Marine attacked, held by Russians

By ALISON SMALE
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Soviet policemen assaulted a U.S. Marine assigned to the consulate in Leningrad while he was walking along a street, and detained him at a police station for two hours, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said Friday.

The Marine was attacked Thursday by six plainclothes and uniformed police, three of whom held him while the others kicked and punched him, said an embassy source who spoke on condition he not be named.

Official embassy spokesman Jaroslav Verner said the Marine did not require hospitalization and is not thought to have suffered permanent injury. "The Marine's name officially was withheld pending notification of relatives, but sources identified him as Sgt. Donald Campbell.

The sources said he is in his early 20s, but they did not provide his hometown.

Verner said U.S. officials "vigorously protested" the incident, reported to be the third assault on an American in Leningrad this year.

"The embassy cannot understand how Soviet authorities can allow this and other similar incidents which interfere with the normal working conditions of U.S. officials in Moscow," he said.

A Soviet-Foreign-Ministry spokesman rejected the protest and complained that the Marine was drunk. "He behaved himself as a hooligan. He threw rocks," said Valentin Kameney, deputy head of the press section of the Soviet Foreign Ministry, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview. Kameney said he did not know if there would be any further action by police or other officials against the Marine.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Alan Romberg said the beating was the latest in a "disturbing pattern of official involvement in a campaign to harass and isolate Americans in the Soviet Union."

He rejected the charge that the Marine was drunk. In another recent incident in Leningrad, fellow students said Andrew Espinosa of Highwood, Ill., was seized by a number of men as he was strolling June 10.

Espinosa was found unconscious in the basement of a building containing the offices of the Leningrad procurator, and was hospitalized for three days with concussion, the students said. He continued his studies and returned to the United States in July, the students said.

Verner said he did not have details of the attack, but confirmed that an American had been "very badly beaten up" in Leningrad in early June.

In May, a U.S. Embassy official said U.S. Vice Consul Donald Harms was assaulted April 17 as he left a Leningrad restaurant. Verner declined to give further details of the latest incident, but an embassy source gave this account:

"The Marine got off duty at midnight Wednesday and then went to the Marine quarters where he watched a movie and had "two mixed drinks." He then decided to take a walk near the consulate.

A car had been circling the area for some time and its passengers motioned to the Marine to get inside, apparently seeking directions. The Marine was approaching the car when a marked Soviet police car pulled up. Three policemen and three people from the other car jumped out and attacked the American. The police then took the Marine to a police station, where he was put in a cell with Soviets who "taunted and humiliated" him but did not harm him. He was freed after two hours when Harms arrived at the station, the source said.

Erosion destroys critical fossils

Farm runoff cited

By HAL BERTON
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — Long after the dinosaurs died off and long before the first humans arrived in Idaho, the mesa across from present-day Hagerman was a forested land inhabited by camels, horses, mastodons, peccaries and the ancestors of the humble mole.

Today, the fossilized remains of these creatures are being destroyed by massive erosion triggered both by natural and irrigation runoff from the mesa top, where the Bells Rapid Mutual Irrigation Co. manages 25,000 acres of cropland.

The erosion is eating away at a 500-foot thick belt of mesa strata that scientists consider to be the world's most important site for learning about life in the late-Pliocene epoch, a 500,000-year span that began about 3.7 million years ago.

A new U.S. Geological Survey report concludes that the "accelerated soil movement" at 33 sites within the fossil beds is destroying their "scientific and educational value."

Ted Weisma, a U.S. geologist, says the worst erosion of fossil beds is the result of groundwater seepage and surface runoff that washed out a fossil-rich section of the mesa's river-side slope.

"All that's left is a 40-foot-high face," Weisma said. "Everything downhill is gone."

Weisma says, "There's been a tremendous increase in slide activity, much of which, as far as we can tell, is due to irrigation."

In addition to the slides, the mesa face is also scarred by deep gullies that "carved their way toward the river along natural drainage channels."

While says that in washed-out areas, paleontologists can "no longer get to the critters. It's really part of the history of North America and it's a shame that the damn thing isn't protected."

Reagan downplays loss Jobless report disappointing

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON — America's civilian unemployment rate jumped to 7.5 percent last month, the government said Friday in a report that the Reagan administration called "a pause in our steady march to economic prosperity."

The 0.4 percentage point rise from June's 7.1 percent figure ended a 26-month period of falling or standard jobless rates and prompted Democrats to raise new questions about the country's business health.

Democratic vice presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro said the Bureau of Labor Statistics report was "a possible indication that the recovery is slowing down and that it's a recovery that's not for everyone."

But Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan said it illustrated that the economy, "which many economists felt was in danger of overheating, is now settling into a more sustainable path."

He called the job market setback "quite temporary" and said the latest figures are "not cause for alarm" but merely "reflect a pause in our steady march to economic prosperity" from the long 1981-82 recession.

White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the administration does not believe the report represents "any weakening of the labor market."

"As in any recovery, there are occasional variations in the indicators, but it's clear that the foundation for this recovery is solid and expansion is continuing," Speakes said.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., meanwhile, said the new jobless figures "prove that the smoking gun of Reagan unfairness has two barrels: poverty and unemployment."

"White House Street booms, the back streets of America are filled with poverty and unemployment. The same president who basks in the glow of profits stands knee-deep in the poverty he himself created," said O'Neill, D-Mass.

Several private economists said July's unemployment report should be viewed with caution because it sent conflicting and contradictory signals about the true state of labor market

Lawyers confuse clients on purpose

By JAMES LITKE
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — If you can't figure out what your lawyer or doctor is saying, don't blame yourself. He may not want you to understand him for fear his expertise "won't be valued enough if people understand it," panelists told an American Bar Association workshop Friday.

"I've never been bothered by doctors' failure to communicate as long as they get rid of whatever it is I have," said David Melnikoff, a UCLA law school professor and the author of several works on the language of the law.

"It's a little like that with lawyers he continued, "as long as clients get the results they want."

Melnikoff targeted Latin and the rigors of professional school as the two major sources of communication problems between lawyers and clients.

He said Latin, which shaped much of the English language and most of the surviving code of laws, was not appropriate 700 years ago, when "the profession started" but "careless and often poor translation of Latin into English has resulted in a legacy of unintelligibility that has never worn off," he said.

He cited lawyers' all-too-frequent use of the word "demise," "whose only virtue is that it means death, lease or

Hansen blunts Evans' attack, resumes voting after hiatus

By The Associated Press

BOISE — Embattled Idaho Congressman George Hansen, bowled by what he sees as growing disgust among his colleagues with the law that led to his criminal conviction, has resumed voting on the House floor after a four-month hiatus.

In an interview from his Washington office Friday, the seven-term Republican discounted the suggestion of Democratic Gov. John Evans that he resign because his personal problems are inhibiting his ability to represent the voters. Hansen shrugged it off as the talk of an "erratic" politician.

"We're back in full exercise of all our prerogatives," Hansen said. The decision to resume voting, he said, was made after the House reprimanded him Tuesday for falsifying financial disclosure statements, the same thing for which a federal judge has sentenced him to prison. The reprimand was the mildest House punishment possible.

"At this point, now that their decision has been made there's no reason not to go on and resume voting," Hansen said. "It seems to me that the governor has kind of got his engine in reverse and is going up the wrong street."

According to House records, Hansen cast his first vote since the conviction on Wednesday, backing a proposed out in the appropriations bill for the Labor and Health and Human Services departments.

He quoted House Republican Leader Bob Michel of Illinois as saying "fine, that's just fine," when informed that Hansen had resumed voting.

In a television interview Thursday night, Evans, apparently unaware of Hansen's actions, said, "I think, seriously, he should consider the possibility of stepping aside. It's time to consider the interests of the people of Idaho above his own personal interests."

Hansen, who has been a target for criticism since his April 2 felony conviction, has repeatedly said that although he had been declining to vote, he was doing so only out of courtesy to his colleagues while they considered his case. He also claimed he has continued to fully serve the voters during that period.

"I don't know how he can say he's representing us well when he's not really on the scene and representing us as he should," Evans said, and earlier this week Hansen's Democratic challenger Richard Stallings called for the congressman to give up his government salary because he had not been voting.

The governor contended Hansen was failing in his duties as an Idaho representative, charging that the congressman's office had not responded to state requests for help with southern Idaho's grasshopper infestation.

Hansen, saying he has been involved from the start in efforts to secure federal aid to fight the insects, called Evans' comments "just about as erratic as a grasshopper's hop. For a gentleman who can't control his own Legislature I think he better confine himself to Idaho because he can't control Congress."

Bomb blast kills at least 31

MADRAS, India (AP) — A bomb that tore apart the Madras International Airport terminal killing at least 31 people—apparently had been packed in a suitcase tagged for Sri Lanka, officials said Friday. Police reported 19 people were seriously injured and said the death toll was expected to rise as rescue teams searched through the rubble.

Civil aviation Minister Khandu Lal Khan flew here to find out why airport authorities did not evacuate passengers from the terminal before the explosion Thursday night even though at least one telephone call warning about a bomb had been received.

The United News of India news agency quoted airport employees on duty at the time of the blast as saying an anonymous caller even mentioned the color and tag number of the suitcase containing explosives.

People mob lottery ticket line

CLEVELAND (AP) — People from at least five states stood in lines for hours Friday to buy chances at the nation's biggest lottery prize — an Ohio Lotto jackpot estimated at $24 million and growing.

"Lotto fever is sweeping Ohio," declared state Lottery Commission Director Thomas Chema. "There are hardly any others in the state you can get people aren't talking about this."

The topic of conversation is the top prize in the weekly Ohio Lotto game, in which bettors try to match six numbers from 1 and 40 that are to be randomly drawn at 7:29 p.m. Saturday.

Congressional veteran dies

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Rep. Carl D. Perkins, who spent 36 years in Congress battling for programs to improve life in Appalachia, died Friday of a heart attack after collapsing aboard a flight from Washington. He was 71.

Gov. Martha Layne Collins ordered that flags at all government sites be flown at half-staff and said she would announce plans later for a special election to pick a successor to the Democratic lawmaker, who was the state's senior congressman.

Perkins, who had a history of heart problems including three previous heart attacks, died at 12:37 p.m., said his son, Chris, a 29-year-old lawyer and state representative.

Group bombs space agency

PARIS (AP) — A bomb exploded at a side entrance of the European Space Agency building, collapsing ceilings, damaging a dozen cars and slightly injuring six people, police reported Friday.

The extremist group Direct Action asserted responsibility for the bombing, its fourth such attack in less than a month.

The explosion occurred at 11:40 p.m. Thursday about 48 hours before the scheduled launch of the space agency's 10th Ariane rocket from French Guiana in South America.

Burford says she wanted job

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anne Burford said Friday her characterization of the chairmanship of an environmental advisory committee as a "nothingburger" was probably a mistake and that she did want the job, even though it is insignificant.

The former administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, who withdrew herself from consideration as chairman of the Advisory Committee on Oceans and Atmospheres this week, said she "thought it would be interesting to pursue my interests in the oceans and atmospheres" which developed during EPA.

Reagan's announcement of her new job a month ago produced successful resolutions in the House and the Senate asking the president to withdraw the appointment. The president refused until Mrs. Burford asked him to following still more criticism of her remark in Vail, Colo., a week ago.

In an interview with station WRC-TV taped Friday for broadcast Sunday, Mrs. Burford said, "The hypocrisy of this particular community, Washington, D.C., cannot stand the truth and the truth is — it was a very insignificant commission ... in looking over some of the reports made by that commission, they simply haven't done anything."

City probes child abuse case

NEW YORK (AP) — Officials are investigating whether a city-funded day-care center, which was shut down after three workers were arrested on sex charges involving 10 children, Mayor Edward Koch said Friday.

The PRACA Day Care Center, operated for 13 years by the Puerto Rican Association for Community Affairs Inc., but funded by the city Human Resources Administration, was closed Friday after an angry crowd gathered outside Thursday night and broke four windows. Eight people inside had to be escorted out by police.

Prosecutors said 10 children, aged 4 to 8, had told them of sexual attacks in classrooms, bathrooms and closets, and investigators planned to speak with more of the 150 youngsters enrolled in the center and a Headstart education program offered there.

Reagan religious stand blasted

NEW YORK (AP) — Gov. Mario Cuomo, who says President Reagan's religion is "not my kind of Christianity," believes Democrats should not shirk a debate on the political implications of religion.

"I believe it was wrong for us to allow the president to pre-empt and co-opt upon the issue," Cuomo said in an interview published Friday in The New York Times.

"It's always been safer not to talk about religious beliefs because religious beliefs are so personal that they tend to antagonize," said Cuomo, a Roman Catholic. "But formal religion, more aggressively than ever before, is seeking to use the political process in the traditional way."

Last week, Simpson had indicated the bill is dead politically, said the House-Senate conference committee on the measure next week.

He also said that he has President Reagan's assurances that he will not veto a compromise version of the bill, unless it is too costly.

"There is no question in my mind," Simpson said in a statement, "that the House and Senate conferees — selected by Republicans and Democrats in both houses who deeply

Given the parity of either route — a broad, unusual alliance that includes Latinos — afraid the bill would leave them vulnerable to employment discrimination, and business organizations who fear it would put onerous burdens on employers — said that Simpson's announcement Friday did little to change the bill's prognosis.

Opponents and supporters say that it is quite likely that a conference committee of House and Senate negotiators will reach a compromise. But they say the bill still will face a tough test if it goes before the House for a final vote.

"Take the clinical report on a (patient's) condition," said Ms. DeBailey, who teaches scientific communication to medical students. "I saw one listed recently as serious but satisfactory — satisfactory to whom, one wonders? The patient or the doctor?"

grant. And not even another lawyer always knows exactly what you mean when you say the 'date of demise.'"

Melinkoff said many attorneys refuse to substitute "plain, precise English" for "fuzzy, obscure Latinisms" because they learned the law before they learned English.

He added that most students, forced to learn the jargon of the law in short periods of time, "hard-words like a scuttler's hoards nuts — without thinking what to keep and what to drop."

A second panelist, Dr. Lois DeBailey of Baylor College of Medicine, agreed with Melinkoff that students forced to learn Latin often bring a too-formal, confusing style of speaking and writing into the profession.

"Some write in a Latin, medieval style because they fear it won't be valued enough if people understand it," she said.

Fossils

The area is now designated as a National Natural Landmark, but White says the fossil beds need the much greater protection that could be afforded by a "National Monument designation."

The irrigation water seeps back off the mesa both from leaks in two mainline canals and runoff from the fields. Large volumes of water also cascade to the river from irrigation lines when they are periodically purged of debris.

H.W. Young, the author of the USGS study, suggests farmers patch the leaking canals, put a halt to the irrigation system flushes, develop an uncultivated buffer zone around the mesa rim and construct road berms.

Derrell Savage, general manager of the irrigation company, says he has met with Bureau of Land Management officials to discuss the erosion problem. But he says that the irrigation company is not to blame for all of the fossil beds erosion problems.

"There's annual sluffing taking place down there that would be going on even if there was not an operation up here," Savage said. "The farm ground certainly does not provide as much cover as the original foliage, but there has been erosion taking place on the hills for years."

Quite a bit of natural erosion was caused this spring when an 18-inch snow cap on the mesa rapidly washed away during a rainstorm, Savage said.

Savage says the irrigation company plans more meetings with BLM officials later this month to discuss the erosion, but says the company is still uncertain what actions it will take to help reduce farm runoff.

"We're not going to commit ourselves to anything at this point," Savage said.

The fossil beds, first discovered in the early 1920s by Hagerman farmer Elmer Cook, yielded paleontology treasures now on display in the Smithsonian Museum of Natural History and other major Pliocene collections around the country.

Paleontologists who excavated the beds discovered remains of a spectacular array of Pliocene mammalian life, which thrived along a heavily wooded Snake River water hole at a time when the climate was much wetter and warmer than it is today.

Over the years, the Hagerman fossils have developed both a national and world renown, says Dr. John White, a curator of the Idaho Museum of Natural History in Pocatello.

White recalls a tour of the Soviet Union "when I met the director of a paleontology museum and told him I was from Idaho. He said, 'Ah, Hagerman.'"

Despite the extensive finds of the past decades, White says there are plenty of treasures that still remain embedded in the sedimentary rocks along the mesa's northeastern flank.

"People say, 'why do you need to continue collecting when you have been collecting for years,'" White said Friday. "Well, just the other day I was crawling around and found a mole humerus (upper arm bone). Those are rare as all get out."

Oil spill's goo hits shoreline of Texas

By ANDREW M. WILLIAMS
The Associated Press

GALVESTON, Texas — A 75-mile-long slick of gooey oil began oozing onto the Texas shoreline Friday, and scientists and state officials said the thick sludge could devastate environmentally sensitive estuaries, choke fishing grounds and a booming tourist industry.

The oil, which leaked from a British tanker grounded off the Louisiana coast, was expected to hit Galveston Island on Saturday. The tanker ran aground after it strayed from the proper channel in the Gulf of Mexico.

"Unless there are strong winds, it's going to keep dragging along shore," said Roy Hann, head of Texas A&M University's oil spill assistance team.

Hann said the molasses-like sludge is so thick that it will creep ashore slowly for weeks at a time — fouling beaches, from High Island for about 300 miles away.

The oil slick is following the same path as a 1979 spill that washed ashore from Matagorda to Port Mansfield, he said.

By Friday, the sludge had spilled into two "arms," with the thickest matted only a mile off Galveston Island, Hann said. Balls

Sports fisherman Billy Cochran pokes a floating glob of oil in the Gulf of Mexico of two to three inches in diameter from the thinner section began showing up Friday morning on Bolivar Peninsula across Galveston Bay from Galveston.

Crews from the state highway department began building dikes on inlets along the peninsula, and the Coast Guard stretched containment booms across at least five sections of Galveston Bay.

But, Coast Guard officials said, strong currents made it impossible to seal off the entire bay from the snaking strip of oil, which reached a width of more than five miles in some places.

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said the state may sue whoever is responsible for the slick, and Gov. Mark White headed for the coast to survey the damage.

Clean-up crews were stalled at Galveston — High Island and Gilchrist on Bolivar Peninsula on Friday, waiting with loads of straw and heavy equipment for the sludge to hit the beaches.

"Ordinarily, we literally skim the sand of nesting bulbosers, tractors or even by hand," said Jim Kosech, a senior U.S. Coast Guard chief in Port Arthur. "The problem is how long it continues to hit."

The slick resulted from a 1.2 million gallon spill, which leaked out of the 609-foot British tanker Alvenus beginning Monday.

Demo leaders say Lance affair over

By The Associated Press

Most state Democratic Party leaders expressed relief Friday that Bert Lance is no longer an official part of Walter F. Mondale's presidential campaign, but some said the controversy over his appointment was overblown from the start.

"Lance was a mistake, but a major mistake," said New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who added that the Lance move was "buried, I think, amid some extraordinarily major achievements — the speech (Mondale's) was terrific, the Geraldine thing was exactly right, Lance was a mistake."

"We forget that the same man who made the Lance judgment decided on Geraldine Ferraro, decided to talk about a tax increase," said Cuomo. "These are both extraordinarily deft, I thought, political moves, and also very courageous ones."

"I think in the long run this will prove to be a worthwhile move for the Mondale organization," said Bob Williams, chairman of the South Dakota Democratic party.

Chester G. Atkins, the Massachusetts state party chief, said Lance's resignation late Thursday "will allow the campaign to proceed without that issue and that could be very helpful."

Atkins, critical of the Lance appointment from the start, said his departure "indicates that Walter Mondale, when a mistake is made, can own up to it and rectify it."

Candidates focus on campaign

NORTH OAKS, Minn. (AP) — Working to make the Bert Lance controversy a quick, forgotten episode in the Democratic presidential campaign, Geraldine Ferraro concentrated Friday on blaming higher unemployment and poverty on R Reagan administration policies.

She said the unemployment increase announced Friday — the first in 20 months — demonstrates that the economic turnaround is "a recovery that's not for everyone."

Walter F. Mondale and Ms. Ferraro held a morning strategy session Friday, before she flew back to New York for a weekend that both plan to spend outside the public spotlight.

Mondale had only private meetings Friday and thus continued to avoid any direct questioning on the resignation late Thursday night of Lance as his general campaign chairman.

Teacher can't spank students for year

SEVIERVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A teacher who spanked her pupils on the last day of school for infractions they had built up for months has been barred from paddling for a year — but some parents think her punishment wasn't severe enough.

The Sevier County Board of Education reprimanded Elaine Russell at its Thursday night meeting and said the eighth-grade social studies teacher is "not allowed to whip a student the entire 1984-85 school year."

Superintendent Eugene Huskey said Ms. Russell's mistake was not filing an office record of the punishments of about 25 students.

He said that if Ms. Russell had produced "undocumented" evidence, then she'd be perfectly fine and safe.

The spankings were justified and students were warned at the beginning of the school year that they would come due at the end of the year, he said. That practice prompted some parents to accuse Ms. Russell of keeping a "hit list" that led to spankings for infractions that the children couldn't remember committing.

Several parents angrily denounced the school board's decision at the heated meeting. Marie Suggs said she was "totally disgusted and disheartened" at the board's action.

"If one child got what he got it was too much," said parent John Bandy.

"Twenty-five is ridiculous." A group of parents had originally claimed as many as 80 students were spanked on the day before summer vacation for such offenses as failure to bring pencils to class and sitting improperly.

At a June 28 hearing Ms. Russell admitted to spanking about 25 students and said she waited until the end of the year so as not to disrupt "the atmosphere of learning" in her classroom.

Ex-Miss America to guest star on TV show

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Vanessa Williams, who resigned as Miss America after nude photos of her were published in Penthouse magazine, will be a guest star on the new TV series "Partners in Crime," NBC announced Friday.

Miss Williams will appear in one episode, titled "Celebrity," playing a rock singer who hires private detectives Lynda Carter and Lon Anderson to protect her from a fan who is following her.

This apparently is her first acting job since she resigned July 23 amid the furor over Penthouse's publication of revealing photographs showing her in intimate poses with another woman.

She said she wanted to spare the Miss America Pageant from any harm that might result from their publication.

Miss Williams is expected to begin work on the show next week in San Francisco, NBC officials said.

Miss Williams, 21, the first black Miss America, said she had not agreed to publication of the photographs, which were taken prior to her reign. She said she did not realize how exploit the pictures were until she saw them in the magazine.

She was a guest star on ABC's "The Love Boat" prior to stepping down as Miss America. The episode ran during the past television season.

Career spy gets 15 years for sale of secrets

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Convicted spy Ernest Ludwig Forbrich, saying he was "extremely sorry for what I have done," was sentenced to 15 years in prison Friday for buying U.S. military secrets to pass to East Germany.

Forbrich, 44, a West German auto mechanic, could have been sentenced to life in prison but will be eligible for parole in five years.

During a week-long trial in June, the government portrayed him as a "garbage man," a spy who scavenged for anything to sell. Prosecutors showed a secretly made videotape of Forbrich handing over $550 in $50 bills to an FBI agent posing as a U.S. Army officer.

In exchange, the agent gave him a secret 500-page military catalogue of intelligence documents.

After 9 1/2 hours of deliberation, the 12-member jury convicted Forbrich on two counts of espionage. One count, attempting to sell classified secrets to a foreign government, carried a maximum life term. The second, buying the secret document, was punishable by up to 10 years.

U.S. District Judge Ben Krentzman sentenced Forbrich to 10 years for buying the Defense Register of Intelligence Publications and 15 years for trying to pass it to East Germany. The terms are to run concurrently.

Forbrich, an admitted career spy, did not testify in his trial, but made a long statement of apology, saying he never intended to harm the U.S.

"I am extremely sorry for what I've done," he told the judge.

He spoke in German, in barely audible tones, as an interpreter gave a simultaneous translation.

His brother, Falko Forbrich, 40, of San Jose, Calif., told the judge he and his brother came from a poor but hard-working family of refugees who fled their native East Germany to escape religious persecution.

His father, he said, was imprisoned for eight years because he was a Jehovah's Witness.

Harvest time?

Lawmen from the Marion County Sheriff's Office and the Oregon State Police bail away some of the 125 marijuana plants they found at two locations Friday in Newburg, Ore. Initially they had hoped to find 200 to 300 plants at one site alone. No arrests were made.

Hellar's campaign taking shape

LEWISTON (AP) — Democratic congressional candidate Bill Hellar says his campaign organization is falling into place and he is nearly past the "wheel-spinning stage." With organization fairly well out of the way, he can concentrate on other matters, he said.

Hellar was appointed July 7 by state Democratic officials to challenge incumbent Rep. Larry Craig, following the death of the previous Democratic candidate, Fred Craner, in an automobile accident. Hellar said Thursday he will open his Boise campaign headquarters next week and has arranged for coordinators in Bonner, Boundary, Kootenai, Shoshone, Clearwater and Canyon counties. A committee will oversee his efforts in Ada County, he said.

State Sen. Norma Dobler, D-Moscow, has agreed to be campaign treasurer, he said. And Hellar said he has sent out his first mailing to county party chairmen and political action committees, and a direct-mail campaign for fund-raising is now underway. Also well into the planning stage is the nature of his campaign against Craig. Hellar said he plans to show that Craig "has sold himself out to the right-wing elements of his party" and is no longer a moderate Republican. In addition, he plans to "point out that Larry has become an ineffective whiner."

Facility for Birds of Prey opens in less than a month

BOISE (AP) — Peregrine Fund volunteers are less than a month away from finishing construction of the new World Center for Birds of Prey in the desert south of Boise. When the center is complete, raptor biologists will bring about 100 peregrine falcons — most of the northern Rocky Mountain population of the birds — from Fort Collins, Colo., to their new home-by-airplane, Fund Vice President Bill Burnham said Thursday. A sizable airlift of the endangered birds never has been tried before, he said. "Each bird is critical. We can't afford any losses," Burnham said during a news media tour of the $1 million complex, five miles south of town at the Flying Hawk Reserve. The swift-flying falcons are untrained, but biologists have mated them in captivity to produce offspring each year for release in Idaho and other states. The peregrine falcon — nearly disappeared in the 1920s and 1960s from the effects of pesticide spraying. The non-profit Peregrine Fund will move its headquarters to Rocky Mountain Peregrine Falcon Recovery Program from Fort Collins, and, at the same time, will begin a world

Falconers charge entrapment

BOISE (AP) — A falconers group claims that the recent arrests of 32 people for selling protected birds resembled entrapment. The North American Falconers Association said this week that the June 29 arrests capped several years of "unethical enticement" of the defendants by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. NAFA spokesman Roger Thacker charged that the federal agency "initiated, and maintained" a black market to entice falconers to purchase birds illegally. He said the operation was similar to the FBI's Absecon "sting," in which congressmen and a U.S. senator were induced to peddle their influence. The wildlife service used Jeffrey McPartlin, of Great Falls, Mont., to offer endangered birds, primarily hawks, to the defendants, Thacker said. "Several people reported him (McPartlin) to the government, but instead of taking him out, they continued the setup," Thacker said. "If McPartlin was taken out when the reports were served, none of this would have happened."

program dedicated to saving other species of endangered raptors. The group changed locations because a neighboring brewery wanted to expand. Boise was chosen over several other sites. Since April, dozens of volunteers from around the country have worked six and seven days a week to build four metal-and-wood bird barns to house 150 raptors. A brick laboratory and office building also are being built on the center's 280-acre site. The fund still needs to raise $250,000 to finish the $1-175,000 facility. When opened, the center will offer educational programs, including public tours and study programs at Boise State University, conduct research and breed rare raptors from around the globe, Burnham said.

Part of Idaho 55 reopens later this month

BANKS (AP) — Construction should be finished on schedule along Idaho 55 north of Banks, but vehicles will not be allowed to travel on the new section of road until late August, federal highway officials say. Joe Guitere, project engineer for the Federal Highway Administration, said the $3.5 million construction of a new road, bridge and underpass should be finished in late September or early October. Guitere said, however, that construction had been slowed somewhat by summer traffic. "It's just taking them longer than they expected to permit cars to come through," he said. "That happens often. There has been more traffic in the summer, and less work can be done." Company officials of Roy E. Ladd and Carl R. McConell Inc., the Redding, Calif., firm building the project, said in June that vehicles would be allowed on the new road in mid-August.

Jury deliberating on pepper-choking death

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — The four-man, four-woman jury hearing the second-degree murder trial of an Ogden man accused of choking a baby girl to death by pouring pepper down her throat began deliberations Friday afternoon. The 2nd District Court panel retired to jury chambers at 3:10 p.m. after hearing closing arguments from defense and prosecution attorneys and jury instructions from Judge John Wahlquist. Earlier, the judge had denied a defense motion for mistrial prompted by an interview with DeMille's fiancée aired by a Salt Lake City television station. DeMille is charged with causing the death of 15-month-old Melanie Woodland, his fiancée's daughter, by pouring pepper down her throat to stop her crying. In closing arguments, Assistant Weber County Prosecutor Les Daroczi called the crime "a plan conceived, planned and promptly covered up" by DeMille. "This was not an impulsive act," Daroczi told the jury. "It had to be premeditated. At the time, the child must have been making gurgling sounds. "It's a sickening epidemic — all too often there's a live-in boyfriend, a baby ending up dead." Defense attorney Bernie Allen said DeMille had confessed to police about giving Melanie pepper to protect the child's mother, Betty Jean Woodland, from prosecution. "Dallas has a tendency to be a martyr," Allen said. "Dallas confessed, thinking Betty had done something wrong." The lawyer also attempted to blame Clayton Jones, who was staying with DeMille at the time of the infant's death. Jones testified for the prosecution.

Massive rush of anchovies causes much consternation

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — Biologists are still puzzling over why millions of tiny anchovies invaded Santa Cruz harbor in a kamikaze run "the fourth in two decades" that caused them all to succumb in the oxygen-depleted water. The school of fish that pushed against the central California shoreline and into the mile-long harbor last month was so large, perhaps 2,000 tons, that it rivaled a year's commercial fishing harvest in the area. Within hours, the oxygen supply in the harbor, which has berths for 300 boats, was exhausted. It fell to 0.4

parts per million, less than one-tenth of normal. The resulting mess was a blow for Santa Cruz businesses as the rank smell of rotting fish "chased" off summer tourists. A week after the influx began, harbor workers had scooped up 400 tons of decomposing fish carpeting the harbor floor in an inch-thick layer. The cleanup has cost more than $15,000, and mountains of fish remains were either turned into chicken feed, hauled out to sea or carried to the Santa Cruz sewage treatment plant.

Judge defends bail decision

CALDWELL (AP) — Responding to criticism that he should not have allowed a Nampa murder suspect to post bond earlier this week, Canyon County Magistrate Marvin Cherin said Thursday that he was given no reason to deny bail. Cherin responded to criticism from Canyon County Prosecutor Richard Harris, who said Cherin's decision to admit murder suspect Monica Ann Bixby to post bail was "absurd."

Bixby, 32, is charged with first-degree murder in the July 17 shooting death of her husband, Erwin Rex Bixby, 57. Cherin set bond in the case during a preliminary hearing Tuesday. Bixby posted a $100,000 bond and was released from jail Tuesday night. Harris said he told Cherin during the preliminary hearing that evidence of Bixby's guilt "couldn't be greater."

Craig vows push for tax bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, says a new coalition of national organizations will help pressure members of Congress, who have not signed a petition to free tax-limiting legislation. The coalition includes the National Federation of Independent Businesses; the National Association of Home Builders and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. Craig, founder and co-chairman of Congressional Leaders United for a Balanced Budget, announced the coalition on Friday. He said pressure will be applied to members of Congress who have not signed a discharge petition on the Balanced Budget Tax Limitation Amendment. A discharge petition is used to bring legislation from congressional committees that have failed to act on certain measures before them. Craig said the discharge petition needs another 40 signatures to bring the amendment to the full U.S. House of Representatives for consideration. "It is our hope that these associations, and other, will help us obtain those signatures," Craig said.

Ketchum mayor urges bond for arts center

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — Mayor Jerry Seiffert says the city should consider a bond issue to help finance at least part of a proposed performing arts center in Ketchum.

The performing arts center being planned by the local arts council will benefit the entire community and the public should be willing to help finance it, he says.

"As we look at all the ways of financing the performing arts center in Ketchum, the bond issue should not be overlooked," he says.

Public support for such structures as stadiums, museums and art centers is common around the United States because of their benefit to the whole community, he says.

The Wood River Valley Arts Council is now raising money for a feasibility study on a performing arts center in Blaine County. The arts council, however, is considering sites in both Ketchum and Sun Valley in the study.

For the time being, the arts council is using the old Ketchum City Hall for performances and is considering it as a site for a permanent facility. The city has said it will donate the site for the center if the arts council wants it.

The arts group, however, is concerned the site is too small and does not have enough near-by parking for the planned center.

But, Seiffert says, although the Main Street site may not be ideal, a downtown site is best for the center and the community.

He says a downtown site exposes the center to foot and automobile traffic and gives it an identity as part of the community.

A downtown site also keeps the center's patrons close to the city's key restaurants and allows a full-night's entertainment without walking distance of the performance, he says.

The city also can make more room at the old City Hall site by condensing adjacent property, says Seiffert. Also, nothing there is evening parking available within a block away.

The mayor says a performing arts center will fit in well with the several existing downtown art galleries and other planned cultural attractions.

The city plans to build a museum in the downtown area to display the wagons used to haul ore from nearby mines to Ketchum in the late 19th century.

The museum also may include a wing devoted to author Ernest Hemingway, Seiffert says. Hemingway lived in Ketchum for several years before his death in 1961.

"You want all those things downtown so you can keep them together (for easy access by visitors)," he says.

"You don't want to have to drive to them."

Seiffert says he will lobby for a downtown Ketchum site, but arts council President Gail Sevens says her group will pick the site that best suits its needs for now and in the future.

One site being considered is an undeveloped lot on property owned by the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities that has plenty of room to expand and to park, she says.

Seiffert says he does not know if the idea of a bond will fly with the Ketchum City Council or the voters. But, he says, the idea's merits need to be discussed by the city.

"All I'm saying is let's take a look at this one as well as everything else," he says.

Private donations and grants may pay for most, if not all of the center, he says, but if not, the public should be willing to help.

Billy DeWalt signals a bid on a horse in the ring, right, during the third yearly auction at Billingsley Creek Ranch

Horse trading flourishes at auction

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — Horse buyers and sellers gathered at the luxurious Billingsley Creek Ranch near Hagerman Friday for one of the largest quarter horse auctions in the northwest.

"Big day. Nice show," commented some of the estimated 400 people viewing the sleek yearlings. "This is really exciting."

"A thousand dollars, now, let's go," the auctioneer said as a new horse was led around the wood shavings in the ring.

Bidders in jeans and white straw hats casually nodded or waved their catalogs at the ringmen. At the back of the indoor area, a bar was busy and buyers gathered to talk while keeping a casual eye on the sale ring.

Ranch owner Donnie McFadden said this third annual sale, offering about 100 head, drew many top national trainers and horse breeders, as well as a good field of local buyers.

Garth Baxter, who sold one horse through the McFadden auction, however, said prices were not as high as he hoped they would be.

"It's a good sale, but I think the market is low nationally," he said. "Prices have been down the last couple of years. The economy is still tight."

It is a buyer's market, Baxter continued, adding "This is a good time to get into the race horse business."

Baxter praised the McFadden sale, saying the fine pedigrees draw a good caliber of buyers, while the three months of conditioning, grooming and individualized feeding programs for the horses makes the bidding competitive.

"There's a lot of work," he said. "It's a pretty specialized business anymore. It's a different market, race horses sell more to businessmen."

Baxter, who raises horses as a "profitable hobby," said he was planning to buy a mare at the sale.

The sale company, Northwest Triple Crown, offered a $200,000 bonus award plan to add incentive to the sale.

According to the offer in the sale catalog, this prize money will be divided between the buyer and seller of any horse bought at the sale that wins the 1985 NW Triple Crown, which includes the Boise Futurity, the Yakima Fall Futurity and the Pat O'Gold Futurity in Washington.

Because of this bonus award, Baxter says he was pleased his horse had been accepted by the ranch to sell, even though it did not bring top dollar.

Block to view 'hopper army

Trip to include visit to farm

TWIN FALLS — U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Block will view grasshopper damage and discuss the infestation with farmers Monday.

The visit is part of a half-day series of meetings with agricultural groups and state officials, including Gov. John Evans.

Block's itinerary includes a tour of the Federal Interagency Fire Center in Boise, which specializes in fire suppression in federal forests and public rangeland. The U.S. Forest Service is an agency of the Department of Agriculture.

Block will arrive at Boise about noon, tour the center, and then leave by air for the Humphries ranch; said H.D. Palmer, an aide to Sen. James McClure. He is scheduled to fly into the Mountain Home air strip at about 1:30 p.m. and arrive at the ranch at about 1:35 p.m.

After about a 45-minute tour, Block will return to Boise to meet with Idaho agricultural leaders, including representatives of the Idaho Wool Growers Association, the Idaho Cattlemen's Association and the Idaho Farm Bureau Federation.

At 3:45 p.m., Block will have a private meeting with Evans, who has criticized Block for failing to act quickly to halt the grasshopper infestation.

After the session with Evans, Block then will meet Vice President George Bush at the airport, Palmer said. Bush will be in Boise for a political campaign appearance.

Officials target spraying areas

TWIN FALLS — Federal pest control officials now have targeted 62,540 acres of southern Idaho desert for spraying with insecticides to wipe out clusters of crop-eating grasshoppers.

Barney Holland, plant protection and quarantine officer from the U.S. Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, Friday said three large strips have been targeted. Others are likely to be added later, he said.

Local contractors will spray low-volume malathion in half-mile strips of public land bordering private

Canal claims tot

JEROME — An 18-month-old toddler drowned after falling into an irrigation ditch northwest of Jerome Friday morning.

Zack Palmer, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Palmer, had wandered out from his home at about 10:30 a.m. and fell into the ditch.

The child apparently slipped and fell into the five-foot deep water of the lateral ditch, which was located about 50 feet from the edge of the family lawn, Webb said.

A neighbor of the Palmers, already were searching the ditch, he said.

Webb said the cause of death was asphyxiation.

About a dozen deputies and volunteers from the Jerome County Search and Rescue Unit joined in the search. To aid the effort, the water in the ditch had been shut off at a headgate a quarter mile upstream.

But in some places about two feet of water remained, Webb said.

About four hours later, a neighbor who also was looking for the child discovered the body about a mile downstream in shallow water.

Jerome County Coroner Gerald Oster pronounced the child dead at the scene.

The cause of death was asphyxiation.

Region's unemployment drops to lowest rate in years

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Unemployment in the Magic Valley dipped to its lowest rate in 2½ years last month, the Idaho Department of Employment reported Friday.

The seasonally adjusted rate for Twin Falls, Jerome and Codington counties was 5.8 percent during July, said Lon McDonald, state labor force analyst based in Twin Falls.

The local unemployment rate was 6.4 percentage point better than the state's rate of 6.2 percent, and far under the national rate of 7.5 percent.

In the Magic Valley, the agriculture, service, retail and transportation industries showed more strength than normal, McDonald said. The late growing season this year may have kept some agricultural workers on the job later than usual during planting, he said.

Generally, Magic Valley employment drops a little during July, causing the unemployment rate to rise slightly. However, last month the employment situation stayed almost exactly the same as in June. New hirings balanced off both layoffs and entries into the labor force, McDonald said.

Consequently, an adjustment built into the unemployment rate recorded a better than normal situation with a lower rate, he said.

The Department of Employment now counts 21,249 workers as unemployed in the three-county area, and 38,323 have jobs.

Statewide, officials reported a similar trend in employment.

"The state jobless rate was state last month (last) the number of jobless situations increased at near the same rate as total employment," said department director Scott McDonald (no relation).

The seasonally adjusted statistic stood at 6.2 percent, the same as in June but 0.8 percentage point better than a year ago.

McDonald said seasonal layoffs in the food industry for plant maintenance and nonseasonal layoffs in timber and electronics industries were offset by new hirings in other areas—particularly by governments, service industries and construction firms.

The highest unemployment in the state was in the Panhandle, where five northern counties relying heavily on the faltering timber industry recorded a jobless rate of 8.4 percent.

The lowest rate was in Teton-Clarkston region, which had only 5.1 percent of the work force off the job.

Throughout the state, some 402,800 people were working and 25,800 were unemployed, according to the department. That compares to June when a little more than 400,000 people had jobs and 26,000 were out of work. A year ago, more than 31,000 Idaho workers were unemployed.

Cattlemen and conservationists

Areas of difference and agreement brought out by spokesmen during luncheon talk

By HAL BERTON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The past president of the Idaho Cattlemen's Association and the new director of the Idaho Conservation League found some common ground at a Sawtooth Press Club luncheon meeting Friday.

Both rancher Bill Swann and environmentalist Wendy Wilson agreed that wild horses are a range problem that needs to be controlled.

"If you would like the support of the ranching community, work with us in controlling wild horses," Swann told Wilson.

"There you go, there's an issue we can work with," Wilson responded.

But when talk turned to wilderness, Swann and Wilson politely staked out positions on opposite ends of the political turf.

Wilson said that about 30 percent of Idaho's eight million acres of roadless lands should be retained as wilderness.

Wilson, who recently moved to Idaho from Ann Arbor, Mich., said Idaho was the "most unique place I have ever been to in the world

When I look at Idaho, I think here is a chance to do things right the first time."

Swann addressed the wilderness question from a different perspective.

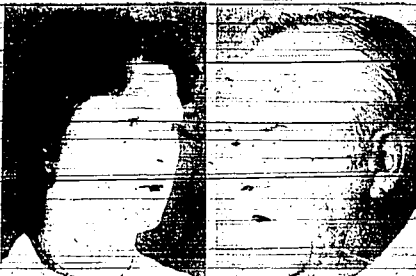

"Most cattlemen are not against wilderness. Our question is: How much?" he said.

"We were led down the primrose path to believe that the River of No Return Wilderness would be the last addition. We thought we had an agreement—and now we find that we're not even halfway home yet."

existing prairie to continue in wilderness areas, many ranchers had been forced out of these areas by restrictions accompanying the wilderness designation, Swann said.

Wilson said that 2,500 letters to Congress from Idahoans supporting more wilderness indicated that a major segment of the state's population is in favor of a larger designation.

Swann, who lives in the isolated Three Creek area, said, "We can find solitude where we want to, without locking up millions of acres of land."

Runoff forces closure of road

FAIRFIELD — A 14-mile stretch of Sawtooth Forest Service road between Baumgartner and Bownis Campgrounds along the Boise River's South Fork will be closed beginning Aug. 8 for extensive repairs during the weekdays.

The road is expected to remain closed through Sept. 22 between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. weekdays, but open again at night and during the weekends.

The closure is necessary due to the heavy spring runoff, which caused about $57,000 in damages.

Fairfield District Ranger John Madden reports that the Big Smoky area will still be accessible via the Couch Summit Road north of Fairfield.

A second Sawtooth Forest road closure leading to Altunas Lake from Highway 75 is also undergoing repairs that are now causing minor traffic delays.

Suspected suicide baffles cops

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County sheriff deputies are hunting "zero" in their search for a "young man" first believed to have jumped off the Perrine Bridge Thursday.

John William Flanagan left a note at the bridge Thursday morning, which led deputies to suspect suicide. After a four-hour search of the rocky area under the bridge, however, no body was found.

Based on bus tickets and other evidence also found near the bridge, Flanagan apparently is an 18-year-old drifter from San Antonio, Texas, who last left there July 30 in Boise. He was headed toward Pocatello in search of a truck driver named "Shorty."

Some county residents reported spotting a youth fitting Flanagan's description in the Buhl, Wendell and Twin Falls area. After interviewing the people, the possible sightings all were made prior to July 31. Sheriff Jim Munn said.

Man injured by shotgun blast
TWIN FALLS — A 24-year-old man was reported in critical condition after suffering a shotgun wound Friday evening.

Jim Marshall of 1892 Alurus Ave. was admitted to Magie Valley Regional Medical Center for a single wound to the lower left abdomen, reported Twin Falls police. The wound was made by a 12 gauge shotgun.

Police were summoned to the scene at about 5:30 p.m. Medical technicians treated Marshall at the residence for about 10 minutes before transporting him to the hospital.

Marshall apparently was alone when the shooting occurred in the basement of the house, police report. The incident is under investigation.

Gooding child's body found
PAYETTE (AP) — The body of an 8-year-old Gooding Idaho boy killed last week when he was hit by a train and thrown into the Snake River, was recovered from the river Friday.

Authorities said the body of Aaron Kimmes was spotted by people fishing from the Sixth Street Bridge in Payette, about three miles below the trestle where the accident occurred.

Kimmes was fishing with his grandfather from the trestle July 27 when authorities said the boy apparently got excited at the approach of a mile-long freight train, ran onto the tracks and was struck.

Officials said the boy was killed instantly, but the impact pitched the body into the river.

Woman sues in spouse's death
TWIN FALLS — A Hansen woman has filed a $1 million lawsuit against her father-in-law, whom she accuses of causing the death of her husband in a traffic accident on May 24.

Margie-Dane Brannon, the widow of Charles Brannon Jr., filed the suit last week in Fifth District Court. She named as defendants her in-laws, Charles D. and Beverly J. Brannon of Twin Falls.

Idaho State Police officers, who investigated the accident, reported that 30-year-old Charles Brannon Jr. was driving the vehicle when it rolled three times on U.S. 93 six miles north of Jackpot. He was thrown out and died instantly.

Mrs. Brannon claimed in her suit, however, that her father-in-law, 59-year-old Charles Brannon Sr., was the driver. She also alleges the elder Brannon was impatiently driving and under the influence of alcohol. Beverly Brannon was named as a defendant in the suit because she was the owner of the car.

Mrs. Brannon is seeking $1 million in damages and $2,500 for funeral expenses.

Iris Society potluck slated
TWIN FALLS — The Magie Valley Iris Society will hold its annual potluck picnic at 12:30 p.m. today in the Twin Falls City Park. Raffles will be sold after the meal. Interested individuals are invited.

Runoff forces closure of road
FAIRFIELD — A 14-mile stretch of Sawtooth Forest Service road between Baumgartner and Bowns Campgrounds along the Boise River's South Fork will be closed beginning Aug. 8 for extensive repairs during the next weeks.

The road is expected to remain closed through Sept. 22 between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. weekdays, but open again at night and during the weekends.

The closure is necessary due to the heavy spring runoff, which caused about $27,000 in damages.

Fairfield District Ranger John Madden reports that the Big Smoky area north of Fairfield.

A second Sawtooth Forest road closure leading to Alurus, Lake from Highway 75 is also undergoing repairs that are now causing minor traffic delays.

Suspected suicide baffles cops

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County sheriff deputies are battling "zeros" in their search for a young man first believed to have jumped off the Perrine Bridge Thursday.

John William Flanagan led a deputy at the bridge Thursday morning, which led deputies to suspect suicide. After a four-hour search of the rocky area under the bridge, however, no body was found.

Based on bus tickets and other evidence also found near the bridge, Flanagan apparently is an 18-year-old drifter from San Antonio, Texas, who was last seen

July 30 in Boise. He was headed toward Pocatello in search of a truck driver named "Shorty."

Some county residents reported spotting a youth fitting Flanagan's description in the Buhl, Wendell and Twin Falls area. After interviewing the people, the possible sightings all were made prior to July 31, Sheriff Jim Munn said.

He added that authorities in Western states have been asked via teletype to watch for the youth.

Without knowing the young man's whereabouts, Munn still is the possibility of suicide.

Christian magazines keep ideals of faith alive

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AR Religion Writer

NEW YORK—Three of the country's oldest and most perceptive Christian magazines are observing major milestones, still dedicated to weighing modern events by the ideals of faith.

Although the record of the present century has shattered old optimism that societies could ever progress to religiously envisioned perfection, trying to point toward it remains an editorial goal, however elusive.

"As in the past, we will see only partially, but we will continue our attempt to peer through the darkness toward the potential light," writes the Rev. James M. Wall, editor of the Christian Century.

The ecumenical weekly, published in Chicago, is marking its 100th anniversary, while the Jesuit-published Catholic weekly, America, published in New York, is observing its 75th birthday. The Commonweal, a lay-edited Catholic weekly, also based in New York, this fall marks its 60th anniversary.

The Rev. George W. Hunt, America's new editor-in-chief, says it will continue trying to see "events in the perspective" of faith. That means serving "the truth in love," as phrased by the motto of the magazine's Ignatian coat of arms.

An anniversary issue editorial adds: "Fashionable or not, this will be our style in the years to come."

All three magazines deal not only with theological insight, church trends and issues, but also with a broad range of other matters — art, literature, entertainment, science, politics, international relations and social justice.

To some degree, The Commonweal concentrates more on public affairs, while America and the Christian Century also deal extensively with current church issues. But all three seek to assess the modern scene on the basis of Christian insights.

As the Christian Century describes itself, it stands "at the intersection of faith and society," seeking to report, analyze and discern solutions to events in that context. America and The Commonweal serve a similar role.

It means looking "at the events of our world through the lens of Christ," says a Presbyterian minister in America's anniversary issue, reflecting the ecumenical dimension of The Catholic weekly.

"There is a strong trend toward isolating the church from a real thinking contact with the secular world," reads the minister, the Rev. David H. C. Reed of New York's Madison Avenue Presbyterian church.

His critics at three magazines are resisting that trend.

Citing tendencies to shunt religion "off to the side as an emotional outlet" only for those wanting it, a "spare-time activity like stamp-collecting or golf," with no relevance to society or thought, he adds, "Thus it can be ignored by those who influence our thinking — academia, the media, the opinion makers and cultural leaders."

"But we must have a different vision," he says, adding that the long-enduring national weeklies "have helped us view this world through the lens of Christ."

All three magazines are relatively small in circulation. The Christian Century and America each with about 40,000 subscribers. The Commonweal about 20,000. But they have a powerful reach, going not only to key church thinkers and leaders, but also to concerned Christians in government and other fields.

In the anniversary issue of The Christian Century, noted psychiatrist Karl Menninger calls it "an indispensable periodical at our house." Former President Carter, a long-time subscriber, says "I have enjoyed and learned a lot" from it.

Hunt, a New Yorker, became editor of America only this month after reaching a career high point in Washington, D.C. He previously had been literary editor of the magazine. He succeeds the Rev. Joseph O'Hare, editor for nine years, named president of Fordham University.

Peter Steinfels, formerly with the Hastings, N.Y., Center for Bioethics and executive editor of The Commonweal, this spring succeeded long-time editor, James O'Gara, who retired. Wall, a self-spoken Georgian and United Methodist, has been editor-of-The Christian Century for nine years.

In its centennial issue, it carried some of its old articles — about its founding July 12, 1884, about the 1910 international missionary conference in Edinburgh, Scotland, precursor to the ecumenical movement.

A 1931 article by the great theologian Reinhold Niebuhr blasts the "easy evolutionary optimism" of liberal, romantic religion for failing to see "the diabolical aspects of human life" and the "Hitler movement."

Stock trades break record

NEW YORK (AP)—More than 200 million shares traded hands on the New York Stock Exchange Friday, with volume shattering the all-day record—set only a day earlier—long before the closing bell rang.

Stock prices were sharply higher. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks surged 36 points to 1,202.88, its highest level since the early part of the year. It reached 1,218.88 on Feb. 2. The jump was the largest since a 36.43 point rise on Nov. 3, 1982.

The 97.46 gain for the week was the best ever, surpassing the 81.24 record set Aug. 20, 1982.

Gainers outpaced losers by almost 5-to-1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

The NYSE's composite index rose 2.46 to 93.23 and the American Stock Exchange market value index rose 7.01 to 203.83.

"A number of people who have been heretofore negative on the market apparently turned bullish this morning," said Newton Zinder of E.F. Hutton. "I guess they couldn't resist it any more. They were pretty convinced by the magnitude and the breadth of the last two days; that the tide had turned."

Theodore Halligan, of Piper, Jaffray & Hopwood, said, "It's frenzied for a number of reasons. There was a number of money managers who had an unusually large amount of cash in face of tremendously positive economic conditions. You had low inflation and strong earnings."

In addition, "Most money managers expected better performance in the market—in last two and a half years and could not afford to miss an up market."

After the stock market closed Thursday, the Federal Reserve reported that the nation's basic money supply fell $1.7 billion in late July.

The Fed's report was viewed as more evidence that economic growth is slowing to a level that can be sustained without pushing inflation or interest rates higher.

Mortgage rates climb in July; fixed interest exceeds 15%

WASHINGTON (AP)—Mortgage interest rates posted their fifth straight monthly increase in July, with conventional fixed-rate loans going above 15 percent, the government reported Friday.

But an official in the housing industry, where sales have slumped because of rising mortgage costs, held out hope that rates will be heading lower in coming weeks.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported that fixed-rate loans for new homes increased to 15.20 percent in July, up from 14.97 percent in June.

Rates for adjustable rate mortgages—which accounted for 68 percent of all mortgages in July—also rose.

Adjustable rate mortgages with caps on how much interest rates can rise went to 12.87 percent and uncapped adjustable mortgages went to 13.18 percent. In June, these rates had been 12.56 percent and 12.35 percent respectively.

Reisy B. Quib, vice president of mortgage finance for the National Association of Home Builders, said mortgage rates may start coming down as financial markets react to a string of statistics showing a slowdown in economic growth, lessening the threat that inflation will be reignited.

"There is a tremendously strong rally going on in the bond market right now with all of the signals that the economy is cooling off," she said. "If it keeps up, I think mortgage rates will come down."

She predicted that fixed-rate mortgages could fall to 14 percent.

Fixed-rate mortgages hit a low of 13.69 percent in February before beginning to rise. They topped 14 percent in April and then 15 percent last month.

During that time, sales of new homes declined. In June, they stood 5 percent below the rate of a year ago.

The number of major lenders offering fixed-rate mortgages rose in July to 72.6 percent from 72.1 percent. Lenders offering adjustable rate mortgages also rose to 52.5 percent from variable mortgages with adjustable rates changed from 50.9 percent to uncapped variable mortgages. They had been 46.4 percent and 50.0 percent respectively.

Jet service for Horizon

SEATTLE—Horizon Air has begun jet service on its high-traffic routes to Seattle, Portland, Boise and Pasco-Richland-Kennewick.

Strong demand for passenger-seats prompted Horizon last week to become the first regional airline in the Northwest to start flying jets.

Milton G. Kuolt II, chairman and president of Horizon Air, said the air carrier now is evaluating traffic from all 21 cities in its network for jet potential.

Horizon Air currently is leasing an 80-passenger jet until it takes delivery of a permanent addition to its fleet later this year, the company said.

The fleet now includes 14 propeller jets seating for 18 passengers; 11 with seating for 40 passengers and the jet, Horizon serves both Twin Falls and Sun Valley.

What's what

In November of 1917, V.I. Lenin in the revolutionized Russia signed a decree to abolish all medals, ribbons, decorations, orders and other marks of distinction. Since 1930, the Soviet government has passed out more than 400,000 Orders of Lenin, the nation's supreme award.

You've read that a newcomer-to-Australia pointed at a large hopping animal, and asked an aborigine, "What's that?" The aborigine said "kangaroo" meaning "I don't know." Something similar happened on that Mexico peninsula. A newcomer asked, "What place is this?" A native replied with the locale's word for "I don't know." It was "Yucatan."

Argument continues over the origin of kissing. The Roman poet Catto believed husbands of the Empire in his time started the practice to find out if their wives had been tasting wine.

Polish reaction split on removal of American sanctions

Salvador rebels free 63 captives

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The United States Western correspondents. decision to drop some sanctions against Poland was cheered by Solidarity leader Lech Walesa Friday, but the official Polish government spokesman demanded the lifting of two severe economic restrictions still in effect. "We demand the lifting of all restrictions without any conditions," the spokesman, Jerzy Urban, said in a prepared statement read to Reagan on Friday officially approved a resumption in scientific exchanges with Poland and lifted the prohibition on regularly scheduled flights to the United States by LOT, the Polish national airline. The decision followed the Polish government's recent granting of a general amnesty to hundreds of political prisoners. But the United States left in force a freeze on new credits, which are crucial to revitalizing Poland's troubled economy, and the suspension of Poland's most favored-nation trading status with the United States, U.S. Embassy officials said. The Reagan administration will also continue to oppose Poland's application to the International Monetary Fund, Pol-an-administrator identified said the United States may drop its opposition to Poland's IMF membership later. "The U.S.A. announces the lifting of some less significant restrictions, among them, possibly in the future, opposition to Poland's membership in the IMF (International Monetary Fund)," Urban said. "So it's difficult to expect that this statement will make us start singing Hosanna."

SOYAPANGO, El Salvador (AP) — Four leftist rebels surrendered Friday at a bank where they had held 63 hostages for nearly a day following an aborted holdup. Negotiators had been unable to find a country that would offer them refuge.

"Diplomatic negotiations" failed totally and the terrorists have agreed to surrender to the authorities," said Col. Rinaldo Golcher, commander of the Treasury Police.

Golcher said the rebels would be taken to Mariona Prison, where political prisoners are held, after making declarations to a local justice of the peace.

The rebels left the bank at 10 a.m. (noon EDT) in two jeeps of the International Red Cross. They crouched in back to avoid being photographed.

Their former hostages then left the bank building and were escorted home by the Red Cross.

The insurgents shot and killed a guard when they stormed a branch of the Banco Agricola at 11:30 a.m. Thursday.

There was initial confusion over the total number of hostages, which some accounts gave as more than 100. Golcher first said there were 64, including 10 released Thursday.

Anti-Israeli sentiment worsens with closure of university

By MASHA HAMILTON
The Associated Press

NABLUS, Occupied West Bank — Four Israeli soldiers blocked the gates of the West Bank's largest Palestinian university Friday, and barbed wire stretched along the top of a wall surrounding the hillside campus.

After two years of relative calm, the Israelis' decision last week to close Al-Najah University for four months was fanning anti-Israeli sentiment in this Arab city of 80,000.

Underlying the tension is Palestinian concern that Israel's July 23 election signaled a swing to the right, dashing hopes for a new Arab-Israeli peace initiative. The balloting also resulted in a seat in Parliament for anti-Arab "extremist" Meir Kahane, who campaigned for the expulsion of Arabs from Israel and the West Bank, where 750,000 Arabs live.

A Nablus resident, pointing to four Jewish settlements overlooking the city, said, "the settlers feel like that (Kahane), and would kick us out if they could."

Authorities arrested 27 Israelis, most of them settlers, last April and accused them of belonging to a Jewish underground that launched a series of attacks on Palestinians.

A statement by the Israeli government said the 3,500-student university has been a "focus of hostile and inflammatory activity and a number of gatherings have been held there urging support of various terrorist organizations in armed struggle against Israel."

Israeli authorities said a pro-Palestine Liberation Organization exhibit, which they confiscated, finally prompted them to act.

However, political science professor Mohammed Shaidid said, "The exhibit was nothing more than a demonstration of Palestinian pride. The Israeli response indicates to students that moderation doesn't work here."

Nablus, a predominately Moslem city about 30 miles north of Jerusalem, is territory captured by Israel from Jordan in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. A center of Palestinian nationalism, it has been the site of frequent grenade and stone attacks on Israeli troops who patrol the streets.

"But there had been a built-in level of anti-Israeli activities," said Shaidid. "There was hope for a peace settlement."

Perfect score nets Retton Olympic gold

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mary Lou Retton scored a perfect "10" on the vault in her final routine to win the women's all-around gymnastics gold medal Friday, a day when people complained the Summer Olympics were becoming America's Games and U.S. athletes did their best to prove it.

Retton was the latest hero in a star-studded field of American athletes, who added seven gold medals to their nation's total Friday and produced the Games' first triple-gold medalists in swimmers Tracy Caulkins and Nancy Hogshead.

Retton, 16, from Fairmount, W. Va., needed a 10 to defeat Romania's Ecaterina Szabo for the gold. She got it on the vault, where she's best, and lent the Fantasy Pavilion crowd into hysterics and Szabo into tears.

Retton held up her hands to the crowd like a football referee signaling a touchdown. She cried on the medals stand, again raising her hands high above her head.

"I work better under pressure," Retton said of her final perfect vault. "I knew I had to stick it, and I did."

Szabo, stolid in defeat, kissed Retton as she went to the medals stand. The margin between them was as close as it could be — 79.175 for Retton, 79.125 for Szabo. Simona Pauca of Romania took the bronze, while Juliane McNamara of San Ramon, Calif., finished fourth.

team coach before he defected in 1961 and who now helps train Retton, said, "Nadia was a great champion. But Mary Lou is much better."

The best of the U.S. women gymnasts had ever done previously was a bronze in team competition in 1948.

On Tuesday night, the American men captured their first gold medal in 80 years, winning the team title.

The Soviet-led boycott had stripped the gymnastics of the world's best — Natalya Yurchenko and Olga Mostepanova, both of the Soviet Union, but their absence did not detract from the moments of joy for Retton.

U.S. eagers destroy France

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — U.S. Olympic basketball Coach Bobby Knight presented a bouquet of flowers to a French translator and later kissed her.

That was a lot better than his players treated France in the Olympic men's tournament Friday. The unbeaten U.S. squad manhandled winless France 120-62 for its fourth victory and a showdown Saturday against Spain, also 4-0 in Group B play.

Earlier Friday, Spain scored a 102-83 win over China.

French Coach Jean Luedt decided to bench three of his players in a disciplinary move, making matters worse for the Frenchmen, who had lost their three previous Olympic contests at the Olympics.

Luedt was angry about something which appeared in a French newspaper about his team, but Knight ended the postgame news conference with the flowers for translator Marie Holgado Saint-Clair, who has been handling Knight's postgame news conferences all week, often exchanging banter with him.

Knight had reason to be happy. All the American wins have been routs. But the 56-point margin was the biggest. The average margin of victory in the four triumphs has been 40 points.

France needed all the help it could get against the sharpshooting and defensively tough gold medal favorites — Steve Alford, who plays for Knight at Indiana, paced the scoring parade with 18 points on long-range jumpers.

"We're not looking to prove anything to ourselves," said Knight. "We're looking to play. We can't dictate what things will happen with other teams when we play."

The U.S. broke the game open with an 18-23 run and Alford hitting four goals to take a 22-12 with 7:16 to go in the first half. It had another spurt, 12-4 late in the period and walked off to a 32-16 lead with 3:52 left.

Things only got worse after that for the beleaguered Frenchmen as Michael Jordan hit the first three baskets of second half to continue the onslaught.

Luedt said the suspensions were an "internal problem" and were decided upon before the competition began. "We particularly resent they did not play against the United States."

The French coach added neatly, "I'm surprised to see so many journalists here, like vultures on a carcass. I have no problem with the French team, I'm just trying to teach them discipline."

He would not reveal the infractions committed by the disciplined players — Richard Dacoury, 6-foot-4, 6-6 Eric Beugnot and 6-3 Gregor Beugnot.

Dacoury and Eric Beugnot are averaging 11 points apiece in the tournament.

The Americans shot 68 percent from the field against France's 37. For made 3-pointers, Vern Fleming, 15, Alvin Robertson 14 and Patrick Ewing 11. Herve Dubuisson, a draft choice of the New Jersey Nets, led the pack with 18 points.

The problem in the U.S. game will be scoring under the basket with people like Ewing, Wayne Tisdale and the Spanish forward — Spanish Coach Antonio Diaz Miguel.

Canada, 1-2, played Group B, 1-2 in a Friday night Olympic B game, the only other men's game on the schedule.

Juan Martin Lopez 20 points led five Spaniards in double figures against China, 1-3.

Americans' medal total expanding

LOS ANGELES (AP) — On the opening day of Olympic track and field, Carl Lewis and Edwin Moses, cornerstone of the U.S. team, won as expected in their heats — Lewis twice in the 100-meter dash, Moses once in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles to keep his amazing winning streak alive.

Both ran only as fast as necessary before a huge crowd at the 93.51-seat Coliseum.

The U.S. medal total of 52 included 29 gold, 19 silver and four bronze. West Germany was in second place with 21 total medals, six gold, eight silver and seven bronze, while China was tied with 15 total medals and seven gold.

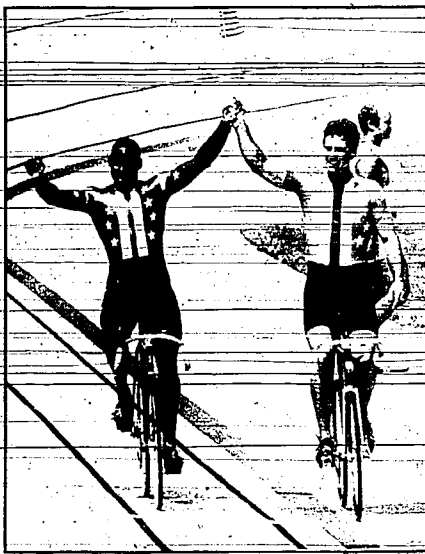

West Germany's Michael Gross, perhaps the best swimmer in the world, failed in his bid for a third gold medal.

Gross has been one of the few non-American stars of the Games, winning the 100-meter butterfly and 200-meter freestyle. And the home-team fervor was beginning to wether some foreign athletes and officials.

Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee, wrote a stern letter to Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee President Peter V. Ueberroth, criticizing ABC's television coverage (see Briefly In Sports, Page B3).

The unbeaten U.S. women's basketball team, led by Lynette Woodard, Janice Lawrence and Cheryl Miller, clinched a berth in the gold medal game by crushing China 91-55.

The U.S. women's volleyball team, behind the serving of Debbie Green, upset China 15-13, 7-15, 16-14, 15-12 to move into medal play with a perfect record.

Caulkins, Tiffany Cohen and Rick Carey of the United States each won their second individual gold medals. And the 400-meter medley relay team of Theresa Andrews, Caulkins, Nancy Hogshead and Mary T. Meagher won in 4:08.34.

That gave Caulkins and Hogshead three golds each and made Andrews and Meagher double-gold winners.

The swimming team has won 10 golds and 28 total medals, with five more events Saturday.

West Germany's Claudia Losch outgird Romania's Miluola Loghin by a quarter-inch to win the gold medal in women's shot. Her toss was 67 feet, 2 1/4 inches.

America's Greg Gibson took a silver in the 220-pound Greco-Roman wrestling class when he was defeated by Romania's Vasile Andrei, 12-0.

U.S. cyclist Mark Gorski struck gold in the sprint event, and the U.S. equestrian team also won gold.

Gorski and Nelson Vails had been guaranteed gold and silver medals in the first all-American final ever in the cycling event. Gorski, of La Jolla, Calif., won straight heats to take the gold as Vails, of New York, settled for silver.

Gorski's times were 10:49 seconds and 10:45 seconds. Tsutomu Sakamoto of Japan won the bronze.

The United States added a silver in the 4,000-meter pursuit, giving Americans an unprecedented total of seven medals in cycling.

Gross was favored in his shot at a third gold medal in swimming, but in the final of the 200-meter butterfly, it was unheralded Australian Jon Sieben who won the gold and broke Gross' world record with a time of one minute, 57.04.

Sieben had never swam the distance faster than 1 1/2 minutes prior to the qualifier.

"This morning, I was just looking toward getting a medal, not winning. I was just hoping to do my best," Sieben said.

In Greco-Roman wrestling, American Greg Gibson advanced to the final of the 220-pound division, insuring him a gold or silver medal in the final later Friday.

U.S. equestrian heroes were both team and individual. The team won the gold in the three-day team event, edging the British riding team 186-189.2.

In individual competition, Karen Stives of Dover, Mass., and riding on Ben Arthur, took a silver, second to New Zealand's Mark Todd, riding Charisma.

The U.S. men's basketball team routed the French, 120-62 as Steve Alford had 18 points and Michael Jordan 16. They have now won four straight, and got an added break when the French benched three starters in a disciplinary move.

Mexico won both the gold and silver in the 20-kilometer walk. Ernesto Canto took the gold in Olympic record time of 1 hour, 23:12.36, then donned a huge blue sombrero as his fans cheered. Raul Gonzalez won the silver.

Australia won the 4,000-meter team pursuit, while the U.S. team of California's Steve Wiggins and Point, Dave Grylls of San Diego, Pat McDonough of Long Beach and Leonard Harvey, Niz of Sacramento, took the silver.

France won its first gold medal of the Games, when Philippe Heberle finished first in the air rifle competition.

In many's minds, Powers reached Hall of Fame long ago

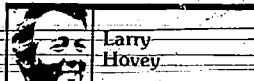

They are going to induct Hank Powers into the Idaho High School Hall of Fame Monday night at a special ceremony in Pocatello.

Times passed and so did a whole generation and a half of Twin Falls Bruins has come and gone since Hank last strode the sideline, sidetrack and fairway. But a generation previous put him in the hall of fame long before the rest of the state got around to it.

In this age where coaches come and go quickly, it is hard to realize that Hank came to Bruinville in the mid-1930s, building the bulk of his reputation as a football and track coach. His coaching career was preceded by a star-marked athletic career.

He turned the football reins over to John Graybill in the fall of 1949 and the track job to Harold Brown two springs later.

During those years, he turned out some remarkable athletes. He had the famed Ted Lake who set the Twin Falls High School high hurdle record in 1942 at 14.8. It was a national mark at the time and ranked right up with the international set. That 14.6 was set at the old Lincoln Field track, which probably was the softest real cinder (clinkers from the sugar factory's boilers) in the sport's history.

In the late 1940s, if you can believe it, Twin Falls was a football power and the state match of the year was between the Bruins and Nampa, which was similarly having a run of outstanding athletes at the time.

On the gridiron Powers had some outstanding players like Jerry Kleinkopf, now Twin Falls track coach, Byron Snyder, who later became a school board member here; Gene Cooper, Jack Cross, who's committed to the NROTC; prevented him from trying for an NFL contract but who very probably remains the last Twin Falls Bruin drafted by an NFL team. All, of course, were state track champions, too.

Before that group he had John Rogers, Lyle

Pearson, perhaps Twin Falls' only Notre Dame, and the list would grow if allowed.

But perhaps the longest-lasting imprint Powers left on the athletic program came after he ascended to the athletic directorship but kept his hand in coaching by assuming the golf duties.

Under his guidance, the Twin Falls golf program, ably abetted by a succession of professionals at the local courses, became dominating. At one time, Powers' golf teams had won more state titles than the rest of the state combined.

The thing that was most remarked upon is that Powers is that no one can remember seeing him lose his cool. He could get angry and do the things associated with coaching. But he was always into the game.

This ability carried into life and death situations: Powers and his wife, Ann, who taught math on the junior high level for years, prepared for retirement by purchasing a resort in the Yellowstone country. The couple ran the operation in the off-season.

They had a full house in the night of the famed Yellowstone earthquake in 1959. With boulders the size of houses rolling down the hill side, trees crashing and foundations breaking, Powers had full control and realized the greatest threat was the river.

He calmly led all the guests to go uphill while everything else was coming down. The next morning the place was covered by the bogging of Heben Lake but Hank hadn't lost a guest — just everything else he and Ann had put into the resort.

"All I could think," Powers told the Times-News from Boise when by phone a day later, "I just can't get excited. I've been through this a hundred times on the sidelines."

He also knew a little about psychology. In a Big Six Conference (later SIC) golf tournament at Twin Falls Myny, Pocatello High was the major competition. At the turn the Bruins were doing well, except for one player, who, after showing a 40 on his scorecard, admitted to being more than nervous.

Powers had just had a visit from his first grandchild the previous weekend and, like a doting grandfather, had bought candy. Some of it was in the tablet form, like the candy pills found in "nurses" and "doctor" kits.

Assuming a furtive glance and glancing carefully both ways, Powers told the golfer to "meet me behind the clubhouse. And come alone" or something equally sinister. He then went to his car and picked up a piece of candy.

"Sneaking both the clubhouse," he found the kid and handed him "stuffed" the "pill" to him with the caution that "if you ever tell anyone I gave you this I'll call you a liar."

With a knowing nod, the golfer swallowed the pill, went out to turn the backside even and cement another championship. He admitted later to Powers "I don't know what that was, but it sure calmed me down."

Hank immediately told him that under no circumstances would he ever be party to such a sordid maneuver again, win or lose.

But all of that means nothing. The real test of the man is this: all his former players still mightily respect him and the great prep work he did for him. Such is not the case of all of the others. And in that, Powers already holds honor beyond the state's ability to bestow.

Poky tips Minico in tourney

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

IDAHO FALLS — Pocatello hammered 13 hits but it was pitchers Garth Leatham and Dave McCann who paced the Rebels to a 5-3 victory over Minico Friday in the opening round of the southern district Class A American Legion Tournament.

Leatham and McCann limited the Sage to just four hits, including the one that tied the game in the bottom of the fourth. His first pitch on Leatham, a fast ball, was hit into the rightfield corner, driving in both runs. Smith scored himself on the play when the relay throw from the second baseman went into the pocket.

The Rebels picked up single runs in the fourth and fifth innings, but Leatham — who left the game after seven — and McCann made them stand up. Leatham struck out seven batters and McCann allowed just two runners in his two innings of work.

Troy Wimmil, the third Minico pitcher, limited the Rebels to one run and fanned four in his four and two-third innings stint.

Minico's hits came from Smith, Scott Asson, Tim Peltiel and Jesse Branson. Greg Leatham, Cory Newsum and Robb Ruchtl had two hits each for the Rebels.

Minico will play the loser of this morning's game between Rexburg and Idaho Falls at 8 p.m. and could be eliminated from the tournament if it loses.

The tournament will continue through Monday, with the title game set for 6 p.m. at McDermott Field. If an extra session is required, it will be played at 6 p.m. Wednesday.

Yankees drub Indians twice

By The Associated Press

Don Mattingly's 15th home run of the season, a one-out solo shot off Cleveland reliever Ernie Camacho in the eighth inning, snapped a tie and gave the New York Yankees a 3-2 victory over the Indians for a sweep of Friday's twilight double-header and a six-game winning streak.

The Yankees took the opener 9-0 as Joe Cawley, making his three-start American League debut, fired a three-hitter for his first major league win. Steve Kemp and Tim Lincecum highlighted an eight-run sixth inning.

Mattingly's game-winning homer came on a 1-0 pitch from Camacho, who relieved Cleveland starter Don Schultz with Kemp on first via a single and one out in the seventh. He surrendered singles to Omar Moreno and pinch-hitter Ken Griffey, the first two batters he faced, tying the score 2-2.

Royals 9, Tigers 6
—In Detroit, Frank White's grand slam home highlighted a seven-run fourth inning and Dan Quisenberry earned his 29th save, leading the Royals.

Quisenberry shut the Tigers down on two hits after entering the game with one out in the seventh in relief of winner Bret Saberhagen, 5-0, who allowed one run in 15 innings after replacing starter Bud Black.

The Royals sent 11 batters to the plate and collected six hits in the fourth inning. Jorge Orta started the outburst with a single, Darryl Motley was hit by a pitch and a walk to Steve Balboni loaded the bases. White followed with his third career grand slam and his 11th home run of the season, putting Kansas City in front 9-2.

Rangers 4, Red Sox 3
—In Boston, Gary Ward led off the 10th inning with a single and scored on a three-base throwing error by Boston third baseman Wade Boggs on Buddy Bell's sacrifice bunt, lifting the Rangers.

The Rangers, 7-13 in their last 20 starts, hit 5-2 on their current road trip, pulled out the victory against Boston reliever Bob Stanley 7-7, after the Red Sox Tony Armas hit his 29th homer, a game-tying two-run shot in the eighth with two out.

A's, Mariners 3
—In Oakland, Ray Burris, with last-out help from Bill Caudill, stopped Oakland's losing streak at six games by pitching a seven-hit inning and the Athletics got all their runs in the first inning to win the first game of a two-night double-header.

Burris, 10-4, pitched perfect baseball for 4 1/2 innings before Dave Henderson doubled.

Bruce Bochte and Mike Heath drove in two runs apiece in Oakland's first-inning outburst off Seattle starter Mike Moore, 5-10, who retired only two batters. Dave Geisel blanked

Write a want ad that sells

Give Facts

Put yourself in the buyer's place. What would you want to know? List the item's age, condition, and brand name, model and approximate value. If you're selling, state the type of transmission, mileage if low, and special equipment.

It's risky business to exaggerate and it won't increase your chances of success. Misleading information may get a buyer to your house. It may also get you a punch in the nose.

Surveys indicate that buyers are more interested in merchandise when they know the price. This applies to everything from household furnishings to automobiles. Good merchandise, priced fairly, is the best guarantee of success.

Be Available

A telephone number is fine if you're at home when your ad is published. If you're not going to be home, state the time you will be. Most people won't call back twice.

These suggestions can help you get started. For additional assistance, call us today.
