and a federal official said he was not hopeful the miners had survived.

"We have run into a situation that's not optimistic," said Frank O'Gorman, spokesman for the federal Mine Safety and Health Administration in Arlington, Va. "There's a possibility of another explosion. There's more methane in there."

Another spokesman, John Mc-

Grath, said late Thursday afternoon that the rescuers had stopped underground to construct a ventilation system.

"For the next couple of hours, they won't be advancing. They'll be working on ventilation at one location," McGrath said.

The blast at 4:30 a.m. tore through at least two branches of the Greenwich Collieries No. 1 mine owned by the Pennsylvania Mines Corp., a subsidiary of the Pennsylvania Power and Light Co. of Allentown, the company said.

The missing miners had been pumping water in a tunnel about 450 feet below the surface and about one mile horizontally into the mine near this village about 90 miles east of Pittsburgh.

Militant church group may never face a trial

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Nineteen members of the anti-bike trial-Miracle Valley Healing Center and Church may never stand trial on charges of assault and riot because Cochise County says it cannot pay the indigent's court-appointed defense attorneys.

Arizona's chief justice and attorney general warn that dismissal of the charges for that reason raises troubling questions about the state's criminal justice system.

The charges stemmed from a shootout with Cochise County deputies in southeastern Arizona on Oct. 23, 1982, in which two church members were killed and several deputies were badly wounded.

Sheriff Jimmy Judd had sent his deputies into Miracle Valley, a rural community 10 miles north of the Mexican border and about 70 miles east of Nogales, that day to serve routine traffic warrants.

Because of the intensity of local feelings, the trial of the first six of the 19 defendants was moved to Tucson in Pima County and a jury was empaneled a week ago. There had been tension between members of the religious community, formerly of Chicago, and white residents for months before the bloody confrontation with each side accusing the other of harassment and abuse.

But then Cochise County said its indigent legal funds budget had been exhausted by defense costs already in excess of $213,000.

The Legislature said it would grant the loan, but said the county first would have to use up what lawmakers said was $15 million in county contingency and revenue-sharing funds.

County officials said all but about $35,000 of that money was allocated for other necessary services, and the county board of supervisors voted this week to reject the Legislature's terms.

WPPSS investors plea

SEATTLE (AP) — Investors who bought $2.25 billion in bonds that the Washington Public Power Supply System says it can't repay have asked a federal judge to make sure the supply system isn't picked clean by other creditors before they have a chance to win their securities fraud lawsuit.

Lawyers for the bondholders, who have banded together in a class action suit against WPPSS and 200 other defendants, asked U.S. District Judge Richard Bilby to put on hold about $85 million worth of judgments against the supply system until their case has been resolved.

A motion filed Wednesday also asks that Bilby appoint a receiver for the "limited purpose" of investigating and perhaps prosecuting claims the supply system may have against the Bonneville Power Administration and others.

WPPSS officials at first had interpreted the motion as a request for the appointment of a receiver to handle all of the supply system's financial affairs.

The only way WPPSS can formally enter bankruptcy is voluntarily, something the supply system's executive board has promised it will never do.

Bilby has set a hearing on the motion for late March. WPPSS has until the end of February to formally respond.

The bonds were sold to finance construction on two nuclear power plants that eventually were terminated.

Infant killer given 99 years

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — Nurse Genevieve Jones was sentenced Thursday to the maximum term of 99 years in prison by a jury that one day earlier convicted her of murdering a 15-month-old girl with injections of a powerful muscle relaxant.

The panel deliberated about an hour before handing down the sentence, which could have been 5 years to life. Under Texas law, a 99-year term is equivalent to a life sentence. Inmates -serving 99 years or life are eligible for parole in about 20 years.

Ms. Jones, 38, was convicted Wednesday in the Sept. 17, 1982, death of Chelsea McClellan. Testimony showed that the little girl died after injections of succinylcholine, a hard-to-detect drug that paralyzes. An expert witness testified that the drug long has been a favorite for murder because it's tough to trace.

Gorbachev's vote moves him into Russia's No. 2 position

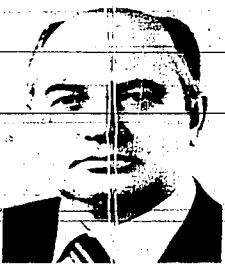

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev gave a crucial endorsement to Konstantin U. Chernenko and is now the No. 2 man in the Kremlin, a highly placed Soviet source says.

The 52-year-old agriculture specialist, the youngest man on the ruling Politburo, was reputed to be Yuri V. Andropov's choice as successor.

With Chernenko selected to lead the country as general secretary of the Communist Party, Gorbachev's powerful new role was first suggested by his position next to Chernenko at ceremonies in honor of the late Andropov.

When it was announced on television Wednesday night that Gorbachev had made a previously unmentioned statement at the Central Committee plenum Monday that named Chernenko leader.

The Gorbachev statement appears in a brochure of speeches obtained by The Associated Press Thursday in advance of publication. The brochure indicated Gorbachev, speaking "on behalf of the Politburo," closed the meeting with an endorsement of

MIKHAIL GORBACHEV

Chernenko.

In order to carry out such a role at the plenum, Gorbachev would most certainly have to be in a leading position in the 12-man Politburo. The Communist Party newspaper Pravda, meanwhile, laid out a conservative course for the party in a front-page editorial that set the tone for Chernenko's first months in power.

A similar article appeared in Pravda in November 1982 after the death of Leonid I. Brezhnev and the installation of Andropov as Kremlin leader.

Pravda made clear that there would be no relaxation of Soviet bloc unity under Chernenko, who traditionally endorsed the doctrine of his mentor, Brezhnev, that there should be no liberal experiments in the Soviet bloc.

Some Western observers considered Gorbachev a strong contender for the leadership after Andropov's death.

A Western diplomat speculated that Gorbachev's endorsement of Chernenko meant there was an implicit recognition within the Kremlin leadership that his backing was necessary to win Chernenko the post.

A highly placed Soviet source told a Western delegation in Moscow for Andropov's funeral Tuesday that Gorbachev was now, effectively, the Kremlin's No. 2 man.

Iran claims key offensive

By The Associated Press

Iran claimed its troops breached Iraqi border fortifications Thursday in a massive offensive that left at least 1,200 Iraqis dead or wounded and moved the Iraqis closer to Baghdad than at any time in the 3½-year-old war.

But Iraq said its army "crushed" the offensive with a counterattack that inflicted heavy casualties on the Iraqis and sent them retreating in disarray under attack by Iraqi armor and helicopter gunships.

Iraq claimed its navy and air force sank five Iranian ships in the northern reaches of the Persian Gulf near the Iranian port of Bandar Khomeini, and that Iraqi mines in the same area sank two more.

Iraq also reported that Iranian artillery shelled Iraqi border towns, killing five civilians.

Terrorist gang revival feared

ROME (AP) — The assassination of a top U.S. official, and a courtroom outburst Thursday in which Red Brigades members claimed responsibility for it, fed growing fears of a comeback by the terrorist gang after nearly three years of relative quiet.

Two men armed with automatic weapons killed Leamon R. Hunt outside his home Wednesday evening, blasting in a window of his bulletproof limousine at point-blank range. Hunt, a civilian, was director general of the multinational force in the Sinai. Multiple claims of responsibility followed the slaying. Italian police said they it was most likely the Red Brigades did it, but other terrorists might have been the killers.

"The operating method of the attack had the stamp" of the Red Brigades, said a police source who spoke on condition of anonymity. Officials had considered the gang largely crushed, and Red Brigades leaders have made statements that the armed struggle was over. Another police source close to the investigation said the attack provided "clear indications" of a comeback by the Red Brigades. The source, a high-ranking official of Italy's anti-terrorist police, also asked not to be named.

The last major assault claimed by the Red Brigades was the kidnapping of U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier in 1981. Police freed the NATO official 12 days later. Dozens of arrests followed.

Senate alters law on open meetings

By MARY STEVENSON
The Associated Press

BOISE — Despite warnings that it will erode Idaho's open meeting law and lead to more closed door sessions, the state Senate has approved a new exception to open meeting requirements.

The bill, approved 24-11 on Thursday, now goes to the House.

The state's open meeting law requires public entities to conduct their business in public meetings, with certain exceptions.

These exceptions include deliberations on hiring, firing, and disciplinary actions. But all final actions must still be done in public.

Under the bill, public hospitals that compete with other health care providers could go into closed session to consider preliminary negotiations involving matters of trade or commerce.

Supporters of the measure said public hospitals need the legislation because they operate under a disadvantage compared to private hospitals, which are not subject to open meeting requirements.

"They're really at a disadvantage with the private sector in having to let the plan be known prior as to what their thinking is," said Sen. Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs.

Sen. Terry Reilly, D-Nampa, who works in the health field and is president of a national rural health organization, said he's seen "a tremendous decline in the number of rural hospitals."

"We're going to see a continual decline of small rural hospitals in this country because they just can't compete," he said.

But Sen. Roger Fairchild, R-Fruitland, chairman of the Senate Judiciary and Rules Committee, opposed the bill.

He said that if the bill passed, "the open meeting law will be in need of hospital care."

"In the long run, the benefits are outweighed by the detriments," Fairchild said.

Fairchild said legislators must consider "What is the worst possible situation of office holders... the most dishonest? You might have good people on that hospital board, but what if we don't?"

"Our open meeting law is not all that tough to begin with," Fairchild added, noting that it contains no sanctions.

"I don't know why we want to let the camel put the nose in the tent, because next year the tent will be there, and the year after the tent will be knocked down," he said.

Sen. Ralph Lacy, D-Pocatello, citing the public's right to know, said "The real danger here is we'll have too many closed-door sessions."

Delay of state primary election killed

By MARY STEVENSON
The Associated Press

BOISE — With reapportionment still a question mark, the Idaho Senate defeated legislation that would have automatically delayed the state primary if the issue remained unresolved by late March.

About half of the majority Republicans joined with all Senate Democrats to defeat the measure 25-10 on Thursday.

The bill was sponsored by Senate President Pro Tem James Risch, R-Boise, who said the GOP had no official position on the measure.

"Don't think that by voting for this bill you're doing me any favors," Risch said. "If you vote for this bill you're probably doing a favor for the people of Idaho."

Risch said the bill's purpose was "to bring some certainty into a very uncertain situation."

The bill postpones the start-of-filing-for-the primary from Feb. 27 until at least March 26.

It provides that if Idaho's reapportionment dilemma isn't solved by March 23, the May 22 primary will be delayed until August 23, the presidential portion cancelled, and filing further delayed until July 2.

The Idaho Supreme Court last year overturned the state's 1982 reapportionment plan because it violates the state constitution's prohibition a gainst dividing counties.

The high court ruled that if lawmakers don't get a new reapportionment plan on the books, a controversial plan approved by 1st District Judge Dar Cogswell will go into effect for this year's elections.

The Senate earlier this week gave final legislative approval to a new reapportionment plan drafted by a legislative committee.

That plan, which some lawmakers expect Gov. John Evans to veto, would maintain the current 35 Senate districts, but has three multi-county, multi-seat cluster districts in southern and eastern Idaho.

A veto by Evans would kick the Cogswell plan into effect.

Risch has said that regardless of what plan becomes law, the reapportionment issue will end up in federal court.

He noted Thursday that people who want to run in the May 22 primary can start filing on Feb. 27.

In 10 days, 19 hours, and seven-and-a-half minutes, the reapportionment issue will not be resolved in the state of Idaho," Risch said.

He said that if the issue remains unresolved, and someone goes to court and obtains an injunction against the primary, lawmakers will have to come back to Boise in special session to set a new primary date.

"We owe it to the people of the state of Idaho to clarify as best we can the process of the primary," Risch said.

Resort-tax bill opposed

BOISE (AP) — An Idaho Falls Republican tried unsuccessfully to get the House to approve a bill that would require the state to recall a bill it's already approved.

But after some members complained about the ethics of the effort, Rep. Martin Trillhaase, R-Idaho Falls, abandoned the effort — at least until Chairman Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, returns to the committee.

Antone missed Thursday's meeting. He's sponsoring a bill to allow resort cities such as Ketchum and Sun Valley to impose up to 5 percent in local sales tax.

The bill would allow the city of Coeur d'Alene to be classified as a "resort city" to impose the tax.

Several members said there's considerable opposition in Coeur d'Alene to the bill.

The bill was approved by the committee earlier and sent to the House floor. It was amended earlier in the week so local communities could grant exemptions if necessary.

Trillhaase asked committee members to recall the bill. And when asked what he had in mind, he said, "To kill it right here."

"I consider it in extremely poor taste in his (Antone's) absence to call it back," said Rep. Chris Hooper, R-Boise.

Other committee members said they felt they had been misled by testimony on Coeur d'Alene's support for the bill.

But eventually acting committee chairman Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome, ruled Trillhaase's motion out of order and it never came to a vote.

Salmon gets flood aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal disaster declaration for Lemhi County has been signed by President Reagan, opening the way for low-cost loans and grants to Salmon residents routed from their homes and businesses by floodwaters.

"It's the end of a long road to get this done," said Sen. James McClure, who along with other members of the Idaho congressional delegation and Gov. John Evans urged the federal action in the wake of last month's flooding.

Wall Street legend dead

NEW YORK (AP) — A Wall Street legend is dead. The common stock of the "old" American Telephone & Telegraph Co., for decades dubbed the investment of widows and orphans because of its bedrock reputation for security and steady dividends, has traded for the last time on the New York Stock Exchange.

"Old" AT&T ended its era Wednesday with a 25-cent decline, to $63.50 a share, in NYSE composite trading. And, as America's most widely held stock, it closed where it often had in the past — atop the NYSE's most active list as more than 3 million shares changed hands.

Now, the only AT&T common stock to be traded will be the new "new" slimmed-down AT&T, which was created Jan. 1 when AT&T spun off its 22 wholly owned local telephone companies under an antitrust settlement with the Justice Department.

The "new" AT&T fell 37 1/2 cents a share to $16.37 1/2 Wednesday and was second on the NYSE's active list.

To facilitate the change in AT&T's stock, shares of the "old" AT&T "new" AT&T had been trading since late November, as had the shares of the seven new regional holding companies that took over the local telephone service divested by AT&T.

Jail panel reviewing four architect hopefuls

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The seven-member Twin Falls County jail committee has begun the process of selecting an architect for the multimillion-dollar project.

From a list of 43 firms, the group tentatively selected four second-round contenders Wednesday night.

But the final selection of the second-round group, from which the county commissioners will select the architect for the project, awaits voting by three members of the committee who were absent Wednesday.

Meanwhile, overcrowding at the jail continues, according to Sheriff Jim Munn. After magistrate court sentencing Thursday, 34 prisoners were being held in the main fourth-floor jail at the Courthouse.

Because of a need to maintain segregation of prisoners by class, this means juvenile prisoners will occupy the recreation room for two days, Munn said.

The commissioners plan to select an architect off the list of second-round contenders before mid-April. That is when a representative of the firm must accompany county representatives to a jail-standards conference in Boulder, Colo.

Committee Ann Cover said Wednesday that the commissioners probably will schedule a series of in-depth interviews with representatives of the second-round firms before making the decision.

Committee members began the procedure of narrowing the field by voting for the three firms they felt would do the best job.

The firms of Dana, Larson, Roubal and Associates of Salt Lake City; H. Richard Helndel-Deland and Associates of Twin Falls and Salt Lake City; and Walker, McGough, Folz, Lyster of Spokane, Wash., each received three votes. The Boise firm of Lombard-Croft received two votes.

Committee member Terry Kramer of Castelford said he was sure any of the firms could build a jail that is larger, out-of-state firms would offer more experience, and in most cases, area firms would seek help from an out-of-state associate anyway.

However, he also said it would be easier to coordinate the effort if a local architect were to be included as an associate in a generally out-of-state team.

In addition to Kramer, the other committee members present were Dave Munroe of Buhl and Kris Vello and Claire Harkins, both of Twin Falls. Munn, county jail administrator, and Jim Hopkins and assistant jail administrator Deputy Wayne Tousey also attended.

Committee members Bill Hoffield of Twin Falls, Ron Ballard of Kimberly and Ralph Brooking of Marsing were absent. Cover said Thursday afternoon she had not yet received their votes.

A total of 50 prisoners were in custody Thursday, according to Munn.

In addition to 36 on the fourth floor, eight were being held in the basement work-release area, and six inmates and female juveniles were being held in the Twin Falls City Jail.

Under present standards, the fourth floor is designed to hold no more than 23 prisoners, although there are often more, Munn said.

Officials often are "forced" to shuffle prisoners around after Thursday court sentences, Munn said. This also is not the first time juveniles have had to be held in the recreation room, he said.

Munn said the recreation room contains weight-lifting and table-tennis equipment. When juveniles are held there, their prisoners do not have access to their customary live hours of recreation a week, he said.

Attorney General Jim Jones says he is optimistic about the House bill on Swan Falls.

Jones pushing water issues

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "Bushwacked" in the state Senate earlier this week, Attorney General Jim Jones says his office will push as far as possible to place power production behind other Snake River water uses — one way or the other.

A legislative battle already is going on; cases are pending in state courts. And "if we don't prevail in the state courts, we are going to go into federal court and have the subordination clause construed by the federal courts," Jones told members of the Twin Falls Optimists Club on Thursday.

Who should have control over water on the Snake and other Idaho rivers has been debated heavily since the state Supreme Court ruled late in 1982 that the Idaho Power Co. is entitled to 8,400 cubic feet of Snake River water per second for its hydroelectric turbines at Swan Falls Dam.

"A quiet, quiet vote in the Senate on Monday effectively killed one bill," Jones said. "The other bill, which would give the state a second — subordinating them — to other uses, such as for city drinking water, crop irrigation or coolants for processing plants."

"We kind of got bushwacked," Jones said. But a second bill, filed this week in the House, has a good chance of success, he told the Optimists.

This alternative bill would cover only the "Snake" River and its tributaries, instead of all rivers in the state, and it includes provisions favored by Idaho Power, such as stripping the state Public Utilities Commission of any say on water rights affecting power generation.

The bill also would help water users, who have been named in a lawsuit filed by Idaho Power. It would give 5,000 of the 7,500 users of the controversy, a move Idaho Power already has been seeking.

However, even if the bill passes the Legislature, it is likely to face a court challenge, where much of the other action is taking place, Jones said.

The attorney general said his office will press to widen the 1982 Supreme Court decision, which he says was a narrow ruling. "I don't believe the Supreme Court looked at the issue in the broad context."

"I think we have a pretty good opportunity . . . to get a favorable decision back in the Supreme Court," he said.

The state claims that Idaho Power agreed in 1952 to rank its water rights behind other uses in exchange for permission to build three dams in Hell's Canyon. While the Supreme Court did subordinate the utility's water rights, the ruling extended only to the next dam upstream, Swan Falls.

Jones said that by demanding a water flow of 8,400 cubic feet per second at Swan Falls, Idaho Power is cutting off future development anywhere upstream on the Snake River.

So far, the state has been forced to stop issuing new permits for water uses as a result, he said.

Idaho Power officials have said that the utility only wants to obtain the same rights as any other water user. If its water rights are diminished, the utility will lose electrical-generating capacity, and its customers will have to pay higher costs, company spokesman Larry Taylor has said.

Still, the state cannot afford to tie up the water, Jones said Thursday. "We can't lock it up by putting it through generators at Swan Falls. That's an inefficient, wasteful use of water."

Jones has been traveling throughout the state, giving the state's position on the Swan Falls controversy.

He will appear at a meeting of the Jerome Chamber of Commerce at noon today at the Elks Club.

McClure fears a 'Mondale presidency'

By STEPHEN HARTGEN
Times-News managing editor

TWIN FALLS — Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale is a "skilful demagogue" whose election would be an "absolute disaster" for the country, says Idaho's senior senator.

James McClure calls the former Minnesota senator and vice president a "manipulator of the emotions" who "would have government more involved in our lives."

He sees Mondale as the probable Democratic candidate, and he says that a contest between Mondale and President Ronald Reagan would present the American people with a choice of "100-degree opposites."

McClure is predicting a Reagan victory, although by a narrower margin than in 1980. He says the election will give the Republican Party the opportunity to pick up seats in the House, as well as retain control in the Senate by "one or two seats."

McClure, who has served in the Senate since 1972, does not challenge in November from Democratic candidate Pete Bush of Lewiston, a retired military officer.

In a wide-ranging interview Thursday afternoon in Twin Falls, McClure:

• Urged removal of American troops from the disintegrating situation in Lebanon.

• Doubled that there is "not a snowball's chance in hell" that a proposed United Nations peacekeeping force in the region would succeed.

• Called on Reagan and Congress to "go further" than the already proposed $40 billion in "downpayment" reductions in the federal deficit, now reaching $180 billion a year.

• He said he could support an across-the-board freeze on federal spending, with the exception of defense, where "limits on growth" are warranted.

• Doubled that the naming of Konstantin Chernenko as the new general secretary of the Soviet Union's Communist Party would have much effect on immediate American-Soviet relations and does not signify a change of direction in fundamental policy.

The Soviets, he says, walked out of arms-control talks with the Americans of their own accord.

However, he says Reagan should have attended the funeral of Yuri Andropov as a way of signaling American intent to communicate with the Soviets.

McClure says the administration "ought to be looking" for other such opportunities to improve communications.

• Challenged former U.S. Ambassador to El Salvador Robert White, who recently claimed the Reagan administration knew more than it has revealed about the rightist-death squads operating in the country.

McClure says White overstates his claim and his "credibility should be challenged."

Hospital ponders ways to borrow

By JANENE BUCKWAY
and LUCY OSBORNE
Times-News correspondents

GOODING — Options for dealing with the financial crisis at Gooding County Memorial Hospital are being explored.

Earlier this week, county Prosecutor John Arkoosh told the county commissioners that one possibility is "tax participation notes, a form of borrowing."

According to Arkoosh, the county commission could issue the notes to area banks. In doing so, the county would be pledging to use future tax revenues to repay the loans, plus interest.

Then, the county could authorize a one-time, one-year emergency tax levy, outside the limitations set by the One Percent Initiative, Arkoosh says. The levy would not require voter approval.

Revenue from the emergency levy would be used to repay the tax levies, Arkoosh says.

However, Arkoosh says such a levy could not be put into place until the 1984-85 fiscal year.

"We are still investigating this process," Arkoosh said Thursday.

The other option being considered is a property-tax override election, which would require a two-thirds majority to pass.

Arkoosh says part of the hospital's problem is being caused by $150,000 in accounts receivable that cannot be collected.

Dr. Duane Cutright, the hospital's administrator, says several county officials that "a one-time infusion of funds could defray the hospital's current deficit, Arkoosh says.

"The need to deal with the deficit is the real story. It is the reason we're looking at these possibilities," Arkoosh says.

Thursday night, at the hospital board's regular monthly meeting, Cutright presented the financial report for January.

"The occupancy was pretty good and our admissions are up from the past year," he said.

The financial report showed a $85,000 deficit for the fiscal year ending in 1983.

"We cut some expenses; we cut a couple of salaries," Cutright said. "We're holding down capital investments, and we are again looking into the possibility of selling property in Wendell."

Senator tells GOP, troops should come home

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — The government in Lebanon now has collapsed and the U.S. military can do no good there, says Sen. James McClure.

Speaking Thursday night at the Jerome County Republicans' annual Lincoln Day banquet, Idaho's senior senator said American forces should be brought home immediately.

McClure said he did not favor sending U.S. troops to Lebanon in the first place. Once there, however, he said he agreed that the United States should not have "cut and run" when things became difficult. Such action, he said, would have invited even more terrorist acts against Americans around the world.

A more serious threat to the United States is the Central American turmoil, he said.

"This is not across the world somewhere; it is next door. It may well spread throughout Central America with Cuban and Soviet takeovers if we are not careful."

McClure said Lebanon and Central America are two of the major issues facing the United States today, but there are others.

He expressed little optimism that the naming of a new Soviet Union leader will change relations between that nation and the United States.

"Relations can improve only if the Russians want them to improve, and to date, they have not wanted that."

Turning to the Reagan administration's problems, he said another major issue is the budget. Reagan did not increase the deficit; it came with the job, McClure said.

"Traditionally, a president cannot cut spending without the cooperation of Congress, and he has not been able to get Congress to reduce spending."

McClure said the Democrats in Congress propose reducing the national debt by increasing taxes, while Republicans are holding out for reduced expenditures. The result, he said, is a stalemate that has to be broken.

McClure said he is not ready to vote for some tax increase in exchange for Democratic support for some budget cuts.

He blasted the many federal "entitlement" programs and their automatic annual growth for much of

Congressman: Deficit can be curbed

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Rep. George Hansen said Thursday the present $200 billion federal deficit can be reduced significantly.

It can be done, he said, by "pulling the fangs" from the Internal Revenue Service, junking the current federal income tax and adopting a flat-rate tax, and allowing amnesty for taxpayers willing to pay up.

The IRS has become "extra-constitutional and extra-legal," the Second District Republican told a group of about 100 Twin Falls businessmen gathered for a Kwanza Club luncheon at the Turf Club.

He said the IRS no longer serves U.S. citizens but terrorizes them.

"And the government" "has flexed its muscles so much . . . that now they are reaching into a new area, the churches," he said.

Stallings speaks out — B2

After the meeting, Hansen aides passed out free copies of his book, "The Hazards Due People." The book, paid for by the Coalition For Religious Freedom, based in Washington, D.C., documents alleged abuses of power by the IRS.

In particular, Hansen said the government is out on attacking the right of religion to operate freely in the United States.

Late last year, Hansen, a Mormon, took up the cause of seven men, all Baptists, who were persecuted by Nebraska officials for sending their children to an unaccredited church school.

In December, he made two trips to Louisville, Neb., to visit the men and rally support for them from members of fundamentalist churches.

"The men simply believe 'God doesn't have to get the approval' of the education department," Hansen said Thursday. And said quality of education is not at issue, but control of education.

"Right in the heartland of America," this represents a challenge to religious freedom similar to that present daily in the Soviet Union.

Furthermore, Hansen said, the IRS is out to get small churches by removing their tax-exempt status.

He cited the example of Bob Jones University in South Carolina, which lost its tax-exempt status because it prohibited dating between whites and blacks campus.

He predicted that after the IRS has established such a principle by intervening against small churches, it will move against others such as the Catholic Church and the Mormon Church, both of which do not allow women priests.

"The IRS has no business saying what a religion is," Hansen said.

Hansen said the IRS is threatening religious freedom.

Stallings: Deficit is No. 1 priority

By DAVID MÖFFAT Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Richard Stallings, who will be the 1984 Democratic challenger to U.S. Rep. George Hansen, told Twin Falls Democrats Idaho depends on a reduction of the federal deficit...

Those high rates now are attracting foreign investment, which is boosting the value of the dollar against foreign currencies and limiting the flow of American exports, he said.

"The military budget is a good place to begin. The basic problem is that the huge amount of money thrown into military spending encourages military waste. There is no incentive to hold down costs..."

He said voters have heard talk of a flat-rate income tax in the past, but never have seen specific proposals to follow the talk.

Skater, skier win U.S. double gold

By D. BYRON YAKE
AP Sports Editor

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Bill Johnson and Scott Hamilton carried the flag for the United States Thursday, winning double gold at the Winter Olympics. Johnson brashly took the downhill, while Hamilton won the men's figures skating, but apologized for not being better.

Their victories calved the spirits of the U.S. Olympic team, whose medals output had been sparse with only one gold and a total of three medals before their victories. They put the U.S. in sole possession of fifth place in the standings, with five medals. The Soviet Union leads with 20, but both nations have three golds.

The United States now has three golds and two silvers. Both triumphs were historic. Johnson's was the first ever by an American man in Olympic Alpine skiing, and Hamilton's broke a 24-year drought of gold in an event that once belonged almost solely to the United States.

Hamilton, dressed in red, white and blue, waved a huge American flag on his victory skate around the Zetra rink. He was the first American to win the men's figures since David Jenkins in Squaw Valley in 1960, and he won despite finishing second to Brian Orser of Canada in the freestyle program.

"I feel like I just fell off the edge of the world," Hamilton, of Denver, said. "I did it. I waited a long time for this. I can't even describe my feelings."

perhaps those of his teammates, too, after winning downhill gold.

"This is both America's medal and mine," he said. "Now America has it."

Still, it was not a perfect day for the U.S. team. There was a surprising second place in the short program of women's figure skating for Rosalynn Summers, and speed skaters again were shut out of medals. In the women's downhill, the best U.S. finish was 16th, by Holly Flanders of Deerfield, N.H.

But — Johnson's searing run down an icy mountain provided the spark, and the stars and stripes exploded with Hamilton's performance at night.

On the technical side, Hamilton got three 5.6s out of a perfect 6.0, two 5.7s, three 5.8s and one 5.9 from the nine judges. For artistic impression, he received four 5.8s and five 5.9s. Orser moved from fifth place to take the silver while Jozef Sabovcik of Czechoslovakia won the bronze.

Orser got better scores than Hamilton in both the short and long programs, but Hamilton had won the compulsory by a large margin to lock the door on the gold.

"I just popped two jumps, that's all," said Hamilton. "I'm a little embarrassed. It's all right. I was good enough to win. I worked for it, and I guess I earned it."

Said Hamilton's coach, Don Laws: "He's never skated like this since I've been with him. I was worried about the scores. I suspected he could have been third or fourth in the freestyle. He apologized. He said he was sorry."

"If you've seen my practices," said

Hamilton, "you know it's been going like a dream. This was difficult. I didn't feel the pressure until tonight. It totally affected my concentration."

The gold, however, still belonged to Hamilton.

The state of the U.S. team at the 14th Winter Games had been questioned, the number of medals won had been disappointing; but Johnson, oozing with delight, and Hamilton, a magellan on ice, brought renewed life.

Johnson had said he would win the gold medal in the men's downhill, and he did. Thus, he became the first U.S. gold medalist in men's Olympic Alpine history, and he openly savored his victory.

What does the gold medal mean to Johnson?

Declo 'Dogs gain semis

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Another Declo-Kimberly game?

It's far from certain, but entirely within the realm of possibility, as both Fourth District representatives triumphed in Thursday's opening round of the State A-3 Girls Basketball Tournament at the College of Southern Idaho.

First-round results included: Grangeville 40, Teton 35; Kimberly 37, Nampa Christian 35; Prairie 45, Butte County 33; and Declo 51, Malad 35.

In today's losers' bracket confrontation, Teton faces Nampa Christian at 10:40 a.m. and Butte County meets Malad at 2 p.m. Championship semifinal pairings are Grangeville vs. Kimberly at 6:25 p.m. and Declo against Prairie at 9:45 p.m.

Declo 51, Malad 35 — The Hornets controlled Malad with a stifling defense, limiting the Dragons to six points in the first period and four in the second.

Even after halftime, when Malad increased its production slightly, Declo's 2-3 zone accomplished its purpose by preventing even the hint of a Dragon rally. Only once after intermission did Malad score consecutive baskets.

On offense, the Hornets were not always smooth — they tried Coach Lynn Payne's patience by throwing several ill-advised cross-court passes — but effective enough. Declo guards Cindy Gillett and Cathy Wheeler usually succeeded in felling Malad's press, and 5-11 center Lyn Darrington was a force inside, as the Hornets expected she would be.

Darrington missed all but one of her first five shots, but soon righted herself, making three out of her next five. This sparked the Hornets to a remarkable 20-2 streak which began with 2:15 left in the first quarter on a Darrington fall-out and ended with 1:18 to go in the half on Gillett's three-point basket. The surge went out a 6-2 Malad lead and gave Declo a commanding 23-8 advantage.

Thereafter, Malad's deficit never dipped below 10 points. The last time the Dragons crept within 10, at 34-24 entering the fourth quarter, Declo tallied seven straight points on Gillett's layin, a Darrington free throw and two baskets from Dee Binley.

Darrington led all scorers with 19 points, while teammates Wheeler and Binley added 10. Jody Daniels paced Malad with 14 points.

Grangeville 40, Teton 35 — Grangeville went from a run-away to trailing before closing out Teton with six of eight free throws in the final 1:47.

The Bulldogs jumped ahead 13-2 in the early minutes as they swept the boards and Marci Higgins picked up six points. It wasn't until the mid-second quarter that Teton started sparking to life offensively.

Down 25-11, the Redskins closing points from Dena Little, Terahya Jeffs and Margaret Beard to close to within eight. Teton's surge carried immediately into the second half as Jeffs hit six points. A Beard bucket cut the deficit to 13-30 at the buzzer.

Teton first drew even with 4:59 to play on a Jeffs free throw but the Redskins couldn't take the lead until Nelson scored off a steal with 2:27 to play. That gave Teton a 35-34 advantage but they couldn't score again.

Johnson caps tough turnaround

By JOHN MOSSMAN
AP Sports Writer

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — Two years ago he was kicked off the U.S. Ski Team because he was out of shape. Long-haired and rebellious, he scarcely resembled the Olympic champion he is today.

Bill Johnson capped his remarkable turnaround by winning the men's downhill Thursday at the XIV Winter Olympic Games. He's the first American ever to win the event in Olympic competition and the first American man to win any Olympic Alpine event.

"He has the qualities the great competitors have — he's confident and cocky," said U.S. Alpine Director Bill Mailloux, who is looking down a mountain. "He's the one who's going to win."

Asked about the 1981-82 season, when Johnson showed up out of shape at the start of training and was kicked off the team, Mailloux said, "I think Bill needed to know that we were serious about developing a good program and the discipline it took to do it. He's grown up a lot since then. He started to mature in Europa Cup last season. He had some success, and success does good things to some people."

Last season Johnson won three of the four downhills on the Europa Cup circuit — a sort of minor-league proving ground for young skiers.

This season, his first full year at the World Cup level, he became the first American ever to win a men's World Cup downhill, triumphing at Wengen, Switzerland, on Jan. 15.

Johnson, 23, of Van Nuys, Calif., came into Sarajevo with growing confidence, then dominated training runs and confidently predicted a gold medal.

"I've matured a lot since I was kicked off the team," Johnson said of the low-point in his skiing career.

But he insists he's no overnight success. "I've concentrated on downhill for four years. I've put in a lot of work. Persistence and determination will conquer all. It takes a lot of guts to throw yourself down a mountain. Not many can do that."

BILL JOHNSON
A first for America

"Where does he go from here? This year, my goals were to get in the top three in a couple of World Cup races and finish in the top three in the Olympics," he said. "There's always room for improvement. This is just the beginning of my career."

He's come a long way for a skier who was at the 1980 Olympics as a forerunner — someone sent down the slope to check on course conditions before the real talent hits the snow."

Mystery sponsor helped skater

By GEOFFREY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — Scott Hamilton says skating cured him of a childhood disease which stunted his growth. It also made him an Olympic champion.

When Hamilton won the men's singles figure skating title Thursday at the XIV Winter Olympics, it was the climax of a story that began as a tragedy and ended in triumph.

He was 5 years old, in his hometown of Bowling Green, Ohio, when he was struck by a rare disease known as Schwachmann's Syndrome. This body could not take in protein and calcium and his muscles and bones would not develop.

"The more I skated, the more muscles I got," said Hamilton, who took up skating when he was 15.

The disease went away, a recovery that doctors could only attribute to a combination of healthy exercise and the cold air of the ice rink.

And although Hamilton, now 25, would grow to only 5 feet, 3 inches and 110 pounds, his climb to the top had begun.

At one stage he almost gave up skating because of financial problems, but an anonymous sponsor came to his aid and he kept going.

American skating owes a lot to that mysterious provider. Hamilton mastered his art and restored America's pride on ice.

There was a period after World War II when the United States produced one Olympic figure skating champion after another — Dick Button at St. Moritz in 1948 and Osa in 1952. Hayes Alan Jenkins at Oslo in 1956 and his brother, David, at Squaw Valley in 1960.

Then the success story crumbled and the title passed to Europeans. It stayed with them until Hamilton brought it back to the United States. Hamilton and his coach, Don Laws, make no secret of their tactics. He just sets out to bowl them over. Judges and audiences alike.

SCOTT HAMILTON
Conquered rare disease

"Start with some technical stuff to show them you're proficient," Hamilton said. "Then let them have something dramatic. They jump out of their seats."

With the world at his feet, he can dwell on the advantages of being small.

"I'm small because of the troubles in my childhood," he said. "But something good came out of it — I never had any extra poundage, like some athletes do. I'm not big, but I've got a lot of skating muscle."

Host champion Oakley falls to Melba

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The host district proved gracious in the opening round of the State Girls A-1 Basketball Tournament Thursday.

Host champion Oakley fell to Melba 35-32 in the nighttime after Raft River closed but could quite control leaders in a 40-25 decision. Cambridge trailed almost the entire game but rallied in overtime to trim Neperce 50-48 and Highland of Craigmont has the easiest time in tripping Plummetts. The last time

Action resumes at 9 a.m. today in the CSI gymnasium with Raft River meeting Neperce while Oakley and Plummetts play at 12:30 to fill the consolation finals. Cambridge and League square off in the first semifinal at 3:45 p.m. and Highland and Melba meet in the 8:20 nightcap.

Leaders 44, Raft River 40 — It was perhaps Raft River's best overall effort of the season but in the end, Leaders' Karen Peterson summed up the game when she drove the length of the court for a crumple in the final seconds to clinch the victory.

A state veteran, picked up 22 points to pace Leaders on the scoreboard while her ball-handling and rebounding also were critical to the Mustang win.

Raft River threw a balanced attack at the Mustangs, and by guards Holly Harper and Nyla Robinson.

The biggest lead of the second half favored Leaders 40-35 with 2:58 remaining. Raft River rallied back to within one as Kay Hillyard and Jones picked up two points each while Leaders, 34-14 on the day, was missing three straight free throws.

Raft River then had a chance to take the lead, missing a free throw and three follow-up shots. But Peterson got "die rebound and threaded her way around a couple of Trojans for a layin that moved Leaders out of reach at 42-33.

Leaders threatened to run away in the early second quarter when it momentarily jumped out to an 18-9 lead. But — Hillyard, Robinson and Stephanie Warr pulled Raft River back into contention and then Warr and Robinson came up with six points that gave Raft River a 23-18 lead. Peterson closed the half with four points to cut the Trojan lead to one at intermission.

It remained a one-to-two point game until freshman Kelly Caswell gave Leaders that 40-35 lead to set up the final free plays.

Cambridge 50, Neperce 48 — There were 64 free throws shot in the game so fittingly it was three straight chanciers by Kristin Richel and another by Sheryl McHargue that "kicked Cambridge — to the overtime victory.

Actually, Cambridge, which was loaded with state veterans from last year, didn't arrive at the tournament until it switched into a man-to-man defense in the second half.

The Bulldogs stuck with a zone through the first three quarters and Neperce always seemed on the verge of blowing things completely out of hand.

Neperce raked up a 9-2 lead in the first 3:20 and pushed ahead 28-15 at halftime as Cambridge, floundered offensively. There wasn't a lot of difference in the third quarter, Neperce taking a 35-22 advantage into the final eight minutes.

But then Cambridge switched to the man to get some pressure on Neperce's ball-handlers and the tempo increase resulted in much better scoring in addition to causing some turnover.

The Bulldogs cleared back into a 42-42 tie on Duella Pearson's field goal with 2:23 left but Neperce's Shirley Eggers re-established a two-point edge with 1:29 remaining.

Pearson then came up with a three-point on a rebound play but a Judy Zenner free throw 19 seconds from the end fashioned the tie.

Jill McLeod staked Neperce to a 47-45 lead with two charities 20 seconds into overtime but Richel then hit three free throws to keep Cambridge the lead for keeps. McHargue pushed that to 49-47 with 23 seconds left. Neperce's last chance to tie ended when McLeod missed the second of two free throws with 14 seconds to play and Pearson then

Jerome, Burley faceoff means scoring

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

BURLEY — It has been an up-and-down season for both the Jerome Tigers and Burley Bobcats. They've gone in and out of the state ratings, defeated teams they weren't supposed to beat, and lost games nobody expected them to lose.

Both teams will be "up" tonight, however. Count on it.

Jerome and Burley, each 12-7 overall and, more importantly, 4-1 against Fourth District competition, meet in the Bobcats' gymnasium at 8 p.m. The victor will receive the No. 1 seed in next week's district tournament — always a highly sought-after goal.

Neither head coach expects the contest to follow the pattern of the teams' previous meeting, which Jerome won 50-49 Jan. 17.

"I think both clubs will try to open it up a little more. I think the winner will be in the low 60s," Jerome's Ben Allen said.

Recalled Burley's Gary Swan, noting his team's relatively low point production against Jerome, "I didn't think we played with much intensity. We just didn't get after it. This time I think you'll see a really fine ballgame."

As can be expected, each team is wary of the other. Allen, for one, believes Burley will try to exploit its height advantage against Jerome's man-to-man defense.

"I think one thing they're going to do this time is post up on some of our kids," he said. "They're all around 6-4 except for (guard Scott) Barrett, which puts them in some good situations. Our biggest problem is just their overall height. We're not used to putting a six-footer on a 6-4 kid."

Meanwhile, Swan maintains the utmost respect for Jerome center Gary Hulsey, whom he calls the state's best athlete. "We have to stay away from him," Swan stated.

"There's no stopping Hulsey; you just try to control him," Allen said.

Nor does the Burley coach ignore the other significant Tigers. "We have to control a couple of their players — (Troy) Prairie and (Jeff) Burnham, and (Ron) Farnsworth looks like he has been playing better."

Both teams look like they've been playing better. Too: Burley returned to the state rankings in the No. 4 position after upsetting top-ranked Rigby 55-53 last Friday, and Jerome gained an impressive 64-52 victory over Bishop Kelly in Boise in its most recent game Tuesday night.

Swan feels the Bobcats' overall balance" has improved. "Our people underneath (Rich) Ralphs, (Dan) Egbert and (Ryan) Hull are starting to play better and more consistently," he said. Swan added that leading scorer Greg Boyd, who has alternately been nagged by the flu and a twisted foot recently, appears to be returning to top form. Indeed, against Rigby, Boyd poured in 28 points.

Against Bishop Kelly, Jerome trailed 42-36 at halftime before decimating the Knights 28-10 in the second half. "We played some tough man-to-man," Allen said. "And I think the kids showed a little bit of enthusiasm. We've been in a little 'down' slump. We've looked kind of tired, and at this time of the season, I think everybody is. Maybe we needed to catch a little bit of that district fever."

The fever should fade, uncheckered tonight.

Coaches say U.S. hockey team wasn't ready

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Depending on whom you ask, the poor showing by the United States hockey team in the Winter Olympics was either predictable, unlucky or well-deserved.

One opposing coach said the Americans don't really know how to go about putting together an Olympic team.

"They don't spend enough time on it," said the coach, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified.

"If they put all of their best players together for six months, including the professionals, it would still be very difficult for them to win."

"In 1980, they had the fans and the atmosphere was just right for them. Here, they were too young and inexperienced and they hadn't played together long enough."

The countries who keep their teams together for a long time, replacing parts when they must, are the ones who will do the best in hockey. It is too much of a team game to get the best results without having the best preparation. It takes time for that preparation."

Most of the players on Team USA, plus Coach Lou Vairo, claim a run of bad luck has hurt the United States.

"Tom Hirsch hit the goalpost in the third period against Canada," noted Vairo. "If that goes in, who knows, we might go on to win the game and be where Canada is."

"You watch the tapes and see crazy bounces of the puck or guys shooting just wide or our passes missing by fractions," forward David A. Jensen said. "Everything was just a bit off and we never caught a break."

The Americans' biggest shortcomings here have been their hesitation to shoot, inconsistent goaltending and, as Vairo said, "taking stupid, senseless penalties that we didn't take at all during our exhibitions."

When its attack began to sputter against Canada — which, throughout the Olympics, has shown the kind of enthusiasm, hustle and aggressiveness that has been lacking in the American performances — Team USA could not adapt. It's best shooters, guys like Pat LaFontaine, Scott Bjuggstad, Jensen and Scott Fusco, stopped looking for shots. Overpassing choked the offense against Canada and kept a stranglehold on the attack the rest of the way.

Though both Marc Behrend and Bob Mason are more talented goalies than 1980 hero Jim Craig and probably will have more substantial pro careers, neither has been particularly sharp here. Behrend let in some weak goals in all three of his starts, going 0-2-1.

And the penalties were, in many cases, absolutely ridiculous.

"They came out of the frustration of not being able to do what we've been doing before," defenseman Chris Chelios said. "I know I was guilty a few times."

Vairo would not name any names, but said he "felt like strangling nine guys."

Jack Nicklaus hits his second shot from the trees Thursday

Fierce wind gusts hamper golf open

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

LOS ANGELES — Winds strong enough to knock down trees and power lines hampered the best field of the year and turned the first round of the $400,000 Los Angeles Open golf tournament into a survival test Thursday.

"It was quite a struggle. If you cared anything about your score, it was very difficult to keep it from going quite high," said Hale Irwin, one of a handful of players able to coax a subpar round from the winds that roared up the canyons with gusts 40 mph and higher.

He had a 70 — one under the listed par on the Riviera Country Club course but, by Irwin's estimate, much better.

"Par today probably was in the 73-to-74 range," said Irwin; a two-time U.S. Open champion and the recent winner of the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am. "That's probably the toughest I've ever seen Riviera play."

He shared the top spot with a group that included Brad Faxon, Curtis Sillford, Howard Twitty, Canadian Dan Hallardson and Mark Pfeil — all of whom played at least a portion of their rounds before the winds kicked up — and David Edwards.

At their peak, the winds toppled a tree, which in turn knocked down a power line and cut electricity to the course, clubhouse and surrounding area for a couple of hours.

Scores were extremely high. Masters champion Seve Ballesteros of Spain, making his first start of the year, scored double bogey on consecutive holes, did not make a birdie and stalked home with an embarrassing 70.

Defending title holder Gil Morgan shot 76. Fuzzy Zoeller was one higher. Hal Sutton, who won the PGA championship on this course last year, had to rally for a 74. Tom Watson had the same.

Jack Nicklaus had three birdies but had to settle for a 73. That's two over par, but only three off the lead.

Johnny Miller, Lee Trevino, U.S. Open champ Larry Nelson, Isao Aoki of Japan and Jack Renner, winner of the Hawaiian Open last weekend, were in the large group able to match par 71.

"Anything in the vicinity of par was a very good score," Irwin said. "Not only was the wind severe, the greens dried out and became almost impossible. As the wind was strong enough that you had to widen your stance, brace yourself on putts, sometimes play the yard on putts."

Miller said only putting kept his effort from being "an exceptional round."

"That's probably the best tee-to-green round I've played in a long time," he said.

But he missed six times from six feet or less, and once 3-putted from six feet, when wind gusts hit him on his backstroke.

2 Twin Falls records could fall this weekend

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

Two Twin Falls High School records could fall this weekend when the Bruins go after a second straight Gem State Conference basketball championship by invading Highland Friday and hosting Blackfoot Saturday.

One seems doomed — the 395-point regular season standard established by Tom Ballantyne in 1958-59 — while the other must be earned. The Bruins need to win but one of the two to claim the Gem State title — the first time at least since 1938 the Twin Falls has won back-to-back basketball crowns. If they win both games, they will break the school's regular season record by going 18-2. The current mark is 17-3, first set in 1959-60 and held last year.

The other is the result of the very quiet but impressive scoring of Bruin senior Andy Toolson. Should the 6-6, BYU-bound Toolson score a total of 15 points in the two games — and he's averaging 22.5 — he'll zip past Tom Ballantyne.

Toolson, a three-year letterman for Coach John Astorquia, has fashioned his point challenge without a lot of fanfare. He dropped in 42 points to lead Twin Falls to one of its most successful seasons — an overtime win over Pocatello.

He comes into the Highland game with 381 total points, 14 behind Ballantyne. He would not be the first Bruin to average over 20 points but the others missed games due to illness and injury.

"Both records would be nice," admits Coach John Astorquia, "but both of them have to come within the team structure that this bunch has built a good season on."

Most impressive about Toolson's scoring record is that he leads the team with 56 assists, which indicates he hasn't been reticent about giving up the ball. He also remains Twin Falls' leader rebounder, which means he's willing to take his lumps along with the glory.

"I don't think the individual record is as important to us as the team record," Astorquia continued. "What's important is doing as well as we can this weekend, win that conference title and build some momentum for the district playoffs with Minico."

There also is another record Twin Falls is seeking at Highland Friday night. A win would be the second straight on the Ram homecourt — something Twin Falls hasn't accomplished since 1964 and 65. In fact, until last year, Twin Falls had lost all the intervening games.

That Highland will be primed for this one is understated. The Rams literally played Twin Falls off the court for two and one-half quarters in their first meeting. Trailing 33-26, a pair of technical fouls on the Ram bench led to strings of 16-straight Twin Falls points and the Bruins escaped with a tight victory.

"The key to this game is rebounding. Last time Highland beat us 32-24 on the boards. Their two big games, especially Bill Parrish, had 21 points and 16 rebounds. We have to shut them out. And defensively, our man will have to be a lot better because down here they ripped us, taking the ball inside any time they wanted to," Astorquia said.

Parrish is considered the fulcrum of Highland — the 6-5 senior providing strength and power underneath.

"But their other people are good. Their guards are more than adequate defensively — and they have been shooting pretty well. I think it is going to be a very tough game. Highland and Pocatello have given us the two roughest games since (a loss) Minico five weeks ago."

Blackfoot is the kind of team he has to worry about because the Broncos seemingly have better talent than their record indicates.

"They have four or five guys in the 6-3 to 6-5 area and at times I've seen one or the other team then play well, rebound and shoot," Astorquia said. "They have potential at guard in (Marty) Earley and another good shooter that usually comes in off the bench. I compare them somewhat to Bonneville. At times they do not play well but then they'll turn right around and play a solid game against a good team," Astorquia said.

Coach: UCLA tries too hard

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In a season that has deteriorated from high national ranking to three consecutive homecourt losses, the UCLA basketball coach and his players may be "trying too hard," says former Bruins coach John Wooden.

Wooden has won 10 national collegiate titles before his retirement in 1975, and the Bruins have had a lot of Pacific 10 Conference success but no NCAA championships since then. The 1963-64 team had an early winning streak but has stumbled, falling to a 13-7 record including a 4th-place 6-4 record in the Pac-10.

The Bruins seem to be playing scared, maybe the pressures have gotten to them. I don't know what it is," Wooden said in an interview with the Los Angeles Herald Examiner.

Hopes for Oscars set

'Terms of Endearment' given 11 nominations

By BOB THOMAS
The Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — "Terms of Endearment," the bittersweet story of a warring mother and daughter, led the Oscar nominations Thursday with 11, followed by eight for "The Right Stuff," the space-conquest movie that has yet to take off at the box office.

A major surprise was the Swedish "Fanny and Alexander," Ingmar Bergman's avowed swan song as a director, which got six nominations, an unusual number for a foreign film.

And the 4,000 Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences voters snubbed Barbara Streisand, who won no mention for her multiple duties as lead actress, director, co-writer and producer on "Yentl."

Voters also paid little attention to "Return of the Jedi," which grossed $250 million, more than double any other 1983 film. The third of the "Star Wars" adventures managed only four lesser nominations.

Best picture nominees were "Terms of Endearment," "The Right Stuff," "The Big Chill," "The Dresser," and "Tender Mercies." Shirley Maclaine and Debra Winger both were nominated as best actress for "Terms," and Jack Nicholson and John Lithgow were named in the best supporting actor category for the same film.

Other contenders for best actress are Jane Alexander, "Testament," Meryl Streep, "Silkwood," and Julie Walters, "Educating Rita."

Four of the five best actor nominations went to British stars — including Albert Finney as the aging Shakespearean actor and Tom Courtenay as his devoted servant in "The Dresser." Also named were Michael Caine, "Educating Rita," and Tom Conti, "Reuben, Reuben." The only American on the list was Robert Duvall, the country singer of "Tender Mercies."

Five relative newcomers were cited for best supporting actress: Chur, "Silkwood"; Glenn Close, "The Big Chill"; Linda Hunt, "The Year of Living Dangerously"; Amy Irving, "Yentl"; Alfre Woodard, "Cross Creek."

The nominees for supporting actor besides Nicholson and Lithgow, were Charles Durning, "To Be or Not to Be," Sam Shepard,

"The Right Stuff," and Rip Torn, "Cross Creek." Warner Bros. had suggested Shepard, the Pulitzer-prize-winning playwright, for best actor, but Academy voters decided his role was supporting.

First-time director James L. Brooks seemed the favorite as best director for "Terms of Endearment." Other nominees were Bergman ("Fanny & Alexander"); Australian Bruce Beresford ("Tender Mercies"); British Peter Yates ("The Dresser"); and American Mike Nichols ("Silkwood").

"Fanny & Alexander" led the nominees for best foreign language film. Others: "Carmen," Spain; "Entre Nous," France; "Job's Revolt," Hungary; "La Bal," Algeria.

"Yentl" landed two of the five song nominations: "Papa, Can You Hear Me?" and "The Way He Makes Me Feel." "Flashdance," the surprise hit of 1983, also placed two songs: "Flashdance... What a Feeling" and "Maniac." Also named was "Over You" from "Tender Mercies."

String players top attraction

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley's Community Concerts ticket holders are about to be treated to the third of this season's four concerts — the big one.

"I Solisti di Zagreb," a small group of virtuosos string players, will appear at the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Auditorium Feb. 24 at 8:15 p.m.

Community Concerts President Dr. Richard F. McClure of Jerome says of the four annual presentations "we generally have one big, major group that costs us $6,000 to $7,000 for one show. This is a top-notch orchestra. They've played on every continent except Antarctica."

McClure says "I Solisti di Zagreb" formed in 1953 when a number of prominent musicians — in Zagreb, Yugoslavia, led by Antonio Janigro, joined together.

Beginning with the premiere concert in January of 1954, the group dedicated itself to 30 years of continuous work in concerting, recordings and live broadcasts throughout the world.

Now under the musical direction of Concertmaster Tonko Ninic, the ensemble performs conductorless and works as an independent artistic body apart from Radio-Television Zagreb, which assisted the ensemble in its infancy.

Its global itinerary has spanned six continents in over 2,000 concerts. It toured North America 17 times, and on three separate occasions played special concerts at the United Nations headquarters.

"I Solisti di Zagreb" appears regularly at the world's great music festivals including Salzburg, Prague Spring, Venice, Edinburgh, Holland, Brussels, Dubrovnik, Oslach, Aix-en-Provence, Istanbul and Osaka, among others. The ensemble has played for two World Fairs hosted in Brussels and Montreal.

The extensive repertoire of "I Solisti di Zagreb" includes works from baroque through the classical to contemporary, as well as compositions of present day composers.

The ensemble is the recipient of numerous prestigious awards, including the Pablo Casals Medal, First Prize at Mar del Plaza, the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Medal for Contemporary Music and twice the "Vladimir Nazor" Award by the City of Zagreb.

Former President Tito of Yugoslavia decorated the ensemble with the "Order of Merit to the Nation" award.

"All the players are from the same school of string players," McClure says, adding that in terms of chamber groups, trios or any light group, that being from the same school of technique makes for a much better group. He says it produces a "common denominator in their creating."

"This is a real treat!" he says. "Certainly at the level of the Boston Symphony Players who appeared here two years ago. That was an absolutely flawless performance and I look for the same with this Solisti group."

Explaining that Community Concerts is a division of Columbia Artists Management, McClure says "most great artists get started with Community Concerts. Mark Newirth was engaged by them last fall," he says, referring to the concert pianist from Kimberly.

Maintaining that the non-profit organization is the "one, single group that maintains a standard of excellence," he says its push for membership is held in the spring.

"The more numbers we get, the bigger, better artists we can afford," he says. "Then we can have something besides country-western music in town."

McClure said because of the structure of the organization, tickets cannot be purchased at the door. He says generally if a member can't attend, he'll make his ticket available and that any non-members interested in the concert should contact him at home, 324-4704, or the organization secretary, Edna Thorson at 733-2291.

Youth choir sets 'Peanuts' production

By CHRISTOPHER WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — The musical theatrical production, "Peanuts," and the mini-rock musical, "The Good Man Charlie Brown," will be staged at the Renaissance Academy of the Arts Wednesday at the Twin Falls International Youth Choir.

The show will begin at 7:30 with two original songs written by Raymond Nephi Miller, director of the choir.

The songs, "Don't Feed Me Junk" and "My Pal," will feature a younger division of the International Youth Choir and will be sung by Barbie Stukenholtz, Mollie Maguire and Josh Houser.

Following the opening will come the performance of "Peanuts," a take-off from the play "You're a Good Man Charlie Brown."

"The play is a series of scenes on a playground and is a musical," says director Marty Mead.

"It takes place on a typical schoolyard at lunchtime."

The cast of characters for the play will include: Jason Houser as Charlie Brown, Camille Fraley as Lucy, Cindy Scheel as Linus, Janet Prettie as Peppermint Patty, Julie Fraley as Schroeder and John Mauldin as Snoopy.

In addition to the cast, the orchestra will have Marty Mead at the piano, Jeff Gasser on the drums and Tony Wright playing the bass.

When the play is finished, the youth choir will rock and roll its way through the production of "The Cosmic Gang," which was written, choreographed and directed by Miller, accompanied by his wife, Sue Ellen Coleman.

The price of admission is $5 per family, $3 for adults and $1 for children.

Tickets can be obtained at the Music Center, Warner Music, Ann's Hallmark, the Sunshine Corner, or Judy's Books.

Don Murray's impressionism is at the Renaissance Academy

Artist finds experience via painting

TWIN FALLS — Artist Don Murray's impressionistic paintings are featured now through March 3 at the Renaissance Academy of the Arts, 511 Second Ave. E. in Twin Falls.

Murray studied art at Idaho State University, where he says he learned to use the materials for painting and realized the need to find his own experience.

He says he does not choose to produce art, but rather to discover it — and he considers himself to be self-taught.

California, where he says he was exposed to some of the world's finest impressionistic and expressionistic art that has influenced the direction of his own work.

Murray says his art is not abstract, but "rather an impressionistic play of color fields or an impression of his own reality."

By not approaching the canvas with any preconceived idea, the movement, paint and materials dictate the meditative process within him, he says.

Murray says painting is an extremely personal expression that allows him to understand his own self — that while being aware of constant change both inward and outward.

Murray says he has been told his paintings are of a healing value for the observer and says that in doing his paintings, they are a healing process for him also.

If the colors become dark and muddy, what is expressed is disease and anxiety, he says. If he keeps his colors clean and works toward that objective, he says he reaches a level of contentment and harmony within himself.

Murray has been painting for 16 years. There are approximately 25 paintings in the Renaissance exhibit, ranging in forms of landscapes and color fields to special heart feelings, expressed vividly and on large canvases.

The public can see the exhibit Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Murray will make a guest appearance 7 p.m. Feb. 25, prior to the performance of "Don Juan in Hell," featuring Paul Kliss, Di and Dritch Bowler and Tony Manner.

Women not 'pulling' at the box office

By BOB THOMAS
The Associated Press

HOLLYWOOD — Have female stars lost their pull at the nation's movie box offices?

The evidence is forthcoming in the recent poll of theater owners by Quigley Publications, the trade-paper firm that has been reporting the top moneymaking stars since 1932.

The winners for 1983 are: 1. Clint Eastwood; 2. Eddie Murphy; 3. Sylvester Stallone; 4. Burt Reynolds; 5. John Travolta; 6. Dustin Hoffman; 7. Harrison Ford; 8. Richard Gere; 9. Chevy Chase; and 10. Tom Cruise.

Notice what's missing? Women.

"Maybe '73 because actresses aren't as consistent in making films," says Bob Derek. "I've been gone for three years; Tarzan was my last picture. Brooke Shields didn't have a picture last year. A lot of us have been staying away."

Mike Medavoy, a production chief of Orion Pictures, agrees.

"Many of the top female stars have been doing their own thing," he said.

"Meryl Streep had a baby; Barbara Streisand has been tied up for years with 'Vent'; Goldie Hawn is a mother who spends a lot of time working up her own projects."

Producer Richard Zanuck, who did

"The Sting" and "Jaws," said the type of films now being made is in part responsible for men being the big moneymakers.

"Most of the big pictures are adventures or comedies that are patterned for male stars," he said.

"If Jane Fonda had been out in a picture last year, she could have made the list. Because of 'Yentl,' Streisand could make it in 1984. The same for Shirley MacLaine and Debra Winger because of 'Terms of Endearment.'"

"Miss Derek, who produced as well as starred in "Tarzan" and the as-yet-to-be-released "Bo-lero," agrees with Zanuck. "It takes something big to get people out of their homes and into the theaters," she said. "That means big themes, and often women don't figure importantly in such films."

Male dominance of the Top 10 moneymakers' list has been an increasing trend. In recent years, only a few actresses have been able to score among the winners: Miss Streisand, Sally Field, Miss Hawn, Miss Fonda, Dolly Parton, Sissy Spacek, Tatum O'Neal and Jill Clayburgh. Nearly all were missing from movie houses in 1983.

It was a different story in earlier years of the poll. Marle Dressler was No. 1 in the first two years, 1932-33. Others who topped the list were Shirley Temple (1935-39), Betty Grable (1943), Doris Day (1959, 1962-64), Elizabeth Taylor (1961) and Julie Andrews (1965-66).

The '30s were the heyday for female stars. In 1934, the Top 10 included six actresses: Janet Gaynor, Mae West, Joan Crawford, Miss Temple, Miss Dressler and Norma Shearer. The situation changed during the war years, when battle and adventure films were in demand.

Phyllis Diller discovered her hair by accident

By ROBERT MACY
The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Phyllis Diller excused herself, saying she'd been tied up by Derek. "I've been gone for three years; Tarzan was my last picture. Brooke Shields didn't have a picture last year. A lot of us have been staying away."

She was right. It looked furthest in rainbow hues with curls exploding in every direction, the horrendous headgear rested atop a plastic foam wig holder in front of her dressing room mirror at the MGM Grand Hotel where she was performing.

The angry looking hairdo was a far cry from that March evening in 1955 when, as a debonair 38-year-old mother of five, she ventured onto the stage of San Francisco's Purple Onion and began belting out arias in a sophisticated soprano voice.

Her outlandish hairstyles have given her new meaning to the term frizz. Like many of the hallmarks in her 29-year career as one of America's classic comedies.

Born in 1917 in Lima, Ohio, she spent her early years developing her voice and playing the piano. Her parents insisted she go to a Chicago music conservatory "where I found out I wasn't Melissa Mozart," then to a teacher's college in Bluffton, Ohio, to train as a music teacher.

She traded teaching for marriage and settled down to raise five children, spending much of her time singing classics such as "The Messiah" or "The Creation" because choir robes were ideal for hiding "my incessantly pregnant tummy."

By 1955, Miss Diller had her own California split-level-stucco, station wagon, children ages 6 through 16, parakeet, white rat, dog and cat.

"What a life," she laughed, the patented cackle fringing the flowers on the dressing room table.

Her former husband, Sherwood, said her comic talent was being ignored and it should be out in the public where it could be appreciated — and remunerated.

"I said, 'Yeah, but do you see these children?'"

"I to said, 'Send 'em home.'"

"I said, 'We can't. They're ours.'"

She began at the Purple Onion at a magic time when clubs in the area were producing talent such as the Kingston Trio, the Smothers Brothers, Jim Nabors, Mort Sahl, Dave Brubeck, Johnny Mathis and a teen-ager named Barbara Streisand.

"It was just a wonderful time to get started," she said wistfully. "There were no female comics at that time. I didn't realize that, or I might have been more frightened than I was."

"The first night, I hung up my dress and it shook for three hours."

She started her career with her natural dark hair but felt it wasn't working in the act, "so I bleached it myself; just ruined it!"

"I stripped it every seven days, which just wrecked it," she said.

"One time, someone asked where I got my hair cut and I said I didn't. It breaks off, (cackle) which is true (cackle)."

After 11 movies, a Broadway show, hundreds of commercials, theater in the round, a record number of television appearances (22 with Bob Hope) and "kiddie joints" across the United States, she says she isn't about to slow down.

Public TV airs outdoor show

The beauty of the North American wilderness and the vitality of the human spirit are captured in "Wilderness," which will be aired on PBS Television at 10 p.m. Wednesday and again at 6:30 p.m. on Feb. 25.

The production features Gary Smith, who was raised in Idaho and was a one-time student at Idaho State University.

to finding a cure for M.S., but he's not sorry for himself.

Smith has managed the wilds as a ranger, captured their beauty in verse and song — he was nicknamed the "Singing Ranger" when he worked at Redfish Lake — and has fought to protect the outdoors as an environmentalist.

Now he fights from a wheelchair. But in spite of his incapacity, he still journeys to Canyonlands Park, Utah, where he continues to pursue his lifelong love for nature with unfailing energy and enthusiasm.

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer says, "The show sings with Smith's music and soars through his view of the red Utah canyons. It's quite a trip."

Smith, a spirited, die-hard outdoorsman, is a victim of multiple sclerosis. But, as the Vancouver, B.C., Sun reported, "If he's bitter about contracting the disease, he doesn't say he is. He's bitter that a government willing to spend billion of the MX missile won't contribute more

Buhl offers stage production

BUHL — Winter is coming and the ant is busy storing up food while the grasshopper continues to play. Will the grasshopper starve or die during the coming winter or will the ant share his cash of food?

For those interested in knowing the answer, the Buhl High School drama department will present a somewhat revised version of "The Ant and the Grasshopper" as its spring show.

The play was written by Rob Dearborn and is being directed by speech and drama instructor Ambra Algood Martin. The two performances will include a 7:30 p.m. evening show on March 2 and a matinee on March 3, at 2 p.m. in the Buhl Middle School Auditorium.

"It is a very cute and funny play," says Martin. "The play is a remake of a very old proverb."

The cast for the play will include Elizabeth Pratt as the industrious ant, Sherry Rouse as the queen ant, Sheryl Smith as the assistant ant, Carrie Berghel as the happy-go-lucky grasshopper, Kevin McGee as the evil spider, Hobb Parks as the fatbug and Becky Sparks as the caterpillar soon to be butterfly.

Tickets are $2 for adults, $1.50 for students and senior citizens and $1 for children under 12. Tickets can be obtained in advance at Buhl High School or at the door.

What's what

Early this century, the National Geographic magazine published avant-garde photographs of semi-nude African women. Halfway through the century, the startup Playboy magazine published photos of unbloused women, too. Some observers note the forging when they credit the beginning triumphs of two of America's most successful publishing ventures to bare breasts.

Why the city of Riverside in California saw fit to pass an ordinance to outlaw the carrying of lunchbuckets on the streets there I do not know.

Q. What do pregnant women worry about most?
 A. Getting to the hospital on time.

Dogs bark. Wolves don't. Nobody knows why this difference.

PUBLIC INFORMATION

Our Chief Prognosticator thinks the public library systems oneday will serve as massive database centers wherefrom anybody with a

Q. Where's the next National Football League franchise going to be?
 A. Would have to guess either Phoenix or San Antonio, if anywhere. Those are the two biggest U.S. cities without NFL teams.

Q. What do the people in Turkey call that domesticated fowl we refer to as the turkey?
 A. The American bird.

Advice retracted on 'thanking' cards

DEAR ABBY: I usually agree with you. However, I did a double take when I read the following item:

"DEAR ABBY: I recently celebrated an "important" birthday and received many lovely cards.

"A friend casually mentioned (on seeing the stack of cards) that I would be very tired by the time I had written thank-you notes for all these cards.

"Abby, does a person have to write thank-you notes for cards?"

— WRITER'S CRAMP

"DEAR CRAMP: No one "has" to acknowledge anything. But those with the best manners acknowledge everything — cards included.

Come on, Abby, you must be kidding. I hope you are snowed with letters from readers protesting your answer. I can see it now. "Thank you for the birthday card." Then the recipient sends a card saying, "Thank you for your card thanking me for my thank-you card." Then a card in return, "Thank you for the thank-you card thanking me for my thank-you card."

I think I will go out and buy some stock in Hallmark Cards.

— V.T. MOON, DUARTE, CALIF.

DEAR MR. MOON: You are right, of course, but I can't say I wasn't warned. My editor suggested that I rethink my stance, but I held firm in the belief that those who remembered an "important" birthday with a card should be thanked along with those who had sent a costly gift. ("It's the thought," I thought, "that counted.")

Bear in mind, I was alluding only to "important" birthdays — not to ordinary birthdays, Christmas, anniversaries, get-well cards, etc. But had I thought it through (which I did not), even acknowledging cards-for "important" birthdays needs some qualification.

For example, Cary Grant, that magnificent living legend who recently celebrated a well-publicized "important" birthday, must have received 50,000 cards from well-wishers around the world. Obviously, Cary

Grant cannot thank everyone who sent him a card — so there goes my logic.

Let's just say that's wrong. So if anyone out there sends me a "congratulations" card for this colossal gaffe, don't expect a thank-you card from me.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to hear from women who have had babies in their 40s. How do they handle it when strangers say to their child, "I'll bet Grandma spoils you!"

They take us for grandmas. I like the looks on people's faces when I tell them I'm the mother. They always say, "Oh, I'm sorry!"

"Well, I'm not." My baby was no accident. She's a gift — like the rest of my children.

LEGAL NOTICE

NOTICE OF EMERGENCY RULE-MAKING

In compliance with Sections 87-5203(b) and 87-5203(c) of the Idaho Code, notice is hereby given that the Department of Health and Welfare, State of Idaho, has undertaken emergency rule-making for the making of the regulation under Docket Number 0301-5402E, which involves the amendment of rules governing Eligibility for Financial and Medical Assistance, Title 3, Chapter 1, Rules and Regulations of the Department of Health and Welfare. The action has been taken under the authority granted in Section 52-0203 and 39-106 (1), Idaho Code, for the purposes of compliance with the provisions of a preliminary injunction, Civil No. 83-2146, in the District Court for the District of Idaho, effective January 23, 1984.

Emergency rule-making is necessary because a preliminary injunction, January 23, 1984, and effective on that date, requires the Department from applying current policy for treatment of excess resources for AEC.

The rules, which were adopted by emergency procedure on the 23rd day of January, 1984, and filed by the undersigned, such as the rules, 1984, became effective on the 23rd day of January, 1984, and on the thirty-six (36) days on the 28th day of February, 1984.

The following is a descriptive summary of the substance of the emergency rule-making and of the principal issues involved:

The Department restored policy on treatment of excess resources for AEC to the rules which were in effect prior to November 1, 1983, in compliance with the court order.

Any person can review the rules in the Department Administrative Procedure Section or in any of the regional administrative offices of the Department. Copies of the rules will be made available upon written request specifying the docket number(s) cited above. For assistance on technical questions concerning the rules, contact Ronnie Bradford, Department of Health and Welfare.

THE ACES BOBBY WOLF
Dear Mr. Wolf: What are Texas transfers? I've heard of some players jumping from above the Mason-Dixon Line.
 New Staff, Hartford, Conn.
ANSWER: Texas transfers are artificial bids used after a one-or-two-no-trump opening. The convention is attributed to Dave Carter of St. Louis. Missouri (quite a bit north of Texas) and is designed to allow the opening-bidder to play the hand for opening lead advantages. After a one or two-no-trump opening, responder jumps to four hearts with a long spade suit and to four diamonds with hearts. Opener then converts and gets to play "the hand in responder's long suit."
Dear Mr. Wolf: If the opponents open and I jump the bidding, do I show a strong hand or a weak one?
Big Mix-up, Detroit, Mich.
ANSWER: Modern usage of the jump overall is to describe a weak hand with a good and long suit—a preemptive bid. Vulnerability is an important factor. A jump overall at the two level should promise a hand with playing tricks not vulnerable, and should promise six when vulnerable (rule of two and three).
Dear Mr. Wolf: I have no problems evaluating my hand for my first bid. However, although I know that the true value of a hand changes as the bidding progresses, my judgments are poor in this area. Can you recommend a good book covering this subject?
Needs Help, Raleigh, N.C.
ANSWER: Yes, I can. Mike Lawrence, one of the original Aces, has recently authored an excellent book on "The Complete Book on Hand Evaluation." For more information, write to Max Hardy Publications, P.O. Box 20601, Hawthorne, Cal. 90250.
Dear Mr. Wolf: I opened one spade and partner responded one trump. I bid three diamonds and he passed. His excuse was that he didn't have a bid in the first place. What kind of an excuse is that?
Weng Spot, Baltimore, Md.
ANSWER: A "poor" one. When I don't have a legitimate reason to bid, I find the word "pass" very descriptive. At those times when I have a response, I live with my original suit and honor partner's jump shift with another bid.
Dear Mr. Wolf: I open a standard three-club pre-empt and partner bids two no-trump. I have two stoppers in the clubs but his singleton club left us a few tricks short. What about his bid?
Dora Plenty, Albuquerque, N.M.
ANSWER: Stoppers do not guarantee a no-trump game. Opposite a pre-emptive three-club, your partner should have had some kind of club fit. To justify his optimism for winning nine tricks.

THE ACES BOBBY WOLFF

"One today is worth two tomorrows." - Benjamin Franklin.

When's the best time to ruff a loser in dummy? Not always as soon as possible; sometimes one tomorrow is worth two today's.

East won the diamond ace and shifted to a low trump. (A heart shift would have been better.) South took two top trumps, cashed the diamond king and ruffed a diamond in dummy. Two high clubs and a club ruff brought bad news and now success rested with where the heart king might be. A heart to dummy's ace and a heart back resulted in the loss of two heart tricks and the game fell short by one trick.

South makes his game if he postpones the diamond ruff until after he starts dummy's clubs. The play goes: two high trumps are cashed, followed by two high clubs and a club ruff. Now the diamond ruff affords a vital entry and another club ruff establishes dummy's fifth club. South discards a heart on dummy's third club and the defenders get only a trump, a heart and one diamond. When is it best to ruff a loser in dummy? Obviously.
