As U.S. Marines ready pullout

By MONA ZIADE
The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Israeli warplanes raided targets Thursday in the hills overlooking Beirut's international airport, where U.S. Marine combat units packed up for withdrawal to ships offshore.

The strikes, the third this week, are aimed at Palestinian guerrillas, the Israeli military command said in Tel Aviv.

In Damascus Thursday night, Saudi Arabian Prince Bandar bin Sultan announced that a new cease-fire agreement has been agreed for Lebanon and will go into effect at 11 a.m. Friday. He announced this at a press conference after emerging from an eight-hour meeting with Lebanese and Syrian representatives.

The prince, who has been acting as a mediator in the Lebanon crisis, said that "it is only a cease-fire agreement" and does not cover political issues.

The Israeli air raids Thursday coincided with lengthy discussions at the presidential palace over another proposed settlement of the Lebanese crisis based on scrapping the troop withdrawal agreement between Israel and Lebanon. The May 17 accord provides for security arrangements along Lebanon's southern border, and Israel believes the pact is vital to its security.

Moslem troops of the Lebanese army that refused to fight in the past three weeks of civil war began policing west Beirut on Thursday at the request of Druse and Shiite Moslem militiamen who have controlled the city for 17 days. A few soldiers carried plastic flowers in their rifle barrels and civilians greeted them with cheers. Some threw rice from balconies.

The Israeli military command said the targets of the air raid included two buildings Tel Aviv believes were used as headquarters and staging posts by Palestinian guerrillas in the mountain town of Bhamdoun, and a 130mm artillery position outside the nearby village of Mansourieh.

Shultz concedes policy not successful — A3

The one-time Christian resort of Bhamdoun, nine miles east of Beirut, was abandoned by the local population and has been taken over by several hundred guerrillas from a half-dozen Syrian-backed factions, according to sources in Tel Aviv who declined to be identified.

Both state-run and privately owned Lebanese radio stations said four warplanes were involved in the raids. The planes bombed and strafed for five minutes, then flew south leaving clouds of smoke hanging over their targets, according to the radio reports. There was no word on casualties or damage.

It was the sixth air attack by Israel on targets in Lebanon this year, five of them on the Bhamdoun area.

Israel has warned Lebanon's Druse rebels against allowing Palestinian guerrillas to return to central Lebanon through Druse-held territories. Israeli officials say some Palestinian guerrilla factions have re-entered central Lebanon, but Druse leaders deny that.

With Saudi mediators standing by both in Beirut and in Damascus, Lebanese President Amin Gemayel met with his advisors and right-wing Christian leaders to discuss options to resolve Lebanon's current crisis.

Syria and its Druse and Shiite Moslem allies have demanded a cancellation of the Lebanese-Israeli agreement before agreeing to a cease-fire. But right-wing Christian leaders have warned they would withdraw their support for Gemayel, himself a Maronite Catholic, if the agreement was scrapped.

At the Beirut airport, with military and machine-gun fire sounding in the distance, Marines continued to break camp.

A few men were being helicoptered back to the ships but there had been no decrease in "combat power" at the base, said Brig. Gen. James Joy.

SHOSHONE — A group of about 30 persons gathered at the main Shoshone railroad crossing Thursday evening to protest the passage of a train believed to be carrying 200 nuclear warheads.

Reportedly, the warheads are en route from an arms factory in Texas to a submarine base in Bangor, Wash.

Carrying candles and signs, the protesters climbed on a snowbank beside the track to jeer the train, as it whistled a warning and went through downtown Shoshone.

The train was headed by a Union Pacific locomotive, pulling a string of 17 white cars, with the letters "Atm" and black-painted numbers on their sides.

"I saw Hiroshima about six weeks after they dropped the bomb, and I can understand their feelings," said Gerald Frees, a retired Shoshone resident who joined the demonstrators.

"It was a pretty sad sight, and I'd hate to see anything like that happen here," he said.

Cheryl Dains, a 22-year-old mother, said she came to the protest because "I don't like that kind of stuff coming through our community. I don't think we need it."

"I also am concerned for the future generations," she said, as she held her 2-year-old son. Union Pacific officials were referring questions about the train to the U.S. Department of Energy, where a spokesman on Thursday refused to confirm or deny the train's cargo or give its destination or schedule.

Energy Department spokesman Dave Jackson would say only that the train is carrying a special shipment for his agency. The train also is carrying armed escorts and is "well-secured," he said.

Prior to the train's arrival at Shoshone, the demonstrators gathered in small groups trying to

Iran-Iraq war could cause oil prices to rise

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — If the latest flare-up of the Iran-Iraq war leads to closure of the West's main shipping link to Middle East oil, prices could "double within days" but a "severe" oil shortage is unlikely, analysts said Thursday.

Iran claimed Thursday it captured part of the main highway joining Iraq's two largest cities. Some Western analysts believe the surge in fighting means a major Iranian offensive is coming.

Iran is not expected to attempt to close the Strait of Hormuz shipping lane unless Iraq tries to cut off Iran's oil exports. Even so, the heightened tensions in the region point up the West's large stake in keeping the Strait open.

President Reagan reiterated at a news conference Wednesday night that the United States would take military action if necessary to prevent Iran from interfering with oil tanker traffic.

"We feel we can handle any contingency," Pentagon spokesman Michael Burch said at a briefing in Washington Thursday.

The United States now has 30 ships deployed in the Indian Ocean. A carrier battle group headed by the Midway is closest to the strait, cruising in the northern Arabian Sea.

Approximately 8 million barrels of oil pass daily through the 26-mile strait, representing about 20 percent of the non-Communist world's daily supply. The strait links the Persian Gulf with the Gulf of Oman and the Arabian Sea.

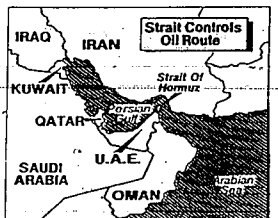

Dependence on that shipping lane varies greatly. Japan, for example, gets about two-thirds of its oil from that area, compared with about 5 percent for the United States, according to the Central Intelligence Agency. Western Europe gets about 40 percent of its imports through the strait.

The oil exporters that use the gulf shipping lanes are Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Kuwait, Bahrain and Iran. Before its war with Iran began in September 1980, Iraq also shipped oil from the gulf. Now it relies exclusively on a 630,000-barrel-a-day pipeline to the Mediterranean Sea by way of Turkey.

Saudi Arabia has a pipeline that would not be affected by a closure of the strait. The line pumps about 600,000 barrels a day to the Red Sea port city of Yanbu, and analysts believe it could handle 1 million barrels.

Paul McDonald, an oil analyst at the investment firm Shearson-American Express Ltd. in London, said in an interview Thursday that the oil-importing nations would face no serious shortage of oil if the Strait of Hormuz were closed briefly.

Stickers jab at Senate

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News Capitol Bureau

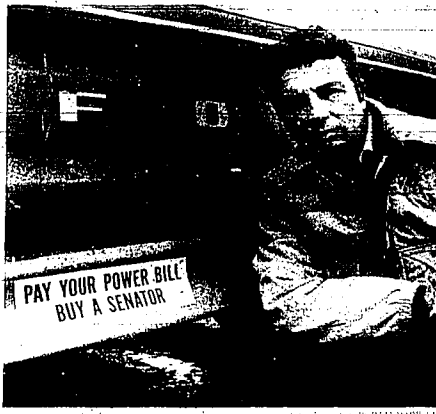

BOISE — A political bumper sticker that originated in Twin Falls has met with a cool reception in some corners of the Statehouse.

In other corners, it is a welcome jab at political opponents.

"Pay your power bill — buy a senator" reads the sticker, which surfaced after the state Senate "tabled" a bill opposed by the Idaho Power Co.

The bill was supported by many Idaho irrigators, who saw the bill as a means to get access to Snake River water that is presently inaccessible.

By tabling the bill, a parliamentary move, the lawmakers effectively killed the legislation. They also drew the ire of Bill Loughmiller, a Twin Falls farmer who responded by having the stickers printed.

When Rep. Roy Brackett, R-Twin Falls, displayed one of the stickers on the House floor, he says he was "advised" by Speaker of the House

Tom Stivers, also a Twin Falls Republican, that he shouldn't do so. But Stivers said Thursday, "I

House fends off showdown over legislative redistricting

By QUANE RENYON
AP Capitol Writer

BOISE — The Idaho House Thursday headed off a showdown between Republicans and Democrats over legislative redistricting.

Democrats now will have a week to come up with a legislative remap plan acceptable to both parties — although some Republican leaders said that's unlikely.

The House Ways and Means Committee voted Thursday afternoon to introduce a bill moving the opening filing date for this year's elections from next Monday to March 19. A short time later, the House passed the bill 67-0 and sent it to the Senate.

"Politics is the art of compromise and that's just what this bill is," said Rep. Jack Kennevik, R-Boise, majority floor leader. He said the Senate "undoubtedly" will vote on the bill Friday.

It was an effort to give the Legislature more time to come up with a new legislative redistricting plan.

Late in the afternoon, the Senate State Affairs Committee discussed various alternative remap plans, but took no action.

Committee members appeared to agree that no more than one new redistricting plan would be approved by State Affairs in the week of negotiations that stemmed from Thursday's compromise.

Gov. John Evans Wednesday vetoed a redistricting plan sponsored by Republicans. He called it a measure designed to protect the seats of Republicans and defeat Democrats. Thursday afternoon, the House voted 47-20 to override the veto.

But the matter now goes to the Senate, where Republicans don't have enough votes to muster the two-thirds majority required to override a veto.

House Democrats were geared up for a major battle over Republican legislation authorizing the Legislature to hire an attorney to carry the redistricting battle to federal court.

But after hours of closed-door caucuses, Kennevik announced Republicans would not push that resolution over Democrat opposition. Senate Republicans did exactly that one day earlier.

And Democrats said they still hope to work up compromise redistricting plans that might draw support from both parties.

"We asked to have a week," said Minority Leader Mel Hammond D-Rexburg. "I still think we can come up with a new plan."

The Republican caucus chairman, Rep. Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls, said he didn't think it likely that the Democrats could come up with a plan acceptable to Republicans, but the minority party would be given an opportunity.

Bateman said Republicans were willing to negotiate in some areas, but he said in other areas, the majority was not willing to change its earlier stand.

He mentioned specifically District 21, where Democrat John Peavey has

Students cited in hazing death

OROVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Felony charges were filed Thursday against 11 Chico State University students in the death of a 23-year-old man last Sept. 25 during a fraternity hazing incident.

Jeffrey Long was killed shortly before midnight when he was hit by a speeding vehicle on a remote river road 3 1/2 miles from campus.

Two pledges to the Tau Gamma Theta fraternity were charged with lewd manlaughter, and nine others were charged with conspiracy to conceal the incident. Arrests were pending.

An affidavit filed Thursday in Justice Court in Oroville, said Long was struck by a vehicle traveling in excess of 70 mph, and that the California Highway Patrol interviewed witnesses who reported two vehicles drag racing on the road just prior to the accident.

Four children perish in fires

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Four small children perished Thursday in two separate fires in the New Orleans area.

Two died in a midday blaze that trapped them in the back bedroom of a New Orleans apartment.

Police identified them as Clarence Watkins, 3, and Kelly Watkins, 1, who were in the care of an aunt, Sandra Watkins. Details said they were unable to give the mother's name or to locate her.

In a separate fire in Gretna, the two children and their parents were asleep in their trailer when the fire broke out shortly after midnight.

The dead were identified as Jenny Sheppard, 4, and her 3-year-old sister, Tanya Garman, children of James Garman.

Officers said Tanya's body was found in her crib and Jenny was found partially underneath her parents' bed.

SEC investigating TV staff

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission is investigating allegations that CBS News employees engaged in trading of G.D. Searle Co. stock options before CBS aired a series questioning the safety of the Seattle-produced sweetener aspartame, Cable News Network said Thursday.

Searle, based in Skokie, Ill., markets the low-calorie sweetener under the trade name Nutrasweet.

CNN's financial news program "Moneyline" is reported to have told CBS employees were accused of seeking to reap financial gain from the impact of the broadcast series by "buying put options on Searle stock."

Gate crasher given 10 years

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Charles R. Harris, the unemployed man accused of crashing a gate at the Augusta National Golf Course and taking hostages while President Reagan was there last fall, was sentenced to 10 years in prison Thursday.

Superior Court Judge Albert Pickett also sentenced the 41-year-old Harris to 10 years probation on charges of kidnapping, false imprisonment and criminal damage to private property.

Harris pleaded guilty to the charges Jan. 30 and prosecutors agreed to drop five remaining counts.

McGovern gets matching funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Election Commission declared George McGovern eligible for matching funds Thursday and approved his first $100,000 Treasury payment after several commissioners chided the Democratic presidential hopeful for submitting "sloppy" records.

The commission also approved $1.2 million more in matching funds for six of his rivals for the Democratic nomination, including $793,337 for front-runner Walter F. Mondale. The eight major Democratic candidates now have received nearly $12.3 million for their primary battles.

Records closed in ill-baby case

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal appeals court on Thursday upheld a ruling that denies the government access to the medical records of Baby Jane Doe, the handicapped Long Island baby whose parents have rejected surgery.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals voted 2-1 in favor of the parents and University Hospital in Stony Brook, N.Y. Paul Winter dissented.

The Justice Department had argued that the records were needed to find out if a hospital discriminated against the infant, who has not been identified, by denying surgery for her handicap.

The New York state attorney general's office, which represents University Hospital of Stony Brook, and the child's parents opposed release of the records.

The Justice Department had asked the appeals court to overturn District Judge Leonard Wester, who had ruled in favor of the hospital in the parents' suit.

The appeals court's decision is the latest development in the controversial case surrounding the baby, who was in stable condition Thursday.

Carter-papers theft unexplained

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department said Thursday that an eight-month investigation had left it stumped as to how the Reagan campaign obtained debate-briefing materials and White House documents from the Carter administration in 1980 but concluded there was "no credible evidence of a crime."

In a three-page report, the department also said it had found no evidence of "any plan or conspiracy by Reagan election officials to obtain the Carter briefing materials or any other confidential, internal Carter documents."

Justice Department spokesman Tom DeCarl said criminal activity had been discounted because the briefing materials were not government documents and contained no classified information. Internal White House documents also contained no classified information, DeCarl said.

He said that despite inconsistent statements by top Reagan appointees about the materials, no polygraph tests were administered because "no investigative purpose would have been served since there were no legally significant inconsistencies."

The largest of these inconsistencies concerned the briefing materials themselves, some of which were prepared for then-President Jimmy Carter's crucial Oct. 29, 1980 campaign debate with President Reagan. Two top campaign Reagan campaign aides had different memories of the process.

James A. Baker III, now White House chief of staff, said he thought he had received them from William Casey, now CIA director. Casey said he didn't remember ever seeing them and thought he would not have touched them "with a 10-foot pole."

Asked why the department did not continue until it had found out how the papers were transferred, DeCarl replied, "We never look back." He said the department's responsibility ended when it was determined there was no crime.

The department said all the documents acquired by the FBI had been turned over to the House subcommittee headed by Rep. Donald J. Albosta, D-Mich., which is preparing a report on its own investigation of the episode.

DeCarl said the subcommittee was given access to all FBI interview and laboratory reports as well.

The department concluded that the Reagan camp acquired copies of a rough draft of foreign policy briefing material prepared for Carter and of briefing material prepared for Vice President Walter Mondale in anticipation of a debate with Reagan's running mate, George Bush. That debate never took place.

The FBI concluded that these were campaign documents not produced on government time or at government expense and were based on public source material.

The department said the Reagan campaign never had Carter's final briefing papers. The department said the only use made of the briefing papers by the campaign was by David Stockman, now director of the Office of Management and Budget. Stockman used the papers to prepare for playing Carter in mock debates with Reagan before the real event.

The Senate seat. He said Republicans do not want to throw Peavey into a district against a Republican Wes Tronsum of Wendell.

Evans, in vetoing the GOP redistricting plan on Wednesday, mentioned Peavey's situation as one that is unfair to Democratic voters.

He said the GOP plan wanted to add Mindoko and Cassia counties to Peavey's district, nominally Republican areas, in an effort to unseat Peavey.

The action was required because 1st District Judge Dar Cogswell ruled a 1982 redistricting plan was unconstitutional.

Cogswell adopted a new redistricting plan. The Supreme Court upheld the decision and Cogswell's plan, but gave the Legislature another chance to come up with a new plan this session.

The six legislators who compose the Twin Falls County delegation, meanwhile, have agreed to ask the Idaho Supreme Court to alter the Cogswell plan.

They want the county to remain divided into two legislative districts as is presently the case. Such a division would not violate the state constitution since it does not divide a county for the purpose of adding it to another county.

Sen. Laird Noe, R-Kimberly, says didn't advise him of anything. Noe's a big kid — he's over 21. I just don't think a state representative should be showing that kind of thing around the floor."

Slivers says the Senate's action was a legitimate parliamentary procedure. The Supreme Court supported the legislation, he says. "They want free water, and they want to plant subsidized crops."

One of those who wanted the legislation passed was Gov. John Evans, who filed the original bill. Evans was "quite pleased" to have been given one.

A senator who wasn't pleased by the stickers was John Peavey, D-Blaine, who plays an instrumental role in tabling the bill.

When asked to comment on the stickers, Peavey said that in the last election, Brackett received financial support from the legislature. He said Idaho Power contributed more money than any other entity to that PAC, he said.

In contrast, Peavey said the same for himself. He said he received $3,500 to his challenger in his 1982 Senate race, Eugene Durrell Moon.

Peavey said he complained to Senate President Rep. Tom James Risch about the stickers. Risch filed the complaint to Slivers.

Idaho Power lobbyist Greg Panter declined to comment on the sticker.

Loughmiller says the sticker was created as "an expression of disgust in the Senate. They didn't even give us a hearing. They didn't even give us a discussion. We felt we were being run over by a railroad train."

Slivers' creator says he's disappointed the governor won't discontinue one of his creations.

"We were hoping he'd put it in 'Idaho 1.' But we appreciate what he's doing for us anyway," Loughmiller says.

Pocorello, but they expected it to arrive in Shoshone at about 8:40 p.m. She was off by only about five minutes.

Shortly before 8:45, the whistle of a westbound train sounded in the night, and a gate lowered across U.S. 93, where it intersected the track.

After the train had passed, the demonstrators formed a circle and sang "We Shall Overcome."

Liz Paula-Ketchum, member of the Snake River Alliance, which helped organize the demonstration, said the protesters will return whenever the next arms train passes through Shoshone.

Earlier Thursday, the train was greeted by anti-nuclear activists in Cheneyne, Laramie and Rock Springs, all in Wyoming.

nothing by session. "As far as I'm concerned, it's in effect," he said.

"As I read the Supreme Court decision, unless a different reapportionment plan is enacted... by the Legislature, the filings Monday must be carried out under plan 14-B," Givens said.

A similar request is being filed in the court by legislators from Canyon County, No. 14.

And at Coeur d'Alene, attorney Ray Givens said he may ask the Supreme Court to act in the case as early as Friday.

Givens represented northern Idaho residents who filed the original challenge to the 1982 redistricting plan.

He said under Cogswell's ruling, the court-approved plan, known as 14-B,

Shultz: U.S. plan didn't fail, but it didn't succeed either

By R. GREGORY NOKES
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Thursday "diplomatic wheels are still turning" in Lebanon and he refused to concede that American policy there had failed. He said American Marines are now in the role of "Johnny-on-the-spot."

"I wouldn't say we have failed," Shultz said. "We haven't succeeded."

As did President Reagan at his press conference Wednesday night, Shultz held out the possibility that the Marines, who are now being withdrawn onto nearby ships, could go ashore in Lebanon against if circumstances seemed right. He was interviewed on "The MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour" on the Public Broadcasting System.

He also answered with a flat "no" when asked if he planned to submit his resignation because of the setbacks to American policy in Lebanon. But he also said it would be improper for him to declare whether he would be interested in serving another term as secretary of state if Reagan is re-elected.

Earlier, senior State Department officials said Shultz was worried that the setbacks in Lebanon could cause considerable harm to American interests throughout the Middle East and was at work on a strategy to reassert U.S. influence in the region.

One key Shultz aide said he was willing to accept the blame for that failure — if someone has to take the blame — even though President Reagan declared that Shultz "has not failed" in Lebanon.

But this official said the Lebanon situation "is infinitely more complicated than that" and that "all along the way, there have been only limited options we could take."

This aide and other senior State Department officials spoke of Shultz's views on Lebanon and the Middle East only on the condition that they not be identified.

There has been speculation that Shultz might not stay at the State Department beyond this year, but at his news conference Wednesday night, the president dismissed as "disgraceful" recent calls for Shultz to resign. One such suggestion was made by Rep. Bill Alexander of Arkansas — the deputy Democratic House leader.

Reagan said Shultz was not to blame for events in Lebanon, and declared that he would not accept his resignation if Shultz submitted one.

"I think he has done a splendid job," Reagan said. "And I have every confidence in the world in him. And I hope he doesn't have any thoughts about leaving us at this point."

Aides to Shultz said he won't resign now, but they are uncertain whether he would stick around for a second term if Reagan is re-elected. Shultz has not signaled his intentions, even to his closest advisers, one of them said.

One official said that as a result of recent events in Lebanon, U.S. policy in the Middle East "may be back to square one, in a way."

Demos debate in New Hampshire

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Eight Democratic presidential candidates, debating less than a week before New Hampshire voters begin the 1984 primary election season, showered one another with respect Thursday night in a session remarkable for its civility.

"I ask for your vote," said Sen. John Glenn. He said he has no apology for the heroic image that resulted from his space career and insisted that the Democratic race was not "carved in stone" by Walter F. Mondale's caucus victory in Iowa.

Said Sen. Alan Cranston: "If you vote tonight, the people of New Hampshire will be saying they want the next president of the United States to do all a president can do to end the arms race before it ends us."

"I know what I'm doing," said former vice president Mondale. "I would know what I'm doing the first day and I would take charge."

And from the surprise Iowa runner-up, Sen. Gary Hart: "I ask for the help of the people of New Hampshire in this primary."

The topics, for 90 minutes, ranged from war and peace to anti-semitism to whether Mondale can be overruled. In contrast to earlier debates marked by acrimonious outbursts directed at overtaking Mondale and Glenn, the participants in the nationally televised session abandoned the attacks on each other that party leaders have argued could only help President Reagan get re-elected.

The rhetoric shifted to a more positive tone with each of the eight outlining why voters should support him in Tuesday's New Hampshire primary, the first ballot test of the 1984 campaign.

Glenn, who was the big loser in the Iowa caucuses on Monday finishing fifth, said, "This idea that what is cast in Iowa is cast in stone, is irreversible, is nonsense."

The night began with the Rev. Jesse Jackson on the defensive from questions put by moderator Barbara Walters of ABC News.

She cited remarks by Jackson that had led to suspicions that he harbored anti-Jewish views and Jackson said: "I am not anti-Semitic."

"I have been a supporter of Israel's right to exist," he said. "I am a supporter of the Palestinians right to exist also." The Washington Post had reported that Jackson referred to New York Jews as "hymies," and asked about this, Jackson said he had "no recollection of that."

"I intend to insult no one," he said.

The League of Women Voters debate provided an opportunity before next Tuesday's primary election before voting starts to thin out the field.

Mondale was the big winner in the Iowa caucuses and leads in New Hampshire, according to political professionals and public opinion polls.

School committee's ideas stimulating

The Twin Falls schools' committee on excellence has come up with some excellent proposals for improving the quality of education in the district. The suggestions now go to the school board for further consideration, public hearings and perhaps, implementation.

We believe educational quality is one of the most important subjects a local community can address. Upon it rests community growth, pride and quality of life.

There are subjects which the committee did not address which, in our opinion, it should have. For example, there is no reference to how the district's gifted and talented program could be expanded and improved to serve the large number of promising children in the district. Nor is there any mention of library facilities and how they should be upgraded to meet higher-level learning demands.

But on the whole, the ideas are stimulating and thoughtful. Today, we publish the second half of the recommendations report elsewhere on this page. The first part appeared in Thursday's Times-News.

Here, in brief, is what we think about some of the proposals:

Placement, promotion, retention. This is one of the committee's toughest proposals. Under it, students would be held until they had "successfully completed" required courses with the teacher making "the final decision" about retention or promotion. Social promotions would be given in only "extreme cases."

We believe a tightened promotion-retention system is needed, and we support the principles of this proposal. But we also think the "final decision" must be a shared one with teachers, administrators and parents involved. Ultimately, it falls to the school board, although few cases go that far.

Remedial program. The committee recommends expansion of this program to all schools and grade levels. That is a sound idea.

Homogeneous achievement grouping. Another sound idea with far-reaching implications. Essentially, this returns the district to a concept in common use years ago in which students were grouped by achievement level. That, in our opinion, was a solid approach, and we're pleased to see it being reconsidered.

Study skills. Again, an excellent proposal, particularly the part about getting children to do serious writing as early as fourth grade and introducing them to library research.

Testing. We like this one, too, particularly the part about using testing to better evaluate the school curriculum. We'd like to see test comparisons between schools, as well as comparisons from Twin Falls to other communities. If some don't score as well as others, citizens have a right to know that.

Homework. More of this won't harm anyone. Teachers should be encouraged to assign homework and principals should resist the pleas from some parents that little Johnny has to watch television and can't get his homework done.

Attendance. We like the support for the state's 90 percent attendance rule, and we agree that early dismissal of school is a practice that should be stopped.

Emergency medical information. The proposal is fine, but what does it have to do with educational excellence?

Elementary summer school. Why was it ever dropped? Bringing it back is an excellent idea, but let's expand it with offerings for students who want to work ahead.

Lifetime sports. The additional physical-fitness facility at the high school may be needed, but the voters already have spoken twice on the issue.

Optional seven-period day. Another fine idea that we'd go further with and make mandatory. Spreading staff may be necessary to accomplish it. A proposed 17 percent pay raise for additional teaching strikes us as unrealistic at this time.

Substitutes. We're amazed there aren't standards already for substitutes. This proposal makes a lot of sense.

State honors diploma. A fine idea. There should be more recognition for academic excellence and high achievement.

District 411 report covers broad range

Editor's note: The Twin Falls School District's committee on excellence in education gave its report this week to the School Board. This is the second half of that report. Part 1 was published Thursday in The Times-News.

HOMOGENEOUS ACHIEVEMENT GROUPING IN ENGLISH GRADES 7-9

A student should not be locked into a classroom situation that does not meet his individual needs. Each student should be given every opportunity to excel at his own level.

Recommendations:

1. The student who has mastered the basic English skills should be putting these skills to use by taking more advanced classes.
2. If a student fails the eighth grade proficiency test, he should be in a class designed to teach him the skills necessary to pass the test.
3. A class in accelerated English should be available for the student who is well-motivated.

STUDY SKILLS

The national, state and local education reports all recognize the students' deficiencies in study and listening skills. The reports generally emphasized: (1) time spent studying is ineffective; (2) students are not developing study skills; (3) successful study skills are the basis for achieving competency in all subsequent area; (4) listening to teacher instruction and following directions are areas of weakness.

Early dismissal of scheduled school days should be eliminated.

Recommendations:

1. Teachers should be encouraged to participate in in-service workshops and courses that would help formulate new ideas and understanding of subject area study skills. Recommended topics are:

- a. The SQ3R (Study, Question, Read, Recite, Review) method
- b. Study skills workshop (on each subject area)

- c. Reading in the content area
- d. How to write a report workshop
- e. The Cloze technique

- f. Programs for teaching skills
- g. Cluster and conventional outlining skills

2. The SQ3R method should be used for grades 4-12 in all subject areas.

- a. Instruction of SQ3R should begin in fourth grade, but special emphasis should be placed at the seventh grade level.

- b. Each subject area has unique study skills. At the beginning of each course/subject the committee recommends that each teacher use SQ3R to teach students the important concepts and skills needed for that subject.

- c. Seventh and ninth grade reading courses should be more than factual literary courses. These courses should focus on the SQ3R method and on skimming, scanning, listening, reasoning, and drawing conclusions. The ninth grade reading course teachers should work closely with each other and with the state person to coordinate these skills.

3. "How to Write Reports" workshops for fourth grade teachers and the implementation of report writing skills at fourth grade should be stresses. The use of the library and research techniques should be emphasized at grade seven. A librarian should teach the course.

4. Outlining is another study skill that needs special emphasis; outlining should be introduced in simplified form as early as grade four and emphasized at grade seven.

5. Other concepts of study skills that need to be emphasized are: taking notes, scheduling time efficiently, preparing for examinations (the test within a test concept), preparing for discussions and reports and using reference materials efficiently. These skills should be introduced in fifth grade and re-emphasized in junior high.

6. The district should concentrate on upgrading the teachers' abilities to evaluate students' study skills.

7. A standardized checklist of each student's study skills for each course should be available.

8. The district should evaluate current methods used by all teachers to teach study skills.

Teachers, by department or grade level, should determine what is an appropriate homework standard.

TESTING

Testing provides benefits to students, teachers, school administrators, parents and taxpayers. A good testing program can be used to identify the needs of individual students, evaluate the curriculum, determine the cost-effectiveness and provide a measure of quality control that will benefit students, school and community.

Recommendations:

1. Criterion referenced tests with national norms should be selected and used to identify the educational needs of individual students and to show how individual students and the district compare with other students and other districts.

2. Preceding test selection, the district should have well-defined goals concerning the use of the test.

3. All students should be tested yearly, preferable in late spring.

4. Test results should be available to teachers as soon as possible.

5. Principals (especially secondary) should encourage teachers to utilize test results to become aware of student capabilities and to structure lesson plans to meet student needs.

6. The use of tests which identify a suitable gain for each child and compare potential with actual achievement is recommended. The committee found indicators that only 1 to 2 percent of the low-achieving students do not have the ability to do the work.

7. Study the ways that testing can be used to evaluate both the district curriculum and special programs at all levels and then implement curriculum evaluation.

8. Student achievement should be used as one tool of employee evaluation; however, those involved in evaluation must be fully aware of both the limitations and advantages of using tests in this manner.

9. Teacher in-service training on administration of the specific test, ways of interpreting that test's results and perimeters of the test need to be provided.

10. A good testing program will benefit the students by identifying achievement potential and progress; by diagnosing specific individual needs; and by assisting in placement into accelerated, regular or remedial programs.

11. The committee realizes the testing program can be costly, but testing provides the basis for a strong curriculum, administration and faculty.

Outlining ... should be introduced in simplified form as early as grade four and emphasized at grade seven.

HOMEWORK

To meet the rising expectations from society, today's student needs to make an extra effort outside the classroom. This additional work provided extra practice and application of classwork; it is an opportunity for independent thinking. In many classes, the assignment of homework saves class time and makes time available for additional concepts to be covered.

Homework assignments vary greatly from subject to subject; therefore, the amount or complexity of homework varies accordingly. The committee feels that some uniformity in assigning work to students should be attained.

Recommendations:

1. Teachers, by department or grade level, should determine what is an appropriate homework standard. How to implement these standards in effective teaching should be discussed and communicated. (The homework policy that has been adopted and is in effect at Robert Stuart Junior High School may warrant some discussion.)

ATTENDANCE

According to the State Board of Education attendance policy, credit will not be given to any student in a subject when the student is not in attendance at least 90 percent of the time that the subject is being taught.

Recommendations:

1. District No. 411 should adhere to this policy.
2. In order to participate in extracurricular activities, each student must have a 2.0 GPA and a passing grade in each class of the preceding semester as well as the current semester.

3. Early dismissal of scheduled school days should be eliminated.

EMERGENCY MEDICAL INFORMATION

All school personnel have a significant chance of dealing with students who have chronic diseases which may require immediate treatment at school. Many courts have held that the teacher, and therefore the district, is under a legal obligation to see that proper care is given to these students.

There has been cases in our district in which students have been denied treatment of medical emergencies. We submit the following recommendations in order to safeguard the health and lives of these students and to protect the school district from litigation.

1. Parents shall be informed that it is initially their responsibility to notify the district of any chronic diseases which could require emergency treatment of their children (Note: Vera C. O'Leary Medical Survey).

2. These parents shall be urged to require that their children wear medical alert bracelets or necklaces and that school personnel should be made aware of these.

3. A file of these students, their diagnoses, symptoms and the appropriate emergency treatments shall be kept in a designated place in the school which the child attends.

4. Emergency equipment and/or medication which may be needed for specific cases shall be provided by the parent. It shall be labeled and placed where it is immediately available.

5. A folder containing the above information shall be maintained in each room in which the student attends classes and substitutes shall be instructed to check these folders upon arrival in the classroom.

6. Personnel within each school who may have expertise in any given area of medical treatment should be identified.

7. The district should phase in a requirement that all school personnel who have students under their care be required to hold a current First Aid/CPR certificate. The school district shall have the responsibility of providing classes periodically in order that personnel be able to keep these certificates current.

8. In-service classes should be held to instruct personnel in the recognition and treatment of acute emergencies associated with children. Credit should be given for attending these classes.

Summer school should be provided for elementary students who have not been promoted or for students who have been promoted conditionally.

ELEMENTARY SUMMER SCHOOL

For some children, the nine-month school year is not enough to ensure academic progress. This is particularly true for basic skill areas such as math, reading and language arts.

Recommendations:

1. Summer school should be provided for elementary students who have not been promoted or for students who have been promoted conditionally.

2. Summer school should be available for any elementary student whose parent requests it and who can demonstrate a clear need.

3. The program may be held, but not replace the already published migrant summer school.

4. Tuition fees should be set by the administration.

LIFETIME SPORTS

Recommendations:

1. This committee recommends testing students before the lifetime sports class begins and after it has been completed. The test should include the following: flexibility, cardiovascular capabilities, strength, resting pulse and blood pressure. The test should be compiled and used for comparative study from year to year in the high school.

2. The individualized physical fitness activities program should have an increased awareness of activities, such as jogging, racquetball, cross country skiing, biking, targetball and swimming. The benefits of physical activity in adulthood should be stressed.

3. An additional physical fitness facility at the high school should be built. The present facilities are inadequate for implementing the two-credit state graduation requirement.

More recognition of academic achievement at all levels of education.

OPTIONAL SEVEN PERIOD DAY - SENIOR HIGH SCHOOL

In order to allow time for electives, an optional seven period day at the high school should be adopted.

Recommendations:

- period 0 7:45 to 8:40 (optional)
- period 1 8:45 to 9:45 (home room)
- period 2 9:50 to 10:45
- period 3 10:50 to 11:45
- period 4 11:50 to 1:45

- A lunch 11:45 to 12:15
- A class 12:20 to 1:15

- B class 11:50 to 12:45
- B lunch 12:45 to 1:15
- period 5 1:20 to 2:15
- period 6 2:20 to 3:15

All students must take six periods (1 through 6). Students may elect to take an additional class during period 0. Period 0 should be composed of required core classes. In order to spread the curriculum through the seven-period day and give students more choice of courses during period 0, the following staff schedules could apply:

Staff may teach five or six periods.

Option 1: Teach periods 1 through 6 with a prep. (Work day - 8:15 to 4:00)

Option 2: Teach periods 0 through 6 with 2 preps. (Work day - 7:30 to 4:00)

SIX: Teach 0 through 6 with on preparation period plus additional salary (17 percent recommended). This work day would be from 7:30 to 4:00.

SUBSTITUTES

At the present time no specific instruction is provided to substitute teachers relative to their duties. It is important that substitutes be informed of what is expected of them. This would expedite the task of the substitute, provide more efficient classroom management during the absence of the regular teacher, and free the principal from the need to give lengthy instructions to each new substitute.

Recommendation:

An instructional pamphlet should be developed for substitutes and/or an orientation meeting should be given to all substitutes at the beginning of each school year. The following areas should be included in a folder available to substitutes:

1. Format of lesson plan books and where specific information may be located
2. Length of time expected to be at school
3. Non-teaching duties

4. Identification of students with chronic medical problems
5. Recourse in case student disciplinary action is required
6. General school district policies which may be applicable to the substitutes' teaching duties.

All students should be tested yearly, preferably in late spring.

STATE HONORS DIPLOMA

The State Honors Diploma Committee met to discuss the State Excellence in Education Committee's recommendation for a "State Honors Diploma for students who excel in the basic skills, based upon the student's ranking within the top interval of the American College Test (ACT)." This committee considered diplomas given presently, publicity of academic achievement, and ways of honoring excellence. (The Proficiency Seal on the diploma has minimal significance because it reflects only minimum performance.)

Recommendations:

1. A more thorough study of the State Honors Diploma and the basis for awarding such a diploma
2. More recognition of academic achievement at all levels of education

The members of the Ad Hoc Committee on Excellence are: Eleanor Burkhardt and Carole Surbaugh, co-chairpersons; Milton Barrus, Dick Blank, Julie Blank, Phyllis Bulgin, Sue Davis, Bonnie Dillingham, Gary Fay, Jan Freestone, Jan Hartgen, Jennifer Ingram, Dennis Messenger, Willie Schell, Ina Mae Seach, Cheryl Turcotte and Doris Watts.

Report: Israel was recognized by PLO

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — An Israeli editor said Thursday that the Palestine Liberation Organization, after indirect negotiations with the United States, had decided to recognize Israel in 1982 just before Israel invaded Lebanon and forced the PLO to leave.

Uri Avnery, a left-wing former member of Parliament who has, met PLO leader Yasser Arafat on at least three occasions, said a PLO paper recognizing Israel had been drafted and was scheduled to be read June 14, 1982, in Paris by Issam Sartawi, a leading Palestinian moderate.

But on June 6, eight days before the document was to be presented at France's Institute for International Affairs, Israel invaded Lebanon and pushed on to Beirut for the siege that ended with the PLO's evacuation in late August and early September.

Avnery said in a telephone interview that his knowledge of the document came from Sartawi. Sartawi was assassinated by anti-Arafat Palestinian radicals on April 19, 1983, at a meeting of the Socialist International in Albufeira, Portugal.

Avnery said the PLO move to recognize Israel coincided with a mission by John Edwin Mroz, an American Middle East specialist who The New York Times reported acted as an intermediary between Arafat and the Reagan administration.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz on Wednesday confirmed the contacts with the PLO in testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

But he said the talks were fruitless.

Mroz, president of the Institute for East-West Security Studies in New York, reportedly met Arafat more than 50 times between August 1981 and May 1983 in an effort to win PLO recognition of Israel in exchange for American recognition of the PLO.

U.S. policy denounced

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet defense minister marked the annual army-navy day Thursday by warning the United States not to try to deal with the Soviet Union by "power diplomacy."

Marshal Dmitri F. Ustinov issued an order, carried on the front page of the Communist Party daily Pravda and all other newspapers in the country, proclaiming the 66th anniversary of the establishment of the Soviet army and navy.

"The Reagan administration intends to deal with the Soviet Union from a posture of strength, threats and pressure. This approach is resolutely rejected by the Soviet Union," Ustinov said in a Pravda article that accompanied his order.

"Attempts to apply 'power diplomacy' to us have no chance of success," he said.

Other newspapers published a statement by Marshal Viktor Kulikov, commander-in-chief of the Warsaw Pact armed forces, charging the Reagan administration with initiating an unprecedented worldwide arms race to achieve military superiority over socialist countries.

In a nationally televised statement Thursday night, Soviet army Chief of Staff Nikolai V. Ogarkov accused the United States of trying to destabilize an international situation through what he called "banditry" in the Middle East and Latin America.

Gunmen kill lawmaker

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Two gunmen killed a conservative legislator Thursday as he walked from his home to drive his daughter to school, police said.

Roberto Ismael Ayala, 47, of the Authentic Institutional Party, was the fourth legislator killed in the past two years. Three others from the rightist Republican Nationalist Alliance were killed by Popular Liberation Forces guerrillas, who took responsibility for the actions.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for Thursday's shooting.

A maid told reporters she watched from a second-floor balcony as men drove up to the house, got out of their car, shot Ayala at point-blank range, then fled.

Ayala was standing beside his young daughter, about to open the door of his car, when he was hit by several bullets in the head, the maid said. Before they fled, the assassins yelled at the maid and the daughter to get inside, she said.

The maid, along with other witnesses who corroborated the story, asked not to be identified for fear of reprisals.

Ayala served as mayor of Sanuntepeque, the capital of his native Cabanas province 51 miles northeast of the capital, from 1976 until he was elected to the 60-member Constituent Assembly from the conservative National Conciliation Party on March 28, 1982. He was one of a dozen leaders who left to form the Institutional Party a year later.

Iran claims victory; Iraq offers denial

By ALEX EFTY
The Associated Press

Iran claimed its biggest victory Thursday in 3½ years of war with Iraq, saying its forces thrust 25 miles into southern Iraq and cut the Baghdad-Basra highway in two places.

Iraqi military communiques said the new Iranian offensive in the Basra region was "totally wiped out with thousands of (Iranian) bodies left on the battlefield."

The Iraqi communiques said Tehran had claimed victory to divert public attention in Iran from the crushing of its offensives and the huge losses suffered.

Iran said its forces captured two towns along the Iraqi highway — Qurna, 36 miles north of Basra, and Al Uzayr, 23 miles further north.

Both towns are 19 miles west of the Iran-Iraq border, with Qurna at the confluence of Iraq's mighty biblical rivers, the Tigris and the Euphrates.

Associated Press correspondent Mohammed Salam toured Qurna Thursday evening. He reported no sign of fighting there and normal highway traffic.

A provincial official in Qurna, Khalaf Abdul Karim, told reporters of an Iraqi victory over Iranian forces Thursday seven miles east of Qurna. He said armed Iraqi villagers and People's Army reservists killed 1,500 Iranian soldiers and captured 250 after the Iranians crossed marshes in 500 small boats and landed about 11 miles inside-Iraqi territory.

Thursday's war communiques were monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus. Although Salam reached Qurna, foreign correspondents are seldom allowed near the battlefield, making it difficult to verify conflicting claims.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency had said earlier that following the cutting of the highway, "Iraq lost one of its most important logistical routes." The Iranians claimed that the Iraqi 3rd Army in the Basra sector was cut off from the 4th Army, manning the border opposite Al Amarah.

The Baghdad-Basra highway is an important military objective because Iraq uses it to move troops and equipment along the southern sector of the 730-mile-long war front.

Iran said Iraqi forces were caught by surprise as the attacking force "used new tactics" to cross the Hursud-Esveltech marshes between the border and the two towns.

The communiques did not say what the new tactics were, but the official Iraqi news agency quoted an Iraqi general as saying his troops had destroyed a number of Iranian gunboats on the marshes.

The advancing Iranians also captured 26 Iraqi villages in the region, killed or wounded more than 2,500 Iraqi troops and captured many more, the Iranian communiques claimed.

Iraq had predicted a major battle east of Basra following reports that Iran had massed as many as 500,000 troops in the region.

Iran's public announcements vastly underestimate the casualties, Sanati said.

The rugged terrain or continuing Iraqi fire sometimes make it difficult to reach the wounded," the soft-spoken Iranian said through an interpreter. "But the most important reason is that for the 'Khomeini' regime, saving lives is secondary. They would rather use the helicopters for attack than for picking up wounded."

And he said his hospitals sometimes

Officer charges millions killed in Iran-Iraq war

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Probably 1 million Iranians have been killed or wounded in the 3½-year-old war with Iraq, many of them teen-agers mowed down trying to storm fortified Iraqi positions, a former Iranian medical officer said Thursday.

"The 'human wave' tactic is one of the principal means by which the Khomeini regime attacks Iraqi forces," Ardesbir Sanati, a dentist and former army colonel, said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Sanati said he was chief medical officer for Iran's 81st Armored Division, in control of the northwestern half of the border warfront, from the start of the war in September 1980 until he fled Iran seven months ago.

He had not emerged publicly in the West until now, he said, because he wanted to protect colleagues who remained in Iran, including those who helped him, his wife and two children escape in an arduous three-week journey over mountains to Turkey.

In statements issued here and at Iranian exile headquarters in Paris Thursday, Sanati declares his support for the Mujahedeen Khalq, the Muslim leftist group trying to overthrow Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime in Iran.

Sanati's accounts of the war cannot be independently verified, but the resemble reports of others who have witnessed Iranian tactics in the costly conflict, which this week entered an intensive new phase. Iran and Iraq issued conflicting communiques Thursday claiming successes in huge new battles along the 370-mile front

The former medical officer estimated that the dead make up 40 percent of Iran's casualties — an extremely high proportion of dead to wounded for a modern war. Many die unnecessarily, he said.

Fathers released in religious jailing

PLATTSMOUTH, Neb. (AP) — A judge ordered the release Thursday of six fathers jailed for three months for refusing to answer questions about the illegal-Faith-Christian-School which their children attended.

Sparry County District Judge Ronald Reagan told Sheriff Fred Tessel to release the men, who had been held since Nov. 23.

Reagan also voided warrants outstanding for the arrest of seven mothers of Faith Christian pupils.

He let stand, however, warrants for the arrest of the Rev. Everett Silven, who runs the school, and Silven's daughter, Tresa Schmit, who has taught at the school.

Reagan's decision followed a compromise agreement reached Wednesday evening between Cass County Attorney Ron Moravec and Michael Farris, attorney for the six men.

Moravec "made me this offer that the men would have to testify in exchange for their promise not to send their children to Faith-Christian School," Farris said. "The men didn't want to testify against themselves, their family, the other people in the church or the pastor."

Reagan ruled on motions by Moravec after the fathers testified that they had known the school was not approved by the state and that they would not send their children to the school until it complies with state laws.

The state has ordered Faith Christian School closed because it does not employ certified teachers. The school has remained open in defiance of the state and court orders.

The children of the six fathers have not attended the school since the men were jailed, Farris said.

"The children won't return to public or private schools in the state of Nebraska," Farris said.

After the men testified, Moravec withdrew his questions that had led to the men being found in contempt of court on Nov. 23. He also moved that bench warrants against the wives of the men be withdrawn and that motions to show cause for contempt against the men and their wives be dismissed.

AMA seeks fee freeze

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Medical Association is asking all U.S. doctors to voluntarily freeze their fees for a year in an effort to help the nation's economy, officers said Thursday.

"For us to get out of a recession, we feel it is our responsibility to do this," said Dr. John J. Coury Jr., chairman of the AMA's board of trustees, which had voted unanimously in favor of the proposal earlier in the day.

The AMA made a similar appeal in 1978, according to Dr. James H. Sammons, AMA executive vice president. He said doctors responded widely to that request, citing figures showing doctors' fees increased at a slower rate than the consumer price index for the years 1975-1980.

"In 1983, for the first time in a period of almost five years, physicians' fees went up faster than the all-items index," said Dr. Joseph P. Boyle, president-elect of the AMA. He noted that doctors' fees rose 6.4 percent last year.

"Among the major concerns that people have is the cost of medical care," Boyle said. "We believe that doctors have the same concerns as their patients and will share in all the sacrifices that are necessary to keep the economy strong."

The AMA plans to send a letter to each of the approximately 390,000 physicians involved in patient care in the United States, said Dr. Frank J. Jirka Jr., AMA president.

The letter will ask doctors to begin the freeze immediately. It also will urge the AMA's call for doctors to reduce or waive fees for patients with financial difficulties, especially those among the unemployed, the uninsured and those covered by Medicare.

"We're doing this in good faith," Coury said. "I'm willing to bet — and I'm not a gambler — but I'm willing to bet that 85 to 90 percent of physicians will go along with this."

The board vote preceded Thursday's opening of a three-day conference for 900 health care specialists gathering to discuss medical issues in the 1980s.

The California Medical Association recently asked doctors in that state to freeze fees for a year, and Georgia and Texas medical associations have previously approved similar measures.

Doctors' fees currently make up about 20 percent of the nation's $325 billion annual expenditures on health care, with hospital costs accounting for most of the rest.

Report: U.S. poverty grows sharply

By RANDOLPHE SCHMID
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Poverty grew sharply between 1979 and 1982, but official estimates may exaggerate the number of Americans who are poor because the figures don't take into account such benefits as food stamps and Medicare, according to a Census Bureau study.

The nation's poverty rate — the share of people below the official poverty level — could be as much as one-third smaller if non-cash benefits for food, housing and medical care were considered income, the report says.

But by any calculation, poverty has grown. For 1982, the latest figures available, the bureau estimates that 34.4 million Americans, about 15 percent of the population, lived in poverty. That's up from 11.7 percent in 1979.

Those estimates count as income only such cash assistance as welfare and supplemental security income in calculating who falls below the poverty level, currently $9,862 for a family of four.

If benefits other than cash were included as income, at their market value, the poverty rate would drop to 10 percent for 1982, according to the study. "Estimates of Poverty Including the Value of Non-cash Benefits, 1979 to 1982."

And for 1979, counting the non-cash benefits would lower the poverty rate to 6.8 percent, a 42 percent drop from the previous calculations for that year.

Gordon Green of the bureau's population division stressed that issuing the report did not indicate any official change in the poverty figures for the nation. Those estimates are done by the Office of Management and Budget.

The question of counting non-cash assistance to the poor as income for those people has led to some debate, however, and the study was initiated at the request of Congress, Green said.

The increase in the poverty rate between 1979 and 1982 "should come as no surprise," Green pointed out. It was a period of recession when many people lost jobs and income, and in 1979 and 1980 high inflation also had a serious effect on poverty rates.

Asked about the effect of cuts in federal domestic programs under the Reagan administration, Green said that was hard to calculate because it is "very difficult to disentangle the effects of recession, inflation and program changes."

The official estimates of poverty showed 26,072,000 poor Americans in 1979, rising to 34,398,000 in 1982. But counting the market value of non-cash benefits as income dropped the totals to 15,099,000 in 1979 and 22,885,000 in 1982.

Green noted that the most dramatic effect appeared with the elderly, where counting the value of non-cash benefits dropped the 1982 poverty rate from 14.6 percent to 3.5 percent.

Pentagon keeps faith in soured Lebanese army

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the face of serious setbacks suffered by the Lebanese army, a Pentagon spokesman said Thursday "we still maintain confidence in the Lebanese armed forces."

At the same time, spokesman Michael Burch acknowledged that "we have put a temporary hold" on some U.S. military equipment destined for the Lebanese army.

He mentioned as an example that "some orders of armored personnel carriers have been delayed." Pentagon sources said Wednesday that shipments of armored troop carriers and tanks had been suspended because of uncertainty over whether the Lebanese army can hold together. Asked about tank shipments, which he did not mention, Burch replied, "I did not know."

The Lebanese army has suffered severe defeats within the past two weeks at the hands of Druse and Shiite militia forces, and U.S. military specialists regard at least two of the Lebanese brigades as virtually nonexistent.

One specialist, who spoke on condition he remain anonymous, said Wednesday that between 50 and 60 percent of the 37,000-man Lebanese army remains intact and that "the army has no direction because the political situation is so fluid."

But Burch stuck to the Reagan administration's "public position" of faith in the Lebanese armed forces as an underpinning for the shaky government of President Amin Gemayel.

"We still maintain confidence in the LAF in their positions in Beirut."

"We still maintain our commitment to the elected Lebanese government and hope that, through our support and training programs, that we can improve the over-all capability of that force."

At another point, under persistent questioning, Burch said "there are still units within the LAF that are an effective force in their positions."

In addition to those Lebanese government troops deployed in Beirut, he also voiced the belief that other Lebanese units holding "the key mountain town of Suk al Gharb in the mountains overlooking the capital represent 'an effective force.'"

Asked whether U.S. warships and carrier-based warplanes would use their firepower if the Suk al Gharb garrison was in danger of being over-run, Burch said "I have no information" on that.

Bubble boy's death offers cancer clue

By PAUL RECER
The Associated Press

HOUSTON (AP) — David the "bubble boy" died from an overwhelming "abnormal growth" of a white blood cell, doctors said Thursday, adding that he was cheerful and "making jokes to the last," but tired of the struggle to keep him alive.

"He knew his health was falling and told us so," Dr. William T. Shearer of the Baylor College of Medicine said, his voice cracking with emotion as he described the final hours of his 12-year-old patient.

"He said something to the effect that here we have all these tubes and all these tests and nothing is working and I'm getting tired. 'Why don't we just pull out all these tubes and let me go home?'" Shearer said at a news conference.

David died at 8 p.m. Wednesday after having lived longer than anyone else with severe combined immune deficiency, a condition that left him defenseless against disease. He died after doctors attempted to generate immunity with an experimental bone marrow transplant.

Death at the Texas Children's Hospital came 15 days after David, whose family requested that his last name never be disclosed by hospital officials, had left the sterile plastic bubbles that had been his home since birth.

Shearer said an autopsy showed David died from an overwhelming

"abnormal growth" of a type of white blood cell called B cell lymphocyte. The doctor said the cells were found abnormally in the lungs, the spleen and other organs. There also were extensive ulcers throughout his stomach and intestines. At the end, David suffered cardiac failure despite "heroic measures" to keep the heart beating, he said.

The discovery of abnormal cells, however, was "of great medical significance" because it "has taught us that there is an important connection between the immune system and the development of cancer or growth of abnormal cells," Shearer said.

"David's death was as unique as his life," he said. David's life "has been an important part of medicine, but his greatest contribution was his death."

Doctors transplanted into David less than two ounces of specially treated bone marrow from his 15-year-old sister last Oct. 21. Shearer said he believed the boy's death resulted from a reaction to that transplant, although he found no cells that could be traced to the transplanted bone marrow.

David developed diarrhea and vomiting on Feb. 7, forcing doctors to remove him from his bubble. He was placed in a sterile two-room suite in the hospital.

Outside the bubble for the first time in his life, he was able to kiss his mother for the first time.

Later, Shearer said, the boy talked of enjoying sitting in a chair and lying in a real bed.

Abnormal cell growth led to David's death

By PAUL RECER
The Associated Press

HOUSTON — David, the "bubble boy" who lacked immunity from disease, died as a result of an "abnormal growth" of certain cells, and not from graft vs. host disease as earlier believed, doctors said Thursday.

Dr. William Shearer, who performed an autopsy, said at a news conference that discovery is "an unusual finding and of great medical significance."

David, who lived most of his life in a sterile bubble, died Wednesday night at age 12, his body battered by illnesses resulting from a bone marrow transplant last fall.

David's death was his most important contribution to medicine, Shearer said.

"It has taught us there is an important connection between the immune system and the development of cancer or abnormal growth of cells," Shearer said. "David's death was as unique as his life was."

David apparently died of a proliferation of a type of lymphocyte — an "abnormal growth" of B-cells — not from graft vs. host disease as had been believed, Shearer said.

"I believe the principle diagnosis was not graft-vs-host but this abnormal proliferation of B lymphocytes," he said.

He explained that B lymphocytes secrete immunoglobulins, a substance important in producing antibodies. Doctors had previously believed David's system was attacked by mature T-cells, a lymphocyte responsible for the control of malignancies and viral infections.

Shearer said the proliferation of the B-cells probably resulted from the October bone marrow transplant made in hopes of stimulating the boy's long-dormant immune system.

"This technique has worked" in other cases, Dr. Joel Rappaport, clinical director of the bone marrow transplant program at Boston's Brigham and Women's Hospital, said after learning of David's death. "It's not going to work 100 percent of the time."

For David, the illnesses that killed him were the only ones he ever suffered.

David was born with severe combined immune deficiency, a rare inherited condition in which the body is unable to produce the lymphocyte cells that fight disease.

Rappaport said the disease is very rare, perhaps afflicting 50 people a year in the United States. David's plastic bubble allowed him to become, at the age of 12, the longest living survivor of the syndrome.

The disease forced him to live all but his last two weeks inside a germ-free clear vinyl bubble, constructed with technology developed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to protect the Earth from bacteria that might have been brought back from the moon.

Doctors first hoped to correct David's condition with a bone marrow transplant from a family member with a matching tissue type. But neither parent nor his sister matched, and the chance of finding a matching donor among the general population was 64,000 to 1. Doctors used a computer to scan for a match in a search that continued fruitlessly almost to the end.

The bone marrow treatment has been used six times, three successfully, Rappaport said.

"I think this technique is still a very applicable technique," he said.

David wanted to be among those fortunate few

Pilot to keep looking for missing climber

By PAUL JENKINS
The Associated Press

TALKEETNA, Alaska — As bad weather prevailed again Thursday on Mount McKinley, a pilot said he wanted to search for Naomi Uemura until he is certain the Japanese climber could not have escaped with his life after a solo ascent of North America's tallest peak.

"I'd like to keep looking until I'm satisfied there's no way he could have gotten out of there," said Doug Geeting, a glacier pilot who flew Uemura to his basecamp on Kahilina Glacier. "I'm sure every time I go up, I'll be looking. I'd like to find out what happened. It just doesn't make sense."

Rangers from Denali National Park, where the 20,320-foot peak is located, have all but abandoned hope for Uemura, more than a week overdue. He was last heard from Feb. 13 when he reported he'd made the summit the previous evening and was on his way back down.

Geeting tried unsuccessfully Thursday for the third consecutive day to get a glimpse of the mountain. It again was obscured by clouds, and Geeting ran into severe icing conditions.

Mountaineering Ranger Bob Gerhard said the forecast calls for more of the same through Friday.

"I'd feel more comfortable with one clear day to search," Gerhard said.

There's been only one such day in the past two weeks. Monday, a climber and his companion and two others scoured the 16-mile West Buttress route without finding a trace of Uemura.

The two climbers, Jim Wickwire of Seattle and Elho Otani of Tokyo, remained at the 14,000-foot level. They took supplies for two weeks and emergency oxygen bottles.

They were to be joined by at least three other climbers from the mountaineering club from Meiji University in Tokyo. Toyozo Sugawara, supervisor of the club, said they will arrive within a few days.

The team reportedly will consist of climbers who've been with Uemura on previous adventures.

Uemura in 1970 was the first to successfully ascend McKinley alone. McKinley's summit has only been reached three times in winter, and always before by team.

Gerhard and mountaineering guide Brian Okonek said they believed Uemura, who carried enough supplies to last through last Friday, would be credited with becoming the first to successfully reach the summit alone in winter.

People sad for child, fear for climber

By SCOTT KRAFT
The Associated Press

They were brave to take chances, the young American boy battling disease and the tough Japanese adventurer battling a mountain. Heroes. If anybody could make it, they could.

But the country grieved Thursday for David, the cheerful 12-year-old "bubble boy." He gambled for his life and lost.

And hope was fading for Naomi Uemura, the 44-year-old climber. He gambles life by choice; those are the stakes he plays.

Wars and car crashes claim human lives by the thousands.

But the death of that boy in Houston touched millions of strangers. In dark-haired David, they saw hope of defeating a Goliath-sized disease — "Bubble Boy Turns 10." It was chocolate cake, wasn't it? He got "Star Wars" toys one year; sterilized, of course. And at Mass, he always received a sterilized wafer.

Americans celebrated his spirit. He grew up in that vinyl bubble. Away from the loving warmth of human touch. Away from the smell of fresh-cut grass. Away from swimming holes and sundlot baseball.

Yet he giggled. He joked with the nurses.

David had severe combined immune deficiency, a rare inherited condition that left his body unable to fight disease. He had survived longer than anyone else with the condition.

He attended school by telephone. His grades were high. He was brighter than average. At age 3, he began talking of getting out of the bubble. He once said he wanted to feel grass under his feet. But the closest he got was romping in his yard in a specially designed spacesuit.

In October, there was hope. A new bone marrow transplant procedure allowed the use of marrow that was not a perfect tissue match.

David, understanding that he was risking death, signed the consent form himself. His sister donated the marrow. David helped the doctors inject it.

But he began vomiting and had diarrhea. The transplant didn't seem to be working. He had to come out of his bubble to be treated properly. He could never go back.

Naomi Uemura wanted to be different.

He had rafted down the Amazon, mushed a dog team to the North Pole and climbed the tallest peaks on five continents. He became a hero in Japan.

On Feb. 1, he began a trip up Mount McKinley, a foreboding presence in any season but a place of deadly winds and cold in winter.

Uemura reached the 20,320-foot summit on Feb. 12, and radioed his achievement to the base camp the next day.

He was due back a week ago. But confident in his ability to escape death, rangers didn't express concern until Monday.

"I have never accepted death," Uemura said in 1982. "All I want is to return to Japan alive."

Mount McKinley's peak was shrouded in clouds Thursday.

Naomi Uemura was still missing.

Mine near Challis may use cyanide

CHALLIS (AP) — The Cyprus Thompson Creek molybdenum mine near here is considering using cyanide to extract gold and possibly silver from ore.

It is one of two new cyanide mining projects recently proposed for central Idaho, says Larry Jones of the Land Department's mining reclamation division. The second has been proposed by Golden Maple Mining of Kellogg to work an old mining waste site in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

"No formal proposal has been made yet," said Charles Reno, Cyprus Mines Corporation general manager. "What we have is an informal plan, which may or may not come to fruition."

Reno recently wrote to state and federal agencies in the Cyprus Mine environmental task force that the cyanide extraction process is being considered.

Jones said Cyprus hadn't expected to find any precious metals, but some has turned up. "It would help offset some of their costs," he said.

In addition to recovering gold or silver, the cyanide circuit also would enhance molybdenum production.

said Bill Satathite, a Cyprus spokesman. It would be an indoor process, with the cyanide leaching vats added to the mine's molybdenum floatation system.

Cyprus mills 25,000 tons of ore a day from an open pit mine and treats about 50 tons a day of molybdenum concentrate.

"Our recovery rate is 17 percent or about two-and-a-half pounds per ton," said Satathite. "We began commercial production in late 1983, and we'll be making product delivery this quarter, the first quarter of 1984."

Jones said the Cyprus proposal will require an amendment to its environmental-operations plan. The Golden Maple Mining proposal is on patented land surrounded by the recreation area.

The proposal involves a cyanide heap-leaching project to recover gold on Valley Creek, which flows into the Salmon River near Stanley. It will be reviewed next spring when representatives of state and federal agencies can visit the site, Jones said.

Jones said the Valley Creek operation will be too small to require an environmental impact statement.

Pantries losing surplus

BOISE (AP) — Tons of surplus food that could be aiding thousands of needy citizens in Idaho is being shipped to other states because Idaho lacks the facilities to handle it, according to the Idaho-Hunger-Action Council.

"Companies like Simplot and Ore-Ida are donating food outside of Idaho because Idaho does not have a warehouse facility to take the size donations those companies want to make and redistribute that donation to food pantries in usable quantities," Wanda Michaelson told the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee Thursday.

While individuals often have access to that surplus in some areas of the state, "the food pantries that are missing out," she said.

During a hearing of the potential uses of federal block grants destined for the state in the year that begins July 1, Ms. Michaelson urged that $50,000 of the Community Services block grant be earmarked for a warehouse facility.

A gleaning program begun by the organization in 1980 yielded more than 160 tons of food last year, she said, demonstrating that "gleaning is a good example of low-income people helping themselves and each other."

But with over 200,000 Idaho residents considered economically disadvantaged, Ms. Michaelson pointed out that the amount gleaned is just a fraction of the $3 million tons the federal government estimates is wasted in Idaho annually.

Donations made to other states account for some of the rest, but she said the bulk of that surplus just rots in the fields.

"People try to take as much as they can," she said, but "in order for the private sector to take more responsibility for feeding the needy in Idaho, such a (warehousing) program should be established."

Abuse hazards to remain

BOISE (AP) — Supporters and opponents agree mandatory licensing won't completely stop child abuse at day care facilities in Idaho.

But supporters say it will give the state a tool to keep obviously unqualified or dangerous operators out of the business. And they say it will help improve a situation in which parents often choose day care facilities unaware that an operator may have a criminal record or a serious mental health problem.

Opponents say mandatory licensing could hamper day care operations and drive up costs.

before the Senate Health, Education and Welfare Committee, which is considering legislation to make state licensing of day care facilities mandatory.

Sales tax hike proposal returns today

By QUANE KENYON
AP Capitol Writer

BOISE — The House Revenue and Taxation Committee will try again Friday on a bill raising the state sales tax from 3 to 4 percent.

The panel debated the proposal Thursday, but made no decision after a member succeeded in winning approval for changes in the way the extra sales tax revenue would be distributed.

But after the session, some committee members said the panel's about evenly divided whether to introduce the proposal or kill it on Friday. The committee has 18 members, and some committee members predicted the bill would be killed on a 9-9 tie vote on Friday.

On Wednesday, the committee refused a bill increasing the state sales tax by one-half cent. Thursday, was on how the money should be spent.

Rep. Chris Hooper, R-Boise, even suggested earmarking $14 million for the next state budget. He said the Legislature could commit itself this year to the rest of the money needed to boost Idaho public school teacher salaries to the national average.

The first $20.4 million for that purpose was contained in a bill passed by the House but stalled in the Senate Health, Education and Welfare Committee.

Hooper's motion died when no one supported him.

"This bill would take $62 million out of the economy" which is just recovering from a serious recession, said Chadband.

Only Rep. Rachel Gilbert, R-Boise, and Rep. J.F. Chadband, R-Idaho Falls, spoke directly against the sales tax increase. The rest of the debate higher taxes. Jim Weatherby, Association of Idaho Cities, suggested allocating all of the revenue from the added sales tax to cities and counties. "We remain convinced revenue-sharing is the best approach to meet our fiscal needs," he said.

Rep. Harold Reid, D-Craigmont, drew enough votes to change the distribution formula proposed by Antone. The revised bill will call for giving each county at least $30,000, and other funds based on population. The city portion of the money will go half on the basis of population and half on property value.

Rep. Don Loveland, R-Boise, said he didn't think $30,000 would be enough for sparsely populated counties such as Clark and Camas. "We're going to be a little bit unfair to the small counties," he said.

Senator says water-right battle spreads to western Idaho

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News Capitol Bureau

BOISE — Water rights now jeopardized by Snake River hydropower licenses aren't necessarily restricted to water users above the Swan Falls Dam, says Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly.

Noh, the chairman of the Senate Resources and Environment Committee, warns that southwest Idaho water users could, in 20 years, be facing the same uncertainty over availability of water as their counterparts in east and southeastern Idaho are today.

Concurrently, he says, low-income water users would benefit from new subordination legislation introduced to remedy water-availability problems resulting from the Swan Falls controversy.

A subordination law would give future decisions for upstream agricultural and industrial expansion preference over Idaho Power's power-generating use of the water.

The director of the state's Department of Water Resources says recreationists and property owners on Cascade Reservoir could suffer materially in the near future as a result of proposals to significantly lower the water level in their front yards.

Ken Dunn, the head of the state water department, says he knows of one party who is actively investigating the purchase of unappropriated storage in the reservoir. The party, an agricultural developer who holds an undeveloped water permit for Snake River water, would exchange the water with Idaho Power for the water covered by his permit. A moratorium on development and an Idaho Power lawsuit stand in the way of the permit holder presently.

Dunn says that by purchasing the Cascade Reservoir water and sending it down the Payette River so that it eventually will reach the Hells Canyon complex, the developer would be able to effectively compensate Idaho Power for water withdrawn at Glens Ferry.

"The first guy that does it will be the rest of them," Dunn says, adding that the end result could easily be that vacation homes on the reservoir would no longer have a body of water in their front yards.

Dunn says a bill before the Legislature could prevent that withdrawal because it would grant the department the permission to review undeveloped water permits, such as the one held by the Glens Ferry developer.

Dunn says that bill also would address Noh's concerns, which he, too, shares. Noh says his concern for southwest Idaho water users stems from the fact that Idaho Power's state water licenses on one of its three dams in Hells Canyon are un-subordinated to future upstream development — a condition that could threaten water users and potential water users on the Boise, Weiser, Payette and Snake rivers.

Greg Panter, an Idaho Power lobbyist, calls Noh's statements "a scare tactic to convince people downstream of Swan Falls to believe they're going to be adversely affected" if subordination legislation is not approved by the Legislature.

Panter says the utility agreed in the 1950s to subordinate its water rights at the Hells Canyon complex, and it will honor that agreement.

However, Noh contends that the lack of a subordination clause in the state water licenses for the Hells Canyon Dam provides the utility with a strong argument for requesting that the subordination clause be removed from its federal permit for the facility.

And he says such a request would be consistent with actions taken by the utility for its federal licenses for its Upper Salmon and Shoshone Falls generating plants.

In those cases, the utility requested that the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission remove subordination clauses from its federal licenses because its state licenses at those facilities were not subordinated similarly.

In defense of its action for removal of subordination in the federal licenses at Shoshone Falls and Upper Salmon, utility officials quoted language in the federal licenses that states: "This license shall not be construed as affecting in any way any claim of the licensee may have concerning its water rights acquired pursuant to state law."

But Noh says that clause could be used to remove the subordination clause from the federal license on Hells Canyon when that license comes up for renewal in 2005.

Idaho Creech defense sparks

BOISE (AP) — Defense attorney Rolf Kehne says he can produce a witness countering claims by the prosecution that death row inmate Thomas Eugene Creech is lying when he claims he killed a fellow prison inmate in self-defense three years ago.

But Kehne told Fourth District Judge Robert Newhouse Thursday that the witness, Ralph Pierce, the executive director of the Idaho Commission on Probation and Paroles, cannot testify until next week.

Newhouse agreed to postpone proceedings in the case until Monday, adding that he will likely have to take the entire matter under advisement before issuing a decision.

Creech, 33, a former church sexton and one of eight men awaiting execution on Idaho's death row, is fighting to withdraw the plea of guilty to capital murder in the prison slaying and put his case before a jury.

He now claims he was defending his own life on May 13, 1981, when he killed car thief David Jensen after Jensen attacked him with a home-made knife. He contends he pleaded guilty to capital murder because of threats against himself and his family, depression and the belief that he had no other choice.

In detailing for the court a tangled string of events leading up to the slaying and his plea in 1981, Creech has also admitted under oath that he has lied to both police and the courts in the past but swears he is telling the truth now.

Ada County Prosecutor Greg Bower has accused Creech of just making up the story of self-defense and a coerced guilty plea to save himself from a firing squad.

But Kehne said Pierce, who was Creech's prison counselor both before and after the slaying, will testify that "Tom consistently told him what he indeed told the court... over a period of months while he was in the Ada County jail."

That testimony, Kehne said, will rebut Bower's claims that Creech's story is a fabrication.

But Bower, in the judge that he will likely object to Pierce's testimony on grounds that it cannot be properly admitted under rules of the court.

Killer sentenced to die

CALDWELL (AP) — One of two people convicted in the death of a Caldwell man has been sentenced to die.

Donald Fetterly, 26, was sentenced Thursday by 3rd District Judge Edward Lodge, who called the slaying of Sterling Grammer, 45, last September "brutal and savage."

Fetterly becomes the ninth man on Idaho's Death Row. His co-defendant in the Grammer killing, Karin Windsor, 27, is to be sentenced next month.

Lodge set an April 10 execution date.

Both Fetterly and Ms. Windsor were convicted of murder in the death of Grammer, a welder whose stabbed body bound with duct tape was dumped in the Snake River.

"In all my 19 years on the judge, I've never experienced such a senseless killing," Lodge said.

Canyon County Prosecutor Richard Harris said Thursday there were no mitigating circumstances to make the death penalty inappropriate for Fetterly.

Harris said he hasn't decided what penalty he will seek for Ms. Windsor.

Salmon disaster office closes

SALMON (AP) — A federal-state disaster center here will close Saturday night.

But a federal spokesman said Thursday Lemhi County residents damaged by flooding can use a hotline to get information or help with disaster assistance requests after the office closes.

The number is 756-4518. Mike Sweeney, Federal Emergency Management Agency spokesman, said since the assistance office opened Saturday, some 63 area residents have filed requests for assistance.

All but two or three were for damage to residences, he said. Sweeney said few smart checks also asked for the emergency low-interest loans.

President Reagan earlier this month declared Lemhi County a disaster area to clear the way for federal assistance programs. The Lemhi and Salmon rivers flooded because of ice jams.

Reagan encouraged on stand for stiff discipline in schools

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan received strong support Thursday for his stand on school discipline from 18 educators who urged him to keep hammering on the issue.

Reagan has called repeatedly in recent months for a return to "good old, fashioned discipline" as the first step toward restoring excellence in American schools. Some critics, including the National Education Association, have accused him of trying to milk the issue for political gain.

But principals and professors who emerged from the meeting at the White House with Reagan and Education Secretary T.H. Bell applauded the president's stand.

"I don't care what his purposes are," said Boston School Superintendent Robert Spillane. "There's a very serious discipline problem and it's about time someone started to deal with it, and who better than the leader of the United States of America?"

"We need to build a strong educational program and a lot of the discipline issues will take care of themselves," said Spillane. "We need a little bit of everything, including funds, including more homework, including discipline."

George McKenna, principal of Washington Preparatory High School in Los Angeles, said he had "some differences with the president" who as a non-educator "seeks solutions that seem simplistic."

Enforcement and discipline alone cannot solve all of the schools' problems, said McKenna, but he added, "I think that the president is on the right track.... I don't denigrate what the president is trying to do as simply a publicity thing." He urged Reagan to encourage businesses to release parents and other employees to volunteer in the schools just as they get time off for jury duty.

Gerald Grant, a Syracuse University professor of education and sociology, said he told Reagan that students need good behavior models to follow, and that requires talented teachers. "A crucial part of this is to raise teachers' salaries," Grant said.

Authorized to kill, police hunt killers prison in western Tennessee.

Authorities say Freeman and Clegg walked out of woods near a farm in Brownsville in western Tennessee on Tuesday afternoon and gunned down Paul M. Windrow Sr., 59, a retired tire store owner who was grilling steaks in his back yard.

KINGSFORD, Tenn. — Troopers authorized to shoot to kill secured the snowy Smoky Mountains of eastern Tennessee for two escaped convicts Thursday — and the FBI joined the search after reports that one of them threatened to kill his stepfather in Virginia.

Police said the two fugitives — who have vowed not to be taken alive — already killed a 59-year-old man and took his wife hostage on a dash across Tennessee earlier this week.

Despite rain and snow, Tennessee state troopers used helicopters to search the mountains around Bluff City, about 15 miles east of Kingsport in far eastern Tennessee.

"Investigations revealed that there's a good chance they are in that area," said Lt. Jennings Strout of the Tennessee Highway Patrol. "There are some relations there."

The fugitives are Ronald Freeman, a 41-year-old former-church-choir-leader serving 198 years for murdering his wife and stepdaughter, and James Clegg, a 30-year-old former-motorcycle-gang member serving life as a habitual criminal. They have said they will not be taken alive.

U.S. Magistrate James H. Allen in Memphis, on the state side of the Memphis, on the federal arrest warrants after authorities said Clegg had vowed to kill his stepfather in Virginia and Freeman planned to flee the state with a girlfriend.

Allen's order said Darlene Lee, Clegg's half-sister and a dispatcher with the Paris, Tenn., police department, said the convict told her if he ever escaped he would go to Bristol, Va., to kill his stepfather, whose name wasn't released.

The order said a confidential source told authorities that Freeman planned to meet a woman named Terri Stinnett in eastern Tennessee and flee the state.

Freeman and Clegg were among five Fort Pillow State Prison inmates who dug up hidden guns, overpowered guards and escaped from a work gang last Saturday.

Barroom rape trial begins

FALL RIVER, Mass. (AP) — A young woman who entered a bar to buy cigarettes was raped on a pool table for nearly 90 minutes while onlookers in the bar shouted "Do it! Do it!" prosecutors told two jurors Thursday.

"They were cheering like it was a baseball game while she continued to scream and cry for help," said Bristol County Assistant District Attorney Robert Kane.

"She was begging for help that never came," said Bristol County Assistant District Attorney Raymond Veary. "This is a story without heroes."

The two attorneys gave the description in opening the trial of four men charged with the March 6, 1983, gang rape at Big Dan's, a bar in nearby New Bedford. Two other men are being tried separately.

Defense attorneys reserved their right to opening arguments for a later date.

Kane told the jury how the victim's celebration of her child's birthday turned into a nightmare as she was assaulted again and again by four men while two others stood watch. When the women finally ran from the bar, Kane said her attackers went back to the bar, "scrubbing and laughing and ordering drinks."

Victor Raposo, John Corderio, Virgilio Medeiros and Jose Medeiros, all 24, are being tried on charges of aggravated rape in trial sessions held each morning. Daniel Silva and Joseph Vieira, both 27, are being tried on the same charges in the afternoon.

Judge William Young separated the trials to avoid the possibility of defendants testifying against each other. He will hold trials in tandem to prevent the publicity from one trial affecting the other.

Dairymen warned of cuts in support

CALDWELL (AP) — The dairy industry's 1984 budget cutting and criticism, won't be seriously hurt by the failure of the nation's milk producers to take the government up on its unprecedented offer to pay them for not producing.

But Patrick Healy, the chief executive officer of the National Milk Producers Federation, warned dairymen in Caldwell on Thursday that the next federal effort to force excessive milk production could result in drastic cuts in price support levels.

Only 12 percent of the nation's milk producers signed up for the program, a compromise among the federation, the administration and the Congress. That is about half the number Agriculture Secretary John Block said was necessary to rein in the burgeoning milk surplus that has been costing taxpayers in excess of $2 billion a year.

Block had been pushing a flat 8 to 10 percent reduction in the basic milk price support level, which had been $13.10 per hundred pounds.

Healy, who has played an integral role in formulating national dairy legislation as the federation's chief Washington lobbyist, said he still prefers his organization's alternative. He called the compromise, no matter how undersubscribed, better than no change in policy at all.

"It allows us to debate its replacement in the 1985 farm bill — in some atmosphere of re-consideration," Healy told the Dairymen's Creamery Association.

Inability to secure congressional approval of the federation's plan resulted in "hecatombs we could not agree among ourselves," he said. It not only called for payments to those who reduced production, as the current law does, but penalties against those who continue increasing production.

Dairy farmers in the Southeast and on the West Coast opposed the plan because they are able to sell all the milk they produce to large population centers nearby.

Healy said the federation plans to turn the tables on its critics in preparing dairy legislation for the 1985 farm bill by developing only a program outline and then asking the administration and interest groups to help fill in the blanks.

But he warned dairy producers that Reagan, who won his first budget cut after taking office in the dairy price support program, may have already made up his mind.

Policy statements issued by the administration the past two months, Healy said, urge "a steady unwinding of historically high price supports and the prospect of lowering milk price supports in particular by 15 to 20 percent."

Wilderness logging set

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — The Forest Service said Wednesday it will not spare potential wilderness areas from logging at the expense of sound timber management in the national forests.

William H. Covey, director of timber management for the Forest Service's Northern Region here, said the agency must move ahead with timber sales and road-building in roadless areas — although some conservation groups consider those areas suitable for wilderness protection.

His remarks came during a news conference held in response to recent complaints by conservationists that the Forest Service is spilling the wilderness qualities of roadless areas before Congress has a chance to protect them.

The Montana Wilderness Association recently charged the Forest Service with legislating the issue by chainsaw. But Covey defended the agency's actions as necessary for proper management of the forests.

He said that in recent years the Forest Service has deferred logging in roadless areas and met the lumber industry's demand for timber by increasing the amount logged from other portions of the national forests.

Of the 1.1 billion board feet of timber available for harvest annually in the 15 national forests that make up the Northern Region, 13.6 percent (1.5 million board feet) annually grows in roadless areas. Montana's 19 million acres of national forest include 5.6 million acres of areas classified as roadless.

Accident won't alter nuke tests

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Last week's accident at the Nevada Test Site will mean few changes in the way America tests the ability of its weapons and space hardware to survive a nuclear knockout, Department of Energy spokesmen say.

It is at the accident site — Rainier Mesa — that America is learning how to knock out Russian satellites, how to make its own space hardware survivable for critical early warning of an enemy attack, how the MX and other missiles could take the Soviets' best shot.

"We don't think we'll have any delay in future testing up here," said DOE spokesman Dave Miller. "We will continue to work up in that area."

Thirteen workers were injured when a rocky plateau on Rainier Mesa sagged 20 to 25 feet following a nuclear weapons effects test Feb. 15. One worker was critically injured, but has since been removed from the critical list.

The workers were in electronics trailers sitting atop a plateau 1,158 feet above a tunnel where the weapons effects tests are conducted. Cables run through the ground to the tunnel and measure the shock and radioactive impact on military hardware such as electronic circuitry, metal alloys, plastics — any type of weapons and satellite components.

Testing at Rainier Mesa, 95 miles northwest of Las Vegas, is critical to the nation's nuclear defense program, Miller said.

"There we can simulate the effects of radiation on a satellite or re-entry nose cone for a rocket," Miller said.

The tests at Rainier are designed to determine what would happen should an enemy system encounter an American system in the atmosphere and explode, DOE officials say.

Defense officials acknowledge Russia has had an anti-satellite (ASAT) program operational for years and admit it is an area in which the U.S. is lagging.

The ability to knock out American satellites could be a devastating blow to the nation's defense because these space stations provide critical lead time in detecting an enemy attack.

The U.S. has recently tested an ASAT weapon launched from F-15 fighters, but the country's anti-satellite technology still lags significantly behind that of the Russians.

Some of the ASAT testing is believed to be carried out in a super-secret area at the northeast edge of the test area — an area so secretive that DOE and DOD officials even refuse to acknowledge its existence.

Weapons effects tests began at Rainier Mesa in 1972. They are conducted by placing a nuclear device in huge pipes 30 feet in diameter, in tunnels running half a mile or longer. The target material, such as alloys used in the nose cone of a cruise missile or a satellite, is placed at the other end of the pipe.

As a test approaches, a vacuum is created, such as would be experienced in space. Upon detonation, a series of trap doors allow the radiation to reach the test materials, but shut off debris following from the blast.

A government panel is currently investigating the Feb. 15 accident and will make recommendations on future safety steps.

"I think it might cause us to move the trailer park further away from surface ground zero," Miller said of the trailers.

"They may take a look at the whole geologic area and say that (the cavern) was a fluke, that they don't expect it to happen any more."

Smoke linked to deaths of infants

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Sudden infant death syndrome, the mysterious killer of 6,500 U.S. babies each year, is more likely among infants of mothers who smoke cigarettes than of those who don't, a preliminary study says.

Researchers conducting the nationwide study also found that crib deaths are more common among children of mothers who are black, who have seen doctors less often and who have given birth to more than one child by age 20.

But the National Institute of Child Health and Development study, which has yet to be published, dispelled earlier suggestions linking crib deaths with immunizations against childhood diseases.

"The new study makes it clear that a SIDS (sudden infant death syndrome) baby is less likely, not more likely, to have had shots against diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus and polio," Dr. Howard Hoffman, project officer for the study, said Wednesday.

Preliminary results found that 70 percent of the crib death mothers smoked cigarettes, compared with 40 percent of the mothers of healthy babies.

"That finding is based on analysis of about half the results of a 15-month survey of 800 SIDS deaths and 1,600 healthy babies in nine California counties, 20 New York counties plus New York City, and in St. Louis, Seattle and Chicago.

Hoffman presented the findings at an international symposium in Santa Monica sponsored by the Intra-Science Research Foundation, a non-profit group that funds biomedical research and meetings.

"Many factors — including maternal smoking — have previously been statistically associated with SIDS," he said, but added that such studies "unfortunately... shed no light" on the mechanisms that lead to crib deaths.

Epilepsy may cause impotence

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
 AP Science Writer

BOSTON — The discovery that a form of epilepsy may be a major cause of impotence strengthens the growing belief that male sexual problems often result from physical disorders, not mental ones, researchers say.

A new study, released Thursday, shows that a disease called temporal lobe epilepsy diminishes the body's production of sex hormones and lowers sexual drive.

"It looks as though we have yet another physical cause of impotence, and individuals who have been plagued with this problem in the past probably will no more be immediately shunted to the psychiatrist," said Dr. Richard F. Spark. "Now perhaps their family doctors will begin to look into this problem with some precision to see what can be done to help them."

Spark is not sure precisely how prevalent this form of epilepsy is among victims of impotence, but he said it may well turn out to be a significant cause of the problem.

In his study, he found that 11 of 16 men who sought treatment for impotence had unrecognized cases of the epilepsy. And since 1982, it has been diagnosed in 40 impotent men at his clinic at Boston's Beth Israel Hospital.

His research, published in this week's issue of the British journal Lancet, shows that standard anti-convulsant medicine can sometimes clear up both the epilepsy and the impotence.

Victims of temporal lobe epilepsy do not suffer the seizures usually associated with epilepsy. Instead, they have strange and widely varied behavioral problems. Among them are pains, bursts of irrational rage, bed wetting, fainting, dizziness and brief trances.

"The key to the whole thing is to get clues into the symptoms that are suggestive of this," Spark said in an interview. "The symptoms are very bizarre, and they are not the sort of questions that we ask when we see men with sexual dysfunction."

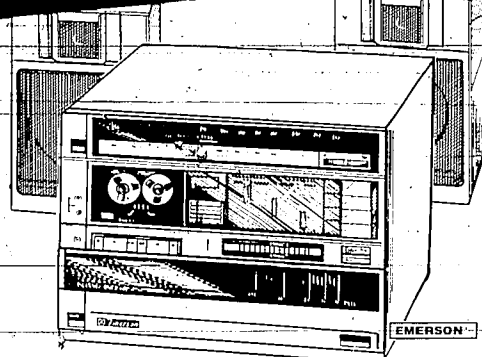

Until recently, many specialists estimated that 95 percent of impotence cases were caused by psychological difficulties. However, in 1980, Spark reported that 30 percent to 35 percent of the cases he studied could be shown to result from potentially treatable hormonal imbalances.

"People had looked at impotence as something they really didn't want to deal with," Spark said. "Male physicians feel very threatened in having to discuss this. Little by little, they are starting to abandon this concept that led them to immediately say, 'Go to the psychiatrist.'"

Vaccine put on reserve

ATLANTA (AP) — Government health researchers urged Thursday that chickenpox antibody injections, which are expensive and in limited supply, be given only to high-risk patients who have been exposed to the disease.

The nation's Public Health Service has published official recommendations for use of varicella-zoster immune globulin (VZIG), a means of transferring antibodies to protect against chickenpox, which was licensed three years ago.

In its report Thursday, the Immunization Practices Advisory Committee of the national Centers for Disease Control said VZIG is deciding whether to administer VZIG must weigh whether the patient is susceptible to chickenpox and whether the patient is at high risk of complications if he gets the disease.

VZIG is not a vaccine, but provides temporary post-exposure immunity for chickenpox, said Dr. Stephen Probid, a CDC immunization specialist. It must be given within four days after exposure.

The shots cost about $375 for an adult treatment, the CDC said.

The immunization committee recommends VZIG for:

- Most importantly, for immunization of children who are exposed to chickenpox, are susceptible to it and have weakened immune systems.
- For newborn babies whose mothers develop chickenpox between five days before delivery and two days after.
- For premature babies whose mothers have negative or unknown history of chickenpox immunity.
- For normal adults only when they are believed susceptible to chickenpox and have had a "significant" exposure to the disease.

Mothers sue drivers in sons' traffic deaths

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The mothers of two youths killed in separate auto accidents last fall in Twin Falls have filed lawsuits against the drivers of the vehicles, and the city of Twin Falls has been named as a co-defendant in one of the suits.

The mother of the 8-year-old boy who was killed in a Sept. 21 accident has filed a $1.5 million lawsuit against the driver and the city of Twin Falls.

The suit was filed Wednesday in Fifth District Court in Twin Falls.

Marilyn J. Simmons of Twin Falls, the mother of Chad Lopez, claims that 53-year-old Maurice Guerry Jr., a Castleford-area sheep rancher, was negligent and caused her son's death.

Guerry's truck hit the boy in the 300 block of Falls Avenue in Twin Falls. The accident occurred when the boy rode his bicycle into the street to go around a construction barricade at Falls Avenue and Harrison Street, Simmons claims. The city is to blame in the death because it "failed to give adequate and reasonable warning of the hazardous construction condition, (and) failed to provide a safe area for the passage of bicyclists, pedestrian and other traffic," Simmons states in her suit.

Guerry has been charged with misdemeanor vehicular manslaughter in connection with the accident.

According to the criminal complaint filed against him, Guerry was driving faster than the speed limit, and his windshield was dirty.

His trial is set to begin March 27.

Guerry's attorneys had asked that the charge be dismissed. That request was denied.

His lawyers claimed that the alleged "traffic infractions" were no basis for the criminal charge. The attorneys also claimed that the city's conduct had led to unsafe and dangerous conditions at the scene of the accident.

Simmons is seeking $1.5 million, attorneys' fees and a jury trial.

In the second lawsuit, Karen Bach, the mother of the late Timothy Roy Cordier of Kimberly, filed suit Tuesday in Fifth District Court in Twin Falls against 23-year-old Martin H. Perkins of Twin Falls.

Bach says that her 18-year-old son was a passenger in a truck driven by Perkins on Oct. 11, 1983. The suit claims that Perkins was intoxicated and driving too fast on Kimberly Road in Twin Falls, when his truck collided with a larger truck.

Cordier died from injuries he sustained in the accident.

Bach claims that Perkins was negligent and caused the accident.

Richard L. Perkins also has been named in the suit, because he owned the truck Perkins was driving.

Bach is seeking a jury trial, $354,000 in damages and attorneys' fees.

In connection with the accident, Martin Perkins has been charged with felony vehicular manslaughter, according to Fifth District Magistrate Court records.

Perkins has not been arraigned on the charge yet.

School thefts stymie pupils

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

HOLLISTER — Hollister Elementary School has been hit by a string of burglaries that have hampered the school's computer program.

Two computers, a television set and a stopwatch — items valued at more than $150 — were stolen from the school library in the latest burglary, which occurred the weekend of Feb. 4-5, according to Principal Randy Rutledge.

The two computers, along with three others, were supposed to have been used by about 50 students the following Monday in computer classes. The classes had begun a few weeks ago, Rutledge said this week.

Due to the theft, however, the students now are studying computer programming, instead of receiving hands-on experience with the computers. With one of the remaining computers being repaired, there are not enough machines for the students, Rutledge says.

The money to purchase the computers was raised by the community through a fund-raising drive, he says. If the computers are not returned, the school is going to have to replace them. And after some shopping around, the school may have to buy more expensive models, Rutledge says.

The first burglary took place around Jan. 15-17. Someone stole about $250 from the school office. Some of the students had contributed $5 each for a ski trip, and that money was stolen, Rutledge says.

The students did get to go on the ski trip. But some of the money that was raised through a magazine sale for other student activities had to be used to replace the stolen cash, Rutledge says.

The second burglary occurred the weekend of Jan. 28-29. This time, pencils, a pair of shoes and other small items were taken from the office, Rutledge says.

Harold Jensen, the chief deputy of the Twin Falls County sheriff's office, says there have been no arrests in the Schools resume with roads open

TWIN FALLS — Most of the schools in the Magic Valley that have been closed this week because of winter's latest assault will open their doors today.

Many students went back to classes Thursday.

The Cassia County district reopened all of its schools Thursday. And Mindoka County schools were expected to be back in session today, barring more snow and wind.

Mindoka Superintendent Gene Snapp said two firms with heavy equipment pitched in to help highway crews Thursday, and all roads were opened.

Kloepfer Concrete and Triple C Concrete put their employees, dozers and heavy loaders at the disposal of the county, Snapp said.

Gooding schools reopened Thursday, as did the Shoshone schools.

Ushoshone Superintendent Ken Crothers said most students were able to reach school, although some parents had to bring their children to a main road because of blocked lanes.

District schools remained closed, but Richfield was able to open.

Still in doubt Thursday evening was the Jerome district, where a decision will be made early this morning.

The Valley School District was planning to resume classes today.

Warmer temperatures and fewer winds improved road conditions Thursday throughout the Magic Valley. All state and federal highways were open, although some icy spots and drifting were reported on 1-84, from the Salt Lake City to the Utah line.

Refuse, gunfire mar builder's dreams

By HAL BERTON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Dennis Kulhanek dreamed for years of living in the majestic confines of the Snake River Canyon before moving into his new house above Shoshone Falls last spring.

It has been almost a year since Kulhanek's move, and he still enjoys canyon living. But he finds it frustrating that some residents treat Bureau of Land Management recreation land bordering his property as their own private dump and firing range.

The rusted remains of cars, blushing refrigerators and even the carcass of a freshly skinned calf litter the desert landscape beside the winding road that leads to Kulhanek's home in Jerome County.

Countless bullet holes in rusting car doors and the "No Trespassing" sign posted at the edge of Kulhanek's property testify to the popularity of the BLM land as a free-fire zone, as well as a free-wheeling motorbike area, he says.

Kulhanek says that he is tired of driving past debris, dodging motorbikers riding three abreast in the road and driving through gunfire to reach his home.

"Two weeks before deer season rolls around, you have all kinds of people out here shooting high-powered rifles into the rocks. Sooner or later, somebody is going to get hurt."

And Kulhanek says he also could do without the night hunters who come down into the small, private subdivision where he lives to "spotlight" for coyotes.

There also are occasional vandals. Kulhanek says that a backhoe bucket was stolen from his property last year and has not been recovered.

Kulhanek's nine acres of property extend from deep within the canyon up to the edge of the rim-side plateau that serves as the recreation area. His house is partially underground and includes a passive-solar design.

In the summer, he enjoys playing golf at a small course nestled within the canyon and raising trout—in a couple of tiny ponds. This winter, he is keeping busy putting the finishing touches on his house and helping his brother build a house on a nearby tract.

"If you can get people to reach the obvious conclusion that someone cares about this place, maybe they'd be more considerate," Kulhanek says.

"I've got high hopes of spending the rest of my life here."

City issues warnings

TWIN FALLS — Just as this winter's continuing snow may be unfamiliar to many Twin Falls residents, so may be city law governing its removal.

In paid advertisements this week, the city has been warning property owners not to plow snow into public right of ways, such as streets. A city law also says that property owners are responsible for clearing snow from sidewalks adjoining their property.

While no right-of-way blockage problems are present now, city engineer Gary Young says that a new snowfall could result in a significant problem.

The city has received periodic complaints about blockages in the past, he says. Problems arise particularly in commercial areas, where store owners clear the snow from parking lots into tall, wide piles.

The city has authority to bring offenders into court, Young says. But if the city would rather have property owners know of the law and comply voluntarily, he says.

Similarly, city law stipulates that sidewalk clearing is the responsibility of property owners, Young says.

The unusual amount of snow this city has seen is what some people are more diligent in this duty than others, he says.

Parasitic mistletoe damaging Sun Valley firs

By CHRISTOPHER WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — To most people, mistletoe is a nice decoration that prompts "romantic interludes" at Christmas and New Year's.

But for Forest Service workers in the Ketchum Ranger District, a variety of the plant — called dwarf mistletoe — is wreaking havoc with Douglas fir trees in the Sun Valley Area.

The dwarf mistletoe is killing many stands of Douglas fir trees and represents an increased fire danger in the summer, along with a greater danger of avalanches on Bald Mountain," ranger John Phipps said during a slide presentation Thursday noon for the Twin Falls Kiwanis Club.

In addition to fire danger — from up to 300 tons of dead limbs per acre on the forest floor — and the avalanche danger, the dead trees also threaten the aesthetic appearance of the area, and shade no longer will be provided to retain the snow for ski runs, Phipps said.

"The mistletoe is a leafless parasite that attaches itself to certain kinds of trees and robs them of nutrients. Its seeds pop out of pods at maturity and can travel a distance of 30 feet, infecting other healthy trees. The disease is also transmitted by birds and other animals."

According to Forest Service officials, the parasite has infected between 40 and 100 percent of the Douglas fir trees on the 3,500 acres of ski area at Bald Mountain. Besides this area, the mistletoe has invaded many of Idaho's other forests, including many portions of the Sawtooth National Forest's 2.2 million acres.

The Forest Service has been engaged in a project since 1975 to establish new stands of timber on Bald Mountain, as the old ones die out, Phipps said. A team of 14 employees is removing dead and heavily diseased trees, and planting other varieties that are not susceptible to the dwarf mistletoe. These new kinds of trees include Ponderosa pine, lodgepole pine, white fir and Engelmann spruce.

The $60,000-per-year project is not expected to be completed until 1993.

"Our program is working," Phipps said. "But the limiting factor is the time it takes to get the new trees to

More responsibility in patient care for nurses in future

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Regional Medical Center's new assistant administrator of nursing, Aileen Atwood, predicts nurses there will be accepting more responsibility and becoming more professional in the next decade.

The changes will be necessary in a more competitive market for health care, she says. And they should trigger an improvement in morale problems that have plagued the hospital, she believes.

The first step is for nurses to be well-informed, says Atwood, who has worked at the hospital for a month now. Hospital personnel apparently were caught off-guard when a temporary pay and hours cut was considered in January to offset a lower number of patients, she says.

"I want to make sure they are well-informed of the national scene, the state of health care," she says. "There are surprises that needn't be if people are aware of what is going on. For example, there will be a shift from hospital care to home care. That should not be a surprise if they are reading their professional journals."

Employers, insurance companies and the federal government are paying less of the cost of health care, she says. And as patients pay for more of their own health-care costs, they choose to spend less time in the hospital. That has meant that nurses across the country have been laid off, she says.

Whether layoffs occur at MVRMC depends on the success the hospital has marketing its services, she says. "But I do know there is always a position for a well-prepared and competent person."

Nurses will need to be more competent because they will care only for those patients "who are very, very ill" in the future, she believes.

"Nursing will be more technically oriented.

We won't have the recuperating patient, who we have to comb their hair and walk them down the hall. We'll be doing I.V.'s and medical procedures on a high level."

Recovering patients will be cared for in their homes with the help of visiting nurses, Atwood says. And more responsibility for the patient's care will fall on the family and volunteers, she says, although MVRMC is still considering whether to start a home program.

As family and community take more of the responsibility of health care, nurses will be needed to show them how to care for patients and how to be responsible for their own health.

She is planning to offer more classes, taught by nurses, on first aid and child care, some in conjunction with the College of Southern Idaho nursing department, to make residents wiser consumers of health care.

"In the past, people have been led to believe they needed to come to the emergency room for everything that goes wrong. That's too costly. It's going to be nurses who teach people they should put on a Band-Aid and wipe up the blood — it's not as serious as they think."

Nurses also will be accepting more responsibility as teachers within the hospital, especially as patients spend fewer days recuperating from surgery and illnesses in the hospital.

"They need some how-to's. Patients in the hospital need to know to do this or do that when they go home. In the past, that has been left up to the physicians. But they don't have the time."

Nurses need to take the responsibility to explain what a person should eat, how much they can move around and what to expect from the drugs they will take, Atwood says.

Nurses also will be dealing more with ethical issues in the future, she predicts, and she plans to start an ethics committee at the hospital.

"The dollars spent on the last two weeks of life exceed most other hospital costs," Atwood says. "It's heretics that the patient may not

Wendell council head resigns

WENDELL — The City Council president in Wendell has resigned.

Thursday night, council members accepted the resignation of Bob Thackeray, who has been a council member for eight years.

"There's no reason," Thackeray commented. "It's just a matter of conflicts of time."

He explained that being a county commissioner and a city councilman is not working out because both jobs take a lot of time.

The resignation will be effective March 8.

Girls State finalists to compete

TWIN FALLS — Twelve Twin Falls High School juniors will compete for selection as Girls State delegates at 1:30 p.m. Sunday at the First United Presbyterian Church in Twin Falls.

The 12 are: Holly Reynolds, Melanie Lamborn, Sheri Nino, Liz Adams, Sandy Gillette, Tracy Kelly, Betsy Moffitt, April Block, Jennifer Hovey, Garryn Crowley, Connie Moynaux and Tammy Krause.

The public is invited to the competition, from which five delegates will be selected. It is being sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary.

Refreshments will be served.

The 38th session of Girls State will be held at Northwest Nazarene College at Nampa, starting June 17.

BID board member quits

TWIN FALLS — Joe Goodrich has resigned his seat on the board of the downtown Twin Falls Business Improvement District.

At a board meeting Tuesday, Goodrich said he is moving his business, Eastern Idaho Diesel, out of the district, and will no longer be eligible to serve, according to Chris Valence, the district's coordinator.

Goodrich's seat on the board will be taken by first alternate Earl Faulkner, the owner of The Paris. Paul Fee from Jensen's Jewelers will move from second alternate to first alternate.

TWIN FALLS — Parents can treat their children to a night of fun this evening, while they have the night off, at another "youth overnighiter" at the Magic Valley YFCA, at 1711 Elizabeth Blvd. in Twin Falls.

The program is open to the public. Children 5 to 12 can be dropped off at the YFCA at 7:30 p.m. today and picked up by 9 a.m. Saturday.

Activities will include a movie; swimming; free video games, tumbling and gym hockey. A dinner snack and light breakfast will be served.

The fee is $5 per child. A swimming suit, towel and sleeping bag should be brought.

To register or for more information, call 733-4384.

Clarification

TWIN FALLS — An article in Wednesday's Times-News reported that Penny Dalton, the director of the Magic Valley Easter Seal Center in Twin Falls, will resign at the end of this month.

However, Dalton said Wednesday that she is not resigning. Her job has been discontinued due to funding cutbacks, she said.

On sex charges Ex-vet has back-to-back hearings

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Former Twin Falls veterinarian Charles Manners who has been charged with sexually molesting a 10-year-old girl last summer in Pocatello was bound over to district court there on Thursday.

In addition, Manners is scheduled to go to court today in Twin Falls on charges that he allegedly raped the Pocatello victim's 9-year-old sister in June in Twin Falls County.

The mother and alleged victim testified at Thursday's preliminary hearing in Sixth District Magistrate Court in Pocatello, according to Greg

Manners is charged with sexual abuse of a minor for an alleged incident that occurred in July.

The outcome of the Bannock County case will not affect any strategy Fuller had planned for today's preliminary hearing in Fifth District Magistrate Court in Twin Falls, he said.

"We're talking about two different cases. Obviously, we have twice as much to do now."

Fuller said he expects no defenses witnesses will be called for today's hearing, at which Manners will face three counts of rape and one count of having lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor under 16.

Manners originally had been charged in both counties with lewd and lascivious conduct. But the charge in Bannock County and three of the charges in Twin Falls County later were amended because of a recent federal court ruling that questioned the constitutionality of the state's lewd-and-lascivious conduct law.

Manners is free on bond in both counties.

BOISE (AP) — Dan Adamson, pleads to run a positive campaign, is declining to directly discuss the legal problems facing U.S. Rep. George Hansen, the man he wants to take the Republican nomination from this year.

"Everyone is innocent in this country until proven guilty, and that's where my opponent lies now," the Jerome County prosecutor told the Idaho Press Club on Thursday.

Hansen, a veteran lawmaker who will face a Democratic challenger if he gets past Adamson, is scheduled to go on trial March 19 in federal district court in Washington, D.C., on charges of filing false personal financial disclosure statements. He has denied those charges.

But Adamson said, "I'm people keep talking about it out there — and they're talking about it — I think we have some negative name recognition going on."

That should work to his advantage in pressing his uphill campaign, Adamson said Thursday. And while he is yet to become a household name in southern Idaho, "people are starting to know who Dan Adamson is," he said.

"All indications are that most people are tired of doing anything in furtherance of Congressman Hansen," Adamson said, contending some are even "embarrassed by him; they think he's ineffective; and they're tired of apologizing for him."

Still, Adamson, 32, said he believes it likely will cost $120,000 to $130,000 to defeat Hansen, 30 to 40 percent more than he originally had estimated. He said $50,000 of that will come from his personal savings.

"We're exactly where we wanted to be at this time," he said.

The regional competition was sponsored by the Magic Valley chapter of the Idaho Society of Professional Engineers. Teams from 17 Magic Valley schools competed in the written and oral competition.

Maria Scofield, a Jerome teacher of eighth-grade mathematics and pre-algebra, coached the winning team.

On the team were seventh-graders Pam Van Zante and Clinton Powell, and eighth-graders Glen Leavitt and David Jackson.

The Jerome students had the top scores in written, team, individual and oral competition, Scofield said.

want. There are ethical questions of when to stop providing care. We don't know when to stop or whose decision it is."

Nurses spend more time with patients than doctors do and should have a say in ethical decisions, she says.

As nurses take on more responsibility in all areas, they will need more training. MVRMC has put a stop on most travel now, so Atwood says she plans to bring seminars to the hospital, instead of sending nurses to seminars.

She also plans to start a mentor program at the hospital — to pair experienced nurses with recent nursing graduates and new employees. The new nurses can benefit from the guidance and teaching of the experienced nurses, she says.

And the experienced nurses should get a shot of self-esteem from acting as mentors, she says. Atwood also plans to draw on their experience to make decisions at the hospital.

Couples with increased responsibilities, that should make them feel they are valuable employees and solve morale problems, she says.

Atwood replaces Jill Chestnut, who retired from the hospital this fall. Atwood served as director of nursing at MVRMC in the early '60s, but then moved to California to earn a master's degree in nursing at the University of California at Berkeley and a doctorate in leadership and organization from the University of San Francisco.

Rutledge says both the students and the community have been hurt by the crimes. The money that had been donated for the equipment and the activities "has to be raised again," he said.

That's the aggravating thing. The people have been really good about raising money. Then, someone comes along and steals it."

The thefts really hurt because the school has a small budget and cannot afford to readily replace a lot of the items, Rutledge says.

Gail Jones, the president of the Hollister Booster Club, says the group will help out if possible to provide some funds to replace the missing computers.

Burley downs Jerome, 62-45

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Put a star beside Scott Barrett's name and move the Burley Bobcats to within one victory of a spot in the state A-2 basketball playoffs.

Barrett was the offensive and defense glue that let the Bobcats erase the memory of two regular seasons losses to Jerome and beat the Tigers 62-45 in the Fourth District A-2 tournament Thursday night.

Earlier, the Wood River Wolverines pulled away from Buhl's Indians in the closing quarter to stay alive in the loser bracket 58-47.

Wood River and Jerome will go about eliminating each other 8-p.m. today at College of Southern Idaho's gymnasium.

Burley 62, Jerome 45
Jerome Coach Ben Allen knew things weren't going too well almost from the outset.

His Tigers tended toward a running game with the Bobcats and in those instances the advantages are all Burley's.

"We let them get off to a good start," Allen said. "The first two times we were able to keep them from getting away fast and that was the difference. We showed pretty good patience the first couple-three times down the floor but when the shot didn't go in, we became too impatient."

For the second straight tournament game, senior Dan Egbert started the fireworks by getting Burley's first six points. And from that point on the Bobcats were visibly concentrating on getting the ball to top gun Greg Boyd.

"Although he missed a few and had to settle for four in the first quarter, Boyd warmed up with 10 second-quarter points and helped the Bobcats build a 27-17 lead."

The last time Jerome had a good look at the victory came in the opening two minutes of the second quarter — Barrett hit six straight to cut the deficit to 27-23. But over the next six minutes, the Tigers struggled with just one bucket — from Gary Hulley — while Burley cranked up the break and pushed in 14, highlighted by a pretty drive and left-handed bucket by Barrett.

After that Burley went to a patient offense and feasted at the foul line. Jerome, getting three-pointers from Shawn Black, Jeff Barnham and Prairie, got to within eight with three minutes to play but Ryan Hull, Egbert, Rich Ralphs and Barrett hit free throws that let Burley pad the lead.

Barrett did a good job in running the offense and Burley's patience against Jerome's press nullified that ploy. Coach Gary Swan had Barrett on the backside of the 1-3-1 zone extensively to hover the wings but most often to hover near Hulle.

Wood River 59, Buhl 47
It was, in the estimation of Buhl Coach Wayne Humphreys, "probably their best game of the year. The kids played well. I was pleased." But it wasn't enough as lanky Dan Wells tanked 20 points to help Wood River get past this one.

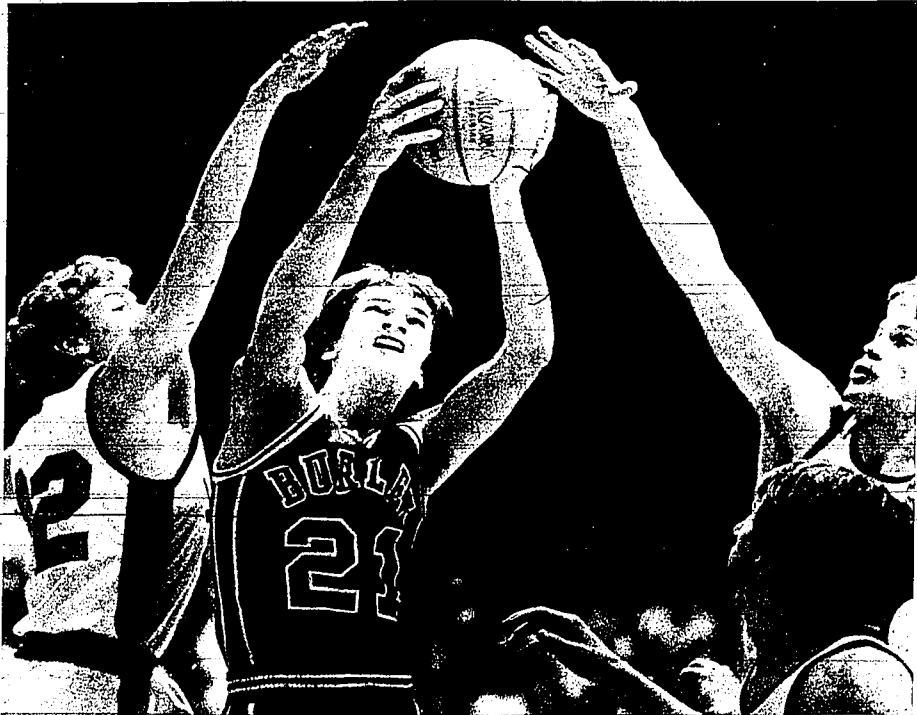

Mike Crowley's opening five points perhaps gave Buhl the idea it could compete in this one. The Indians went 11 minutes without a field goal their last time out. But with the score tied at 5-5, the Indians refused to wilt.

The entire first half was a succession of ties and lead changes. A three-point play by Rob Pierce and a Bob Vincent bucket staked Buhl to its biggest lead at 24-20 late in the second half. But Dale Karst and Wells pulled the Wolverines back to within one at intermission.

Buhl's shooting started to unwind in the late third quarter when Wood River hit a flurry. Leading 36-35, the Wolverines started the pull-away when Wells hit a free throw, missed the second and Bryan Rutter followed it in. D.J. McMurdo hit a bank shot and came right back with a steal and feed to Karst for a quarter-closing crippler.

Rutter opened the final period with two more charities and the Indians were at least eight behind the rest of the night. Wood River's lead crested at 56-42.

Gooding, Shoshone thrive in tourney

WENDELL — The Gooding Senators and Shoshone Indians remained alive Thursday night in the losers' bracket of the boys A-3 Fourth District basketball tournament.

Gooding, receiving a scintillating effort from Todd Simis and strong work inside from Swen Swenson, trounced Wendell 75-58 while Shoshone needed a three-point bomb from Charles Sandy at the buzzer to nip Valley, 69-67.

The tourney continues tonight with Kimberly facing Filer at 6:30 and Glenns Ferry confronting Declo at 8:15. On Saturday Gooding will play the Glenns/Ferry-Declo loser and Shoshone meets the Kimberly-Filer loser.

In opening-round junior varsity action Thursday Declo stomped

Kimberly 96-82 and Gooding toppled Shoshone, 73-55.

Gooding 75, Wendell 56
The Senators trailed 10-7 after one quarter but ravaged the Trojans 25-11 in the second period and never looked back.

"We played good, solid ball," Gooding Coach Don Fowler said of his team's second-quarter performance. "We worked the ball inside and we got quite a few baskets off our transition game."

well offensively," Fowler said. Shoshone 69, Valley 67
As the score indicated, it was a nutty finish, featuring plenty of lead changes.

Shoshone had a 66-65 edge and the ball with 30 seconds to go but missed a layup. Valley rebounded and called time-out with 20 ticks left.

The Vikings worked the ball around until seven seconds remained and missed a shot, but Mike Sorrells rebounded and drew a foul. He hit both free throws with four seconds remaining, giving Valley a 67-66 advantage.

The Indians then designed a play to give Sandy, who had 18 of his game-high 22 points after intermission, the ball. It worked, as Sandy threw in a 35-foot bank shot at the buzzer.

CSI cast in unusual role

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho will be cast in an unusual role Saturday night when the Golden Eagles host the North Idaho Cardinals.

After failing to beat the Eagles on Saturday, the Cardinals no longer have a chance to host the regional tournament. But this time around — as part of a revenge factor — the Eagles can be spoilers.

The situation is down to simple in the region now. Ricks has one loss with two games left to play. One is against Treasure Valley and the Vikings figure to be favored there. By winning out, the best CSI can do is finish with two losses and a tie means the tournament goes to Ricks.

But Ricks will be rooting very hard for CSI because North Idaho still could win the regional host designation by beating the Eagles here Saturday and Ricks in Coeur d'Alene next week. A North Idaho split would favor Ricks, too. Since North Idaho has hosted regional and Ricks never has. Regional by-laws resolves ties by awarding the tournament to the team having had the most wins recently.

Coach Fred Trenkle isn't particularly happy to please Ricks, but he wants his Eagles to win the game — for two major reasons. First, the Eagles are coming off their poorest showing of the season and have shown some inconsistency offensively for the past few games. Second, if the tournament winds up at Ricks, CSI will open against these same Cardinals the first night and there's no use making any future opponent confident.

"North Idaho has talent. They are a good ball team," said Trenkle. "We shot 52 percent from the field and 73 percent at the line and still lost to them up there."

"But I really don't know exactly what to expect from them because they definitely are in a position to win the tournament site," he continued.

"Up there they played a very good half-court game against us, a high-post series with good movement off of it. The put the pay on New Zealand (6-9 John Stevens) up high and he can shoot it from there. But before that first game a lot of people told me North Idaho had a very good transition game. They didn't show any of that to us; just the half-court game. They played a slowdown against Ricks at Rexburg (39-31 final score). So we have to be prepared for three things — transition, half-court or slowdown. The option is with Coach Rolfe Williams," Trenkle said. "I think if we showed anything in Coeur d'Alene it's that overall we might be a little quicker. I do know if they come out in a slowdown, we're coming out after them. Ricks didn't apply a lot of pressure against it."

The CSI women will share the spotlight, hosting Snow College in a non-conference battle beginning at 5:45 p.m.

Coach Lloyd Hardesty and his Eagles are out of contention for the regional tournament site and are trying to build some momentum for their tournament.

Court favors running back in swap from NFL to USFL

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A federal judge Thursday ruled against the National Football League's Buffalo Bills and for their former running back, Joe Cribbs, who will now be allowed to play for the United States Football League's Birmingham Stallions.

U.S. District Court Judge John T. Elvin said the Bills failed to show that the "right of first refusal" clause in Cribbs' contract "means something other than I said."

"In Birmingham, Cribbs said he was 'happy with the decision,' but added, 'I can't really say I was surprised about the ruling.'"

"I felt we would get this ruling," he told WKBN-TV. "It was just a matter of time."

Cribbs said he was "glad it's over. I can get on with my life and not have to worry about the courts."

The clause only gave the Bills the right to match another offer for the All-Pro's services if there was no collective bargaining agreement between the league and its players when Cribbs' contract expired Feb. 1, or if that agreement didn't contain a right of first refusal clause, Elvin ruled.

Since there is a collective bargaining agreement in effect and it does contain that provision, the judge ruled the conditions didn't exist that would have allowed the Bills to match the Stallions offer.

Elvin conducted an unusual court-room briefing for reporters because his decision, though "etched in stone," had not been formally filed with the court clerk.

"Everything is down in writing but has not been manufactured by my secretary yet," he said, adding that he briefed reporters because of the interest in the case. He said he expected to officially file his decision Friday.

Bills attorney Ralph Halpern said that, "Until we see his decision and the basis for it, we are in no position to comment on an appeal."

Elvin said the Bills have 30 days after the decision is posted by the court clerk to file an appeal, which would be heard by the U.S. Court of Appeals, Second District, in New York.

The judge said "a significant part of my decision" was based on New York state contract law, which generally holds that the party that drew the contract is responsible for any ambiguities in it.

In this case, that is the Bills, who had tried to establish during the five days of testimony that the clause was inserted to protect the team from any professional football league.

But Cribbs' lawyers presented testimony from Cribbs' former agents, Dr. Jerry Argovitz and Gene Burrough, who said they agreed to put the clause in the contract because the Bills said they were afraid there may not be a collective bargaining agreement in effect when Cribbs' contract expired.

Royals players free after jail sentences

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Willie Wilson and Jerry Martin, two of four 1983 Kansas City Royals serving sentences on cocaine convictions, were released from prison Thursday, nine days ahead of schedule.

Charlotte Barron, the executive assistant at the Federal Correctional Institute in Fort Worth, said Wilson and Martin requested that the time of their release, and their destination not be disclosed.

An Associated Press photographer was told the two players already had left when he arrived at the prison at 7 a. m. CST.

The players began serving their 90-day sentences Dec. 5 after pleading guilty in a Kansas City, Kan., federal court to misdemeanor charges of trying to obtain cocaine. According to Barron, the two were released nine days early for good behavior and "extra good time for their work."

Two other 1983 Royals began serving similar sentences at the federal prison after Wilson and Martin. But pitcher Vida Blue, a former Cy Young Award winner, and first baseman Willie Aikens were not scheduled for release until late March or early April. Prison officials said neither player has received time off for good behavior.

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn suspended Wilson, Martin and Aikens from baseball for one year and said his successor could review the suspensions May 15. None can play in spring exhibition games, except perhaps informal intrasquad games, but they are allowed to practice with a team.

The commissioner's office was asked by federal authorities not to investigate Blue until their investigation was finished. A spokesman from the commissioner's office said Thursday that the federal investigation has now been completed and that Blue's case was now being looked at by investigators for baseball.

Wilson and Martin were expected to appear at hearings in New York next week in conjunction with a grievance filed by the Major League Baseball Players Association. The grievance asks that Kuhn be required to show just cause for the suspensions. William Martin's attorney, William Simpson, said the former Royals outfielder probably will report soon to the New York Mets' training camp to try out as a free agent.

"He's very hopeful to be playing baseball this time next week," Simpson said. "We are very close to an agreement. In fact, we have both sides consider a verbal agreement. We just don't have a signed contract."

Wilson, an All-Star outfielder, has been retained by the Royals and was expected to report to training camp at Fort Myers, Fla., after he visited his family in suburban Kansas City, team officials said.

"Willie and I talked about it when I visited him last month," said Royals General Manager John Schuerholz.

But Dietrich cut down on its turnovers and Hubert warmed up with 10 third-quarter points to meet ahead by 11. The fourth quarter saw the Blue Devils outscore the Redkins 20-10. It was just the opposite for Camas County.

The Musers hit Richfield with a full-court press that caused several player turnovers and Brandee Gormley held the Musers feast on them with 11 first-quarter points. Richfield steeled in the second period to stay within seven at intermission but Camas County hit nine of 13 charities. Throughout the second half Camas County slowly increased its margin.

Gormley wound up with 22 points, mostly from the outside but also picking up some fast break points. Justin Bell led Richfield with 10.

N. Arizona dumps Broncos

By RICK VELOTTA
Special to The Times-News

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. — Andy Hurd scored 30 points as Northern Arizona University pulled out a thrilling 79 Big Sky Conference victory over the Boise State Broncos Thursday night.

BSU had a chance to win the game, but senior forward Ron Grossart turned the ball over on an offensive foul with two seconds left.

The Lumberjacks also had a crucial mistake late in the game, as a lane violation during a free throw with 19 seconds remaining gave BSU its chance to steal the victory.

The teams waged a see-saw battle through the middle of both halves as the lead changed hands a total of 22 times. BSU (MAU) played very well. BSU Coach Bobby Dye said, "We had individuals play well, but we didn't react well on loose balls. That was the difference."

The Broncos, playing without Big Sky Conference scoring leader Vince Hinchen, who had the flu, were led by Frank Jackson's 17 points. Hinchen, who had 14 points and a team-high eight rebounds.

NAU, which led 38-35 at halftime, also got 12 points from Jeff Altman and 11 from former College of Southern Idaho forward Mike Elliott.

The Lumberjacks improved to 5-7 in the conference, 12-12 overall. BSU slipped to 14-10, 5-6 in the Big Sky.

Nevada-Reno 74, Idaho 67

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Junior guard Curtis High scored 29 points to lead Nevada-Reno to a 74-67 victory over Idaho in a Big Sky Conference game Thursday night.

High, who also had three steals and four assists and shot 14-21 from the floor and helped Nevada-Reno to 39-36 lead at the half.

Idaho led 44-43 at 16 minutes into the second half, but a three-point play by Nevada-Reno center Quentin Stephens gave the Wolfpack a 46-44 lead.

Frank Garza led Idaho with 22 points, and Ulf Spears added 16 points.

Nevada-Reno moved to a 5-7 conference record and is 12-13 overall. Idaho fell to 3-8 in conference play and 8-16 overall.

Colorado State 70, BYU 65

FOUNTAIN COLLEGE, Colo. (AP) — Mike Grey scored 32 points and Brian Strong added 22 as Colorado State upset Brigham Young, 70-65, Thursday night in a Western Athletic Conference game.

Brigham Young, in second place in the WAC behind ninth-ranked Texas-El Paso, fell to 9-3 in the league and 16-8 overall. Colorado State remains in a tie with Wyoming for fourth place in the WAC with a 7-4 conference record and a 13-12 season mark.

Grey scored 16 of his game-high 23 points in the second half, including 10 during a Colorado State scoring surge late in the game that erased a five-point deficit.

Brigham Young, led by Devyn Durrant's 13 first-half points, broke to a slim, 38-37 halftime lead.

Montana 61, Idaho State 58

POCATELLO, AP — Larry Krystkowiak scored 18 points Thursday to boost Montana to a 61-58 Big Sky Conference victory over Idaho State.

The Bengals used a zone defense to limit Krystkowiak to just one field goal and six points during his first half.

Trailing 59-58 with 32 seconds remaining, ISU worked the clock below the 10-second mark before Nelson Peterson attempted a shot that went out of bounds.

Marc Glass was immediately fouled on an in-bounds play and hit both ends of a one-and-one with two seconds remaining to tie the victory.

Montana improved its Big Sky record to 9-3 and its overall record to 21-4. ISU fell to 4-7 and 10-18.

Weber State 68, Montana State 59

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Weber State forward Randy Worsler scored 15 points to lead the Wildcats to a 68-59 victory over Montana State Thursday night as Weber remains on top in the Big Sky Conference.

John Price scored 11 points, all in the second half, and Greg Jones added 10 for the Wildcats.

The victory raised Weber State's record to 9-2 in the conference and 19-6 overall. Montana State fell to 6-6 and 12-13.

Oregon State 69, Arizona State 58

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — A.C. Green poured in 29 points and Charlie Siltan scored 13 of his 17 in the second half as 20th-ranked Oregon State held on to beat Arizona State 69-58 in a Pacific-10 Conference game Thursday night.

The Beavers, up 25-22 at halftime behind Green's 13-point effort, watched the Sun Devils tie the score four times in the second half — the last at 41-41 on Chris Beasley's jumper with 9:17 left.

Siltan scored six quick points to give the Beavers a 52-47 lead before Arizona State closed the gap to 52-51 with a 12-point run.

Oregon State then reeled off seven of the next nine points, with Darryl Flowers getting four of them, for a 59-53 cushion with 2:10 to go.

Duke 73, N.C. State 70 (OT)

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Dan Meagher hit two insurance free throws with two seconds left in overtime Thursday night to lead 14th-ranked Duke to a 73-70 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over North Carolina State.

The Blue Devils were forced into the second straight overtime when the Wolfpack's Ernie Myers fired in a 15-foot jumper with nine seconds left in regulation to tie the score at 68.

With the score tied at 70, Dukes Jay Bilas, playing most of the second half with four fouls, hit the front end of a 1-4 minute, 1:41 remaining.

North Carolina State worked the perimeter for the game-winning shot, but Anthony "Spud" Webb missed a short jumper in the lane.

Meagher, a 60.7 percent free-throw shooter, added both ends of the bonus to clinch Duke's eighth straight victory.

Washington 54, California 51

SEATTLE, AP — Senior guard Alvin Vaughn's 18-foot jumper with 3:26 to play snapped a 47-47 tie and the University of Washington pulled away to defeat the California Bears 54-51 in Pacific-10 Conference action Thursday night.

The victory kept 18th-ranked Washington, now 12-2 in the conference and 18-5 overall, tied with Oregon State for first place in the Pac-10. California is 4-9 in the conference and 11-12 overall.

After Vaughn's jumper, freshman guard Jack Damon sank two free throws with 2:10 to play for a 51-47 lead.

The outcome spoiled a sparkling outing by the Vikings' Marlin Mussmann, who poured in 21 points and contributed to the Vikings' first-half lead.

Paralyzed athlete battles depression

USFL considering further expansion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Football League, which increased in number from 12 to 18 teams in the off-season, is considering further expansion, as early as next year, league President Chet Simmons said Thursday.

"We may lose some teams to attrition but we are studying expansion," Simmons said.

Simmons listed Indianapolis and Seattle as "early targets" for expansion with Dallas, Cleveland, Kansas City and Southern Florida as other areas expressing interest in joining a USFL team.

Simmons said that New York remains a target for the league, although any team would need the consent of New Jersey Generals owner Donald Trump before locating there.

"I think it would be a great rivalry with teams in New York and New Jersey," Simmons said.

Discounting critics who say additional expansion will merely dilute an already inferior product, Simmons said: "Football experts say there is plenty of talent. I am not concerned about that."

Admitting that much of the league's expansion is tied to building a wider television audience, Simmons said the league is interested in strengthening itself in the Midwest and into putting its first team in the Pacific Northwest.

The league's television contracts with ABC and ESPN expire at the end of the season.

Under terms of the original two-year, $20 million contract with ABC, the network can pick up an option to televise league games for the next two years.

Indianapolis, which is reportedly trying to lure the National Football League's Colts from Baltimore, has just completed an $80 million, 63,000-seat domed stadium.

The USFL has talked to Seattle officials concerning the availability of the Kingdom. Home of the NFL's Seattle Seahawks, the domed stadium seats 65,000.

New York officials are anxious to place a team in New York with the Jets announcing, they would leave Shea Stadium to join the Giants in New Jersey.

"Shea Stadium or not we are looking at New York," Simmons said.

The USFL, which is to $30 million in its inaugural campaign, added six teams in the off-season—expanding to Pittsburgh, Jacksonville, San Antonio, Houston, Oklahoma and Memphis.

Each team was required to pay a $6.5 million entry fee including $2.5 million this year and the remainder over the next three years.

HARMARVILLE, Pa. (AP) — A nervous Gabe Rivera, the Pittsburgh Steelers' No. 1 draft choice last year who was permanently paralyzed from the mid-chest down four months ago, said Thursday he has come through depression to an acceptance of his wheelchair-bound future.

"It was a hard time accepting it, but I think I've done a pretty good job," said Rivera, 22, holding his first news conference since his car accident Oct. 29.

"I know there's hope and I hope for a cure in the future and I hope of walking one day. But realistically, this is the way I'm going to be from now on, until I die. I can accept that," Rivera said, sitting in a wheelchair behind a bank of microphones at the Harmarville Rehabilitation Center, where he has been undergoing therapy since Nov. 23.

The former defensive lineman was thrown through the rear window of his sports car after it collided with another car on Pittsburgh's North Side. He suffered a crushed spinal cord, a broken bone and nerve damage in his right shoulder, broken ribs, a bruised lung and bruised heart.

Police later charged Rivera with drunken driving, reckless driving and speeding.

Rivera said before the news conference he would not answer any questions about the accident or the events surrounding it.

He admitted to being nervous and bit his lip several times during questioning.

Rivera said he did not dwell on the negative parts of his accident, but preferred to concentrate on what he could accomplish in therapy.

"I think my lowest spot might have been when I was lying in bed in the hospital and when I finally realized I couldn't get up. But I don't think about the low spots. Why get down and be sorry for yourself when you can enjoy life the way it should be?" he said. "What are you going to do, lie around and do nothing?"

Attending the news conference were Rivera's wife, Kim, and his son, Timothy, who was born Nov. 11 while Rivera was in a Pittsburgh hospital. They have been frequent visitors at the rehabilitation center, located 13 miles north of Pittsburgh.

Rivera said his son's birth "helped me through a lot of the state of depression at first."

Rivera was known as "Senior Sack" when he played college football at Texas Tech. At 6-foot-2 and 232 pounds, he was quick enough to catch running backs and quarterbacks, and he even was a pinch runner on his college baseball team.

His weight has dropped to 228 pounds since the accident.

After the news conference, he posed for photographers, lifting weights and hitting a punching bag in the center's gymnasium. His therapy program, which he is scheduled to complete next month, has included a range of motion exercises.

Colts owner eyes Indianapolis as new home

ROBERT IRSAY
Thinking of a move

BALTIMORE (AP) — Indianapolis is the latest city that Colts owner Robert Irsay has his eyes on if he decides to move the team from Baltimore. Mayor William Donald Schaefer says.

Earlier this winter, Irsay reportedly planned to move his National Football League team Phoenix or New York.

But Schaefer, who met with Irsay on Tuesday at the Baltimore-Washington International Airport, said he had a "very strong feeling" that the Colts will remain in Baltimore even though Irsay has refused to give a commitment to play here next season and has delayed the sale of 1984-85 season tickets.

Schaefer said Irsay told him at the unpublished meeting that he had received "fantastic" offers from other cities.

At the heart of a dispute in Baltimore is Irsay's desire for improvements at Memorial Stadium but his refusal to sign a long-term lease there, as requested by the state legislature. He also has been upset about low season ticket sales in recent years. Only 24,000 were sold last season.

"He didn't rule out signing the lease, but he didn't say he would sign either," the mayor said Wednesday.

Schaefer also said he "asked" Irsay "point blank" whether he was talking with officials from other cities.

"He (Irsay) said: 'You know I am. They've made offers to me. They're fantastic,'" Schaefer said. "And I believe him, because I know what I'd offer a football team."

Indianapolis has just completed an $80 million, 63,000-seat domed stadium and is seeking an NFL team.

But Kay Browning, an aide to Indianapolis Mayor William H. Hudnut III, said that as far as she knew, Irsay has not talked with other representatives of the Colts. "There is nothing new to report on our getting a team," she said.

Mark Lubbers, an aide to Indiana Gov. Robert D. Orr, was even stronger in his denial.

"We haven't had any contact with the Baltimore franchise and as far as I know, neither has the mayor's staff. I think it's more a rumor than anything else," Lubbers said.

Alabama tests team for drugs

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — The University of Alabama has begun testing all student-athletes for traces of drugs, a program that reportedly led to the suspension of three Crimson Tide basketball players.

Athletic Director Ray Perkins disclosed Thursday that the drug-testing effort has begun but said he felt "we do not have a drug problem at Alabama."

The Tuscaloosa News, however, quoted unidentified sources Thursday as saying the recent suspension of three basketball players — Buck Johnson, Eric Richardson and Jerome White — came after three separate tests indicated the presence of drugs in their bodies.

Basketball Coach Wimp Sanderson declined to discuss the reasons for the suspensions.

Johnson, a 6-foot-7 forward and the team's leading scorer, was suspended for two games but was reinstated this week. Richardson, a guard who leads the Southeastern Conference in assists, was suspended indefinitely on Wednesday.

White, a forward who was suspended in January, is a reserve forward.

Perkins said drug testing program will require weekly urine tests of all athletes, coaches and managers, male and female — when their sports are in season.

"This is being done programwide to do away with the possibility of any drug use," Perkins said.

Perkins said his obligation to the parents of the athletes he recruit to create an environment in which their sons or daughters will be able to "be better people," he said. "And I intend to see that we fulfill a commitment that every effort is being taken to see that this is done."

"If I were the parent of an athlete today and I asked a college coach if his program was giving drug tests, I would hope, if I were the parent, that he would say 'yes.'"

"I have a very good feeling that we do not have a drug problem at Alabama," Perkins said.

Some schools, including Auburn University, have used drug tests for some sports, but Perkins said that as far as he knows Alabama is the first to require it of all athletes.

Perkins said he would like to see the National Collegiate Athletic Association make the tests mandatory for all schools.

University President Jeb Thomas said he supports the tests and plans to discuss the program at the next meeting of the Southeastern Conference Executive Committee to see if others are involved in testing.

"The issue of athletes and drugs is something that's beginning, nationally," as indicated by the recent Olympics, Thomas said. "We've decided on an experimental basis to run similar tests as a 'broad policy program.' It's not aimed at any particular sport or any particular problem."

'Right Stuff' a big salute

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

Review

TWIN FALLS — Many were called, but few had the right stuff. The movie, "The Right Stuff," is a space tapestry of the history of space exploration, from the baby steps of civilian test pilots to the burgeoning technology of NASA's Mercury program.

Based on the Tom Wolfe book, the film is an episodic, semi-comic tale of the men who had the right stuff. The story begins on the lonely deserts of California, as the military scouts a grimy local bar for a pilot to guide their new aircraft through the sound barrier.

Their eyes fall on war hero Chuck Yeager, played by Sam Shepard. Yeager, as history tells, became the fastest man alive that day, but an American itch to move faster and farther was right behind him. The American drive — symbolized by a smoke-filled room of politicians — focuses on pointing rockets upward, spurred by the Russian achievements in space.

So, the race is on to find an American team who will take that rocket to the neverland of technology. After a series of grueling and funny tests, seven are chosen — the Mercury team. Among them is Gordon "Gordo" Cooper, portrayed by Dennis Quaid. Cooper makes up in confidence and likeable spirit what he seems to lack in depth. He acts as if he invented the right stuff.

Then there's Alan Shepard, played with grit and humor by Scott Glenn. Shepard is a Navy pilot who perks up at the word danger. He also does terrible impressions of 1950s comedian Jose Jimenez.

Marine hero John Glenn is the seemingly well-spoken All-American boy but for one thing — sincerity and strength. As Glenn, Ed Harris exhibits a tenderness and dimension, especially in scenes with his wife Annie, who is shy because of a speech problem.

Director Phillip Kaufman doesn't simply unfold an epic documentary around these men. He conceals a combustible fusion of the solemnity of risk and relationships with comic relief — much needed by the men who put their bodies on the line.

Moreover, the place-segment images alongside the unyielding metals of computers and hard-baited non-nonsense of the German scientists.

At the outset of the film, Yeager arrives on horseback and looks at the aircraft that seems to beckon him to a new mode of transportation. When he smashes the barrier, he joyfully howls at the primitive moon.

During a barbecue, Cooper's wife confesses her fears and agonies to the other pilots' wives. She looks out the window to see Cooper holding up a burned hot dog — a grisly reminder of what failure could do to her man.

On the ground, the men and their wives have to survive celebrity, which is sometimes as scary as their task in space. During a Texas-style party thrown by Vice President Lyndon Johnson, a surly speculator asks Shepard, "Which one are you?" Shepard tells his identity, but the man replies, "Glenn's the one I want to meet."

The cast of actors are all good. Shepard deserves his Oscar nomination as the rock-solid Yeager. He is rugged without being farcical. And, within the man is a soft center of vulnerability. Yeager becomes the spiritual father of the men who follow.

"The Right Stuff" is a brash, energetic, flag-waving salute to the dreams and to the men who had the right stuff to accomplish their goals.

It's a glorious experience that allows you to again feel the newness and excitement of that first countdown.

Actors dust off 'Don Juan' scenes

TWIN FALLS — "Don Juan in Hell," a dream sequence written into the third act of George Bernard Shaw's four-act play, "Man and Superman," will be presented Saturday and Sunday at the Renaissance Academy of the Arts.

The show features H. Paul Kliss as Don Juan and Aldrich Bowler as the devil.

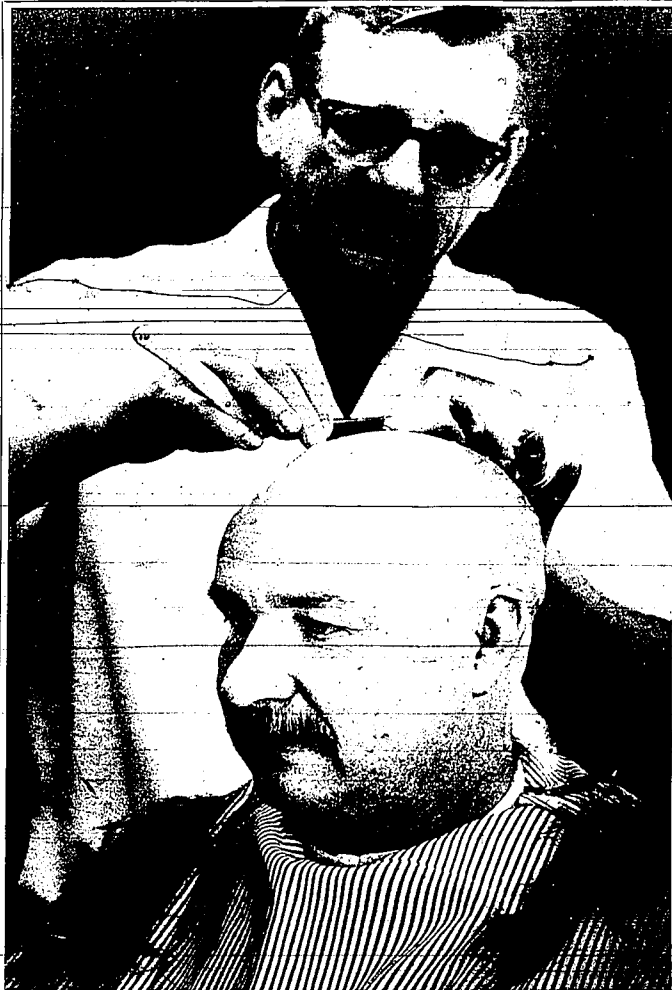

Both of the Hagerman residents played the same parts in an earlier staging of the production put on by the former Antique Festival Theater.

Also appearing in this weekend's show will be Tony Mammen as the Statue and Di Bowler as Dana Anna.

Mammen, who is with the College of Southern Idaho's drama department, recently directed "Fiddler on the Roof" and is currently preparing "1984" for the stage.

Di Bowler was director of the original Don Juan production in 1974 and is also directing the current show. • See DON JUAN on Page C2

Show biz shave

Some people will go through just about anything for show business — and Jim Latham proves it. For his role in the Dilettante's musical production of "Annie," he had his head shaved. Following in the footsteps of the likes of Albert Finney, Latham plays the role of Daddy Warbucks in the production, which opens March 9 at the College of Southern Idaho. Kelth Burgess, the barber who did the head shaving, suggested Latham might want to go out the back door, so as to not give prospective customers the notion they might end up looking like him. But Latham came prepared — he exited wearing a stocking cap. As he headed for the nearest sunlamp, he could be heard mumbling something about staying holed-up at home and missing an upcoming basketball game.

Clay, fiber mix

Herrett show
By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Clay and fiber will mix together for the upcoming Herrett Museum exhibit.

Ceramic works by Tom Martin will mingle with tapestries by Stefanie Dash Marvel to form the exhibit, "Clay and Fiber," which opens Tuesday and continues thru April 5.

Marvel plans on exhibiting five tapestries that use traditional tapestry techniques. The pieces were done on a Gobelin tapestry loom and are flat wall pieces that hang like paintings.

She'll have a few drawings for viewing, which she says "are where my designs start for my tapestries. I'll also have some woven linen pieces which are three-dimensional, open-weave fabric that hang in panels," she says, adding that they are color-coordinated in specific ways.

The smallest of these is eight-foot wide by ten-foot high.

Marvel says Idaho has had a strong influence on her work. She has lived in the Gem State for 15 years and has spent a lot of time in the back country with her husband who is an avid river-runner.

She says rivers give a mythical image of life and that she draws inspiration from the landscape of rivers.

"It especially inspires my tapestry. I feel my life and work are joined in a journey of discovery and adventure. The river is an image I use frequently in my work and it relates closely to my life in Idaho. Literally as well as spiritually. It is a metaphor for this journey. I consider my art to be a visual communication. I will tell you in my own way what I've seen and what I see."

Marvel, who has art studios in Halley and Stanley, studied at the Penland School of Crafts, the School of the Art Institute of Chicago and the University of Chicago.

She says as far back as high school she was interested in painting, drawing and sculpture, but that it was tapestry that really got her involved in the craft. While at the Art Institute in Chicago she says she spent a great deal of time in the museum.

"There were ancient textiles from Peru, American coverlets and contemporary things — textiles from all periods. I became intrigued," she says. • See EXHIBIT on Page C2

CSI troupe prepares to present stage version of '1984'

Performances by small cast on modular set to start March 1

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho's whirlwind season of stage presentations is roaring along with all the subtlety of this year's winter storms.

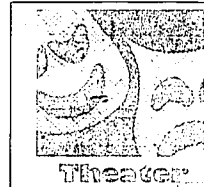

Barely a month and a half has gone by since "Fiddler on the Roof" was staged — and now the CSI troupe is already winding up its final week of rehearsals for the play, "1984."

To director Tony Mammen's relief, this time around he's only working with a handful of actors instead of the scores that filled the set during rehearsals for "Fiddler."

A complete turnaround from the last play, "1984" will be performed in room 119 of the Fine Arts Building rather than the large auditorium. A maximum of 110 can be seated for the play at one time, and that small number will guarantee a rather intimate proximity to the players.

"1984," as written by Sonia Pitt-Rivers for the stage, is a loose version of George Orwell's novel bearing the same name.

"There are some differences. It's not even worth talking about," Mammen says, while adding that the play, nevertheless, keeps the basic idea constant.

"For those who are scholars of the book, it will be interesting for them to watch the play and spot the changes," Mammen says. Forbidding to say the least, "1984" is a story where mankind as we know it is non-existent. People are stripped of their individual consciousness and subject to unrelenting propaganda, existing constantly under the chilling eye of Big Brother.

The world is in a permanent state of war — not a nuclear holocaust, just one crisis after another broadcast by state-owned newspapers and television to justify longer work hours and economic shortages.

The protagonist, Winston Smith, lives in Oceania, one of three interchangeable world powers where the individual human being has suffered assassination by government and where the Ministry of Truth rewrites history with its ever-chattering typewriters, while shredding old truths so as not to contradict the new ones.

Two-way television viewers continuously monitor citizens, suppressing not only political resistance, but seeking out any independent feeling or, God forbid, act of individualism.

"1984" is also a love story. It tests the bounds that individual humans will go to be and feel "human."

When Winston Smith is first introduced to Julia in the Ministry of Truth, he suspects her of being a member of the Thought Police. She has come to the office he works in to replace a co-worker named Withers, who has become a non-person — a nice way of saying that he has been vaporized for being an enemy of the state.

Where the novel does a convincing job of making a transition of Smith's feelings of paranoia of Julia to a love for her, Pitt-Rivers stage script falls flat. Julia, for some unknown reason, is simply in love with Smith. And when she tells him so, he falls immediately in love with her. It will

Indian artist uses contemporary twist

By DEBRA JOHNSONGELET
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Theodore B. Villa is an Indian and an artist. And, yes, his subject matter is generally Indian artifacts. But there's a twist.

The best work painted on Villa's headboards, bags and garments depict housing tracts, cars in traffic jams, or perhaps jet planes.

Villa's watercolors will be on view at the Kneeland Gallery in Ketchum until March 7.

The "time warp" illusions in his work are gentle at first. Villa's skill and his life-sized images draw the viewer closer — for the 20th century symbols to set their hook.

Here is a series of traffic symbols woven in, over there are schoolhouses, buck over here are forest service signs. All of these, from a distance, appear to be traditional Indian beadwork.

Born in Santa Barbara, Calif., Villa joined the military and found himself "an illustrator/draftsman doing no smoking signs. And I just said one day I want to make art, I want to be creative."

"I've been working in this medium, watercolor, for 22 years and I feel confident. But I still have a lot to learn," he explains with enthusiasm.

His joy in his work is contagious. When his exhibit opened last week in Ketchum, movement in the gallery became nearly impossible because of the crowd gathered around his paintings.

Dressed in an Indian ghost-dancing shirt and beaded leather moccasins, Villa seems to bask in the fascination of watching people discover the nuances of his work.

Villa was educated at the University of California in Santa Barbara and he has since taught there and at Santa Barbara City College. He also has taught workshops in the Ketchum area.

Tony Martin works with clay pottery at ISU

Exhibit

ceramics department. He earned his bachelor's degree in art from Kent State University and his master's in ceramics from Illinois State University.

Martin also studied at Murray State University. Before joining the ISU faculty in 1977, he was a member of the art department at Chadron State College in Chadron, Nebraska.

Based in New York City, Martin says he attended the High School of Music and Art, which is a carbon copy of the school used in the television production, "Fame."

"It combined music and art," he says, "and I attended the art side of the school."

At Kent State University, Martin exercised his opinion of art classes by enrolling in ceramics.

"To be honest," he says, "I enrolled in ceramics because I didn't have much money. Other art areas cost a lot — painting supplies, for instance, or metalwork supplies." He says he began to like ceramics and even made some money after the first semester.

Concerning the money, he says, "that obviously helps to motivate. And 20 years ago $5 meant you could drive all night."

About his exhibit, Martin says he'll be showing different glazes, some using wood ashes, others from leaf ash and even newspaper ash. He says the different ashes have a little influence on color but, mostly they act as fluxing agents to control heat flow.

"Wood has the highest fluxing range," he says, explaining that flux controls the glaze flow on ceramic ware. He says he adds oxides for color.

Also, Martin says he will be showing some pieces with slip trailing, a process where heavy amounts of clay are forced through a syringe to create heavy lines. He says there will be some stoneware and some porcelain, both of which are fired to 2,400 degrees Fahrenheit.

He plans on a total exhibit of 15 pieces, including some large urns that are 40 inches high by 28 inches around. He says there will be a variety of classical and functional pieces.

Martin, who claims that no one particular artist has influenced his work, says that there is a reasonable amount of interest in ceramics now while some other art forms have declined. He says this is partly because of the economics of art and the fact there's not that much of an income for most artists.

"Most who are interested in ceramics are not interested in being rich," he says. "They do what they like, not what they have to. They love their craft."

Both artists plan to attend the opening reception at 7 p.m. on Tuesday. The public is invited.

Museum hours are 9:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesdays; 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Wednesdays through Fridays, and 1 to 4:30 p.m. Saturdays.

Theater auditions set

KETCHUM — Auditions for the non-equity summer company of the Idaho Shakespeare Festival will be held at the Ketchum Old City Hall, corner of Main and Fourth streets, from 1 to 6 p.m. on Sunday, March 4.

Artistic Director, Mark Cuddy, would like to see two contrasting pieces — one Shakespearean — totaling three minutes.

Auditions are by appointment only, which can be arranged by calling 336-9221 between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m.

The 1984 season includes King Lear, The Taming of the Shrew, and the world premiere of Robin Hood. The season runs from May 26 to Aug. 19. Internships are available.

Communist party thrived in the '30s

"The Heyday of American Communism: The Depression Decade," by Harvey Klehr (Basic, $26.50) By LEE MILAZZO The Dallas Morning News

In 1938 CBS newsmen Robert Trout, reporting to a nationwide radio audience from a jammed Madison Square Garden, described yet another American political convention. Complete with cheering crowds, brass bands, and boring speeches, the extravaganza was typical of the gatherings, except for its slogan: "Communism is 20th Century Americanism."

This apparently innocent spectacle was the 10th convention of the least-known Communist Party. Incredible as it may seem today, the Communist Party was a viable political force in the United States during the 1930s. And just as surprising, thousands of Americans eagerly joined the Reds. How the party began, why it flourished briefly during the Depression decade, and why it ultimately failed are some of the many questions answered by Harvey Klehr in his brilliant "The Heyday of American Communism." Klehr's richly detailed study of this crucial, often misunderstood episode in our history deserves a wide reading. Not the least of Klehr's many accomplishments is his ability to recount and to judge these events without the slightest hint of right- or left-wing hysteria.

never heard of Marx or Lenin could see hunger and deprivation everywhere — and they were willing to follow almost anyone who would help them.

The problem for the Communists was not recruiting members — it was keeping them. Given the volatile circumstances of the times, the party should have been considerably more successful than it was. Klehr suggests several reasons for its failure. The composition of the party, with its essentially eastern, urban, minority orientation, simply did not appeal to the masses. Struggles within the party — William Foster always seemed to be battling Earl Browder, for control — were confusing, even to members. The orders from Moscow, which required total obedience, were too restrictive for all but the most dedicated.

Yet the party shifted gears so often that confusion — not commitment — seemed to reign. For years, the party line was hatred of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt because the New Deal was, in the Communist Party's words, "fascist." When it became clear that Roosevelt was a national hero, the party suddenly adopted him, too.

These are only the general outlines of Harvey Klehr's excellent book. The numerous secondary themes and countless informative incidents add up to a compelling whole which demands our attention and respect.

Olympic headaches for film industry

By BOB THOMAS The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES (AP) — This summer's Olympic Games, a likely source of excitement for most sports fans, are viewed as a potential headache for the city's most famous industry: motion pictures.

Film industry leaders are grappling with two problems: what effect the televised Games will have on the midsummer theater business, and how film production will be able to continue with traffic jams and other problems created by the Los Angeles Games.

For the first time in eight years, theater owners face the competition of two weeks (July 28-Aug. 12) of Olympic Games on television.

"You bring your best pictures out in May and June, hoping they will last through the summer," said Tom Sherak, president of distribution for 20th Century-Fox.

Some don't make it, and other films are released around July 15, he said. "I suspect there will not be as many of those midsummer releases this year because of the Olympics. "Say you're an independent producer who has spent three years and between $5 million and $10 million on a picture," Sherak said. "Would you want to take a chance that your potential audience would not stay home during the Olympics? Probably not."

Other companies appear willing to take that chance. Orion Pictures will release "Cheech and Chong as The Corsican Brothers" on July 27.

"We feel we may have a clear track at that time if other companies release the Olympics period," said Lloyd Lopaz, Orion publicity and promotion vice president. "Not everyone is going to remain glued to their TV sets. I doubt if the kids will want to stay home and watch judo and weightlifting."

ABC, which broadcast the 1976 Games and will do the same this year, estimates that 66 percent of all households, or 150 million people, watched at least part of the 1976 Games.

No one in the industry knows what damage, if any, was done to the movie business by audiences staying home to watch the 1976 Games. The 1980 summer Games were not televised because the United States did not participate as protest against the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan.

This year, with more TV sets in use and the Games originating here, the Olympics could attract a wider audience.

But Gordon Weaver, president of marketing and publicity for Paramount, said "The Olympics have never affected the release date of any of their projects. Paramount is putting out two of the season's blockbusters at the start of the summer: 'Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom' — the sequel to "Raiders of the Lost Ark" — on May 23, and "Star Trek III: The Search for Spock" on June 1.

Many of the other potential summer blockbusters also will debut in June: "Rhinestone," "Once Upon a Time in America," "Ghost Busted" and "Gremlins."

The Games are scheduled during the peak period of TV series production. As many as 40 series may be filming during the Games, and action shows such as "Fall Guy" and "The A-Team" are primarily shot on location.

"That's when most of the series have started work in order to make the opening of the TV season in September," said William Beaudine of Walt Disney Productions.

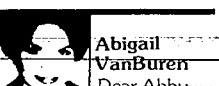

Woman needs to tell parents of live-in friend

DEAR ABBY: I've been living in the United States for over three years, having come from a country that is predominantly Roman Catholic. My parents are very religious and go by the book in everything.

This summer my parents are coming here for a two-week visit. They know that I am going with a nice Catholic boy, but they don't know that we are living together.

Abby, I've never told my parents in my life. (There have been times when I haven't told them everything, but I've never lied.) If they come and see that we are living together, I am sure they will pressure us to get married, and neither of us is ready for that yet.

What should I do? — NEEDS ADVICE

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

DEAR NEEDS: Write to your parents and tell them that you and your boyfriend are living together and you hope that they will not pressure you to get married because neither of you is ready for that yet.

It may come as a shock to them, but the shock would be greater were they to come and learn it then. Of course, you could ask your boyfriend to move out while your parents are visiting, but I doubt that you could handle the guilt.

DEAR ABBY: I need your help. I've been married for seven months to a man I love with all my heart.

Now the problem: He is a very heavy snorer and he whistles through his nose when he sleeps. It is not a snore — it's a whistle that is louder than any snore I've ever heard. I'm a very light sleeper, and this noise wakes me up many times during the night. I can't continue waking him up to tell him to turn over or put the pillow over his head. I've tried using earplugs (the kind used by people who work around noisy equipment), but they aren't comfortable and they don't stay in my ears.

Please don't tell me I'm lucky to have a husband and be glad I can hear. I am only 22 and I can't go on like this for the rest of my life.

— SLEEPLESS NIGHTS

DEAR SLEEPLESS: If your husband has not seen an ear-noise throat doctor, he should. (A minor surgical procedure might relieve the problem.)

If that fails, check your nearest university for a sleep disorder clinic. If you strike out there, see your friendly neighborhood pharmacist for wax earplugs that can be molded to the ear, are more comfortable and stay in.

And if any readers have suggestions short of "separate bedrooms" — I'll pass them on to you.
