Jury clears De Lorean

By LINDA DEUTSCH
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A federal jury acquitted John Z. De Lorean of all eight counts in a $24 million cocaine conspiracy indictment Thursday. They jury found that the government entrapped him in a sting with the promise of money to save his failing automobile company. "Praise the Lord!" De Lorean, 59, exclaimed as the judge's clerk read the verdicts, ending an internationally publicized ordeal of nearly two years that began with his arrest on Oct. 19, 1982.

"I'm pleased it's all over, and I hope I can get back to my life," he told reporters later. "It's been an absolute horror."

He said that "as a Christian I hold no animosity" toward the government, but asks whether his life had been irreparably harmed, he responded wryly: "Well, outside of the fact that I've aged about 600 years in the last two and that life as a hardworking industrialist has been battered and torn, I don't know. Would you buy a used car from me?"

The automaker, who never took the stand during the five-month trial, could have been sentenced to 67 years in prison and fined $105,000 if convicted on all eight counts.

Although cleared of criminal charges, he still is mired in lawsuits from the bankruptcy of his De Lorean Motor Co. and disfaces huge legal bills from the trial.

Some jurors said they felt De

Lorean was guilty, but acquitted him because the judge instructed them to do so if they decided he was not "predisposed" to commit the crimes and the government had entrapped him with its undercover operation.

"Had it not been for that instruction, I would have had a hung jury," said one juror, identified only as No. 36.

None of the eight jurors who met with reporters after the verdict gave their names.

"I think the important thing to come out of this case is there is going to be an impact on the future," said juror No. 140, an accountant.

The way the government agents operated in this case was not appropriate, and look forward to the future favorable impact of this case on the country.

The jury of six men and six women took 29 hours of deliberations over seven days to reach its unanimous verdict, but said there was only one vote taken on each count.

In emotional closing arguments, prosecutors had depicted De Lorean as a greedy madman "who did shake hands with the devil," while the defense said the onetime golden boy of the auto industry "signifies the American dream" and was an innocent victim of a trap set up by ruthless government agents.

The most sensational evidence was a government videotape showing De Lorean looking at a suitcase purportedly full of cocaine and saying, "It's better than gold."

It weighs more than that, for God's sake.

Farmers say patrols create air of fear

Hovels for aliens defended

By HAL BERTINSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two area farmers who hire illegal aliens say that stepped-up Border Patrol enforcement has created a climate of fear in Magic Valley croplands.

"People are scared," said one farmer who requested anonymity. "The Border Patrol has been really cracking down and people are afraid their work force will get picked up. And they can't afford to have them going off at this time of year."

It makes everyone feel like they are criminals, and we're just trying to make a living.

The farmers' comments came in response to a Times-News interview published Sunday with Immigration and Naturalization Service agent James Stenger, which detailed the plight of illegal workers in southern Idaho.

In a subsequent interview, Stenger said increased INS funding from the Reagan Administration had allowed area agents to more intensively patrol southern Idaho fields.

These patrols have uncovered workers housed in aging trailers, garages, pig houses, grain bins and other substandard housing, Stenger said.

Workers wages averaged between $2 and $3 an hour, he reported.

The farmers agree that many workers live in inferior housing. But they said this situation is partially a result of the increased Border Patrol surveillance, which forces them to hide the illegals in out-of-the-way places.

One farmer said he reluctantly moved his workers out of comfortable housing, after a late-night border patrol raid.

"It was like World War II or something, we had to do it (switch housing) in the middle of the night," he said. "I feel badly about where they (the illegals) have to live now, but I'm afraid the Border Patrol will come back."

In his comments, Stenger spoke of a smuggling trade in which farmers paid up to $600 in "transportation fees" to "coyotes" who brought illegals to Idaho. This fee was then deducted from a worker's weekly paycheck.

Both farmers confirmed that the payment of transportation fees was a common pre-condition to hiring illegal workers.

They said they began dealing with the smugglers only after unsuccessful

Cypriot ship hits Red Sea mine; U.S. sweepers arrive

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A 17th ship was reported to have struck a mine in the Red Sea on Thursday; and a U.S. Navy transport ship sailed into the Gulf of Suez to take part in an international minesweeping operation.

A Cairo newspaper reported in its Friday editions that the Egyptian navy discovered and detonated the first mine in the Red Sea since explosions began damaging ships in the waterway 5½ weeks ago.

The Daili Al-Gomhouriya did not say where the mine was discovered and gave no further details, except to say that an Egyptian minesweeper exploded the device Thursday. It said 20 British divers and experts on mines would arrive Saturday and work from British vessels already in the gulf, the newspaper said.

London's Shipping Intelligence of London, which monitors ship movements worldwide, said the 11,765-ton Cypriot cargo ship Theopolis struck a mine at the southern end of the Red Sea on Wednesday night, sustaining heavy engine damage. A distress call was picked up by the Mobil Oil Co.'s Mobil Swift tanker, said a spokesman for Lloyd's, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

Since the end of June, 10 other ships have struck mines near the southern entrance to the Red Sea and six ships hit mines in the Gulf of Suez at the northern end of the 1,400-mile waterway.

A pro-Iranian terrorist organization calling itself Islamic Holy War has claimed responsibility for the mines, saying it had 192 of them. Egyptian officials have said they suspect Libya, and possibly Iran, of sowing the mines, partly because Iranian and Libyan ships sailed through the Suez Canal shortly before the first and second explosions last month.

Both countries have denied it and blamed the United States. However, a U.S. Defense Department spokesman in Washington told a news briefing that Libya was a "suspect" in the mining.

Defense Department spokesman Michael Burch stressed that he was stopping short of making an official accusation, and he declined to say why he labeled Libya a suspect.

The U.S. transport ship, the Shreveport, sailed into the Gulf of Suez on Thursday with four minesweeping helicopters on board, joining British, French and Egyptian vessels.

About 200 Americans were reported involved in the minesweeping operation. In addition, Defense Department spokesman Burch said three specially equipped U.S. RH-53D helicopters have begun sweeping the narrow approaches to the Saudi Arabian port of Jeddah.

Study ties Agent Orange, rare birth defects

ATLANTA (AP) — Government scientists said Thursday that Vietnam veterans exposed to Agent Orange apparently run no overall increased danger of fathering children with birth defects, although the risk may be higher for a few specific defects, including spina bifida.

In the cases of those rare defects, the researchers said, the study was unable to conclude whether Agent Orange was a factor.

The study, reported by the national Centers for Disease Control, covered children born in the Atlanta area between 1968 and 1980.

Data were available on the fathers of 4,815 children with birth defects and 2,977 healthy children, and in both cases, 9 percent of their fathers were Vietnam veterans.

"For most (birth defects) Vietnam veterans' risks were neither higher or lower than those of other fathers," the CDC said.

Similarly, the Atlanta-based agency said, there was "no statistical difference for children of fathers exposed to Agent Orange; a controversial herbicide used to destroy millions of acres of jungle growth in Southeast Asia during the Vietnam War.

The defendant was thought to be harmless to humans; but much of it contained dioxin, one of the most toxic chemicals known.

The CDC researchers said that while the overall risk — for 95 different birth defects — was the same for veterans and non-veterans, veterans exposed to Agent Orange ran a higher risk of having children with a few rare, specific defects.

Those include spina bifida (an imperfectly formed spinal cord), cleft lip and several types of tumors.

Dr. James H. Hanson, director of the CDC, told reporters at a news conference Thursday that despite the findings in those categories, the CDC's study taken as a whole shows that Vietnam veterans are not at increased risk of having children with birth defects of any type.

Andrea Doria safe yields wet money

NEW YORK (AP) — More than a dozen bundles of U.S. currency and other water-logged paper were pulled Thursday from an Andrea Doria bank safe after the vault, raised from the sunken liner's wreck three years ago, was opened for the first time since the ship sank in 1956.

Peter Gimbel, who retrieved the safe at a cost of $2 million, opened it at the New York Aquarium on a live television program broadcast by 161 stations. Two bundles of paper identified by paper conservators as U.S. currency immediately floated to the surface, and other soggy bundles followed.

"All we've seen is Italian and U.S. currency," said Michael Kaufman, spokesman for the U.S. Customs Service. "It's murky, soggy currency — $1 bills, $10 bills, $20 bills and Italian lire."

Kaufman said that paper conservators had removed 15 bundles of currency from the tank at 10:30 p.m., and that more apparently were still inside.

"We will take them (the conservators) a couple of days at least to go through the money, count it, identify the paper, and get the muck off it," he said. "I'm dazzled, I never expected to see bundles of currency float up," said Gimbel, whose film documentary about the expedition was sandwiched around the safe opening during the two-hour show.

Gimbel said the profits from the sale of the film and the possible sale of the safe's contents would be split by the venture's 12 partners.

Low-level microwaves may spur lab cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Glutular changes and a higher rate of cancer were found among laboratory rats chronically exposed to low-intensity microwaves, according to a study by University of Washington researchers.

Results emerging from the $15 million study sponsored by the Air Force have prompted substantial concern among researchers investigating the biological and health effects of non-ionizing radiation, according to Microwave News, a specialized scientific newsletter.

"In addition to a general increase in cancer incidence, the experimental results suggest that microwave exposure is responsible for wide-ranging effects related to the adenat-glands and the entire endocrine system," the publication reported.

The adrenal glands, adjacent to the kidneys, and other glands of the endocrine system produce chemical hormones vital to the regulation of many bodily functions.

The Microwave News account noted that the findings could provide an experimental basis for widely-reported complaints of headaches, dizziness, memory loss and fatigue from workers chronically exposed to microwave radiation.

Microwave radiation is emitted by a wide variety of sources including thousands of military and civilian radar installations, satellite ground stations, relay towers for long-

Protestant rioting persists

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Hundreds of youths hurled gasoline bombs and rocks at police in a second straight night of Protestant rioting Thursday.

Police said Protestants shot at them for the first time in several years.

A press officer at Belfast police headquarters said 20 rioters were arrested and at least four persons were hurt — two police officers, one rioter and a British Broadcasting Corp. television cameraman who received shoulder injuries when rioters attacked him.

The riots were sparked by a scuffle Wednesday in the Belfast Crown Court, when baton-wielding officers of Northern Ireland's Royal Ulster Constabulary pulled four youths away from Protestant terrorists who were on trial there on charges ranging from murder to membership in the outlawed Ulster Volunteer Force.

Lawmaker sobs at hearing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A congressman testifying for legislation to compensate Japanese-Americans interned by the U.S. government during World War II began sobbing Thursday as he recalled hardships suffered by himself and his family.

"On behalf of the old ones who are dying, I ask that we act with firmness and with speed," Democratic Rep. Norman Y. Mineta said, dabbing his eyes with a handkerchief as he concluded his speech to a Senate governmental affairs subcommittee.

At a boy, Mineta was locked up in one of several internment camps that housed 120,000 Japanese immigrants and Japanese-Americans.

Twenty people, many of them prominent Japanese-Americans, addressed the hearing, with most speaking in favor of a bill to provide redress to surviving internees.

Fires blacken 2,500 acres

GRAND VIEW (AP) — A pair of range fires, pushed together and fanned by "squirrelly" winds, has blackened some 2,500 acres of sagebrush and grass northeast of this southwestern Idaho community.

Pat Shanafelt, Boise Bureau of Land Management dispatcher, said 24 BLM firefighters were on scene about six miles northeast of Grand View in Owyhee County Thursday evening. Crews were building fire lines and fighting flames with six water tankers, he said.

The fire started about 2:30 p.m. Thursday, shortly before a thunderstorm carrying brisk winds passed through the area. Shanafelt said the cause of the blaze was still under investigation, but that lightning had not been ruled out.

Minor quake felt in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A minor earthquake was reported near Ephraim Thursday, but officials say no damage was reported.

The University of Utah seismographic station reported that an earthquake with a magnitude of 3.7 on the Richter scale shook the town at 8:19 a.m.

The seismographic station reported the epicenter was 3 miles northwest of Ephraim, and the quake was felt by some in the town.

Elvis fans exchange tales

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Elvis Presley fans gathered Thursday to swap stories and recall their idol at a service marking the seventh anniversary of the swivel-hipped singer's death.

The memorial service, held at Memphis State University, drew a capacity crowd of 500 people, who heard stories from the singer's former friends and business associates, even his dentist.

"You can come here year after year and you always learn something new about Elvis," said one of the faithful, John Ferguson of Zephyrhills, Fla., of the tale "There's always a new one added."

Presley died of heart disease on Aug. 16, 1977, and Memphis is in the grip of an anniversary celebration called Elvys International Tribute Week.

Import rule strains trade tie

PEKING (AP) — Chinese-U.S. trade relations, already strained by a stalled nuclear cooperation agreement, are facing new pressure from tightened U.S. clothing-import rules that China claims could seriously hurt its textile industry.

Under U.S. customs regulations scheduled to take effect Sept. 7, Hong Kong factories that complete semi-finished garments and use cloth from China can no longer export them to the United States.

The rules threaten $2.2 billion worth of Hong Kong textile exports and have panicked many of the British colony's clothing makers, who rely on the cheap labor of factories in China for production of most cloth.

FBI looks into Block loan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Minnesota official says the FBI is investigating whether Agriculture Secretary John Block could benefit from a $400,000 federal loan to a business partner and whether Block disclosed all his assets on financial disclosure forms.

Block said Thursday he had nothing to hide and that part of the recent criticism of his finances is politically motivated.

The FBI would neither confirm nor deny that an investigation was under way. But Minnesota Agriculture Commissioner Jim Nichols said on Wednesday that the FBI is probing whether Block made a full disclosure of his assets on financial disclosure forms required of senior government officials.

Verdict

In a post-verdict news conference, defense attorney Howard Weitzman praised the jury as "courageous" and said, "They sent out a message to the Department of Justice that you can't do to our citizens what you did to John De Lorean. We hope the government thinks before it jumps, even though they may get a cover in Time and Newsweek."

Outside court, one of the prosecutors, Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Perry told reporters, "I've tracked this verdict before, but this is a great shock."

In a statement, U.S. Attorney Robert C. Bonner said, "The jury has spoken; that is the heart of our criminal justice system. As all who believe in our system must, we accept the verdict."

A rush fell over the jammed courtroom as shortly after 12:20 p.m. U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi accepted the verdict form from the jury foreman, a white-haired man. The judge's clerk, Tamara Saunders, then read the words, "We the jury... find John Z. De Lorean not guilty of count one."

As jurors were polled individually, De Lorean's wife, model Cristina Ferrare, fell into the arms of her mother, Renata, and the two women burst into tears. Sobs from his supporters echoed through the courtroom, and De Lorean himself burst into tears as he left the courtroom.

After they left the courtroom, the jurors sent word that they wanted to meet with De Lorean personally, and he went to the judge's chambers to see them.

In Washington, Justice Department spokesman John-Russell said the attorney general would have no comment and referred questions to the U.S. attorney in Los Angeles.

At the FBI, Director William H. Webster had no comment, but the FBI issued this statement: "The FBI does not discuss the decisions reached in a trial and the De Lorean case is no exception. The FBI in concert with the U.S. attorney presented its case in a very professional manner and accepts the verdict of the jury."

The prosecution maintained that De Lorean solicited a drug deal in a desperate bid to save his falling car company in Northern Ireland.

His attorneys claimed he was "set up" by government informant James Timothy Hoffman — a former De Lorean neighbor, and by government agents dazzled by the idea of a celebrity drug case. The defense argued that De Lorean never entered into a conspiracy, but also argued that even if he did, he was a victim of entrapment, and thus should be found innocent.

Weitzman, asked why he never called De Lorean to testify, said "We didn't need him."

Once he turned to illegals, however, the farmer said he faced problems of a different sort.

Officer pleads innocent

Had admitted hoax

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A police officer who removed a bomb from the Turkish Olympic team's bus and won hero's honors before being accused of planting it himself pleaded innocent Thursday to the charge of reckless possession of a destructive device in a public place.

James Pearson, 40, a member of the elite Metropolitan Division assigned to protect VIPs at the airport, was charged just a few hours before he appeared in court for the arraignment.

A request by attorney George Francell to allow Pearson to be released on his own recognizance was denied after prosecutors objected and asked Municipal Judge Michael Tynan to retain the $60,000 bail. A preliminary hearing was scheduled for Oct. 5.

Pearson, a nine-year department veteran, was arrested Tuesday after police said he confessed to the hoax. Police Chief Daryl Gates told reporters Pearson was trying to impress his supervisors with his alertness, devotion to duty and bravery.

Fellow officers have described Pearson as depressed and distraught, and said he was having marital problems. Pearson, on duty at the busy airport Monday night, appeared to discover the pipe bomb in the wheel well of the luggage-loaded team bus, dislodge the device, clear the area and run 50 yards with it to an open portion of the airport.

"Hundreds of travelers, many of them on their way home from the Olympics which ended Sunday, were evacuated from the airport terminal for two hours and a 'red alert' was sounded among Olympic security forces, who were celebrating a trouble-free Olympic Games."

Detectives Michael Strong and John Leone spent the night investigating the incident, then announced Pearson's confession and arrest on Tuesday. Strong and Leone escorted Pearson from his Parker Center jail cell early Thursday morning to the Criminal Court Building, where Pearson waited for his arraignment.

While with the Los Angeles Police Department, Pearson has been credited with saving several lives and received a citation from President Gerald Ford.

Fellow officers viewed the bomb hoax as a "betrayal," said Lt. Dan Cooke. He said Pearson's co-workers were "outraged." "They're emotionally drained, you might say, because we were on such a high until that story broke, having gotten through the Olympics."

Hair dryers cited as common killer

CHICAGO (AP) — At least 95 people were electrocuted in U.S. bathtubs between 1979 and 1982 — with hair dryers blamed in more than half the cases and almost two-thirds of the victims children under 10, a study says.

"As for many other injuries, children had the greatest risk of bathtub-related electrocution from appliances, especially hair dryers," said the study, prepared for the national Centers for Disease Control by Dr. Lawrence D. Budnick.

Two-thirds of the electrocutions occurred in winter and spring, Budnick said. Victims ranged in age from 5 months to 52 years among boys and men and from 1 to 75 years among girls and women.

The extent of injury when an electric current contacts the water in a tub depends on voltage and level and type of current and whether or not the tub is grounded.

"Children younger than 5 years had the greatest mortality rate (3.7 per 10 million population per year)," he said in his report in Friday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

"Among the children, there were four pairs of siblings who died together," said Budnick. He was also author of a study in the previous week's journal indicating at least 8,000 people are injured annually in the United States by toothpicks, with most serious injuries occurring to young children.

"Overall 4,662 years of potential life to age 65 years were lost" because of bathtub electrocutions, said Budnick, whose new study also came from data collected by the U.S. Consumer Products Safety Commission.

His study on bathtub electrocutions says that next to hair dryers, television sets and electric wire and wiring systems caused the most deaths; the latter blamed for 11 deaths.

Seven deaths were caused by lamps, one by a water heater and one by a fan, he said. The cause of six other bathtub electrocutions could not be classified, Budnick said.

He said education might be of some help in reducing such deaths, but said the best approach would be "passive methods, which protect the person automatically, regardless of individual action."

One passive method would be a "fast-acting immersion detector" which would break the electrical circuit in a product that contacts water. Others include mechanical devices that would keep an electrical appliance from reaching the water and devices for grounding bathtubs.

Meanwhile, Budnick said, electric appliances in the bathroom should be disconnected when they are not being used.

Airline workers ordered back on job

NEW YORK (AP) — Unionized employees of an American World Airways worked Thursday under a court order that halted their short-lived strike, but a union official warned that the dispute could flare into another walkout.

"We're playing it not day by day but hour by hour," said William Genesee, head of the airline division of the Teamsters union, representing 7,500 Pan Am workers. The union was ready to do "whatever it takes," he said.

"Pan Am said it was ready to discuss any issue with the union, including the pension dispute that prompted the strike. Genesee demanded talks on wages and on Pan Am's management — 'The whole thing.'"

Scientists offer trade

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of Western scientists, including six Nobel Prize winners, has offered to trade places with Dr. Yelena Bonner, wife of dissident Andrei Sakharov, if that will convince Soviet officials to let her go abroad for medical help, spokesmen said Thursday.

Morris Pripstein, a physicist from the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory in California, said the offer was made quietly July 31 in a telegram to Soviet leader Konstantin U. Chernenko, and was being publicized only because the Soviets have not responded to it. Pripstein said that under the offer, pairs of volunteers would spend a week each in the Soviet Union to serve as "good faith witnesses" for the Sakharovs.

Sakharov reportedly went on a hunger strike May 2 to try to convince the Soviet government to let Mrs. Bonner go abroad for treatment of eye and heart troubles.

The Soviets have turned her down, claiming she would use the trip for anti-Soviet propaganda. Sources in Moscow also have said Mrs. Bonner has been formally charged with anti-Soviet slander, a crime punishable by up to three years at hard labor.

Jaycees vote to admit women into group

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — U.S. Jaycees voted overwhelmingly on Thursday to admit women to their ranks, but President Tommy Todd says he felt "mixed emotions" about the step.

"The vote at a special meeting of delegates from across the country came six weeks after a unanimous U.S. Supreme Court ruling that forced the Jaycees to admit women to Jaycees chapters in Minnesota.

The Minnesota lawsuit cited that state's public accommodations law barring discrimination on the basis of sex. Jaycees officials said 37 states have such laws.

"Our goal for the future is to become America's greatest young people's organization," said Todd, who presides over the 270,000-member leadership training organization from its Tulsa headquarters.

"I encourage America's young people to join us," Todd said after the closed special meeting of national delegates at the Tulsa Convention Center.

The vote was 5,372 to 366, with 77 abstentions. About 600 people attended the convention, but state Jaycees presidents can cast ballots representing the opinion of their state organizations.

"It was all decided before we got here," said Barclay Clark, president of the Jaycees chapter in Pueblo, Colo., who voted against the resolution.

Clark said Jaycees had no choice but to admit women because of the July 3 high court ruling in the Minnesota case.

President Reagan revives controversial bombing joke

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan smilingly assured callers Thursday that despite the international furor over his joke last week that the Soviet Union was about to be outlawed and bombed, he is "not going to bomb Russia in the next five minutes."

"He was offhanded and with a very big smile he said that he had to go into a Cabinet meeting and that he certainly was not going to bomb Russia in the next five minutes," Edgar Bronfman, president of the World Jewish Congress, said in relating Reagan's remarks to reporters.

It was a reversal of the situation last Saturday, when Reagan cracked a joke while testing a microphone before his regular "Saturday radio address from his ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif.

The White House has confirmed that instead of the usual "Testing one, two, three," the president said, "My fellow Americans, I am pleased to tell you today that I've signed legislation that will outlaw Russia forever. We begin bombing in five minutes."

Parks message is one worth heeding

To be told that we Idahoans have "no great pride in our parks" is a stinging indictment, particularly coming from an observer who has studied parks in all 50 states.

But after reading the comments Wednesday that effect from Yale history professor Robin Winks, we think they have considerable merit.

More importantly, as Winks suggests, we Idahoans may lack a sense of our own history, its values and how to preserve our important historical sites to reflect our heritage.

In forming his conclusions, delivered at the "Parks in the West" conference at Elkhorn, Winks drew on visits to several parks and historic sites in the Magic Valley.

At Glens Ferry, for example, he found only a boat ramp and a small interpretive marker to indicate the site where thousands of immigrants crossed the Snake River on the Oregon trail.

At Shoshone Falls, he found the view marred by graffiti, litter and trash.

He noticed the lack of monuments for the Magic Valley's best known authors, Ernest Hemingway and Ezra Pound and its mining and railroad history.

Instead, he found an apparent attitude by Idahoans that our special sites should be kept relatively obscure and not open to visitors. Directions to one park near Hagerman, he said, got him lost on rural roads.

"No one has sat down and said what the themes are in Idaho history," Winks concluded.

Winks is painfully correct on some of these points, and his comments should not make us defensive, but should spur us to action. An area's history gives it an important sense of cultural continuity; without knowing something of our past, how can we chart the future?

These concerns may not seem so important in the Magic Valley, which is relatively new in development. Some may even say, what have we to preserve?

Maybe it is time, as Winks suggests, for us all to pay more attention to what we have. A few simple changes would do a great deal:

We should clean up and adequately mark park sites, and designate clear access to them.

We can honor our genuinely great area people, like Hemingway and Pound.

We can teach Magic Valley history as a special part of Idaho history.

And we can listen to thoughtful critics like Wink, even if the message is a sharp one.

If, as he says, "the park system is a reflection of the values of a people," we may be failing to pass down to our children important parts of our heritage. It is a message worth heeding.

Is Idaho wilderness a national issue?

The mountain state of Idaho has been described as the wilderness paradise of the nation. Home of the far-famed River of No Return Wilderness Area, the largest in the lower 48, and with over 8 million acres of eligible Federal land, the prospects for preservation of significant areas of wild territory here seemed very real.

So in the recent rush to pass wilderness bills, it came as a special shock when Ben Raynes' McClure wilderness bill proposed less land into the system than even the slogging, pro-logging Forest Service had itself recommended.

Out of the 8 million eligible acres, he had proposed about half a million. Compared with the 4.5 million called for by environmental groups like the Idaho Wildlife Federation, the 1.8 million proposed by the Idaho Fish and Game Commission, or the 1.2 million acres that the Governor wanted, the bill seemed obviously out of line somewhere.

According to Ernie Day, an environmentalist who has been called the "Father of the River of No Return Wilderness," all McClure has proposed to protect is "rocks and ice," leaving unprotected such areas as a substantial portion of the Maillard-Larkin area, which is a prime habitat for elk and mountain goats, or the Kelly Creek area, a spawning ground for cutthroat trout.

Citing the low yields of timber in many of the areas left unprotected, Day commented that, "This state is a national treasure. It's being used by the whole country. In the long run, it's of more economic value to us as an attraction to tourists than it is if we spool it for a short run profit."

At present, the Idaho wilderness bill is stalled in the House of Representatives by efforts led by Rep. John F. Seiberling of Ohio. What's next? Environmental groups are trying to make Idaho a "national constituency."

What it means is that, rather than passing the wilderness bill recommended by a majority or consensus of the state's congressional delegation, concerned groups must try to convince the Congress as a whole that the state's delegation is not truly representing the interests or desires of the state or nation. There is precedent in the Alaska Lands Bill of 1979 in which wilderness areas were protected over the objections of the

Jim Chase

Alaskan delegation. For that to occur in Idaho, two things need to happen. First, McClure's bill must be prevented from passing. So far, at least, that seems to be happening. Then enough members of Congress must be convinced that the bill does not represent the interests of the country or the state of Idaho for them to intervene—they must be convinced that they know what is best for Idaho better than Idaho's own representatives, and to take action on that basis. Idaho must become a "national constituency."

So, pressure must be brought to bear on senators and representatives who will be unwilling, at least at first, to intervene in another politician's state. But, unless McClure and the rest of the Idaho delegation change their minds, or the House is able to hold out on the bill until the people of Idaho change their representatives, that is the only legislative option.

But, if Congress can be convinced to act, a new dimension in wilderness preservation will open up, one which has implications for every state.

Jim Chase is an associate editor of Backpacker magazine, in which this article appears in the September issue.

Time now for the summer reading list

BOSTON — We are now plunging headlong into the August dog days of television known as the Republican National Convention.

This prime-time convention promises to be less a story than a tableau vivante, the ultimate political still life. Speakers will be regaling us with the virtues of the current administration all the way from a to z-z-z-z.

Thus, in a gesture of public-spiritfulness, I have decided that this is the moment to offer up my annual summer reading list. This list, as always, bears little resemblance to the best-seller lists. It is a completely eclectic collection of what a fairly eccentric reader has enjoyed over the past year.

For those of you who will only read one book this summer, make it Rossellen Brown's "Civil Wars." This novel, like a good wine, has legs; it's positively cheery. The story of a family surviving with its battered Sixties idealism echoes "The Big Chill," but is much more complex. It's about as rich a tale of family, politics and adolescence as I've read.

In the same family mood, I would offer up two other novels. These are slighter, but have an expansive family mood: The first is Joan Chase's novel, "During the Reign of the Queen of Persia," about three generations of women on a farm in Ohio. The second is Jayne Ann Phillips' new novel, "Machine Dreams," which is written in the voices of different family members over the course of 50 years. Phillips' novel is at once about dullness and about the deep cultural forces of modern life—eventually including Vietnam—that scatter this family.

In John Updike's new book, it is the women who are the ominous sources of disruption. In "The Witches of Eastwick," Updike finally focuses on women; largely peripheral to his other novels. The three divorced women who form the core of this tale are, literally, witches, full of dark, unsatisfied, disruptive powers. Frankly, Updike seems ill at ease with them; unexpectedly awkward in their presence. But he crafts each sentence beautifully, as if in compensation. Even at his second-best, Updike's prose would make Evelyn Wood feel guilty for reading too fast.

Ellen Goodman

Like Updike, William Golding has often written in mythological terms. "The Paper Men" chronicles an American academic's desperate, parasitic pursuit of an alcoholic English novelist. I found this novel powerful, intriguing, rather like watching two enemies hopelessly sucking the juice from each other's lives. It is, at the same time, a sharp commentary on literary life and academia.

If that is too heavy summer fare, I would offer up Gail Parent's "A Little Bit Married" as froth for the beach. Parent's new novel is, with apologies, semi-junk — perfect for a transcendental flight if you must get to that beach. This is a quick-read tale about doctor, wife, her fantasies, and their fat teen-age daughter who is just a little bit pregnant.

Moving to the non-fiction list, I would put Barbara Tuchman at the top again. Her latest, "The March of Folly," is not exactly reassuring (it is case studies in governmental pursuit of woodenheadedness), but utterly convincing.

After reading this, put your anxiety to work, reading "The People's Guide to National Defense" co-authored by four writers including Sheila Tobias and Shelah Leader. The guide gives some of the basics of the latest follies in military spending. It is a perfect entry-level book for the defense-phobic.

But what about the Russians? you ask. (Every time you talk about defense, somebody asks it.) The best current book on the people of the "evil empire" is David Shipley's report on Russian days and malaise. The title, "The Russians: Broken Promises, Idle Dreams," and the daunting history of this nation, help to put "the threat" into a human context. Perhaps we can slip it into the monitor for Reagan's acceptance speech.

Finally two books — one that will manage to outrage all sides, and the other to calm them down. The first is Germaine Greer's latest broadside called "Sex and Destiny." Greer turns her powerful intellect over to provocation. She makes a case that Americans are too narrow-obsessed with overpopulation and out to control the birth of the world. This book will infuriate both the Right-to-Lifers and the Planned Parenthood types, but if you read it critically, and take her rhapsodizing about Third World "natural" family life with a mountain of salt, there's an intelligence at work here.

The antidote for Greer's dyspepsia is May Sarton's latest journal, "At Seventy." If you don't know Sarton, meet her in old age. "What is life to be seventy? ... I do not feel old at all, not as much a survivor as a person still on her way."

Finally, each year, out of quirkiness, I start reading through some author that I simply missed in an eratic education. This year it's Edith Wharton. The best so far is "House of Mirth." Just the stuff for a porch swing without the distracting hum of the television.

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe.

Letters/ National Academy of Peace a dream coming to reality after long time

A letter now may help out

Nine years ago the creation of a National Academy of Peace was the dream of a handful of committed individuals. Today, after tireless work by thousands of individuals and institutions, we stand on the brink of the realization of that dream.

"Never before, however, has the fight been so difficult. I have made my commitment to Senate consideration of the bill — S. 561 — clear to the Senate Majority Leader."

S. 561 has 55 co-sponsors and has won the endorsement and support of over 50 national organizations. Among senators urging passage of the bill are Spark Matsunaga (D-HI), Jennings Randolph (D-WV), Claiborne Pell (D-RI), H. John Heinz III (R-PA), Larry Pressler (R-SD), Frank T. Murkowski (R-AK), Roger Jepsen (R-IA), David Durenberger (R-MN), Robert Stafford (R-VT), Mark Andrews (R-ID), Charles Mathias (R-MD), and Rudy Boschwitz (R-NY).

The bill has been on the Senate calendar since September 1983, but has not yet been scheduled for a vote on the floor. Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker (R-NH) is responsible for assigning floor dates to legislation and is a key figure to passage.

According to the legislative alert sent by the National Peace Academy Campaign, Senators James A. McClure (R) and Steven D. Symms (R) are both opposed to the bill. But sometimes letters to members of Congress do make a difference, and can help those who represent us to see a different side of a picture.

Sen. Charles Percy (R-IL) wrote to constituents who contacted him about his opposition to the Peace Academy proposal... because of the volume of mail I have received from people in Illinois, I thought it would only be fair to review my position on this issue and consider the arguments and reasons that you and others have brought to my attention. I am looking at the issues again.

Sen. Hatfield (5/18/84): "I will... do everything in my power to see that the bill is given fair consideration and will not rest until the National Academy of Peace — the Dream I've had for so long — becomes a reality."

What a dream! A national institution devoted to research and education in peace-making and nonviolent ways of managing conflict. I have it too. Do you?

Write to your senators. Write also to your representatives because there is house bill H.R. 1249, the U.S. Academy of Peace and Conflict Resolution Act. And write directly to Sen. Howard Baker, United States Senator, Washington, D.C., 20510, and to Rep. Jim Wright, House Majority Leader, House of Representatives, Washington, D.C., 20515.

U.S. wary of visitors

For the past six weeks, I have been living and studying in Mexico. I made many good friends down there and a lot of nice memories.

One of my new friends is a teacher in a grade school — a teacher of English. He is studying English, as well as, two other languages. In 1981, he came to the U.S. as a foreign exchange student and now really wants to come back to visit, perhaps even to live.

But my friend has a problem, you see. Our embassy down there won't give him a visa to come to the U.S. They wouldn't give him a visa, he was told, because one of the other languages he is studying happens to be Russian.

When I heard this, I was at a loss for words. What do you say to someone who isn't allowed to visit? "The Land of the Free" because of what he is studying.

I have been studying Spanish for three years and I have travelled to Mexico twice now. If you talk to anyone who studies another language, they will tell you that it is the best way, apart from living in another country, to learn about other people, other ways of life, and other cultures. What reason could I give my friend that would make it clear why my government won't allow him to come learn about us, because he chooses to learn about the Soviet people as well?

All of this led me to ask myself: If our government won't let people of other countries in because they study the Russian language, what about those who are studying Russian in this country? Is our government so paranoid that it has to deny visas on the basis of a person's choice of study? If so, would our government go to the extent of "watching" those in this country who choose to learn something about the people who happen to be born under the Soviet flag? I wonder.

So, I am back in the good ol' U.S.A. — Land of Opportunity. Where we're free to choose our own lifestyle, free to make a living, free to learn about whatever we please. Right? But apparently not free of being wary of foreigners. CHRIS CHUPA

Merchant extremely helpful

While passing through your city, the tow dolly we were pulling behind our motorhome collapsed. Fortunately we were going slowly and neither the car nor motorhome were damaged but we were completely immobilized.

Had it not been for the kindness and efficiency of the Twin Falls U-Haul manager, our seven-week across-country trip might have ended right there.

In dollars, the accident was costly enough. But, in terms of the time required to get the parts from the Oregon factory and physically do the repairs, it was catastrophic. Our itinerary was too tight to stay more than one day.

Frank Zambico of U-Haul responded to our call with a tow truck for our dolly, an air-conditioned customers' lounge and a solution to our problem.

Congratulations on having a businessman who not only gets the job done but goes out of his way to help travelers in distress. KARL AND LINDA ALBRE

Burford chases after Ferraro

By LEE BYRD
The Associated Press

ANNE BURFORD
Back in the spotlight

WASHINGTON — Anne M. Burford re-entered the political stage Thursday as head of a conservative "truth squad" whose mission is to discredit Democratic vice presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro.

President Reagan's chief spokesman and his campaign director moved quickly to dissociate the Reagan-Bush re-election committee from the move.

Mrs. Burford, who has resigned under a storm of criticism from two environmental posts in the Reagan administration, also has made a television commercial — not yet aired — in which she charges Ferraro with perpetrating "a real scandal on Capitol Hill."

The charge revolves around congressional financial disclosure forms in which Ferraro, for six years, omitted information about the business interests of her husband, John A. Zaccaro, a New York real-estate investor. Ferraro has said the information was not required, but has promised to provide it on Monday.

Mrs. Burford, in separate remarks to reporters, also assailed Ferraro for withdrawing a pledge to make public the couple's tax returns. Zaccaro, who had feared the tax disclosure could adversely affect his business, said Wednesday he was reconsidering whether to release the tax documents.

At the White House, chief presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said campaign representatives had learned of Mrs. Burford's intentions just hours before her news conference.

"The campaign protested and urged her not to do this," he said. "It's not the way we want to run the campaign."

And Reagan-Bush campaign chairman Edward J. Rollins emphasized: "NCPAC is an independent political action committee which is not connected in any way with Reagan-Bush '84 or the Republican Party."

"I must emphasize that we have had absolutely no discussions with NCPAC on this issue, and furthermore I would like to dissociate Reagan-Bush '84 from the NCPAC commercial," Rollins said.

But, campaigning in the Northwest, Ferraro told reporters: "One would expect the Republicans to run a negative campaign, and that was just the beginning."

Asked if her assault on Ferraro might not prove an embarrassment in light of her own controversial background, Mrs. Burford said: "I'm very proud of my record in this administration."

Mrs. Burford said she would not retreat from the campaign against Mrs. Ferraro even if she fully discloses the financial information at issue. But

Dolan said the TV commercial would not be aired — if that happens. "We have bought no time on it yet," he said. "We're going to hold it until she releases her statement."

Early this month, Mrs. Burford resigned on the eve of her scheduled swearing-in as chairman of an environmental advisory commission. Both chambers of Congress had asked Reagan, by overwhelming votes, to withdraw that appointment, but he refused. Mrs. Burford called the job a "nothingburger" and called the commission "a joke."

Asked if her assault on Ms. Ferraro might itself be a "nothingburger" if the vice presidential nominee fully reveals her finances, Mrs. Burford replied, "I don't think so."

"You have a congressional woman who has failed to file financial disclosure forms which include the finances of her husband, Congressman George Hansen (R-Idaho) was indicted, convicted, and sentenced to two years in jail for a similar offense."

"Even though she is an officer of her husband's company and used several real estate transactions to pay off her campaign debts, she claims to have no knowledge nor potential benefit from that business," said Mrs. Burford.

"She is either one of the most altruistic shareholders in the country, or one of the most ignorant officers," she said.

GOP platform still most conservative

DALLAS (AP) — Republicans completed an unambiguously conservative platform draft Thursday, forbidding endorsement of the Equal Rights Amendment and embracing development of the Midgetman missile system.

"When the president reads this document, he will love it," one party leader said of Ronald Reagan. "The platform gave little comfort to moderates, urging prayer in public schools and passage of a strict anti-abortion amendment to the Constitution and declaring that any tax increase would harm the economic recovery."

"We are a conservative party and we have a conservative candidate ... In no way are we uncomfortable with a conservative document," said Drew Lewis, Reagan's emissary to the platform committee.

Platform chairman Trent Lott predicted the president "will love it," and so will the delegates who vote their approval next Tuesday night.

A White House spokesman said Reagan's only reservation is a plank accusing the Federal Reserve of "destabilizing actions." But Lott, a Mississippi congressman, said the provision was "the mildest language" possible, and doubted there would be any change.

Lott said he knew of no plans by dissenting moderates to seek a minority plank on the convention floor, even on the social issues.

An NBC News voter survey, released as platform writers were putting finishing touches on their work, gave Reagan a 23-point lead over Democratic candidate Walter F. Mondale.

Special prosecutor sought for Ferraro probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — An activist Washington lawyer asked Attorney General William French Smith on Thursday to have a special prosecutor look into the finances of Democrat Geraldine Ferraro to avoid "a clear and blatant political conflict of interest."

As he delivered his request letter to the Justice Department, George Washington University law professor John Banzhaf told reporters, "I think the evidence is very strong" against both Ferraro, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, and her husband, New York real-estate dealer John Zaccaro.

But he wrote Smith that "a criminal investigation of the Democratic Party's candidate for Vice President (or her husband) by the Republican administration only months before the election would result in a clear and blatant political conflict of interest, and would certainly be perceived as such by many members of the public."

Banzhaf said a special prosecutor, or independent counsel as the post is now known, should look into whether Ferraro illegally claimed an exemption to listing Zaccaro's finances on her congressional disclosure forms and into whether she submitted a false affidavit during a federal investigation of the financing of her 1978 congressional campaign.

Department spokeswoman Judith Pond said there would be no comment on Banzhaf's request.

A Justice source, speaking only on condition he not be identified, has said criminal division officials would wait to see what Ferraro's additional disclosures contain before deciding whether to launch an investigation. She has promised to make those disclosures Monday.

Last week, Justice spokesman Tom DeCaria said Ferraro is not covered by the act, but Banzhaf disputed that.

The 1978 ethics act specifically names certain high government and presidential campaign officials who are covered by the special prosecutor provisions. Banzhaf pointed out, however, that recent amendments to the law allow the attorney general to invoke the provisions in any serious instance where a Justice investigation "may result in a personal, financial or political conflict of interest."

Banzhaf said the evidence against Ferraro was as serious as that against presidential contender Edwin Meese III, President Reagan's nominee for attorney general, whose financial dealings are now under investigation.

Bush's finances beyond his reach

DALLAS (AP) — While arguing that Geraldine Ferraro's husband should disclose his tax returns, Vice President George Bush says he cannot reveal his own under terms of a strict blind-trust agreement established to take his finances out of his control.

"To break a blind trust, you have to go to the Government Ethics Office and get permission to do it and I see no need to do that," Bush said. "I've had no interest, no possible conflict of interest and no access to information on this ever since the assets were put into that trust."

Congressional Republicans who have been calling on Ferraro to make her husband's returns public are saying Bush should do the same. Among those recommending Bush to make a disclosure are Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, Rep. Trent Lott of Mississippi and Rep. Bobbi Fiedler of California.

In a telephone interview with The Associated Press from his vacation retreat in Maine, Bush said he released tax returns dating back six years during the 1980 campaign and then put his assets into "the most stringent blind-trust established" when he took office.

"Obviously, if I have conducted myself that way I think others ought to do it for this job," said Bush. "I'm saying, this is what I've done and I'm saying others ought to do it this way."

Bush, a millionaire, released joint returns in 1979 with his wife Barbara covering the years 1973 to 1978. In 1980 he released their 1979 return.

Hatfield troubled

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — U.S. Sen. Mark O. Hatfield on Thursday denied statements by Washington acquaintances that he and his wife Antoinette encountered financial difficulties in 1982 and 1983.

Lafferty again denies link to killings

By TOM GARDNER
The Associated Press

RENO, Nev. — Accused killer Ron Lafferty again denied Thursday that he killed his sister-in-law and her small daughter or that he ever belonged to a polygamist cult, as police claim.

"It's a bunch of garbage," he said by telephone from the county jail. "As far as I'm concerned, the Mormon Church is making those accusations and if the facts ever investigated them, they'd find a cult that would just blow your mind."

Lafferty, 42, and his brother Dan, 36, face a second hearing Friday in their fight against extradition to Utah, where they are charged in the July 24 slayings of Brenda Lafferty, 24, and her 15-month-old daughter, Erica.

The victims' throats were slashed in what police speculated may have been a ritualistic murder.

The brothers, both excommunicated Mormons, claim the charges against them are part of an effort by the church and the system to "get them out-of-the-way," and say they could not receive a fair trial in Utah.

They contend their conservative political beliefs clash with those of local officials where they lived and with current Mormon doctrine.

Ron Lafferty said the church taught him to grow his own food and keep a year's supply of food on hand. He said he and his brother did this, which he contends led some people to brand them as cultists.

After his divorce from his first wife, Lafferty said he moved into a small trailer behind the house where Dan and his wife lived and "was accused immediately by my local church leaders, by my wife, of joining a cult."

"If I were to pull my trailer house behind your home and live in this trailer house, then you'd be part of this cult. That's the cult that they're talking about."

"After the Laffertys were arrested Aug. 7 in a casino here, police Chief Randy Johnson of American Fork, Utah, where the victims lived, speculated the brothers might be linked with a splinter sect of the Mormon church which practiced polygamy, outlawed by the church in 1890.

Johnson also said police had come up with a hand-written divine "revelation" resembling a hit list. It has not been determined who wrote it.

"Those people that are making all those accusations, they're guessing," Lafferty said Thursday. "They don't really know where I'm at and they don't know where they're at. I know where they're at and I know where I'm at, but I paid a price to learn that."

"I have a peace in my heart that I've never experienced before in my life. I could face my maker, my final judge, and look him in the eyes, and I could stand tall in his sight."

Lafferty said he talks with God daily and has written down some of the revelations.

"I think it's kind of a shame — most of them are very personal to me — that people dig into it and make it public, but I guess that's the way it goes. I really don't have any secrets," he said.

Dairyman says cattle eat processed hoppers

BOISE (AP) — A Washington state man has offered Idaho officials a solution to the state's grasshopper infestation — harvest the hoppers for cattle feed.

Max Hanson, director of the Idaho Department of Agriculture, said a man identifying himself as Jerry Tower of Seattle called the department last week, saying he had seen grasshopper infestations several years ago when he owned a dairy in Ohio.

Tower said he mounted a bar with dangling chains on the front of his tractor and pulled a modified bean drier through the field.

The motor on the drier was positioned to just skim the vegetation. Hoppers that jumped to avoid the chains were sucked into the drier and dehydrated.

"He said it produced an 18 percent protein feed, which his cattle relished," Hanson said. "But in three years he couldn't find any more grasshoppers."

Hanson said he wasn't sure what grasshoppers would do to the stomach of a cow, but he noted that some African cultures roast locusts and eat them.

"I imagine it would put a little hop in their diet," he said.

Colleges, universities face budget cutbacks

BOISE (AP) — Idaho colleges and universities already faced with a fiscal 1985 appropriation many officials consider inadequate, are preparing for further budget cuts.

The State Board of Education's finance committee last week hammered out a plan to reduce Idaho's higher-education budget by more than $2.4 million. The action came several weeks after Gov. John Evans ordered a 3 percent holdback in state agency budgets to head off a projected shortfall.

The full education board is scheduled to consider the committee's recommendation during a statewide conference call on Friday.

If the committee's plan is approved, holdbacks for all four institutions will be somewhat higher than estimated earlier. Three regional medical-education programs will be exempted from the holdback, a move that would add $33,700 to the reduction in other areas.

The University of Idaho would lose more than $1.1 million under the recommendation. Boise State University would be asked to trim about $750,000 from its budget.

Idaho State University would lose $400,000, while Lewis-Clark State College in Lewiston would give up almost $34,000.

The blow would be cushioned, however, because $2 million in supplemental funds appropriated at the end of the 1984 Legislature would be used to cover the majority of the holdback. Only $400,000 would be taken from the schools' operating budgets.

Rodeo death cleared

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A hearing into the death of a Montana man who was injured at a rodeo indicated no mistakes were made in the emergency procedures used during the accident, Kootenai County Commissioner Glenn Jackson said.

The Wednesday review, which was closed to the public, was prompted by a spectator at the Coeur d'Alene Rodeo who expressed concern about the care given to Benjamin Herzog after the July 21 accident.

The 21-year-old Miles City, Mont., man died the following day at a Spokane hospital of head injuries he suffered while riding in the bareback horse competition.

Jackson said the spectator had questioned three points of the care given to Herzog — whether the ambulance crew responded quickly enough, whether paramedics should have been called and whether Herzog should have been turned over on his back.

A Post Falls ambulance on standby at the county fairgrounds that night was working on what appeared to be a broken arm when Herzog was hurt at the other end of the stadium, Jackson said.

"That's why it took them a moment to get to him," he said, estimating it may have been two to three minutes before the crew reached Herzog.

Murder suspected in woman's death

PAYETTE (AP) — Payette County Sheriff Bob Barowsky says he's opening a homicide investigation into the death of a woman whose body was found in the Snake River along the Idaho-Oregon border.

The woman remained unidentified Thursday afternoon. Officers at first thought the woman was Linda Hatfield, 30, Middleton, who disappeared May 30 after leaving her job at a Garden City tavern.

But after an autopsy at Holy Rosary Hospital, Ontario, Ore., hospital administrator David Goode said a pathologist reported there was no evidence it was the missing woman.

County Coroner Tom Kennedy said the body was that of a woman roughly between the ages of 20 and 30. But he said determining the cause of death and other information would have to await the result of laboratory tests.

Idaho Employees criticizing Stivers

MOSCOW (AP) — Some state employees have taken issue with Idaho House Speaker Tom Stivers' contention that the state work force could be reduced 10 to 20 percent.

And while one of Stivers' fellow House Republicans — James Lucas of Moscow — feels the speaker is on the right track, he says it's for the wrong reasons.

Stivers said at a news conference Tuesday that the state work force could be reduced because many of the 12,000 state employees are underworked.

"What they need is more incentive, more work to do," he said.

Charles McQuillen, executive director of the state Board of Education, said his staff needs "neither more motivation nor more to do."

The Legislature did not fund an Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry recommendation that the board add four staff positions, he noted.

And he said the board staff will actually lose half a full-time equivalency position this year in its scholarship and contracts operation.

The staff has been able to absorb recent losses because the level of automation in the office is increasing, he added.

Stivers singled out Gov. John Evans' Division of Financial Management as an agency that needs to spend less time with its computers and more time in the field managing state agencies.

Larry Schlicht, assistant director of the division, said Stivers' remarks "if anything, will enflame the sensitivity of state employees."

He said the state work force is about the same as it was 10 years ago. "The problems in the state have at least stayed constant if not grown with the population," Schlicht said.

He also said employees from the financial management division spend time out in the field when they are not involved in the legislative session, developing the executive budget or developing budget instructions for the coming year.

Stivers' particularly cited liquor store employees as being underworked.

But Jim Baugh, assistant to the superintendent of the state Liquor Dispensary, said many stores have only one person. "It's very difficult to cut it down from there," he said.

Lucas said he agrees the number of state employees should be reduced.

Radioactive cask stuck

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — An effort may be made today to move a 135-ton shipping cask carrying radioactive material which slipped off a truck last Wednesday.

The cask carries a reactor core barrel containing radioactivity-contaminated items such as gloves and paper, say officials at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory. The shipping cask remained intact when it fell and did not spill any radioactive material, said INEL manager Troy Wade. It has remained where it fell, inside a fenced compound at the Naval Reactor facility, because federal agencies couldn't round up a crane big enough to move the 135-ton weight.

INEL spokesman Ann Hosford said Thursday it was possible that an effort would be made Friday to put the cask back on a truck to complete its journey to a nearby waste disposal facility.

Warden to seek 60 officers after guards file grievance

BOISE (AP) — Idaho State Penitentiary Warden Arvon Arave says he will request an additional 60 officers for the prison in next year's budget.

Arave said Wednesday he already was planning to request more officers when he received a grievance petition earlier this month, signed by 106 officers, that complained of dangerously low staffing and requested that 100 positions be added.

Arave said the officers' concerns "refocused" his interest in the prison's understaffing.

Arave said he and Corrections Director Al Murphy analyzed prison staffing last week to reconfirm the budget recommendations, which were submitted to Murphy on Tuesday.

Sixty additional officers would cost the state about $1.2 million in salaries and benefits, Arave said. Murphy said he has approved the inclusion of the additional staff in the fiscal 1986 budget.

Officers said at a press conference last month that prison work ing conditions were "life-threatening" because of the understaffing. They said 100 additional officers would meet American Correctional Association standards, which they said called for one officer for every four inmates, double the prison's current 1 to 8 ratio.

Responding to the grievance in a memo to the officers, Arave said that the prison, with 161 officers, is understaffed by only 54 officers.

Nicaragua acknowledges building a military airport

PUNTA HUETE, Nicaragua (AP) — Nicaragua acknowledged for the first time Thursday that it is building a large military airport, as the Reagan administration has claimed, and took journalists on a tour of it. Officials said it could be operational by the end of next year.

Air Force chief Raul Venerio said he was "awaiting new combat planes from various countries." He did not specify the types of aircraft.

Defense Ministry spokeswoman Capt. Rosa Fases said the facility, only 13 miles northeast of Managua, would be capable of handling "all types of planes." She said work on the airport began two years ago, and its existence was being revealed to avoid a situation "such as happened in Grenada."

The Reagan administration has accused the leftist-Sandinista government of building such an installation. Reporters who accompanied Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger on a Central American tour in September were given copies of a Defense Department briefing report that said the airstrip being built at Punta Huete airport "can accommodate any aircraft in the Soviet inventory."

The administration made the same accusation about a large airport being built on the Caribbean island of Grenada, which the leftist government there said was designed to handle large jettliners carrying tourists. Last October, the United States led an invasion of Grenada that installed a new interim government.

Venerio said the Sandinistas were building the airport because they have "the right to defend the country."

The United States supports Nicaragua rebels, based in Honduras and Costa Rica, who are trying to overthrow the Sandinista government.

Nicaragua's transport minister, Carlos Zarruc, told the touring journalists the airport would have a main runway of 4,000 yards and another of about 3,550 yards. Construction Minister Mauricio Valenzuela said the facility could be ready for use by the end of 1985.

Zarruc said the air port was conceived in 1975, under the government of pro-American President Anastasio Somoza, whom the Sandinistas overthrew in July 1979. He said it was designed by a U.S. firm.

Valenzuela said no Soviet technicians or laborers were working on the project, which had cost $30 million so far.

Honduran president asks leaders to quit

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — President Roberto Suazo Cordova asked all 13 members of his Cabinet and other top government officials to resign Thursday, a spokesman for the president said.

The request came at a time of growing dissension in the president's Liberal Party, but a party spokesman said Suazo Cordova had the backing of the party.

A presidential spokesman, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said Suazo Cordova would issue a communique later explaining the move, which the spokesman called "an event without precedent in the history of Honduras." Suazo Cordova immediately accepted the resignations of Col. Amilcar Castillo Suazo as defense minister, Oscar Mejia Arias as government and justice minister and Ruben Garguier as public health minister, the presidential spokesman said.

Liberal Party chairman Romualdo Bueso Penabaz confirmed Suazo Cordova had asked his government to resign, and said the president had the "unconditional support" of the party.

Among those asked to resign were about 20 directors and heads of government agencies.

Suazo Cordova, a medical doctor, was sworn in Jan. 27, 1982, ending 17 years of almost uninterrupted military rule in Honduras. The next presidential election is in November 1985.

Oil rig fire causes deaths

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A lifeboat evacuating oil workers from a fire on Brazil's biggest offshore rig overturned in heavy seas Thursday and at least 30 workers drowned in the pre-dawn darkness, the state oil company Petrobras said.

Late in the day Petrobras announced the fire was out of control and expected to blast for days. It said the rest of the oil and gas wells in the Enchova field, 63 miles off shore and 130 miles east of Rio, were sealed off to avoid ecological damage and risk of a further gas blowout.

The Journal de Brasil radio station said some workers jumped into the sea from atop the 120 foot-high rig trying to escape the flames.

Tanker escapes planes

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The state-owned Pakistani oil tanker Johar escaped unscathed a rocket attack by unidentified warplanes in the Persian Gulf, the ship's agents reported Thursday.

The 821-ton Johar was en route to Saudi Arabia's oil loading terminal at Ras Tanura at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday when warplanes fired two rockets that exploded in the water off the stern, according to a spokesman for Barber Lines Ltd. in Dammam, in eastern Saudi Arabia.

Iraq and Iran now have been at war for nearly four years.

War communiques issued Thursday by Iran and Iraq made no mention of such an attack.

Extra UNESCO funds cited

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A UNESCO official said Thursday that the agency will return to member states all surplus funds and interest built up in a currency fluctuation account, and the United States will get its share even if it is not a member when the distribution is made in 1985.

Doudou Diene, the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization representative in New York, told a news conference that reports of a dispute over the funds are "a distortion of fact."

'Unnatural marriage' serves Libya, Morocco

Friday, August 17, 1984 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho A-9

By BRENDAN MURPHY
The Associated Press

PARIS — The treaty of union signed this week by Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy and King Hassan II of Morocco may be, as some are calling it, "an unnatural marriage."

But diplomatic analysts say it serves the political and security aims of both countries.

What is not yet clear is how the treaty will affect relations between Morocco and the United States, which has no diplomatic relations with Libya but provides about $30 million a year in military aid to Morocco.

American officials expressed surprise at news of the pact between Morocco, a traditional monarchy in financial trouble, with Libya, an oil-rich revolutionary people's republic 700 miles away. The officials reserved comment until the pact's meaning could be clarified in talks with Morocco.

But a U.S. source said American concern will depend on whether the treaty assumes any practical significance.

"We'd be upset if some of the military equipment we have sent to Morocco gets transferred to Libya," said the source, who spoke on condition his name be withheld. "But if they want to exchange oranges and lemons, who cares?"

In Washington, State Department spokesman John Hughes said "the Libyan record for international mischief-making stands for all to see."

Jury decision may be costly

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The decision of a federal jury in favor of 71 investors who claimed Home Savings & Loan officials conspired with AFCO Enterprises to defraud them could cost the bank $12 million.

The six-man, six-woman U.S. District Court panel reached its verdict late Tuesday following nearly four days of deliberations. In effect, the jury allowed the investors out of their second mortgages with Home Savings.

Denver U.S. District Court Judge John Kane, who presided over the six-week trial, also has the option of assessing damages. The 71 investors represented 36 separate cases, each with more than two dozen claimants. They alleged Home Savings representatives knowingly aided AFCO executive Grant Affleck in bilking them in a pyramid investment scheme.

In all, authorities claim AFCO defrauded investors both in Utah and other states of $20 million. Home Savings President Fred Smolka said Wednesday he could not comment on the outcome of the trial, since Kane was still deliberating on the question of general damages. However, Home Savings is expected to appeal the verdict.

In addition to relinquishing all parties of loan repayment obligations, the jury also awarded punitive damages to four plaintiffs — two receiving $500 each, and the other two, $2,000 each. Affleck goes on trial later this month on 22 counts of fraud in connection with his AFCO dealings. The company folded in 1982.

Railroad's rights affirmed

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Union Pacific Railroad's ownership of mineral rights along 55,000 acres of land in northeastern Utah has been upheld by a federal judge.

U.S. District Judge Bruce Jenkins ruled Wednesday that the railroad retained oil and gas rights to the acreage in the Overthrust Belt, though the property was sold decades ago.

Anschutz Land & Livestock Co., Antelope Co., Moench Investment Co. Ltd. and Howells Livestock Inc. had brought suit seeking the mineral rights.

Jenkins decision favoring Union Pacific followed in the steps of a similar decision won by the railroad in Wyoming and upheld by the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals.

The property the plaintiffs sought right to was originally land grant acreage deeded to the railroad when the transcontinental line was built.

Surface rights to the land were sold around the turn of the century, but Union Pacific retained mineral rights.

Topham advances with UP&L

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah Power & Light Co. directors have elected Verli Topham senior vice president, chief financial officer and commercial manager.

Topham, 49, succeeds James C. Taylor as head of the utility's commercial department, which handles customer operations for UP&L. The appointment is effective Sept. 1.

Taylor, meanwhile, becomes UP&L's chief executive officer Feb. 1.

Housing starts slide in July

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing starts declined a sharp 6.6 percent in July, leading one analyst to predict an impending recession in the housing industry, but the rest of the economy zoomed along as industrial output hit its highest level in more than four years.

The Commerce Department said Thursday that new housing was started at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.76 million units in July, with the construction level for single-family homes falling to its lowest point since December 1982.

The decline was blamed on high mortgage interest rates, which have been going up for five months. While some in the housing industry predicted hopefully that rates have peaked, others were more pessimistic.

"We are clearly headed for a recession in housing," said Michael Sunburch, chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders. He predicted the annual rate of starts would drop to 1.5 million units or lower by the end of the year. Some 1.7 million units were built in 1983.

Sunburch said his association's monthly survey of builders showed that the number expressing good to excellent prospects for future single-family sales fell to 8 percent in August. It had been 53 percent as recently as March.

Rates on conventional fixed mortgages have risen for the past five months, hitting 15.2 percent in July, according to a survey by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. During the same period, the rate of housing construction has fallen 22 percent from a high point of 2.5 million units reached in February.

But in recent days there have been indications that mortgage rates could

Strong bond market helps Wall Street rally

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rallied in a powerful early-August rally. A strong bond market helped Wall Street rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 Industrials, down 15.13 Wednesday, recovered 10.16 points to 1,209.14.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange reached 99.01 million shares, against 91.88 million Wednesday.

Rates fell in the bond market as traders bid prices of long-term government bonds up about $10 for every $1,000 in face value.

In addition, analysts said stocks seemed to attract some buying from investors who had been waiting for a pullback after the market's

Workers find proposal hard to swallow

MILWAUKEE — For almost 100 years, brewery workers have enjoyed cold beer instead of coffee when they take a break.

Now they're finding it hard to swallow plans by some companies to end the tradition.

The beer-break has become an item on the bargaining table with union workers and breweries nationwide, said Charles Klare, secretary of the Brewery-Workers Conference of the Teamsters union.

The Miller Brewing Co. recently offered three free cases of beer a month to its machinists instead of the traditional free beer during lunch and breaks in a new contract.

"We're recognizing that drinking on the job, especially around high speed equipment, is probably not the smartest thing to do," said Cliff Ames, Miller's manager of manufacturing relations.

However, he said the proposal was "not a response" to a problem-adding that the brewery's safety record was good.

The Milwaukee Brewery Workers Union finds the proposed ban on beer breaks unpalatable, even though the machinists agreed to trade the breaks for take-home cases of brew.

The brewery union rejected a similar offer this year in new contracts with Miller and the Pabst Brewing Co., according to union president George Hilbert. "The amount was reasonable, but the union dislikes the company taking away any privilege," he said.

The construction decline was felt in all parts of the country. Housing starts were down the sharpest in the Northeast, where they fell 20.7 percent, followed by the Midwest, where new starts fell 19.5 percent. In the South, building was down 4.1 percent while the West recorded a 2.2 percent drop. The July decline was the sharpest since an 11 percent drop in May. Housing starts had recovered somewhat in June, posting a 5.1 percent increase.

Agency to probe railroad

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Railroad Administration announced Thursday that it will make a special safety audit of the Burlington Northern Railroad, which has had three fatal train accidents since April. The latest Burlington accident was June 14 when two coal trains collided head-on near Moley, Minn., killing two crewmen. Two other accidents in April occurred in Wyoming and Colorado. Procedures and practices are second to none. Two weeks ago, a similar safety probe of the Amtrak system was announced after a series of accidents also killed 11 people. The investigation will examine a wide range of Burlington's operations, including maintenance operations, and scheduling of personnel. Burlington spokesman Jack Martin said "Burlington welcomes this announcement and we plan to cooperate to the fullest. We believe our safety procedures and practices are second to none."

"The 11 fatalities on a single carrier in a single year raise legitimate questions," said FRA administrator John H. Riley. Despite loss at poll, city plans will rebound

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The defeat of two Twin Falls City Council-backed propositions at Tuesday's special election leaves an open question: What's next from city government?

In coming weeks the council will try to pick up the pieces and re-chart a course on both a city pool and consolidation of the Police and Fire Departments.

It will do so in a changed political landscape illuminated by an overwhelming vote disapproving of most steps taken on town matters since the first of the year.

Chances are city residents will see a new pool proposal before the end of the year. They also may see an attempt to retain certain aspects of the consolidation plan, despite a 62 percent vote in favor of banning it.

Reactions varied among city officials as to why their policies received such a black eye at the polls.

Only the most optimistic had believed the nearly $2 million bond for a joint city-Twin Falls School District pool stood a chance of passing.

But the overwhelming support of the firefighter-sponsored anti-consolidation initiative took many by surprise, and most attributed it at least partly to a crossover of anti-council feeling among those who registered late to oppose the pool.

City Councilman Gale Kleinkopf mourned the passing of the joint city-Twin Falls School District pool as "an idea that was ahead of its time."

People had "failed to gain an appreciation" it was the most attractive recreational facility proposed in the state this year, he said.

But Mayor Emery Petersen said he had received one message loud and clear from the two-thirds vote against the plan: People don't want to be taxed anymore. And Councilman John Peterson said the vote showed the plan was too grand for a town where competitive swimming has little value.

Pam Shropshire of Idaho Neighbors Network, a citizens action group, said the city ensured defeat of the total $2.7 million plan by joining with the school district.

People did not trust the partnership, no matter how much money backers said it was supposed to save, she said: They want a pool, but they want the city to build it and operate it at Harmon Park, she said.

On the firefighter issue, Kleinkopf had defeat to traditionalism, and Idahoans' reluctance to accept new ideas. To this, City Manager Tom Courtney added that the lack of a public hearing early on may have led to a backlash of resentment.

One firefighter, Bill Hancey, said people remembered the firefighters knocking on their doors when they were collecting signatures for the measure earlier this year.

The firefighters had a chance then to personally explain what they thought was at issue, leaving an impression that endured, he said.

City officials believe they should try to take the results of the two votes positively, no matter how strong a rebuff they appear to be.

There will be an attempt to get a new pool plan on its feet before the end of the year most interviewed believe.

Shropshire says INN would like to work with the council in designing a new facility as similar to the old Harmon pool as possible, and suggests community donations should be sought instead of a bond issue.

Kleinkopf says the time may be right for mass-mailing a questionnaire to registered voters to find out what they do want in the way of a new pool; residents supported a $500,000 bond last November.

Petersen suggests this effort might be broadened to ask what people want from city government in general.

Hansen greets backers

McClure laid back

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — George Hansen was everywhere. The big, friendly congressman moved from table to table among the 150 Republicans, clasping proffered palms with his right hand and carrying a roll of "Hansen" stickers in his left.

It was a "Meet the Candidates" picnic for the Twin Falls Republicans at Rock Creek Park Thursday night. Hansen was meeting everybody in the park with a friendly greeting, a slap on the back and one of his stickers liberally applied to shirts.

His tie was loose and his shirt unbuttoned.

In the friendly atmosphere of what almost seemed like a backyard barbecue, Hansen was looking for friends — and votes — among his fellow Republicans.

Sen. Jim McClure was less active. He is one of the most popular politicians in Idaho's history, and he has a campaign war chest that smolders his opponent's. McClure didn't seem compelled to gather votes on this occasion.

As the state's senior senator, he shook hands in the diner line, got his hamburger and sat and ate. He seemed comfortable in his cowboy boots, Levi jeans and short-sleeved shirt.

Hansen reception wasn't all friendly. One man rejected Hansen's face the offer of a campaign sticker.

But it was hardly a night of rejection. Most of the men and women wore his sticker. One man moved to the much taller congressman and slapped him on the back. "Keep it up, George," he said.

Hansen was a candidate for the problems of his conviction for violating the Ethics in Government Act and filing improper financial statements were behind him in this campaign.

He admitted that some people would not vote for him because of it, but he thought his "hard-core" supporters would remain behind him and keep him in office another two years.

Paul Stukenholtz made his opinion quite clear.

"One thing about Idahoans, they think for themselves. They don't get involved in any emotional outbursts," he said.

He said his lot has improved with the disclosure of improper financial filings by Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro — a disclosure Hansen fought to bring out.

"After we got Geraldine in the trap, things have smoothed out enormously," Hansen said.

Even some of Hansen's detractors said the Ferraro flap will help Hansen. "I think it's going to be a closer race than anybody envisioned," said one — a recent graduate of law school, who didn't want his name used. He attributed the closeness to the Ferraro disclosures.

Many expressed their support for Hansen. "I'll stick with George as long as we get guys like him. We need more of them in government," said a Hollister man, who also requested anonymity. Hansen's legal problems were contrived, he believed.

Church heads fight drinking

Buhl park proposal under fire

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — A group of community church leaders is righteously riled up over the Buhl City Council's proposal to legalize beer and wine drinking at the city's parks and baseball fields.

Several ministers from the West End Ministerial Association, a bishop from the local Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints and their supporters told the council at a meeting this week that allowing alcoholic beverages in the recreational areas would hurt the community.

The religious leaders presented the council with 533 signatures on a petition opposing the proposed ordinance that would permit only beer and wine at all city parks and baseball fields except the North Park ballfield.

The ordinance to allow alcoholic beverages, but prohibit glass containers was proposed by Councilman Jack Pietras last month.

On the other side of the issue, representatives from the Buhl Women's and Men's Softball League gave the council a petition with approximately 150 signatures favoring the proposal.

Caught in the middle of temperance or-tipping, the council voted for a first reading of the proposed ordinance but delayed its final decision until next month's council meeting.

The Rev. Benson Kurn of the First Baptist Church of Buhl told the council that there are already enough places for people to drink liquor so it does not also have to be permitted in recreational spots where there are family activities.

Although not everyone who drinks liquor gets drunk, "we know that it can lead to abuse," he said, and there is the potential for what it can do to a community's standards and moral values.

If alcohol is allowed in the park, Kern said, "I would be afraid to send my children to the pool at Eastman Park any longer."

And since the petition opposing an ordinance contains signatures from almost as many people as those that vote in a local election, "that represents a pretty strong voice from this community," Kern said. "I think this represents the heart of Buhl."

However, one woman from the Buhl softball league said the ordinance should be passed so that people who want to drink beer and wine can do so legally and those that don't want to

Lost camera saga ends unbelievably

KIMBERLY — Buhl fish farmer Leo Ray has his $300 Pentax camera back this week, thanks to the diligence and honesty of Valeria Nelson of The Dalles, Ore.

Two Sundays ago Ray's son was driving south of Kimberly, when he opened the door of his car and accidentally kicked the expensive camera out.

When Ray discovered the camera missing the following Thursday, he thought he would never see it again.

But the following Sunday he got a call from a total stranger.

Nelson, 32, who had been visiting her parents south of Kimberly and had since returned to Oregon, had found the camera by the side of the road as she and her husband were returning from Nat-Soo-Pah hot springs.

Charged at every turn, Ray finally decided to have the film in the camera developed — "to see if it contained a clue," Kinsey says.

"Lo and behold," when the prints returned, in the background of one was a pickup with its license plate showing, Kinsey says.

Nelson then traced the camera to Ray through county vehicle registration files.

"Most people would just say, 'hey, I got me a camera,'" says Ray, who offered Nelson a reward. "That gal has to be the most honest person in the world."

"A lot of people tried to talk her into keeping it," Kinsey says. "But she really wouldn't rest until she had made every effort."

Speaker: keep parks 'American'

By JAVENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — American culture is generated from a living relationship with the land and we must maintain the "homeland" concept, said an Alaskan parks representative Thursday at the Parks in the West and American Culture conference being held this week in Sun Valley.

William E. Brown, regional director for the Alaska Regional Office, told an overflow crowd that "homeland" is essential to human well-being.

He said the living tie to the land is what has given us strong family kinship, spiritual concepts, courage and resourcefulness.

Brown described his work with north-slope Alaskan Eskimos as an example of the importance of maintaining a sense of homeland.

"Without it, we have nothing to pass on to posterity; it is the source of our cultural values."

He said the large American urban population has little or no connection or interaction with the nation's fragile landscapes that were our homelands just a generation or two ago.

"We can not all go back and live on the land, but we must all have a living relationship with it," he said, describing the nation's parks and reserved lands as the way to achieve an "adopted cultural landscape, a symbol of the homeland we cannot actually possess."

Parks are a place of rest and rejuvenation, of democracy and revival of spiritual values, a means to preserve the past and nurture our cultural roots, he said.

He said, however, there is a dilemma about how to maintain the "classic and sacred landscapes and revive a homeland concept compatible with the real world. But compared to the rest of the world, we are still in Eden if we get ourselves together."

Brown advocates an "alliance of constituency" approach to parks management — where all concerned parties operate a park or group of parks with "consensual management techniques."

He said parks are no longer immune and cannot be operated as islands. "Let individual geographic areas be self-supporting, self-directing and self-preserving," he said.

In responding to Brown's remarks,

Washington State University history professor Alfred Runte said the park idea and experience is meaningless unless it is available to everyone.

"What are we willing to give up to protect our American parks?" he asked.

Runte, author of "National Parks: The American Experience," said the park idea must be extended to all American attitudes and landscapes.

"Visitors should take the park ethic home with them to their own yards and city streets," he said.

Mary Duncan, professor of recreation at San Diego State University, took the homeland concept a step further and said people worldwide need "parks, open space, green grass, a place for recreation and rejuvenation."

But Duncan, a city dweller, said she does not have the time, the money or even the desire to "go camping" or use wild reserved land "and I probably represent a majority of the urban population."

She said that development and protection of urban parks and green belts is also important in reviving a homeland concept and a way to maintain the important tie to the land for the nation.

Officer spares man's life in life-threatening standoff

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — A Shoshone police officer is being credited with sparing the life of a man who allegedly held a rifle and threatened to kill him Wednesday night.

Shoshone Deputy Police Chief Dean Larsen was credited by Lincoln County Prosecutor Doug Rose with acting calmly and not using his weapon while facing a loaded rifle reportedly held by John Stewart Morrison. Police allege the stand-off between the two men occurred at the end of a 45-minute shooting incident inside the city limits.

Morrison, 33, is in jail on charges of aggravated assault against Morrison, following the incident at his home on East A Street, Rose says. There were no injuries in the incident.

Rose says Larsen and Morrison faced each other in a two-minute, gun-loaded stand-off after police were called to investigate the report of a shooting inside the city limits.

Rose says Larsen could have easily killed Morrison, but realized he could talk the man out of the threat without having to use his own weapon.

"I think the officer did a very good job in understanding the situation," Rose says.

Shoshone Police and Lincoln County Sheriff deputies responded to a call that shots were being fired inside the city limits at about 10 p.m. Wednesday.

When they arrived, Morrison was outside his house and, according to reports, fired two shots into the air. He then went into the house.

Police could see him walking around inside, but did not rush the house or fire into it, because they did not know if anyone else was inside, Rose says.

Morrison came back outside and he and Larsen faced off with their guns pointed at each other, says Rose.

"It took him a while to decide to drop the weapon," Rose says of the two-minute stand-off.

Rose says he is investigating the possibility of other charges against Larsen, including firing a weapon in the city limits, a misdemeanor, and assault charges for possibly firing one shot at a car and person.

Morrison had an argument with one of the witnesses to the incident about one hour before the shooting occurred, Rose says, but added he is not sure what triggered the outburst of gunfire.

Morrison appeared Thursday in Magistrate Court and will be arraigned soon, Rose says.

County drops last drug charge against Garcia

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The last of drug charges filed last fall against 51-year-old Frank Garcia was dismissed this week.

And if the Twin Falls County Prosecutor's office refutes any of the allegations it would be harassing his client, says Garcia's lawyer, Frank Dykas.

Garcia, of 430 Elm St. in Twin Falls, was arrested Sept. 27 at a Twin Falls grocery store after being placed under surveillance by law enforcement officers. He was charged with intending to sell five grams of heroin and possessing one gram of cocaine and one ounce of marijuana. The marijuana charge subsequently was dropped.

Following a January preliminary hearing, Magistrate Judge Charles Brumbach dismissed the cocaine charge. Former Prosecutor Harry Deffann, however, refilled the cocaine allegation in May.

After a Monday hearing, a district judge dismissed the heroin charge because the prosecutor's office failed to set a trial date within the required six-month period. Contrary to another Dykas request, the judge did allow the prosecutor's office to pursue the refilled cocaine charge. At a Wednesday hearing, Dykas asked Brumbach to dismiss that one.

"The prosecutor's office had no new evidence to offer," Dykas said.

Officer Merrill Kelly, who reportedly had taken the cocaine from Garcia, couldn't positively identify it at the preliminary hearing as the drug he seized from Garcia, Dykas said.

Dykas added that the same officers that participated in Garcia's arrest seized drugs from another man later that day.

"I'm not at all convinced he couldn't have found this from someone else."

Brumbach agreed this was a weak link in the required chain of evidence the prosecution had to establish. Kelly had testified that the package only "appeared" to be the same one he had taken from Garcia.

"That's not enough to put a man behind bars," the judge said.

"I think we do have new evidence," argued

Dennis Voorhees, the Twin Falls County deputy prosecutor.

If allowed, the officer's "rehabilitated" testimony would introduce a time factor and other elements that would provide the required identification of the evidence, Voorhees said.

Brumbach replied, "It really does appear it's all the same evidence."

Dykas said the only other way the prosecution could proceed was if they proved Brumbach had erred in preliminary hearing. He felt there was no error.

Voorhees said Brumbach had erred by disallowing the submission of the cocaine evidence at the hearing.

"I suggest another magistrate would allow that cocaine in that you did not allow it," Voorhees said. "We made a case and it should have gone, but it didn't."

Brumbach said, "If you came back with something additional you might be able to sell me." He then dismissed the cocaine charge.

Following the hearing, Voorhees said he is researching the possibility of refiling the heroin charge.

Hazelton farmer arraigned on drug-dealing charge

JEROME — A Hazelton farmer who is accused of selling cocaine and heroin to a state Bureau of Narcotics agent was in the Jerome County Jail late Thursday on a $10,000 bond.

Ronald Eugene Budd, 38, was arraigned Thursday afternoon in U.S. District Magistrate Court in Jerome on three counts of delivery of controlled substance. The complaint alleges the deliveries occurred March 8 and July 2 in Jerome County.

Budd appeared for arraignment with his attorney, Jeff Stoker of Twin Falls, and requested a preliminary hearing.

The original bond of $50,000 on each of the three counts was reduced by Judge Roger Burdick to $6,000 per count after Stoker argued that the defendant voluntarily came to the sheriff's office and turned himself in and was not likely to leave the area.

Stoker said Budd contacted him Monday when he learned he was wanted on the drug charges.

"We have been over the territory and we discussed that, but he decided on his own to come in and face the situation," Stoker said.

Stoker put Budd on the witness stand to testify about his participation in his family's farming operation and the fact that one of his four children is suffering from leukemia. He said the children do not live with him, but with his former wives.

Burdick said the preliminary hearing will be set within 21 days, the legal requirement if the individual is not in jail. Stoker said he would waive the time requirements, although he said he was not certain if his client would be able to raise the $10,000.

Key buildings 'falling' at Jerome fairgrounds

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Booths in the various buildings of the Jerome County Fairgrounds were coming down Thursday afternoon at a much faster speed than they were carefully assembled on Monday.

Although displays and livestock are now gone from the fairgrounds, two major entertainment items in the annual Jerome County Fair and Rodeo are still on the week's agenda.

The Junior Rodeo opened Thursday night and continues at 8 p.m. today with queen coronations and miniature cowboys and cowgirls in competition.

The 4-year-old rodeo performers gave fans an exciting evening Thursday with their slick horse barrel racing and other small-scale rodeo contests.

The rodeo contests are reserved for children 4 to 13 years, who ride and rope with goats, sheep and ponies instead of broncs and bulls' eep and ponies.

Saturday night the tractor and pickup pulling contests will be held at 7 p.m., with entries from throughout the southern part of the state.

A highlight of the final night of the Professional Cowboy's Rodeo show Wednesday was the crowning of a new Jerome County Rodeo Queen.

Army Dunning, 19, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G.C. Dunning of Jerome, won the 1983 crown. First runner up was Stephanie Kahn, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Kahn of Twin Falls. In the junior princess contest for girls 15 and 16 years of age, Nichole Hymas, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Hymas of Jerome, was the winner with Tracy Stacy, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Stacy, named runner up.

The record numbers of 4-H and FFA entries in livestock and other divisions kept the county agent's staff at work late Thursday.

Results of the fat stock sale that continued from noon until after 5 p.m. Wednesday were still being tabulated, but officials said generally the merchants and businesses that supported the event were generous.

The top beef animal of the sale, the champion steer entered by Nathan Mills, was purchased by Burks Tractor Co., Inc., of Twin Falls.

The style review for 4-H sewing projects was held Thursday morning with trophies awarded in four divisions. The senior winner was Tracy Stacy, who modeled the woolen suit she made as one of her year's sewing projects.

In the intermediate division, Elaine Hosman, modeling her blue print dress, was judged champion, and Trisha Spencer, in a pants and vest outfit, won reserve honors.

Junior 1 winners were Karena Kohl, champion, modeling a pink floral print dress, and Brenda Waller, reserve champion, in a floral print skirt and summer shirt. Junior 2 division honors went to Danielle Humphries for her green corduroy skirt-as-class champion and Kerry ties halted Wiesmore's vehicle about one mile south of Kimberly and found allegedly butchering a sheep owned by state Sen. Laird Nor, R-Twin Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. William Kahn of Twin Falls. In the junior princess contest

Kevin Carl Wiesmore, 29, was arrested Oct. 8:13 p.m., said Harold Jensen, the Twin Falls County chief deputy sheriff.

The sheriff's office received a report that someone was hauling a dead deer from the South Hills area. Deputies hunted Wiesmore's vehicle about one mile south of Kimberly and found allegedly butchering a sheep owned by state Sen. Laird Nor, R-Twin Falls.

The sheep, which was owned by Noh, apparently had been taken from the South Hills area where a herd was grazing, Jensen said. The deputy valued the sheep at less than $100.

Wiesmore is charged with a misdemeanor. The sheriff was released on his own recognizance.

Girl survives farm mishap

BUHL — An 8-year-old Buhl girl escaped serious injury Tuesday evening when she fell from a tractor and was run over by one of the wheels.

Deputy Sheriff Gary Kaufman said Lucy Dry, the daughter of Kathy Dry of Route 4, Buhl, fell from a tractor operated by Mike Jones on the Jones farm three miles west of Deadman's Corner about 6:30 p.m. Tuesday.

She was taken to Magic Valley

Regional Medical Center by her mother and Mrs. Jones and released after examination and treatment of minor injuries.

Kaufman said Mrs. Dry and the girl were visiting the Jones farm and the little girl was riding on the fender of a small farm tractor Jones was operating while burning a ditchbank.

Jones said he looked away for a moment and when he looked back the child was gone.

Petersen says he does not favor any further bond issues. But Petersen says a smaller bond issue might pass.

He says this might be in the amount of $700,000, or whatever amount added to the $750,000 the council planned to spend on the $2.7 million bond, might ensure a new pool similar to the old one.

On consolidation, the future is equally murky. Firefighter union president Ron Clark says the ball is in the council's court to do whatever it deems "fit."

Courtesy says Idaho Code allows the council to do anything it wants in response to the direct adoption of the anti-consolidation measure, "even pass an ordinance voiding it."

He says he will not be making a recommendation, "because it is an issue between the citizens and their elected representatives."

Kleinkopf says it would be "foolish not to recognize what people want" to view the issue as "clear-cut."

But there are aspects of the plan the council may be reluctant to let go.

Kleinkopf says it may be wiser to wait and see how steps already taken look at the end of the year. And although Petersen says he believes the council will be responsive to the people, "it may want to leave Public Safety Director Tim Qualls in charge of both departments."

Petersen says policemen often arrive at fire first, and it is a good idea to give them the equipment and training they need to handle a fire situation.

Some have said the council may be contemplating political suicide by quietly ignoring the vote to hire a new fire chief and restore complete autonomy to the two departments.

But it is not unrealistic to speculate the council will retain most of what it has done so far and hope the issue will blow over.

Drinks

don't have to drink liquor.

"Jesus made wine, and by the way, I don't drink any wine that Jesus makes," said Pastor Tim Driskell of the Church of The Nazarene, but liquor degenerates a community.

"I think the evidence is clear that it's a thing that's not good for our society," he said. "LDS' keep back at least where we are."

Police Chief Les Cochran told the council that he too was personally opposed about the ordinance because of the type of people that might then be attracted to the parks.

When the present ordinance was enacted to bar liquor from the parks, "it was because of the element that congregated and took over a section of the park," he said.

Not that beer and ball playing don't mix, but "I'm for the ordinance as it stands now," the police chief said.

The proposed ordinance "has somewhat split the community," Mayor Jim Barker said. "But the council is merely in the talking stages."

On Aug. 27, the council will have a second reading of the proposed ordinance and on Sept. 10 it will vote on the matter, he said.

Floyd finishes strong for early PGA lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Ray Floyd rallied with a birdie-berle finish to a wildly erratic 4-under-par 68 that gave him the lead Thursday in the storm-delayed and uncompleted first round of the 66th PGA National Championship. Play was suspended for one hour, 40 minutes by a late-afternoon thunderstorm and eventually halted by darkness at 7:35 p.m., CDT, with 30 players stranded on the rain-soaked Shoal Creek Club course.

They marked their positions and are scheduled to complete first round play beginning at 8 a.m., CDT. The second round will begin as scheduled at 7 a.m. CDT. Lanny Wadkins, the 1977 PGA champion, was one of those stranded by darkness and had a shot at the lead. He was 4-under-par with one hole to play.

That ball is no friend of Lee Trevino's

David Graham was 2-under-par with two holes to play. Tom Watson, a 3-time winner this season and needing this title to become only the fifth man in history to complete a career sweep of golf's Big Four titles, was 1-over-par with one hole to go.

"I did the things that had to be done to score," said Floyd, who holed out from a bunker for eagle and chipped in from short rough for a birdie. He finished with seven birdies, the eagle-3, three bogeys, a double bogey and six pars.

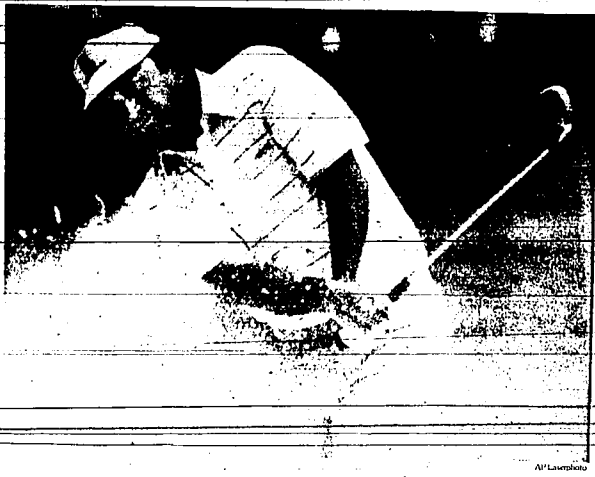

"I hit some very, very good golf shots and a few not so good," said Floyd, the 1976 Masters champion who has been in a slump since scoring his second PGA Championship in 1982.

Lee Trevino escaped without a bogey from what he called "the toughest rough I've ever seen," and led a group of eight early finishers at 69.

Also, at that figure were Nick Faldo of England, Chip Beck, Victor Regalado, Scott Simpson, Canadian Dave Barr, Andy Bean and Gary Hallberg.

The group at 70 included British Open champ Seve Ballesteros of Spain, Hubert Green, Bob Gilder, Jay Haas, Donnie Hammond, Leonard Thompson and Peter Jacobsen, a 2-time winner this season.

Some of the game's more illustrious names, however, had their difficulties with the wry Bermuda rough that the PGA said is 3-4 inches deep but which Trevino insisted was "6-8 inches deep. It's bad, the toughest I've ever seen."

This sand blast helped Ray Floyd fashion first-day lead in PGA championships

Defending champion Hal Sutton said the intimidation factor that rough, the knowledge that a player must hit it in the fairway to escape penalty, "makes you play conservative. You're always going to the 3-wood to try to keep it in the fairway, and you try to guide it and you hit it to the right."

He struggled to a 74 in the hot, muggy weather that preceded the storm. Tom Kite, a 2-time winner this season, also was at 74.

Greg Norman, the Australian who won two American titles and lost two more—including the U.S. Open—playoffs earlier this season, was one shot higher at 75.

And Jack Nicklaus, the legendary

Golden Bear who designed this course, did not make a birdie on his way to a fat 77 that seriously damaged any hopes he had for a record sixth PGA Championship.

"I'm very disappointed with the way I played on this course," said Nicklaus, who drove into the rough six times.

Masters champion Ben Crenshaw had an 80.

U.S. Open champion Fuzzy Zoeller never got started. He withdrew, hours before his scheduled tee time, suffering "severe pain" in a chronically bad back.

Floyd said a recent return to his old equipment—after an unproductive, 8-month try with lighter clubs—was a critical factor in his play.

"I've been playing pretty well for a couple of months, ever since I went back to the old equipment," said Floyd, who last season took the Vardon Trophy without winning a tournament.

"I've played well recently, but I'd gone so long playing so poorly that I wasn't used to playing well and I didn't get much out of it."

"This is the first good result I've had from the good play."

He dropped the 30-foot bunker shot from a difficult position—a "tremendous shot—one that you dream about," he said—for the eagle on the third hole.

In letter campaign

Public supports grizzlies

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — Letter writers from across the country are appealing to Yellowstone National Park officials not to destroy bears responsible for two recent maulings, one of them fatal.

Gary Brown, assistant superintendent and the park's bear management specialist, said Wednesday the letters have been "piling up" on his desk for the past four days.

A Swiss camper was killed at a campsite near White Lake on July 30 and a boy was mauled at a developed campsite at Grant Village Aug. 5.

Brown said the letter writers are concerned about the well-being of both the bears and visitors to the park, which is prime bear country.

"Most of them are against the destruction of the offending bears," he said.

The National Park Service destroys bears only as a last resort, only after relocation has failed. The decision is made on the circumstances of each bear, Brown said.

He said the letters, all of which would be answered, came from a "cross-section of the nation," mostly from outside the Rocky Mountain region.

He quoted from one: "Please record our opinion. It's not the bear who's the offender."

Another writer said: "Don't punish the bear for natural tendencies conflicting with people."

But Brown acknowledged that the park probably would never positively identify the bear that attacked and killed Britt Redenbagen, 25, of Basel, Switzerland, or another bear that bit Bryan Lynip, 12, on the arm 30 miles away six days later.

"We may someday have a bear in hand and try to match dentures. We have teeth prints on a cooking pot and may be able to match them with a bear sometime," Brown said. "But it's still all circumstantial evidence."

He said park officials now believe separate bears were involved in the attacks and both probably were grizzlies, because there's no evidence to suggest otherwise. But bear fur and prints at the two sites have provided no leads to help capture a particular bear, Brown said.

A 125-square-mile area around the White Lake campsite and six campsites in the area where Lynip was attacked in his tent remain closed, according to park spokeswoman Marji Sizing.

Rose figures managing may impede try for hit record

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose admits that his new career as player-manager of the Cincinnati Reds might derail his chase for Ty Cobb's all-time hits record.

Rose was introduced Thursday as the team's player-manager and said he will play sparingly. Reds executives said Wednesday that Rose is coming to the team primarily to manage.

"No, I can't get the record as a pinch-hitter," he said, referring to Cobb's mark of 4,191, which is 129 more hits than Rose currently has.

"Nick Essasy is the first baseman. But I can spell him on day-night schedules or during doubleheaders."

"But I'll say this: I'm going to put the strongest lineup on the field for every game," Rose said.

He'll begin making out the lineup card in place of the fired Vern Rapp on Friday night against the Chicago Cubs.

"I expect two things," Rose told a news conference on the field of Riverfront Stadium. "They have to be on time. That's for practice, buses or planes. And second, I want them to play as hard as they can between the white lines."

Rose, 43, said he and club President Howsam want to revive the slumping Reds, who have finished last the past two seasons—in the National League West.

"Mr. Howsam and I want to make baseball fun again. We want to start winning again. That got lost here in the last few years and I don't understand it," Rose said.

He was asked if his hiring was more of a publicity stunt to increase attendance at home games.

"Well, if it is, it was a damn good one," Rose replied. "But there's a lot more involved in this than that, and if it was just a publicity stunt, why would Mr. Howsam have waited so long?"

The former Cincinnati All-Star now in his 22nd year in the major leagues, becomes the first playing manager in the major leagues since Don Kessinger with the Chicago White Sox in 1979 and the first in Cincinnati since Bucky Walters in 1948.

Ironically, Cobb was player-manager of the Tigers from 1921-1926, compiling a 479-444 record.

Rose said he would have a different relationship with his players than most managers "because I'm going to be one of them: I don't want anyone afraid to talk to me or sit down and eat with me. I want them to have respect for me as a player as well as a manager."

He drew laughs when he quipped, "I'm just like everybody else. I have two arms, two legs and 4,000 hits."

Pete Rose is back in familiar uniform

Rose, nicknamed "Charlie Hustle" as a player because of his hustling style of play, promised that he will be an aggressive manager, using a lot of hit-and-run plays and base-stealing.

"I don't want to sit back and wait for three-run home runs. They are too few—and far between. I want the players to have fun," he said.

Rose, a Cincinnati native, is popular with Reds fans, and news of his return to the city prompted increased ticket sales Thursday in the Cincinnati area. Thursday's news conference attracted reporters and television crews from across the Midwest.

Prompting the Reds to move the news conference to the ballfield to accommodate the crowd.

Rose was captain of the Reds' "Big Red Machine" teams of the 1970s until he left the club as a free agent in 1978. He played five years with the Philadelphia Phillies and helped the team win two pennants. He was hired by the Montreal Expos in January as a free agent and was playing with the Expos when he was hired by the Reds this week to replace Rapp.

Second baseman Tom Lawless, who was with the Reds earlier this season before being sent down to the club's minor-league system, was sent to Montreal on Thursday in return for Montreal's agreement to trade Rose's rights to Cincinnati.

The Reds must drop someone from their roster to make room for Rose. Howsam said a change in the roster to accommodate Rose will be announced before Rose's inaugural game.

Rose said he planned no immediate changes with his assistant coaches. He said he would rely heavily on coach George Scherger.

"Sparky Anderson relied on 'Scherger' a lot when he was here, and I think he'll be calling the shots the days I'm playing," Rose said.

Anderson, now manager of the Detroit Tigers, is a former Reds manager for whom Rose played.

Rose said he is very familiar with the coach's players, thanks to Montreal coach Russ Nixon, who managed the Reds until he was dumped in October 1983 to be replaced with Rapp.

Rapp, who was a coach for Montreal when he became Howsam's hand-picked manager in Cincinnati, was fired Wednesday night in St. Louis. The Reds informed him of the firing shortly before the team beat the Cardinals 3-2.

Rose said he has a talent for putting young players at ease that goes back to his days as rookie of the year in 1963.

"When I came up, we had a very clichéish team. My only friends were black. Vada Pinson and Frank Robinson. In fact, I was even called into the office and told not to keep hanging around with them, but I said, 'Who am I going to hang around with?'"

Rose said he decided then that no other young players on teams he was connected with would be stigmatized.

Suspensions, fines flow in wake of Brave-Padre melee

NEW YORK (AP) — San Diego Padres manager Dick Williams has been suspended for 10 days while Atlanta Braves Manager Joe Torre was suspended for three days following brawl in last Sunday's game between the teams, National League President Charles Feeney announced Thursday.

Also suspended for three days were San Diego players Champ Summers and Bobby Brown, along with Atlanta players Gerald Perry, Steve Bedrosian and Rick Mahler.

The suspensions take effect Friday, a spokesman for the NL said.

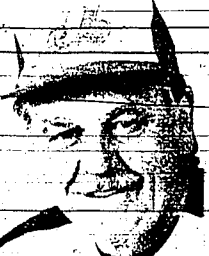

Padres President Ballard Smith said Thursday that the team would appeal the suspensions of Williams and Brown, which would mean the disciplinary action would not go into effect until the appeals had been heard by Feeney.

"We're not going to appeal," Torre said after learning of the league's rulings.

Williams said he was fined $10,000, while the Braves said Torre was fined $1,000.

All of the suspended players were also fined, as were San Diego players Ed Whitted, Greg Booker, Craig Edlert, Kurt Bevacqua, Tim Lincecum, Craig Nettles and Rich Gossage, and Padres coaches Ozzie Virgil and Jack Krol.

The Braves announced that Perry and Mahler were fined $700 apiece and Bedrosian $500. Pitcher Donnie Moore was fined $350 and hurler Pascual Perez $300.

DICK WILLIAMS
Drags 10-day vacation

The amount of the San Diego players' fines was not given.

Williams' suspension is the longest for a major-league manager since Dave Bristol of San Francisco was set down for 11 days in 1978 for swinging his cap at an umpire.

Pittsburgh third baseman Bill Madlock received a 15-day suspension in 1980 for putting his glove in the face of an umpire. That was the longest suspension for a player ever for an on-field incident.

The San Diego at Atlanta game was marred by bench-clearing incidents. In the second, eighth and ninth innings, in all, 13 people were ejected by the umpires.

The fights also involved several fans, who spilled onto the field to join the fray and were led off in handcuffs by police. The game ended with the benches cleared by order of the umpires and policemen on top of the dugouts.

Williams was disciplined "since as the field manager, he is held responsible for the continuing incidents involving his players—that led to serious altercations on the field," Feeney's statement said.

"I'm not in shock now. I'm more confused," Williams said. "I thought Jack (Padres general manager Jack) was kidding when he read that to me. I said, 'G'mon, tell me the truth.' It's about three times longer than I figured."

Williams said he planned to talk with Feeney at 2 p.m. EDT Friday.

"This will be the first time I'll be stalling my side of the story," Williams said. "He'll get my story first-hand."

Smith said, "I've had a conversation with Chub (Feeney). We feel that under the circumstances, it's appropriate for Dick to be suspended."

"The thing that bothered me is the length of the suspension in relation to Joe Torre's."

Torre was suspended and fined because he was held responsible for the ninth-inning fight "in which pre-manager" was ejected.

The manager is responsible for his players," Torre said.

Moscow games begin today despite secret entry list.

MOSCOW (AP) — Central Lenin Stadium was awash with color and placards Thursday as thousands of athletes from Soviet sports clubs rehearsed for the grand opening of the Friendship-84 Games, featuring a reported 49 nations including the 14 that boycotted the Los Angeles Olympics.

Most of the sportsmen were kept out of reach of the Western press as they practiced for the opening track and field events Friday.

They were being housed at the 3,000-room Rossiya Hotel near the Kremlin, but door guards refused to allow entrance to anyone without a special pass.

Twenty-four hours before the scheduled opening of the games, Soviet sports officials still had not issued a list of participants.

But Soviet track and field coach Igor Ter-Ovanesyan said in a brief performance from his team which he said would include pole vaulter, Sergei Bubka, the world record holder, and star hammer thrower Yuri Sedykh.

The opening ceremonies, complete with a flaming torch run by 400-meter 1980 olympic gold medalist Viktor Markin, will not take place until 4 p.m. local time Saturday, 30 hours after the start of competition Friday morning. The first scheduled event is the 20-kilometer walk.

A view of the 1-hour 45-minute dress rehearsal for the opening ceremony in the stadium's grand arena showed that the host country will be featured almost exclusively, despite the fact that most of Eastern Europe will be represented.

Several other Soviet allies with a proven sporting record, including Ethiopia and Cuba, also are coming, and nine Western nations have indicated they will send athletes, according to the Soviet news agency Tass.

Athletes and spectators will hear Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko repeat what he said at the June plenum of the Communist Party Central Committee: that physical culture is important to the country, and that the Soviet people are grateful to their government and party for helping develop it.

They will hear the Kremlin chimes, a 1918 military march song devoted to the Red Army and the song "Stadium of My Dreams," written for the 1980 Moscow Olympics, which were boycotted by the United States and other Western countries.

The huge crowds expected at the ceremony will see "thousands" of sweat-soaked members of sports clubs such as Dynamo, Labor Reserves, Harvest and the Central Army Sports Club, parade with flags of their clubs and the 15 Soviet republics.

Throughout the 103,000-seat stands, placards of red or light blue with white lettering in Russian will show the words: "Sports and labor go together" and "Physical culture and sport in the service of the five-year plan."

There will also be placards in Russian, French, German, and English, reading: "Sports is the ambassador of peace," and the theme of the Friendship-84 Games, "Sports, Friendship, Peace."

Men, women and children will put on special displays of gymnastics, calisthenics and dancing.

The finale will include the release of dozens of doves and balloons inside the stadium in a repeat of similar scenes at Los Angeles.

Ter-Ovanesyan, the chief Soviet track and field coach, said in an interview with The Associated Press that he believed several world records could fall.

"During preparations for the Olympics heats, we beat more than 10 — I guess 13 or 14 world records," he said. "So I think most of our boys now are in very good shape and ready to compete on a very good level."

Asked if the absence of the leading Western track and field nations would have any psychological effect on performances, Ter-Ovanesyan said: "There are several different (type) of persons. One is a real fighter who performs at his best against other top athletes. Others just enjoy the competition."

Asked to comment on the Soviet boycott of Los Angeles, Ter-Ovanesyan replied: "We were not very glad not to compete there, but you know the political situation and all that happened.... It was not our fault and I hope the situation will change for the better and we will meet in the next Olympics."

Societysport, the magazine's sports daily newspaper, on Thursday quoted 1980 Olympics 10,000-meter champion Mirus Yifter of Ethiopia as saying: "I am sure that Friendship-84 competitions will show much greater objectivity who is who in world athletics."

Local pro stock and hobby stock competition also is slated during the program, which will begin at 7 p.m.

Gunslingers' coach hands job to aide

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — San Antonio Gunslingers Coach Gil Steinko, who led the team to a 7-11 season in its inaugural year in the U.S. Football League, stepped down Thursday and defensive coordinator Jim Bates was named as his replacement.

Steinko, 65, the oldest coach in pro football, said he had burned out on coaching years ago and didn't want to tackle another season.

Gunslinger officials appointed him director of football operations, which will include scouting, player signings and other tasks.

Bates, 37, has coached at Villanova, Kansas State, West Virginia and Texas Tech. He was defensive coordinator at Tech when he joined the Gunslingers last year.

The Bates-led defense led the USFL in shutouts and pass interceptions in the 1984 season.

Bates said he planned to retain the current coaching staff for the time being, but will be looking for an offensive line coach and a defensive coordinator.

Steinko coached 23 years at Texas A&M in Kingsville, Texas, and finished with a 182-61-4 record and six NAA national championships.

He was athletic director at the school for the next six years before he retired. Last year, his longtime friend Clinton Manges, owner of the Gunslingers, talked him into coaching the team's kickoff year.

"When I started he knew and I knew I didn't want to do it very long," Steinko said.

"Mr. Manges wanted me to coach another year, but I'd had it. Coaching is a hard thing," he said.

Steinko began his coaching career in San Antonio at Trinity University. He also coached at Oklahoma State and Texas A&M and played five seasons for the Philadelphia Eagles.

Steinko said the ball club is in "excellent hands" with Bates.

"The Gunslingers will have a tremendous amount of leadership from Jim and his staff," Steinko said.

Steinko received the 1984 National Coach of the Year award from the American Football Coaches Association and Gunslingers President M.W. "Bud" Hahn said no one else was interviewed for the job.

"Jim is an extremely competent coach with a great deal of enthusiasm. He did an outstanding job this past year, and we're confident he will continue the same excellence in his new role," Steinko said.

Yankee's Guidry on disabled list

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees placed left-hander Ron Guidry on the 15-day disabled list with inflamed rib cartilage Thursday and recalled right-hander John Montefusco from their Columbus Class AAA affiliate to fill Guidry's spot on the roster.

To make room for Guidry, who has a record with 24 starts and an average in 26 appearances, on the 15-day list, the American League club shifted pitcher Marty Bystrom to the 21-day disabled list.

Bystrom has been disabled since Aug. 1 with a tender right elbow.

Montefusco started the season on the Yankees' roster, but has been on the disabled list since April 25 after suffering a chest sprain in his third start of the season the day before. Less than a week later, he was involved in a traffic accident further complicating his injury.

Olympic future depends on reaction to professionalism

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Games of the XXIII Olympiad are history. Now it's on to XXIV in Seoul, And, after that, XXV perhaps in Paris or somewhere else.

Or is it?
From the highest Olympic echelon to the lowliest competitor, there have been rumblings of concern about the future of the Games. What's ahead — an enlightened new day or doom?
"If the Games still toward open professionalism instead of back to stricter eligibility standards, they are dead," predicted Julian Roosevelt, one of the two American members of the International Olympic Committee. "I think the trend is the other way."

Douglas Roby, 66, the senior U.S. member of the IOC with 32 years' tenure, said if the IOC failed to take measures to halt professionalism and commercialism "it will mean the end of the Games as we have known them."

They are at sharp odds with the ranking administrators of the U.S. Olympic Committee — president William Simon and executive director Col. E. Don Miller. Both leave office at the end of the year, both are strong proponents of an "open" Olympics. Simon, the former secretary of the Treasury — who is returning to the financial canyons of Wall Street, insists that since an honest definition of amateurism has never been developed "they should open up the Games to any and all, including professionals."

Citing the hypocrisy long existent in so-called amateur athletics, Miller, who aspires to one of the seats on the IOC, argues:

"Amateurism in the Olympics has been a sham. If the only payments are well-known to everyone, I think an Olympic athlete should be permitted to make as much money as he can by writing, appearing on TV and endorsing products ... no different than movie stars or musicians."

The IOC, realizing the Games mounting losses in an economic-oriented market, has scheduled two meetings within the next year designed to put the Games back on the right track.

An emergency meeting will be held in Lausanne, Switzerland, Dec. 1-2 primarily to address the problem of team boycotts. They began on a mass scale by 30 predominantly African nations in 1976 at Montreal and were followed by pullouts by the United States and 61 Western friends from Moscow in 1980 and the 15-member Soviet bloc from Los Angeles.

A second full meeting of the IOC is scheduled for June 1-2 in Berlin where the pressing issue will be the eligibility rule, which is to be handled by individual sports federations and has become a "mini-mess" of conflicting standards.

Thus the major problems hanging over the head of the Olympic hierarchy are boycotts, professionalism and commercialism. "If the IOC doesn't face up to the evident problems instead of sweeping them under the rug," Miller as the Summer Games concluded, "the movement will suffer irreparable harm."

With the departure of the late Avery Brundage, who ruled the IOC with an iron fist for 20 years, the 198-member Olympic oligarchy has been described as largely a debating society and social-club unwilling to take on thorny problems.

Critics say it's out of touch with reality, living in a world long gone. Its 75 members include three lords, two princes, a few dukes, a count, a sheik, a rajah, a few generals and a large number of retired industrialists, all heads of their companies.

Of the pending issues, professionalism — whether to go fully open or revert to some sort of compromise amateur code — appears the most serious.

The boycott matter probably can be solved by having sanctions on violators — a move favored by a majority although opposed by the Soviet bloc as injurious more to the athletes than the nations involved.

The most popular suggestion is this:

Make countries commit themselves two or three years in advance. If any violates this commitment, they suspend it for the next Olympiad. The suspension would result in a 12-year penalty. The offender would miss the Games, be boycotted, the succeeding Games and then have to wait four more years for eligibility — three spans of four years.

Commercialism, also opposed by the Eastern bloc because totalitarian governments make everything subordinate to the state, gained tremendous popularity among the guest countries at Los Angeles. They saw the Games produced successfully through corporate sponsorship.

Many observers predicted it would be a wave of the future, particularly among Western countries, and IOC members even dropped the hint that the idea may be used to make it self-supportive and not a slave to TV revenues.

The professionalism problem was exacerbated with the liberalization of the eligibility code in 1974. The IOC executive board removed the word "amateur" from Rule 25 and passed the responsibility of who could and could not compete in the Olympics to the various federations.

The International Track and Field Federation would rule on its athletes, the swimming federation on the swimmers, soccer federation on the soccer players and so forth.

It opened a Pandora's box. "We made two mistakes," Roosevelt said. "We allowed the ice hockey and soccer federations to admit professionals. That opened the door. One of our big tasks at the Berlin meeting next June will be to establish a new charter which will be consistent for all competitors and will be under the full jurisdiction of the IOC."

Under the current arrangement, the IOC is faced with a different set of rules for each competitor. An athlete in soccer could be eligible for the Games under regulations that, for instance, would bar a swimmer.

In the most significant cases of inconsistency, members of the North American Soccer League were permitted to play Olympic soccer but Renato Nehemiah and Willie Gault weren't allowed to run in track because they had played in the National Football League.

"When they refused to let Skeets Nehemiah run, I was sickened by the whole rotten business," said Simon.

Swiss offer $100,000 for record

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — American hurdler Edwin Moses has decided to drop plans to compete in a track and field meet here in favor of a Swiss event where he has been offered $100,000 for a world record 400-meter hurdles run, organizers said Thursday.

Laszlo Bekesi, chairman of the Budapest Grand Prix organizing committee, said the American track star decided not to run in Monday's meet here after Zurich organizers made him the offer. The Swiss meet is on Wednesday.

Moses won the gold medal in the event at Los Angeles and at the Montreal Olympics eight years ago. He had been one of the main drawing cards of the one-day Grand Prix and Bekesi told reporters his decision not to participate was a "heartbreak affair."

About 300 athletes from 30 nations are expected to compete in the annual event described Thursday by the MTI news agency as "the first opportunity for the best of the Socialist countries to match skills with Olympic medal-winner rivals." The Soviet Union and 13 of its allies boycotted the Olympics.

MTI said the men's races over 400 meters and 5,000 meters and the women's 400-meter run offer best chances for world records.

Carl Lewis, America's superstar with four gold medals at Los Angeles, is expected to run the 100 meters. Italy's Alberto Tomba, gold medalist over 10,000 meters in Los Angeles, is entered over 3,000 meters.

The women's 400-meter run likely will pit Los Angeles winner Valerie Briscoe-Hooks of the United States against boycotting Czechoslovakia's Jarmila Kratochvilova, world-record holder over 400 meters and 800 meters.

Dutch open drive for Olympics

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — A delegation from the city of Amsterdam left for Moscow Thursday to drum up support for holding the 1992 Olympic Games in the Dutch capital.

The delegation is attending the Friendship Games, which begin Saturday and were organized by the Soviet Union as an alternative to the recent Olympics, which was boycotted by most Communist-ruled nations.

The two-man delegation is seeking information on the organization and logistics of large sporting events.

While in the Soviet capital, which hosted the 1980 Olympics, the delegation is expected to lobby for Soviet support for siting the 1992 Games in Amsterdam.

Puerto Rico to honor Clemente with stamp

CAROLINA, Puerto Rico (AP) — A stamp honoring baseball Hall of Famer Roberto Clemente will be unveiled Friday in ceremonies in the late Pittsburgh Pirates star's hometown of Carolina.

The Clemente stamp is part of a series dedicated to great American athletes being issued by the U.S. Postal Service.

Postal Service Director General William Bolger, Puerto Rican Gov. Carlos Romero Barcelo and Clemente's widow, Vera, are scheduled to speak at the ceremonies at Roberto Clemente Sports City. The first stamp put into service will carry the Carolina postmark.

The six-color, 20-cent stamp has Clemente's profile with the Puerto Rican flag in the background.

During his 16-year career with Pittsburgh, the exceptional right-fielder was a 10-time Gold Glove winner and appeared in 12 All-Star games. He had a lifetime batting average of .317, passed the 3,000-hit mark and won the National League batting crown five times.

Clemente died on Dec. 31, 1972, when a plane carrying emergency relief supplies for Nicaraguan earthquake victims crashed at sea minutes after takeoff from San Juan International Airport. His body never was recovered.

Paper, metal works lauded

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Herrett Museum Art Gallery at the College of Southern Idaho will be displaying an exhibition of handmade paperworks by Lorna Obermayr of Pocatello and bronze sculptures by Vicci Gustafsen of Boise from Aug. 21 to Sept. 21.

Gustafsen is a recent graduate student in sculpture at Boise State University and is currently affiliated with Oehl Gallery and Art Services in Boise.

"She has been" included in three recent sculpture exhibitions including a one-person show at CSI. Gustafsen will be exhibiting cast bronze sculptures that emphasize plane and surface tensions as well as positive and negative space.

"The artist says she was studying commercial art when she was introduced to sculpting. "I fell in love and evolved into it," she adds.

"I've been working on this series for two years," she says of the display of seven pieces to be shown at Herrett Museum. Gustafsen says she uses various techniques when casting bronze and that each piece is an experience in its own way.

"They've been getting larger," she says of each piece. "Someday I want to do sculptures that stand 10 to 12 feet high. My dream is to someday have to hire a crane to install it. I think it would be great to have people walk under and around it."

Gustafsen laughs and calls the desire for such hefty pieces, "probably an ego trip."

The sculptor says that casting and doing the fine detail on bronze is a lot of work, but, "The esthetic part of sculpting is the hardest part — the days alone thinking up ideas."

She knows that a piece is finished and ready for display when the form pleases her. "It just cooks!" she says.

Lorna Obermayr is presently the chairperson of the art department at Idaho State University. She has exhibited in the intermountain area for 20 years and her works are included in numerous private collections including the Salt Lake Art Center, the Boise Gallery of Art, and the First Security Bank.

Obermayr will be displaying collages incorporating handmade paper that has been cast, dyed, molded and assembled in various combinations.

Her most recent works, of which a sample will be included in her display, incorporate the use of photo-sensitive emulsions that allow her to print photographs on handmade paper.

Obermayr says she wasn't satisfied with painting and that her interest in paper-making began five years ago. "I liked the shaping idea of the soaked canvas thing," she says.

Noting that paper-making began in China in 100 A.D., she calls her timing, "Really, right." Paper-making over the last 15 years has had a renaissance," she says.

Obermayr says that this interest in paper-making led to ISU Commission on the Arts. With this grant they were able to obtain the proper equipment for paper-making.

Of her own work, the artist says, "I don't feel like I'm a paper-maker as well as an artist-manipulating it for art. It allows a deep and shallow relief and "flexibility. It's so manipulatable."

Obermayr says she'll be displaying 11 pieces at Herrett Museum and that she loves for people to reach up and touch her work.

"I get a vicarious thrill out of it," she says. "The idea of one of my pieces being gradually worn out by people touching it — that's great!"

Michael Green, the art director at CSI, says that an opening reception for the artists will be held Tuesday, Aug. 21, at 7 p.m. and that the public is invited.

Disney classic still the best

'Jungle Book' worth the money

By PAT MARGANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — They don't make them like they used to. Full-length feature cartoons, that is.

With the death of Walt Disney, so died the genre of cartoon movie that boasted grace, wit and entertainment.

When it was released about two years ago, "The Secret of NIMH," which was produced by some former Disney employees, came close to recapturing the old Disney spirit.

Mostly, however, theaters now offer weak-kneed Smurf films that are 90-minute commercials for cereal and toys bearing the likes of those clone-like creatures.

Fortunately, and probably profiting the Disney studios frequently revive their stock of films such as "Cinderella" and "Snow White" and re-release them to the big screens around the country.

Currently playing is "The Jungle Book."

Adapted from Rudyard Kipling's stories, "The Jungle Book" tells the tale of Mowgli, the boy raised in the jungles of India.

Mowgli's guardian animal is Bagheera, a snobby black panther. His teacher is Baloo the bear who believes the art of survival should be done with as little effort as possible.

Besides a seemingly easy existence, the jungle also holds danger for the little man cub. Mowgli is a tempting morsel for predators like Kaa, a seductive snake. His biggest enemy is the tiger Shere Khan, who fears the boy will grow into manhood and hunt him.

The film features standard Disney voices such as Phil Harris, Sebastian Cabot as Bagheera and the late George Sanders as Shere Khan. Particularly delicious are Sterling Holloway as the voice of Kaa and Harris as Baloo.

The movie's soundtrack is fun and invigorating, especially a simian jazz session.

"The Jungle Book" has all the traits of what made Disney films good. There's fluidity of story, beautiful animation and balanced suspense and comic relief.

It's not Disney at its best. But "The Jungle Book" is a thankful break from those summer movies starring human cartoons.

'Broadway' gala to spotlight talent of area performers

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — "An Evening On Broadway" will be presented at the Renaissance Academy of the Arts Friday, Aug. 24 at 8 p.m.

Performing artists are Robert Newman and Gara Barlow Newman of Rupert and Don Royster of Filer and Burley.

Robert Newman, considered a versatile performer in opera and oratorio, Broadway and sacred concerts and recitals, has appeared with Northwest symphonies and orchestras in numerous roles.

Newman, a baritone, performed as Yamadori in "Madame Butterfly," and Masetto in "Don Giovanni." He has also performed in "La Boheme," "Rigoletto," "Carmen" and others.

In 1983, he was San Francisco Opera Regional Finalist; district winner and second place regional winner. 1984 brought him honors as district winner and regional finalist with Metropolitan Opera Auditions.

Gara Barlow Newman is a graduate of the University of Idaho and Gonzaga Law School. She was Miss Miss-Idaho in 1976 and was third runner-up in the 1977 Miss Idaho Contest.

Royster holds a Bachelor of Music degree from the University of Idaho with a major in piano. He earned a master of arts degree and Ph.D. after completing four years of post gradu-

The results of his doctoral dissertation, "Pierre Guedron and the Air de cour, 1600-1620," are published in "The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians." Royster teaches piano at his studio in Burley.

Robert Newman says Friday's performance will consist of well-known musical favorites from many of the great shows such as "Show Boat," "Camelot," "The Sound of Music," "My Fair Lady," "Oklahoma," "West Side Story" and "South Pacific."

Tickets are $4 adults, $2 seniors and students, and can be purchased at the door at 505 2-7th St. For reservations call 734-0719.

Emmy hopes differ between networks

By FRED ROTHENBERG
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Opinions about television's Emmy Awards, not surprisingly, split along network lines — depending on who's winning the prizes.

NBC, led by "Hill Street Blues," "St. Elsewhere" and "Cheers," wins the bulk of the Emmys. The network believes the awards reflect the best and brightest from the medium. It trumpets its collection of nominations and statues in self-congratulatory promotional ads.

Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment, says the most worthy series "win the top awards." "Nobody said, 'Cheers' won. Oh, my God, 'Alice' got stifled again," he said.

But some people who work for top-rated CBS and ABC believe the Emmys are elitist beauty contests that fail to reflect the preferences of the voters who count the most viewers.

Lew Erlicht, president of ABC Entertainment, is not interested in how the industry evaluates his programs. "I don't care in terms of our judgment of what quality is," he said. "We don't have to win awards to know what we think is good."

Erlicht was upset that ABC's 18-hour "Winds of War" was an Emmy also-ran last year, despite attracting huge audiences. "Our belief was that we had something special and it didn't," he said.

ABC and CBS say NBC is winning Emmys now because their shows are more-crafted and intellectual, thus appealing to certain viewers whose tastes are similar to the voters within the industry. They say NBC's programming misses the broader, mainstream audience.

ABC and CBS complain that they're penalized because they strive for pure entertainment, not realism or social value.

Case in point: the enormously popular ABC soap opera, "Dynasty," won the People's Choice Awards for best drama last season, yet it has never won the Emmy for outstanding dramatic series.

Aaron Spelling, executive producer of such hits as "Dynasty," "The Love Boat" and "T.J. Hooker," says his shows' content and significance are

Watercolor delights open to public

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Watercolor Society is displaying its 1984 Traveling Exhibit at Killfoyle Graphics, 180 Deere St., in Twin Falls now until Aug. 31.

The traveling juried exhibition consists of 21 paintings which were selected from the society's Fifth Annual Juried Membership Exhibition, a jury of 67 painters.

Juror for the event, Al Brouillette of the American Watercolor Society, says, "Selection is based on knowledge, intuition, emotional response and personal taste. I like to think that my choices are guided by what I know."

He says he bases his judgment on what he calls "the four commandments: visual interest, originality of statement, esthetic content and craftsmanship."

Many of the pieces in the traveling exhibit are ones that received award recognition including "The Durables," named juror's choice, by Gloria Miller Allen of Idaho Falls.

Dana Roper of the Idaho Watercolor Society says there are 185 members in the society.

She notes that many artists work in both oil and watercolor medium but that oil has a different feel.

"It's not as spontaneous, fun and free as watercolor," she says.

"Spontaneity in watercolor is exhilarating because you can work real loose," she says. "It's not as deliberate as oil."

Roper would like to see membership grow in the South Central Region, which includes the Magic Valley. She invites active watercolor painters to call her at 382-5226.

Gallery hours for the exhibit are 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. weekdays, and 9:30 a.m. to noon on Saturday. Killfoyle's gallery is located behind the Twin Falls County Farm Bureau on Kimberly Road East.

Labor begins on 'Messiah'

TWIN FALLS — Handel's popular oratorio, "The Messiah," will be presented as an audience sing-along in the Magic Valley Chorale's Christmas concert. The sing-along concept has been used for some years in Chicago and New York with tremendous response, but this is a first for Magic Valley, says Gerry Brown, chorale president.

This year the chorale will present the entire oratorio, instead of the usual part I, in celebration of the 300th anniversary of the birth of composer George Frederick Handel, Brown adds.

Weekly rehearsals for the Dec. 16 concert will begin 7 p.m., Aug. 30, in Room 121 in the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Building under the direction of Carson Wong.

A portion of the CSI auditorium will be reserved for those who wish to sing along. The singers will join with the 100-member chorale and full orchestra in the concert.

The remainder of the auditorium will be open to the "listening" participants for whom promises to be a memorable occasion, Brown said.

Each singing participant will need a score of "The Messiah," which may be purchased at the CSI Bookstore. General admission will be charged for all singers and listeners.

Reserved tickets may be obtained for those wishing to sing by contacting Brown, 733-3310; Carolyn Bontrager, 733-0322; or Ruth Huettig, 829-5986 or 733-5554, ext. 266.

Emmys

targeted lower than "Hill Street Blues." But he doesn't think that makes his shows bad shows. Spelling called the Emmys "ego trips." While admitting he would love to win an Emmy, he didn't hesitate when asked whether he'd rather have a statue or a hefty percentage of TV homes watching. "I'd rather have a 38 share."

John Leverage, awards director for the Emmy's sponsoring Academy of Television Arts & Sciences, said TV's actors, directors and writers were best able to judge what's special in TV.

He agreed that peers evaluating the work of peers was "an insider's view of the best achievements in TV," but he said that was more valuable than "the People's Choice Awards, which are done by voting on 7-Eleven coupons."

"Any Joe off the street can make a statement there," added Leverage. "The Emmys use experts in the field making statements about the quality of work. I think the respect of one's peers is the real gold in the Emmy."

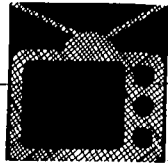

Last year, NBC won more Emmys than ABC and CBS combined — 33 to ABC's 14 and CBS' 11. This year, NBC again leads in nominations, with 98 to CBS' 87 and ABC's 72.

Blue-ribbon panels will vote on the nominees Aug. 27-28. The winners will be announced in the annual Emmy Awards broadcast Sunday night, Sept. 23.

When this year's nominations came out earlier this month, only NBC broadcast promotions touting its nominees. Tartikoff said he hoped winning several Emmys for "St. Elsewhere" would lure viewers in the same way the little statues helped promote "Hill Street Blues" and "Cheers" into hits.

It's natural that NBC crows about Emmys rather than ratings — it has run last in the Nielsen standings since 1975.

Gene Jankowski, president of the CBS Broadcast Group, said at a June press conference that Emmys didn't prove anything about broadcasting. He said those who lobbied hardest for the awards won them. "I wouldn't take the results at face value," he said.

Television

Asked to respond, Tartikoff said, "Does the term sour grapes come to mind?"

Recently, Jankowski elaborated on his remarks in an interview with The Associated Press. He still said Emmys didn't matter much to viewers or the industry, but concluded: "They're an individual recognition of people's contributions. In that regard, I guess they're a good thing to have."

Lobbying for awards exists, but most TV executives said they felt campaigning had little or no influence. Studios and production companies are now taking out full-page ads outlining their shows in Hollywood's major trade publications.

"We don't campaign for Emmys," said NBC Chairman Grant Tinker. "But production companies sometimes do."

The upcoming awards cover entertainment programs from July 1, 1983, to June 30 of this year. Any of the 3,600 members of the Hollywood-based Academy of Television Arts & Sciences may nominate programs and people, but only in their areas of expertise. Directors nominate directors, writers nominate writers, etc.

"Individuals can choose as many as they've seen and feel are worthy of nomination," Leverage said. "It's all on the honor principle."

Spy thriller retains the classic quality

By DAN CRUYER
Newsday

Consider this an exercise in Trivial Pursuit. Quick now, name the title of the spy thriller by Kurt Vonnegut set in Peoria or Abilene? And who wrote the one in which the heroine was less than beautiful and brainy? Stumped? The answers are none and no one.

We do like to have our fictional spies instruct us in the differences between a 1968 Renault Margaux and a run-of-the-mill elanet, don't we? We marvel at their expertise in languages, guns and the opposite sex. We thrill to the chase as it jumps from Moscow to Paris, from Rio to Hong Kong. Trivial Pursuit, you see, is the gateway to Fantasy Island.

Using the classic devices of the trade, "The Dossier" by Pierre Salinger and Leonard Gross (Doubleday, $15.95) keeps the fantasy level high. It also trades on topicality. In this case a reporter loosely based on Klaus Barbie, the Gestapo thug known to history as "The Butcher of Lyons," for his competence in dispatching French innocents to the care of Nazi executioners.

In "The Dossier," an American television newsman in France, very much like Pierre Salinger, is tipped off that the conservative leader expected to win election to the French presidency was a Gestapo informer in World War II, a Resistance "patriot" who ratted on his buddies. If proved true, the story would ruin the politician and be the coup of a lifetime for the newsman.

In Andre Kohl, a newsman of late middle age, Salinger and Leonard Gross have cleverly cast their fantasy guide, born of a German Jewish father and a French mother who settled in America, Kohl feels at home in France and alienated from the KGB. He knows vintage wines the way American men know balling averages. Long lunches and bright conversation, he understands, make a day worthwhile.

Kohl is considering giving up the rat race and getting back to his first love, the piano. But the temptation to pursue this one last story is too strong. He jumps for the bait, knowing his plans for early retirement will be messed up. But hard — the way he expects.

He doesn't know, as we readers do, that the tip, passed on by an Israeli intelligence source, originated with the KGB, the Russian spy agency. Nor is he aware that the territorial Gennady Gendrachov, his obliging Soviet source, is a key figure in the plot. (Salinger and Gross enjoy playing the roman a clef game.)

Gendrachov is obviously modeled after Victor Louis, the colorful Soviet personage who writes for western newspapers, decorates his apartment walls with expensive paintings, and most assuredly operates at the top level of the KGB.) And Kohl, divorced and gun-shy of commitment with women, has no idea that this particular story will reintroduce him to romance.

Camille Laurent, the would-be French president, stays in the background until the tale's end. Meanwhile, it is Kohl's quest for the incriminating dossier that makes this novel go. In Washington, he touches base with Deputy CIA Director Charles Houghton, who's paralyzed from wounds suffered during a clandestine mission inside the section of Nazi-occupied France run by the Barbie character, Kurt Hoepner. Later at Gendrachov's dacha outside Moscow, Kohl is handed the dossier.

Once the dossier has been authenticated, Kohl is off to Bellvia to confront Hoepner and then back to France to face Laurent himself.

In "The Dossier," Salinger and Gross appeal not only to the journalist's fantasy of getting the big story and, for good measure, bringing down a government. There is also the middle-aged male's fantasy. Need I point out that Charles Houghton's daughter Meredith is not homely, not timid and not averse to climbing into bed with a man old enough to be her father? Ah, the pleasures of the spy novel!

Yes, immersed in the pages of "The Dossier," we can indeed kick off our shoes and relax amid the splendors of Fantasy Island.

We now carry a full line of Greeting Cards!

Stop in soon and see our great selection.

Hirschfeld hailed for his 15,000 caricatures

By ELIZABETH VENANT
The Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK — More than 30 years ago, a foot-tall actress did her mightiest to portray a dainty ingenue in the New York debut of a small revue, "Lend an Ear."

The effort earned the unknown actress a sketch in the New York Times under the rubric, "People Not in Star Roles Who Stopped the Show." It was the first time Carol Channing was depicted by caricaturist Al Hirschfeld.

Art

"I fell over backward," says Channing, who still calls a Hirschfeld sketch "the best review you can get."

Hirschfeld, who recently turned 81, has produced about 15,000 such caricatures of show people, from the Marx Brothers to Meryl Streep, Laurence Olivier to Lasse. At this year's Tony Awards festivities, with a set decorated by Hirschfeld drawings, he shared with the first Brooks Atkinson Award for a lifetime achievement of unique work. To celebrate the event, the Margo Felden Gallery in New York, which has shown Hirschfeld for 15 years, mounted a retrospective show that runs through Friday. This month, Felden proudly opened a "Hirschfeld exhibit" where 1,000 of the artist's drawings will be permanently on view.

But the recognition has done nothing to change the workday life of the man New York Times art critic John Russell has dubbed "the Fred Astaire of pen and ink." Regularly between 9 and 10 a.m., Hirschfeld climbs the stairs to the fourth-floor studio of the Upper East Side brownstone where he lives with his wife, actress Dolly Haas. There he takes his habitual perch on a barbershop chair, picked up in the Bowery a half-century ago, and hunches over his ancient drawing board. Sketchbooks from 60 years of work bank the room and favorite drawings crowd the stairway walls.

On a recent morning, Hirschfeld as usual was bent over his illustration board. Sporting a white Santa Claus beard, first grown in Paris in 1924 and dressed in black, he looked like a pen-and-ink drawing of himself. He is a merry man with clear, youthful eyes and the careful expression of an artist who has never known a creative block. His friends say he regales them with his wit, and whimsy is the salient trait he sees in his portraits of himself. Indeed, most everybody he puts to pen looks like someone you might want to meet.

People are his subject, and the theater, as he says, is "the great reward." For decades his sum-merrounded figure, sketch pad in lap, has been a regular fixture Broadway openings. He drew Basil Rathbone in "The Command to Love," 1928; Mary Martin in "South Pacific," 1949, and in 1932 recorded the first performance of the Radio City Rockettes at the Roxy Theater. His works appear in the collections of the Metropolitan and Whitney museums and in "Hirschfeld's World" (his other eight books are out of print).

He has captured the way Groucho held a cigar, Louis Armstrong's smile, and "the neurotic quality" he found in Jane Fonda. He's dabbled with politicians, captured the Algonquin postwar lull and portrayed movies from "Mutiny on the Bounty" (1935) to the upcoming "Ultimate Solution" with Katharine Hepburn and Nick Nolte.

All of it for Hirschfeld is the stuff of reminiscing. Zero Mostel in "Fiddler on the Roof" brings back shades of the old days in Greenwich Village.

He used to come over to the studio and do his coffee-percolator number. He was always exploding with energy. You couldn't exaggerate too much with him. The press agent for Cafe Society (a Village nightclub) gave him the name Zero. His real name was Sam Mostel.

"Another entertainer who captured Hirschfeld's imagination was Charlie Chaplin. He made more than 1,000 sketches of the little man with the baggy trousers, bestowing his early '70s drawing of him with a rare caption: "Genius with both feet in the clouds."

"Everything about him was a thumbprint," said Hirschfeld. "He'd pick up a grape and you'd laugh."

But if, as Russell once remarked, Hirschfeld "gives actors the benefit of a doubt," his cast of characters forms a virtual pan club of celebrities. Dustin Hoffman, Jason Robards and Art Garfunkel are among a host of regulars at the Felden Gallery, purchasing pen-and-ink portraits of themselves at the subject's reduced price of $1,200 (originals normally start at $1,500, while lithographs go for $300).

Jack Lemmon, who says of Hirschfeld, "I can't say about him, he's drawings of 'The Front Page,'

"The Entertainer" and "The Prisoner of Second Avenue" over his office desk and another batch in his Beverly Hills residence.

Only a few likenesses have been done with malice. One pictured Sen. Joseph McCarthy as the Statue of Liberty snuffing out the torch. Another portrayed controversial producer David Merrick as a sneaking salsina Santa Claus. Still, Merrick purchased the original and used the drawing on his Christmas cards.

Perhaps the most famous name associated with Hirschfeld is that of his daughter, Nina. On the day of her birth in 1945, Hirschfeld illustrated a musical with a circus background for the New York Times, into which he joyously inserted an infant, billing her as "Nina, the Wonder Child." Family and friends spread word of the prank and before he knew it Hirschfeld was hiding the word "Nina" in all of his drawings, tucking it into shirt sleeves, handbags, bow ties and eye brows. The search for Ninas quickly became what Hirschfeld terms "a national insanity."

Indeed, in 1960, New York Times Publisher Arthur Sulzberger wrote Hirschfeld to say he had regretfully heard that there were occasionally more than one Nina per drawing, "and that really isn't fair," he lamented, "since not knowing how many Ninas are leaves one with a sense of frustration." From then on, Hirschfeld began appending to his signature the number of Ninas to be found in each drawing.

It is in group pictures, however, that the numbers game attains its greatest significance, with the bestowal of Ninas upon a personage not unlike a form of celebrity knight-riding. Surveying his collection of Broadway drawings, Charles Durning said proudly, "I don't know if I favor me, but most of the Ninas are on me."

Hirschfeld protests that he has tried to stop the Ninas, but he mournfully said, "People find them where they don't exist." Once Feiden interrupted a gallery visitor who had spent hours concentrating on a single work. When she asked the person what was so fascinating, he said he was looking for the 39 "Ninas." Feiden explained that "39" was the date the drawing was made. On the other hand, Feiden reveals an unnumbered drawing contains only one Nina, "unless it was made before her birth."

For those afflicted with Ninamania, the real Nina, 38, is a divorcee with an 8-year-old son, who lives quietly somewhere in Manhattan under her married name. Her parents describe her as "a devoted mother" and, over lunch, they pulled out a family album in which a plump little redheaded girl is feeding pigeons in Central Park. Hirschfeld is essentially an artist concerned with graphics. His drawings are black, rarely employing tone, and never using shadows.

"Hirschfeld realizes that the physical language of graphic art is two-dimensional — in his case, black ink on white illustration's board — and what the artist should respect this flatness and build his art on it," wrote Lloyd Goodrich, director emeritus of the Whitney, in the introduction to "Hirschfeld's World."

"Of the artists working in his field today, he's simply incomparable," said Alan Fern, director of the National Portrait Gallery in Washington, D.C. "The extraordinary thing about his work is that it doesn't look like anybody else's."

Indeed, tracing Hirschfeld's artistic parentage means looking back to the woodcut artists of 16th and 19th-century Japan, such as Hokusai and Honnami, who portrayed actors and actresses in the Kabuki theater with a graphic definition that conveyed a similar vitality. "They influenced me far more than Western art," said Hirschfeld, who keeps a series of his early '70s Kabuki watercolors on his studio wall.

His own craft blossomed in an eastward quest for romance that led him in 1931 from Tahiti to Bali.

"The Balinese sun seemed to bleach out color, so that people became line drawings walking around," he said. "I don't think it's an accident that rich, lush painting has flourished in the fog of Europe, while graphic art has been produced in countries from Egypt to India and the Pacific Islands, which are influenced by the sun."

Hirschfeld had been making pictures since he was a child in St. Louis. When he was 11, his mother, a Russian immigrant convinced of her son's talent, closed her candy store and packed up Al, his two brothers and her husband to move to the richer artistic climate of New York.

They took the Amsterdam Avenue trolley to the end of the line in the rural farmlands of upper Manhattan, where they found a top-floor flat for $1 a month. Mrs. Hirschfeld made ends meet by clerking in a department store, while her husband took jobs as an umpire. Hirschfeld, meanwhile, began night courses at the Academy of Art, making paintings and sculptures, which he now calls "drawings you fall over in the dark."

After several months running errands for the art department of Goldwyn Pictures, he landed a job as art director at Selznick Studios. He spent most of the '20s in Paris, living frugally as a painter and printmaker. He broke into publications when a sketch of French actor Sacha Guitry was published in the Illustrated Tribune, and in 1925, he began his relationship with the New York Times.

Asked for his version of his career, Hirschfeld is likely to answer, "It all came about by accident."

Like his work, he also distills his thoughts into short, amusing remarks. His standard advice to the young, for example: "Drawing is a feminine profession. It will guarantee you full and permanent unemployment for life."

He works six hours a day, seven days a week, and can spend from a day to a week on a drawing.

His original sketches are made at theater performances in the dark (he can also draw in his pocket), and are accompanied by picturesque notations. Bernadette Peters, the busy co-star of "Sunday in the Park With George" (Hirschfeld called her "the little girl with shoe-button eyes," exercising his well-known facility for forgetfulness), was captured with "behind on chest" and hair "like spaghetti." From these series of sketches, essential lines indicating the set of a stance, the shape of a mouth, emerge to form the final drawing.

But Hirschfeld's job has become considerably more difficult than it was in the days when Marlene Dietrich's eyebrows or Mary Pickford's curls could establish instant recognition. "The performers have changed across the years. They used to be bigger than life; now they're smaller. And the people in the street are more theatrical. It used to be people looked like what they were — you could tell a banker, a bookkeeper, a streetcar conductor — but today they all look the same. And that's affected the theater. The people on the stage don't look any more theatrical than the people on the street. They used to kind of invent themselves. The Carol Channings and Ed Wynns. They were remarkable. And they were much easier to do, to establish a symbol for. It's very difficult today."

PG-13 Rating Introduced

A new rating category is in place as of July 1. This new category is inserted between the current PG and R ratings. It is denoted as "PG-13: Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for attendance of children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children."

The revised film category system of the voluntary film industry rating program is as follows:

1. General Audiences, all ages admitted.
2. Parental Guidance Suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.
3. Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.
4. Restricted, under-17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.
5. No one under 17 admitted.
6. All films rated after July 1 will be given ratings under the new film category system.

Consider "amateurism" in sports. English lords first promoted it to preserve class distinctions. If you worked for a living daily, you didn't have time to compete. You had to be wealthy enough to play without pay.

Researchers put a scratched orange into a cage full of flies, and said flies all died within two hours. Our Chief Prognosticator thinks orchardists soon will spray citrus all over the place.

Twenty-one days of unrelieved bedrest will age your body by 30 years. Or so say the medecins now. Fortunately, it's reversible. Once up and about, you'll "youth" again.

BURIAL PLACE
Q. Lot of people think of Arlington Cemetery as the burial place of presidents, but in fact, only two U.S. presidents are buried there -- John F. Kennedy and William Howard Taft. Four presidents, however, are not buried on American soil at all. Name them.
A. You're going to say Nixon, Carter, Ford and Reagan, aren't you? Sure, I know you.

PALINDROMIC NAMES
Q. What, you can't name the only four men in professional baseball with palindromic monikers? Meaning their last names are spelled the same forwards or backwards. Try: Dick Nen, Eddie Kazak, Truck Hannah and Toby Harrah.

Almost but not quite one out of every five American women between the ages of 18 and 44 had a legal abortion. Or so estimate those who study squch matters.
Bananas grow wild in Southeast Asia. But their seeds are too big. People thereabout eat the flowers but throw away the fruit.

Polliwogs have proved that the great majority of New Yorkers can't name the only state in the union that ends with the letter "k."

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until noon you will be able to arrange helpful undertakings, so make decisions then, for the afternoon and evening find you able to get into the nitty gritty details of making them work.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You can plan your activities early in detail and later carry them out most advantageously.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Arrange confidentially whatever is necessary to gain your personal aims and then all goes well for you. Drive most carefully.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Come to a decision about that private wish you have and then act upon it confidentially and gain it.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be certain to handle public affairs intelligently and gain the approval of hipwipers.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You have been studying plans that need right decision now, and later you can gain the help of a bigwig. Listen carefully.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) If you do something important for the one you love, you can then get into activities that are progressive and get good results.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You can reach a decision on a new plan with partners early and then get right down to the work that needs to be done by you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Early get that pressing work behind you so that later you can be with outside partners so you can plan the future more wisely.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get your finest talent across to bigwigs so that you can become more successful. Then get busy with the work ahead of you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Carry through with promises you made so that you improve conditions for kin, then later go out together for amusement.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Talk over your plans with partners so that you can produce more and later gain the assistance of kin for some important project.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) Find a better way of putting your assets to work so that you can command a greater income in the days ahead.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have an ability at investigative work and can come up with the right answers, especially with anything connected with the modern world, and should have as fine an education as possible, so that upon reaching adulthood much success can be possible.

Wedding

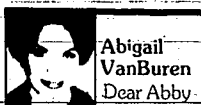

Dorsey-Wagner

BOISE — Daryl C. Dorsey, Boise, and John J. Wagner Jr., former-Buhl resident now of Boise, exchanged wedding vows Aug. 11 at a nuptial mass at St. John's Cathedral in Boise. The ceremony was performed by Father Malachy McNeill, pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception in Buhl. Vocalists were Patty Dorsey-Boise, and Jeanette Young, Clearfield, Utah, daughters of the bride, accompanied by Rick Modlin, Boise, and the St. John's Cathedral folk mass trio. Matron of honor was Eva Wagner, Buhl, sister of the groom, with Joseph Wagner, Twin Falls, brother of the groom, serving as best man.

Ushers included Chris and Greg Hosman, Jerome, and Joe Wagner Jr., Twin Falls, all nephews of the groom. Nick Wagner, Buhl, nephew of the groom, was altar boy. Ed Conforti, Boise, gave the scriptural readings. Following the ceremony a reception was held in the cathedral hall. Mrs. Annle Wagner, mother of the groom, will host a reception for the newlyweds from 3 to 7 p.m. Sunday at her home, 303 Church Ave., Buhl. Friends and family of the couple are invited to attend. The newlyweds reside in Boise where both bride and groom are self-employed.

Mom's concern angers daughter, son

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old girl and I need your help to settle something between my mother and me. When I have a boy over, my mother thinks it's horrible if we shut the door while we're in my room. She always yells loudly, "Leave that door open!" It embarrasses me in front of the boy. My brother, who is 18, also has to leave his door open when he has a girl in his room.

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

door open. It's like she wants to catch us doing something. But the point is, we aren't doing anything. Please don't say that if we aren't doing anything we don't need the door shut. I like my privacy and so does my brother—when we have friends over. We usually just sit on the bed and talk or listen to the stereo. It seems like our mother doesn't trust us. It makes me feel trashy that my own mother thinks the worst of me when I have a boy in my room. How do I handle the situation?

DEAR TROUBLE: Thank your "nosy" mother for caring enough about you to do what a mother is supposed to do—minimize the human temptations all normal kids eventually encounter. She trusts you. She trusts your brother. She also remembers your father and the temptations of her youth.

THE ACES BOBBY WOLFF

"Ability is the art of getting credit for all the home runs somebody else hits."
 - Casey Stengel.

All beginners learn to lead toward "high honors" rather than away from them. Those with the most ability also learn to overcome the exceptions.
 Dummy's diamond ace wins and it's clear that dummy's clubs are important to the success of this game. How should South attack the suit?

If he crosses to a high trump to lead a club toward dummy honors, the game is lost. East wins his ace and leads his last trump, which South wins. The high clubs are cashed, South discarding a diamond, and the spade finesse loses to West's king. West now cashes the high trump to eliminate a spade ruff in dummy, and South loses a trump, two spades and a club for one down.

South does much better if he departs from tradition and leads a club honor from dummy at trick two. East wins and a trump shift goes to South's ace. A club is led to dummy and a spade finesse loses to West. West cannot afford to lead trumps and exits with his last diamond. Dummy wins, and a trump is led to South's king. The spade ace is cashed; a spade is ruffed in dummy and dummy's high club provides a parking place for South's losing diamond. West gets his high trump and the defenders score only one spade, one trump and one club.
