Bush: Reagan will finish job

Republicans begin rally, plan platform

By DAVID ESPO The Associated Press

DALLAS — Vice President George Bush, preaching to true believers on the eve of the Republican National Convention, said Sunday that President Reagan deserves another term "to finish the job."

"Give us four more years," Bush exhorted party loyalists who crowded a welcoming rally, held indoors to escape the heat of a record 107-degree day.

"We've made a good start. We've made good progress," he said. "People are better off than four years ago."

"But we need your support, your ongoing support to finish the job. Give us four more years and watch what the American people can do," he said in remarks that served to open the convention-week activities here.

Earlier, Bush said Democratic presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale is "out of touch with the American people," thus returning a description Mondale delivered in critiquing the conservative Republican platform.

Mondale, meeting with leaders of the AFL-CIO, said in Denver that Republicans have "gone way off their fringe" with their platform. The Democratic convention that nominated him was a "mirror of America," he said — and the Re-

Hands up, George Bush ignites rally by saying party has never been closer together.

Reagan targets demand for recovery

SEDALIA, Mo. (AP) — President Reagan acknowledged Sunday that his policies have not delivered full economic recovery to the Farm Belt, but reminded farmers how much they suffered under a grain embargo imposed by the Carter administration.

"The first, most important thing we got rid of was a cynical, wrongheaded, totally unfair grain embargo," Reagan said.

And without mentioning Democratic opponent Walter F. Mondale by name, Reagan linked him with the embargo — an anathema in farm country — by saying, "I seem to remember someone who now says he opposed the embargo in private speaking a little differently in 1980."

Mondale, who was vice president under Jimmy Carter, has said he opposed the embargo in private, but supported Carter's decision publicly.

"He said then, 'What we've done will really sting,'" Reagan said of Mondale. "Well, someone got the sting all right, but it wasn't the Soviets — they're still in Afghanistan."

"It was thousands like you who deserved better from your own government," Reagan said at the Missouri State Fairgrounds. "For the life of me, how do you show you're strong by punching yourself in the breadbasket?"

Carter imposed the grain embargo to punish the Soviet Union for its military occupation of Afghanistan in 1979.

"Reagan said economic recovery 'has still not spread fully throughout the Farm Belt' but promised, 'The heritage of our past will bring forth the harvest of our future.'

Education reform plans doomed because of pay

By LEE MITGANG AP Education Writer

Education reform efforts under way in many states will fail as the "least academically able" become teachers unless far more is done to boost the profession's status and pay, a new report by the Rand Corp. warned Sunday.

"The search for excellence as it is being conducted in most states will not solve the problem," said the 19-page study. "Beyond the Commission Reports: The Coming Crisis in Teaching."

The report warned that the nation faces severe teacher shortages by 1988 unless expensive steps are taken to "professionalize" teaching.

The report, by Rand social scientist Linda Darling-Hammond, recommended that teacher salaries start at $20,000 and reach $50,000, compared with current starting salaries averaging about $13,000 — lower than almost any other career requiring a bachelor's degree.

Teacher salaries, in real terms, have declined 15 percent between 1971 and 1981, the report said.

The Rand report was the latest in a growing library of more than a dozen education reform proposals issued since President Reagan's National Commission on Excellence in Education warned 16 months ago of a "rising tide of mediocrity" in public schools.

While advocating expensive steps to make teaching more attractive, the report was silent on the question of how to remove incompetent teachers from the classroom.

Besides boosting salaries, it called for:

• Establishing a career ladder allowing experienced teachers to assume responsibility for supervising new teachers and developing programs.

• Offering recruitment incentives such as scholarships and forgivable loans for academically talented college students to enter teaching.

• Making teacher education programs more challenging.

• Requiring teacher internships before tenure is granted.

• Improving working conditions by allowing para-professionals to assume non-teaching duties. If those steps aren't taken, the report warned, the "least academically able students will become the tenured teaching force for the next two generations of American school children."

School costs predicted to increase by 6 percent

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The nation's school bill will increase 6 percent to $240 billion this fall despite a predicted enrollment drop of 350,000 to 56.3 million, according to the government's annual forecast of education costs.

The Department of Education estimated slight drops in elementary school and college enrollments and a small increase in the number of high school students.

The forecast said that 3.1 million people will be employed as teachers and 300,000 as administrators or other instructional staff members.

"This education in the fall of 1984 will be the primary activity of approximately 59.7 million Americans," it said. "In a nation with a population of nearly 237 million, more than 1 out of every 4 persons will be direct participants in the educational process."

Last summer, the department's National Center for Educational Statistics estimated that it would cost $230 billion for all classes from kindergarten to graduate school during the 1983-84 academic year.

But government statisticians have since lowered their estimate of last year's school bill to $226.5 billion. Thus the estimated $240 billion cost of education during the 1984-85 school year represents a 6 percent increase over last year's bill.

Here is a breakdown of the nation's

Feathers fly as 'Shoe' axed as top turkey

Readers oust birds for Doonesbury's friends

By STEPHEN HARTGEN Times-News managing editor

It's time for the other "Shoe" to drop: the trusette birds of the comic strip by that name were plucked feathers-down by you, the readers, as the comic strip we ought to drop from The Times-News.

So ax it we will, even if it isn't Thanksgiving, come the first of October, when Doonesbury returns to the comics page of the paper.

Giving a turkey the ax is something we journalists just naturally like to do, but rarely have we had as much fun, or as much mail to open, as we've had this past week on our "Pick A Turkey" contest.

Nearly 700 letters and ballots came into The Times-News, swamping receptionist Glenda May and part-time writer Flynn McRoberts, who counted the choices. Many of you named more than one strip you thought we should drop, but for simplification, I asked Glenda and Flynn to count your first choice only so that each ballot would be counted only once.

Shoe was tied to the chopping block by 301 ballots. It was followed, perhaps not surprisingly, by the controversial Doonesbury, which 115 of you picked as the strip to be axed, despite the fact that we hadn't included it on the formal ballot.

They were followed by Gasoline Alley, 72 "ax" votes; Broomhilda, 63; Andy Capp, 47; Garfield, 23; Hi & Lois, 10; Frank & Ernest, 8; Wizard of Id and Born Loser, each 7; Blondie, 6; Hagar the Horrible, 5; Peanuts and Beetle Bailey, each 4 "ax" votes.

In all, we counted 672 ballots, and I am told several others dribbled in after our Aug. 10 deadline. That's an enormous response to a questionnaire poll, indicating that despite this age of television, many of you are faithful comics page readers with strong loyalties, likes and dislikes.

The best fun for us editors was in reading your comments about the strips. You scrawled them in the margins of the ballot and wrote them in eloquent letters. Some of you signed your names. Others left their suggestions anonymous. We heard from men and women, boys and girls; from Burley to Bliss and Ketchum to Jackpot.

You told us what you thought. Here are some samples on your votes against Shoe: "Dumb... This one is the worst."

"Isn't worth reading." "Definitely eliminate."

On Doonesbury, you were considerably more vociferous: "Must have the abominable Trudeau ridiculous thrust upon us again?" "asked one reader. "Please spare the torture."

"It is the worst garbage in any paper," said another. "Doonesbury can continue its lengthy sabbatical," said yet another.

But other readers thought otherwise. "Welcome back, Doonesbury," wrote one. "Gary Trudeau packs more thought-provoking social commentary into a comic strip than most of the 'serious' denizens of the editorial page," wrote one Burley resident.

"May I suggest that instead of deleting one strip to make room for Doonesbury," he continued, "you simply leave one strip blank, thus affording that segment of your readership which appears so antagonistic to thinking, an opportunity to alleviate the agony of reading anything at all."

That's a bit extreme, but it suggests that Doonesbury will continue to generate the polarized opinions that it did before artist Gary Trudeau took a leave from the strip 18 months ago.

Managing Editor Stephen Hartgen carries out the reader-mandated execution of 'Shoe' birds are going to be de-feathered come Sept. 30. And to all of you who wrote in and helped us pick a turkey, thanks.

Ferraro, husband acknowledge debt

U.S. ships hunt for mining culprit

By JEFFREY ULBRICH
The Associated Press

ABOARD USS SHREVEPORT, Gulf of Suez — Forces seeking to find and identify a mine similar to those that have damaged at least 18 ships in the Red Sea and Gulf of Suez probably will not be able to determine who placed the mines, the commander of the American force said Sunday.

"I think it will probably be impossible to lay the blame," said Commodore Alvin S. Newman. "Every maritime nation has mines in its arsenal."

But he added, "If we find one, we will know what we are up against. That is the Egyptian goal, too." Newman commands the 650 crew and the U.S. ships and helicopters that have joined Egyptian, British and French forces searching for mines in the Red Sea and the Gulf of Suez. So far, no one has turned up any mines.

Two Soviet minesweepers passed through the Suez Canal and entered the Red Sea Saturday, but apparently headed for South Yemen and are not part of the multinational mine-clearing effort, a Port Said harbor official and shipping sources reported. Ezzat Hasaballah, the Port Said port officer, identified the Soviet vessels as the 280-ton minesweeper 413 and the 500-ton minesweeper 912. Port Said is at the northern entrance of the Suez Canal. Hasaballah said the Soviet Embassy, which informs Egyptian authorities in advance of the passage of any Soviet naval vessels through the canal, had reported the ships were going to the Indian Ocean.

Shipping companies in Suez City, at the southern end of the canal, said they had received reports that the Soviet minesweepers were headed for pro-Soviet South Yemen. They said the reports came from other sources at Turkey's Bosphorus Straits after the Soviet vessels passed there en route to the canal.

Marxist-ruled South Yemen is located at the southern entrance to the Red Sea.

Explosions in the gulf and the Red Sea began July 9. The latest one damaged a Cypriot ship on Wednesday.

Egypt has said it suspects Libya, and possibly Iran, of laying the mines. Both have denied it. A pro-Iranian terrorist organization calling itself Islamic Holy War has claimed responsibility.

In London, the Sunday Times reported that Egyptian and British officials believe the mines may have been laid by the Libyan ferry Ghat.

It said a senior member of the Egyptian team investigating the explosions blamed the Ghat. It did not identify the official. The newspaper said the evidence allegedly implicating the Libyan ferry was "circumstantial," but it quoted a British Foreign Office official as saying, "The finger seems to be pointing at the Ghat."

NEW YORK (AP) — Geraldine Ferraro and her husband owe about $60,000 to the Internal Revenue Service for inadvertently underpaying their joint 1978 income taxes, a campaign spokeswoman says.

Meanwhile, the New York Daily News reported that Ms. Ferraro's husband, real estate executive John Zaccaro, faces a court hearing Thursday for allegedly removing $100,000 from the estate of an elderly widow whose assets he was assigned to protect and lending the money to his own firm. The value of the estate went up more than $300,000 while Zaccaro was conservator.

On Saturday, Ms. Ferraro announced that Zaccaro, reversing an earlier decision, would make his income tax returns public on Monday. At the same time, Ms. Ferraro will comply with a federal disclosure law for vice presidential candidates.

Newsweek magazine said in its Aug. 27 edition that the underpayment of taxes resulted from a miscalculation by the couple's former accountant on $17,500 in profit Ms. Ferraro made when she sold her half-interest in a commercial building on the fringes of New York's Little Italy.

Newsweek said the amount owed could be as high as $250,000 with penalties and interest, but Patricia Bario, a Ferraro campaign spokeswoman, told The Associated Press that the amount was much less.

"The fact that an error was made (by the accountant) is true," she said, but "we're dealing with a $50,000, $60,000. That number ($250,000) is totally out of line." She said the couple's total debt would be about $60,000, including back taxes, interest and penalties.

IRS spokesman Larry Baldorf declined comment on the Newsweek report, saying, "The law forbids it."

The magazine said the accountant erroneously computed the capital gains tax based on a profit of $75,000, a mistake discovered by the couple's new accountant, Arthur Young Inc.

Mondale chides Reagan on joke

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Walter F. Mondale, appearing on the radio station that launched Ronald Reagan's broadcasting and acting career, chided the president Sunday for his off-the-cuff joke about bombing the Soviet Union.

"No dumb Mr. Reagan thought it was a joke," Mondale said in a speech originating from the studios of WHO Radio here.

On Aug. 12, during a microphone sound check for his regular Saturday radio broadcast, Reagan said, "My fellow Americans, I am pleased to tell you today that I have signed legislation that will outlaw Russia forever. We begin bombing in five minutes."

Racial unrest brings curfew

WAYNESBORO, Ga. (AP) — City officials decided Sunday to impose a dusk-to-dawn curfew for another night, following two nights of firebombings and unrest touched off by the death of a black man in police custody.

The disturbances, triggered by a news report of erroneous rumors that the man had been beaten to death, prompted 30 arrests. No injuries were reported.

Ministers appealed for peace during Sunday morning services. Burke County Sheriff Greg Coursey said that during the curfew, starting at 8:30 p.m., police would block off all streets into town and heavy patrols would be on the streets throughout the night.

The decision to extend the curfew followed a night of unrest, including three fires started within 15 minutes of each other, minor looting, broken windows in the downtown area and several random gunshots.

More than 100 officers were called in from surrounding jurisdictions and from the Georgia State Patrol. The National Guard was placed on standby. Waynesboro, which has about 6,000 people, is about 30 miles south of Augusta.

Police Chief H.L. Ivey said 30 people were arrested Saturday night and early Sunday for curfew violations, and three of them also were charged with firearms violations.

However You Save Money, There's A Way To Earn More At IB&T.

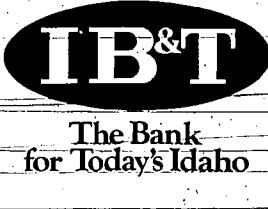

The Involved Investor.
Making your money work hard is what involved investors and IB&T have in common. Many financial consultants recommend keeping portions of your investments safe and another portion liquid. IB&T can satisfy both objectives. Keep at least three months' after-tax income in a high-earning money market account. Then keep 25% of your funds in a high-yielding certificate that is protected from loss by FDIC insurance. You stay in control because you can choose your rate, based upon term and principle.

The Solid Saver.
If you already have a good savings habit, you can keep it alive with a passbook account/certificate combination. Put your regular savings allocation into a passbook account. After a while, convert part to a high-yielding certificate. You can choose your rate, based upon term and principle. Plus, you can add to your certificate regularly at the same rate. Naturally, your funds are safe because of FDIC insurance.

The Self-Indulgent Spender.
Sometimes it's hard to save money, particularly when there are so many things to buy and so much to do. But a regular savings habit is the best way to get ahead. And IB&T can make it easy to start. Choose between the convenience of a passbook account, the high rates of certificates, or the flexibility of a money market account. After you open your account, as little as $10 each paycheck will keep your savings program healthy. And later, when you really need money, you'll have it.

Parks conferees point to problems

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — If participants at this past week's "Parks in the West" conference are correct, then National Parks Director Russell Dickenson's pronouncement that all is well within the system is not to be believed.

Dickenson opened the national parks officials' four-day gathering in Sun Valley by saying the national parks have never been in better shape, morale among the Park Service cadre is at a peak high and the system faces nothing but the roses of futures.

Yet repeatedly, the experts who gathered here said that Dickenson was somehow out of touch with reality. Many claimed morale is low and that parks and other reserved lands face imminent, serious threats if steps are not taken.

As writer Michael Frome pointed out in his closing address, the entire West lies at crossroads in the protection of its wildlands — national parks, wilderness areas, roadless areas, wild and scenic rivers and recreation areas.

Threats to these lands are many — the biggest being overuse by an affluent, mobile society that has chosen to urbanize the prized lands of the West.

Other threats to these reserved lands include air pollution and the development of resources along the borders.

For example, spectacular features like the geysers of Yellowstone can be altered by geothermal development outside the park. And Canyonlands National Park in Utah faces the possibility of a national nuclear waste repository within a few thousand feet of its border.

Organizers called this conference to begin a dialogue for developing an ethic that would direct the use and administration of reserved lands in the future — an ethic that would preserve those lands for future generations.

There was no intention to issue a policy statement at the end of the gathering, and one never came forth. It was simply a chance to exchange thoughts between those who will influence park policy.

Some participants — all with proven track records in the development and protection of parks — did offer solutions for protecting park lands. Inevitably, those solutions called for restricting the use of the lands — a solution that sometimes included entry fees to help meet maintenance bills.

This solution is troubling, primarily because it is accompanied by some people's attitude that these lands should not be preserved for everybody.

Yet the man who initiated the conference, Park Service Historian T. Allan Comp, said Saturday the park movement is a people movement and it must continue to involve all people.

"Man has been all over the place," he said. "I don't think acknowledging his presence hurts the integrity of any of those places."

Yellowstone quake still conjures memories

Powers recalls night of panic

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Although it was a quarter of a century ago, the night of Aug. 17, 1959, remains as vivid in the memory of Henry "Hank" Powers of Twin Falls as though it were yesterday.

The former Twin Falls high school coach and his late wife, Ann, a school teacher, spent their summers operating their summer resort in scenic Madison Canyon where Beaver Creek joins the Madison River northwest of Yellowstone Park. Their resort was near the center of the devastating earthquake that struck the Yellowstone National Park area 25 years ago.

"At about 11:37 that night, Powers was showing a late-arriving California family to their cabin at the canyon resort.

"It was one of our new modern log cabins with three bedrooms. I had just taken them in and was standing in the doorway ready to leave when I heard a roar like I had never heard before," Powers recalled Sunday.

"It was like standing under a railroad overpass when a train goes over, but worse. The walls of the cabin jumped sideways, bounced back again and I saw the people (the California guests) thrown into the air as the building literally bounced up and down.

"I was standing in the doorway, holding on to the door, but then I turned around as saw the (guests') car and large U-haul trailer jumping up and down like a pucking bronc. I landed on my right foot and the next time I landed it was on my head. I tried to get up on my hands and knees, but couldn't. I was able to roll over and get out of the way of the car and trailer that were still being thrown about.

"We had a cook stove in the cabin and I saw it tossed into the air, turn over and land upside down," he added.

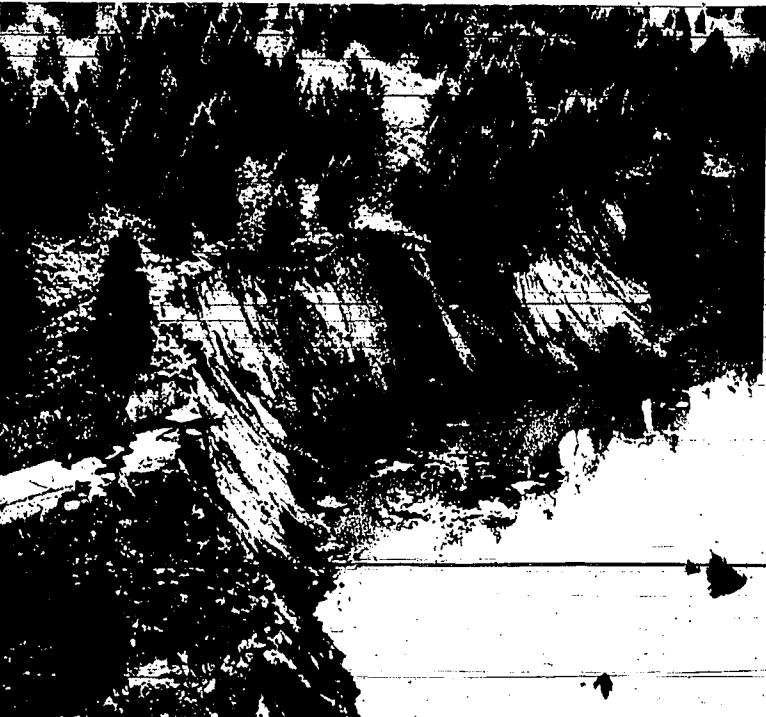

Powers said in 1959 there was talk of atomic bomb threats and at first he thought a bomb had dopped in the mountain border of Montana and Wyoming.

"Then I looked up on the mountain and saw the fir trees, and they were big ones, bending to the ground on one side and then the other.

"I knew then it was something else — an earthquake," Powers said.

When he could get up, Powers said he ran toward the cabin where he and his wife resided. "Giant rocks were rolling down the hillside and into the trees around our place. It was a bright moonlight and I could see everything coming down around me."

Powers said when he got the 40 to 50 yards to his cabin, his wife was crawling on hands and knees out of the damaged structure. The porch supports were broken and the porch was sagging. Water was pouring out of the ground through cracks, he said. A young girl who worked for the Powerses was hysterical. He said the gasoline operated power plant at the resort picked that time to run out of fuel.

A year later, the destruction from the Yellowstone earthquake of August 1958 was still visible in areas

"When I went to put in the gasoline I could hardly pour it in. I'm not sure if the ground was still shaking or if it was me shaking."

The Twin Falls man said he felt Hebgen Dam would undoubtedly break and he wanted to get everybody out. He said his property was about half a mile below Hebgen Lake, and he knew people in the area needed to get to higher ground. A small bridge across the river was still passable.

"I lined everybody up and drove across the bridge first. It held, so they followed. About a 100-yard-down-one-canyon-the-campers in the Beaver Creek Campground joined us. Another four and a half miles down the canyon, we passed the Rock Creek Campground. There we could see where a whole section of the mountain had slid into the camping area. I had been up there the night before and I knew there were four or five outfits with people camped just where the slide hit. I knew they were gone," Powers recalled.

He said survivors of the Rock Creek Campground also joined his group and he led them to what is now called Refuge Point on the mountain above the lake.

Powers recalls that at daylight the next morning he drove to the dam. He found water was spouting through breaks, but it was still holding.

He and his wife returned to their property, where he shut off the main butane gas tank to avoid an explosion and surveyed the damage.

By the next evening, road equipment reached the Madison Canyon and cut a temporary road around the mountainside above the lake. This allowed Powers and others in his group to head out toward Bozeman, Mont.

Powers said the quake simply tilted all of Hebgen Lake, extending the north shoreline about four to five feet and moving the south shoreline about that far into the lake.

Although the Powers property was severely damaged with broken chimneys, windows, fireplaces and walls, it was several days before the lake, now called Earthquake Lake, began to form and cover the entire resort. Within a few months, however, it had floated the cabins away, depositing some across the river in view of the highway. The Powers family lost the entire resort.

"I went back later that fall and worked for two days putting things in an undamaged room, thinking I might save them, but then it snowed, and the next time I went back it was gone. I don't go back anymore. I don't want to see it. It was a beautiful canyon but not anymore," Powers said his two sons, who were not at the resort that summer 25 years ago, feel the same way.

"We haven't been there in a long time."

WEST YELLOWSTONE, Mont. (AP) — It happened 25 years ago Aug. 17 near West Yellowstone, Mont., late at night when campers were asleep.

The earthquake toppled half a mountain, created a lake, killed perhaps 28 people and injured scores of others.

The scars remain today.

A Californian who had parked his car only 75 yards from where the slide came down told journalists: "I heard a terrible rumble and looked up. I saw the whole damn mountain crumbling. It was awful. I saw a lot of fighting during World War II, but I never heard such a fall of a roar."

"It was no wonder. Eighty-five million tons of rock, dirt and trees tore down the side of Madison Canyon to bury a campground and block the west end of the canyon, creating what is now known as Earthquake Lake. Then, the slide rode 600 feet up the opposite canyon wall. When the dust had settled, the slide was a mile long and 225 feet high.

The loss of Earthquake Lake is the lowest point it was shortly after the earthquake, because the Corps of Engineers cut a spillway in the natural dam. Now, a new road along the north shore of the lake gives people access to the area and to the Beaver Creek Campground. Rock Creek Campground, which was inundated by the slide, was never rebuilt, nor were the homes which were flooded as a result of the slide. The Madison Canyon Visitor Center, which tells of the event, is located right on the slide area.

Nine people were killed and 19 others were presumed dead.

The quake struck at 11:37 p.m., Monday, Aug. 17, 1959. It was later found to be 7.1 on the Richter scale, one of the most powerful earthquakes recorded in the U.S. Its center was located about 15 miles north of West Yellowstone, Mont. In places, the earth dropped nearly 21 feet, and a month later officials said the area had felt at least 200 aftershocks.

The quake was felt in several western states. Idaho State Journal headlines the next day screamed "Giant Landslide Near Hebgen Lake Traps Campers; 75 Feared Dead."

Journal reporter Quane Kenyon, now with The Associated Press in Boise, and Journal photographer Bob Jensen rushed to the scene in separate planes. Carl Hayden, then a reporter with The Salt Lake Tribune and one of the first newsmen on the scene, wrote a story about confusion and panic. "Let's get out of here," was written on the face of every straining motorist, he wrote.

"All we want to do is get back to Nevada as fast as our car will take us," Mrs. Blawie Fairchild, of Elko, told Hayden.

Kimberly man disputes parking zones

By ANNA WAGNER
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly City Council offered businessman Bob Hamby several alternatives to his Main Street parking problems, but he found none of the suggestions acceptable.

Hamby, who has a business at 102 Main Street, told the council he needed to parallel park in front of his business because of a handicap. It was noted that Hamby has received citations for illegally parking in a restricted zone. In front of his store, located on the northeast corner of Main where it intersects with Center Street, one of the busiest intersections of town.

Hamby said he needs to use the driveway leading to the front doors of his store for loading and unloading. He said he also needs to parallel park his van in front of the building, as he is handicapped and his maneuverability is impaired when his vehicle is parked at an angle, or parked at the side or back of the building where other entrances to his store are located.

City zoning ordinances, however, require a no-parking setback from street corners, designated by a red zone, to provide a clear span between the corner and spaces marked for vehicle parking.

Hamby's business is located within this red zone.

Hamby told the council he needed both a loading zone and a handicapped space and insisted he needed to parallel park in front of his business.

The council told Hamby such action was out of their authority and recommended he present his case before the zoning board and request a change in the city's parking ordinance.

Last month Hamby presented

Councilman Sterling Crothers a copy of a signed petition pertaining to parking privileges. However, the petition was not filed with the clerk's office as prescribed by law, and because the purpose of the petition was unclear, the council had directed the city clerk to write Hamby a letter, asking that he correctly file the petition and appear at the August council meeting to clarify his petition request.

As of the August meeting, the original petition had not been filed with the clerk, it was noted.

City leaders plan post-vote session

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council will begin piecing together a reaction to last Tuesday's double defeat at the polls at a work session and regular meeting Monday.

Also Monday, the council will move into final deliberations on the city's 1984-85 budget, with Mayor Emery Petersen planning to push for votes on several key capital improvement issues.

At the regular meeting, the council will hear the application of J.E. Enterprises and Burger King for a zoning ordinance amendment allowing playground equipment within the 35-foot setback from commercial streets.

The council will also hold a public hearing on a package of zoning and comprehensive plan changes, including an extension of the city industrial zone to the southeast of the sugar factory. The changes were proposed after a review of city land-use documents by the Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission.

The work session is slated to begin at 4 p.m. in the upstairs city hall conference room.

Among budget issues to be decided is whether the council will respond to a request by downtown business owners for the city to buy out the remaining debt on downtown city parking lots. The businessmen feel parking meters in the lots are an inconvenience to shoppers.

Other council also must decide what to do about the aging Twin Falls Senior Center.

Wright to take Kimberly council seat

KIMBERLY — Longtime Kimberly resident Jack Wright will complete the unexpired Kimberly City Council term of Michael Langford, who vacated his municipal seat in June.

Wright's appointment was approved at the recent council meeting, with Mayor Ron Jones naming Wright to posts on the library and recreation boards also held by Langford.

Wright, 43, was born and raised in Kimberly and is the owner of Kimberly Nurseries, west of town. This is his first experience in city government, although he is active in civic and business affairs in the community.

In an interview with The Times-News following the council meeting, Wright said he is "quite impressed with the dealings of city government."

"I was not fully aware of all the things that fall under the jurisdiction of city leaders," said the new councilman, who says he expects to find the council experience an interesting and educational one.

"I look forward to doing the best job I can for the people of Kimberly, and I guarantee I will have an opinion," Wright will serve through the fall of 1985, at which time his council seat comes up for election.

Grandfather miffed by television commercial love scenes

DEAR ABBY: I am a 76-year-old grandfather who watches TV with my teen-aged grandchildren. No TV commercial offends me as much as those close-ups of love scenes with long, drawn-out, open-mouthed kisses where the lovers gain and chew at each other.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

— DISGUSTED IN ISLAND POND, VT.
DEAR DISGUSTED: Read on for a letter from a pair of Vermont teenagers. They approve of the TV commercials, but raise another objection:
DEAR ABBY: We just read your column about the family who was watching a good, clean movie on television when a commercial came on for plenty liners, embarrassing the teen-age boy and girl. Right after that, a commercial for a douche came on, and the mother became so disgusted she turned off the set.
Well, we are two teenagers, 13 and 15, and we want to tell you how we feel about these commercials. We are sure most kids know about these products, and if they don't, they should. They are a part of nature and normal living, which is OK.

What we don't think is OK are those soap operas showing a married woman going to spend the weekend with somebody else's husband.
That's not right, and it shouldn't be shown on TV like it's a normal and natural thing to do. We don't think it sets a good example for us teen-agers.
— TWO TEENS IN CORINTH, VT.

with the lady in Texas whose husband always has to have a beer while he's driving!
I have had the same situation for years. We have two small children, and I am worried sick every time he takes them in the car. My husband has to have either hot coffee or a cold beer on the dash of his car or between his knees while he's driving. Plus, he smokes constantly. We've had many unpleasant outings because I've asked him not to drink, smoke and drive at the same time. He drives too fast and takes a lot of foolish chances.
I have known for a long time that he drinks too much, but he says beer is harmless. (Two or three six-packs a day?)
When he smokes, sometimes the end of his cigarette falls off and burns his clothes or the car seat. I get so nervous when he tries to drive, drink and smoke at the same time because safe driving requires total attention.

Please help me.
— FRUSTRATED
DEAR FRUSTRATED: Beer is not "harmless," especially the amount your husband consumes. Although you cannot control your husband's behavior, you can go to Al-Anon and learn how to deal with his drinking. I urge you to do it. The kids should not be "in the car" while "Daddy" is drinking and driving, and neither should you.
DEAR ABBY: My older sister had an argument with our parents because she didn't want them to look at her high school annual. She told them she wasn't ashamed of what her friends had written, but it was private.
Our parents said that as long as they were paying for the annual, they had a right to look at it. My sister solved the problem by giving our parents the price of the annual.

I have a little money saved from birthday and Christmas gifts, and I intend to do the same thing when I come to buying an annual.

Nothing could be easier than getting Mountain Bell long distance.

Thinking of getting long distance service for Idaho? Here's a way to make your effort a lot easier. Don't do anything.

You see, you already have Mountain Bell long distance. That means that you can call, right now, almost anywhere within central and southern Idaho. And it means you can take advantage of useful, convenient service features like these:

Discount calling periods. Save 60% on calls made weeknights from 11 pm to 8 am, all day Saturday, and Sunday until 5 pm. Save 40% weekdays from 5 pm to 11 pm and on many holidays if they fall on a weekday.

If you're a frequent long distance caller, you could save even more with Rate Savers™ Long Distance, which includes two Call Thrift Discount Plans. For just $4.16 a month, the One-Hour Option gives you an hour's worth of long distance calling, and then charges only 6¢ per minute when you exceed that hour. For $7.84 a month, the Two-Hour Option gives you two hours of long distance, and charges only 5¢ for each extra minute.

Full-time Operator services. Whenever the need arises, call Directory Assistance to find a number, or Operator Assistance for person-to-person, collect and third-number billed calls.

Telemarketing Training. Businesses can use Telemarketing to increase out-of-town sales, expand markets and control costs. We offer special Telemarketing workshops to help design, implement and use this service with maximum effectiveness.

Find out more with our free road map and long distance brochure. The brochure contains a handy road map of Idaho, with your long distance calling area clearly marked for quick reference. Plus it provides detailed information about our service, including the many additional features available for home and business use.

To receive your brochure, fill out the coupon below and send it in to us. Or call our "Let's Talk Center" toll-free at 1-800-555-3000. Discover how you can get the most out of service you already have.

What's what

Thirty percent of the population not only will steal if the opportunity arises, but will create the opportunity whenever possible. Forty percent will steal, if there's little danger of getting caught. Only 30 percent won't steal at all. No, that's not my opinion. It's the conclusion of a 20-year Pinkerton study.

Which sport came first — gymnastics or diving?

A — Gymnastics. In fact, gymnasts originated modern history's diving contests while practicing their stunts over water.

Even if you're never sick a day in your life, your biological clocks will limit how old you can grow. And the normal top limit, medics say, is 118 years.

LOVE AND WAR

Men are far less inclined than women to talk with members of the opposite sex about their first significant romantic experience. Our Love and War

War man got this from a Northwestern University study. He says the difference is due to holdover attitudes from yesteryear when women recalled their virginity with wistful tenderness, the way they remembered childhood dolls, white men thought of their early innocence, if at all, sardonically, much as they regarded some Q. Every time a motorcycle gets into a crash, its fuel lines leak gasoline all over the place, right?

A. In 62 percent of the accidents, that happens.

In 1928, the Texas Bankers Association tacked up this poster in every bank in the state: "Reward ... $5,000 for dead bank robbers ... Not one cent for live ones."

CUOMO'S COMEBACK

A columnist in Albany, N.Y., wrote an unflattering piece about New York Gov. Mario Cuomo's dog. The Governor responded: "I read the column about Ginger, and I want you to know she thinks of you as a fire hydrant with a tie."

Q. Of all the literature ever produced in this country, what book best typifies the American way of life?

A. The old Sears-Roebuck catalog, I'd guess.

Rabbit is all white meat. Might mention you like French cuisine, try rabbit. No other national devour so much rabbit as do the French. Thirteen pounds per person per year, to be specific.

Craig argues Ferraro action

GOP, Mormons patch up past

By MICHAEL WHITE
The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — At its 180th national convention, the Republican Party approved a platform plank calling for abolition of the "twin relics of barbarism" — slavery in the South and Mormon polygamy.

But relations between the Republicans and the Mormons have improved to the point that when the GOP opens its national convention this week, Utah's mostly Mormon delegation will be sitting on the front row, center aisle.

The preferred seating — says Utah GOP Chairman Charles Akelrow, is a reward for delivering more than 70 percent of the Utah vote to Ronald Reagan in 1980 — the largest plurality of any state — and for sweeping the state's congressional delegation clean of Democrats.

Moreover, a recent newspaper poll showed 69 percent of Utah voters support Reagan's bid for reelection.

And a separate poll indicated that either of the two Republican candidates going into Tuesday's state primary hold a decided edge over their possible Democratic opponents in the race for governor, the only office denied the GOP since a conservative tide swept across Utah politics in the 1970s election.

"The great phenomenon since 1978 has been the coalescence of the Republican voter with the Mormon voter," says J.D. Williams, a professor of political science at the University of Utah.

Indeed, doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints condemning such political issues as abortion, pornography and the Equal Rights Amendment have combined with the conservative ideology of the church hierarchy to turn Utah into a stronghold of conservative politics.

In sharp contrast to the warm treatment Utah Republicans will be receiving at the GOP national convention this week, the state's beleaguered Democrats were shunted to the back of Moscone Convention Hall and quartered in a "hotel" without air conditioning during the Democratic national convention in San Francisco last month.

Utah Democratic Party Chairman Patrick Shea believes the Republican success is due at least in part to the tendency of Mormon candidates for public office to blend religion with rock-ribbed conservatism. The result makes the two indistinguishable to many voters, Shea said.

State Rep. Akelrow sees the similarities between the faith-and-Republican politics as coincidental. "This is a conservative state and it's influenced by Mormon philosophy. It just happens that the Mormon Church is on the same side" as the GOP, Akelrow said.

But the party did not mold its philosophy to emulate the Mormon Church. These positions happen to be the same among Republicans all across the country.

Akelrow said conservative Democrats, such as Gov. Scott Matheson, have been successful despite the decline of the party itself. Matheson was favored to win a third term despite GOP strength in Utah before he announced he would retire when his present term ends in January.

BOISE (AP) — Rep. Larry Craig says Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro may have violated House ethics rules by not disclosing an interest in her husband's business.

When Congress goes back into session Sept. 5, the House Ethics Committee will be under great pressure to investigate Ferraro's case, Craig, R-Idaho, said Saturday during taping of KTVB's Viewpoint program in Boise.

A House investigation could even lead to Justice Department action, Craig said.

In the case of Craig's colleague, Republican George Hansen, the Justice Department first investigated disclosure violations, then successfully prosecuted Hansen, who has appealed a conviction and sentence of five to 15 months in prison and a $40,000 fine.

Craig noted reports that Ferraro was an officer and part owner of one of her husband's real estate companies. He said that seems to contradict her claim that she qualified for an exemption under one of three conditions — that she did not know about the association with, or benefit from her husband's financial interests.

"It's going to be awfully hard for a lot of us to believe she meets the three-part test," Craig said.

He said Ferraro should make a full disclosure of her finances, as she has promised to do on Monday.

"I have to. My wife has to, because she is my wife," he said. ("Ferraro has not done that. The American public deserves to know about her, and her husband.")

Hansen's case is different, Craig said. Hansen told the Ethics Committee that he and his wife, Connie, had legally separated their finances. Hansen also notified the committee that he would not file certain information, while Ferraro simply did not file information on her husband's business, Craig said.

Suit may hurt farmers

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Water Users Association is calling for a wilderness bill containing no more than $28,000 acres because of a lawsuit pending in Colorado Federal Court.

Association executive director Sherl says the suit, brought by the Sierra Club against Agriculture Secretary John Block, could ultimately affect Idaho irrigators.

The suit alleges that the federal government has failed to "assert" federal reserved water rights to fulfill the wilderness purposes of all present and future wilderness areas of Colorado, Chapman said.

The Sierra Club believes the federal government should prohibit irrigation in rivers and waterways down stream from wilderness areas to protect the habitat of anadromous fish, he said.

If the Sierra Club wins the federal suit in Colorado, Idaho rivers eventually could be prohibited from irrigation use to protect the habitat of anadromous fish, he said.

Federal reserved water rights take priority over state permits, he said.

PG-13 Rating Introduced

A new rating category is in place as of July 1. This new category is inserted between the current PG and R ratings. It is designated as "PG-13." Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for attendance of children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.

The revised five-category system of the voluntary film industry rating program is now as follows:

- G General Audiences, all ages admitted.
- PG Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.
- PG-13 Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.
- R Restricted, under-17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.
- X No one under 17 admitted.

All films rated after July 1 will be given ratings under the new five-category system.

Man convicted for slaying

CALDWELL (AP) — Larry Donald Davis has been convicted of second-degree murder for the bludgeoning death of a Kennewick, Wash. man.

Davis, 35, of Caldwell, was found guilty of hitting Benjie McNair, 20, over the head twice with a metal bar March 29 at the McNair home of Susan Maxwell, Davis' former girlfriend.

A Canyon County jury of nine men and three women reached the verdict shortly before 3 p.m. Saturday, after 7½ hours of deliberations that began Friday night and resumed Saturday.

Davis had been charged with first-degree murder, but the jury found him guilty of the lesser offense, which carries a maximum penalty of life in prison.

McNair's father, Benjamin McNair, complimented prosecutors for their handling of the weeklong trial but said he was disappointed with the jury verdict.

"I still feel he was guilty of what he did. He took a young boy out who wasn't grown up yet — and here he was, a grown man," McNair said. "He was just at the wrong place at the wrong time."

Davis claimed in his testimony that he struck McNair only after McNair lunged at him.

Ms. Maxwell, the only other witness to the killing, said McNair had done nothing more threatening to Davis than attempt to shake his hand. She said McNair was seated in a chair when Davis struck him.

Davis showed no emotion as 3rd District Judge Roger Williams read the verdict, but Public Defender Van Bishop later said that Davis was upset that he was found guilty of second-degree murder.

Author on relations speaks

BOISE (AP) — Theodora Wells, a public information and communication firm, will be the keynote speaker at Idaho National Engineering Laboratory's Women's Equality Day.

Wells will open both sessions of the conference Thursday and Friday. The conference is the fifth held at INEL in recognition of the day women won the right to vote in the United States, said officials of EG&G Idaho, Wells, president of a management consulting firm which specializes in management and communication processes, will present ideas on non-defensive communication.

She has presented similar programs for industry, government agencies, universities and professional groups, officials said.

That's the distance travelled last year by these perfect service carriers to deliver

The Times-News

To these carriers and our other 233 carriers and motor route drivers, thanks for a job well done!

For an average of 32 consecutive months, these perfect-service carriers have delivered 626,816 copies of The Times-News without receiving a complaint. In performing their service, they have travelled a distance of 11,680 miles. That's a lot of shoe-leather! If 626,816 copies of The Times-News were laid end-to-end, they would stretch from Twin Falls to Caldwell, Idaho.

We appreciate these carriers, and know you do, too!
