Voters nix city pool, consolidation

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — By a wide margins, city voters rebuffed the Twin Falls city council by voting against its positions on two issues at a special election Tuesday.

A proposed nearly $2 million bond for an indoor swimming pool failed to receive half the vote; the final 33 percent in favor being the inverse proportion of the two-thirds majority required for passage.

A city firefighter-sponsored initiative calling for a ban on consolidation of the city Police and Fire Departments passed easily with 62 percent of the vote.

Turnout was heavy after a last-minute registration crush, with almost 3,000 residents voting or 64 percent of registered voters.

From the moment the first returns came in a little past 9 p.m. it was clear which way both issues would go. The main question as vote totals piled up was how black an eye the city administration would sustain.

With the final tally returned close to 11 p.m., the swimming pool bond had been approved by voters in only one precinct — the eighth that includes Twin Falls High School where the $2.7 million facility was to have been built.

The firefighter issue was in all precincts except one — the seventh or central-eastern section of the city.

The firefighter issue was the sleeper of the two. Many felt it might have lost its controversy after the firefighters agreed to drop their campaign for it as part of their annual contract negotiations.

Firefighters at city hall were surprised by their own margin of victory.

"The people have spoken," said firefighter union president Ron Clark. He said even though state law says the Twin Falls City Council is not bound by the vote, and technically could repeal the initiative anytime, the wide margin should tell the city something.

However, no council member was tipping their hat as to what would happen.

Councilman John Peterson said he hoped administration of the two departments would remain consolidated.

Mayor Emery Petersen said the vote reflected conservative, traditional thinking among city residents, and that the council would have to take into account not only the feelings of about 3,000 active voters, but all

26,000 residents of the city. Peterson, the only council member to oppose the $2 million bond for the pool, said that vote showed that the joint city and Twin Falls School District plans were "more elaborate than people want or need."

Councilman Gale Kleinkopf, who had put many hours into the project, said it was "good to hear what the people want." But he said he did not know where the council would go from here, although he still believed people wanted a pool.

One opponent, Idaho-Neighbors Network member Pam Shropshire, attributed the defeat to distrust of the city's inclusion of the school district in the project.

She said INN members would propose at the next council meeting that the city build a new outdoor pool at Harmon Park.

Gooding acquires hospital

By JANENE RUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — The city of Gooding has bought the abandoned state tuberculosis hospital so it can be sold and operated as a private prison.

The State Land Board agreed to sell the hospital for $100,000 at its meeting Tuesday, following what Gooding Mayor Gene Heller called "lengthy negotiations" with Heller, city councilmen Bob Moline and Jim Muscat and city attorney Cecil Hobday.

Heller said Gov. John Evans wanted the state to receive $500,000 — the appraised value of the 35-year-old building and surrounding 6 acres. But Attorney General Jim Jones proposed the board accept the market value figure of $100,000, which the city was willing to offer. The board unanimously agreed to that price.

Heller said the transfer will be a cash transaction and will come after a 60-day public notice period. He said the money to close the deal will come from private sources "we are not at liberty to identify."

Once the transfer to city ownership is complete, the city will offer the property for public bid, as required by state statutes dealing with surplus public lands.

Heller said the city bought the property to have a minimum-security prison operated at the site.

The feasibility of such an operation has been discussed at several public meetings in Gooding during the past year and studied by Al Murphy director of Idaho's Department of Corrections.

Buckingham Security Ltd. of Lewisburg, Penn., has negotiated with city officials for the right of operating a private, protective-custody prison at the site.

The city is now preparing bid specifications for the property. The bids will be for the specific purpose of operating a prison, according to established standards he said.

One levy OK'd, one fails in Buhl district

BUHL — One Buhl School District override levy that required a simple majority was passed Tuesday night, but another levy fell short of the two-thirds majority it required.

A maintenance and operations levy that will bring in $143,000 for one year received 67 percent of the votes with 449 yes votes and 221 no votes.

The maintenance and operations levy money will be used to buy textbooks, audio-visual equipment and other instructional supplies.

But a plant facilities levy failed, receiving only 65 percent of the votes with 432 in favor and 237 opposed.

The plant facilities levy would have raised $95,000 per year for eight years to repair and furnish existing school buildings and refurbish parking lots and playground areas.

Although the plant facilities levy did not pass, Superintendent Gus Spropius said, many of the intended projects, such as repairing all the school roofs, will still have to be completed. He said that the school board will meet next week to decide how to make immediate cuts in the budget.

"We're definitely going to have to tighten our belts and make some changes this year," he said.

Lafferty says brothers on road to Nevada day slayings occurred

By The Associated Press

RENO, Nev. — Ron Lafferty says he and his brother were driving through Utah toward Nevada the day their sister-in-law and her toddler daughter were killed, and did not know about the slayings until the next day.

The trip to Nevada came after a rambling odyssey through the West and Southwest during which they picked up two fellow drifters Lafferty said he knew only as Chip and Rick. He claimed the men drugged him and his brother, Dan, in a motel in Wendover, Nev., the night of July 24 and took their car and all their possessions.

It was July 24 that the bodies of Brenda Lafferty, 24, — a native of Kimberly, Idaho — and her 15-month-old daughter Erica were found in their home in American Fork, Utah, with their throats slashed. Lafferty said he and his brother heard about the murders the following night when they stopped at a motel in Utah.

"Quite frankly, it scared the hell out of us," he said. "After some discussion and the experiences of the past year, we realized we were walking into a trap and there was no way that we'd get a fair trial in the state of Utah."

The brothers, both excommunicated Mormons, are fighting extradition from Nevada to face the Utah murder charges because they claim the Mormon Church will see that they do not receive a fair trial.

They were arrested last Tuesday in a casino in downtown Reno. Two other men charged in the slayings, Richard Knapp, 24, of Wichita, Kan., and Charles Carnes, 23, of Belen, N.M., were arrested July 30 in Cheyenne, Wyo.

Ron Lafferty said he and his brother built a bed in the back of their station wagon about three months ago and began a journey that took them through Texas and to California, back through Nevada and to Wichita, where they met the man they knew as Rick.

Later, they linked up with the man Lafferty called Chip and the four returned to Utah for a few days. Lafferty said they decided to leave Utah July 24 to try to make some money gambling in Wendover. He • See LAFFERTYS on Page A2

School administrative change angers staff

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Superintendent Gary Piller's proposal to revise Twin Falls school district's administrative structure, presented at a Tuesday school board meeting, enraged a group of about 50 people, mostly district employees.

The teachers packed the session to criticize administration of the district in recent months, saying morale is low. They blasted what they see as Piller's attempt to weaken the authority of long-time administrator, Assistant Superintendent Carl Snow.

According to a flow chart distributed to the board members Monday by Piller, Snow — a district employee for 19 years — would be left with little authority. He would share administration of business services with clerk-treasurer Jenny Dougherty.

The business services department includes a single purchasing agent, the food services department and maintenance. But Tuesday morning Piller met with the board chairman and vice chairman, Gene Champlin and Gary Fay, who pushed for a revised proposal. Their plan would give Snow and new assistant superintendent Kent Heaton authority over teachers and principals.

It was the revised plan that Piller presented at the Tuesday evening meeting.

Snow was hired as the district's single assistant superintendent a year ago, when Piller moved from that position to the head of the school district. Piller later proposed, and the board agreed, to hire a second assistant superintendent.

"If I had had any idea you would change the job I applied for, I never would have left the school (O'Leary Junior High) I loved and helped develop," Snow told Piller during the Tuesday board meeting. "I'm incensed the board had any part in what happened."

Moments later he added: "The first time I saw the job description was yesterday. The next time was this afternoon and it had changed again. The background material (prepared by Piller for board members) said I had a part in the development of the description. It's hard to swallow when you tell me one thing and do another."

He ended his comments by saying that he would not leave the district. It drew cheering and applause from the audience of his supporters, packed into the board room.

Heaton, who has been employed since July, said Snow should have known what his job description was. He and other high-level district employees had been asked to evaluate their job descriptions two weeks ago, he said.

Snow replied that he had evaluated the job description he had then, had found it adequate and did not believe that he needed to submit a report saying that.

Piller said the plan to split power between Snow and Heaton was equitable and fair.

According to the flow chart passed out to board members, Heaton's position would include administration of curriculum and instruction. He would supervise principals and the directors of programs such as special education, migrant education and the gifted program. He would also have authority over teachers.

Snow's supporters vehemently denied that responsibility and power had been divided evenly between the two assistant superintendents.

"This job you're trying to give Carl is like trying to take janitors, bus drivers and cooks and make them into teachers," said one teacher from O'Leary Junior High School. "If you evaluated morale in this district on a scale of one to 10, you'd be lucky to get a one. If you do this you will not even get a one."

"This is why school boards do not pass," said Sharon Walker, a former president of PTA and Bruin Boosters. "The last 30 days I've heard nothing but bad things about administrators down here."

Mid-level district administrators at the meeting were concerned that Piller's administrative reorganization would take away their power to recommend who is hired in their school buildings or departments.

Session takes slap at Israel

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The U.N. International Conference on Population adopted a package of 88 recommendations Tuesday, including one that says establishing settlements in occupied territories is illegal.

The Arab-backed recommendation on occupied territories was viewed as a slap at Israel, which occupies the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

There had been speculation that the United States would oppose the package because of the anti-Israel provision. But as conference president Bartlett Diaz was about to ask for a vote on the recommendations, James L. Buckley, head of the U.S. delegation, said it could be adopted by consensus and a vote was not necessary.

The United States, following a United Nations procedure, asked to have its opposition to the Arab measure noted in the final version of the recommendations.

Solidarity reassessing role

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa said Tuesday the outlawed union was reassessing its role and that it would be unwise to demonstrate or provoke authorities after last month's general amnesty freed hundreds of political prisoners.

"The amnesty is a step" in the right direction by the Communist government, Walesa said. "We don't want to disturb the second step."

Walesa spoke on the fourth anniversary of the start of Lenin Shipyard strikes that led to the creation of the now-outlawed Solidarity, the first free trade union in the Soviet bloc.

The 40-year-old electrician marked the anniversary by placing a bouquet of flowers at the foot of a monument erected in 1980 to honor slain workers and attending an evening Mass after which he was cheered by several hundred worshippers.

Chess grand master dies

MOSCOW (AP) — Tigran V. Petrosian, the world champion chess player for six years and one of the greatest grand masters in modern chess history, has died at age 55, the official Soviet news agency reported Tuesday.

Tass said Petrosian died after a long illness, but did not give the cause or the date of his death. The report said he died in Moscow.

Petrosian became world chess champion in 1963 by defeating Mikhail Botvinnik. During his career, he defeated such other chess greats as Boris Spassky, although he lost the world chess title to Spassky in 1969.

More riots thought likely

LAWRENCE, Mass. (AP) — A rundown neighborhood scared by two nights of firebombing has been ordered to remove conditions that led to the riots, Hispanic leaders warned Tuesday.

"You think everything is quiet. It's not, so we have to move quickly," Isabel Melendez, a leader of the newly formed "Peace Alliance," told a meeting of local residents and the Lawrence City Council.

The police reported calm Tuesday night.

OMB acts on refund gripe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Office of Management and Budget, responding to a complaint by a carpet-cleaning firm that it has had to refund thousands of dollars to federal agencies that regularly overpay their bills, said Tuesday that steps are being taken to correct the problem.

Juan A. Estrada, owner of Professional Carpet Service in suburban Chevy Chase, Md., had written OMB Director David Stockton on July 18 to complain about the practice, enclosing copies of several recent refund checks totaling about $25,000.

On Tuesday, after her complaint became the subject of a front-page story in The Washington Post, Stockton's deputy, Joseph R. Wright Jr., wrote Ms. Estrada, whose firm cleans and installs carpeting, to thank her for her concern and promise action.

Charge worries Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's charge that a Soviet leader feared Nicaragua as a "base" is heightening Nicaraguan fears of a U.S. invasion, but the document from which the Soviet quote was taken makes no reference to a "base."

Reagan made the statement in a July 21 news conference, citing a comment by Marshal Nikolai U. Ogarkov, Soviet Army chief of general staff, to a military official from Grenada prior to last October's U.S. invasion of the Marxist-ruled island.

But a review of the captured Grenadian document, from which the Ogarkov quote was taken, contains no reference to "bases." The Soviet marshal was apparently referring to countries in the Western Hemisphere making "progressive changes."

Soviet ship rescues pilot

HONOLULU (AP) — A pilot who was rescued from the Pacific Ocean at night by a Soviet ship after she was forced to ditch her single-engine airplane said Tuesday she was frightened when waves started washing into the life raft at sunset.

Heidi Porch, 28, arrived in Pearl Harbor on Tuesday aboard the Meteor, a U.S. Navy ship. The Soviet crew gave her a porcelain bowl and a pair of gloves as mementos of her ordeal, she told reporters.

Porch, of Vacaville, Calif., was picked up by the Soviet freighter Ussuryskaya Taiga on Sunday, about nine hours after she ditched the Cessna 182 in the ocean about 530 miles from Hilo, Hawaii, her destination.

She said a Soviet doctor gave her a brief medical examination and found she did not have any injuries.

Reagan dozing in meetings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A White House official has described President Reagan as having trouble staying awake in cabinet meetings.

NBC News broadcast an interview with White House chief of staff Michael K. Deaver in which he said that he had seen Reagan "when he had difficulty staying awake (in cabinet meetings), but he wasn't the only one in the room that was."

Asked if the problem were worse in the afternoon than in the morning, Deaver told NBC: "I think it has more to do with what's going on in the world than what time of day it is."

On Tuesday in California, White House spokesman Larry Speakes he had nothing to say on the NBC report broadcast Monday.

Parts of Twin Falls lose power in storm

TWIN FALLS — Severe winds and heavy rain in less than an hour struck Twin Falls Tuesday evening, flooding streets and basements and causing power outages.

The cloudburst and accompanying wind hit about 7 p.m.

Lightning reportedly struck power lines causing extensive power outages in the downtown area of Twin Falls and residential area to the northeast of the business district.

Police reported outages set off alarms simultaneously in banks and other businesses.

Mike Mann of Idaho Power Co. said about 950 users were without power for 30 minutes and about 300 more were out of service for 40 minutes. He said a large metal frame building was picked up by the winds and blown across a road, scattering metal siding and roofing over the road and fields.

The Twin Falls sheriff's office was in the dark about 30 minutes and unable to communicate with radio units. Calls were being rerouted through the Twin Falls City Public Safety Department. A sheriff's dispatcher said later no reports of damage had been received, but it may have been because nobody could call in the reports.

In the Willow Creek area of Cassia County a severe rain and wind storm hit along the southern mountains earlier in the day.

Austin Helms, who lives 11 miles south and a mile east of Burley, said the storm struck about 4:30 p.m., dropping nearly an inch of rain and causing fish and food conditions.

He said a large metal frame building was picked up by the winds and blown across a road, scattering metal siding and roofing over the road and fields.

One roof section, about 30 by 40 feet in size, was blown 100 yards into a field. Helms said some potato fields may have been damaged by the flash flooding that followed the storm.

College of Southern Idaho weather station attendants said the Twin Falls storm left .46 of an inch of precipitation and generated winds clocked at 38.1 mph.

Twin Falls city police dispatched city trucks and crews in response to numerous calls of flooded intersections, but little damage to homes or other buildings was found.

Buhl police reported flooding of several buildings including the Country Corner store and a number of homes in the lower areas of town.

On the north side of the Snake River, only light rain was reported. The Jerome County Fair rodeo was not canceled.

Mine quest combs Red Sea but no devices found so far

By The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Divers, Egyptian vessels and a sonar-equipped U.S. Navy ship have been unable to locate any mines in the Gulf of Suez or the Red Sea, although the number of vessels that reportedly have encountered underwater explosives in the chief Pentagon spokesman said Tuesday.

Meanwhile, a flotilla of British and French minesweepers and support vessels entered the Suez Canal as the vanguard of an international force that will sweep the Red Sea approaches for mines planted by unknown terrorists.

The scope of the search is expanding to include the Saudi Arabian port of Jidda and, perhaps later, the Saudi port of Yanbu. The two cities on the Red Sea are transit points for pilgrims visiting the Islamic holy city of Mecca.

Pentagon spokesman Michael I. Burch said the Saudis requested the assistance. He termed the request "prudent" and a reflection of "nervousness and concern" about the safety of the harbors during the summer pilgrimages.

The Pentagon sent three minesweeping RH-53D Sea Stallion helicopters to Saudi Arabia, along with about 120 U.S. troops, to comb the ports and the channels leading to them, said Burch, assistant secretary of defense for public affairs.

Four other helicopters aboard the U.S. naval transport Shreveport in the Mediterranean Sea are heading for the Suez Canal and are expected to begin minesweeping operations in the Gulf of Suez later this week, Burch said.

Times correspondent David Lamb reported from Cairo that the British warship — four minesweepers and a support vessel — anchored off Port Said at the mouth of the canal after arriving early in the day from the eastern Mediterranean. They were joined by two French minehunters and another support ship Tuesday night and began to transit the canal.

They may be joined later in the operation by units from Italy, Greece and the Netherlands.

Burch said that, if the minesweeping forces can retrieve a mine, they will "most likely" be able to determine its origin — a first step in discovering who planted it. He said that the Harkness, a Navy research ship using sonar, has come across "suspicious" objects that were thought to have been mines, but he added that divers found nothing but debris.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak last week accused Libya or Iran of planting the mines, but Monday he singled out Libya as the sole culprit.

The official Libyan press responded to the Egyptian charge by threatening Tuesday to "report revolution and revolutionary violence" to any Arab country that cooperates with Western minesweeping operations. The threat was taken in Cairo to be directed at Egypt, although Egypt was not mentioned by name.

Utah ranch mishap kills Oakley boy

BURLEY — A 14-year-old Oakley boy was killed in a tractor accident Tuesday afternoon on a ranch about nine and one half miles south of the Utah-Idaho state line.

Cassia County Under Sheriff Biny Crystal identified the victim as Glenn Lind, son of Gerald and Margene Lind of Oakley.

Crystal said the boy was operating a tractor on a public road near the old Lin school about 5:30 p.m. He was driving up a steep incline with two other Oakley youths on a trailer behind the tractor. Mrs. Lind was standing on the tractor hitch. The machine stalled and when the boy attempted to back it down the hill, the trailer jackknifed, causing the tractor to roll down a 20-foot embankment.

Crystal said the fender on a rear wheel came to rest on the boy's head. He died at the scene. The others escaped injury.

The accident occurred in Box Elder County, Utah, Crystal said, but the scene was much more accessible to Cassia County officers than Utah authorities.

Hatfield press concerns panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — A key Senate Ethics Committee staff member looking into $55,000 in payments to Sen. Mark Hatfield's wife was concerned that publicity about the case might stop the panel from "doing anything until the election," according to a panel transcript.

The staffer's comments came while two former employees of Basil Tsakos, the Greek businessman who paid Antoinette Hatfield, were testifying under oath on Aug. 1. The witnesses, Marilyn Mangan and Margaret Stocker, disputed Hatfield's account of the payments.

Hatfield, an Oregon Republican seeking re-election to a fourth term, has denied any wrongdoing in the case.

However, he said Monday that he made an "error in judgment" in not ending the payments Tsakos made in 1982 and 1983 to his wife for real estate work. The senator has lobbied federal officials on behalf of a proposal by Tsakos to build a $12 billion oil pipeline across Africa.

The senator said there was no connection between the money and his support of the pipeline, a statement contradicted by Ms. Mangan and Ms. Stocker in their sworn testimony to the Ethics Committee.

Block hit on nutrition info

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary John R. Block has "systematically sabotaged" the Agriculture Department's nutrition information programs, a public interest group charged Tuesday.

The group, Public Citizen, issued a report asserting that President Reagan and Block "have stubbornly ignored all the evidence that supports nutrition education and the vigorous promotion of dietary guidelines."

"Nutrition education programs already proven to be cost-effective are threatened by arbitrary funding cutoffs, staff reductions and outright termination," the report said.

Also, it said, the availability of popular USDA nutrition publications has been "severely curtailed" by lack of publicity, budget cutbacks and the administration's policy of charging fees for material previously distributed free or at nominal cost.

The report contended that on the nutrition issue, Block was "a prisoner of his blind allegiance to agricultural commodity groups."

Feds ask relief in crash ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department said it will file suit Wednesday in federal court in Minneapolis seeking nearly $15 million in damages because it contends the government was denied important evidence in a fatal airplane crash in which it paid nearly $4.7 million in claims.

The complaint charges that the plaintiffs, including three Minnesota law firms, withheld important evidence pertaining to a July 12, 1978, crash of a privately leased plane near Fairbault, Minn., in which six people were killed.

In April, U.S. District Judge Diana Murphy ruled that the federal government was 90 percent to blame for the plane crash because air traffic controllers failed to give the pilot directions around bad weather.

Buses with athletes collide

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two buses carrying Kenyan Olympic athletes to the Los Angeles International Airport collided on a highway Tuesday, and at least 11 athletes suffered minor injuries, officials said.

The buses were entering the San Diego Freeway in West Los Angeles when the trailing bus struck the other in the rear about 4:40 p.m. MDT, said California Highway Patrol officer Gabriel Sanchez.

Eleven athletes were treated for scratches and bruises at the scene and taken to an airport aid station, said CHP officer Brian Bonessa.

None of the 18 passengers in the front bus was injured.

Acid rain study points to low limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — A scientific study suggests that pollutant limits being proposed by environmentalists are too high to save sensitive lakes and streams in Northeastern states from acid rain.

Some environmentalists say results of the study could make it harder to win acid-rain controls in Congress next year.

Evilie Gorham, a scientist in the department of ecology and behavioral biology at the University of Minnesota, concludes in the report that, to avoid aquatic damage, no area should receive more than 12 pounds to 14 pounds of sulfur compounds per acre per year in rain or snow.

This is well below the figure of 18 pounds per acre that environmentalists have been using as the maximum allowable level.

Sulfur dioxide — emitted by power plants and industrial boilers — is transformed in the atmosphere to acid rain, which has been blamed for killing millions of fish in lakes in northern New England and the Adirondack Mountains of upstate New York.

Scientists still dispute the speed at which lakes are becoming acidic and how long some in the Adirondacks have been acidic. And no one can yet pinpoint the origin of sulfur compounds in any particular downpour of acid rain.

The testing remark was a stupid slip

Testing. Testing. "I've signed legislation that will outlaw Russia forever. We begin bombing in five minutes."

Psychologists say the kind of remarks we make in an unguarded moment, the kind of jokes we tell and at whose expense, say a lot about our secret personalities.

If that's the case, we would guess many Americans and countless people in other countries gave a private shudder on hearing about President Ronald Reagan's "testing" remark before the airing of his Saturday radio show.

What manner of man is running the nation who would fantasize in his private moments about bombing the Soviet Union? Can we dismiss the comment as merely a joke, or does it display some pervasive ignorance on the president's part about the power of peace or war that he holds?

We would not go so far as the Social Democrat party in West Germany which called Reagan an "irresponsible old man," but the comment is certain to raise questions about his grasp of foreign policy issues and to reinforce the view of many that Reagan lacks understanding of how to improve American-Soviet relations.

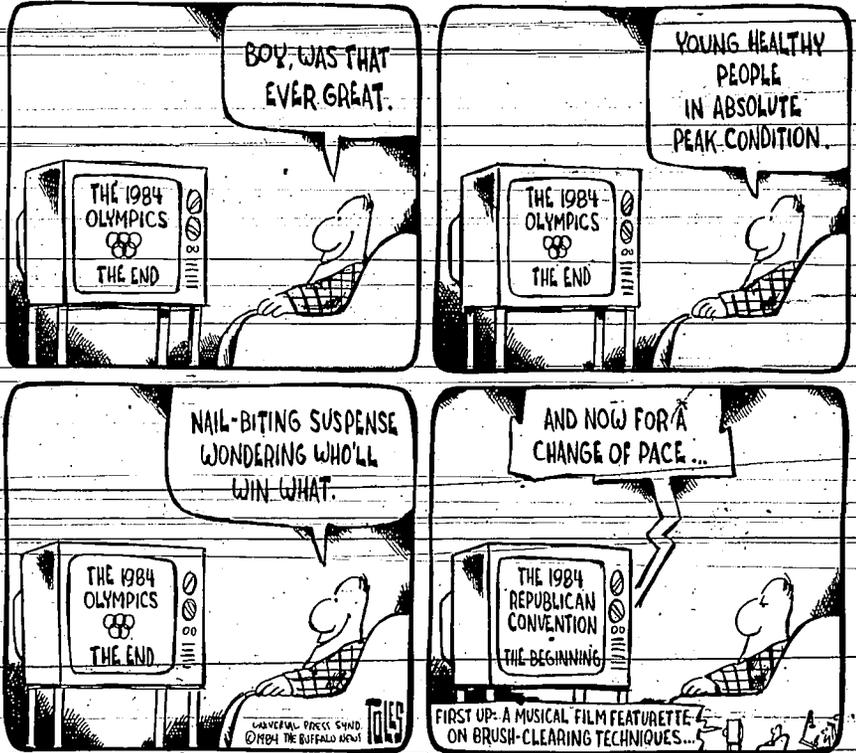

Democrats, of course, can hardly contain their glee. Soon, the cartoons will be flowing out on the editorial pages. This is, after all, an election year.

The White House has continued to treat the remark as an "off the record" that somehow didn't occur. That stonewalling, we think, will only prolong the public response.

Blunders by high public officials in unprotected moments are not all that unusual, but few have been met with such disbelief. Perhaps that is because we all live in a tense nuclear world where every comment becomes grist to either deny or confirm people's deep fears.

Reagan is not about to launch a strike against the Soviet Union but we would all rest easier if these little events from out of old movie melodramas and fighter pictures didn't keep creeping into the administration of the nation's affairs.

At the minimum, the "testing" remark was a stupid slip; no one wants to think it had meaning beyond that.

A codger's hanging out in my garden

A codger has been hanging around my back yard, and I don't know how to make him go away. I have no idea where he came from or why the old fool chose my back yard to skulk about in. But he's there, and I wish one of you would offer some advice as to how to shake him loose.

He showed up in the spring when the early season sun was pumping life into my garden. As I recall, I first spotted him just about the time the onion sets began to test the spring breezes with their fingers.

He's been around, off and on, ever since. I say off and on, because he has a knack for avoiding me, despite my attempts to catch him. I glance from my window and spot him. I hit out after him, but apparently he knows I am coming. He always vanishes, depriving me of the confrontation.

So I have to be content to watch him from my window and try to figure out who he might be. By now, I have watched him long enough to decide that I don't particularly like him. To begin with, he is far too dull and meddling for my tastes. He dresses funny. He wears those dark green work suits that everyone's grandfather wore. He holds his pants up with suspenders bought some time ago -- when Mr. Roebuck was always mentioned in conjunction with Mr. Sears.

He's slow. Most of the people I know have the good sense to confront the world at breakneck speeds. They move. They fidget and fuss. They are important enough to look harassed.

But not the codger. He employs the gall of someone who has no appointments to keep. I can't stand that.

He shuffles and dodgers. He wears the face of a dullard. It must be senility.

But what's worse is his behavior toward my garden. He showed up when it did, and now I'm convinced that it's why he has chosen to invade my yard.

When he's among the plants, he dotes in the most pathetic manner.

He has this little routine he observes each day. He becomes the aged and paternalistic general inspecting the troops. He paces between the rows of infantry that are the carrots and beans and onions.

Then he lingers in his review of the heavy artillery -- the tomato sets that are now tree-sized and the squash vines that have made their section of the plot a jungle.

He fondles the tomato vines, looking for the first bush of August on the fruit.

Now he finds a weed. He doesn't just pull it. He dashes it to the ground as if he were Jerry Falwell and the weed a skin magazine he had found under his son's bed.

He curses grasshoppers and aphids. I have often seen old men exhibit such silly behavior around their plants. It is sad to see perfectly reasonable people reduced to clucking old mother hens. It's disgusting.

And for one haven't a clue as to why my garden makes me act this way.

The ledge of 'dangerous' language is a precipitous one

Charles Levendosky

There comes a time in many male-female relationships when two people approach the ledge of "dangerous language."

There comes a time when the easy, casual attitude of a relationship becomes more serious, more demanding.

Comes a time when the hesitations in the air between them throb and wait to be filled with more meaning; when their hesitations speak more profoundly than their words.

There comes a time when the language between them begs to speak of a depth and commitment each of them feels. The time of dangerous language, for what is spoken defines and freezes a reality between them. What is spoken will determine the future direction of their relationship.

This is a frightening time, filled with promise, expectation, and vulnerability. This is the time when language propelled by emotion rushes to fill the void, to speak of needs beyond the immediate. It is a paradoxical time when words are poured by passion, yet measured by caution. The time when language becomes dangerous, because it may promise more than was meant. Because lives are altered by what seems to have been promised.

There are no rules about where or when such language is spoken, or nearly spoken; during a long-distance telephone call; over lunch in a crowded cafeteria; during an intimate, white-linen dinner with blown crystal wineglasses, candlelight and a rose in an elegant vase, and an attentive but discreet waiter; or while sitting crosslegged on a red-chenille bedspread in a cheap motel, turned half-away from shyness. We nearly choke on our emotions and our intent.

Hesitations are followed by tentative expressions: "I think I love you." Or "You know, with a little encouragement, I could love you." Leaning out of ourselves, out of our protective shells we timidly offer our vulnerabilities to one another. First, we offer ourselves cautiously, then if encouraged, passionately. As a female wolf offers her throat to the dominant male.

These same words can be bargained as mere tokens to be exchanged for sexual favors, but in those instances no emotional vulnerability is offered; only a temporary vulnerability of the flesh. We usually learn the difference, painfully.

Although the word "love" in our language has wide and commonplace usage, the physical-psychological context defines its special, highly emotional meaning. We can say, "I love ice cream," or "I love my dog." We can sign off our letters with "Love." We can even say to a close friend, "I love you." But none of these mean the kind of significance that is implied in the context of offering yourself to another in a profoundly passionate commitment.

Hesitations in a deepening relationship are the vacuums caused by avoiding the word "love." We try to avoid the pain of rejection. We may use synonyms -- none are exact; none imply the commitment as clearly. We stumble over our avoidances. We commit avoidance to avoid commitment. We are suddenly acutely aware of statements which reach toward something beyond our daily lives and imply a promise.

All of us remember the trepidation we felt as we prepared to voice our feelings to those we love. The anticipation of that first statement and possible reactions terrified us. How will she react? Is it too soon to speak of these things? Am I a fool? Have I built all this up in my mind? Is this feeling only one-sided? Will I be hurt again?

We doubt; we hesitate; we fear rejection -- even when subtle signals of voice tone and body have encouraged us. We torture ourselves with doubt which may really reflect concerns about our own willingness to offer such a pledge.

Moments of great tension or emotion open our conscious minds to specifics we usually forget. Many of us can remember exquisite details about our surroundings the time we made our first declarations of love. The air is electric with our passion. Colors and fragrances are more vivid. The bright world is an extension of our feelings.

"Never that word again." Not like the first time -- the way "the word of love twists then numbs the tongue." No matter what path a relationship eventually takes, the dangerous ledge of love's first expression has been passed. We seem secure. Seem.

Letters/ 'Money addiction' seen as leading to social, environmental problems

Another tragic drug story

There is a lot of legitimate concern these days for personal, family, sociological and economic problems connected with drug and alcohol addiction. The stories are many and the endings too often tragic, but I believe there is another and just as tragic a story connected with it I can only term the "money addiction."

Just as with drug and alcohol addiction, money addiction distorts other values, affects us as individuals and as a community tearing apart our homes. It manifests itself in an overabundance of shopping malls, plastic and asphalt, in chemical waste dumps, in polluted air and water, in pork barrel projects such as the proposed New Production Reactor at INEL, and in the mental and economic attitudes of those so-called community leaders that somehow feel we can take and take, grow and grow and not one day pay the price for this opulence.

Yeah -- we need an economic base. We need good quality work for ourselves, but let us make these economic decisions based on true need and not upon pure greed. Just living here in Idaho in the Magic Valley makes us richer than many -- let us not see office life for ourselves or our children just to make a buck; just to get that green fix which buys neither health nor happiness. Let us keep a wary eye on the professional developer whose stake in a multitude of projects is merely profit and has no sense of or responsibility to the community.

This money addiction is every bit as dangerous for it rodes us drug or alcohol addiction for it rodes the real social and environmental base from which a lasting quality must grow.

WILLIAM K. CHISHOLM

Where's the political truth?

Some political commentators are claiming that the public is forcing candidates to lie, to distort and make promises that they know they cannot fulfill. It is possible that were to blame for the only two promises made at the Democratic Convention, that they would raise taxes and they would cut defense spending to create less deficits. The rest was pure rant about the brassiness of the present administration. Let's start from scratch.

We have just listened to the Democratic National Convention and while we must admit that the charges made there were for party reasons, still common sense tells us that those making the accusations would do the same things if elected. Still it gives pause for sober thinking on the depravity of high officials.

The call to cut out waste, to reduce the national deficit was an old and sickening wall. Did you hear one of the huge banking powers, Chase-Manhattan, Citicorp, Bank of America or any of the hundreds of lesser banks with billions to invest, quibble about buying those bonds? No indeed, those securities pay the highest and safest interest rates and are guaranteed by the American taxpayer.

Did you hear any speech that attacked the squandering of billions by allocations to senseless projects? Today we have thousands of bureaus, study committees, etc., busy with both hands in the till scooping out the billions. To name but two out of the hundreds may give you an inkling of this squandering: a study on raising bullfrogs in the cattle ranges of Nebraska, and a study on how wild burros reproduce, and so on until the mind sickens at the mentality of those in our government.

The horrible graft in the national defense contracts leads directly into the Pentagon where it is hushed up by firing those who expose it. Did you hear any speech calling for a house cleaning in that den of sticky fingers and incompetence? Suffice to say the taxpayer and national safety is being a royal screw by a select few.

In the August Issue of Readers Digest there is another of many articles on the padding of defense contracts and the hoodluming of those who undertake to expose these billions of graft.

Now we have listened to a week of Democratic speeches telling us the sad story of Republican mismanagement, a week of "political experts" telling us what the man just said, now let us listen to the Republicans extol their virtues and hope for a single word on how they will correct the evils of a government with one hand in your pocket and the other held out for you to shake.

It was great to hear Walter Mondale promise to raise taxes but disappointing not to hear one word about the 1,462 bureaus created by Congress, of the graft and incompetence in the Pentagon. Not one word on cutting down expenses by firing the hordes of "incompetence" that infest the bodies of taxpayers. Not one word on curtailing the world travel of congressmen who, with their "secretaries," the best "drinkin' likker" -- how much will line the pockets of defense contractors? We will be treated to a week of Republican ranting with protestations of saving the world from nuclear holocaust and a week of political experts telling what the man said.

Turn the telly off and relax in your easy chair. The wind just blew through your whiskers. Politicians, face the facts if you dare.

The lie between Pentagon officials and defense contractors was fully revealed Wednesday night on the regular news broadcasts.

Republican platform bears clear mark of conservatives

DALLAS (AP) — Republican conservatives put their clear imprint on the party's proposed 1984 platform Tuesday.

They toughened a no-tax-increase stand with a strategically placed comma, gave a cold-shoulder to the ERA and adopted pointed language on abortion and school prayer.

Before reversing itself later in the day, one subcommittee even proposed elimination of all taxes on savings income despite strenuous White House opposition.

"There was no White House pressure, we did it (reversed-itself) ourselves," contended Sen. Robert Kastan of Wisconsin, chairman of the platform subcommittee on economic progress.

"What we have done is more in agreement with what the White House wanted, but they didn't tell us to do it."

Administration officials opposed repealing tax on interest because it would represent a multi-billion drain on the treasury.

The pinch-stroke by recommendations for replacement of the entire U.S. tax code with a simple, flat-rate tax plan and voted to repeal the tax on windfall-oil-revenues — two other ideas that make the White House nervous.

Drew Lewis, President Reagan's emissary to the platform-panel, told reporters the administration would like the flat tax to be listed as an option for tax overhaul rather than a requirement and would seek such a modification at a drafting session before the full 106-member Platform Committee on Wednesday.

Lewis also said administration officials were reviewing the economic impact of a windfall profits tax repeal to see whether it was acceptable.

And he said the short-lived effort to repeal taxes on savings interest would have been at least a "$7 billion hit, a bonanza for the rich."

Rep. Jim Leach of Iowa, spokesman for a group of moderate Republicans, said the platform draft as it stood after a busy day Tuesday represented such a turn to the right for the party that it is a "profound disappointment" to moderates.

"A lot of people this November will hold their noses and vote Republican," Leach said.

Rep. Trent Lott — of Mississippi, chairman of the full platform committee, said there was tremendous support among delegates for repealing the taxes on interest income and the idea just took off before cooler heads prevailed.

"I know the popularity of that issue," Lott said.

On the matter of the crucial comma that made the anti-tax language stronger, and seemingly more restrictive, Lott said, "I think we're splitting the salamander too thin."

Ferraro hits claim of former attorney

By The Los Angeles Times

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine A. Ferraro said Tuesday that a statement by a former federal election attorney who said he advised her 1978 campaign against accepting large family loans, which later were ruled illegal, is "absolutely not" true.

At a news conference in San Jose, Ferraro insisted that her husband and former campaign treasurer were truthful when they told the Federal Election Commission six years ago that the campaign accepted $134,000 in family loans after being advised by the attorney that they were legal.

As a result of their claim of improper legal advice, the FEC decided to levy relatively small fines against the Ferraro congressional campaign.

But David Stein, the former Federal Election Commission attorney who advised her 1978 campaign, said in a statement released by his New York office that he advised Ferraro campaign officials against accepting campaign loans of more than $1,000 from members of her family.

"I recall voicing my doubts regarding the propriety of loans by members of the candidate's immediate family," Stein said, describing an "informal meeting" he attended in Ferraro's home in New York. Stein said he cannot recall his precise words, but insisted that he advised the campaign that "I did not believe it would be permissible."

Stein stressed his meeting was an informal one and said that he had never engaged in a confidential attorney-client relationship with either Ferraro or her husband. He said he never heard from the Ferraro campaign again and never was contacted by the FEC.

Stein said that he has a general law practice and is "not politically involved in any fashion." He said he first discussed the matter a few days ago with the conservative newspaper Human Events only because that paper was the first to inform him that his name had figured in the loan controversy.

Stein declined to answer additional questions from reporters.

"Absolutely not," said Ferraro, when asked about the accuracy of Stein's statement.

She noted that her husband, John A. Zaccaro, and her former treasurer, David Blankstein, told the FEC in affidavits of having received improper advice.

"Those affidavits were absolutely accurate in 1978, they are absolutely accurate today," Ferraro said, adding that there were witnesses to that meeting and that after she contacts them, she will release their names.

She also said that she believes questions about her personal finances will plague her through the Nov. 6 election. "It's something else for the Republicans to focus on," she said.

"They don't want to discuss the issues. The issues are not in their favor."

Ferraro's first campaign trip to California has been overshadowed by continuing questions about her finances.

On Sunday, as she prepared to leave Washington for California, she told reporters that she would not make public her husband's tax returns because he felt it might hurt his business interests. But she said she would release her own returns.

Mondale opens South campaign

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale opened his two-day Southern campaign swing Tuesday with promises to emphasize conventional military readiness over nuclear weaponry and to streamline the top command of the armed services if elected president.

But the Democratic presidential candidate was pegged by questioners about the finances of his running mate's husband and the Rev. Jesse Jackson's criticism of his campaign's appeal to blacks.

Illegal migrants forced to leave after winning house in drawing

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — An illegal alien couple spotted by immigration officials when their picture was published because they won a house in a charity drawing were ordered Tuesday to return to Mexico within four months.

Immigration Judge O. John Brahos of Chicago ruled Tuesday that Jose Carmona, 29, and his wife, Silvia, 24, were subject to deportation. But despite the objections of a government attorney, he granted their request to be allowed to leave the United States voluntarily rather than be deported and gave them until Dec. 14.

"I'm really sad," Carmona, a roofer whose four young children are U.S. citizens, said after the hearing. "I just feel terrible. It's a bad day for us."

The Carmonas can seek an extension of the Dec. 14 deadline and have 10 days to appeal the ruling, but Carmona said he did not know what they would do. By avoiding deportation, the couple remains eligible to seek a visa to return to the United States.

After winning a drawing sponsored by Lutheran charities, the family was able to move from a housing project into a west side home in June through a five-year, interest-free loan in exchange for their "sweat equity" in fixing up the house.

After a picture and story about a June 13 open house appeared in the Kansas City Times, U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials charged the Carmonas with being illegal aliens.

Responding through a government-supplied interpreter at Tuesday's hearing, the Carmonas admitted they were not U.S. citizens. They refused to say whether they were natives or citizens of Mexico or to say when they entered the United States.

Reagan gives his daughter in marriage to yoga teacher

By The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — President Reagan climaxed his summer vacation Tuesday afternoon by presenting his 31-year-old daughter, Patti Davis, in marriage to her yoga instructor, Paul Grilley, 25.

The 20-minute "very private" and "quite traditional" service was conducted by the Rev. Donn Moomaw on the lawn of the plush Bel Air Hotel, near where the bride once took horseback riding lessons as a child.

It was followed by a wedding dinner — also private — for the 130 guests, after which the newlyweds drove away for a honeymoon at an undisclosed location.

The couple said they plan eventually to live in Santa Monica, Calif.

The bride wore something old (a bracelet that originally belonged to her great-grandmother), something new (a long, off-the-shoulder gown of white silk lace and charmeuse with full sleeves and a long skirt designed by Mariana Zaharoff of Chicago), something borrowed (a ring on her right hand borrowed from attendant Lanetta Wahlgren) and something blue (a garter given her by her mother).

Her going-away outfit, also by Zaharoff, was an off-white, three-piece suit of charmeuse, with a long circle skirt, drape-neckline top and fitted jacket. The bride's attendants — who wore draped coral silk charmeuse gowns — included Doris Reagan, who is married to Patti's brother Ron, and Lanetta Wahlgren, the bride's best friend. — Ushers were Michael Grilley, 13, brother of the groom and Michael Stratton, friend of the groom from Lake Jackson, Texas.

The president and first lady met Grilley's parents — Terrance and Donna Grilley of Columbia Falls, Mont. — for the first time at a wedding rehearsal Monday afternoon, though the two mothers had spoken by telephone several times since the engagement was announced last April.

Trifa deported

WASHINGTON (AP) — Romanian Orthodox Archbishop Valerian Trifa, accused of fomenting off-anti-Jewish riots that killed 500 people during World War II, has been deported from the United States to Portugal, the Justice Department announced Tuesday.

Stephen Trott, assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division, told a news conference that the 70-year-old Trifa, who had been ordered deported in October, 1982, left the United States Monday evening and had arrived in Lisbon.

PG-13 Rating Introduced

A new rating category is in place as of July 1. This new category is inserted between the current PG and R ratings. It is designated as "PG-13: Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children."

The revised five-category system of the voluntary film industry rating program is now as follows:

- G General Audiences; all ages admitted.
- PG Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.
- PG-13 Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.
- R Restricted, under-17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.
- X No one under 17 admitted.

All films rated after July 1 will be given ratings under the new five-category system.

Grasshopper attack continues

TWIN FALLS (AP) — The spray project against grasshoppers threatening southern Idaho crops covered another 5,336 acres of public land on Tuesday, but federal officials suspect there won't be enough money left to spray hoppers emerging in Oneida County. Most of the money remaining in a $400,000 federal appropriation probably will be spent on rangelands in a three-county area north of Rupert, said Roger Pollard of the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Twin Falls.

Pilots sprayed in the Magic Valley's Bell Rapids area on Tuesday, but winds kept them away from grasshopper-plagued areas in Mindoka County, Pollard said.

Thursday, spray planes had covered about 53,400 acres in the southern part of the state. Roughly another 35,000 remain to be sprayed.

Jones to handle power issue

BOISE (AP) — Attorney General Jim Jones says he will personally handle cogeneration litigation on behalf of the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

Jones said Tuesday a July 12 decision by the Idaho Supreme Court has clouded the future of cogeneration in the Gem State.

The latest decision, which makes cogeneration contracts subject to review, may keep companies from producing power that is a bargain to ratepayers, Jones said.

That decision modified an earlier ruling in a long-running legal battle by Idaho Power Co. over the rates it must pay cogenerators, which produce small amounts of electricity as a byproduct of other manufacturing activities.

Work site toxins found lower

MOUNTAIN HOME (AP) — Levels of toxins suspected in the lunchroom and maintenance shop at an Owyhee County hazardous-waste dump are lower than officials believed earlier, a federal agency says.

As a result, EnviroSAFE Services of Idaho Inc., operator of the dump, now faces fewer allegations of "serious" violations, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration said Tuesday.

The number of violations categorized as serious has been reduced from five to three, said Bill Newman, OSHA's acting supervisor in Boise. Penalties related to the two reduced allegations have been dropped.

Stivers: state workers need a job

BOISE (AP) — House Speaker Tom Stivers thinks many of the state's 12,000 employees are underworked.

"What they need is more incentive, more work to do," said Stivers. He said he thought the state work force could be trimmed by at least 10 percent, and some agencies have 20 percent more employees than they need.

Stivers called a Statehouse news conference on Tuesday to talk about familiar themes. He said he thought the state's economy is in such good shape that there should be no need for tax increases. As usual, most of Stivers' barbs were aimed at the state's Democratic governor, John Evans with a continuing call for less state spending and fewer state workers.

Stivers said what the state needs is more "management" of the agencies. Of Evans' budget agency, the Division of Financial Management, Stivers said "that agency needs to spend less time with its computers and more time out in the field managing the state agencies."

"It must be done, it should be done and it had better be done," Stivers said.

more emphasis on work-release centers to ease overcrowding at the state's prisons.

A recent census showed the facilities are 32 percent over their designed capacity. "The whole world knows that kind of overcrowding leads to violence," said Stivers. He said the state should turn to numerous work-release centers for the younger, non-violent offenders. The facilities should be built privately and leased to the state, he said.

The state's first work-release center at Boise "shows the value of such a center," Stivers said.

Craig blasts Hellar remarks

BOISE (AP) — Rep. Larry Craig is blasting Democratic challenger Bill Hellar for releasing information about an accident at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory without checking first with INEL officials.

"When we found out about the accident, instead of running to the press, we checked with the management," Craig said Tuesday during a campaign swing through Boise.

Hellar, a Coeur d'Alene businessman, held a news conference Monday about a Wednesday accident in which a 135-ton shipping container used to transport radioactive wastes fell off a truck.

When pressed to come up with specific recommendations where the state work force should be cut, Stivers said he thinks the state liquor agency isn't run efficiently, and the Department of Revenue and Taxation appears to have too many workers.

Fire crews leave blaze

BOISE (AP) — The Forest Service on Tuesday planned to withdraw crews from a 46-acre forest fire in the Gospel Hump Wilderness Area, and a 1,200-acre range fire near Brownlee Reservoir.

The Gospel Hump fire caused by lightning burned about 40 acres, Nezperce National Forest officials said. Smokejumpers were withdrawn from the fire on Tuesday after it was contained, but ground crews remained on the scene.

The fire near Brownlee Reservoir on the Idaho-Oregon border was contained Tuesday afternoon, and Welsler Ranger District officials predicted conditions would continue to improve by evening.

BLM asks farmers to curb fossil erosion

By HAL BERTON
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — The Bureau of Land Management has asked eight Bell Rapids farming operations to curb irrigation practices that agency officials say are destroying the Hagerman fossil beds.

At a Monday evening meeting with the Bell Rapids Mutual Irrigation District's board of directors, BLM officials said they hope to work with the farmers in a cooperative effort to solve the erosion problems plaguing the fossil beds.

But in a certified letter mailed last week to the eight farming operations, Gary Carson, a Boise BLM District area manager, said that he would pursue "legal avenues" if voluntary cooperation was not successful.

The Bell Rapids Irrigation district encompasses 25,000 acres of farm land on the mesa that contains the Hagerman fossils. Snake River water is pumped to the mesa to irrigate the Bell Rapids crops. Some of the water is eroding the fossil beds as the runoff drains back to the river along the mesa face.

To protect the fossil beds, the BLM could either seek a court injunction to force a change in irrigation practices or mandate a total shut-down of some farms.

At the Monday meeting, BLM officials showed slides documenting the extent of erosion damage at the fossil bed site. And they also showed slides of empty pesticide cans and other debris that litter the upper slopes of the fossil site, which has been designated a National Natural Landmark.

"We don't think that the site should be used as a dumping ground," Ted Weasna, a BLM paleontologist, told the irrigation board members. Weasna also said the site continued to be scarred by trail bike riders. Three different no-biking signs posted on the beds have been torn down and destroyed within the past two years, he said.

Carson said that in recent years the Hagerman site has "become more visible, both nationally and internationally. As things get more political, we're going to lose control of this thing."

In the mid-1970's the National Park Service studied the fossil beds for possible designation as a national monument, a move advocated by paleontologists to give the site greater protection. However, the monument designation was never approved by Congress.

Several farmers argued that erosion was not all bad, because it sometimes helps uncover fossils.

"What's wrong with water? It makes a little green and that makes us a little green," said one young farmer.

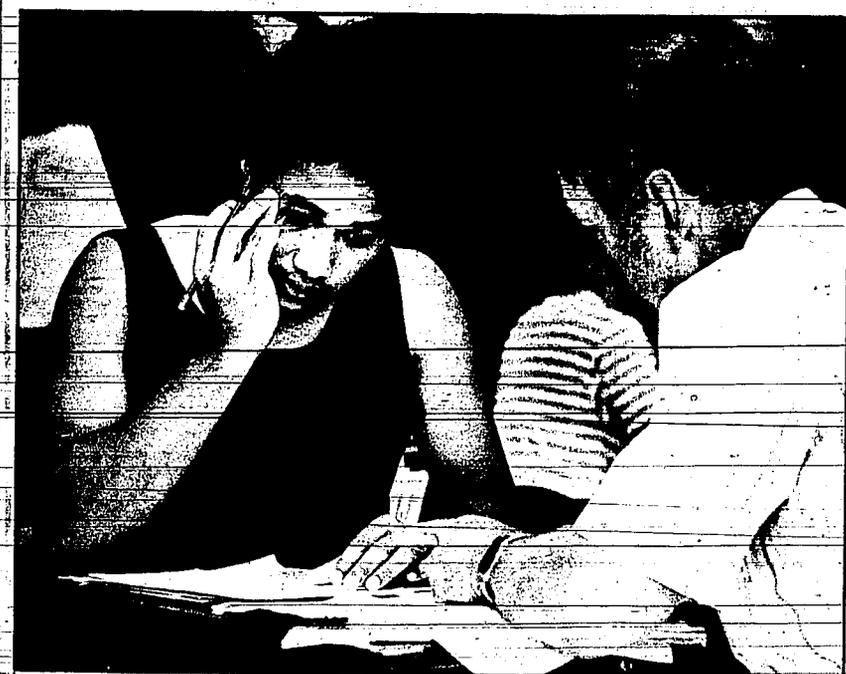

Weasna said irrigation-caused erosion has destroyed, not uncovered fossils, by burying them at the bottom of slides.

Derrell Savage, the general manager of the irrigation project, struck a conciliatory note about the erosion problem. "There's a problem here and we got to work with these people and try to solve it," he told the board.

BLM officials said they would help to secure U.S. Soil Conservation Service, matching funds to help modify the irrigation systems to reduce erosion.

The irrigation board members said they needed more time to study a recently released U.S. Geological Survey report documenting erosion problems, but agreed to meet for an Aug. 27 on-site inspection (our of the damaged fossil areas).

Heroin bust dropped after time expires

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man will not face charges of selling heroin, because the Twin Falls County Prosecutor's office failed to set a trial date within the required time.

District Judge Daniel Meehl, however, on Monday allowed prosecutors to pursue a related cocaine possession charge against 51-year-old Frank Lela Garcia.

Garcia of 430 Elm St. was arrested Sept. 27 at a Twin Falls grocery store for possessing five grams of heroin with the intention of selling the drug. If convicted, he could have faced life in prison.

On Aug. 1, defense lawyer Frank Dykas filed a request to drop the heroin charge. Under the law, a trial date should have been set — but was not — set within six months after the charge was filed in district court on Feb. 1, Dykas claimed. The prosecutor's office had taken no action despite his demands in April for a speedy trial, he added.

"This is a terrible case. It's riddled with holes," Dykas said at a Monday hearing.

Twin Falls County Deputy Prosecutor Dennis Voorhees argued that Garcia's rights had not been hurt by the delay.

Meehl, however, agreed with the defense. There was no reason why the case should not have been set for trial, he said.

Voorhees said later Monday that it was doubtful the heroin charge could be refilled under the circumstances of the dismissal.

To prevent future dismissals on similar grounds, the prosecutor's office has initiated a "safety net,"

Voorhees said. It consists of a file system that allows the staff to run monthly checks on its volume of cases to determine if time is running out on the six-month trial-setting requirement, Voorhees said.

He added that this system was not in operation in time to prevent dismissal of the charge against Garcia.

Another reason leading to the delay in the Garcia case was the existence of other charges, Voorhees said.

Besides the heroin charge, Garcia also was arrested for possessing one gram of cocaine and one ounce of marijuana.

The marijuana charge eventually was dismissed. Following a January preliminary hearing, a magistrate judge also dropped the cocaine possession charge on lack of sufficient evidence.

Former Prosecutor Harry DeHaan, however, refilled the cocaine charge in May. In response, Dykas filed an action questioning the validity of refilled cocaine charges. When the decision to refill was upheld, Dykas filed a request to appeal the ruling.

The litigation further "clogged" the heroin case, Voorhees added.

At the Monday hearing, Dykas said the prosecution didn't have new evidence to support the cocaine charge. In addition, the magistrate judge who dismissed the original allegation had made an error.

Before Voorhees could argue against the request to appeal, Meehl denied it and said the prosecution had the right to refill. The prosecutors may have more evidence to support the cocaine charge than presented at the preliminary hearing, Meehl said.

Garcia will be charged today in magistrate court on the refilled cocaine possession charge.

Parks chief backs Reagan's record

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — The Reagan administration has been good to America's national parks and the grizzly bear should stay in Yellowstone.

So says National Park Service Director Russell Dickenson, a 40-year veteran of the agency who entered office during the final year of the Carter administration and was retained by Reagan.

Dickenson, talking to The Times-News on Tuesday, is in Sun Valley to open the four-day conference "Parks in the West" that begins this morning at the Elkhorn Resort hotel. The conference, which features top officials and experts on parks, is sponsored by the Institute of the American West.

Although hired under former Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus in Carter's last year in office, Dickenson says criticisms by environmentalists that the national parks have deteriorated under Reagan are false.

"The doomsayers like to say that parks are not in good shape," says the 62-year-old director. "I don't believe that. I think the public is being served very well by Reagan."

Dickenson says Reagan and his interior secretaries, first James Watt and now William Clark, have upheld the esteem in which national parks are generally held by the public.

When he became director in April 1980, Dickenson says he told Andrus that national parks and monuments were deteriorating because of too much expansion at the expense of maintenance.

He says Andrus and then Watt supported the rehabilitation of the nation's 80 million acres of parks.

"Secretary Watt and I struck a deal right after the administration came in — and they came through," Dickenson says. "What they did was create a five-year, $1 billion program to repave roads, paint buildings, fix broken water faucets, and rehabilitate all other public facilities in the parks," he says.

Dickenson says that program is one year ahead of schedule and will fall $4 million short of the original targeted amount.

After the rehabilitation is completed, he says, the Park Service will embark upon a maintenance program that will run in five-year cycles to prevent the deterioration that took place before he took office.

Although park visits continue to increase — officials expect a 5 to 10 percent increase this year after a slight drop in 1982 — there is enough land to handle the use, Dickenson says.

National parks, such as Yellowstone, should be a special, once-in-a-lifetime experience for Americans and not become playgrounds, a role filled by state and local parks, he says.

Despite two attacks by grizzly bears on Yellowstone visitors this summer, Dickenson says the bears should stay in the park.

"I think we should do whatever is required to assure the grizzly population in the park," he says.

Redfish crash kills girl

STANLEY — A Twin Falls man remained hospitalized Tuesday after a motorcycle accident near Redfish Lake that resulted in the death of a Twin Falls girl Monday night.

Killed was Pam Nielson, 15, said Custer County Sheriff Ken Bowers. Nielson was a passenger on a motorcycle driven by 21-year-old Jeff Halvorson.

The accident occurred at 8:30 p.m. on a paved U.S. Forest Service road near the recreation area around the lake. The motorcycle apparently was traveling at a high speed around a curve when Halvorson lost control, Bowers said. The vehicle left the road, throwing both Nielson and Halvorson.

Nielson died at the scene. An autopsy will be performed this week, Bowers said.

Halvorson was transported by ambulance to Merit Community Hospital in Sun Valley. He was reported in stable condition Tuesday afternoon.

Bowers said no citations have been issued, but the accident still is under investigation.

Hey mister, can you spare a tire?

JEROME — The Jerome County Board of Commissioners gets a wide variety of requests for assistance from indigent people, but Monday the three-member board marked a first.

A young man traveling from South Dakota back to his home in California filled out an assistance application and met with the board to request a new tube for his bicycle.

He told commissioners he was broke, and he needed a tube in order to be on his way.

The young man's request was granted and he was sent to a local shop to have a new tube installed. He told the commissioners he was making the trip by bicycle and ran out of money because of an accident with his bike in Jackson, Wyo.

Then just outside of Jerome, he said, a tire blew after his spare wheel had also gone flat.

With the new tube and a wish for good luck from the commissioners, the cyclist began heading for California.

Jerome County fair judging continues

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Judging continued at the Jerome County Fair Tuesday as the event moved into its second day.

Spaces in the merchants building that were empty Monday were well-tailored displays by noon Tuesday. Offerings ranged from planes and unfinished furniture to political booths and a Jerome Police Department information booth with hints on crime prevention.

Clerks reported most of the 4-H and FFA livestock and other projects have been judged.

In the produce division, the Valley Future Farmers of America won most artistic display honors and the Jerome FFA chapter received the championship award for quality.

The North Side Soil Conservation District display honored Wayne and Marie Johnson as the county's outstanding conservation farmers in 1984. A photo collection rendered fair goes that in years past the farm machinery was powered by real horse power. Photos of horse-drawn equipment was a tribute to the fair's theme of 100 years of agriculture in Jerome County.

The SCD booth won an award for artistic arrangement.

D. N. Stanger's photograph of a water skier won the Jerome shutter bug purple ribbon for the best of show in the photography display. The same

John Hadman and Monica Hadman of Eden won awards respectively for photos with best subject matter and best picture to tell a story. Their work involved dark-skinned children and adults in action scenes.

A coin collection in the antique division was awarded a best of class ribbon. The owner, Keith Wardroff, of Jerome, said he began his coin collection as a young boy when his grandparents gave him a silver dollar for each of his birthdays.

The flower show was smaller than in previous years. Fair officials blamed the delay in the

Hagerman rest stop has too much business in some eyes

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — The travelers' turnout off U.S. 30 beckons a stop.

Its green trees promise shade out of a landscape of lava. Against its back door are state-owned ponds, stocked with fish.

The rest station just north of the Snake River is a quiet place for relaxing during a scenic drive.

But the wayside area also has become so inviting that a few travelers make it a base for their vacations instead of a place for catching their breath, at least one local campground owner says.

The Hagerman rest area also no longer is essential to the state's road system as a safety stop — a place to perk up drivers on long trips, state officials say.

So the Hagerman stop and three others like it in Idaho will be handed over to another state or local agency to run as a park, the Idaho Department of Transportation says.

"They have been identified for eventual removal from the state highway system of rest areas," says Andy Nielsen, maintenance supervisor for highway operations. "Preferably we will transfer (them) to some other recreational agency, but there was no time set for when they would be transferred," he says.

In January 1983, the department's governing board decided that its wayside stops should serve travelers, not campers and picnic parties.

"They cost a lot to maintain and our first priority should be those that are serving more through travel," says Howard Johnson, district engineer based at Shoshone.

But other agencies contacted so far haven't been enthusiastic about picking up the well-used wayside. The Fish and Game Department isn't in the business of providing developed recreation, says regional supervisor William Webb at Jerome.

Other agencies have suffered cutbacks in funding, transportation officials say.

The Hagerman area won't be closed in a few months, as some residents had feared. Last month, 219 Hagerman-area people petitioned the state agency to keep it open.

Johnson says the department plans to open

• See ROADSIDE on Page B2

It open and in good repair until it's either handed off to another agency or until the agency board takes formal action to close it. In fact, its rest-stops will get new tilting as a stopgap-maintenance this year, he says.

But the Hagerman rest area also has created problems for some camping businesses. It's too good a place to stop, it seems.

Campground owner Burl Holmes of Rock Lodge Motel & Creekside Campground west of Hagerman has written the state a number of times about the competition it provides to his business and those of others.

In a recent interview, he said he does not want the rest station closed, as some people — and the Times-News in an editorial — have implied.

But he is bothered by people who camp there longer than the 16 hours allowed by state rules.

People do camp there. Holmes has pictures to prove that travelers take advantage of the rest area. For instance, last May he counted 19 motor homes and eight tents there one night. This year, he has recorded more than a half-dozen motor homes and sleeper trailers there after 10 p.m.

Some may be staying well within the 16-hour limit, he says. But Holmes also knows of at least two motor homes from New Mexico and Arizona that use the area as a regular vacation place.

"I can't make a living as long as I'm competing with free camping throughout the valley," he says.

Holmes also says that state law does not give much way for police to enforce the limit.

State officials seem to agree. This spring a sign went up, explicitly stating that the area is "not intended for camping."

If possible, Holmes also would like to get the rest limit cut back to eight hours, the same rule as currently is enforced at rest stops on Interstate 84.

When Holmes appeared July 31 before the state transportation board, one potential solution did come up. Perhaps his and other businesses could be advertised at the rest area on a travelers' billboard. The department is beginning to put some tourism information at Interstate rest stops.

But until the department makes some further decisions, the Hagerman rest area may continue to be too attractive for everyone.

growing season that left this month short of exotic blooms.

A simple arrangement of white petunias and miniature white aster against a background of black won an award for Colleen Crozier in arrangements.

The women's department displays were dotted with blue and purple ribbons after judges completed their work Tuesday morning.

A light blue afghan made by Bessie Hanson of Eden won best of show for the quilts and afghans and hand-made quilts entered by Conale Hardy, Sandra Capps, Judy Slover and Ruth Scott, all of the Hazelton and Eden area, won first-place awards. Darlene Johnson and Marcell Mirkin, both of Jerome, were also rewarded with first-place honors.

In the booth competition, the Jerome Fourth Ward LDS women's display "A Harvest of Love," received the best of show award in quality.

A display of old-fashioned, glass-top counting jars filled with dried herbs and seasonings won a best-of-show award for Donna Bailey of Jerome in dried-herbs. A counted cross-stitch wall hanging by Pikle Barnes of Jerome also won a best of show award.

In both displays by 4-H clubs, the reserve champion awards went to Hazelton Hillbillies, the Backyard Farmers, the Valley "T" Gang, the Pins and Pens, Leather and Lace, and Country Bumpkins clubs.

The Swanny Kirby rodeo concludes tonight with championship competition and on Thursday night the junior rodeo will feature stick-horse barrel racing, sheep riding, goat milking and calf riding by youngsters six to 12 years old. A queen contest for young cowgirls six to nine years of age will be held Friday.

As a finale for Saturday, the Treasure Valley Tractor Pull Association will hold a contest with entries from across southern Idaho.

adding that certain areas of the park may have to be closed from the public to save the bears.

Dickenson does not support bills in both houses of Congress that would create protective buffer zones around parks limiting or excluding development.

However, he hedges a bit on that matter when confronted with the possibility of a nuclear waste dump very close to the boundary of Canyonlands National Park in southern Utah.

"I have said many times, I have the deepest concerns. I think there must be a better place," he says.

The U.S. Department of Energy is considering two nuclear waste disposal sites near the park as a national nuclear waste disposal site for spent commercial fuel.

However, the department also is considering seven other sites, and Dickenson says one away from the park should have priority.

Boise man charged in rape

TWIN FALLS — Warrants were issued Tuesday afternoon for a Boise resident, charging him with first-degree kidnaping, rape and battery in connection with an incident alleged to have occurred Monday night in Twin Falls County.

Sheriff James Munn said the victim, a 24-year-old, Twin Falls woman, reported that she was kidnaped and raped by a former boy friend late Monday night. She was able to escape and notified police early Tuesday morning.

Munn said the victim, whose name was withheld, was treated for injuries at Magie Valley Regional Medical Center and later released in stable condition. Officers throughout a southern Idaho were looking for the suspect, identified as Thomas Richard Turner, 30, whose last known address was Boise.

Munn said he was last known to have been traveling on a motorcycle and was armed with a knife. He said it is believed the suspect may have headed back to Boise or could possibly be traveling east to Missouri.

"I believe he may be armed with a knife and are considering him as dangerous," Munn said.

He said late Tuesday that no information had been received and the suspect had not been arrested.

Turner was described as 6 ft., 4 in. tall, weighing 200 lbs., with a blond mustache and medium length brown hair.

Turner was believed to be traveling on a 1981 Yamaha motorcycle reportedly stolen from Ada County. A warrant charging grand theft was issued for the suspect by Ada County authorities.

Hagerman council reminds residents about dogs' shots

HAGERMAN — The Hagerman City Council recently passed a resolution to remind city residents that all dogs must be vaccinated every year.

According to a letter from state officials read at the council meeting, rabies strain is advancing toward Idaho from Montana and Wyoming and dog owners should be prepared.

Different tags will be issued for each year, the council agreed.

Jacky enters guilty plea

JEROME — Plea negotiations resulted in reducing a reckless driving charge to one of inattentive driving Monday for a 25-year old Twin Falls County man.

Quentin E. Jacky pleaded guilty to the reduced charge in connection with an incident that occurred July 21.

A woman motorist told police she was traveling from Jerome to Twin Falls on I-84 in Jerome County when a vehicle pulled beside her car and a passenger in that vehicle aimed a rifle toward her vehicle. She said the other vehicle was also traveling in a reckless manner.

Later she and her husband, who had been following her in another vehicle, reported seeing the suspects parked at a Twin Falls drive-in where officers questioned Jacky and cited him for reckless driving.

He was fined $40 and costs on the reduced charge when he pleaded guilty in Fifth District Magistrate Court.

Brady freed on charges

JEROME — Rubin Charles Brady, 28, of Jerome was released on his own recognizance Monday on charges of disorderly conduct after he allegedly created a disturbance in a Jerome bar and then attempted to kick and strike a police officer.

Officers were called to the Smokeshop bar because of a fight and when they attempted to arrest Brady he allegedly kicked a police sergeant in the right eye and then attempted to strike and kick the officer again while being booked in at the city police department.

The defendant was on probation at the time, and terms of his release included continuing treatment through Alcoholics Anonymous with monitoring by the probation officer pending further court appearances.

District tabs finance head

JEROME — Richard Kugler was introduced to the Jerome School Board at its recent meeting as the new business manager for the school district.

Superintendent Stephenson Youngerman told the board the district has operated since January without a business manager and during that time Nancy Bragg and Karen Hulse, of the superintendent's office staff, have done an outstanding job of filling the needs of the business office.

In other business, Youngerman also reported that the supplemental levy that passed just week for text books was a success because of hard work by the district, administrators, staff and teachers.

He said some orders for books have already been placed and "every nickle of the levy" will be used for books and instructional materials, as pledged.

Some money, he said, may be withheld until after the first of the year in order to take advantage of the latest possible publications adopted by the state text book committee.

Paul garbage fees may rise

PAUL — The Paul City Council has proposed a $2 increase for garbage pickup, effective Oct. 1.

The proposal was made during the recent council meeting following discussion of the 1984-85 budget and the need to generate revenue to repair or replace the city's garbage truck.

A public hearing for the budget was set for Sept. 5, at 7:30 p.m. to discuss the proposed budget and the fee increase.

Jerome schools set attendance rules

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — A procedure for implementing the state-wide 90 percent attendance requirement in the Jerome High School was approved Monday night by the Jerome School Board after a discussion on "extraordinary status" situations.

The policy provides that high school Principal Jerry Diehl will rule on which cases qualify as extraordinary. However, it gives parents an opportunity to appeal such decisions to the board.

Trustee Ken Baumgartner warned there will be charges of favoritism when one request is approved and another denied.

Diehl explained he will consider each request on its own merits and will confer with the superintendent on the requests.

Superintendent Stephenson Youngerman said he and the state superintendent, State Superintendent Jerry Evans, had advised school districts there should be no deviation.

If a student is in the classroom, he or she should be marked present and if the student is not in class, he or she is absent.

"It is as simple as that," Youngerman said. "I know we will have a reduction in the field trips this year, but I would like to recommend the senior class's annual trip to the state legislature be accepted as a reasonable excuse."

A student who has not maintained at least a 90 percent attendance record will not be given credit in the subject where absences occurred, the policy states.

"For full credit in any class or course, the student must maintain the required academic level and meet the 90 percent attendance unless waived in extraordinary cases. Students may appeal loss of credit to the board of trustees."

Board members joined Youngerman in urging that any planned or anticipated absence must be approved in advance, not "after the fact."

Board members also urged the school undertake a strenuous educational campaign for students and parents on provisions of the attendance policy.

When a student has accumulated five absent marks in a single semester, a warning will be issued the student and parent.

Hagerman hires new city clerk

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — Rhonda Wickham has been hired as city clerk in Hagerman.

She replaces Lee Graham, who resigned July 18. Peggy Owsley has been clerk since then.

At the recent Hagerman City Council meeting, Mayor Merle Owsley said he and the council had carefully considered each of the 14 applications for the clerk position.

"We did take time and research all of them," he noted. "We picked the one we thought would be the best for the city of Hagerman."

Council member Audrey Hoffman says Wickham is familiar with city office operations because she used to help her mother, former clerk Jolene Winegar.

In other business:

• Richard Schwanz reported the recent three-day baseball tournament at city park raised $200 for local Little League teams. High school students, he added, netted about $600 from their concession stand in the park.

Local businesses did very well, Schwanz said, and the tournament will be held next year with more teams.

"We had 20 teams here this year," he said. "Plus we had eight more teams on the outside wanting in."

The council decided to have a form letter drawn up to inform property owners that they are liable for water bills left unpaid by their renters. Some property owners, noted Owsley, were unaware of this regulation. As a result, they had to raise their rent to pay bills left by former renters.

A $100 reward is being offered for information leading to the conviction of anyone who vandalized the city park.

City Superintendent Richard Scruggs said recent damage includes cut hoses, pipe damage, destruction of light bulbs, vandalism at the restrooms and "just more of the continual."

Three of four council members voted to grant the recent request of Chase Boudue to reduce the water and sewer charges of his business, Chase Products, which is not in operation. The charge was temporarily reduced from $95 to $25.

Hoffman voted against the reduction.

"I think it's opening a big bag of nails," she said, explaining others will want similar reductions.

Paul sewers solution set

By MICHELE SNYDER
Times-News correspondent

PAUL — A solution to Paul's sewer problems may be in the offing, the Paul City Council was told at its recent meeting.

Scott Rhead of the Forsgren-Perkins Engineering Firm in Pocatello told the council that a proposed Minico subdivision sewer project may upgrade the city's sewer system as well.

The subdivision is located three miles east of Paul. Rhead said the Minico income level is such that there will be no problem with it meeting the eligibility requirements for financing from FHA and that if the city merges with the subdivision for the sewer project, there would be no expense to the city.

"The proposal will offer several solutions to some of the existing problems," said Rhead.

One solution is that the proposed project will solve the present problem of "high infiltration/inflow into the existing collection lines by replacing 3,500 feet of the main interceptor line, which should save costs on pumping and maintenance.

"Lagoon capacity," said Rhead, "is, at the present time, questionable in the summer months, with no growth available."

"With the proposed project, the lagoon will be converted to flow through the facility, increasing the capacity by double, enabling the lagoon to accommodate 2,400 people."

A standby power unit will also be added where needed for emergency pump operation," said Rhead, stating that "what the engineering firm needs now is the council's authorization to proceed with the program, making any necessary negotiations as we go."

The council advised Rhead to proceed and "see if it can actually be put together as the engineers have stated."

City's water dominates Castleford council discussions

By DIANE SCHORZMAN
Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD — Water was the main topic of discussion at the Castleford City Council meeting recently.

The city water tank has developed two leaks, four rings down from the top of the tank. The leaks were reported to council members by several townspeople who had noticed the water spraying out of the tank. The tank will have to be drained down as far as the leaks and fixed somehow, says Mayor Robert Sample, who also noted that the warranty has expired on the three-year-old tank.

Clerk Patsy Kenyon reported that although all but one of the delinquent water bills has been paid up to date, two city residents have not yet paid up their irrigation fees.

According to city ordinance, any irrigation fees not paid can be assessed against the delinquent owner's personal property tax.

Engelbert will represent U.S. in world powerlifting finals

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — The results of a fishing trip this summer aren't fresh in Jerry Engelbert's mind, but the next morning's results were memorable.

The phone rang and a male voice, introducing himself as the U.S. powerlifting team coach, announced that Engelbert had been selected as one of two U.S. residents to represent this country in the World Masters Powerlifting Championships in Perth, Australia, Aug. 20.

It means that the 48-year-old Engelbert will be part of a 10-man national team that will compete against others within their age classes from all parts of the world. Engelbert is in the 40-49-year class.

It had to take a phone call to get the message across since the teams were selected through comparison of scores from several regional competitions held across the country.

"Engelbert got the nod with his all-time best, totalling 1,800 pounds in the three lifts — squat, bench-press and dead lift — in the Northwest Regionals in Boise.

"I squatted 880, benched 775 and dead lifted 745," Engelbert says. "In Twin Falls (the state finals) I squatted 705 which is my best ever. At regionals I tried 710 and just missed.

But the 745 was my best deadlift ever."

After that it was a matter of awaiting the decision.

"I kept looking for that letter," he admits. And then he took off on the fishing trip.

Engelbert started weightlifting as a teenager while still living in Jerome. At that time, he worked in the "Olympic" (overhead) lifts. He was good enough to attend "five or six," he says, "national tournaments and placed well in them but never quite got to the Olympics.

One thing that has progressed has been his weight. He started lifting as a 170-pounder and first competed in the 178-pound class. He reached the peak of his "young" competitive years in the 198-pound class.

At various times, Engelbert has left the sport for more than a brief period and reports, dispelling the common notion, that muscle tone will quickly turn to fat if unattended.

"I'd just go back down to about 175 or whatever weight was normal for me at the time," he said on that score quite some time ago.

But since moving to Ketchum to join the city police force, he has worked quite consistently in his sport.

This time around he'll compete in the 242-pound class. "Most of the time I've been in powerlifting it's been in the 220-pound class," he says. "I'm just barely into it (242 pounds) and they decided to put me there for this competition."

One thing that pleases Engelbert is the time he's had to prepare for the international event.

"I'm cycling now," he said. "I started a six-week cycle that I can take through, keep the weights coming up and hopefully hit my peak for the meet."

Engelbert will leave Thursday to join the U.S. team on the final leg of the journey to Australia. The lifts will be decided Aug. 29-30, although it will be a 10-day sojourn for the Ketchum policeman.

Machurek named starting QB For NFL Lions

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

ROCHESTER, Mich. — "I am now the starting quarterback for the Detroit Lions."

Over the telephone one could virtually hear the smile, the satisfaction, the joy and the pride of former Idaho State quarterback Mike Machurek as he uttered those words.

It simply echoed the announcement that Lions Coach Monte Clark had announced to the Michigan media a few hours earlier. It capped three years of frustration when Machurek stood on the sideline, at first feeling and then becoming convinced within himself that he had the ability to be a starting quarterback in the National Football League.

Machurek cemented the bid Saturday night in an exhibition game against the Seattle Seahawks.

"I did great," he enthused. "I was 12-for-18 for 197 yards and one TD pass."

Although the coach had more than intimated the announcement of the starting position — was imminent, Machurek cherished the words when they were uttered.

"It feels great, especially after waiting three years to get a chance to get a starting job."

During that time, did he ever waver in his conviction or consider giving up the chase to find some other career?

"Never," he exploded. "It never even came to my mind to quit."

That does not mean "knowing that you should be out there. I knew I had the ability to start and play well. I was waiting for my chance and I knew if I'd ever get it I'd have to take advantage of it."

When that starting call came, Machurek says, "I wasn't nervous at all. The last game I started was in the national championship (for ISU). I knew I had a job to do and I just went for it and it turned out well."

Hardly hurting was the fact "my first pass was a carry TD pass" and from a confidence standpoint "it helped tremendously."

Machurek went on to play the entire first half and the first series of the second half. He hit the last five passes he threw in his final appearance.

"Although Machurek enjoyed the publicity he received for that effort,

MIKE MACHUREK From ISU to NFL starter

he luxuriated in the Michigan coverage of his appointment to the starting job.

"Real big ink," he described the print media's trumpeting of the news.

He also understands that things could change just about as quickly.

"I just have to be consistent. I showed what I could do last Saturday. Now I just have to keep on showing the same consistency. If I have two good games in our final exhibitions, I should be the started against San Francisco in the season opener."

Machurek is expecting the Lions to have a good season, noting — our camp is not real though this year but everyone is going at it. Everyone is showing good intensity. We've had a lot of fights during practice. But once off the field everyone is team oriented. Everyone is all fired up to have a good year. So it is an intense camp."

In that respect, Machurek can identify the professional game with the one he played so well at Idaho State. But everything is on a higher plane.

"Things up here are based a lot more on timing. Everything is a lot faster. You have to make up your mind a lot quicker on the release. You haven't got time to sit back and wait for someone to make a mistake on defense because they don't make defensively mistakes like they do in college."

Fraud charge hits Ali's company

NEW YORK (AP) — A company Muhammad Ali formed to train and manage professional boxers, was charged by the Securities and Exchange Commission on Tuesday with deceiving investors in a stock offering.

All, chairman of Champion Sports Management, Inc., was not accused of wrongdoing, but company president Richard Hirschfeld was named a defendant in the lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court in Manhattan.

The suit said Hirschfeld, a 36-year-old attorney, was barred "in the future from breaking stock fraud laws."

SEC attorney Anne C. Flannery said the suit charges that Champion, headquartered in Virginia Beach, Va., misled investors by overstating the value of its assets, disguising a $600,000 loss as a loan that might be collected.

The suit seeks a court order stopping Hirschfeld and Champion from violating stock fraud laws. It also requests a temporary freeze on funds collected through the stock offering, estimated by the SEC at $1 million, until it can be reviewed further.

Hirschfeld was traveling Tuesday and could not be reached for comment, according to a woman who answered the telephone at his office. She said no one else was available to speak for the company.

The SEC said Ali formed the company in May 1983 with his long-time manager, Jabir Herbert Muhammad, and Hirschfeld. Once funds were raised through a stock offering, the former heavyweight champion was to receive $78,000 a year to devote 40 percent of his time to training prize fighters in his camp at Deer Lake, Pa., according to Champion's prospectus.

The prospectus also said Muhammad was to receive $50,000 a year as chief executive officer and that retired boxer Ernie Shavers, another investor, will get $12,000 a year for helping train fighters.

The company said in its prospectus that it has reached agreements to train former World Boxing Association light-heavyweight champion Eddie Mustafa Muhammad and World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Tim Witherspoon.

Champion also said it acquired rights to co-promote a heavyweight bout between Larry Holmes and WBA champion Gerrie Coetzee, although it acknowledged being involved in a contract dispute.

The SEC said that although Champion admitted some uncertainty about the $600,000 note, it failed to disclose the loan was issued through a "shell" corporation Hirschfeld formed. The suit charged it is "a virtual certainty that Champion will not be able to collect on the $600,000 note payable to it."

Budd lost enthusiasm after fall

LONDON (AP) — Zola Budd said Tuesday that she lost her incentive to run for a gold medal after colliding with Mary Decker in the 3,000-meter race at the Los Angeles Olympics.

"I felt terrible because she fell, especially in an Olympic final," the 18-year-old said in a British television interview. "It wasn't important for me any more to race. The crowd started to boo, and I really didn't feel like running anymore."

The South-African born Budd, who was running for Britain, finished seventh.

The controversial collision occurred halfway through the race. Budd was slightly ahead when she and Decker became tangled and Decker tumbled to the infield and began to sob. The crowd at the Los Angeles Coliseum booed as Budd continued to run.

Decker, of Eugene, Ore., later accused Budd of fouling, saying the diminutive runner cut in front of her illegally. Budd was later exonerated of blame by Olympic track officials.

Interviewed by Britain's independent television news, Budd said: "It all happened so fast. I lost my balance and the next thing I knew she fell. We ran into each other. I lost my balance and struggled to regain it and she fell on my left leg."

The match between Budd, who runs barefoot, and Decker, the world champion, had been billed as one of the highlights of the Los Angeles Olympics. Decker had been one of the favorites in the field.

Majors mull expansion plan

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Expansion to two 16-team leagues will be among the items on the agenda as baseball's owners gather Wednesday for their annual summer meeting.

Baseball's Long Range Planning Committee, empaneled to explore the possibility at last December's winter convention, will make its progress report on the possibility of adding six teams — two in the American League and four in the National League.

Also on the agenda will be approval of the sale of the Minnesota Twins from the Griffith family to Minneapolis banker Carl Pohlad. Ratification of the sale, for a reported $32 million, requires a three-quarters majority in the American League and a simple majority in the National League.

The sale is expected to be approved without challenge.

The nine-member planning committee, headed by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, could recommend expansion to certain cities, but no vote on the subject is expected. If a recommendation is strong enough, it could be voted upon at the 1984 winter meeting in Houston this December.

Among the sites which have been mentioned as expansion possibilities are Indianapolis; Tampa-St. Petersburg; Denver; Vancouver, British Columbia; Washington; Louisville, Ky., and Brooklyn, N.Y.

Along with Kuhn, the committee consists of American League President Bobby Brown, National League President Club Feeney and club executives of the Boston Red Sox, Los Angeles Dodgers, Bush Brothers of the California Angels, Andrew McKenna of the Chicago Cubs, Jerry Reinsdorf of the Chicago White Sox, Haywood Sullivan of the Boston Red Sox and Charles Brannaman of the Montreal Expos.

The report from the Player Relations Committee, which handles baseball's basic agreement with players, negotiated during the strike of 1981, expires on Dec. 31.

The agenda for the one-day meeting also includes a change in the draft rule affecting non-resident players who compete scholastically in the United States. Non-resident players currently fall under protection of the high school and college rules but are not subject to selection under provisions of the draft.

Sutton feels good about chances of keeping PGA crown

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Although it has been a disappointing season to this point, Hal Sutton saw some very positive signs as he prepared for the defense of his title this week in the 66th PGA National Championship.

"I'm pleased with the way I'm striking the ball right now," Sutton said before a practice round over the hilly, heavily-wooded, 7,145-yard Shoal Creek Club course.

"And I do like the golf course," Sutton said. "It's my kind of course ... a ball-striker course. If you hit it well, you're rewarded. If you don't hit it well, you're penalized."

Sutton, 26, won this title — holding off Jack Nicklaus by a single shot — and Player of the Year honors last season in his sophomore year on the Pro Tour.

It stamped him as the brightest young player in the game, a player with an unlimited future. And it marked the second consecutive season in which he had set goals for himself, and achieved them.

In his rookie season, he wanted to win a tournament. He did, the last one of the year.

In his second season, he set the target of winning twice, and winning a major. He did.

And, after leading the Tour in money-winnings in 1983, he set his goals for 1984.

"I wanted to win three times and go past $1 million in career winnings," Sutton said. "I thought both of those were realistic goals."

But, with the season winding down to a finish, he isn't really close.

He has not won a title. He missed the cut in the Masters and the British Open. And, needing $336,898 for the year to reach the $1 million mark for his career, he has won $164,941 in 1984.

"I've played well at times, but I haven't won," he said. "I just have not played as well as I feel I should."

At least part of that could be attributed to his schedule. Sutton, involved with oil and real estate businesses, played infrequently early in the year, then ran off one string of 10 consecutive tournaments.

"I think I got stale," he said.

A couple of weeks away from competition, however, has rekindled his interest and enthusiasm.

"I'm looking forward to defending. I'm excited about it," he said.

Among his chief challengers in the chase for the winner's share of $125,000 from the total purse of $700,000 are the holders of the other three 1984 major titles, Ben Crenshaw (Masters), Fuzzy Zoeller (U.S. Open) and Seve Ballesteros (British Open).

The leading contender, however, is Tom Watson, the only 31-time winner on the American tour this season, a runner-up in both the Masters and British Opens and the year's leading money-winner. Watson needs only this title to complete a career sweep of the Big Four events.

Other major figures include Greg Norman of Australia, Jack Nicklaus, Larry Nelson, Hale Irwin, David Graham, Ray Floyd, Hale Irwin and Tom Kite.

Lee Trevino, 44 and a non-winner for three years, has played very well in recent weeks and could be a factor on the course that places a premium on accuracy.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally.

Giants' defensive captain leaves camp

PLEASANTVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — New York Giants defensive signal-caller Harry Carson walked out of the National Football League training camp here without comment to his coach or other officials, the team announced Tuesday.

Coach Bill Parcells told reporters he had not spoken with Carson but the veteran linebacker left the Pace University camp Monday night.

Parcells said he was shocked and disappointed by Carson, who he had counted on to be the team leader this season.

"I hope that if Harry is near a library, he will walk in and look up the meaning of the word leadership," Parcells said.

Giants General Manager George Young also was miffed.

"I don't know anything about it," Young said.

Team officials said they did not believe Carson's action was prompted by a personal problem or a contract dispute. Carson was in the second year of a four-year contract.

"He missed the team meeting last night and then the curfew and then the morning practice. And at that point the coach decided that maybe he wouldn't be around," Giants spokesman Ed Croke said of Carson's quiet departure.

"The coach didn't think it was a personal problem because he would have come to him about it, and he didn't think it was a contract problem because he also would have talked to him about that," said Croke.

The spokesman said Carson, 31, had not returned the projector and game films he had borrowed from the team.

Earlier during the preseason, the 19th-year player had demanded to be traded and has said he was unhappy about the team's 3-12-1 record last season.

The five-time All-Pro also has complained about the offseason trades — of two fellow Giants linebackers — Brad Van Pelt to Minnesota and Brian Kelley to San Diego. Carson inherited the signal-calling job when Kelley left.

Carson was a standout at South Carolina State and was drafted in the fourth round by the Giants in 1976.

On Monday, Parcells had said that veterans such as Carson and linebacker Lawrence Taylor had "to carry this team defensively."

"They've got to start making some plays themselves. Right now, we haven't had any big plays out of the guys you expect to make big plays," he said.

In other camp news, Parcells announced that veteran Phil Simms, the Giants' No. 1 choice in 1979 college draft, would be the team's starting quarterback for the season opener Sept. 28 at home against the Philadelphia Eagles.

Simms was involved in numerous battles in recent years for the starting position with Scott Brunner, who was traded to Denver earlier this year.

Simms started for the Giants in previous seasons but has been plagued by injuries. He earned the starting job this year over quarterback Jeff Rutledge. Both played during the Giants' first two preseason games.

The third-string quarterback is rookie Jeff Hostetler, a third-round draft pick from West Virginia who made his professional debut last week against the Colts in Indianapolis.

ROCHSTER, Mich. (AP) — The Detroit Pistons announced Tuesday the signing of their top two draft choices, forward Tony Campbell and guard Eric Turner, to National Basketball Association contracts.

The 6-7 Campbell, out of Ohio State, was drafted 20th in the first round of June's college draft and signed a three-year deal. The 6-3 Turner, taken from Michigan as the 34th pick in the draft's second round, inked a two-year deal.

Both signings took place on Monday and were announced Tuesday following the opening session of the Pistons' summer rookie-free agent camp. Terms were not released.

Campbell and Turner both will participate in the two-week camp, the team said.

Dageford ruled ineligible

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Greg Dageford, Kansas State's leading runner in 1963, has been ruled academically ineligible to compete this football season, the school announced Tuesday.

The 6-foot, 202-pound junior had been expected to return as a starting tailback for the Wildcats; Dageford, of Clay Center, Kan., rushed for a total of 677 yards in 1963, including a 175-yard three-touchdown performance against Wyoming.

Jim Dickey, Kansas State's head football coach, said the ruling meant that Dageford would be barred from competition for the entire season.

"We're sorry to see this happen to Greg," said Dickey. "This is one of those unfortunate things that happens in intercollegiate athletics."

Dageford had been a letterman since his freshman year.

Retail sales slump in July

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Retail sales slumped 0.9 percent last month, the government reported Tuesday, providing another sign that the long-awaited economic slowdown may finally have arrived.

The Commerce Department said the July decline in seasonally adjusted $107.8 billion in sales stemmed from a fall-off in a broad range of consumer categories, from automobiles to clothing.

The 0.9 percent July decline followed a 0.5 percent June increase. The pace set from May through July translates into an annual rate of 1.1 percent, far below the 2.5 percent rate recorded during the first 17 months of recovery from the 1981-82 recession.

The July drop was the first since a 1.5 percent March decline. While that setback was followed by a strong April rally, most analysts do not expect a similar recovery this time around.

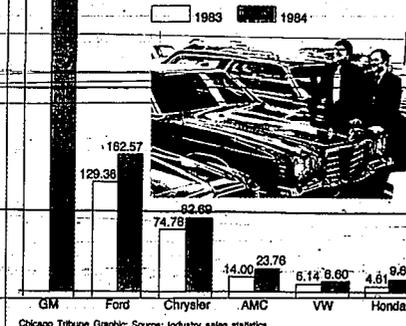

But no one is predicting the July slump portends anything worse than a moderation of the sizzling growth rate experienced in the first six months of this year.

The Reagan administration found good news in the decrease, saying the financial markets are likely to see the slowdown as a sign that inflation will remain under control and interest rates will fall.

"Slower growth of consumer spending should help to relieve pressure on the credit markets resulting from the record installment borrowing of recent months," Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said.

Baldrige said the outlook for the consumer sector remains "good" based on continuing gains in disposable income, but he said future growth was likely to be modest.

Most private analysts agreed with that assessment.

"What we are seeing is moderation and not in any way a collapse," said Sandra Shaber of Chase Econometrics, a private forecasting firm. "Gains in income and household purchasing power have been too strong for any kind of serious collapse in consumer spending."

Robert Wescott, of S. Wharton Econometrics predicted healthy, but moderate gains in consumer spending would continue over the next 18 months.

The overall economy turned in a 10.1 percent growth rate in the first quarter of 1984 and a still-robust 7.5 percent rate in the second quarter.

Wescott saw growth declining to around 5.5 percent in the current quarter and 5 percent in the final three months of the year.

Michael Evans, head of a Washington consulting firm, said he believed the retail sales numbers showed "the economy is slowing down but not that much." He put economic growth in the current quarter at 6 percent.

The July downturn hit most retail categories. General merchandise stores, a category that includes department stores, saw sales drop 3.9 percent, the biggest decline in this category in 17 years.

Cooler weather in the East and Midwest during July was blamed for cutting into sales of air conditioners and summer clothing, but many analysts said the decline was too widespread to be totally weather-related. Ms. Shaber said consumers — on a clothes-buying spree since last fall — finally decided to slow their purchases.

Auto sales were down 2.1 percent but were still 18.1 percent above the level of a year ago. Analysts blamed part of the decline on industry problems in supplying enough of the most popular models.

Furniture sales dropped off 2.1 percent, with sales of building materials down 1.4 percent — both declines blamed on a general slowdown in the industry caused by rising interest rates in recent months.

Among the few establishments registering gains were grocery stores, up 0.3 percent, restaurants and bars, up 0.9 percent, and drug stores with a 1.1 percent increase.

In another report Tuesday, the government said that consumers took out $7.83 billion more in installment debt in June than they paid off. While this was down from the record $10.23 billion taken out in May, it was still the second-largest gain ever.

Bank, retail issues lead stocks' retreat

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market retreated Tuesday after an early advance failed to stand up. Bank, retail and technology issues recorded some of the most notable losses in a subdued session.

The Dow-Jones average of 30 industrials, up about 5 points in early trading, was down 5.97 at 1,214.11 by the close.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 81.47 million shares, against 77.96 million Monday.

Before the market opened the Commerce Department reported a 0.9 percent drop in retail sales for July. Most analysts had been expecting an increase.

Brokers said the news was taken as fresh evidence that economic growth is tapering off to a slower pace that might be sustained for a longer period of time, with lower interest rates.

But after responding favorably to the news at first, stock prices sagged. Analysts said it appeared that the market had already used up much of the potential enthusiasm over a slower economy in its rally earlier this month.

Traders in retail issues seemed to take that news as a distinct negative, along with J.C. Penney's report that its earnings for the latest fiscal quarter dropped to 66 cents a share from 74 cents in the comparable period a year earlier.

Penney shares tumbled 3 1/2 to 5 1/4. Among other retailers, which have shown mixed quarterly profit results in the past couple of days, K-Mart dropped 1 to 3 3/4; Federated Stores 1 1/4 to 5 1/4; Sears Roebuck 3/4 to 35 1/4; and P.F. Woolworth 1 1/4 to 36 1/4.

Financial Corp. of America lost 1 1/4 to 7 1/4. The company's American Savings & Loan Association subsidiary denied a Dow Jones News Service report which cited "speculation" among market sources that the S&L might be borrowing heavily from the Federal Reserve.

Among bank stocks, Manufacturers Hanover fell 2 1/4 to 26 1/4; Chase Manhattan 1 1/4 to 41; Citicorp 1 1/4 to 33 1/4; and BankAmerica 1 to 16 1/4.

In the technology and office-equipment sector, International Business Machines, which introduced a new personal computer, slipped 1 to 12 1/4. Digital Equipment fell 2 1/4 to 9 3/4; Hewlett-Packard 1 1/4 to 41 3/4; and SCA Services jumped 3 1/4 to 27 1/4.

Waste Management Inc. and General Corp. agreed Monday to a joint takeover of SCA for $28.50 a share.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 5 to 4 on the Big Board, and the exchange's composite index dropped 48 to 94.54.

Complexities conflict in Reagan administration tax law

The more I try to unravel the 1984 tax law, the more I become convinced that the Reagan administration has handed us a monstrously complex legislation loaded with hundreds of conflicting complexities.

And the more I hear from outside sources the more I am astounded that weeks after the law's signing, top tax experts are still struggling to figure out what its clauses mean.

Nevertheless, with the help of Prentice-Hall in this series "I'm giving you top hints. Real estate, for instance, still emerges as a four-way tax shelter — even though the tax shelter breaks have taken on entirely new looks because of this truly astounding law.

1) Depreciation. Before the new law, you could depreciate real property placed in service after 1980 over a fast, audit-proof 15 years. Under the new law, the depreciation period is 18 years for property placed in service after March 15, 1984.

Sylvia Porter

New tax law — 2

A major exception is low-income housing for which the write-off period remains 15 years. It wasn't long ago that depreciation was based on a property's actual useful life — which ranged up to 40 years for new property. So even with an 18-year write-off period, you still can write off property in less than half the time.

Effective date: Property placed in service after March 15, 1984.

2) Leverage: You are often able to buy income property with a low down payment — and borrow the rest. However, your tax deductions, including depreciation, are figured on the full purchase price. Result: Leverage multiples real estate's profit potential and its tax shelter potential. The new law does not change the fundamental advantages you get with leverage.

3) Tax-free swaps: If you swap business or investment property of similar property of equal value; there is no tax on the exchange. You pay the tax when you sell the new property. That basic tax-free swap technique is untouched by the new law.

But the new law does crack down on so-called deferred exchanges. Before, you could immediately transfer property to another party and specify that the other party find property suitable to you within a period of, say, five years. The deal was closed when the actual tax-free exchange was made. But affected for taxpayers after this law's enactment date (next month), you get tax-free treatment only if:

a) the property suitable to you is identified within 45 days after you relinquish your property; and

b) you take title to the property within 180 days after you relinquish your property, or by the due date of your tax return (including extensions), whichever is earlier.

TIP: When the contract is drawn, set a closing date far enough in advance so that the other party has time to locate property you want.

Effective date: In general, the transfers of property after date of law's enactment. Special grace period: Where exchange property has been identified in a binding written contract entered into before June 14, 1984, the exchange property must be received before Jan. 1, 1985.

4) Capital gains: If you sell real estate at a profit after you've held it long enough, all of it is low-tax capital gain. If you use straight-line depreciation, though, some of your gain may be treated as fully taxed ordinary income.

Change for installment sales: It's common for you, a seller, to take back a first or second mortgage when selling a commercial or investment property. But under the new law, if a big amount of the sales price would be ordinary income, that could turn into a disaster.

You would be badly hurt with phantom income. Effective for installment sales after June 6, 1984, sales profit treated as ordinary income is taxed in full in the year of sale — whether or not you receive payments.

To help your buyer get a commercial mortgage, you'll have to pay tax on ordinary income, but you'll have the cash to pay it with.

b) If you must take back a down payment, try to get as large a down payment as possible, so you're not, in effect, a lender on the building and are forced to be a borrower to pay the tax.

Effective date: Installment sales after June 6, 1984.

IRS agent claims utility's clout feared by investigators in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — An Internal Revenue Service agent who claims to have evidence of wrongdoing by Utah Power & Light Co. has told the Public Service Commission that UP&L's political-clout was feared by state investigators.

James J. Simmonell, an IRS employee who once worked as an auditor at Emery Mining Co., which operates UP&L's coal mines, testified Monday an investigator with the state attorney general's office told him the giant utility might use its political might to quash a probe.

Simmonell, who is testifying as a public witness against UP&L's bid for a $92 million rate hike, said earlier that Emery Mining had squandered millions of UP&L ratepayer dollars by overpaying for services and engaging in alleged "crooked" business deals.

He said Monday that state investigator Wayne Wickizer complained to him last May that "it was a good possibility that the power company would use all of its political influence to kill the case at the attorney general's level."

Simmonell said he then took his evidence concerning Emery Mining to the Utah Committee of Consumer Services, which has sponsored his testimony.

Savage Western Industries, a parent company of several firms which have business links to UP&L and its coal operations.

Under cross-examination by UP&L attorney Thomas Forsgren, Simmonell acknowledged he had sought employment with the consumer services committee when he first approached the panel with his evidence.

As an investigative auditor for the panel, he could have made $4,000 a month in fees. However, Simmonell said he later withdrew that proposal and decided to go public with his allegations.

Simmonell has yet to detail those claims of wrongdoing, except to say Emery Mining continued to pay for equipment lost or inoperable.

Mine firm does better

PARK CITY, Utah (AP) — United Park City Mines Co. earnings for the half and the quarter show a better second quarter compared to a year ago but higher losses for the half.

Losses for the quarter ending June 30 totalled $149,931, or 2.8 cents per share. That compares with a loss of $170,603, or 3.2 cents per share, for the same quarter a year ago.

For the half, losses totalled $397,006, or 7.7 cents per share, compared to last year's figures for the same period of $335,777 in losses, or 6.2 cents per share.

The company dates back more than a century in the Park City Mining District but its mining properties are now maintained on a standby basis since mining operations have been suspended.

Ohioans by hundred line up for lower-interest mortgages

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Banks across Ohio opened their doors Monday to people who had waited in line for days to apply for a chance at a modern rarity — a 30-year home mortgage at less than 12 percent interest.

"We're on easy street now," said Jorge Ramirez, who had waited since last Thursday outside Waterfield Mortgage Co. Inc. in downtown Cincinnati.

Lines began forming 10 days ago for more than $300 million the state is making available at 11.875 percent interest for first-time home-buyers and buyers in low-income target areas. The prevailing rate on regular fixed-rate mortgage loans currently is more than 14 percent.

The loans, part of a state program approved by voters in 1982, previously were made available in two rounds last year that also generated tent cities outside lending institutions as people waited days in advance.

Most agreed it was worth the wait.

"We'd be saving $30,000 over 30 years with the lower interest," said Dave Isenberg of Niles, who waited outside Bank One in Warren. "I'd sit on top of a building for four days to save that much."

The Ohio Housing Finance Agency raised the money by selling $335 million in tax-free bonds and distributing most of it — $320.7 million, with the remainder going for expenses — to financial institutions across the state for the mortgage loan program. Last year, the program distributed about $410 million in loans to some 10,000 buyers at even lower interest rates.

The interest rate was based on the rate the state has to pay people who bought the bonds in July.

"If somebody told me five years ago that I'd be doing this I would have told him he was crazy," said Mike Guerra, 30, who waited for several days outside the Kissel Co. office in Akron to keep his place in line — 29th.

"This weekend was fun," he said. "We all sat around, drank a lot of beer and watched the Olympics."

In downtown Columbus, people waiting outside Buckeye Federal Savings and Loan were visited Sunday night by Gov. Richard Celeste.

He praised their determination but noted that a limit recently established by Congress on the amount of bonds that can be issued to finance such programs could restrict the program.

"It does make the program more difficult," he said. "I am distressed about it, because housing is a cornerstone of our economic and community life."

Buckeye Federal had coffee and doughnuts waiting Monday morning for about 40 applicants, and Vice President John Vogel said all appeared in good spirits.

"It looks like they've gone home and gotten themselves all cleaned up in suits and dresses," he said.

Vogel said the application process was taking about 45 minutes to an hour and that four bank employees were busy taking applications.

Among the happy customers at Gem Savings in downtown Dayton were Mike and Cathy Drelsback of Mason, who got in line Friday afternoon. They said they expect the monthly payment on their Warren County house will be $500 instead of $600 because of the lower interest rate.

At Mid-American Federal Savings and Loan Association in Dayton, Rob and Kim Blankenship said the mood among the 20 or so couples waiting was convivial.

"We hope to meet here again in 30 years," Blankenship said.

Great Western faces fading market for sugar production

DENVER (AP) — Sugar companies are having to "pull in the horns to survive" because consumption of sweeteners is about what it was five years ago, said Great Western Sugar Co. president Jack B. Powell.

"The consumption of sucrose (sugar) specifically has shrunk considerably in the last five years," he said Monday. "The reduction in sucrose has been taken by fructose (made from corn) and by artificial sweeteners."

But Powell said he hopes to increase Colorado beet acreage next year, because that is needed for Great Western to remain competitive.

Powell, 64, took over as Great Western president again on Aug. 2. He held that title from 1975 to 1978, was named chairman of the board in 1978 and resigned in 1979 to enter the real estate business.

Some farmers view the appointment of Powell and of another former president, James Mark, as head of sales and marketing as an attempt by Great Western to mend fences after more than a decade of strained relations with sugar beet growers in Colorado and Kansas.

Powell said he wants to increase the acreage planted in sugar beets and also to reopen Great Western's Lovell, Wyo., factory in 1985. That facility is closed this year, and the Billings, Mont., beet sugar factory is scheduled to operate only on a limited basis because of contract disputes with growers.

Bank failures most since 1939

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty-nine U.S. banks have failed so far this year, surpassing the total for all of last year and the most since 1939, federal regulators said Tuesday.

In addition, a record 721 banks are suffering problems serious enough to land them on the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.'s list of troubled banks, which means they get closer government monitoring. There were 642 on the problem list at the end of 1983.

Two bank failures in Iowa and Indiana late last week lifted the failure rate so far this year to 49, surpassing the 48 of 1983, according to Alan Whitney, spokesman for the insurance corporation. Last year's total had been the biggest since the 60 of 1939.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board, meanwhile, reported arranging nine mergers of weak savings and loan associations so far this year.

There were 46 federally assisted S&L mergers in all of last year and 65 in 1982. The bank board is the chief federal regulator of S&Ls. Its insurance arm, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., guarantees deposits to $100,000 in 3,333 thrifts.

William Isaac, chairman of the FDIC, said in an interview last month that he expected the pace of bank failures to ease in the second half of this year.

Still, he predicted the 1984 failure level would exceed 55.

It was 42 in 1982 after running at 10 in each of the three previous years.

Isaac has attributed the surge in the number of weak institutions mostly to the economic woes of recent years that required bankers to adjust their decision-making not only to high inflation but also to the lengthy recession.

Strike cuts profits for Las Vegas hotels

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Quarterly financial reports continue to reflect the impact a long, bitter hotel strike made on some of Las Vegas' top resorts.

Hilton Hotel Corp. reported a 2 percent increase in net income for the first six months of 1984, but also reports a 13 percent drop in net income for the quarter ending June 30.

Members of four unions struck 29 Las Vegas resorts, including two Hilton properties, April 2. The two Hiltons and several other hotels set a bid more than a month later, with all but six hotels settling piecemeal by mid-June.

The hotel corporation reported net income was $24,530,000 for the second quarter of 1984 compared to $28,309,000 for the same period in 1983.

Elsinore Corp., the parent company for the Four Queens Hotel, reported a net loss of $1.4 million for the second quarter of 1984.

The company's financial report said that while Elsinore's Hyatt-Lake Tahoe casino and hotel had a good second quarter, the Las Vegas operation was "adversely affected by a labor dispute."

The strike cost the city's economy more than $70 million. Strikers lost a similar amount in wages and tips, and additional millions were lost in gaming revenues.

Six hotels, including the Four Queens, remain on strike.

SEC, Stauffer settle case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission has accused Stauffer Chemical Co. of overstating its 1982 earnings by $31.1 million.

The commission lodged the complaint against Stauffer in a civil suit filed in U.S. District Court here.

The company, based in Westport, Conn., settled the case without admitting or denying wrongdoing, by agreeing to a court order barring it from further violations of anti-fraud and reporting provisions of federal securities laws.

It also agreed to restate the financial statements included in annual reports filed with the SEC in 1982 and 1983 and some of its quarterly reports during those years.

In doing so, the company said it will shift earnings from 1982 to 1983.

In its complaint, the commission alleged that the company "engaged in a course of conduct to increase its 1982 net earnings by the use of accounting methods which were not in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles."

Little lies provide excuses for diet lapses

By CANDY SAGON
 Dallas Times Herald

DALLAS — Dieting for Americans is like a religion: lots of sermoning, lots of books about it, lots of falling from grace.

Not too many of us want to confess our dieting sins. We make excuses for our lapses instead of coming out and admitting, "mea culpa."

Compiled here is a list of the most common rationalizations dieters tell themselves as they stuff yet another handful of calories into their pudgy little faces.

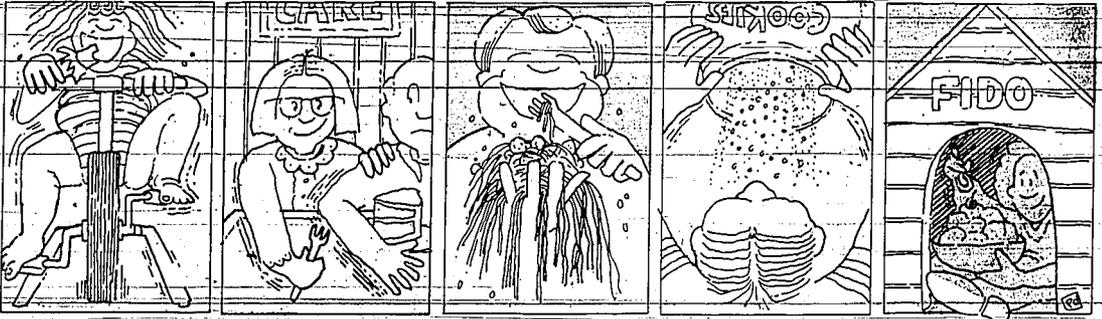

If you have told yourself any of these little "light lies," you're not alone.

Unfortunately, most of us often eat more calories through nibbling than if we just ate that one piece of cake or a couple of cookies and then went on about our business.

The best advice is to set yourself a once-a-day treat limit (say, 10 chips for 100 calories), enjoy it and then go back to your diet with a clear conscience.

In the meantime, here are our dieters' fondest fibs:

• Food eaten standing up at the refrigerator doesn't count.

'I just exercised'

• If you only eat the broken chips, it's not as many calories.
 • Food that no one sees you eat has no calories.

• The even-it-off syndrome: I won't eat a whole piece of cheesecake, I'll just even off this side, or I won't eat any of this ice cream, I'll just even off the top. (This continues until only a silver remains, and that certainly can't contain very many calories, so you eat that, too.)

'A little of yours'

• Eating of someone else's plate doesn't add calories. ("You go ahead and order dessert, and I'll just have a little of yours.")

• The broken pieces at the bottom of the cookie jar have no calories.
 • I'm under a lot of stress, so I'll burn off this candy bar in

'I'll just have salad'

aggravation.
 • A whole piece of birthday cake has too many calories, I'll just eat the frosting.

• I just finished exercise class, so this triple scoop of ice cream can't make me fat.
 • Anything eaten at Mom's house isn't fattening.
 • If you don't put the food on a plate, it has no calories.

'Broken pieces are OK'

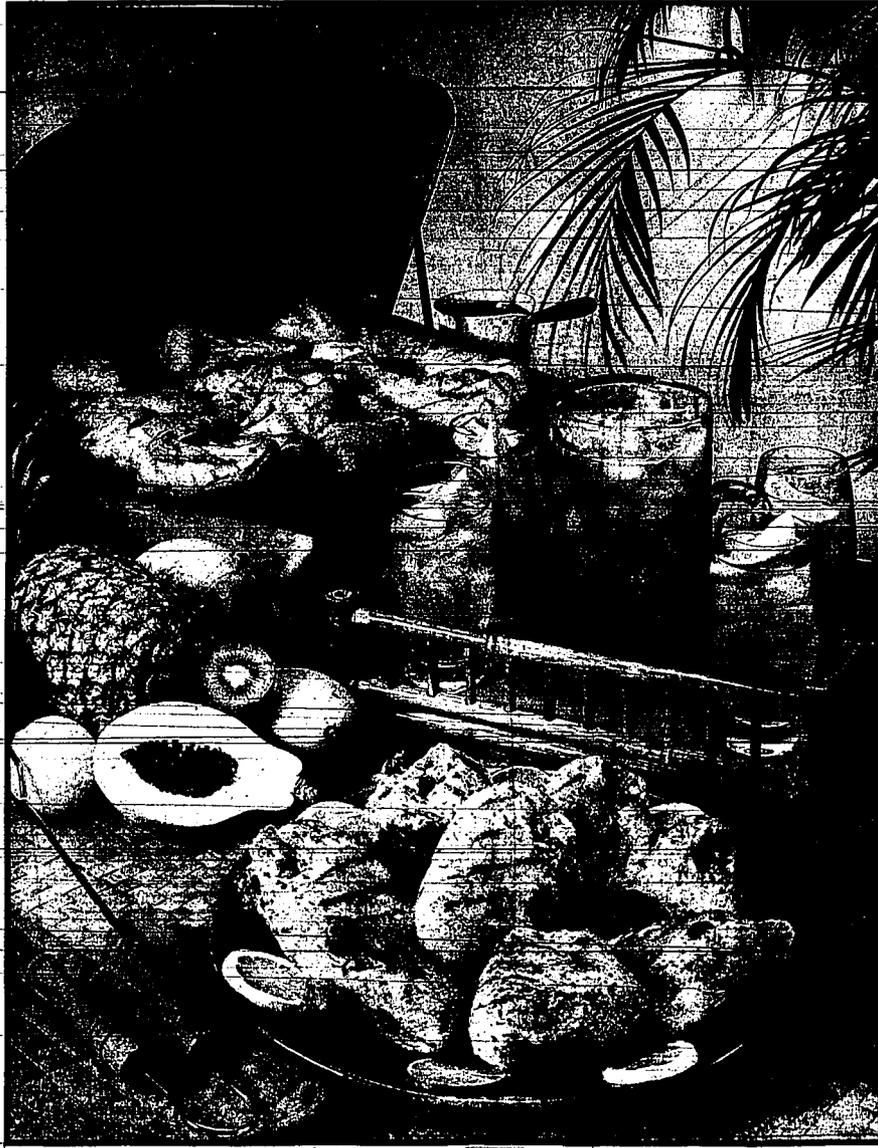

• If it's dough, it doesn't have calories (as in cookie dough).
 • I'm on a diet so I'll just get something from the salad bar (like potato salad, garden salad, cheese, egg, croutons and three scoops of thick dressing).

• Food eaten while cooking doesn't count.
 • Carrot cake isn't fattening; it's good for you (especially the cream

'No one will see me'

cheese frosting).
 • Food eaten while walking isn't fattening. (Walking is exercise, isn't it?) A corollary to this: food eaten while driving in the car doesn't count, because you're moving.

• Anything eaten in a spa is not fattening. (Variation: Anything eaten at a health-food store is not fattening, including the large-size frozen yogurt and a couple of granola bars.)

Barbecued chicken, when done right, is perfect for backyard cookouts in the summer

Time is right for barbecue

Chicken is an ideal meal for the American pastime

It's backyard barbecue time, USA. Stroll down streets anywhere across America and you're likely to detect the tantalizing aromas of food sizzling on an outdoor grill.

It might be just a family supper. Or neighbors gathered to share a relaxed meal and visiting. Or a larger party for friends.

Barbecues are synonymous with summer cooking and are an economical, enjoyable way to entertain. It is estimated that more than 1 billion individual cookouts will take place this summer, in about 79 percent of all family households.

Nothing tastes better cooked on the grill than chicken. A whole bird, halves or quarters, favorite parts, or chunks of tender chicken on skewers — chicken is the outdoor chef's choice for a variety of meals cooked in the open.

No backyard barbecue is complete without picklers filled with refreshing iced tea. It's summer's leading thirst-quencher, low in calories and costing only pennies a service.

- halves
- 1/2 teaspoon freshly ground peppercorns
- 1/2 cup lemon juice
- 1/2 cup lime juice
- 2 tablespoons grated onion
- 1 teaspoon marjoram
- 1 teaspoon chopped parsley
- 1/2 teaspoon thyme leaves
- 1/4 teaspoon dry mint flakes
- In large, shallow glass baking dish, place chicken in single layer. Sprinkle with pepper. In small bowl, mix together lemon and lime juices, onion, marjoram, parsley, thyme and mint flakes; pour over chicken. Cover and marinate in refrigerator for at least two hours, turning frequently. Because there is no oil in marinade, brush grill with vegetable oil. Place chicken on grill, skin side up, about 6 inches from medium-hot coals. Cook, turning and basting with marinade every 15 minutes, for about 1 hour 15 minutes or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Makes 8 servings.

CHICKEN VINAIGRETTE

- 16 broiler-fryer chicken quarters
- 2 1/2 cups cider vinegar
- 1/2 cup red burgundy wine
- 3 teaspoons lemon and pepper seasoning
- 1 1/2 teaspoons garlic salt
- 3/4 teaspoon tarragon leaves
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- In saucepan, mix together vinegar, wine, lemon and pepper seasoning, garlic salt and tarragon. Bring to a boil and remove from heat. In large shallow glass baking dish, arrange chicken in single layer. Pour sauce over chicken; cover and marinate in refrigerator at least 2 hours, turning frequently. Reserve marinade; place chicken on grill, skin side up, about 6 inches from medium-hot coals. Cook, turning about every 10 minutes to brown evenly for about 1 hour 15 minutes. Add olive oil to reserved marinade, place in saucepan, bring to a boil and baste chicken during last 15 minutes of grilling. Chicken is done when fork can be inserted with ease. Makes 16 servings.

SUMMER'S FAVORITE COOLER

Whet it — you use — loose tea.

Grilling Chicken

Grilling chicken should be a leisurely process to be savored, never hurried. Here are a few tips to ensure success.

- Place chicken on grill skin side up with smaller pieces toward the edges.
- Adjust rack about 6 inches above the coals.
- Turn chicken often during cooking to ensure even browning. Cooking with the cover down also helps promote even color. Handle chicken with tongs to avoid loss of juices.
- Apply sauce during last 30 minutes of cooking; turning chicken frequently and applying sauce liberally after each turning.
- To retain moisture, do not salt chicken until after cooking is complete.
- There is no such thing as "rare" or "medium rare" chicken; be sure it is well done. Near end of cooking time, pierce with fork. Chicken is ready to serve when fork can be inserted with ease.

Here's a potpourri of ideas on food for the summertime

It's been about two months since I first started writing this column and this one is a bit of a potpourri of ideas.

There's been just enough feedback to make this sort of a hot-seat. Now my family expects every meal to be special and memorable. They never got it before, and I guess it's a bit like the sign in my kitchen... "Free Lunch, All You Have To Do Is Fix It Yourself!"

Really, they've been most supportive as those of you who have called or written. Later this fall I will be putting in a questionnaire to get a sort of profile of what readers want from a column like this.

Nancy Joy Jones
 Valley cooking

You see, I live in the right side of Magic Valley. Now, this is not a political, educational or religious statement, just geography. Look at any map of our valley and Rupert and Burley are on the right. Gooding, Wendell, etc., are on the left. So what I need is some feedback from the other side.

I would like to know what you are cooking. I don't want individual recipes at this time, but I would like copies of your organization or fraternal groups' recipe books.

If you have one and would care to send it to me, I would appreciate it. Just send to Nancy Joy Jones, Valley Cooking, c/o Times-News, Box 948, Twin Falls, Idaho, 83301.

After chatting with a favorite grocer, I would like to send this timely hint your way. The summer fruits that are now in abundance at your local supermarkets are at the top of their quality and as good as they are going to get. Quality slips if you don't use it right away — so buy day to day rather than a big bag.

It's light food time, so enjoy all those fresh vegetables and fruits. It's the best season of the year for quick, nutritious meals that keep you out of the kitchen.

If you aren't familiar with some of the greens that appear in abundance this time of year, take some home and add to your regular tossed salad. It doesn't take much to make that salad into a full meal... try adding cooked chicken, chopped boiled egg or salmon. One thing we like is to charcoal fish — salmon, snapper, sole, etc. — one night and plan on enough leftover to use in a salad the next day.

Using the fruit is a snap... just layer it in a bowl (peaches and blueberries are two of my favorites), top it with cream or a jigger or so of spirits, let it set and spoon out. Also layering in individual dessert glasses is nice... you can also use wine glasses this way.

I can think of several other ways to use them through the day, just put them on your waffles or pancakes or funnelcakes or crepes or even on your cold cereal. Makes the latter almost respectable.

teabags. Instant powdered tea or the newly flavored teabags. It's easy to make iced tea by the pitcher or even by the gallon jug. Just remember when preparing tea to be served iced to make it extra strong — using 50 percent more tea than usual to allow for melting ice.

Using boiling water and loose tea or teabags: Bring 1 quart of freshly drawn cold water to a full rolling boil in a saucepan. Remove from heat and add 1/2 measuring cup of loose tea or 15 teabags. Stir again and strain into a pitcher holding another quart of cold water. Serve over ice. Makes 2 quarts.

Using cold water and teabags: Fill a quart pitcher or container with cold tap water. Add 8 to 10 teabags (remove tags). Cover. Let stand in refrigerator at least 6 hours or overnight. Remove teabags, squeezing against side of container. Pour into ice-filled glasses. Makes 1 quart. Recipe may be doubled.

Using instant tea or iced tea mix: Follow directions on jar or envelope. In general, add 2 rounded tablespoons of instant tea powder to each quart of cold water. Stir. Add ice. If using lemon-flavored iced tea mix, use 2 small envelopes or 1/2 cup mix to each quart of cold water.

ICED TEA FOR A CROWD

Here's an easy way to make a gallon of iced tea: Bring 1 quart of cold water to a full boil. Pour over 7/8 cup of loose tea, cover and let stand 5 minutes. Strain into 3 quarts of cold water in a gallon-sized container. When ready to serve pour into ice-filled glasses. An even easier method, use 1/2 measuring cup instant tea mix with 4 quarts of cold water. Stir to dissolve; add ice.

One thing that makes a salad a meal with my family is good bread. It can be crusty or hot or chewy or delicate... It just sort of finishes off the meal. I like to bake it, but if there isn't enough time, just check in your local bakery. Recently I counted 38 different breads available and anyone would perk up your barbecue or salad with little effort.

Time is approaching to seed lawns

REXBURG — Late summer and early fall are the ideal times to seed a new lawn in the Magic Valley.

It is the natural time when grasses mature and scatter their seeds. Soil temperatures are warm, resulting in rapid seed sprouting. As the new plants begin to grow, air temperatures are beginning to cool, which is ideal for root growth and establishment. Fewer weeds need sprout to compete with the new grass.

If you want quicker results, it is also a good time to plant a lawn from seed. Seeding can be considerably less expensive if you are willing to spend the necessary time watering.

Water will grow on almost any soil if water and fertilizer are provided. However, some extra expense and effort in soil preparation will result in a more attractive and trouble-free lawn.

The planting area should first be graded to slope away from the house and all construction debris and large rocks removed. Utility trenches and other excavated areas should be watered heavily to settle the soil. If grasses or perennial weeds such as bindweed are present they can be killed by spraying with Roundup or similar weed killers about two weeks before planting.

One to three inches of an organic amendment can be applied before rolling. Bark dust is probably the most economical in our area, but peat moss, sawdust or well rotted manure can also be used. Some nurseries sell bulk amendments by the truckload at a more reasonable price.

After rolling and raking, the soil should be about one-half inch below sidewalks or driveways for seeded lawns. One inch is necessary for sodded lawns.

If you plan to install a sprinkler system, do it right after raking and tilling. I like to water the soil a couple of times after tilling to make a firmer planting bed.

Apply lawn fertilizer according to the directions on the bag just before seeding or laying sod. Without fertilizer the lawn will take considerably longer to become established. If sawdust or straw has been added, double the amount of fertilizer. If manure has been used as an amendment, it will supply the necessary fertilizer.

The last step is to seed or lay sod. Seed can be broadcast most uniformly with a cyclone type spreader. Seed should be raked lightly so that about one-third is still visible on top of the soil. A quarter inch mulch of bark dust or some other amendment will reduce watering frequently of newly seeded lawns.

The most important success ingredient is starting a new lawn in regular and frequent irrigation. Newly sodded lawns require daily watering for the first two weeks. Newly seeded lawns should be sprinkled several times a day for the first three or four weeks.

The soil should never be allowed to dry out. As the grass becomes established, irrigation frequency should be reduced gradually to a four to seven day interval. This encourages development of a deep root system.

Additional fertilizer or weed killer should not be applied until a new lawn has been mowed twice.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College.

Coupon offerings can cause some confusion

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

At first, I couldn't believe my eyes. There, in a recent Sunday newspaper coupon insert, was a Procter & Gamble coupon offering a free container of Comet cleanser with the purchase of three P&G cleaning products.

It wasn't a mail-in offer. This was clearly a "Buy 3-Get 1 Free" type coupon—that was intended to be redeemed at the supermarket checkout counter.

What was so surprising about this arrangement was the additional coupons and the instructions concerning their use.

There was a 20-cent coupon for Mr. Clean, a 25-cent coupon for Top Job and a 20-cent coupon for Spic and Span products that qualified for the "Free Comet" offer. There was no mistaking the instructions. The advertisement clearly stated: "If you started here, are some additional savings..." P&G was asking me to go to the supermarket with these three coupons and use them at the same time I used the "Free Comet" coupon.

Supermarket shopper

Receive a $2 refund. Send the Universal Product Code symbol from the bottom of the carton with the number 7425-07277, plus the dated register tape with the purchase price circled. Expires Dec. 31, 1984.

These offers require refund forms: DOW-CORNING—100-Percent Sillicone RUBBER Savings. Receive $1 to $10 in refunds. Send the required refund form and the Universal Product Code symbols from any of the following Dow Corning products to receive a $1 refund on each item (a maximum of $10): Aquarium Sealant, 3-ounce; Auto-Marine Sealant, Bathub Caulk, Concrete Crack Sealant, Gaskets-in-a-Tube, General Purpose Sealant, Kitchen Sealant, Paintable Sealant and Window & Door Sealant. Expires Dec. 31, 1984.

DR. SCHOLL'S Pro Comfort Cash Refund. Receive a $1 to $4 refund. Send the required refund form and the Large Pro Comfort Logo from the front of one package for a $1 refund, two Logos for a $2.50 refund and three Logos for a $4 refund, plus the register tape with the purchase price circled. Expires Dec. 31, 1984.

GE-AUNT JEMIMA Rebate Offer. Receive $3 to $31 in refunds. Send the required refund form and one proof of purchase from any Aunt Jemima Frozen Waffles for each GE Appliance ordered, the model number from each GE item cut from the corner of the Use & Care Book, plus the original, dated register tape showing the purchase made between Feb. 26, 1983 and Oct. 31, 1984 for the following refunds: $7 — Coffee Maker DCM-50 and Food Processor FP-32. $5 —

How was I supposed to use the "Free Comet" coupon on the three products I was required to purchase and, at the same time, use the three cents-off coupons? This would clearly violate the commonly accepted meaning of "limit one coupon per purchase."

This is what I call coupon confusion, and I wasn't the only one who was confused. Virginia Ann Senyck of Pittsburgh, Pa., was also troubled by the offer and wrote to P&G for clarification. Virginia received a response from P&G and sent me a copy. It stated: "To answer your question, you can use the cents-off coupons toward fulfilling the purchase requirements of the 'Free Comet.' We apologize if this has caused you any problems. Our sales representatives are calling on the trade to communicate how this offer works."

So, in effect, P&G was saying we could ignore the "one coupon per purchase" limitation, at least as far as these coupons were concerned. The reference to "calling on the trade" means that P&G is trying to let the supermarkets know about the potential checkout counter problem they have created with these coupons.

I called Procter & Gamble to find out what their marketing and promotional geniuses were thinking of when they came up with this offer. Several calls and two weeks later I received this response from a P&G spokesperson: "The reaction to this offer from consumers as well as the supermarket industry is important to us, and we are glad to hear from them. We are in the process of studying these reactions and we will be guided by them."

"I really don't think they were so glad to hear from me. This is the kind of response you get from people with red faces who can't come up with a good explanation."

Neither the "Free Comet" coupon nor the three accompanying cents-off coupons have expiration dates. What should you do if you still have them in your coupon file? I would follow the instructions printed on the coupons: "limit one coupon per purchase."

Valley life

Two-timing cop uses live-in

DEAR ABBY: What a mess I am in! I just found out that the rat I've been living with for nine years (we have a 6-month-old baby) has been having quickie affairs all along. I bought the story that he couldn't marry because we're living in my house, which is located out of his district (he's a Detroit police officer), and he would say, "If I married you and we lived in your house, I would lose my job because of residency."

One of his girlfriends wrote him a letter addressed to my house. In this letter she described some love scenes she has had with him that are exactly like the ones I have had with him. She used the very same endearing words

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

he used to whisper in my ear at night. I am so burned I want to throw the rat out. Can you give me some advice? He lies so much I can't believe a word he says.

BURNED IN MICHIGAN
DEAR BURNED: The "rat" has a legal responsibility to the child he fathered. I don't blame you for wanting to throw him out. Too bad you didn't write to me nine years ago. I would have suggested that you sell your house and move into his district.

DEAR ABBY: You recently gave your "readers" some valuable advice when you warned them against vigorously shaking an infant or small child. I am a retired pediatric nursing instructor who always stressed that very point.

Few people are aware that shaking an infant or small child vigorously can cause a whiplash kind of brain injury that can result in eventual mental retardation!

How often we see well-intentioned adults playfully "tossing a baby high into the air." This innocent little game that seems to delight the baby can also result in permanent brain damage.

Brain cells are easily destroyed in infants, and as I told my students, every child needs all the brain cells it can maintain in order to cope in our complex world.

FULLERTON, CALIF.

DEAR NURSE JARVIS: Even though you are officially retired, you're still teaching. Thanks for the refresher course.

DEAR ABBY: This is for the woman who claimed that her immediate friendliness to strangers while waiting in lines "puts everybody in a good mood."

I've met you many times. Once when I was in the checkout line at the market, you asked me a question regarding the weather, the length of the line or whatever, while I was mentally tabulating the amount of money I was spending or wondering if I had forgotten an important item. I tried to get by with a nod and a smile, but you kept right on talking, so I finally had to feign deafness in order to be left alone with my thoughts.

I encountered you again while standing in a long line at the bank. You tapped me on the shoulder to comment on how crowded the bank was during the lunch hour. When I turned around to acknowledge your remark, the teller closed her window to go to lunch, forcing us helpless customers to get into an even longer line.

Another time I was in line to have a prescription filled when you went into a detailed account of your recent illnesses. I considered fainting at your feet to shut you up, but I was afraid I'd lose my place in line.
