Montana fires roar out of control

By TOM LACEKY The Associated Press

HELENA, Mont. — A swarm of blazes, most of them out of control, continued to rage Monday in central and eastern Montana.

In that region, 400 acres of range and timberland have been blackened since Saturday, officials said.

More than 200 residents of Nelson and York, two small communities northeast of Helena, were urged to evacuate at mid-afternoon Monday as the biggest of a half-dozen fires near the state capital swept eastward and leaped across the Missouri River ahead of 70 mph winds, said Lewis and Clark County Undersheriff Ed Schilds.

"We're trying to save lives and not worry ing so much about property," Schilds said. "So far we've not lost any houses."

The fire, reported about noon in mountains 15 miles north of Helena, leap-frogged across ridge tops and quickly covered several thousand acres, he said.

Meanwhile, the state's largest blaze, covering 24,000 acres of range and timberland, broke loose again Monday afternoon and began "a major run" ahead of powerful winds, said Don Kendall of Billings, area manager for the Department of State Lands. The fire "has blown out the southeastern corner and is making a major run," said Kendall. He said two National Guard helicopters had been called to scout the sparsely populated area ahead of the fire.

The trouble is that there are so many fires all over the state that the resources are drying up fast," Kendall said. "Hand crews can't do it — it's going to take equipment. And more than that, it's going to take a break in the winds. The equipment can't keep up with it."

Midway between Helena and Great Falls, another blaze erupted at midmorning and mushroomed to 700 acres by early afternoon, threatening stands of commercially valuable timber.

Winds also revved a fire that had been contained last week at the eastern edge of Glacier National Park. It swelled to 2,600 acres Monday despite efforts of 500 firefighters, said Bureau of Land Management spokesman Bill Bishop.

In eastern Montana, a range fire east of Miles City leaped partially completed fire lines at midday and grew to 11,500 acres, said Dale Laney, Custer County emergency services coordinator. Laney said there was no hope of containing it Monday, although cooler nighttime temperatures might slow it.

He said a fire a few miles north also had broken past firefighters and had grown to about 400 acres.

In neighboring North Dakota, low moisture, temperatures approaching 100 and windy weather led authorities Monday to list the danger of fires in 28 western and central counties as extremely high. Open fires were banned in the affected counties.

One fire was reported Monday near Berthold, N.D., and was extinguished.

In the Glacier Park blaze, more than 500 firefighters were trying to protect several houses, Bishop said. At least two had burned, he said.

Firefighters were supported by pumper trucks, bulldozers and three helicopters "that can't get off the ground because of the winds," he said. Bishop said winds were 20 to 25 mph and gusting to 40 mph.

Winds had prevented use of airplanes to dump chemical retardants on the fire Sunday, as well.

A wind-whipped fire was also burning out of control in the Deschutes National Forest in Oregon, prompting evacuation of a nearby subdivision as a precaution, county-sheriff's officials said. No one was injured.

Senate study finds balance shifts to Iraq

By DON OBERDORFER The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The military balance in the long-running Persian Gulf war has shifted in favor of Iraq as the United States and the Soviet Union have "tilted" toward that regime.

At the same time, Iran has suffered from a worldwide arms embargo, a Senate Foreign Relations Committee study reported Monday.

A study by five committee staff members did not predict an early end to the conflict, which will be four years old next month. The report did say, however, that "several key Iranian leaders appear to be reaching the conclusion that the costs of continuing military efforts are becoming too great" and that Iran's policy toward the war "appears to be in a state of flux."

issued as a Panamanian oil tanker was reported hit by a rocket in the Gulf Monday, The Associated Press said it was the 42nd commercial ship attacked in the strategic waterway so far this year and reported speculation among shipping sources that Iranian warplanes had carried out the latest attack.

The study said the Western powers, including the United States, might consider intervening to escort commercial shipping or clear mines if the tanker war should escalate, and that in this case, U.S. air attacks on Iranian military airfields might be necessary to protect the operation.

Nonetheless, the study said, "U.S. military commanders in the region don't envision any likely contingency in which the full array of U.S. forces might be needed."

A State Department official who has been following developments in the war described it as "a stalemate at a higher plateau" of military action than when 1984 began. He said there has been "a shift in the momentum" toward the Iraqi side but that "neither side has been successful in achieving its objectives."

Inflation catches Americans' income gains

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans' per capita income rose 35.1 percent from 1979 to 1983, but the increase barely kept ahead of inflation, the government reported Monday.

The income gain was led by oil-rich Alaska and several New England states where new high-technology plants boosted pay checks. Wyoming, Michigan and other states hit hard by the 1981-82 recession had the smallest gains.

The report by the Commerce Department said per capita income nationally rose to $11,635 in 1983, a 5.1 percent increase over 1982 and a 35.1 percent jump from the $8,651 per capita earnings of 1979.

During the same period, prices were going up 31.4 percent, the department said, leaving the gain in inflation-adjusted income at 3.7 percent.

This compared with an 18.3 percent inflation-adjusted increase in the previous four-year period. From 1975 to 1979, per capita income rose by 48.1 percent while prices were going up 29.8 percent.

The per capita income gains during the 1980s were paced by Alaska, which posted a 48.4 percent increase, giving residents of that state a per capita income of $17,194, the highest in the country.

Rounding out the 10 states with the largest percentage increases from 1979 through 1983 were Massachusetts, 47 percent; New Hampshire, 46.4 percent; Connecticut, 45.6 percent; North Dakota, 45.5 percent; New Jersey, 43.4 percent; Virginia, 43.3 percent; Rhode Island, 42.3 percent; New York, 42.1 percent; and Maine, 41.5 percent.

Idaho ranked 42nd on the list, with a per capita income of $9,555 in 1983, an increase of 29.4 percent.

Among other Western states, Utah was 48th at $8,993, an increase of 26.6 percent; Nevada ranked 10th at $12,451, up 25.3 percent, and Oregon was 30th at $10,740, up 23.8 percent.

New England ranked No. 1 among eight regions in the country for income growth during this period with five of the six states placing in the top 10.

Howard Friedenberger, a Commerce Department analyst, attributed the success to strong growth in manufacturing. "A lot of it is high-tech — electronics, scientific instruments," he said.

Generally, the states with the biggest increases had large gains in earnings in manufacturing, construction and private service industries, he reported said.

Wyoming had a 20.9 percent gain in per capita income from 1979-83, the lowest of any state. Also in the bottom 10 were Iowa, 23.1 percent; Oregon, 23.8 percent; Michigan, 24.1 percent; Nevada, 25.3 percent; Indiana, 24.7 percent; Utah, 26.6 percent; Illinois, 27.3 percent; West Virginia, 28.8 percent, and Washington, 29 percent.

The low gains were blamed primarily on the 1981-82 recession, which was particularly severe in the Great Lakes region. Oregon's lumber industry suffered from the steep housing slump while several Western states including Wyoming were hurt when the boom in energy exploration cooled, Friedenberger said.

While Alaska retained its No. 1 spot in per capita income, Mississippi residents were again last among the 50 states with an average income of $8,098. The 1983 figures were revised from an April report, because more complete information has been obtained.

Here by region are the 1983 per capita figures, the state ranking for 1983 and the percent increase from 1979:

Electrodes in brain curb eating

CHICAGO (AP) — Impulses from an electrode implanted in the brain may help curb the appetite of dangerously obese people who have had no success with other methods of weight control, a researcher says.

Dr. Frederick D. Brown, a neurosurgeon at the University of Chicago, said tests on animals have shown that brain stimulation can switch off the desire to eat.

Brown said the impulses could help stimulate hunger, as well, and similar research might eventually help combat anorexia, a sometimes fatal eating disorder in which victims starve themselves.

Surgery to implant the electrode is considered a last-ditch attempt to save patients who have had no results in controlling weight with other methods, he said.

This operation is not for someone who wants a better figure or is just 20 pounds overweight," he said. "It is intended for the morbidly obese, people who are 100 percent above ideal weight or anorexic patients who are dying."

Such surgery is riskier than that required for the electrode implant, he said.

Patients undergoing surgery for the implantation would remain awake, Brown said, and receive only a local anesthetic on the scalp.

"If you forget the fact that it's your brain, it would be a similar experience to going to the dentist," he said.

The electrode would be inserted into the hypothalamus through a hole in the skull, and its electrical leads would run under the scalp to behind the ear. The leads would then be fastened under the skin to a receiver in the chest.

A battery-operated transmitter worn on the belt would activate the device.

Ron Wyatt holds Ark fragment

'Ark' specimens on way to lab

NEW YORK (AP) — Samples of rock and decayed wood that biblical archaeologists hope will prove the existence of Noah's Ark have been brought to this country for laboratory analysis, an expedition spokesman said Monday.

Expedition member Ron Wyatt of Nashville, Tenn., said the samples, taken last week from the southwestern face of Mount Ararat in Turkey, would be analyzed at Galbraith Laboratory in Knoxville, Tenn., to determine their content and approximate age.

Wyatt, a nurse-anesthetist and an archaeology buff, said a boat-shaped formation first was spotted during a NATO aerial survey in 1959. The remnants were preserved in lava, he said, but began disintegrating after a 1979 earthquake left them partially exposed to seeping water.

He said metal tests indicated the rocks may contain oxidized bronze, copper- or tin that could have been used as metal brackets on a boat. Petrified wood also was found at the site, he said.

"There is no room for doubt in my mind that this is a boat," said Wyatt. "The question is: Is this boat Noah's Ark or is this boat there for some other reason?"

Wyatt and fellow explorers in Ankara said the formation they uncovered corresponds in size to the Ark — about 450 feet long. Religious accounts date the Ark at 2450 B.C.

The Bible's book of Genesis says that after a great flood inundated the Earth, the Ark with its cargo of animals came to rest on the "mountains of Ararat." The Moslem holy book, the Koran, also mentions both the flood and the ark.

Earlier in the day, Turkey's minister of culture and tourism said in Ankara that American expeditioners would be forbidden from removing the samples from his country if there was a chance they might have historical value.

said as he displayed a bag of rocks at a news conference.

Wyatt said the samples were obtained during an expedition that involved former astronaut James Irwin and members of three groups: the High Flight Foundation of Colorado Springs, Colo.; The Loud Cry of Nashville, Tenn., and International Expeditions of Houston, Texas.

However, the semi-official Turkish news agency Anadolu quoted Irwin as saying: "I could not find the Ark, but I will return next year to continue my searches."

Irwin remained in Ankara, Turkey, and could not be reached by The Associated Press for comment.

Following the Turkish government's 1982 decision to lift a 10-year-old ban on climbs up the mountain by foreigners, fundamentalist Christians rushed to the area to search for the legendary Ark.

Wyatt said he hopes to return in September or October to further explore the site.

Bush pursues arms policies

By JIM DRINKARD
The Associated Press

Vice President George Bush accused Walter Mondale Monday of being so overzealous for an arms control agreement with the Soviets that he would "do almost anything to get it," and added: "We are not."

"We have a major difference with Walter Mondale on defense spending and we have a major difference with him on how one negotiates," Bush said at the unveiling of a new experimental aircraft at Grumman Aerospace Corp. in Calverton, N.Y.

The accusation that Mondale is soft on defense came as Mondale was raking President Reagan for playing "dodgeball" on the issue of federal budget deficits, and as the lobbying group Common Cause was pressing federal officials to make Reagan's campaign — not the taxpayers — pay for the president's trip to Chicago last week.

In several appearances Monday, Bush hit at what he termed Mondale's weakness on defense, including the Democrat's support for a freeze on nuclear weapons and scrapping of several major weapons programs.

"Mr. Mondale wants to give up the MX (missile), wants to freeze up the B-1 (bomber), wants to give up right now — which actually would lock inferiority on our allies in Europe on intermediate nuclear force weapons," Bush said.

"Mr. Mondale is so hot for an agreement right now that he will do almost anything to get it," he said in an interview on CBS. "We are not."

Later, at the unveiling of the X-29 experimental fighter plane, he said: "Some people say we should be cancelling our new weapons systems to achieve successful arms reductions. We ought not ... without Soviet weapon concessions in return."

But a Mondale foreign policy adviser, Barry Carter, said Reagan and Bush "have trouble telling the truth" on the issue, denying Bush's claim that Mondale wants to do away with the Trident 2 missile submarine and halt deployment of intermediate-range missiles in Europe.

REV. JESSE JACKSON
Moving into line

"Mondale is for a strong defense, but he believes it is also wise to discuss with the Soviets possible limits on arms," said Carter.

The presidential campaign was busy on other fronts as well, with the official Labor Day start of the campaign season still a week away.

Mondale, speaking at a campaign forum in Dallas, said Reagan failed to address the subject of budget deficits during his speech to the GOP convention in the same city last week, adding: "It is time to stop dodging."

He reiterated his pledge to cut federal red ink by two thirds during his first term as president and said "those deficits must come down."

The campaign of the Democratic nominee and his running mate, Geraldine Ferraro, picked up new support from former independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson, who Mondale aides said was to endorse the Democrat on Tuesday in Illinois. Sources said there was the possibility that Anderson's Independent National Unity Party could also nominate Mondale and make available $7.8 million in public campaign funds.

And the Rev. Jesse Jackson, who failed in his bid to win the Democratic nomination, said he was "anxious to support the ticket" and said he hoped an agreement on issues and campaign staffing would be reached in a meeting with Mondale Tuesday that would bring about his enthusiastic support for the campaign.

Also on Monday, the self-styled citizens lobby Common Cause asked the Federal Election Commission to force the Reagan campaign to pick up the tab for last week's presidential trip to speak to the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Chicago.

The group contends the trip — during which Reagan defended his defense record and questioned that of Mondale — was political in nature and should not be paid for by taxpayers. But presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the trip was deemed "official" and there was no intention to reverse the billing.

Reagan addressed a group of teachers and school administrators on Monday in Washington, announcing that he has ordered a nationwide search for a teacher to be the first citizen passenger to go into space aboard the space shuttle.

"When that shuttle lifts off, all America will be reminded of the crucial role teachers and education play in the life of our nation," Reagan told the group, selected from some of the nation's outstanding public secondary schools.

But Mary H. Futrell, president of the National Education Association, called the announcement "a little absurd. Rather than spend a lot of money to send a teacher into space, the president might better put some resources into the nation's classrooms ... This just demonstrates his superficiality with respect to his education program."

Both the NEA and the other major teachers union, the American Federation of Teachers, have endorsed Mondale.

Feminist appears on 2 tickets

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — Feminist Sonia Johnson, who blames much of the world's troubles on "the imbalance in the power between men and women," is running for president as the candidate of the Peace and Freedom Party.

Ms. Johnson, 48, clad in a T-shirt and designer jeans, accepted the nomination during the party's weekend convention here, which attracted about 150 people.

The candidate gained national attention in 1979 when her support of the Equal Rights Amendment led to her ouster from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The Peace and Freedom Party platform recommends no income taxes for people receiving less than $45,000 a year.

Primary vote of little help

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Although a second-place tie vote was broken by absentee ballots Monday, officials say they may have to have all four candidates for a school board opening on the general election ballot.

CACHE COUNTY Clerk Seth Allen said when votes were counted last Tuesday, incumbent Robert Toolson was the winner with 335 votes.

But there was a tie between the second-place candidates, John Manning and Clifford Craig, who each had 186 votes. A fourth candidate, Layne Beck, had 35.

The two absentee ballots counted Monday split between Toolson and Craig.

Reagan sets Western trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will kick off his reelection campaign officially next week with a four-day trip to California, Utah and Illinois, White House spokesman Larry Speakes announced Monday.

Speakes said Reagan would travel to his home state Sunday and open his campaign with a Labor Day speech to a rally of supporters in Orange County in Southern California.

From there, the president is to address another rally in San Jose and fly to Salt Lake City, where he will address the American Legion convention at the Salt Palace on Sept. 4 before flying to Illinois.

The president, who stopped in Chicago to address the Veterans of Foreign Wars on his way home from the Republican National Convention on Friday, will visit that city again to address a conference on the future Sept. 5.

Anti-Reagan protest gains approval

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Salt Lake County's all-Republican board of commissioners Monday gave its permission to an anti-Reagan group to stage a protest the day before the president is to address the American Legion here.

The group, Rock Against Reagan, plans to sponsor rock music groups, speakers and films critical of the administration's policies, said attorney Brian Barnard.

A bit of capitalism helps valley towns

A common cliché in the Magic Valley's economy is that some of the valley's smaller towns are dying, victims of shrinking populations, improved transportation, the growth of regional trading centers like Twin Falls.

Some communities are perhaps facing bleak futures, but not all. Look, for example, at what's happening in Glens Ferry and Halley, both of which are experiencing positive economic changes.

The stories of the two communities were reported Sunday in The Times-News. In Glens Ferry, businesses are being spruced up and small companies are talking of expanding. In Halley, the community is growing as the county's trading and government center.

The two communities are very different, but the resurgence in each has common elements among their people, including pride in the community—a willingness to risk and a whole lot of work. In short, what we're seeing here is a bit of old-fashioned entrepreneurship and grass-roots capitalism. Kind of nice, isn't it?

$5 million for the arts

A recent article in The Wall Street Journal on lovers of the arts in Washington outlines how the Senate is considering a $5 million appropriation to be used to support the arts in the capital. The amendment has the backing of a number of normally conservative senators whose wives are arts supporters there, Catherine Stevens, Louise McClure and Mary Andrews.

The amendment passed a Senate appropriations subcommittee, chaired by Sen. James McClure, on July 27. The transcript of the subcommittee includes the following exchange:

"My wife is deeply interested in the Children's Museum, as is yours, Mr. Chairman," said Sen. Mark Andrews, R-N.D.

"That's exactly why we're trying to do this — so our wives can talk to somebody else," said Chairman James McClure, R-Idaho.

"We don't need to articulate the obvious, Mr. Chairman," concluded Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska.

Four-letter word has many meanings

DALLAS — The four-letter word uttered most frequently at this decorous convention was F-E-A-R.

Fear was the epithet the Republicans (flying at the opposition. It's the buzzword they used to sting the Democrats.

"This course appeared in history as many speeches as the name Ronald Reagan. Jack Kemp said the Democrats had 'nothing to offer but fear.' Gerald Ford said Mondale is 'just peddling fear.' The President echoed it in his rally, saying that 'the D in Democrats stands for doom and despair,' and in his acceptance speech described the Democrats' choice as 'pessimism, fear and limits.'"

By Friday morning I fully expected to see T-shirts reading "Democrats are Scaredycats."

This was the convention at which the GOP tried to re-monetize itself the Great Optimistic Party and delegates were absolutely required to be upbeat about the future. Any fear, even a modest little qualm, was portrayed as a loss of courage tinged with whimphiness.

There was nothing unique about this. The "Ins" always talk about how great things are and the "outs" always disagree in politics. But this year it should be asked just what kinds of fears the Democrats were mungering out in San Francisco.

They were not worrying about their shadows, but about the bomb and the deficit. If things are going "great," the Republicans emphasize the "great," and the Democrats emphasize the "guns."

But there's hardly a word to be heard in Dallas

about bombs or deficits. Fifty-three percent of the delegates talk of a tree, but the term must have crystallized on the lips of party heavies. It never got into the air. The conservatives are imbued with the notion of peace-through-strength-through-more-missiles. If you talk to enough delegates, you come back with a refrain: Who's afraid of the Big Bad Boom?

From all I can gather, this will go down in history as the What-Me-Worry? Campaign. You couldn't find a better city (actually this isn't a city, it's a Metropolis from which to set off on such a trail. Texas is such an optimistic, carefree state that it's actually legal to drink while you are driving. Hey, no problem.

Frankly, I am underwhelmed by Republican optimism. There is, at least to my taste, something profoundly pessimistic about the notion that we can only improve our economy by sacrificing the

There's something equally bleak in the belief that the only solution to the world's problems are militaristic.

The obsession with competition, the way in which this convention regards international relations as an Olympic event with one winner and the rest losers, is not one that makes me sleep easy, although apparently it helps the President to take his naps.

There are, I hesitate to say, some things worth worrying about. Jesse Jackson said during the campaign: "We are alive this morning because the Russians chose not to bomb us last night; and they are alive this morning because we chose not to bomb them. But as Reagan would respond, 'There they go again,' spreading fear like a plague.

The Republican message is of course tailor-made for its standard bearer, the personification of good cheer. It's left to the Democrats to suggest that if he's so blissful "perhaps he doesn't know the seriousness of the situation."

In the next months, while the Republicans try to make us feel good, the Democrats will try to make us anxious.

It's a political Disney movie in the making: Grumpy is a Democratic dwarf, Happy belongs to the Republicans (not to mention Sleepy) and the voters have to decide who's Dopey.

I don't envy the Democratic role. Republicans are describing a banquet; Democrats are pointing out the people who are locked outside and hungry. The Republicans are painting a bright future; the Democrats are warning about the nuclear winter.

It's not surprising that Reagan makes for very easy listening. He makes it sound almost un-American to worry. Prophecy, after all, were never very popular.

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe.

Civil Rights Bill of '84 a liberal grab for federal power

WASHINGTON — Today's five-minute quiz: Do you manage a medium-sized grocery store? Do you own a pharmacy? Do you run a baseball team using a city-owned park or stadium?

Are you a farmer receiving any kind of federal subsidies on crops or irrigation? Do you rent property to low-income families who receive rental vouchers?

If any of these definitions fits your status — and the list could be much extended — let me suggest that you get in touch at once with your U.S. senator.

You are about to be blindsided. You are about to be made subject to the full panoply of federal civil rights rules and regulations, including the paperwork, the assurances of compliance, the affirmative action programs, the liability for civil suits, the legal expenses and the endless correspondence that bureaucracy demands.

It is astounding that relatively so little attention has been paid to S. 2568, which bears the title of the Civil Rights Act of 1984. The bill is now actively pending in committee. A companion bill already has passed the House by a vote of 375-32 on June 28. No bill having greater support upon more people has come along since the basic Civil Rights Act was adopted 20 years ago.

Dr. Michael Horowitz, general counsel of the Office of Management and Budget, says that the bill "would largely eliminate the remaining distinctions between federal and state, and federal and private, concerns."

The respected Center for Judicial Studies here in Washington warns that in its present form the bill "will effect a radical and massive expansion of federal power in the subject areas."

By way of background, it should be said that the Supreme Court last February made an important decision in a case involving Grove City College in Pennsylvania. The college received no direct federal aid, but some of its students received "Pell grants" for their tuition.

The 3rd U.S. Circuit held that grants to the students constituted federal financial assistance to the institution as a whole, and thus made every aspect of the college's operations subject to federal law prohibiting discrimination in higher education. The Supreme Court, with only two members dissenting, reversed the lower court. The high court held that the Pell grants affected only the particular "program or activity" concerned, in this case the college's financial-aid program.

The pending Senate bill would not merely nullify the Grove City decision on private colleges. It would do much more. The bill effectively would broaden four major statutes banning discrimination on account of age, sex, handicap or race.

It would do this by extending the reach of civil rights enforcement programs to any "recipient" of "federal financial assistance." In the construction of statutes, definitions are everything. No amount of "legislative history," no assurances by floor managers, nothing that is said in debate counts more than the words in the statute itself. Here the word "recipient" is sweepingly defined.

It embraces not only the states, their towns and counties and institutions, but also any "private agency, institution or organization, or other entity" receiving federal financial assistance "directly or through another entity or person."

Let me go back to the opening questions. The plain language of the Senate bill would snare the grocer who benefits from the food stamps traded by his customers. Prescriptions for persons on Medicare and Medicaid constitute assistance to the pharmacy. Every sports team that plays on publicly owned property would be subject to affirmative action requirements of federal law. Farmers, ranchers and landlords are among millions of citizens who become recipients of federal assistance "directly or through another entity or person."

The pending bill has 63 Senate sponsors, among them such usually sound fellows as Baker of Tennessee, Dolner of Kansas and Stevens of Alaska. It is mystifying.

The only charitable explanation that comes to mind is that many of the sponsors were misled into believing the bill was an innocent little measure intended only to restore the status quo ante.

There is nothing innocent about the measure. Such ultra-liberal sponsors as Kennedy of Massachusetts and Cranston of California know exactly what they are doing.

There is the ultimate grab for federal power; and unless the bill can be sensibly amended or wisely deferred, their grab will succeed next month.

James Kilpatrick writes his column, "A Conservative View," from Washington.

Letters/Visitor's comment-snap judgment based on hasty visit to a few sites

Parks observations valid

On Aug. 16 an article by Dave Lewis headlined "Idaho Lacks Pride in Parks" appeared in your paper. It quoted Robin Winks, a professor of history at Yale University. Mr. Winks detailed his disappointments in Idaho's parks while on a panel at the Parks in the West Conference in Sun Valley.

Readers might have the impression that Mr. Winks was talking about Idaho's State Parks system. In two days he visited five sites. Only one of those — Three Island Crossing — is a state park. He was concerned about a camp in the area commemorating the Oregon Trail Crossing. That facility is not a part of Three Island Crossing State Park. Nothing in Mr. Lewis' article would indicate that the professor had actually toured the park at all.

No Idaho citizen is pleased to hear about litter and graffiti in any park, state or local. But to say that Idaho lacks pride in its parks is a snap judgment based on a hasty visit to a handful of sites.

As professionals in park administration, we have pride in our work. We admit though, that Mr. Winks has some valid observations. Capital improvements are not adequately maintained and there are not enough operation dollars to keep areas at a level that we can be proud of. Support by the public for adequate budgets is critical. The individuals that control the purse strings on the local and state levels need to know the people of Idaho are proud of their parks.

I invite Mr. Winks to visit Idaho's parks when he has more time. That will take a large commitment on his part, though. To spend a single day in each state park will take almost three weeks.

Also noted in the article was a visiting associate professor of Wildland Recreation Management at the University of Idaho, Michael Frome. He says the State Parks Board is to blame for not responding to the wishes of the people. We disagree. The board has been doing an excellent job given the limited financial resources that are available. The members are very responsive to the public wishes.

State employees taxpayers

Whenever the state has budgetary problems, it seems that Mr. Silvers' idea is to eliminate state employee jobs or to freeze salaries. We have heard this time and time again from Mr. Silvers. Isn't it time the legislators did the job they were elected to do and allow the managers and supervisors of the state of Idaho to do the job they were hired and paid to do? Many times in the past the state employees have taken the brunt of the legislators' mistakes. Perhaps a better understanding of our state budgetary process could show them other avenues of relief, rather than sacrificing state employees and eliminating the services they provide. After all, state employees are taxpayers too.

So Geraldine isilly-white and George is a felon. Your bias is showing.

Let's face it. George broke the law. We all know that. So did Geraldine and 200-plus others. Disclosures six years later doesn't change anything. And who believes that there is or ever was an "exemption" to the law? They would all be using it, all the time.

The House Ethics Committee doesn't have "time" to consider her case, said. Very convenient. I wonder what party controls that committee?

Geraldine's case is different from George's, according to the Washington Post editorial. So what's new? Hers will also be different from the other 200-plus that haven't been prosecuted.

Why make a whipping boy of George? Well, it's quite simple.

Who backed OSHA down to reasonable posture? Not Geraldine or the 200-plus faceless ones.

Who dared to publish a book documenting IRS indiscretions? Not Geraldine or the 200-plus faceless ones.

The Big Boys in Washington, D.C., wanted to "nail" George, and they did it. I suppose The Times-News will continue to nail him, too. Emerson said it: "A foolish consistency is the hobgoblin of little minds."

Glad to hear the answers

Since George Hansen takes such delight in comparing his situation with Geraldine Ferraro's, I would like to challenge him to take this to its logical conclusion. Call a news conference, George, answer all the questions that they want to ask. We'd love to hear your explanations for 90 minutes. I assure you, I'll be glad to listen.

Care lavished in hope of success

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — With launch two days away, countdown crews lavished special attention Monday on the engines of space shuttle Discovery to avoid a repeat of the contamination that caused the last-second postponement of the ship's first flight.

The count for Wednesday's 6:35 a.m. MDT liftoff was on schedule, the weather forecast was fine and the ship's commander and pilot did some practice flying in a specially equipped trainer.

"I can guarantee you one thing, the crew is ready and we're anxious to go," said commander Henry W. Hartsfeld, the only one in the crew of six to have flown in space before.

Others on the six-day flight are Judy Resnik, a mission specialist who will become the second American woman in space; Charles Walker, an industry engineer who will be the first paying customer; pilot Michael Coats, and mission specialists Steve Hawley and Richard Mullane.

Discovery is the third ship in America's shuttle fleet. It was to have made its debut in June, but a computer failure stopped the first attempt nine minutes before scheduled launch. The next day, the second try was halted four seconds short of liftoff when computers detected something wrong in a fuel valve and ordered the engines — one of them already firing — shut down.

TV offers live shuttle coverage

By The Associated Press

The major television networks plan live coverage of the launch of the space shuttle Discovery, scheduled for Wednesday at 6:35 a.m. MDT. ABC, CBS and NBC all will carry the launch as part of their morning news shows, according to the networks.

Cable News Network plans to begin its live, continuous coverage of Discovery's maiden launch at approximately 6:15 a.m., a spokesman said.

"Although not yet proven, the most plausible theory now under consideration involves the possibility of microscopic silt accumulations," said an announcement Monday by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

To prevent recurrence, the valve will be checked and hydraulic fluid will be circulated before liftoff. On the pad on Monday, crews were purging the engine of contaminants with helium.

Discovery's payload will weigh 20 tons, which is heavier than that on any previous flight. The crew will launch three commercial communications satellites, operate a miniature drug-making factory and conduct experiments for three days with a solar "sail," a device that will supply power for space stations of the future.

Thrown off schedule by the June launch failures, NASA decided to combine the cargoes of Discovery's first two flights, resulting in the heavy payload.

Teacher to be first in space

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The first citizen to fly as an observer in space will be a teacher because of the impact that person can have in communicating the experience to the nation's young people, the head of the space agency said Monday.

Journalists, artists, novelists and others hoping to grab a seat on a shuttle mission will have their chance later, NASA administrator James M. Beggs told a news conference in Washington. It was monitored by reporters in Cape Canaveral.

President Reagan earlier in the day directed the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to begin searching for a school teacher to serve as a crew member on a space trip in late 1985 or 1986.

"A good teacher can have an impact on a person, not only in his or her formative years but throughout life," the administrator said. "It will give an opportunity to our children to look up to someone who has flown in space."

A civilian scientist, Charles Walker, is a member of the shuttle crew scheduled to blast off Wednesday, but he is traveling as a paying customer for McDonnell Douglas Corp., which hopes to produce a drug in space in partnership with Johnson & Johnson Inc.

The teacher, however, would be the first civilian to travel as an observer. Beggs said the decision would underscore a commitment made by Reagan on June 19, when he announced a program "designed to promote early interest among children in science and engineering."

The program, he said, would expand NASA's educational outreach activities to more than 75,000 elementary schools "to sow the seeds of technological progress and economic growth."

Budget initiative gets axed

By BOB EGELKO
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The California Supreme Court ordered a federal balanced-budget initiative removed from the November state ballot Monday, ruling that state voters could not make a binding request on Congress to call a constitutional convention.

In a 6-1 decision, the court said Proposition 35 violates a U.S. constitutional rule allowing only a state legislature, and not the voters, to ask Congress to call a constitutional convention.

"The framers of the Constitution chose to give the voters no direct role in the amending process," said Justice Allen Broussard for the court majority. Only legislators exercising their own judgment — and not "a rubber-stamp legislature" acting at the voters' orders — can apply to Congress for a convention, he said.

The court also said the measure violates the California Constitution, which allows voter initiatives only to propose statutes or state constitutional amendments.

Dissenting Justice Malcolm Lucas said the decision "has once again deprived the sovereign people of their precious initiative right."

Monday's ruling in a suit by the state AFL-CIO and civil-rights groups was a blow to hopes of conservative groups to break a congressional logjam on a constitutional amendment to require a balanced federal budget and either move it through Congress or call a constitutional convention, the first since 1789.

Legislatures in 32 states have already asked Congress to call a constitutional convention to draft a balanced-budget amendment and submit it to the states.

The Constitution says a convention must be called at the request of two-thirds of the state legislatures, or 34. With initiatives on the ballot in both California and Montana, the National Tax Limitation Committee was hoping to force congressional action by early next year.

The California initiative would have required the state legislature to ask Congress to call a constitutional convention to draft a balanced-budget amendment.

If the Legislature failed to act, lawmakers' pay would have been suspended, and then the initiative itself would have been forwarded to Congress as a request for a convention.

Broussard noted that the U.S. Constitution says "legislatures" can apply to Congress for a constitutional convention. That language bars an application by initiative, he said — either directly by an application to Congress, or indirectly by ordering the Legislature to act.

Black students march for segregation

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Like civil rights protesters of another era, almost 600 black students from Tennessee State University marched Monday on the federal courthouse — but this time their banners favored segregation.

Two decades ago, the students' parents were marching on behalf of racial integration — of schools, lunch counters and other public accommodations.

But Monday's chanting, clapping and singing students — only two of them white — had a different theme. The group was protesting a proposed settlement of a 15-year-old desegregation lawsuit.

"Segregation . . . and Justice for All," read one placard carried by the demonstrators. The peaceful gathering was staged by students and some black faculty members who are upset by the proposal for the state to recruit as many whites as blacks to the campus by 1993.

The demonstrators had marched four miles from the campus to the courthouse, where they mistakenly believed that a hearing was scheduled.

Whites make up only 10 percent of the student body at the school, built for blacks when education was segregated under laws outlawed by the U.S. Supreme Court in the 1950s.

Emotional and sentimental over what they regard as "their" school, opponents of the agreement calling for a 1-1 white-black ratio said they fear it will prevent young blacks from attending a school where they are welcomed or receive special tutoring if necessary.

"What's to stop them from making it nine out of 10 whites the next time?" one of the marchers, alumni director Elizabeth Daniels, asked.

The suit was brought in 1968 by white Tennessee State faculty members and students who complained that previous efforts to desegregate have been inadequate.

U.S. District Judge Thomas A. Wiseman has ordered all parties — also including the state, alumni and the U.S. Department of Justice — to try to negotiate an agreement that will speed up integration and settle the lawsuit. The Justice Department is the only holdout.

However, the head of the Justice Department's civil rights division, William Bradford Reynolds, said, "It's not clear to me that that 90 percent black enrollment is discriminatory."

Although the lawsuit was aimed at desegregating all universities and colleges in the state, it has become focused on Tennessee State.

Air Florida reaches agreement with Midway

MIAMI (AP) — Debt-ridden Air Florida, forced to ground its operations last month, said Monday it could get some of its employees and planes back in the air by the end of next month under a deal with Midway Airlines.

The tentative agreement, announced by both carriers in U.S. Bankruptcy Court, was reached just hours before a court-ordered deadline for Air Florida to produce a realistic business plan.

Under the deal, the Miami-based carrier would fly under its own colors with at least four of its leased Boeing 737s and could have as many as 275 ex-employees back on the job. Midway would acquire all of Air Florida's assets, including some coveted airport slots.

"We see that they have aircraft all ready to be put into operation. We see their personnel ready," said Arthur Bass, chairman and chief executive officer of the Chicago-based Midway.

John K. Olson, an attorney for Air Florida, said both carriers still had many details to work out before a final agreement can be signed, including the total monetary amount of the deal.

Judge Sidney M. Weaver ordered both airlines to return to court on Sept. 14 with a completed document that would include arrangements to be made with Air Florida's creditors, some of whom complained of being "left in the dark."

"It seems to me that this is the last (deadline) that I can give you folks," Weaver said. "You folks have presented me a plan . . . that has possibilities. I hope that this works."

Weaver had threatened to appoint a trustee if Air Florida failed to present a viable reorganization plan by Monday.

Air Florida filed for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act nine weeks ago.

State Department sees nothing new in Soviet cruise test

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department said Monday that the Soviet Union was resorting to the "same old same tactic" in announcing successful tests of new ground-launched cruise missiles as something new.

"It is not a new development," department spokesman John Hughes said when reporters asked about Saturday's announcement by the Soviet Defense Ministry.

The Soviet announcement said the tests of long-range cruise missiles were in response to the NATO deployment of U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Europe last year.

But Hughes said the Soviets have long had an active cruise missile program in effect and it was under development long before NATO deployed the U.S. missiles.

What's what

As many a U.S. president, Teddy Roosevelt repeatedly overestimated his power. In 1906, he decreed that government publications use short spellings of countless common words: do for debt, donkey for donkey, gosh for ghost. So on. This, he thought, would improve the language greatly. The public wouldn't buy it. Another time, he banned Christmas trees to save the forests. The public wouldn't buy that one, either.

Q. When did the wristwatch get popular?

A. During World War I. Soldiers who'd never before even heard of wristwatches bought them on sight. Pocket watches turned into the timepieces of old fogs. Wristwatches suddenly became symbolic of virility and fast action of young men.

Is there a bookstore in your county? Wait, that's not so nonsensical. During the 1930s when your granddaddy was a lad, two-thirds of the counties nationwide had no bookstores.

A. You were out of uniform during World War II, if you didn't have your hat on. Most homecoming veterans rejected headgear thereafter.

A horse's hoof is its toenail.

COMIC HERO

Q. In comic books, who was "The Alchemist"?

A. Superman. It was an alias the writers created in 1961 for a scenario wherein Superman and Batman teamed up.

If your supermarket conforms to the national average, it devotes 240 linear feet of shelf space to pet food. Soft drinks only get 221 feet. Candy, 186 feet. And soup, a mere 165 feet.

Guests of actress robbers' targets

ROME (AP) — Two armed bandits broke into the villa of Italian photographer and actress Gina Lollobrigida on Monday, robbing two house guests of about $600 worth of cash, police said.

Ms. Lollobrigida, who was in the United States, was informed of the robbery, Rome police spokesman Umberto Barto said.

The robbers, their faces covered, entered the villa grounds shortly after midnight and surprised two guests who were staying in a guest house, Bartoletti added.

Bartoletti said Manoj Juenja, 24, an Indian citizen, and Tanna Dipika, 26, a British citizen born in Uganda, were forced to give up British and French currencies amounting to about $600.

The intruders then forced Juenja to telephone caretaker Antonio Quinti, 29, to have him open the main entrance to the villa.

Juenja, who speaks flawless Italian, spoke to Quinti in an affected heavy English accent that made Quinti realize something was wrong, Bartoletti added.

The caretaker called police and fired two shots in the air from a window, the police spokesman said. Neither guest was hurt in the robbery.

Actor to face court following argument

ST. PETER PORT, Channel Islands, Britain (AP) — Actor Oliver Reed was jailed and charged with criminal damage and disorderly conduct at a hotel, police said.

Reed, 46, was accused of breaking a window in the Duke of Normandy Hotel on Sunday and spent the night in jail, police said. He was scheduled to appear in court Tuesday.

The tabloid Daily Star reported that Reed, who was staying at the hotel with his girlfriend Josephine Burge, 20, was arrested following an argument and that he had acted drunk.

SPARTA, Ill. (AP) — Fiddler Wade "Pappy" Ray thought his music career spanning six decades was over when, threatened by cancer, he retired to a southern Illinois farm.

Five years and two operations later, Ray is "back on stage" and savoring his renewed success.

Ray quit performing in the early 1970s and retired in 1979. But now, he makes regular appearances, has an album in the works and was inducted last month into the Great Western Heroes Hall of Fame.

"It just sort of happened," Ray, 68, said in a recent interview. "I'm still a kid, still enjoying it — enjoying it immensely."

Letter from early LDS convert offers different view of Smith

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An unauthenticated letter said to be written in 1830 by Mormonism's first convert offers a new image of church founder Joseph Smith and how he gained inspiration for the Book of Mormon.

The letter, dated Oct. 23, 1830, and attributed to Martin Harris, Smith's first follower outside his family, is kept in a bank in Salt Lake City.

The standard account of the religion's birth says an angel directed Smith to find golden plates that he translated with the use of glass stones, a kind of magical-looking device. The plates later resulted in the Book of Mormon.

The letter purportedly says a seer stone helped Smith find the golden plates, but he at first was prevented from gaining possession of the plates by an "old spirit" that had transfused itself from a white salamander.

Steven F. Christensen, a Salt Lake businessman who is also a bishop of the church, purchased the letter and said in March it would be withheld until its authenticity was determined. Christensen declined comment Sunday night when reached at home.

The letter "poses no threat to what is already known about the prophet or the beginning of the church," Jerry Cahill, a spokesman for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, said Sunday. The Los Angeles Times reported on the letter Saturday.

The church did not have a comment on the letter's authenticity, Cahill said, but added, "It certainly sounds consistent with the times and possibly is an interesting sidelight to what is known."

Some historians of Mormon origins believe the letter adds to evidence that Smith was a treasure seeker who believed in magical spirits.

Mormon historian Richard L. Bushman, referring to evidence that Smith engaged in treasure hunting — a popular activity of his time — asked whether it was more "inherently evil" to pursue such a pastime than to play poker.

Bushman urged Mormons to be tolerant "about this culture of magic invading the life of the prophet." Jan Shippy, a Methodist who once served as president of the Mormon History Association, told a theological symposium in Salt Lake City last week that the true picture of Smith may lie between the church portrait and the image of an imaginative treasure-hunter.

"Since the Harris letter was addressed to W.W. Phelps, a newspaper editor and potential Mormon convert, it is a document that, if genuine, will also make clear that the presence of the occult in the Mormon story was not something that Smith's early followers tried to hide," Ms. Shippy said last Wednesday.

"What to say about the salamander? After the initial shock... this was the key to my own changed understanding of Joseph Smith," Ms. Shippy said. "A salamander, according to myth, is the animal that can be placed in the fire and not be burned."

Evangelist defends solicitation letter

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Television evangelist Jim Whittington acknowledges his latest computerized solicitation letter has some recipients disturbed, but he says it's "totally sincere and legitimate."

Whittington, of Greenville, N.C., said, "Less than one ten-thousandth of a percent of people who received the letter complained... The final batch of that letter has gone out, thank the Lord... I'm so tired of it (phone calls) I could scream."

The letter states in part: "You can get in trouble with God and miss your blessing by not being obedient..."

"If you fall the test the Lord is giving you, when you need someone to pray they may not be there... The Lord spoke to me to have you prove yourself by sending an offering of $15... It's very important that you answer this letter within the next 48 hours."

PG-13 Rating Introduced

A new rating category is in place as of July 1. This new category is inserted between the current PG and R ratings. It is designated as "PG-13: Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for attendance of children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children."

The revised five-category system of the voluntary film industry rating program is now as follows:

- General Audiences, all ages admitted.
- Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.
- PG-13: Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.
- Restricted, under-17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.
- R: No one under 17 admitted.
- All films listed after July 1 will be given ratings under the new five-category system.

Divers look for 'hot' cargo

By RAF CASERT
The Associated Press

OSTEND, Belgium — Belgium said it would send down navy divers today to examine the Mont Louis and its cargo, but reported that it had found no trace of contamination in the North Sea two days after the French freighter sank with 225 tons of radioactive material aboard.

Environment Minister Firmin Aerts said he would ask France to "act as swiftly as possible" to salvage the 5,000-ton ship, which sank Saturday after colliding 12 miles off the Belgian coast with a ferry carrying more than 1,000 people from Holland to Britain. No one was hurt.

The French government and the Mont Louis' owners, the Compagnie Generale Maritime of Paris, said the material aboard the sunken vessel was only slightly radioactive and was in 28 special steel containers built to withstand the pressure of being up to 650 feet below the sea for at least one year.

The ship sank in 46 feet of water and part of it is visible at low tide.

Officials said sea water would quickly dilute the material even if a leak developed. A company statement said the increase in radioactivity would be "negligible with no consequence for man and the environment."

The owners identified the cargo as crystallized uranium hexafluoride, which is used in the uranium refinement process. The material is shipped as crystals and becomes a gas when heated at 158 degrees Fahrenheit.

Aerts' spokesman John Huybrebroeck said, "On Tuesday morning, divers of the Belgian navy will examine the ship and the cargo, which should still be in the hold of the vessel."

In Paris, the International ecological organization Greenpeace said Monday that despite official assurances, recovering the cargo posed a serious danger. The group sent out the first alert about the nature of the cargo after the collision. At a Greenpeace news conference, Yves Lenor, secretary of a group called Energy and Development, said uranium hexafluoride, when immersed in water, could produce a "violent" reaction and, possibly, an explosion.

Claude Abraham, head of the company that owns the Mont Louis, said in Paris he had asked two salvaging firms — one Belgian, one Dutch — to retrieve the cargo. He estimated salvage work would not begin for two to three weeks, but added: "The technical preparation of the operation has begun."

Belgian and French navy craft patrolled the wreck site to keep ships away.

Aerts said government research vessels continuously sampled North Sea water Monday near the spot where the Mont Louis went down, and health officials would continue monitoring sea water near the wreck.

"We are told by our technical people that there is no threat to the population," Aerts reported after an emergency meeting in this North Sea port of government officials, including civil defense leaders.

Aerts said Belgian contingency plans for any environmental disaster included the possibility that the Mont Louis would break up.

Huybrebroeck said the Mont Louis was bound from Le Havre, France, for Riga in the Soviet republic of Latvia, where its cargo was to be enriched for use as fuel in West European power stations.

Officials here said nine containers were destined for Belgian power plants.

France has had a 10-year trade in nuclear materials with the Soviet Union.

Soviets test battle ship

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — The Soviet Union's newest fighting ship, the battle cruiser Frunze, sailed through the Danish straits Monday en route to the North Atlantic, the Danish military reported. The navy's operations command called it the Soviets' most powerful fighting ship.

Capt. Sven Gobel, of the navy command, said the 25,000-ton cruiser was accompanied by the guided missile frigate Krivak "possibly for a shakedown cruise" before it joins the Soviet Northern Fleet, based in Murmansk.

He said a few Soviet naval units were exercising in the North Atlantic, "but I doubt they (the Frunze and Krivak) will have anything to do with that."

The new battle cruiser was described as a floating arsenal of conventional and nuclear missiles, with two 130mm cannon and a helicopter pad on the fantail. Like the Kirov, Moscow's first nuclear-powered navy ship, the Frunze's dual nuclear reactors reportedly can produce a top speed of 26 knots.

Danish military intelligence confirmed that the 825-foot-long Frunze is fresh from the Leningrad shipyard and is believed to be virtually a carbon copy of the cruiser Kirov, built in 1981.

Rebellion of dock workers grows; two more ports defy strike orders

LONDON (AP) — Longshoremen at two Northern Ireland ports voted Monday to defy a three-day-old British dock strike, in a growing rebellion against the walkout called to support the 24-week-old miners' strike.

Striking dock workers kept 19 ports shut, including Liverpool, Hull and Scotland's 12 major ports. But more than a dozen others were operating normally and exporters were racing to get cargo out before other strike votes are taken later this week.

The nearly unanimous anti-strike votes by dock workers at the Northern Ireland ports of Belfast and Larne on Monday indicated a growing split among the country's 35,000 longshoremen.

The left-led Transport and General Workers Union suffered its first rebuff Sunday when 600 longshoremen at Immingham in northeast England voted almost unanimously against the strike.

Immingham dock workers started last month's 11-day port strike, which paralyzed three-quarters of Britain's trade. They were handling five ships on Monday.

Immingham is Britain's third-largest port for foreign trade. Transport union delegate Jim Dugan said the Belfast longshoremen were unhappy the strike had been called to back strikers in the National Union of Mineworkers. The miners' union, led by Arthur Scargill, is also split by moderates who have returned to work demanding a strike vote, and militants who have killed 75 percent of Britain's 175 mines.

The rail and seamen's unions threw their support behind the longshoremen Saturday, vowing not to cross picket lines.

"They thought it was political, backing Scargill," Dugan said. "Our boys have enough to do to look after their own jobs here without getting mixed up in this. The Belfast docks will stay open."

Nations to form nuclear-free zone

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Fourteen South Pacific nations agreed Monday to make plans to declare the region a nuclear-free zone, while stipulating each nation would retain the right to allow visits by U.S. nuclear-powered warships.

Leaders of the 14 nations of the South Pacific Forum, meeting on the tiny island state of Tuvalu, accepted a plan by Australian Prime Minister Bob Hawke to appoint a working group to draw up a draft treaty on a South Pacific nuclear-free zone.

The plan would forbid the forum members to possess or test nuclear weapons, or allowing nuclear waste to be dumped in the Pacific.

But Hawke, speaking after the first day of the annual meeting, said his proposal gave each nation the right to decide if it would permit visits by U.S. nuclear-powered warships.

The forum, a loose consultative group, consists of New Zealand, Australia, Papua New Guinea, Fiji, Vanuatu, the Cook Islands, Kiribati, Nauru, Niue, Tonga, the Solomon Islands, Tuvalu, Western Samoa and the Federated States of Micronesia.

Hawke rejected suggestions that nations choosing to allow visits by U.S. nuclear-powered warships weakened the nuclear-free zone plan.

The forum turned down a proposal by New Zealand for calling on the United Nations to declare the South Pacific a nuclear-free zone, Hawke told Australian reporters.

The new socialist government of New Zealand under David Lange has said it will not allow nuclear weapons on its territory, and has banned visits by U.S. nuclear-powered warships.

Hawke said the forum had agreed that before going to the United Nations, a working party should first determine what would be involved in declaring a nuclear-free zone.

Seven die in building fire

DUISBURG, West Germany (AP) — Panicked residents leaped from windows as fire raged through a steel town tenement before dawn Monday, killing an immigrant family of seven and injuring 23 people, officials said.

Neighbors dragged ladders to the blazing building in a desperate attempt to rescue children from the fire that gutted the two-story apartment house, witnesses said.

"We heard the screams and cries for help around half-past midnight and ran out into the street in our pajamas," said neighbor Werner Embers. "Flames were shooting out the front of the house."

He said neighbors propped ladders against the windows and pulled at least three children to safety.

Council cuts library fund in budget move

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council has decided to temporarily call a halt to plans for expanding the Twin Falls Public Library.

After meeting with the library's board of trustees Monday afternoon, the council voted to delete a $25,000 contribution to the library's budgeting fund from next year's city budget.

The decision came as the council wound up consideration of next year's spending plan, and is for adoption at the Sept. 4 regular meeting.

In other budget-decisions, the council:

- Reduced by $250,000 the amount set aside in the city's capital improvements fund for a new swimming pool, despite one councilman's fears the action might result in the wrong image should it be "misinterpreted."
- Agreed to include $31,440 in the plan to hire a development director who will head a new planning department, but withheld expenditure of the money until the duties of the new top-level administrator are better defined.

Petersen: Council wants to know what people are thinking

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — At a loss as to what city residents want from them, members of the Twin Falls City Council have authorized City Manager Tom Courtney to find out the cost of professional help.

At a work session Monday, the council brought up short two weeks ago by resounding popular votes against its pool and police fire consolidation plans — discussed the need for a comprehensive city opinion poll.

Mayor Emery Petersen opened the discussion, saying many people seem to feel the council is unresponsive.

Contrary to popular feeling, the council is very interested in hearing what people think, he said. A good way to find out what's on people's minds may be to conduct a broad-ranging survey.

Councilman Doug Volmer seconded the idea and said the city should move ahead vigorously. It was clear from the recent voting what people don't want; what remains is to find out what they do want, he said.

City Manager Tom Courtney likened the survey to the process undertaken by private companies when they want to find out how consumers view their products.

Private companies specialize in such services, he said. Universities may also provide the service.

Petersen said the survey could pose such questions as whether people would prefer the city's limited resources be used to build new softball fields or repave streets.

Of course, a major reason for the survey would be to find out what people want in a new swimming pool.

• Included $25,000 as the first payment on a lease-purchase agreement to build a new golf course clubhouse, with the understanding the money will be reimbursed to the city through higher golf fees.

The cut in library funds came after members of the library board, including former Mayor Chris Talkington, tried to show the council what they believe is an overcrowding problem.

After a tour of the library, Librarian Arlan Call said that even though the library was expanded in 1974, new materials are now crowding out seating for patrons.

The board has been negotiating with the Reformed Church of Twin Falls for the purchase of the church's adjacent property. Last year's council put $25,000 in the budget to open a building expansion fund.

Five of seven council members appeared unimpressed with the board's salesmanship this year, however, saying no more should be set aside for the project until the board can show how the city can afford an expanded library.

Councilman John Peterson also objected to figures showing items in the Twin Falls library are used less frequently than items in city libraries elsewhere in the state. "We don't need a lot of books people don't look at," he said.

Mayor Emery Petersen suggested that what the library might really need is a good housecleaning instead of a costly addition.

The council voted to reduce the amount set aside for the pool from $750,000 to $500,000, after figuring the city will probably not be completing a new pool next year on the basis of City Attorney Fritz Wonderlich's opinion state law prohibits the city from trying to get voter approval of a new pool bond issue within six months.

Since the money will not be used next year, council members argued $250,000 of the amount proposed for the project could be better used in a general-purpose contingency fund.

There it can be used for such projects as the purchase of the remaining debt on the downtown city parking lots. At its last meeting, the council agreed to budget $150,000 for that project — proposed by downtown business owners to rid the lots of parking meters — although it provided no revenue source other than the contingency fund, created out of surplus reserves.

Councilman Gale Kleinkopf argued placing the $250,000 in the general-purpose fund did not diminish the city's commitment to a new pool, because the money would still be available if needed.

Nevertheless, councilman Jack Miller voted against the idea after suggesting the council's "image" might be tarnished by the action. Many of the council's actions in the

Run-off ruining fossils

Farmers tour area

By HAL BERNTON
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — Fifteen farmers from the Bell Rapids Irrigation project joined federal Bureau of Land Management officials Monday in a tour of the erosion-scarred Hagerman Fossil bed.

They scrambled down a grasshopper-infested mesa slope on Bell Rapids' northeastern edge to view a rubble-strewn landscape covering some 30 acres of the fossil beds.

U.S. Geological Survey hydrologists believe the slide was triggered by erosion runoff and last spring's heavy snowmelt.

The slide has left a crumbling, 70-foot high cliff on the upper edge of a river-side mesa that harbors one of the world's most valuable collections of fossil life from the late Pliocene epoch.

In year's past, paleontologists have discovered camel, horse, mastodon and numerous other fossil remains dating back 3.7 million years. Ted Weasna, a BLM paleontologist, says that if federal funds ever become available, the federal government might build a visitor's area to display the fossils.

But for the moment, few visitors make their way down the steep-sloped mesa to view the fossil sites. And simple preservation — not tourist development — is foremost on the minds of BLM officials.

A recent hydrology study by the USGS indicates that farmland and canal runoff draining toward the mesa's northeastern edge is combining with heavy spring snow-melts to dramatically increase fossil bed erosion.

Astride a major slough, BLM geologist Ted Weasna talks with farmers about erosion problems, shown at right

Monday's tour of the mesa's slopes was scheduled to give farmers a better understanding of the problems BLM officials face in protecting the fragile fossil beds and to help farmers figure out how to reduce irrigation runoff.

The tour began above a major fossil site that is now endangered by uphill erosion in the landslide area. The farmers cautiously followed Weasna to the slide's cliff-edge and examined a small stream of irrigation seep that continued to flow toward the Snake River.

A short distance away from the slide, another large chunk of land has begun to separate from the hillside. The land's sandy soil is riddled with deep fissures — resembling — those caused by earthquakes. Hydrologists say the fissures are the result of water-saturated soil, and they fear a massive slough during next spring's snowmelt.

BLM officials hope to help curb future erosion by lining two, one-half mile stretches of canals that hydrologists report are leaking large amounts of water.

Gary Carson, a Boise BLM manager, told farmers they could work with Soil Conservation Service officials to obtain federal money to help finance the canal improvements. He also mentioned the possibility of building a sediment pond on the edge of the fields to help curb field runoff.

But Bruce Brown, a Bell Rapids farmer, questioned the 2,000-acre-foot canal seepage figure cited in the USGS report.

"I'll bet $100 that if we line our canals, those seep streams won't dry up hardly one iota," Brown said. "I'm not saying that we aren't losing water, but we're not losing that much."

Brown believes that the past two years' heavy spring runoff has been a major factor in accelerating an erosion problem aggravated — but not entirely caused — by irrigation.

Antone wants new job

STEVE ANTONE
To seek Speaker Job

RUBERT (AP) — A recent attack on state public employees by Idaho House Speaker Tom Silvers, R-Twin Falls, may have given another lawmaker with aspirations for the speakership just the break he was looking for.

Silvers, who doesn't hesitate speaking his mind on controversial issues, as a result sometimes finds himself at odds with members of his own party, particularly moderates.

One of those moderates, Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, has his eye on Silvers' job and may be the strongest candidate challenging for the position.

Antone said there are two issues in particular on which he differs from Silvers and which give him a leg-up on the competition: it is a strong advocate of more funding for Idaho State University and public education, and he favors the subordination of Idaho Power Co. water rights on the Snake River.

"I believe these two issues will give me an advantage in my effort to win the speakership," Antone said.

The eight-term legislator, who is high on the seniority list in the lower chamber, said at least 28 colleagues have pledged to vote for him, which is barely short of the 31 or 32 that likely will be necessary to elect a speaker.

This year, House membership will grow from 70 to 74 as a result of legislative reapportionment. Antone said he believes the Republican majority will increase from 51 to 60 or 62. The number of Democrats would jump from 19 to 23 or 24, he said.

"I feel I come close enough, but to go over the top will depend a great deal on the general election results," Antone said.

Another person mentioned as a possible speaker is Rep. Tom Boyd, R-Genese. But he has told friends that he may seek the House majority leadership over Rep. Jack Kennebeck, R-Boise.

Charboneau lawyer needs more time

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

JEROME — The attorney for Jamie D. Charboneau will file motions to change two trial dates set last week in Fifth District Court by Judge Phillip M. Becker. Charboneau is charged with the first-degree murder of his former wife in Jerome County in July.

Attorney Golden Bennett of Twin Falls says he will oppose Charboneau's Oct. 1 first-degree murder trial date and also his Dec. 3 trial date for charges of kidnapping and grand theft.

He says he needs more time to prepare his case and thinks the kidnapping-grand theft trial should come first because it happened first.

"I'm a little upset that they would set it at all without consulting me about my availability," says Bennett, who also says he has a vacation planned between now and the first trial date.

Bennett says he will file motions to vacate the trial dates and to consolidate the trials. He says he wants the two combined because a jury cannot make an intelligent decision on the murder trial without knowing the facts of what took place between June 21, the date of the alleged kidnap and rape, and July 1, the date of the shooting.

On Thursday he said his motion for discovery, filed to obtain the state's evidence against the accused man, was only in the draft stage and was a part of the reason he is not prepared to take the case to trial.

However, Bennett said Monday he filed the motion Friday, but added he would still not have time to analyze all the evidence.

Charboneau, 24, is accused of killing his former wife, Marilyn Arbaugh, 36, on July 1 at her home northeast of Jerome. He also is accused of kidnapping her and stealing her automobile 10 days earlier and raping her in Lincoln County.

Although rape charges have been filed in Lincoln County, Charboneau has not been arraigned on those charges.

Charboneau entered innocent pleas to all three charges in Jerome County.

Despite Bennett's complaints, Becker says he doesn't need to consult all lawyers before setting trial dates and only looks at his own calendar for the earliest available trial date.

"I don't have time to consult all the attorneys," says Becker. "I really shouldn't. My job is to see that the guy gets a fair trial."

Becker said he set the Charboneau trial dates by their case number and not by the charges filed.

In the two Charboneau cases, the murder trial was given a lower number, No. 1027, than the kidnapping-grand theft charges, which is File No. 1028, even though the kidnapping and grand theft is supposed to have happened 10 days earlier.

Deputy District Court Clerk Wendy Hayes says the murder file was given a lower number because the paperwork was received from Magistrate Judge Roger Burdick before the kidnapping-grand theft information.

Burdick had taken the kidnapping-grand theft charges under advisement, which caused the delay, Hayes says.

Becker says he does not know if he will consolidate the two trials because they happened at a different time and have a different set of evidence.

"I don't know. I'd have to listen to a lot of argument," Becker says about trying both cases at the same time.

Residents ordered to boil their drinking water

BURLEY — The 40 homes served by Customers of View Water Co. near Burley have again been advised to boil their drinking water.

In July, state health officials discovered water up to 23 times the state safety limit and issued a boil-water order. The company's 40,000-gallon storage tank was then thoroughly cleaned, and bacteria levels dropped back to normal.

Mini-Cassia

state health inspector, said his agency Monday imposed the new boil-water order after three new test samples indicated bacteria levels up to six times the safe limit.

The check was triggered by a View Water Co. customer who complained of foul-smelling water, Burkett said. The cause of the problem isn't known, but Burkett speculated that could originate in the underground spring that supplies the water.

A spring water sample was taken recently and its bacteria content will be indicated in test results scheduled for release today.

If the spring proves to be contaminated, then View Water may have to install an in-line chlorination system to treat the water as it enters the storage tank, Burkett said.

No illnesses have been attributed to drinking the contaminated water, Burkett said. But repeated drinking of bacteria-laden water can cause diarrhea, nausea, stomach aches and mild fevers.

Woman enters guilty plea

GOODING — Teresa Marie Watson, whose baby's death in 1982 in Ketchum resulted in the first-degree murder conviction and death sentence of her boyfriend, pleaded guilty to a charge of grand theft in Fifth District Court in Gooding Aug. 20.

Watson had originally been charged with four counts of grand theft, but a plea-bargaining arrangement reduced it to one count, says Lynn Nelson, deputy prosecutor.

Watson pleaded guilty to the theft of a camera on July 15 from the home of William Smith near Bliss, where she was a domestic employee.

She has been released on $1,000 bond pending a pre-arrest report and sentencing, which should come in two to three weeks.

The original four counts included the theft of a pistol, leather bags, the camera case and $80 as one count, and the camera.

Watson's 8-month-old daughter, Monique Nicole Longoria, was killed in April 1982. The infant's death led to the September 1982 first-degree murder conviction and death sentence of Mark Emilio Aragon, Watson's live-in boyfriend.

Testimony in the trial established that Aragon probably killed the infant by swinging it by its heels and smashing its head against a bathtub in the couple's Ketchum condominium.

Search for escapee fruitless

RUPERT — A tip from a motorist who thought he might have given Utah State Prison escapee Wesley A. Tuttle, 33, a ride into Rupert touched off a fruitless search of the area Sunday. Chief Deputy Sheriff Bob Nevarez of Blaindoka County said the motorist contacted officers late Sunday to say he gave a hitchhiker on the freeway a ride into Rupert and let him out in the east part of town. The man said he became suspicious that his rider might be the escaped prisoner. He said his rider fit the description issued by police.

Nevarez said the sheriff's reserve officers, county and Rupert city police joined in a thorough search of the east part of Rupert, but after several hours' effort, they still had not found any trace of the hitchhiker or the escapee.

Tuttle, a convicted first-degree murderer, is originally from Post Falls. He was one of three prisoners who escaped from the Utah State Prison at Point of the Mountain near Sall Lake City Aug. 21.

Nelson charged in shooting

TWIN FALLS — Steven William Nelson, 32, of Kimberly was released on bond Monday after being held in the Twin Falls County Jail as a suspect in the shooting of a van and log loader owned by Blain Huddleston of Filer.

Chief Deputy Sheriff Harold Jensen of Twin Falls said Nelson is charged with malicious destruction of property. He allegedly went to the Doug Mason farm southeast of Kimberly Saturday where he fired 16 bullets into the van and log loader that Huddleston was storing on the Mason property. Damage to the two pieces of equipment was estimated at more than $1,000. Jensen said damage included the tires, windshield and windows of the van, and the radiator, tires and other areas of the loader.

The Twin Falls sheriff's office received a call shortly before noon Saturday from Mason saying he heard shots coming from a silage pit where he had allowed Huddleston to store the equipment. Mason told officers the suspect came to his home and asked about the equipment and then went to the silage pit.

Break dance winner named

JEROME — Randy Masoner of Twin Falls found himself richer by a $500 Savings Bond this weekend after displaying his skill "breakin' and poppin'."

Masoner won the finals of the break-dance contest sponsored by The Times-News, Con Paulus Chevrolet and radio station Z-103 held Saturday in the parking lot of the Jerome First Interstate Bank.

Bill Irish of Jerome took a $150 Savings Bond for second place in the contest, which has been going on for the past four weeks.

Other winners were Ventura Salinas of Twin Falls, third, winner of a $100 bond; Louie "Lil Dragon" Jaramillo of Twin Falls, fourth, winner of a portable stereo and Chad Wells of Twin Falls, fifth, winner of a portable cassette recorder.

Obituaries

Wayne Phillips

BUIH — Wayne Phillips, 76, of Buih, died Sunday at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Born Aug. 26, 1907, in Dayton, Idaho, he attended schools in Dayton and at Poplar Hill, south of Filer. He married Florence Peterson in Twin Falls on Feb. 25, 1930. Their marriage was solemnized in the LDS Temple in 1950. He worked for the Utah Land and Cattle Co. as a cowboy. After returning to the Buih area in 1929, he farmed for several years, was cattle buyer for a livestock company, then worked at the Green Giant Plant until his retirement. He was a member of the LDS Church, where he served as an elder.

Surviving are: his wife, a son, John Phillips of Twin Falls; a daughter, Irene Stuart of Filer; 10 grandchildren; two great-grandchildren; two brothers, Darrell Phillips of Castleford, and Dale Phillips of Buih; and two sisters, Nada Kimbrough of Jerome and Verda Wilson of Pasco, Wash. He was preceded in death by four brothers, a sister and a daughter.

The funeral will be held Thursday at 11 a.m. at the Buih LDS Chapel, with Bishop Reed Crystal officiating. Burial will be in West End Cemetery in Buih. Friends may call at the Hansen Funeral Home all day Wednesday until 8 p.m. and until the time of the service on Thursday.

The family suggests that memorial contributions be made to the American Cancer Society.

On the agenda

TWIN FALLS — Here's the calendar of events and meetings that will take place this week at the College of Southern Idaho:

TODAY — Student orientation continues with a program at 11 a.m. on military careers in the Taylor Building.

At noon Jack Sims will discuss transferring of credits and Dave Perkins will speak on financial aid in the East Cafeteria of the Taylor Building.

There will be a watermelon bust at 7 p.m. on the mall.

WEDNESDAY — There will be entertainment in the Eagles Nest from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Budget

past few months have been misinterpreted, he said. "Taxpayers expect us to have $750,000 in the bank (for the pool)."

The new planning department has been proposed by City Manager Tom Courtney. Monday he tied many of the city's recent problems — building a new pool, repairing streets and building a sewer plant that works — to a "lack of foresight" by previous councils.

The planning director would be responsible for tracking long-range city needs, as well as performing such other functions as overseeing city building inspectors and administering a consistent building code review policy.

Petersen said he wanted to know more precisely what background the new director would have, and what his duties might be, and the council agreed the director should not be hired until these issues were ironed out.

Kleinkopf said the new golf clubhouse could be paid for by golfers with fees of between 50 cents and $1 per round higher.

The men's golf association has agreed to the higher fees as a way of reimbursing the city for the new structure, he said.

An open house will be held at the Center for New Directions from noon to 2 p.m.

The Twin Falls County 4-H style show will be held at 7 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center.

THURSDAY — Orientation continues with a program on the study skills center at noon.

At 1:30 p.m. Keith Ferrell will have an alcohol awareness meeting in Vo-Tech Building 139.

Orientation for disabled students will be held at 3 p.m. in the Taylor Administration Building.

The 4-H style show will be held at 7 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center.

There will be a street dance at 8 p.m.

FRIDAY — Orientation for the international students will be held at noon in the lobby of the Fine Arts Center.

At age 27, this 'Kitten' finds her life the cat's meow

BOISE (AP) — The mice are harder to catch, and the litter box is harder to reach in time, but at age 27, Kitten Kat Schoonover is alive and scratching.

In a human lifespan, the white Manx would be pushing 111 years.

Her owner, Marjorie Schoonover, 61, says the secret to her pet's longevity is the love, good food and good care her family gives its oldest member.

In her prime, Kitten Kat was an avid hunter and kept the property clear of strange dogs and cats. The geriatric kitty now spends most of her days lounging and sleeping around the Schoonover house. The feline maintains a slim figure despite living a largely sedentary life and eating two cans of gravy-type cat food a day.

Not to say that Kitten Kat does not have health problems. Her hearing and sight are not as sharp, she has lost her teeth, and she has a tendency to stick out her tongue. A year ago, she had a kidney problem, and sometimes she has "accidents," Mrs. Schoonover said.

Yet Kitten Kat's early life was not a bed of catnip, either. She was what sociologists might call an abused kitten.

Mrs. Schoonover said Kitten Kat was an adult when she "came to us" in 1957, perhaps seeking refuge from an "ormery" mother who lived down the street.

"She would pick her up by the legs and swing her," Mrs. Schoonover said. "I told the girl, 'You get that cat and take care of it.' She chased the cat around the house and couldn't catch her. She got mad and said, 'You keep it,' so I did."

The abused cat did not turn out to be an abusive mother, however. In 1972, the Schoonovers found five kittens abandoned in a raspberry bush during a fishing trip.

They brought the litter home to Kitten Kat, who immediately adopted the youngsters. Kitten Kat reared the kittens well.

Dr. Paul McWilliams, a Boise veterinarian who has treated Kitten Kat for the past few years, said he could not confirm the cat's age, but said it was possible for cats to live for more than 20 years.

Fast service to cost more

BOISE (AP) — Drivers will be able to get Idaho licenses immediately, but they will pay an additional $2 to cover the cost of the speedy service.

All except new residents of Idaho will be able to pick up their licenses immediately after applying at county courthouses, Idaho Transportation Director Darrell Manning said Monday. The program takes effect Sept. 1.

Under the existing system, drivers had to wait 30 to 60 days for processing of photographs and paperwork.

Drivers new to the state still will face delays because of background checks with a national driver information system, Manning said.

The cost of a license will rise to $12 to cover the expense of computer access and instant photo-processing equipment, he said.

The new program is the result of legislation proposed by Idaho sheriffs.

Part blacks out TV station

MOSCOW (AP) — A $100 electrical part failed and kept the University of Idaho's public television station KUID off the air from about 1 p.m. Saturday to 7 p.m. Sunday, a station official says.

A diode in the power supply unit went out Saturday afternoon. It took engineers about six hours to find the problem and determine there was no alternative but to replace the part. One was air-shipped from New Jersey Sunday.

The problem affected the whole transmitter, said station manager William Campbell. "A malfunction in that is awfully hard to bypass," he said.

Some serial programming, like Masterpiece Theater, was lost, but none of the broadcasts that carry academic credit were.

Realtors snipe at president

BOISE (AP) — Home ownership in Idaho, as elsewhere in the country, is falling below projections, and policies adopted by Congress and President Reagan are to blame, the National Association of Realtors says.

Figures released by the trade group show the number of homeowners in Idaho last year fell 9,000 below the 261,000 the association predicted by using buying patterns prevalent in the late 1970s.

If the pre-1980 trend had continued into this decade, the percentage of owner-occupied American households would have been about 67 percent, but the figure was just under 65 percent last year, the association said.

Stance on arms under fire

BOISE (AP) — Rep. Larry Craig says his Democratic election opponent, Bill Hellar, last month came out unmistakably in favor of unilateral nuclear disarmament by the United States.

Craig and Hellar, who are battling for the 1st District congressional seat, have been squabbling over Hellar's statements on disarmament.

In a news release Monday, Craig said Hellar announced in a Boise television interview last month that he supports some form of limited unilateral arms reductions.

Craig said Hellar must "accept the responsibility to speak and act reasonably and consistently" in his campaign promises.

Idahoans vote for tax hikes

BOISE (AP) — Idahoans may have voted resoundingly for the 1 percent tax initiative in 1978 to limit property taxes, but since then voters have repeatedly returned to the polls to increase taxes.

Such is the finding of the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho in an analysis. It shows voter-imposed property taxes, almost entirely for schools, have nearly doubled since 1978.

That year, the extra property taxes in Idaho were $28 million, but hit $51 million last year.

Russell Westenberg, Associated Taxpayers president, said the same voters who rebelled against property taxes by passing the initiative have imposed on themselves about 20 percent of total property tax charges (in 1983).

Thermal project loses steam

BOISE (AP) — Unless there's some change in financing, expansion of the Boise city geothermal system will come to a stop this fall when the city runs out of federal grant money.

"The grant project is essentially done," said Public Works Director William Ancell. "We're essentially out of money."

One big reason was the 1982 loss of a $1.3 million federal grant. Another is system revenue lower than expected. City officials say less than half the available geothermal energy actually is being sold to customers.

City officials are trying to change those conditions. Ancell said the city is trying to regain $1.3 million in U.S. Department of Energy grant money it lost in 1982.

With that money, the city could extend its geothermal lines downtown across the Boise River to Boise State University, which Ancell said could become a big customer for geothermal energy.

The money would be enough to extend the line to BSU and connect several buildings. Ten campus buildings — including the BSU library, the Morrison Center, the BSU Pavilion, the special events center and several academic buildings — could be reached for an additional $400,000.

"We've made them (DOE) aware that cutting the grant would cause us problems," said Ancell.

According to Pat Sullivan, liaison between U.S. Sen. Jim McClure's staff and the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, the city signed a $4.9 million cooperative agreement in March 1983 with DOE. It included a geothermal project in the downtown area and renovation of the Warm Springs geothermal system.

That, plus $2.9 million in state matching funds and a city contribution, got the project started.

But Ancell says that wasn't enough to complete the large-scale project the city wanted. — A limited partnership with area businessmen was established "to overcome the shortage of money," he said.

When contracts were awarded for the original development area, the costs were lower than expected. In September, 1982, DOE cut the grant by $600,000 because, Sullivan said, the money was not needed to fulfill the original terms of the project. Another $700,000 in "reserve" money was cut later for the same reason, he said.

"That (cut) happened about the time we were ready to go to construction," Ancell said. He said the city argued, without success, that cuts should be made in projects that were not started yet, rather than those that had begun.

Construction will continue this fall. Ancell said, though. "When we make that extension to Boise High, we will have done all the expansion we can do until the system starts generating more money" — or until they convince DOE to return the $1.3 million.

Revenue generated from the hot-water heating system has been about half of what was expected.

Ratepayers can save 30 percent on their heating bills by using geothermal, Ancell said, but he acknowledged the conversion costs can be high and as much as seven years might pass before many building owners recoup their investment.

"Their concern is that, if I have an existing system that's working, why change?" said Carl Ellsworth, city environmental engineer.

Student chemical problems need help

BOISE (AP) — Statistics that show drug use declining among high school students nationwide may be overlooking the importance of helping individuals with a chemical problem, a spokesman for a Minnesota-based education foundation says.

"Even though there might be a slight decrease overall, we're very concerned that in the bigger scope, kids are still having problems that aren't being taken care of," said Tom Griffin of Hazelden-Cork Foundation, a chemical education, rehabilitation, treatment and prevention program headquartered in Center City, Minn.

"Even if the figure is 2 percent, in a student body of 1,000, that's 20 kids," he said.

Griffin was in Boise Monday telling Northwest school activities officials how they can have an impact on student attitudes towards drugs.

Hazelden-Cork has contracted with the National Federation of State High School Associations to conduct a series of eight seminars nationwide to teach administrators how coaches, athletic directors and counselors can make drug and alcohol awareness a part of high school activities.

The Boise seminar drew school officials from Idaho, Alaska, Washington, Oregon, Montana and Wyoming.

Griffin stressed that the focus of the training was not on chemical dependence, but chemical use.

"A kid who drinks and drives even once has a problem with chemicals, even if it's just for that one evening," he said.

Griffin and Bree-Durbin, executive director of the National Federation, said they hoped the program would give students and leaders involved with high school activities access to information about and, if needed, help with drug and alcohol problems.

The familiar, and for the most part accurate, image of clean-cut students heavily involved in school activities such as sports, music or drama is sometimes wide of the mark. Griffin said studies show high school athletes are as likely to use alcohol as other students.

"People have the impression that these kids are somehow immune from the problem, but that's just not the way it is," he said.

Durbin said the National Federation decided to get involved with what has become this year been a program confined to Minnesota schools because federation members felt it was the best way to buttress the group's four fundamental goals for high school activities: to promote fun, provide an opportunity for students to do their best, instill teamwork and a sense of sportsmanship.

"You just can't perform your best if you have this problem," Durbin said.

He said the program has the potential for a "tremendous impact" on students because of the esteem in which most coaches and activities leaders are held.

Hospital venture vote slated at Idaho Falls

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A hospital board will cast votes Sept. 4 on a tentatively approved joint-venture hospital agreement expected to settle Idaho Falls' long debate over health care in the city.

Plans call for a joint venture between Hospital Corp. of America and Intermountain Health Care to replace Idaho Falls Consolidated Hospitals, Intermountain and the Community Hospital Board own Consolidated Hospitals, consisting of the Parkview and Riverview health-care facilities.

The Community Board has tentatively approved the plan and will vote formally next month.

After that vote, Hospital Corp. of America will replace Intermountain Health Care as manager of the Riverview and Parkview hospitals in Idaho Falls.

Construction of a replacement building on a 35-acre site is expected to take two years.

Parkview will be torn down when the new hospital is finished, but the future of the Riverview building hasn't been decided. Proposals include turning the building into office space or housing for senior citizens.

The new hospital will cost $41 million and will have 246 beds, which is about the size of the facility Idaho Falls Consolidated Hospitals wanted to build before the new agreement was reached.

Hospital Corp. of America will bear 51 percent of the construction costs and Intermountain-Health-Care 49 percent.

In addition to reorganizing hospital service in the Idaho Falls area, the new agreement is expected to provide a new source of funding for charities and community projects.

Hospital Corp. of America will give the Community Hospital Board $4.5 million of its share of Idaho Falls Consolidated Hospitals' assets.

The board will invest the money and distribute an estimated $500,000 a year among charities.

LOS ANGELES — Terrified residents of an inner-city neighborhood are afraid to leave their homes — even to go to church — because of five days of apparently random "drive-by" gang shootings in which three people have been killed and five others wounded.

"There's a lot going on around here that the police don't even know about," a woman living near the corner of 91st Place and Normandie Avenue said Monday. She refused to give her name for fear of retaliation.

None of the eight people shot last week was a gang member, police said. "I think these kids are just out terrorizing the neighborhood," L. Dick Simmons said. "It's a typically gang method of operation. They just go back for the territory imperative. They have to rule. Not so much to take over an area, but to bulge out their chests."

The woman said young men gather outside her home to smoke marijuana, drink beer and play loud music on their radios until police come by. "There's a quiet time, and then they come back," she said. "I've seen shootings the police never heard about."

A resident of south-central Los Angeles walks on a street deserted by fears of gang wars.

Police believe at least 11 gangs are active in the area, a few miles north of Los Angeles International Airport and the Forum in Inglewood, home of the Los Angeles Lakers professional basketball team.

The southside neighborhood around the 77th Street Division police station has one of the highest crime rates in the city.

But Detective Lloyd Bryan called last week's eight shootings unusual even for the area.

Resident Mary Threat said she is afraid to leave her home to attend church, and Jerry Bridges, who lives around the corner from Mrs. Threat, said he is careful about venturing too far.

"I don't want to catch any stray bullets," Bridges said. "I just can't talk about it any more."

"I'm a nervous wreck," Mrs. Threat said. Despite the random violence, intimidation and open drug dealing, not everybody in the neighborhood is unfriendly to the thugs.

"When the police come by...they (some residents) just let the gang members in the house and turn on the lights, and they let them hide their guns under the bushes," one resident said.

"This is not unusual," said Bryan, who like Simmons is a member of the police department's Community Resources Against Street Hoodlums (CRASH) unit. "They have friends or relatives or whatever in the area, and they take them in."

The violence is concentrated in a neighborhood of older single-family homes and apartments. Many have trm laws, late model cars in the driveway and nearly all have iron bars over windows and doors.

Mixed in are dilapidated and suspicious homes that residents point to when they talk about violence. One had several bullet holes in the front door.

"They got dope peddlers out here," said a man who said he has lived in the neighborhood for 14 years. "When they (buyers) don't get what they want, they come back and shoot the place up."

Like others interviewed, the man agreed to talk but said "I won't tell you my name. I don't want it used." Simmons said police believe there's "a lot of...major drug activity" among the youths.

"You don't even want to walk the streets out there," he said. "It's stupid. It's pathetic."

Organized crime not in hotel union

By DAVID GOELLER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Senate subcommittee charged Monday that organized crime exerts "substantial influence" over the hotel workers union, but the labor group said the accusation was part of a "premeditated effort" to discredit the union and its leaders.

"Numerous officers and employees have documented ties to organized crime figures, and there is little doubt that Local 64 (Atlantic City) is now controlled, and Locals 226 (Las Vegas) and 30 (San Diego) have been influenced in the past, by organized crime interests," the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations said.

The allegation was the central conclusion in a report the subcommittee filed with the Senate, ending a three-year probe of the 400,000-member Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees International Union.

The report also said that benefit plans for union members have been mismanaged and that "the membership has been cheated by an international union payroll padded with associates, relatives and cronies of top (hotel union) officers and persons associated with organized crime."

The international union has stiffed rank-and-file dissent by taking over operation of rebellious locals through a merger and trusteeship system that "serves to perpetuate corruption and incompetence within the international union," according to the report. The subcommittee said its work was "seriously obstructed" by the refusal of seven union officials, including international president Edward T. Hanley, to answer questions by invoking their constitutional rights against self-incrimination. Citing a long-standing AFL-CIO policy against union leaders continuing in office after taking the Fifth Amendment, the panel called upon Hanley and the others to either resign or be removed by the membership through the union's election process.

In a written response to the report, the union denied any connections with organized crime and said the panel's probe "was not a fair and impartial inquiry into the union's operations."

"Rather, it appears to have been a premeditated effort on the part of the subcommittee to destroy the reputation and credibility of the union and its officers," the union said.

The union said that for the subcommittee to criticize its officials for invoking the Fifth Amendment "is to criticize the Constitution itself."

The investigation, the union charged, "relied upon unauthorized (Justice Department) leaks and innuendo, as well as the testimony of convicted felons, admitted perjurers, psychopathic liars and thoroughly discredited witnesses."

One witness singled out by the union was Joseph Hauser, a convicted swindler who told the senators that Hanley was hand-picked for his job by Anthony "Big Tuna" Accardo, one of the reputed heads of the Chicago mob.

Testifying under court order earlier this year, Accardo denied any links to the union. The subcommittee has asked the Justice Department to review Accardo's testimony for possible perjury.

The report said that "the evidence presented to the subcommittee indicates that organized crime interests, primarily in Chicago, have exerted substantial influence over the affairs of the international union." It said the Atlantic City local is controlled by the Philadelphia crime family headed by Angelo Bruno until he was gunned down in 1980.

Problems found in military drug testing

Service discipline records wiped clean

SEATTLE (AP) — Sloppy testing and paperwork have forced the Navy and Air Force to reverse disciplinary action against more than 5,000 servicemen charged in a huge military crackdown on illegal drugs, The Seattle Times reported.

The Army, meanwhile, is trying to track down 60,000 to 70,000 soldiers to tell them faulty documentation of their drug tests may allow them to appeal disciplinary action, according to a copyright story in Sunday's Times.

The Navy, Army, Air Force and Marines over the last 2½ years have conducted 6 million tests on urine samples from servicemen, with about 575,000 tests indicating drug use, and 72,000 servicemen being disciplined, the newspaper said.

The testing program was started in 1982 by now-retired Chief of Naval Operations Thomas Hayward, and spread from the Navy to the other branches of the military, the newspaper said.

Hayward approved the program despite warnings from his staff that there would be serious problems because military laboratories were not prepared to handle the expected volume of urine samples, the newspaper said.

The Navy now admits that tests falsely indicated drug use, and some drug users who go undisciplined because of the flaws in the testing program, the newspaper said.

The newspaper reported the following: The Navy has reversed disciplinary action taken against 1,846 sailors who were wrongly accused of drug use because of sloppiness at its Drug Testing Laboratory in Oakland, Calif.

When the testing program was launched, the laboratory's work load doubled without an addition to its staff of six. Eventually the test load was increased 45-fold — from 600 samples per month in 1981 to 30,000 in 1983. Relatively untrained personnel were called in from other parts of the hospital where the lab is located, but a Navy report found the facility showed signs of "operational breakdown."

The Air Force revealed last week that drug cases against 3,400 Air Force personnel brought between April 1982 and November 1983 are being reversed because of equipment and personnel problems at Brooks Air Force Base in San Antonio, Texas.

A commission found no evidence of false results from the test at Brooks. But testimony during pre-trial court martial hearings involving two Florida airmen revealed that quality-control experts at the base collected a huge file of documents showing that urine samples had been mishandled and misidentified.

Army Col. William W. Manders, one of the two scientists who designed the drug testing system for the military, has since denounced the way the military is conducting it. He has testified for the defense in several courts martial.

The military says the program has been effective in stamping out drug abuse. Adm. James D. Watkins, chief of military operations, said marijuana and narcotics abuse in the Navy has dropped, from involving an estimated 48 percent of personnel in 1980 to less than 10 percent today. Hayward, owner of a consulting firm in Honolulu, said he realized his decision led to some bad testing and that some sailors were wrongly accused of drug use.

Families

Kids of alcoholics grow up feeling isolated, mistrustful

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — In conjunction with the State of Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, the Walker ACT Center has put together an ongoing program that addresses the problems common to adult children of alcoholics.

Gall Cushman, associate counselor and Children of Alcoholics program coordinator, says it is geared for children 4 to 18 years of age, and that it is being presented in Twin Falls, Jerome, Gooding, Halley, Burley and Rupert.

"Children, in order to grow into normal adults, capable of long-term relationships, need to have a safe and predictable environment," she says. "When the disease of alcoholism is in the family, the environment is anything but predictable."

Cushman says the consequences are that adult children of alcoholics often feel isolated and alone with an inability to trust anyone.

"They may have an extreme need to control, an excessive sense of responsibility and a denial of feelings," she says.

"Combined, these problems result in low self esteem, depression, isolation, guilt and difficulty maintaining satisfying relationships," problems which Cushman says often persist into adulthood.

"People living in a family where alcohol is abused often fail to discuss the disease with each other and with anyone outside the family," she points out, adding, "They may never learn to talk with others about their problems, and grow up holding resentments within themselves."

"They reach adulthood," she says, "not knowing that sharing with another person is an expected routine. In essence, they don't know how to make a relationship grow."

Cushman says even the non-drinking parent becomes an object of distrust because she/he often lies to the children to cover up for broken promises made by the alcoholic parent.

The counselor says anger may be the routine in the child's life.

"He or she sees it displayed from the alcoholic to the other family members and from the non-alcoholic parent toward his/her spouse. In the process, anger is confused with love," she says.

Cushman says of the more than 150 emotions psychologists say most of us experience throughout our lives, the child of an alcoholic may feel and recognize only about 10 or 12.

Citing a report by the National Association for Children of Alcoholics, Cushman says about 90 percent of child abuse cases have alcohol as a significant factor, and that a disproportionate number of juveniles who enter the justice system, courts and prison, are children of alcoholics.

Other alarming problems she points to are that children of alcoholics tend to marry alcoholics or become alcoholics themselves.

"They learn to use alcohol as an acceptable way of lessening stress," she says.

Concerning the on-going program, Cushman says, "We gear it to help the alcoholic and his or her family learn to live and love again. A variety of topics will be taught, including decision-making and communications. It is both an informative and support group."

She invites those interested in the program, or seeking information about drug dependency to call 934-8461 or 1-800-227-4190.

Families need to get tough, make alcoholics responsible

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — "Quit protecting alcoholics. Make them responsible for themselves. Make them responsible for their own money and their own lives. If an alcoholic in your family calls from the police station on a Friday night and asks you to post bond on a drunk driving charge, let them stay in jail until Monday morning."

"That statement comes from the mouth of a 45-year-old male—a recovering alcoholic who has been dry for six years now and who, for the sake of anonymity, we'll call Ed.

"You're not doing us any favors by trying to protect us from our disease," Ed continues. "It took my wife 15 years to learn that, finally, she'd had enough. She quit going to the liquor store for me. She quit making morning telephone calls to my employer explaining that I was ill and couldn't show up. She quit enabling me to drink."

Ed says with a troubled marriage, fear of job problems and the positive act of seeing a friend after she'd gone through forced alcohol treatment, he finally decided to seek help.

"I wanted to have what she had," he says of the sobered friend.

Like most alcoholics, Ed has other alcoholics in his family—only more.

"In my family, you don't ask who is an alcoholic, you ask, who isn't," he says, noting that both his parents along with many aunts and uncles, cousins and fellow siblings are almost all addicted.

He says he was in his late 20s before he realized his parents were alcoholics.

"As a kid, I knew something was different about

'You're not doing us any favors by trying to protect us from our disease.'
—Ed, a recovering alcoholic my family when comparing it to other kids' families, but I didn't know what. Just that their lives didn't seem to be as messed up as mine didn't," he says.

Ed remembers that they moved a together and that his parents fought often when they drank—sometimes physically. And all the kids, including himself, left home by the age of 15 or 16—most already drinking by then.

But, Ed says his parents did care for the kids even though there was some mental abuse. He cares for them, too, and that creates mental anguish for him because he says neither will admit the disease which has given them both severe liver damage.

"I've only been able to deal with it [his parents' alcoholism] the last six months," he says wistfully—"I don't want to see them die. They're killing themselves and don't even know it. I let them want them to live out the last years of their lives awake."

"Our society condones alcoholism," he says. "Even employees seem to say to their employees, 'It's okay as long as you function the way I want you to function.' And," he asks, "when was the last time...you went to a convention...or business gathering that wasn't centered around the cocktail hour?"

Referring to both politics and private enterprise, he points out, "Business gets done where drinking gets done."

Cautioning against the stereotype of the alcoholic as a town drunk, Ed offers his own definition: "Anyone who has family, social, health or financial problems due to drinking—and keeps on drinking—is an alcoholic."

"Don't associate it with skid row," he admonishes. "The typical alcoholic can be a good furniture maker, lawyer, carpenter or policeman. Most others don't spot him as one, but he or she has hassles with the spouse, has half a hangover every morning and little physical ailments. He can go to work but can't contribute what he's worth."

Using himself as an example, Ed was a public servant who never drank on the job.

"But, after work it was always a stop-off at the bar with friends for two or three drinks, then a trip to the store for a six pack to take home," he says.

"I was a maintenance drunk," he says. "Not falling down in the gutter drunk, rather, I drank just enough each evening to keep my blood alcohol level comfortable."

The new brings him to snicker when asked about the new beers advertising less alcohol content.

"I'd love to own one of those breweries. Instead of one six pack, now they'll sell the alcoholic two. An alcoholic doesn't drink ex amount of beer, he drinks ex amount of alcohol—and he'll keep drinking to his alcohol level."

On the subject of quitting, Ed thinks it was worth it even if it did cause a "mutual divorce" between himself and old friends.

He says he was the primary reason one of his brothers quit. "It's nice to be an example for someone else," he says.

Walker Center teaches basic family survival techniques

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — The Walker ACT Center considers chemical dependency not just a problem of the addict, but a disease of the entire family.

Director Tim Kelly tells patients and visitors at the center that, unlike most professions that deal with chemical dependency as a secondary illness, Walker Center considers it a primary disease.

"It's not other problems that cause drinking and drug use," he says, "it's drinking and drug use that cause problems."

Kelly says besides being primary, the disease is also progressive, chronic and, if not arrested, fatal. It's a disease that denial plays a large role in and one in which mild problems grow to real problems, he adds.

Explaining the chronic nature of the disease, Kelly says even in the arrested or dry stage, alcoholism continues to grow like a tiger in a cage.

"At first the tiger within you is a kitten. It is soft and cuddly and makes you feel good. But, soon it grows claws," he says.

"Stopping drinking only puts a cage around the growing tiger," he warns. Kelly points out that no matter how long an alcoholic goes without a drink, if he ever has another one, he's just let a full-grown tiger out of the cage.

"Alcoholism is a gradual, insidious disease," he says, noting that first one drinks to sense euphoria, then later to feel normal. The final result is drinking to suppress pain and shame which leads to incarceration, insanity, death or sobriety.

Mary Louise Ruel, a counselor at the center, lectures families of addicts in a basic survival course. She says families face the same denial problem as the addict himself, and that the first part of recovery lies in communication.

She says family members don't talk about the problem because of denial or shame or the desire not to fight.

They don't trust the alcoholic because he/she has learned to con and manipulate others. Eventually, many members simply try not to feel.

She says other members of the family assume roles such as "chief enabler," "scapegoat," "family hero," "lost child" and "mascot" in response to the problem.

"Because these patterns are compulsive, people take this behavior into their relationships," she says, pointing out that these roles stem from repressed feelings that eventually become primary problems themselves.

She says that the only way to not carry these roles into other relationships, is to be aware of them.

Mystery, romance give Oriental rugs a long history

By BARBARA MAYER
The Associated Press

The Greek historian Herodotus and the poet Homer admired them. Cleopatra had herself wrapped in one and delivered to Julius Caesar. Egyptian temples and Arabian mosques that are 25 centuries old have been furnished with them.

The objects in question are Oriental rugs. Today, as throughout most of recorded history, Oriental rugs are so highly esteemed that 80 percent of all area rug sales are Orientals and Oriental-style rugs, according to one manufacturer.

One reason for the popularity of Orientals is undoubtedly the mystery and romance that surround them. Consider these facts: In 1949, the oldest known Oriental rug was discovered in Siberia by Russian archeologists in the tomb of a Scythian chieftain. The rug, made 500 years before the birth of Christ, was perfectly preserved, as was the tomb, in a solid block of ice.

One of the most famous Persian rugs, the Ardabil Mosque carpet, was completed in 1540 by Mosoud of Kazerun.

Another fabulous Persian carpet is the Garden Carpet of Khorro I. The carpet, studded with jewels and semi-precious stones, was captured in A.D. 635 by the Arabs when they defeated the Persians in battle.

Blaring radios bother other workers

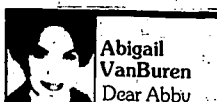

DEAR ABBY: I am a 55-year-old man, working in a defense plant. I've been employed by this company for 20 years, make good money, have good benefits, and I'm looking forward to retirement in 10 years.

The problem: RADIOS!
The younger men bring them to work and play loud rock music (full blast) Not all the radios are tuned to the same station and the noise is nerve-racking. We older men can barely stand it. These radios are not turned off at break time or during lunch. The supervisor says it's OK by him; no harm done.

We suggested headphones. Our suggestion was ignored.
I can't afford to quit at my age; I have too much to lose in benefits. Besides, at 55, who will hire me?

If you answer this, I will post it on the bulletin board.

DEAR BLACKIE: Appeal to the boss again. It's his job to see that a maximum of work is produced in a safe and peaceful environment.

No one should be permitted to infringe on the rights of a fellow worker. And how about the safety factor? A worker might build up too much anger and resentment, he could eventually blow his top and injure himself or others.
It's unfair to be subjected to noise pollution that could easily be eliminated. I say that those who want to listen to rock 'n' roll on the job should be required to wear headsets out of consideration to others.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have enjoyed a truly happy marriage, and for our 25th anniversary I would like to recreate our wedding day. I have already reserved the church where we will renew our vows (the same pastor is still there), and we will have a wedding dinner following the ceremony.

I still fit into my wedding gown. It's in perfect condition, and I would like to wear it. My husband would wear a tuxedo. My family is in favor of it, but I don't want to do anything that would be considered poor taste.

Most of my "wedding party" are still in the area. None, however, is able to wear her gown. Only the flower girl's dress is in perfect condition, and could be worn by the daughter of the original flower girl.

What do you think? Please be honest, Abby.

—MRS. E.B. SCHAUMBURG
DEAR MRS. B.: It's a wonderful idea. Go for it! Congratulations. And many, many more.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell your readers that when they are in someone else's home and they flip a switch that they assume will turn on a light, and no light appears, to please turn off the switch.

They may have turned on a yard light or a basement light, and it might be days before it is discovered by the home owner. Meanwhile it's a terrible waste of electricity.

The same rule should be followed in someone else's car. We have had people push a button in our car, thinking it will unlock a door, when they have pushed the button for the reading lights. Not until dark, or maybe two days later, do we discover it because the battery is dead!

People should turn off whatever they have turned on. If it doesn't produce a light or open a car door — SHUT IT OFF!

Hotline ready for calls

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Mental Health Association hotline is expanding its services to better serve Magic Valley residents.

Pat Thompson, chairman, said the hotline, which is manned by trained volunteers, serves as a listening post for people in need of a friendly ear, offers advice when asked and provides a referral service. Calls of a serious nature are referred to the crisis line at the Mental Health Center.

The hotline, 733-0122, which is funded by the United Way, will now be available daily from 5 p.m.

to 7 a.m. with 24-hour service on weekends. It previously was available only from 9 p.m. to 7 a.m., Thompson said.

The Mental Health Association-sponsored service, which has been operating for more than a decade, handles anywhere from 50 to 75 calls per month, she said.

"Its volunteers are sympathetic caring people who find satisfaction in helping their fellow men," Thompson said.

Anyone interested in working on the hotline may call Thompson at 734-8028 or Joy Kizer at the Mental Health center for an interview.

Productivity climbs faster than pay scale

By ROBERT FURLOW The Associated Press WASHINGTON — Business productivity jumped at an annual rate of 4.7 percent in the second quarter...

was the sixth straight gain, the most since the department began compiling this report in 1947. Output of U.S. workers rose at a rate of 9.6 percent...

The productivity increase was the biggest since 8.1 percent at an annual rate in the second quarter of last year. Gains since then had been 2.1 percent, 1 percent and 2.9 percent.

Wall Street in summer slump; stock volume, prices both fall

NEW YORK (AP) — The combination of interest-rate worries and late-summer vacations added up to lower stock prices and the quietest trading in a year on Wall Street Monday.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market fell 1.49 to 253.29. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 214.92 down 1.09.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials lost 1.17 to 189.21, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 1.07 at 166.44.

Albertson's a gainer

BOISE (AP) — The Albertson's supermarket chain has reported second-quarter increases of 11 percent in sales and 17 percent in earnings.

This year's second-quarter earnings of $19 million compare with $16.2 million for the same period a year ago.

Albertson's, a chain of 432 stores, opened three new stores during the second quarter, closed two older buildings and remodeled and expanded seven.

UNR favored to repeat title

BOISE (AP) — The University of Nevada-Reno, 1983 Big Sky Conference football champion, and NCAA Division I-AA semifinalist, has been picked as the pre-season favorite by both the coaches and media in a poll conducted earlier this summer at the Big Sky Conference Football Kick-Off.

The Wolf Pack, under the direction of veteran coach Chris Ault, was the easy winner in the voting by the eight Big Sky head football coaches and 35 sportscasters and sportswriters who cover the league. The voting was conducted in late July at the Big Sky's 10th annual Football Kick-Off in Sun Valley.

The coaches and media polls turned out almost identical. The coaches had Boise State and Idaho State in a tie for second place while the media tabbed BSU second and ISU third in their poll. The only other difference was for the No. 5 and No. 6 spots with the coaches picking Idaho and Montana and the media reversing those selections.

Nevada-Reno received four of the eight first place ballots in the coaches poll, as well as two second-place and one third-place vote for a total of 52 points. Coaches were not allowed to vote for their own team.

Three other teams, Boise State, Idaho State, and Northern Arizona, also got first-place nods from the coaches. The Broncos had two first-place votes and 43 total points. ISU had one first-place vote but tied BSU for second spot with 43 points. NAU had one first-place vote and 40 total points.

The rest of the coaches poll went Idaho, 34 points; Montana, 31 points; Weber State, 23 points; and Montana State, 14 points.

In the media poll Nevada-Reno received votes for the No. 1 to be No. 6 position, but 32 of the ballots cast for the Wolf Pack came in the first three spots. UNR got 15 first-place votes, seven for No. 2 and 10 for No. 3 for 241 points.

Like the coaches poll Boise State, Idaho State and Northern Arizona were the only other teams to get first-place ballots. BSU had 10 for 220 points; Idaho State nine for 216 points; and Northern Arizona received one for 168 points.

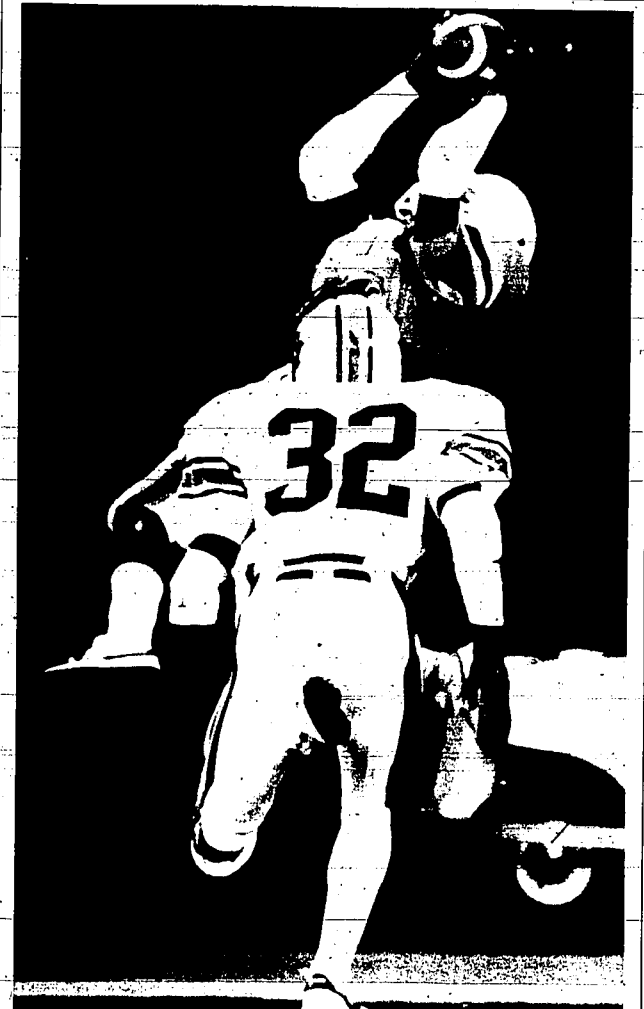

The remainder of the poll had Montana at No. 5, 144 points; Idaho, No. 6 with 142 points; Weber State, No. 7 with 88 points; and Montana State No. 8 with 44 points.

Idaho pair lauded

In pre-season

BOISE (AP) — Quarterback Marty Mornhinweg of Montana, linebacker Carl Keever of Boise State and quarterback Vern Harris, of Idaho State have been picked as the offensive, defensive and top newcomer of the year respectively by the media at the recent Big Sky Conference Football Kick-Off at Sun Valley.

Mornhinweg, San Jose, Calif., red-shirted last season for the Grizzlies. During the 1982 season he helped guide Montana to the Big Sky Conference title and a berth in the first round of the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs.

The 5-foot-11-inch, 185-pound senior passed for 1,569 yards and 12 touchdowns during the 1982 season and completed 61.9 percent of his passes to lead the Big Sky with a rating of 131.6 and 14 pass completions per game.

Others receiving votes were Northern Arizona quarterback Mike Mendoza, Boise State quarterback Hazen Choates, Harris, Montana State tight end Joe Bignell, Nevada-Reno running back Anthony Gooden, Idaho State running back Merrill Hoge and Boise State running back Jon Francis.

CARL KEEVER
Defensive player

Keever, a senior linebacker from Boise, edged Montana State linebacker Mark Fellows and Northern Arizona tackle James Gee for the defensive honor.

The 6-foot-3-inch, 230-pounder has been the leading tackler for Boise State the past two seasons. He is a two-time all-Big Sky Conference selection and was named last season to The Associated Press first-team All-America squad.

He was named the Big Sky's newcomer of the year during his first season with the Broncos after receiving the same honor in the Pac-10 as a freshman at Oregon State before transferring to Boise State.

Others receiving votes were Boise State tackle Marcus Koch, Nevada-Reno linebacker Mark McVeigh, Idaho State tackle Bob Otto, Nevada-Reno lineman Jeff Loutzenhiser, Idaho State noseguard

VERN HARRIS
Top newcomer

Steve Anderson and Nevada-Reno safety Pat Hunter.

Harris, a 6-foot-2-inch, 191-pound junior from LaMirada, Calif., is Idaho State's No. 1 quarterback this season. He was able to learn the Bengal offense as a redshirt last year. Without ever having played in down in a regular season ISU game he has been selected as team captain.

Harris transferred from Fullerton Community College to Idaho State after attending San Francisco State as a freshman.

Others receiving votes were Idaho wide receiver Eric Varber, Francis, Weber State running back Gerald Pitts, Nevada-Reno kicker Martin Zendejas, Nevada-Reno offensive tackle Phil Harbour, Idaho quarterback Scott Linehan, Nevada-Reno receiver Thai Ivory and Weber State quarterback Kevin Villars.

Lackluster Irish better plan on Faust start this season

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last in a series of articles previewing the college prospects from various regions of the country.

By JOE MOOSHIL
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Notre Dame could be on the verge of regaining national stature, while a wide-open race in the Big Ten should highlight the Midwest football season.

But unless Notre Dame does a complete reversal, there doesn't appear to be much hope of a Midwest team claiming the national championship. The Big Ten plays another round-robin schedule, and an undefeated season is unlikely because of a balance of power.

This will be a pivotal season for Coach Gerry Faust, who enters his fourth season of a five-year contract at Notre Dame. There he has produced an unglamorous record of 18-15-1, including last season's 19-18 Liberty Bowl triumph over Boston College.

This will also be Faust's first made up entirely of his own recruits. "We've built the foundation, now we have to build the building," said Faust.

Quarterback Steve Beuerlein, who started eight games as a freshman, will be operating behind a huge and talented offensive line. Allen Pinckett, the team's leading rusher and receiver, is back and could break all existing Irish rushing records as a junior this year.

In the Big Ten, Illinois will have trouble defending its championship. Quarterback Jack Trudeau is back to lead a veteran offense, but the Illinois lost their entire defensive front line. Recent NCAA sanctions, including no-hourly games, could play havoc to morale, although Coach Mike White likes to joke: "Turnoff motivates me."

Illinois caught Iowa, Ohio State and Michigan at home last season. This time, all three games against the powerful contenders are on the road.

NFC West neighborhood gets much tougher this year

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last in a series of six previews on the prospects of the National Football League's six divisions this year.

By ERIC PREWITT
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Bum Phillips, coach of the New Orleans Saints, would prefer getting just one look per season at opposing stars such as Joe Montana, Eric Dickerson, Steve Bartkowski and Williams Andrews.

But the Saints must again go twice around against those three and the other Pro Bowl players in the National Football Conference West, a division with no soft spots in 1984. The race was extremely close, with the winning, San Francisco 49ers finished three games ahead of last-place Atlanta.

All four NFC West teams consider themselves of playoff caliber going into this season. By Phillips' reckoning, the competition is automatically tougher than in the conference's other divisions.

"That's because in a four-team division, you don't get to play a fifth-place team twice," he explains.

The 49ers, 10-6, and second-place Los Angeles Rams reached the playoffs last season. The Rams, 9-7, deprived the Saints, 8-8, of a playoff berth and first winning season by beating New Orleans 26-24 in the final game of the season on Mike Lansford's 42-yard field goal in the closing seconds.

Atlanta, 7-9, had the National Football League's top-rated quarterback in Bartkowski, who passed for 3,167 yards and 22 touchdowns and was intercepted only five times. Teammate Andrews, with 1,857 yards, was the league's No. 2 rusher behind sensational Rams rookie Dickerson, who ran for 1,808 yards and 18 touchdowns.

The Saints, who have a 1,000-yard rusher in George Rogers, are the only NFC West team with a pre-season battle for the quarterback job. New Orleans got Richard Todd in an off-season trade with the New York Jets; and the former Atlanta star is competing against Ken Stabler and David Wilson.

Stabler threw only nine TD passes and allowed 18 interceptions last year. Todd, who passed for 3,478 yards, was intercepted 26 times, but he had an excellent interception-free game in the Jets' 27-13 pounding of the NFC West champion 49ers.

The Niners' Montana was not far behind; Bartkowski is passing efficiently, with statistics including 3,910 yards, 26 TDs and 12 interceptions. Newcomers Wendell Tyler and Roger Craig gave the team an improved running attack, combining for 1,681 yards.

"This team is reaching full maturity on offense. We appear to have many of the components needed to make a great offensive unit," 49ers Coach Bill Walsh says.

The 49ers were the top scoring

White ends holdout against Dallas

By DENNEH FREEMAN
The Associated Press

ProFootball

DALLAS — Randy White ended a month-long holdout with the Dallas Cowboys on Monday by signing a multi-year contract. He said he decided to return after "hearing the second half of the game Saturday night on the radio while I was driving around in my truck."
"I'm extremely happy and holding out was one of the toughest things I ever did in my life," the All-Pro defensive tackle told The Associated Press.

White, who was in the option year of his contract, would have made about $350,000 this season. He had been asking for an average of $1.3 million a year for four years, which would have made him the highest-paid lineman in the National Football League.
He refused Monday to disclose terms of the new contract.
"I gave a little and they gave a little," he said. "It was a good contract."

White said he discussed the offer Sunday with his agent, Howard Sushner, and then called Cowboys president Tex Schramm.
Asked if he thought he would be starting against the Los Angeles Rams in the Cowboys' season-opening game Sept. 3, White said, "I'm in good condition, but I haven't talked to Coach (Tom) Landry. I am ready and willing to contribute any way I can."

"There's no doubt I'm going to be sore this week, but it will be the first time in my life I will be happy to be sore," he said.
The contract apparently made White the highest paid Cowboy. Quarterback Danny White made $550,000 a year.
White, a big smile on his face, went around the Cowboys office Monday shaking hands with secretaries and office workers and said, "I don't think I'll be going fishing for a while. I was getting a little tired of it."
White spent all but three days of his holdout fishing on East Texas lakes, and was sighted in the Mount Pleasant area only last Friday.
But it was the 31-24 preseason victory Saturday night over the Houston Oilers that put White in the mood that he couldn't stay away from football.
If White is activated, the Cowboys would have to cut another player from their roster.

Jets sign Walker, waive Carmichael

By The Associated Press

Wesley Walker, the New York Jets' star wide receiver, ended a training camp holdout Monday as National Football League teams pared their rosters to 49 in preparation for Sunday's regular-season opener.

The return of Walker, who had been seeking to renegotiate his contract, paved the way for the release by the Jets of 34-year-old Harold Carmichael, whom the Jets had signed as a wide receiver insurance. Carmichael, who played with the Philadelphia Eagles for 13 seasons before being released last winter, holds the NFL record of 127 straight games with at least one pass reception.

Numerous veterans were released in addition to Carmichael.
The New York Giants cut two players who started last year, guard J.T. Turner and wide receiver John Mittleer. They also placed veteran quarterback Tom Owen on injured reserve and cut veteran defensive backs Mike Dennis and Pete Shaw along with Bill Neill, a one-time starter at nose tackle who has missed most of the last three seasons with injuries.

The Giants also obtained a roster exemption allowing them to keep Mark Haynes, a starting cornerback who walked out of camp last week above the 49-player roster limit and announced they had acquired defensive back Ken Hill from the Los Angeles Raiders for an undisclosed draft choice.

Chicago cut veteran punter Ray Stachowitz, among 11 players trimmed from the Bears' roster, and gave his job to Dave Finzer, acquired for a draft choice from San Diego. The San Francisco 49ers cut four players and also said that contract talks with their holdout player, defensive end Fred Dean, had gotten nowhere.

The Cincinnati Bengals cut seven players, including five veterans. Fifth-year offensive lineman Blake Moore was one of the cuts.

The Los Angeles Rams settled on a placekicker for the coming season, cutting Chuck Nelson and giving the job to Mike Lansford. Both players had gone to the University of Washington. At the same time, the Rams announced that they had traded defensive back George Radachowsky to Indianapolis for an undisclosed draft choice.

The Atlanta Falcons cut three players who started at least part time last year — defensive end Jeff Yearas, a 13-year veteran, running back Bo Robinson, a six-year veteran, and six-year defensive tackle Mike Zele.

The New Orleans Saints asked waivers on punter Russell Erxleben, their top draft choice in 1980, while the Los Angeles Rams released place-kicker Chuck Nelson, who lost his battle with former Washington teammate Mike Lansford for the team's kicking honors.

Another veteran kicker to go was Greg Cater, the Buffalo Bills' punter and with him from Buffalo went running back Roland Hooks, starting his ninth season with the Bills. Hooks has been hobbled by injuries the past two seasons.

The Detroit Lions released 12 players, including Ulysses Norris, a part-time starter at tight end last season and announced they would take the unusual step of keeping four quarterbacks — starter Gary Danielson, Eric Hipple, Mike Machurek and rookie John Witkowski. The Lions also announced they had acquired linebacker Angelo King from the Dallas Cowboys for an undisclosed 1986 draft choice.

The Miami Dolphins released quarterback Dean May, a fifth-round draft choice who ran 1 yard for a touchdown on the final play of preseason, and announced they were switching Jim Jensen back to quarterback from wide receiver. Veteran linebacker Sanders Silver was among Miami's other cuts along with rookie linebackers Rowland Tatam of Ohio State and Mike Weingrad of Illinois.

Woodley follows Bradshaw

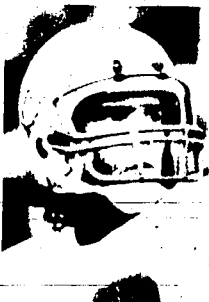

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers' great quarterback debate was ended Monday — at least for now — as Coach Chuck Noll named David Woodley as the starter for Sunday's season opener against the Kansas City Chiefs.

"He put points on the board, that was the big thing," Noll said of Woodley, the former Miami Dolphins' starter who lost his job a year ago to former University of Pittsburgh star Dan Marino.

Woodley completed 26 of 53 passing attempts for 521 yards, three touchdowns and four interceptions in the preseason.

His rival, Mark Malone, who spent four years as a backup to Terry Bradshaw, wasn't as effective. Malone was just 25 of 60 for 353 yards, didn't throw a touchdown and had four interceptions.

"One of the handicaps both quarterbacks had in the preseason was that they didn't have one unit very much. We have to get it to where they're working with a few people," Noll said. "We were playing so many people, but I thought they both were good. Malone was not upset when he learned of the decision. "I knew a decision had to be reached eventually. You can't look at it as a make it or break it situation for either of our careers," Malone said. "Especially after last year, I don't think that's etched in stone."

"Maybe after last year, they won't be as hesitant to use another guy if things don't go well," Malone said. Noll said the Steelers' backup quarterback will get more work in practice than in the past, when Bradshaw had a lock on the job.

The now-departed Cliff Stoudt won the job by default a year ago when Bradshaw was able to play in only one game because of an aching right arm. The ache didn't go away, but Bradshaw did, retiring to a broadcaster's job with CBS-TV.

Bradshaw's name, frequently mentioned in such sessions in the past, came up only once Monday in the first of Noll's weekly news conferences.

Noll was asked who the backup punter would be should Craig Colquitt be hurt.

"You don't know?" Noll asked, glancing upwards in mock surprise. "The same guy it's always been... Terry Bradshaw."

Nampa station to air Vandals

NAMPA — Nampa television station KTRV, Channel 9 on cable in the Magic Valley, has signed a contract with the University of Idaho to televise six Vandal football games this fall.

At present, the plans call for delayed broadcast of the game, beginning at 10:30 p.m. MDT. Some of the games may be broadcast live.

The games are the Portland State-Idaho game on Sept. 8, the Montana State-Idaho game on Sept. 22, Oregon State-Idaho on Sept. 29, Weber State-Idaho on Oct. 13, Northern Arizona-Idaho on Nov. 3 and Idaho State-Idaho on Nov. 10.

The station and the university have also reached agreement on televising a minimum of 10 Idaho basketball games this year.

Football checkout at O'Leary

TWIN FALLS — Equipment for eighth grade football players at O'Leary Junior High school will be checked out Thursday and Friday of this week.

The equipment checkouts will be at 5 p.m. at the gym.

Regular football practice will start Thursday, Sept. 4, at 3 p.m.

Boys should bring their completed physical examination forms at the time of the uniform checkout.

Bruin corn feed Wednesday

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls High School Bruin Boosters will sponsor a free corn feed Wednesday night in Bruin Stadium.

The 6:15 p.m. event is for all incoming and returning Bruin athletes, their parents and families. Anyone interested in Twin Falls High School athletics is also invited to attend.

Coaches for the fall and winter sports program will be introduced and speak briefly about upcoming events. Entertainment will be provided by the Sawtooth Country Cloggers, the Twin Falls High School Band and the German Band.

Season tickets for the 1984-85 school year will be available.

Further information can be obtained by phoning Billie Bartholomew at 733-1285 or Paultette Ellis at 733-8620.

Rowland fires ace at Muni

TWIN FALLS — Gary Rowland of Twin Falls shot a hole-in-one on the par 3, 152-yard No. 4 hole at the Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course last weekend.

Rowland pulled off the feat with a nine iron.

Pell resigns at Florida

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The University of Florida accepted the resignation of head football coach Charley Pell Monday, but incoming school President Marshall Criser said the Southeastern Conference institution tentatively plans to honor Pell's request to complete the 1984 season.

Pell, whose program has been under NCAA investigation for the past 20 months, submitted his hand-written resignation Sunday and informed his players of his decision later that night.

Criser told a news conference Monday that the 43-year-old coach would retain his job at least until the NCAA releases the results of its probe.

"The exact effective date will be determined by the university," Criser said.

He said the NCAA is still conducting the investigation and declined to speculate on when it might reach a conclusion. In the meantime, he said university officials will keep abreast of developments and take whatever action they deem necessary "at the appropriate time."

Thompson sues Studio 54

NEW YORK (AP) — David Thompson of the Seattle SuperSonics filed a $20 million lawsuit Monday against the owners of the Studio 54 discotheque, charging its employees may have ended his career by assaulting him.

The 6-foot-7-inch guard charged that as a result of a beating he suffered inside the Manhattan club last March 10, his "career as a professional basketball player has been placed in severe jeopardy and may not be continued."

He said the beating caused him to miss most of the 1983-84 National Basketball Association season.

The suit at U.S. District Court in Manhattan asserts that Thompson was walking up a flight of stairs at 5 a.m. when he was attacked by an employee, identified in the suit as defendant Martin Santolugo of Staten Island.

Thompson, who lives in Englewood, Colo., fell down the stairs, where other employees grabbed him, dragged him, and threw him onto the street, the suit charges. Thompson said he suffered a permanent knee injury, as well as injuries to his head and teeth.

CNN: Holmes-Coetzee is on

ATLANTA (AP) — The long-awaited heavyweight fight between International Boxing Federation champion Larry Holmes and World Boxing Association champion Gerrie Coetzee will take place Nov. 16 at the Mack Athletic Center in Las Vegas, a television network reported Monday.

Although no firm dollar figure was released, the bout is to be promoted by Don King and Steve Wynn, will reportedly be worth $5 million to Holmes and $3 million to Coetzee, Cable News Network reported Monday.

The meeting of Holmes and Coetzee has been scheduled before but problems always arose to stall the confrontation.

The original date of the fight was June 8 in Las Vegas, but that fell through. On June 18, Holmes announced that he and King, with whom he has had public battles over the promotion of his fights, had signed an agreement for a fight with Coetzee in either September or October.

The pause that rejuvenates

Midwest

"The same four teams will be in the race and maybe Wisconsin and Michigan State have a chance," said Michigan's Ed Schembechler, dean of Big Ten coaches. "I can't pick a team in the Big Ten, but if I have to, I'll take Michigan."

Hayden-Fry at Iowa and Earle Bruce at Ohio State have cause for optimism.

Fry has all 11 defensive starters and 20 of the first 22 players on defense returning. He also has quarterback Chuck Long, who was No. 1 in the conference in passing efficiency and ranked second only to Brigham Young University's Steve Young nationally.

Fry calls Long "the first quarterback in the nation going into the season, First-team All-America and a Heisman Trophy candidate. We're good. How good? That depends on how our offensive line develops."

Ohio State has a super runner in Keith Byars, who topped the Big Ten in rushing and scoring. But quarterback Mike Tomczak, who suffered a broken leg last spring, is questionable.

"He has great healing power," said Bruce optimistically. "Some people have to come through for us defensively. Defense is what wins in the Big Ten. Our kicking game will be great."

Schembechler is breaking in a new quarterback in Jim Harbaugh.

"He's smart, has a good arm and moves well," said Schembechler. "Most of our backs return and we'll be strong at those positions. We don't have an Anthony Carter, but we have the most depth we've ever had at the receiver positions."

Wisconsin lost quarterback Randy Wright, but Coach Dave McLain sees great improvement, especially with the return of tackle Darryl Sims, who has regained academic eligibility.

"Nobody gives us much of a chance, but we'll line up and see what happens," said McLain, whose conference opener is at Michigan.

Michigan—State—has—injured quarterback Dave Yarema returning and the Spartans could give some contenders fits.

"We're not where we want to be yet, but we're on the right track," said Coach George Perles, who is starting his second season in the Big Ten and has an outstanding punter-kicker in Raif Mojsienko.

In alphabetical order, Indiana, Minnesota, Northwestern and Purdue appear to have no chance at winning seasons. Bill Mallory at Indiana and Lou Holtz at Minnesota are the new head coaches in the Big Ten. Mallory has a proven quarterback in Steve Bradley, and Brett Sadek had some success at Minnesota. Both teams lacked woefully in defense.

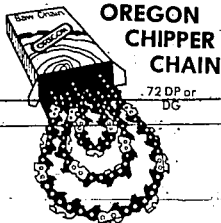

The same was true at Northwestern and at Purdue. Coach Dennis Green has quarterback Sandy Schwab returning, and Coach Leon Burtnett will replace quarterback Scott Campbell with Jim Everett.

"We're looking for improvement. We want to go from eighth place to sixth," said Green.

Tennis

McEnroe, Connors will gather to share U.S. Open again

By BOB GREENE
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Two brash left-handers, John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors, have made the U.S. Open tennis championships their own private preserve.

Between them, McEnroe and Connors have won every men's singles title since America's premier tennis event moved from the clubby confines of the West Side Tennis Club to the hard courts of the National Tennis Center in Flushing Meadows.

The $2.55 million Open begins its two-week run Tuesday with McEnroe, who grew up just a few miles from the site, the top seed. Connors is seeded No. 3 behind Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl.

In the women's singles, No. 1 seed Martina Navratilova will be seeking her sixth consecutive Grand Slam title.

Connors will be going for his sixth Open title, a record surpassed only by Bill Tilden, Richard Sears and Bill Larned, each of whom won seven titles. Connors holds one record that may never be broken — he has won the U.S. Open on all three surfaces on which it has been contested: grass, clay and hard court.

Since both are in the top half of the draw, if Connors and McEnroe meet, it will be in the semifinals on Sept. 8. In July, McEnroe, who has won three U.S. Open crowns, demolished Conners 6-1, 6-1, 6-2 in the most lopsided Wimbledon final in 46 years.

JOHN McENROE
Top seed

The last time the two met at Flushing Meadows was 1980, when McEnroe solved Connors during a fifth-set tiebreaker in their four-hour semifinal. McEnroe then went on to defeat Sweden's Bjorn Borg for his second of three consecutive titles.

Lendl, who came from two sets down to stun McEnroe in the final of the French Open in June and win his first Grand Slam event, has never captured the crown on the show court at Louis Armstrong Stadium. But he has reached the last two finals, losing to Connors each time.

Connors also was finalist in 1974, 1976 and 1978 — the latter the first year the U.S. Open was staged at Flushing Meadows.

If the top three falter, there are several other players who have the tools and credentials to capture the crown.

Mats Wilander of Sweden, winner of the 1982 French Open and 1983 Australian Open, took the title at the ATP Championships Sunday, a tournament that is played on the same type surface as the U.S. Open. The victory showed that Wilander apparently has fully recovered from an injury that hampered him earlier this summer.

Then there are 1983 semifinalist Jimmy Arias, 17-year-old Aaron Krickstein and Wimbledon semifinalist Pat Cash of Australia.

Krickstein, a right-hander from Grrosse Pointe Shore, Mich., is the youngest player to be seeded in the Open era.

Navratilova's losses in the last two years have been few and far between. In 1982, her only loss was to Kathy Horvath in the French Open. This year, she has been stopped just once, by Czechoslovakia's Hana Mandlikova.

"She doesn't remember how to lose," Billie Jean King said of Navratilova. "She's just in the habit of winning. She's at a peak in her career."

Two weeks ago, Navratilova won the United Jersey Bank Tennis Classic in Mahwah, N.J., to run her consecutive-match victory string to 48. She now is only nine matches shy of breaking Chris Evert Lloyd's modern mark of 56 straight wins.

"If I win the U.S. Open, I'm pretty sure I'll have the record because I only have to win two rounds in my next tournament," said the defending women's champion.

Lloyd, a six-time U.S. Open winner, is seeded second.

team in the division last season with 432 points. The defense allowed 233 points, second lowest total in the NFC, while the Rams allowed only 344, the Saints 337 and the Falcons 338.

On offense, if everyone stays healthy, the 49ers expect to open the season with 11 returning starters including receiver Dwight Clark, who missed the playoffs with a knee injury. Walsh says he wants Montana to throw to the running backs more, and he is hoping that former track champion Renaldo Nehemiah will become a true threat as an NFL receiver.

Nehemiah, who did not play college football, has caught 25 passes through his two NFL seasons. He also has experienced several embarrassing moments, dropping passes after streaking past defenders.

"I did a lot of soul searching and decided it's time for me to produce. That what I've been doing all my life — producing," the high hurdles world record-holder said at training camp.

On defense, the 49ers began the exhibition season with a few new starters, including one in the place of Fred Dean, the end who led the NFC in sacks last season with 17½. Dean is still absent because of a contract dispute, and the 49ers say the impasse is hopeless.

Pat Kujala, the nose tackle who played so brilliantly in last season's NFC title game which the underdog 49ers lost 24-21 to Washington, is gone to Philadelphia of the United States Football League. Linebackers Willie Harper and Bobby Leopold also went to the USFL.

Matt Tuohimäki, acquired from Seattle, and rookie Michael Carter, the Olympic silver medalist in the shot put, are among candidates for the noseguard job. New linebackers include Todd Shell, a first-round draft choice from Brigham Young, and former Philadelphia Eagles starter Frank LeMaster. But Dan Buzak is getting first crack at the starting outside linebacker job held by Harper most of the past 10 years.

Los Angeles quarterback Vince Ferragamo passed for a club-record 3,276 yards in 1983, but was intercepted 23 times. The offensive line includes two Pro Bowlers, Kent Hill and Jackie Slater, and veteran tackle Irv Pankey has recovered from a 1983 knee injury.

The Rams beat Dallas in last year's NFC wild-card playoff game, but then ran into the Redskins and lost 51-7.

"That game had a sobering effect on us," Coach John Robinson said. "We have to build our team to where we're not just at playoff level but at championship level. I learned there is a difference."

The Los Angeles defense, which registered only 33 sacks last season, is led by end Jack Youngblood and strong safety Nolan Cromwell.

New Orleans' defense yielded less than 300 yards per game and had a club-record 56 sacks. Linebackers Jim Kovach and Rickey Jackson were individual standouts.

Newcomers on defense include two high draft choices, lineman James Geather and safety Terry Hoage, but no rookies are expected to break into the starting lineup.

In Atlanta, Coach Dan Henning is looking for defensive improvement, especially against the run. Opponents averaged 4.6 yards per rushing attempt in 1983.

Late last season, four rookies were starting for Atlanta on defense. There may be more rookie starters this year.

SWENSEN'S LOVE YOU BECAUSE THEY KNOW YOU!

Mr. Albertson who lives in Boise, Mr. Safeway who lives in California and Mr. Smith who lives in Utah somewhere can't really love you, because they don't even know you. The Swensen's live right here in your town and Swensen's got a lot of satisfaction from knowing you personally, being your neighbors, seeing you in the store every day or every week, seeing your children grow up, and they hope that you'll consider them your friends. SWENSEN'S APPRECIATE YOU BECAUSE THEY REALLY KNOW YOU. But words are cheap (except at Times-News Display Advertising rates), so please come to our stores so we can show you how much you mean to us.

- AT SWENSEN'S YOU'LL FIND:
- ☆ Low over-all everyday (compare with any store) prices
 - ☆ Finest quality meat & produce at prices significantly lower than the others'
 - ☆ Service, sympathy, helpfulness, free advice & friendly appreciation
 - ☆ Smaller stores bursting with real values & outstanding specials (watch our ad every Tuesday).
