Officials: Delay summit with South Korea

By JIM ABRAMS
The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — Two congressmen and other U.S. supporters of Kim Dae-jung detailed rough treatment they said was meted out to the Kim party on its arrival and asked President Reagan on Sunday to put off the U.S.-South Korea summit. They accused Korean authorities of "inexcusable use of force" Friday at Kimp'o International Airport in Seoul and said one congressman, Thomas Foglietta, and a former U.S. ambassador were thrown to the floor. The Americans charged in a statement that the government of President Chun Doo-hwan "broke its promise to our government that the return of Kim Dae-jung would be 'trouble-free.'"

It was issued by Rep. Edward Feighan, D-Ohio; Rep. Foglietta, D-Pa.; Robert White, the former U.S. Ambassador to El Salvador, and others in the 22-member group who escorted the opposition politician back to Seoul four days before Tuesday's scheduled elections for the National Assembly.

Kim, 58, was returning from two years of self-imposed exile in the United States.

Kim and his wife were dragged away from their U.S. escorts by police and shoved into an elevator after landing at Kimp'o airport Friday. Some of the Americans accompanying Kim said they were shoved to the ground or beaten by police in the fracas. The Americans gave a detailed account of their version of what happened in the statement Sunday.

"Given this calculated affront to the American government and people," the Sunday statement said, "we recommend that the White House give serious consideration to the postponement" of Chun's visit to Washington.

The State Department has lodged a formal protest and the U.S. ambassador in Seoul, Richard L. Walker, accused South Korea of violating an agreement concerning Kim's homecoming.

Administration officials in Washington said the incident would not cause cancellation of Reagan's invitation to Chun to visit the White House in April. The Seoul government has acknowledged that police shoved members of Kim's party but denied officers indulged in "punching and beating," and accused Kim of assaulting policemen and his own bodyguard.

The government also said it made no agreement with U.S. authorities to allow Americans to escort Kim through customs. U.S. Embassy officials said Sunday that South Korean authorities had notified them that they could expect an official reply to the ambassador's protest.

Most of the U.S. delegation visited Kim's home Sunday evening for a religious service and dinner, but police refused to allow a Korean priest in to lead the worshippers; Kim told The Associated Press at his home.

Kim said police have told him he cannot leave his home. Authorities denied that Kim, who still faces a prison term stemming from a conviction on sedition charges in 1980, is under house arrest and said he is under police "protection."

Kim has voiced hopes that his return will revitalize the South Korea's political opposition and "make a base" for the New Korea Democratic Party, running against the government Democratic Justice Party in Tuesday's elections. The ruling party is expected to retain power, but members of the opposition party say they hope to win enough seats to be recognized as a floor negotiating group.

The statement by Kim's U.S. supporters also provided their version of what happened after Kim and his party left the plane at the Seoul airport. "As they passed a place where the

Mathews tied to slaying

The Associated Press

The late neo-Nazi leader Robert Jay Mathews has been linked by informants to a four-member hit squad that killed Denver radio talk-show host Alan Berg, a newspaper says. The Rocky Mountain News in Denver also reported in a copyright article Sunday that federal authorities are investigating Bruce Carroll Pierce, closely linked to Mathews by the FBI, in the slaying.

Police believe four people gunned down Berg, a Jew, as he returned from a dinner date June 18 with his ex-wife, the newspaper said.

The newspaper said, however, that authorities are uncertain whether to believe informants implicating Mathews. Some sources have placed Mathews at Laramie, Wyo., a three-hour drive from Denver, during the week Berg was killed.

The newspaper did not name its police or federal sources. No charges have been filed in the Berg slaying.

Mathews, 31, founder of a group known variously as The Order, White American Bastion and Bruder Schweigen — German for "silent brotherhood" — died Dec. 8 on Washington's Whidbey Island, when fire destroyed the cottage in which he had held off FBI agents for 35 hours. Federal authorities have linked the group to two armored car robberies, counterfeiting and a series of shootouts, plus the Berg killing.

Pierce, 30, is sought by the FBI in a 1984 armored truck robbery in Seattle, in which Mathews and Gary Lee Yarbrough, 29, Sandpoint, Idaho, also were charged.

Yarbrough and former Denver resident David Eden Lane, 46, another friend of Mathews, also are being investigated in the Berg case. The 45-

Budget battle urged

College chief fights for aid

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — New York University President John Brademas charged Sunday that President Reagan's proposal to cut $2 billion in student aid amounts to "a declaration of war on middle-income America."

The former Indiana congressman urged college presidents attending the Association of American Colleges meeting to "enter the battle that will be waged this year in Washington."

"If higher education is to survive, and, indeed, flourish, it will be up to you," he said in a speech Sunday night. "This is war, and we need every one of you in our ranks."

Brademas, a Rhodes scholar who helped author student aid programs during his 22 years in Congress, also charged that the Reagan budget cuts along with proposed new tax changes would inflict "a triple whammy" on higher education.

The Treasury Department tax plan, which Reagan has not specifically endorsed, would sharply restrict deductions for charitable giving. It would also eliminate the deduction for state and local taxes, which help pay school bills.

In the fiscal 1986 budget he sent to Congress last Monday, Reagan proposed cutting federal loans, grants and work-study subsidies for more than 1 million of the 5 million current recipients.

Carving 14 seats from Legislature requires delicate touch

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News Capitol Bureau

BOISE — Squeezing 14 new seats onto the floor of the Idaho House of Representatives in time for the 1985 session was a job that required careful drafting, wiring and construction.

But, squeezing 14 House and seven Senate members out of the Legislature before the 1987 session is a job that will require patience, diplomacy and timing, say the two lawmakers who have assumed the responsibility for paring down membership in the two chambers. "The longer the raw people are here, the less they're going to like it (redrawing the size of the Legislature) and the less likely they're going to be to vote for a (reapportionment) measure," says Rep. Walt Little, referring to plans to reapportion the Idaho Legislature back to the 105 seats that existed prior to a 1983 court-ordered remapping of legislative districts.

These sentiments are echoed by Senate Majority Leader Mark Ricks who, along with Little, co-chaired a special joint committee in 1984, seeking a solution to the reapportionment problem.

Ricks and Little both hope to reapportion the Legislature this year. But they find themselves in a bit of a quandary with the

While lawmakers are more likely to vote to do away with their seats before they are accustomed to occupying them, resolving a reapportionment issue is likely to become protracted, and legislative leaders have called for a short legislative session in 1985.

"I don't think it will be possible," says Senate President Pro Tem Jim Risch, the Senate's highest ranking officer, of a solution to reapportionment this year.

"They can't take it up. But I'm not ap-timsistic," he says, citing the 61-day session he has requested.

Risch discounts theories that reapportionment will be less palatable to next year's veteran lawmakers. "I think they're a responsible group. If a saleable plan comes along it will pass," he says.

Speaker of the House Tom Stivers concurs. "There will be substantial support for reapportionment a year from now. I don't see legislators locked in position," he says.

"It would prolong it (the session) because that's a hell of an issue," Stivers says.

Lawmakers were forced into the court-ordered plan when the Legislature's own plan was ruled in violation of the Idaho Constitution for the way in which it split counties.

The court-ordered plan includes seven floating districts — large districts superimposed over several smaller districts. One floating district includes the eight

Search for missing sailors called off

BRIMEN, West Germany (AP) — The search for missing sailors from a Polish freighter that sank in the frigid North Sea was abandoned by West German rescuers Sunday, with only one member of the ship's 25-man crew found alive.

Gale-force winds and a blinding snowstorm forced rescuers to suspend a 14-hour search Saturday after they recovered the bodies of nine men from the Polish freighter Blasko Zdroj and rescued the ship's radio officer from a drifting lifeboat. "We will not be resuming rescue operations," an official at the West German Society for Ships in Distress, the private agency that coordinated the North Sea search, said Sunday.

"The weather is still bad and after all this time the situation looks hopeless for those missing," the official, who asked not to be identified, said in a telephone interview.

Officials at the Bremen-based agency said the 1,171-ton ship sank within 15 minutes Friday when the cargo of steel shifted during a severe winter storm, causing the ship to roll over in the North Sea some 100 miles off the West German coast. If the death toll is confirmed at 24, it would be the worst disaster in the history of Polish shipping.

Federal housing projects segregated

DALLAS (AP) — Despite federal laws barring racial discrimination, the nearly 10 million residents of federally assisted housing are mostly segregated by race, with whites tending much better than blacks and Hispanics, according to a published report.

Almost all the predominantly white-occupied housing projects that reporters visited were far superior in condition, location, services and amenities to those that house mostly blacks and Hispanics, the Dallas Morning News reported Sunday in a copyright report.

Those findings were among several stemming from the News' 14-month investigation of the nation's 100,000 federally subsidized rental developments.

In a series that began Sunday, the News said it visited 47 cities to examine a system that provides almost 3.7 million apartments and in which the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development spent $9 billion in 1984.

The News said its investigation, based on on-site inspections, scholarly studies and voluminous federal investigations and reports obtained through the federal Freedom of Information Act, documented a pervasive pattern of government-sponsored racial segregation and inequality that is not confined to region or locale.

The News also said: "It did not find one locality where federal rent-subsidy housing was fully integrated or where conditions were equal for whites and minorities living in separate projects.

HUD, responsible for more than 90 percent of the nation's federally subsidized rental housing, has often ignored illegal segregation of tenants in projects operated by local housing authorities and private developers.

Hundreds of suburban communities have refused to accept subsidized housing for families, the type of housing in greatest demand by minorities; and that refusal has played a pivotal role in perpetuating the overwhelmingly white makeup of suburbs while leaving millions of minorities in inner-city ghettos.

Whites occupy about 63 percent of the nation's almost 3.7 million federally subsidized

Nazi hunter 'gratified' by U.S. search

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department decided to launch a belated search for Josef Mengele because "everybody knows we hardly got our hands wet looking for war criminals," a prominent Nazi hunter maintains.

"The sad truth is that the West utilized Nazi war criminals after the war ... and has a guilty conscience," says Rabbi Marvin Hier, head of the Simon Wiesenthal Center for Holocaust Studies in Los Angeles.

JOSEF MENGELE Sought by U.S.

diplomat at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires as saying there were two recent sightings of Mengele.

The newspaper said Mengele "divides his time between a jungle village hotel and a heavily guarded log cabin at a military base in Paraguay."

Mengele was sighted eight months ago in a hotel in the village of Volendam, near the Brazil-Paraguay border, the Times said. Volendam is a community of Germans of the Mennonite faith, it said.

"He has also been seen at Laureles, farther south along the Parana River, which is only a short walk from the summer palace of the Paraguayan president, Alfredo Stroessner," the paper said.

In a telephone interview late last week, Hier noted that Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney had ordered an investigation by an independent commission to learn whether any Nazi war criminals are in that country.

The recent disclosure of a declassified Army document indicating U.S. forces might have released Mengele, together with a mock trial in Jerusalem held by survivors of Auschwitz, might have built "the necessary momentum" to spur the Reagan administration to act, said the rabbi.

"Everybody knows we (the United States) hardly got our hands wet looking for Nazi war criminals," said Hier, whose organization had gained public release of the Army document through the Freedom of Information Act.

He noted, for instance, that the department had found that Klaus Barbie, the "Butcher of Lyons" accused of killing 4,000 Jews and deporting 7,500 others to concentration camps, was employed by U.S. Army intelligence to spy on communists after the war.

The probe, similar to one undertaken earlier in the administration involving Barbie, seemingly broadens the scope of investigations envisioned by an executive order issued by then-Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti in 1979 spelling out the limits of the OSI's reach.

The order, a congressional source said, provided in general terms that the agency should limit its efforts to denaturalization and deportation of Nazi war criminals living in the United States, who falsified citizenship papers and had hidden their identities to avoid prosecution for their crimes.

Neither Attorney General William French Smith nor Neal Sher, director of the department's Office of Special Investigations (OSI), would say specifically last week why the investigation is being started now. It has been widely believed for years that Mengele, who would be 73 if still alive, had found sanctuary in South America.

Moravcsik said he was triggered by a revelation — not yet refuted — that U.S. Army occupation forces in Austria may have apprehended Mengele in 1947 and then set him free.

Instead, said the attorney general, "The allegations have been such, and the public interest has been such, and the notoriety of the individual has been such, that it seemed to be appropriate."

In London, the Sunday Times reported that Mengele travels frequently in Paraguay and other South American countries. It quoted exiled Paraguayan politician Domingo Laino, Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal and an unidentified diplomat at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires as saying there were two recent sightings of Mengele.

Mengele sighted on trips in South America, says newspaper

LONDON (AP) — The Sunday Times reported that Josef Mengele, accused in the deaths of thousands of Jews at Auschwitz concentration camp, travels frequently in Paraguay and other South American countries, quoting a former Nazi for a travel agent.

The London newspaper quoted exiled Paraguayan politician Domingo Laino, Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal and an unidentified diplomat at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires as saying there were two recent sightings of Mengele.

It said Mengele "divides his time between a jungle village hotel and a heavily guarded log cabin at a military base in Paraguay."

Mengele was sighted eight months ago in a hotel in the village of Volendam, near the Brazil-Paraguay border, the newspaper said. Volendam is a community of Germans of the Mennonite faith, it said.

"He has also been seen at Laureles, farther south along the Parana River, which is only a short walk from the summer palace of the Paraguayan president, Alfredo Stroessner," the paper said.

Stroessner has said Mengele has not been in Paraguay since 1979 and that he lost his Paraguayan citizenship because he had not resided there recently.

The Sunday Times quoted its sources as saying Mengele, who would be 73, "lives fairly openly in his two homes on the banks of the Parana."

Mengele, a physician, is accused of sending hundreds of thousands of Jews to the gas chambers at a concentration camp complex in Poland and torturing and killing others, mostly twins and dwarfs, in cruel medical experiments to test the Nazi theory of a superior Aryan race of Germans.

The Sunday Times said Mengele, who was a resident of the town of Bremen.

known as the "Angel of Death" at Auschwitz, travels frequently in an area of Paraguay bordered by Brazil and Argentina, and occasionally makes trips elsewhere in South America through an unidentified travel agent, an ex-Nazi living in Guayra in Brazil.

In Israel, the director of a center documenting Nazi war crimes said Sunday he received a letter from a West German citizen claiming that Mengele had been Stroessner's personal physician.

Tuvia Friedmann, who heads a documentation center in Haifa, said in a telephone interview that the author of the letter wrote that he had served as a German-language instructor to police officers in Paraguay's capital, Asuncion, from 1976 to 1980.

Friedmann did not disclose the name of the author and said he had never met him but that he was a resident of the town of Bremen.

IRS claims Hunt family owes over $250 million

DALLAS (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is seeking more than $250 million from the Hunt family of Dallas and part of its Texas-based business empire, the Cox News Service said Sunday, quoting U.S. Tax Court documents.

In addition to claims of at least $200 million against individual members of the family, which is believed to be one of the richest in the nation, the government says the family-owned Placid Oil Co. of Dallas owes nearly $55 million in taxes.

The Hunts — whose business interests include worldwide investments ranging from oil wells to artworks — are contesting the IRS claims, Cox reported from its Washington bureau.

Most of the tax disputes reportedly involve the 1980 tax year.

The court documents indicate that the IRS claims against family members involve tens of millions of dollars transferred by billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt and his wife, Caroline, to their children.

The IRS considers the 1980 transfers taxable gifts, but the Hunts contend in papers filed in tax court here that the transfers were business loans that "became worthless" and were technically uncollectible.

Hunt family spokesman Tom Whitaker said he did not know what sort of business ventures were financed by the loans.

An IRS "Notice of Deficiency" letter sent to Bunker and Caroline Hunt last October disallowed the use of the bad loans as a $147.6 million short-term capital loss.

Weinberger defends plan

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said Sunday "there can be no retreat" from plans to develop a space-based defense system that would protect the United States and its European allies from nuclear missile attack.

Weinberger said that President Reagan's proposed Strategic Defense Initiative — popularly dubbed "Star Wars" — would raise the hope that "peace can be maintained not by the threat of nuclear destruction but by a strong defense that could not only deter, but defeat, the most awful offense of all."

The secretary's remarks came in a speech that Weinberger was scheduled to deliver to an annual debate of leading North Atlantic Treaty Organization defense officials, diplomats and foreign policy specialists.

Bad weather delayed Weinberger in London and his address was delivered by the assistant U.S. defense secretary, Richard Ferle.

"The real issue (with Star Wars), you might argue, is whether Europeans will become hostages to the Soviet Union as the United States retreats to an illusory fortress across the ocean," Weinberger said.

But he added: "There is no fortress, and there can be no retreat. America could not survive, nor live, in a world in which Europe was overrun and conquered."

Analyst sees hike in gas price soon

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline prices, which have dropped steadily for the past three months to their lowest level since 1980, are likely to climb to reflect an increase in wholesale prices, an oil industry analyst said Sunday.

Although pump prices for all grades of gas dropped 0.7 cents in the past two weeks, wholesale prices increased 0.3 cents during the same period, said analyst Dan Lundberg.

Dealers are sacrificing nearly a penny in margin for every gallon they sell because of the disparity in retail and wholesale prices, he said.

Stockman's gaffe fits TRB standard

The script didn't call for it, but budget director David Stockman upset a congressional hearing this week by taking on two lobbies accustomed to gentler treatment: the military and the farmers.

Stockman's critics may see his remarks as a gaffe -- another example of the budget director's penchant for getting into hot water. However, in political life, as The New Republic's TRB once cogently and truly pointed out, "a 'gaffe' occurs not when a politician lies, but when he tells the truth."

Let us acknowledge that both farmers and the military have legitimate claims for special treatment -- farmers because they are the hard-working embodiment of a cherished if fading tradition in American life; military personnel because, in the service of the country, they have agreed to submit to a degree of discipline and potential danger not faced in most other professions.

That does not mean, however, that the benefits that taxpayers provide them must go unexamined or unaltered if these benefits have grown too expensive or no longer work as intended.

When Stockman called the military retirement system a "scandal," he was only sharpening criticism of a system that already has come from such disparate sources as a 1984 Pentagon compensation review commission, the Heritage Foundation and the now chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, Les Aspin.

A good retirement system is a helpful recruiting feature for the armed forces -- although few who join the services stay around long enough to draw benefits.

But the current system is not only very costly, it also defeats its own purpose: by offering generous benefits after 20 years, it encourages skilled personnel to leave and pursue lucrative careers in the defense industry and elsewhere.

Similarly self-defeating is the elaborate system of price supports, acreage controls, irrigation subsidies and so on that, as Stockman pointed out, has poured $60 billion into the farm sector in the past five years.

Imprudent borrowing back when land prices were soaring has put many small and medium-sized farmers in financial trouble now.

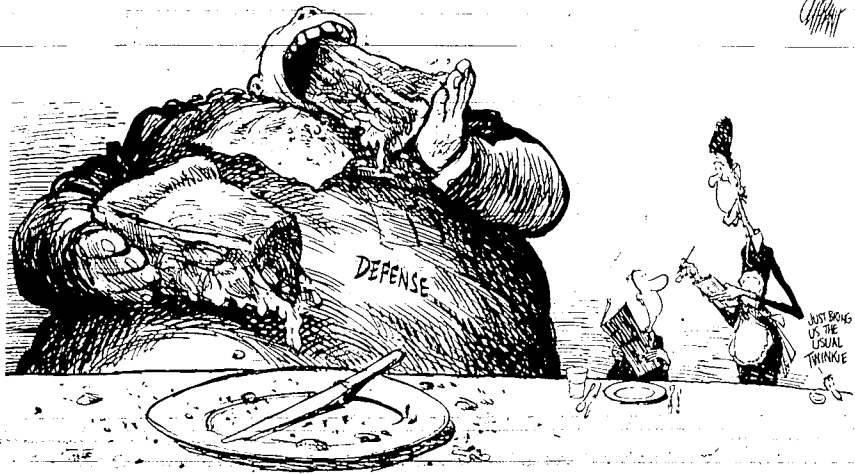

Stockman questions why these producers deserve a bailout by the taxpayers while far larger numbers of failing entrepreneurs and displaced workers get none.

That's a question worth debating. But whatever the resolution, extending current farm subsidies -- which primarily benefit large farmers and actually hurt farm sales by encouraging production on marginal land and driving up export prices -- is not the answer to their problems.

TRB's rules of gaffability now call for a "quick round of lying" by everyone involved in order to put the debate back on its accustomed course.

As you read the rebuttals and clarifications, you will see that this round already has begun.

Republicans aren't winning any voters

BOISE -- If the Republican majority in the Idaho Legislature follows through with some of the proposals that have emerged this session, GOP candidates could face rough waters in 1986.

Take right to work. Union leaders claim the Republican-pushed new law isn't supported by union members. So the GOP may get few votes from the 40,000 members of the Idaho AFL-CIO. If you figure each union member has a spouse, that's potentially 80,000 lost Republican votes.

The majority party, which has blistered Democrats in most recent elections, also is pushing legislation to freeze salaries of almost all state employees. In a period when legislators expressed tacit approval of a $1,000 increase in their own compensation, a wage freeze for everyone else might not sit well with the 16,461 persons holding state jobs as of a month ago.

Add in relatives, and the GOP might lose about 33,000 votes over the wage freeze alone.

The Republicans also hammered out enough votes to grant public schools $298.1 million -- an increase that some educators claim won't even pay for current operations, let alone provide money for next year's increased costs.

If there isn't enough money to operate the schools, that means last year's legislative "commitment" to funding a second year of salary increases for teachers is out the window.

And if that makes teachers mad enough to revolt against the party that voted for the budget, there goes 81,300 votes (IWA membership) or perhaps those from all teachers, 9,800 of them.

And if parents of the 220,000 public school students think the quality of education will suffer under the GOP spending plan, there might go another 100,000 or so votes.

Although the proposal probably is dead for the session, Republicans also spent a lot of time working on plans to reduce Lewis-Clark State College to a vocational school.

If that made Lewiston residents mad, you might scratch many of the 27,386 people who live in that city.

And if the majority decides against granting more funding to save the Idaho State University College of Pharmacy, Republicans might have to write off votes from Pocatello, population 46,340.

Carrying the idea a step further, no matter what Republicans do on a plan to transfer the state liquor dispensary system to private ownership, some voters probably won't like it.

If the idea flops, the state will lose a potential $6 million windfall, and an extra couple of million dollars in income, according to Rep. J. F. "Chad" Chubbard, R-Idaho Falls.

If it goes through, members of the Mormon Church might look with disfavor on grounds that the change will make liquor more available.

Of course, for every group or class that doesn't like a vote or stand, there's another that supports it.

Clear examples emerge. House Speaker Tom Stivers had some critical words for state employees and the powerful Idaho Education Association membership before the last election. But the loss of that bloc of potential voters didn't seem to harm him much.

He won re-election rather easily -- and in December won his second straight election for the House's top leadership post.

Gov. John Evans also was asked whether his steadfast support for unions wouldn't hurt him in an essentially rural state, if he runs for the Senate in 1986.

"It has been an issue in every election I've run for public office, and I haven't lost yet," he said. And Sen. James Hirsch, R-Boise, responded to Democratic critics that his majority party doesn't represent the people, or popular viewpoints in the state.

"I've heard that almost every year I've been in the Legislature. And every election, there's more and more of us (Republicans) as well as less of you," he told the Democrats.

Quane Kenyon covers Idaho politics and state government for The Associated Press.

New face of Chinese village a surprise

Only the well remains. The house in Huanxian where the operation was performed on a wooden table was demolished years ago.

The surgeon was my grandfather, Dr. Thomas Wilburn Ayers, who went out in 1910 from his home church in Anniston, Ala., to serve as the first Southern Baptist medical missionary in China.

The patient was a Chinese woman with a jaw infection, whose husband threatened to throw her out unless the disfiguring injury was healed.

When his patient stopped breathing under the chloroform, Grandfather feared that his mission work was over before it had begun, and that he might be hanged for the murder of a Chinese woman. He revived her and saved his mission work.

On Nov. 29, 83 years later, my wife Josephine and I returned to the small town where Grandfather had spent 25 years.

Although Grandfather lived to be 96, I never really knew him. On my journey into the past, I wanted to discover the young man who was afraid to operate on that Chinese woman.

We were surprised to be greeted as celebrities by the county supervisor, the mayor, a television crew and what seemed to be the entire staff of the hotel.

We were indeed objects of friendly curiosity as we walked among the thousands of Chinese buying and selling at the county fair.

Brandt Ayers

Grandfather would have been stunned by the sight of that cornucopia of goods. Before the revolution in 1949 the yearly per-capita income of the town was $116.

From 1978, when Western-style market reforms touched the agricultural economy, to 1983, per-capita income rose from $386 a year to $1,256.

Seven citizens of the town -- now old men and women -- helped bridge the distance in time and space between grandfather and grandson. What amazed me was that he seemed entirely untouched by the momentous events he witnessed.

He arrived in China during the Hoxer Revolution. In 1911 he was there when 2,132 years of dynasty rule ended.

From the first president of the Chinese republic, he received the emerald-studded decoration, The Order of the Splendid Harvest. He left just months before Chiang Kai-shek consolidated his regime.

Yet Grandfather never mentioned politics, not in his book, "Healing and Missions," and not in the memory of those who knew him.

He was so immersed in the intricate webbing of daily life that he did not have time for politics, only for people.

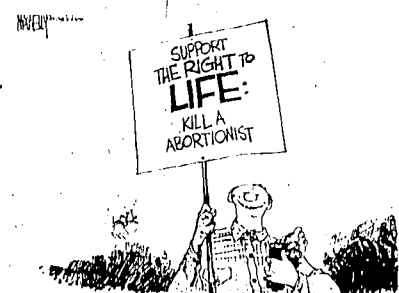

Perhaps his dedication was conveyed by the inscription on the small obelisk erected in his honor: "Regardless of heat or cold he treated the sick both rich and poor."

The monument is gone now, too. The church and the monument were damaged by a five-bomber attack that preceded the Japanese invasion in 1939. In 1957 both were leveled to make way for a new road.

Not much is left that would have meaning for Grandfather. He would be pleased to know that the piano from the old church is now accompanying vigorous Baptist hymns in the new church, finished in 1983, and that an old student, Fan Shu Zhi, is deacon of the 600-member congregation.

Only the well (Grandfather dug, and the memoirs remain. Perhaps that is enough, particularly in arid northern China, where water has this old proverb: "You who drink the water do not forget the person who dug the well."

Farm crisis: press may sound alarm, but people must act

He sat in my office last week, a ducktall hat pushed back on his forehead, his hands still showing the grease stains from an earlier oil change on a tractor or other piece of machinery.

His message was not a pretentious one, but he was sincere in his delivery.

American agriculture, he said, is in deep trouble and it is the responsibility of The Times-News, the community newspaper of this valley, to help sound the alarm.

That, he said, we have only partly done. We have covered the issue piecemeal, a story here and there, but we have not given the whole picture.

The fellow, I think he would admit, is no expert in American journalism. But he struck me as extremely knowledgeable about farming, particularly in his native Magic Valley. Furthermore, he had some real understanding of national farming policies and of farm credit.

He is right, I think, about the coming crisis in American agriculture. A host of conditions from declining prices for land to high interest rates, to production that far outstrips either domestic consumption or export capacity have all combined to create a severe economic situation.

So has the administration's new farm policy, which appears to be to let supply and demand determine the extent of agricultural production.

The result, I think we all know, is that there are going to be fewer farms and fewer farmers, both in the country as a whole and in the Magic Valley.

The question is the degree of severity with which this storm will hit.

The subject is not a simple one, and like most large, systemic "issue" stories of our time, it is not evident all at once.

The conditions for the present situation were laid in policy decisions and economic conditions stretching back at least half a century. All of those "events" were reported at the time, in both the American and the local press.

We have told you, for example, about the embargo policies of the 1970s and how they affected export markets. We told you about the collapse of the local PCA, and have kept you informed about the problems of the regional Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Spokane, Wash., the PCA parent operation. And we have told you of farm protests both in the valley and elsewhere.

A close reader of The Times-News can discern even more of the problem in other ways. The consolidation of the implement dealer business in the Magic Valley, which we reported in Sunday's Magic-News, is a reflection of the problem. So are the listings in our classified-legals section on farms for sale or lease by the Farmers Home Administration.

Those are the facts. But the role of the press is to give you not only the "facts," but the truth about facts.

Think about that sentence. We must not only tell you what is happening, but how the "facts" fit together. We have a responsibility to help you see what the facts mean.

And that is where the greatest challenge lies, for it is where the press is weakest.

We are at our best in telling you yesterday's events. A press conference is held. Farmers rally. A government official testifies before an appropriations committee. The press is there for all of them.

But how can we do a better job of "being there" to cover the slow strangulation of a family farm? How can we be there at the end of an era?

We spend a lot of time at The Times-News, the editors and I, talking about the issues in this community and how to cover them better. The farmer who took the time last week to talk to me about this issue has renewed my effort to cover it better. We will try, in the coming weeks and months, to pick up the part that we see being written in other places, as well as from our own staff. We will try, as we say in the news business, to get a better handle on the issue of farm economics.

But in the end, it is you, the reader, who must put the facts and issues together and then take the actions you think are most appropriate. We can sound the alarm, but you must do the acting.

That is the way it is in a free society with a free press.

I urge you to read all that you can. Be informed. Think about the issues. Write letters to us and to your elected officials. Be part of the process by which democracy works.

That is particularly important of an issue like agricultural economics, in which you all -- citizens, taxpayers -- have a stake.

USDA's free goods given to jails, schools

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—What do Twin Falls County Jail inmates and school children have in common?

The answer is USDA commodities distributed to them by the state Department of Education.

The distribution to the schools and institutions such as the jail are separate and even other programs than the one that supplies commodities directly to low-income families.

About 20 percent of the commodities distributed by the education department go to non-profit institutions. In 1983, a million pounds of commodities worth $538,000 were distributed to eligible institutions such as jails, hospitals and nursing homes in the state. That same year, four million pounds of food worth $2.4 million were supplied to schools for their school lunch and breakfast programs, said Charles A. Brown, the supervisor of food service with the education department.

Besides the Twin Falls County Jail, other institutions in the Magic Valley receive commodities from the department. Brown reported that the department also provides food to the state Department of Health and Welfare Adult and Child Development Center in Twin Falls, Magic Valley Alcoholism Recovery Center in Twin Falls, Cassia County Jail in Burley, Jerome County Jail, Wood River Convalescent Center, Blaine County Hospital, Gooding Memorial Hospital, Idaho State School for the Deaf and Blind and Moritz Community Hospital in Sun Valley.

The only requirements in order to obtain the commodities are that the institutions be non-profit and have storage capacity.

Items such as butter, honey, cheeses and non-fat milk are called "bonus commodities" and are readily available to the institutions, Brown said.

"We let them know how much is available. If there are bonus items, they can have all they want without waste."

Schools usually are offered a larger variety of food, including everything from meats to french fries to fruits to peanut butter. The commodities make up about 10 percent -- on the average -- of the food served in school lunches, Brown said. The amount of food allotted to schools are based on a formula,

Low-income families to receive allotments this week

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Honey and double allotments of processed cheese will be distributed beginning Tuesday to low-income families in the Magic Valley.

About 50,000 pounds of cheese and 20,000 pounds of honey from the U.S. Department of Agriculture will be provided free to eligible families, says Carol Clett, services coordinator of the South Central Community Action Agency.

The agency can't distribute cheese in the summer due to lack of refrigerated storage space for the entire Magic Valley shipment, Clett says. As a result, families will receive 10 pounds of cheese, or a double allotment, at the upcoming distribution. The usual portion was five pounds per family.

Families also will receive a regular allotment of honey, which amounts to three

To be eligible for the commodities, families must meet the following federal income guidelines:

For a household of one person, monthly income must not exceed $40; for a family of two, $72; for three, $97; for four, $105; for five, $129; for six, $142; for seven, $167; and for eight people, $189. For families with more than eight people, add $188 for each additional person.

although they can request more of an item if it is available.

Institutions may request items from the larger list, but they are limited to what they can receive, Brown said. The list of bonus items are limited. Fresh peaches, however, did make it the bonus list and the Twin Falls County Jail took advantage of them.

The department usually ships the food monthly through a contracted truck line during the school year. When summer begins, however, the department no longer ships food to the institutions.

The jail and other recipients of the food are charged $1.20 per unit for shipping and storage. A unit amounts to a case.

The distribution to schools, institutions and families are separate programs, said Dick Montoya of San Francisco, the regional information officer of the USDA's food nutrition service. The food is packaged differently for each program.

As dictated by Congress, the schools are guaranteed a certain amount of food. Surplus food from farmers was purchased for the distribution to the school and institution pro-

A touch of the musical West

'Down in the Valley' set for Saturday performance at CSI

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—A bit of the old West is coming to the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium Feb. 16 at 8 p.m. when the Twin Falls Music Club presents "The Best of the Musical West."

Featured is the one act musical, "Down in the Valley," followed by the Western ballet, "Millionaire's Hoedown," by Hackney Studio, then the singing of Jan Olsen and some songs written by Country Fiddlers Archie Turner, Rudy Williams and Edith Fullmer.

Production chairman Joanne Wilson says "Down in the Valley" has not been performed locally before. The folk drama, however, is not new. It premiered in 1957 with music by Kurt Weill. The musical relies heavily on flashbacks to wend a tale of love birds Jennie Parsons and Brock Weaver.

Weaver, played by Jack VanBuren, is in jail for the murder of the play's heavy, Thomas Bonche (Jay Fowles), but escapes to see his love, Jennie (Carol Bursness).

Flashbacks show the crime at the Shadow Creek Cafe, the church and Jennie's home -- all this leading to Brock, being assured of Jennie's love, turning himself over to the posse and landing back in jail with a quiet expression of fulfillment on his face.

Borrowing from Greek drama, the leader of the chorus, Roger Vincent, introduces and explains the action of the plot. Vincent also begins the play, singing the familiar theme song, "Down in the Valley."

Other main roles are filled by Walt Freestone, Scott VanBuren, Ferris Freestone and Jan Olsen. Margaret Nelwith is director and Bill and Karen Sweet are musical directors.

Performing "Millionaire's Hoedown," Beverly Hackney says 10 young dancers from her studio are combining square dancing with ballet to present a routine with Western flair. Brad Staumers and Randy Cox accompany the group with fiddles.

Jan Olsen sings "Daydreams From the Heart," "My Little Man," "Thumblin' a Ride" and "It's Over." Olsen wrote the music for all four songs with words for three of them by Alene Johnson.

The Country Fiddlers are scheduled to play the crowd pleaser, "Orange Blossom Special," among other popular numbers.

Wilson says funds from the event are earmarked for scholarships to send Magic Valley youths to summer music camp and for CSI music students.

Tickets are available at Warner Music, Ann's Hallmark, Pennywise Hallmark, Kathy's in Jerome and Saw Mar Drug in Ball. Admission is $5 adults, $2.50 children, $3.50 senior citizens, and $12.50 family.

Snowslide hits at Rock Creek

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—An avalanche, about 100 feet long and up to 10 feet deep, blocked the Rock Creek Canyon road just below the Magic Mountain Ski resort for several hours Sunday afternoon.

The slide prompted Sheriff James Munn to issue an avalanche warning and request anyone traveling the road in the next few days to use caution in the area from Third Fork of Rock Creek to the ski area, a distance of about five miles.

Clyde Burney, director of the Twin Falls Highway District, said the slide occurred about 2:30 p.m. Fortunately, he said, there were no injuries and no vehicles or persons caught in the slide.

It came down from the east side of the canyon across from the Lower Penstemon picnic area which is popular with tubers. At 7 p.m.

Sheriff Munn said a two-mile long procession of vehicles was on the way down the canyon grade. He said the last of the vehicles were on their way out of the forest area by that time.

The slide occurred about a mile below the ski resort and two miles from the Diamondfield Jack snowmobile area, both of which had attracted large numbers of recreationists Sunday. A ski race at Magic Mountain had attracted racers from the five additional areas in southern Idaho.

Burney said a front-end loader from the highway district yard in Twin Falls was taken to the area and worked from the upper area to hold up downhill traffic and then send people down after the road was opened. He estimated the road was blocked for two to three hours, saying it was passable for traffic shortly after 6 p.m.

He said there is a potential for added slides, but the road is not closed.

"We are just asking anyone going into the area to use caution. The Forest Service people will be checking the additional slide potential in the morning," the sheriff said.

Burney agreed there is a possibility of additional avalanches because of the large amount of new snow on the hardened base of old snow. Strong winds in the area Thursday night and Friday also contributed to the avalanche conditions.

Tanker truck spills chemicals on I-84

SNOWVILLE, Utah—No injuries were reported after a tanker truck carrying a corrosive material that causes skin burns and nausea overturned on Interstate 84 near the Idaho-Utah border.

Less than 50 gallons of the chemical leaked from the 28,000-gallon tanker when it overturned late Friday, according to Sgt. David Rich, of the Idaho State Police district office in Twin Falls.

The accident occurred about one mile north of the state line in a remote area about eight miles north of Snowville, Utah, and did not interfere with traffic, Rich said. Rich said Sunday that another near spill occurred in the exact same spot, probably sometime Saturday night. He said state police found a 35-gallon barrel containing a hazardous material, known as Neodymium Nitrate at the same location Sunday.

"It apparently fell from a truck and did not have the name of the shipper or the destination on the barrel," Rich said. "However, we found that two identical barrels had fallen off in Utah and one contained the name of Rhône Pauletic of Freeport, Tex.

Rich said two trucks carried barrels of the chemical from Texas across the Utah-Idaho border. "There was no spill and no traffic delay necessary, in either incident, Rich added.

The tanker that skidded into the median Friday night was driven by Danny Fryman, 35, Martinez, Calif. It was northbound on I-84 enroute from Salt Lake City, Utah to Richland, Wash., when it went out of control and landed in the median. Sgt. Rich said the trailer brake lines from the truck and overturned but did not rupture. He said it was simply leaking slowly from the top.

Rich said there were key spot on the roadway which Fryman told police caused the accident. It occurred about 9:30 p.m. and Fryman reported the accident shortly after midnight, Rich said. The driver told officers he was unable to get anyone to stop for him.

Fryman was cited for inattentive driving, Rich said. Both Fryman and his co-driver, David Roberts, 37, of Elmhurst, Calif., escaped injury.

The tanker, owned by Widling Transportation of Portland, Ore., was carrying an aluminum nitrate solution.

Pile of unpaid debts puts valley's hospitals in a tough spot

By DEANS MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—The public hospitals in the Magic Valley wrote off a greater portion of their 1984 income in bad debt than their sister hospitals around Idaho did.

About half this bad debt written off is unpaid, individual hospital bills the hospitals cannot collect. The other half is money lost when hospital charges exceed payments from Medicare and Medicaid. The Magic Valley hospitals have about the highest level of Medicare and Medicaid patients as the rest of the state.

Hospital administrators say the unpaid bills are another form of fallout from the depressed local economy.

They say their non-paying patients are unemployed, uninsured and unable to pay their bills. Other patients are unable to meet the deductible amount required under Medicare or other insurance plans.

Some administrators complain, off the record, that counties have not picked up their share of the indigent health care bill, leaving hospitals with the tab.

Stonewell, Idaho Hospital Association hospitals reported a median bad debt write-off of 10.56 percent of total 1984 revenues. For Magic Valley hospitals, the median write-off was 17.3 percent of total 1984 revenues, says IHA official Bonnie Haynes.

For the IHA hospitals, 42.8 percent of all patients are covered by Medicare and Medicaid. At the Magic Valley hospitals, about 40 percent of the patients are covered under Medicare or Medicaid.

The public hospitals surveyed around the Magic Valley included Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, Minidoka Memorial Hospital, Cassia Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, St. Benedict's Family Medical Center, Blaine County Medical Center, and Moritz Community Hospital.

At MVRMC, bad debt cost the hospital $4.1 million last year and controller Don Crilly says bad debt is up 50 percent from 1983. Insurance policies with 100 percent coverage are a thing of the past, and patients are not paying their deductibles under the new policies, says Crilly.

MVRMC has the highest bad debt write-off in the Magic Valley, at 28 percent of revenue.

They also have the highest percentage of Medicare and Medicaid patients, at 50 percent.

"We've probably got the best internal medicine crew around," Crilly says. He pointed out that much of the work for elderly Medicare and Medicaid patients is internal medicine.

At the other end of the spectrum, Moritz Community Hospital's bad debt write-off was 1.5 percent of revenues for last year, says controller Al Stevenson says Moritz's Medicare and Medicaid patients make up 25 percent of their patient load, at the most.

Stevenson says he has seen an increase in outstanding bills at Moritz due to slower response from Medicare and Medicaid and changes in the insurance industry.

At Minidoka Memorial Hospital, administrator Ed Richardson says bad debt write-offs hit 18 percent of revenue for last year, down 2 percent from 1983. Medicare and Medicaid patients make up about 46 percent of Minidoka's patients, he says.

Cassia Memorial Hospital and Medical Center wrote off 18 percent of its revenues in bad debt last year. Controller Jerold Anderson says the unemployment rate was mostly due to people's inability to meet their share of medical costs, be they insurance deductibles or total bills.

At Cassia, 37 percent of all patients are on Medicare or Medicaid. Saint Bonedict's Family Medical Center wrote off 16.6 percent of its revenues in bad debt.

Debt

debt last year. Controller Gary Pea says that number is up about six tenths of a percent from 1983.

St. Benedict's, individual accounts make up only about one-third of all bad debt. Pea attributes this to an aggressive collections department at the hospital. He says St. Benedict's accumulated bad debt on Medicare or Medicaid transfer patients, since the transferring hospital gets the bulk of the Medicare or Medicaid reimbursement and cannot always pay St. Benedict's full costs.

About 48 percent of St. Benedict's patients are covered by Medicare and Medicaid.

Blaine County Medical Center wrote off bad debt worth about 8 percent of its 1984 revenues, says administrator Timothy Glinore. Glinore says that number is up about 40 percent from the prior year. About 37 percent of Blaine County Medical Center's patients are covered by Medicare or Medicaid.

"The patients were serving just plain don't have insurance," he said. The county hospital has to accept the patients, though they often cannot pay their bills, Glinore said.

One commodity distribution program doesn't affect the other. For instance, if there was a rise in low-income families in a state, the department would not divert more commodities into the program for low-income people, Montoya said.

The commodities to low-income people was meant to be a temporary.

food supplement program, Montoya said. The main food program for needy people was the food stamp program.

The distribution of commodities to institutions such as hospitals and jails has its roots in the 1930's, when Congress passed an act that allowed the department to buy food to encourage domestic consumption, Montoya said.

The funding came from duties on imported goods. The purchased food would be distributed to the needy in divanually and through "charitable institutions."

The law was amended in 1954 to provide the commodities to hospitals and again changed two years later to allow distribution to jails and correctional facilities for youths.

Thatcher popularity at low mark on 10th anniversary

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, reaching her 10th anniversary as leader of Britain's Conservative Party, is at her lowest popularity rating since 1981, according to an opinion poll published Sunday.

Mrs. Thatcher, 59, was to mark Monday's anniversary without ceremony or special engagements, her office said, but the British media took it as a milestone calling for assessments of her political accomplishments.

The poll published in the Sunday Times said the Conservatives and the opposition Labor Party were tied at 37 percent in the ratings, an 8-point swing in Labor's favor compared with the June 1983 election result that gave Mrs. Thatcher her second term by a landslide.

The poll, conducted by the MORI agency, said the biggest swing was among skilled manual workers and Britons under 35. Her reputation for being "too in a crisis" was down from 62 percent in a poll during the election campaign to 34 percent now, it said.

The Sunday Times did not give a full breakdown of the polling results with comparative figures, and did not say how many people were questioned.

It said only 14 percent believed Mrs. Thatcher was "more honest than most politicians," adding that it was her lowest rating ever on this question. It said 51 percent thought she was "out of touch with ordinary people" and 47 percent felt she "tends to talk down to people."

The pollsters said the apparent disenchantment with Mrs. Thatcher stemmed largely from the unresolved coal miners' strike, entering its 12th month, and the sterling crisis which has seen the pound fall to its lowest value ever against the dollar.

Team looks for MIAs in Laos

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A team of U.S. experts searching for remains of Americans missing in action from the Vietnam War flew to southern Laos Sunday for an unprecedented excavation of a site where a U.S. Air Force plane crashed, a U.S. Embassy official said.

He said the team was to join Lao officials to search for the remains of 13 U.S. servicemen whose C-130 transport plane was shot down near Pakse City in December 1972.

The team of eleven experts from the U.S. Joint Casualty Resolution Center flew directly from Bangkok to Pakse, where they were to be joined by an official from the U.S. Embassy in Vientiane, the Lao capital.

Leading the team was Col. Joe Harvey, head of the Honolulu-based Resolution Center, which is responsible for resolving the MIA issue.

The team made a preliminary inspection of the site in December 1983. It was the first official U.S. survey of a plane crash site in communist Indochina since the war.

That inspection turned up wreckage of the plane and human bones, which are still being analyzed by the U.S. Army's Central Identification Laboratory.

An official of the U.S. Embassy in Bangkok, who asked not to be named, said that more remains would probably be found in the area, about 25 miles northeast of Pakse.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said: "The U.S. is highly gratified by the Lao government decision to permit Pakse's crash site excavation and we hope that it will lead to a sustained pattern of cooperation on the POW (Prisoners Of War)-MIA issue, including additional crash site excavations."

The U.S. government has said it considers Laos's efforts on the MIA issue a "principle measure" of its desire to improve bilateral relations. Embassy figures show that 2,483 U.S. servicemen and civilians remain unaccounted for from the war: 1,375 in Vietnam, 576 in Laos, 91 in Cambodia—and the others—in Thailand, China or over bodies of water.

Kim Dae Jung, right, explains to reporters what happened on his arrival in Seoul

S. Korean politics

Kim's impact on polls determined Tuesday

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Formal campaigning for South Korea's National Assembly elections ended Sunday, with government-controlled news media silent about an event that was worldwide news — the rough welcome given dissident leader Kim Dae-jung on his return after two years of self-imposed exile.

In the elections scheduled for Tuesday, President Chun Doo-hwan's Democratic Justice Party is considered certain to retain its majority. But observers say the opposition New Korea Democratic Party, recently formed under the auspices of Kim and another dissident leader, could make inroads.

Kim Dae-jung, who along with Kim Young-sam is confined to his home and prohibited from engaging in political activities, said in an interview he believed his return to Korea last Friday from two years in the United States would give new life to opposition forces in this land of 41 million people.

"I think we can make a base that will be helpful in our push for democracy," said Kim, who is banned from engaging in political activity and almost ignored in the Korean press.

Kim and his wife were dragged away from an escort of U.S. supporters after landing at Seoul's airport. The impact of Kim's arrival four days before elections was in dispute, with some saying the 59-year-old dissident who has been convicted of sedition is a spent political force.

Members of Kim's hastily organized party say they expect to pick up at least 20 seats in the election, enough to be recognized as a floor negotiating group.

Officials of the ruling Democratic Justice Party, which garnered 35.6 percent of the popular vote in the last election in March 1981 to win 152 seats, say they will fall somewhat short of that number this time.

The third major party fielding candidates is the moderate opposition Democratic Korea Party, which stands to lose the most if the more vocally anti-government New Korea Democratic Party makes a strong showing.

At stake are 184 directly elected seats in the 276-member single-house assembly. The remaining 92 seats are distributed proportionally among parties, with the party winning the most seats in direct balloting awarded 61.

Ultimate authority in South Korea rests with Chun, a former general who seized power in 1980 and formally became president the next year. The assembly generally follows the direction set by the government, but does provide the opposition with an outlet for its opinions.

Chun's seven-year term ends in 1988, and stronger opposition in the assembly would increase pressure on him to follow through on his promise of handing power over peacefully to a successor.

The Central Election Management Committee reported that 4.8 million people, 20 percent of eligible voters, had attended political rallies as of Saturday, Sunday was the last day the rallies could be held.

and stayed there in self-imposed exile for two years. On Sunday Kim remained confined in his Seoul home.

The Rodong Shinmun commentary, transmitted in part by P'yongyang's official Korean Central News Agency and monitored in Tokyo, said, "It is only too natural that Kim, who had been expelled on charges of his political activities for democracy, returned to South Korea for the democratization of society. It is his right which no one can rob him of."

The paper said Seoul obstructed Kim's homecoming because it "feared that his return might give impetus to the promotion of democracy in South Korea."

National Assembly elections are to be held Tuesday in South Korea. Kim's New Korea Democratic Party is challenging the government Democratic Justice Party.

The official Chinese news agency Xinhua said Kim's homecoming put new pressure on the Seoul government to deal with political opposition.

China fought alongside North Korea against U.S.-led United Nations and South Korean forces during the 1950-53 Korean War. Peking has welcomed a recent relaxation in tensions between the Communist North and non-Communist South and supports P'yongyang's proposal for talks aimed at reunification.

S. Korea called 'graveyard of human rights'

TOKYO (AP) — Communist North Korea said Sunday that the rough welcome given to Kim Dae-jung upon his return to Seoul had revealed South Korea "as a graveyard of human rights and democracy without equal in the world."

China said the South Korean dissident leader had been tortured. Rodong Shinmun, the North Korean Workers' Communist Party newspaper, said Kim "was assaulted and escorted home by force" on arriving Friday at Kimpo International Airport in the South Korean capital.

Kim, 59, jailed in South Korea for sedition, had been allowed to go to the United States for "medical treatment" and stayed there in self-imposed exile for two years. On Sunday Kim remained confined in his Seoul home.

The Rodong Shinmun commentary, transmitted in part by P'yongyang's official Korean Central News Agency and monitored in Tokyo, said, "It is only too natural that Kim, who had been expelled on charges of his political activities for democracy, returned to South Korea for the democratization of society. It is his right which no one can rob him of."

The paper said Seoul obstructed Kim's homecoming because it "feared that his return might give impetus to the promotion of democracy in South Korea."

Woman shocked by sights on trip to help famine victims in Ethiopia

BOSTON (AP) — A social worker who was drawn by reports of famine to her native Ethiopia said Sunday she was unprepared for what she saw when she returned last month after a 10-year absence.

"I still have nightmares," said Fina Kebede, 36, of Winchester, who spent five weeks in the African nation.

"I saw a mother who was carrying her infant child, who died in her hands," said the state social worker who handles child abuse cases.

"She was crying, a silent cry. You could see her tears falling. She didn't move, she couldn't go to bury her child. She sat there for hours without moving."

"I still wake up dreaming about one of those things," Ms. Kebede said in a telephone interview.

She said she is going back this week for three-month stay to evaluate a United Nations resettlement project for famine victims and to help establish an orphanage.

Ms. Kebede left Ethiopia in 1970, graduated from the University of Massachusetts, earned a graduate degree at Harvard and is a United States resident.

But when she read about the famine and starvation in her African homeland, she took five weeks' vacation and flew alone to Ethiopia. She eventually was asked to act as an interpreter for reporters, whom she said were insulated from some of the suffering by the language barrier.

only kindness. "They were happy to see us. They saw us as someone who was helping them."

"They show you their bodies. They have nothing to feed their children. Then, what do you do? You say, 'I can't stay there,' she said. "She said she especially was moved by a feeding center for children.

"There were about 200 of them trying to eat. They were all underweight and had their heads shaved for hygienic purposes. There was not even a noise. They're not like children we know."

Despite the emotional toll from viewing the suffering, she said she will return Thursday to help set up an orphanage for 100 of the estimated 150,000 Ethiopian children who lost their parents in the famine.

King Fahd to confer with Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — King Fahd of Saudi Arabia is expected to urge President Reagan on Monday to play a more aggressive peacemaking role in the Middle East, but U.S. officials say the president will hold out for an Arab commitment to negotiate directly with Israel.

Fahd arrived at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., on Sunday to spend the night at the home of his country's ambassador, Prince Bandar bin Sultan, before meeting Monday with Reagan at the White House.

The meeting of the two leaders marks the first official visit by a reigning Saudi monarch in 14 years.

"From the Arab perspective, this is the time to urge the United States to become again more active," a senior administration official said, noting that Fahd will be the first head of state received by Reagan since his installation for a second term.

But the official, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified, added: "I think we will be able to assure the Saudis that we will be active and play the kind of role they would like to see us play but only in the context of a commitment from the Arab side to direct negotiations with Israel."

Fahd's expected bid for a more active U.S. diplomacy in the Mideast comes on the heels of a similar plea from Egypt's foreign minister, Faisal Abdel-Meguid, who met with high-ranking U.S. officials last week and said he emphasized "the necesty to move on the peace process" with "a more active United States."

Reagan outlined a plan for an overall Arab-Israeli settlement in 1982, calling for Palestinian self-government in the disputed West Bank and Gaza Strip, in association with Jordan.

The plan has attracted little interest. But the senior official said "we want them (the Saudis) to use that and work with it."

Details emerge on 'wild man' held by Chinese researchers

PEKING (AP) — A Chinese newspaper has reported new details on the capture of a hairy ape-like male beast that indicate it is a rare monkey, not a mythical "wild man" as previously claimed. The Canton newspaper Yangcheng Evening News reported the new details Saturday in a special dispatch from the central city of Wuhan, headquarters of the China Wild Man Research Institute, where the beast reportedly has been kept. The report was seen Sunday in Peking. Chinese press accounts last week claimed a hairy, 3-foot-tall specimen of the legendary "wild man" — China's version of the Himalayan "abominable snowman" — had been captured in Hunan. But leading anthropologists were quoted as saying they were skeptical of the find. No photographs of the beast have been published. A front-page story in the Yangcheng Evening News quoted the wild man institute's deputy secretary, Li Jian, as saying the creature was captured Oct. 21 by rural people from Shuitou village in a mountainous region of Hunan which is honeycombed with caves. The newspaper said 32 rural people and 11 hunting dogs in Hunan province tracked down the creature, which clawed the ear of one human captor and was knocked unconscious with a pole. After a few days the "mao gong," or "hairy male," became used to its captors and started eating fruits and nuts, the report said. The peasants sold the beast to local traders for $15.75, the account said, "because they felt there was no use in raising it." The traders exhibited the creature in several cities, attracting the attention of scientists, the report said. "According to an appraisal by experts, this 'hairy male' belongs to the rhesus monkey category, with a short tail," the report said. "It is a rare animal." At almost 53 pounds, it is twice as heavy as an ordinary short-tailed monkey, the account said, but its tail is about 1 1/2 inches long, half the size of a short-tailed monkey's tail. "The hairy male" has an abundant variety of facial expressions, it said. "Sometimes it displays sorrow and woe, other times indignation." The earlier reports said the creature could drink and eat like a human, produce human-like sounds and has a face "that looks a lot like a modern man." There have been several reported sightings of the wild man over the years, but none has been proved. The last find in October turned out to be a short-tailed monkey. Descriptions have ranged from a slithering water monster spotted in Tibet to a duck-billed, hairy man with a human-like gait, who lives in the mountains of southwest Guizhou. Last August, the Wild Man Research Institute called a national conference and offered a $3,570 reward to anyone who captured a specimen alive. Half that amount was offered for a dead wild man.

Peg Smith and Regina Rourke discuss forming a can-can line for performers over age 55

Over-55 group auditions for chorus line, performers

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Mari Skidmore says she doesn't think age 62 is too old for her legs to make their debut in a chorus line. She's also persuaded many of her fellow members of the Grande Old Players to join her in the can-can. The newly formed theatrical group requires no experience, but does practice some age discrimination. "Nobody's chubby, but we're all lumpy," Mrs. Skidmore says with a laugh. "Lumpy? Speak for yourself," quips 65-year-old Regina Rourke. Despite varied opinions on the shapeliness of the chorus line that is shaping up, the two agree it will be hilarious. The oldesters say they perform "just for fun" and the chorus line is something they hope to persuade their director to let them fit into some future production. The theater group's first auditions were held last October and its first show was staged Nov. 23. Since then, word of the Grande Old Players' last success somehow reached Washington, D.C., and federal officials called to get information to list the troupe in the "Resource Guide of the National Council on the Arts and Aging," says Director Mark Manhart. He says federal officials told him Omaha's Grande Old Players was among only three or four such troupes in the nation. Mrs. Skidmore and Mrs.

Rourke are among about a dozen people auditioning for parts in the Grande Old Players' second production, "Breath of Spring," a comedy about retirees stealing furs to raise money for charity. The two women said they had not performed on stage until the group's first production in November, but others are old hands. "I was a tulip bulb when I was 6 years old," said Peg Smith, referring to a 1929 performance in a Gilbert and Sullivan play. The native of Liverpool, England, says she also acted, sang and danced at military camps and hospitals in World War II and later in community productions. Another returning Grande Old Player is 56-year-old Ruth Nelson, a secretary who moonlights as "Popcorn the Clown" at birthday and other parties. Manhart, a dentist who is a few years shy of 50, and Bonnie Kusielka, 36, a mother of two who recently returned to college, formed a non-profit partnership to get the Grande Old Players started. Donations of $2 to $4 per ticket cover their expenses. The two met while doing a theatrical project for local schools. "Bonnie and I think that if Omaha can have a children's theater and a classic theater like the Norton and the dinner theaters, why not have a theater for older people?" Manhart said. His goal is to have senior citizens fill all positions in the company, including his as director.

Schroeder won't get birthday gift

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Artificial heart recipient William Schroeder's bout with the flu will prevent him from receiving a long-awaited present — a move to an apartment across the street from his hospital on his 53rd birthday. "There was some discussion early on and a hope that he would be able to move into the transitional home on his birthday," which is Thursday, Valentine's Day, said Linda Broadus, a spokeswoman for Humana Inc., operator of Humana Hospital Audubon where Schroeder underwent his heart surgery. "I did not have the stroke he would have probably been moved before his birthday. Because of the flu, that is not going to happen," she said Sunday. Schroeder, who became the world's second recipient of a mechanical heart Nov. 25 last year, suffered a series of small strokes Dec. 13. He has been suffering from flu-like symptoms for the past two weeks. "I don't believe the home is ready," Miss Broadus added. "I believe they are still planning more work this week on that apartment. Meetings concerning his leaving the hospital have been going on for some time." "The decision of when he will leave will be up to Dr. (William) DeVries and yesterday (Saturday) he said that because of the flu, he would not be moving this week, but I think you'll see him moving some time this month," she added.

DeVries performed the heart implant surgery on Schroeder and Barney Clark, the first man given the metal and plastic pump.

When Schroeder is moved, his family will be in charge of operating the equipment that will operate his compressed air-powered mechanical heart.

Ferraro renews wedding vow

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Democratic vice-presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro and her husband, John Zaccaro, renewed their wedding vows Sunday in a ceremony for couples marking their 25th and 50th anniversaries. Ms. Ferraro's mother, Antonetta, and the couple's children, witnessed the morning ceremonies at Our Lady of Mercy Church in Forest Hills, Queens, said church spokesman Jeff Smith. The marriage day ceremony is an annual event at the Roman Catholic church. Ms. Ferraro, who ran unsuccessfully last year on the Democratic party ticket headed by Walter Mondale, and her husband will celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary in July, said Pat Flynn, a spokeswoman for the former congresswoman.

Suspense writer confesses he uses another name

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — His books are well-known for their tales of suspense and intrigue. But now another kind of Stephen King mystery has been solved. Five books published since 1977 under the name Richard Bachman were actually written by King, according to a published report. King told The Bangor Daily News that he published the novels under a pseudonym because there is "too much stuff" written under his own name on the market. "It's been a chronic problem not wanting to over-pump the market," King said. His publisher, Viking, prefers not to publish more than two novels a year, King's secretary, Stephanie Leonard, told the newspaper in a copyright suit Saturday. The novels include four that King rewrote from manuscripts he originally submitted to teachers when he was in high school and college in the 1960s, according to Ms. Leonard. They were "Huge," "The Long Walk," "Headwork," and "The Running Man." King wrote the fifth, "Thinner."

Congress publishes youngster's tax essay INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — If President Reagan saves a copy of the Feb. 3 Congressional Record — the one that contains the text of his State of the Union address — he may be interested in another article in that edition. The essay, entitled "Taxes," describes those enforced contributions to government in this way: "Taxes are the little bills your Mom and Dad get in the mail. They also hate them. Doesn't everybody?" The essay is the work of Heather Taylor, an Indianapolis third-grader. "The reason you have to pay taxes is because teachers and other workers need money," the 8-year-old girl wrote. "Taxes are also for paying for the stuff that you use to build buildings." Heather was in class when Rep. Andrew Jacobs Jr., D-Ind., visited local School 37 before the Christmas holidays. He suggested the pupils write to him if they had any comments about government. Heather's father gave her composition to Jacobs and he placed it in the record.

Soap opera star wows Texas high school fans

LUGOFF, S.C. (AP) — Soap opera star Peter Onorati — Bo Brady, on NBC's "Days of Our Lives" — dined on Southern fried chicken and then appeared before more than 3,000 cheering fans who invited him to visit. The 29-year-old actor, who joined the cast of "Days of Our Lives" two years ago, emerged Saturday from a black limousine on the Lugoff-Elgin High School football field and got a few hugs and kisses from the mostly female audience. Answering questions from fans, he said he's single, has a girlfriend named Susan and his favorite color is red. "He's just a down-home guy," said Bill DeWitt, a faculty member who helped organize the visit. The school had been gearing up for Reckell's visit since NBC confirmed the engagement in October. The yearbook staff led efforts to paint and clean up the school building and grounds, and sponsored talent show auditions. Eleven opening acts were chosen for Saturday's show. About 3,200 tickets, at $10 each, were sold. "The whole school's been excited," said student Kimberly Thompson. "The boys aren't too excited, though." Paris, Texas, shoun to hometown crowd PARIS, Texas (AP) — Residents of this small city known for its lush farmland laughed at the desert landscape in opening scenes of "Paris, Texas," a film made by a German director and financed by French investors. But the 350 people who paid $25 for tickets to the black-tie local premiere also applauded when the credits rolled at the end of the 1984 Cannes Film Festival award-winning movie. Although portions of the movie starring Harry Dean Stanton and Dean Stockwell were filmed in Texas, they were shot "just about everywhere except in Paris," said Joe Smith, director of the Texas Film Commission. About $7,500 raised at the premiere Thursday will be used to help renovate the Plaza Theater.

Man dies of wounds 26 years later

MIAMI (AP) — A man whose former wife shot him twice in the stomach during a domestic dispute about 26 years ago died last month as "a direct result of the gunshot wounds," and police are searching for the woman for questioning, authorities said. "We want to find her. We need her account of what happened that day," Metro-Dade Homicide Detective Rex Remley said. But police say it's unlikely Lillie Wilcox, who would now be 58, will face any charges in the Jan. 23 death of Isaiah Wilcox, 61, the man she divorced several years ago. "Only if premeditation existed, making it first-degree murder, could Mrs. Wilcox face any charges now, police say. On any lesser offense, such as second-degree murder, manslaughter or assault, the statute of limitations "has long since elapsed." "We'll present the case to the state attorney's office," said Homicide Sgt. David Rivers. "Right now, it doesn't look like there is going to be any prosecution." According to a police investigation at the time, Mrs. Wilcox, then 32, shot her husband on the evening of July 9, 1959 "when he started beating their children." Wilcox, then 35, didn't press charges. He spent 36 days in the hospital. He died on the morning of Jan. 23 after his old gunshot wounds became infected.

"The infection that killed him" was a direct result of the gunshot wounds, Dade County Chief Deputy Medical Examiner Charles Welli said Saturday. "This type of complication is reasonable and foreseeable consequence of gunshot wounds in the abdomen," he said. Welli said scar tissue from the surgery after the shooting formed adhesions that trapped around a portion of the wounded man's intestine, causing an obstruction, severe pain and infection. Remley said he believes Mrs. Wilcox is in the south Florida area. Local services were held for Wilcox last month, before he was taken to Georgia for burial.

Parades, violence mark Mardi Gras

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Carnival season swept New Orleans over the weekend with 18 Mardi Gras parades that halted traffic and attracted masked revelers who carried torches, passed doubloons and danced through the streets. A parade in the New Orleans suburb of Chalmette was marred by violence late Saturday when a driver ran into three parade-goers, then was pulled from his car and beaten by an angry crowd. Police coverage was increased to control the crowds at the parades, and no other incidents were reported. Balls, parades and parties will continue daily until Feb. 19, known as Fat Tuesday, the final day of revelry before the Roman Catholic season of Lent, a solemn time traditionally devoted to fasting and prayer.

Students ask agency to clean up landscape

KERMIT, W.Va. (AP) — Sixth-grade students at Kermitt Grade School, tired of their littered landscape, have sent letters to the Mingo County Health Department saying it's time for the area to clean up its act. "I think you should do a better job. The land looks like a junkyard. The creeks and rivers are full of garbage.

The dogcatcher must be sleeping when he's supposed to be working," said one letter. The letter was one of 14 sent to the health department following a study by the class on pollution and solid waste. The letters submitted were "the own thoughts and opinions of the students" following the ecological lesson, said teacher Peggy Baladen. "I wanted the children to become aware of the problem," said Ms. Baladen, a Mingo County teacher of 30 years. "Maybe when they grow up things will be better if they start caring now."

Odds are lottery bill won't get through legislature

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho Legislature will take up a proposal this week to ask voters if they want to allow a state-run lottery.

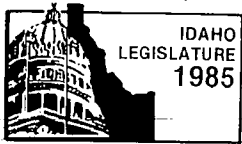

But the numbers are against it. On Friday, the House State Affairs Committee sent a lottery resolution to the House floor for a vote. Under normal procedures, it will be up for a final vote on Tuesday.

There was no recorded vote in State Affairs. But it will take two-thirds, or 56 votes from the 84-member House, for the proposal to be sent to the Senate.

In the past, similar legislation has failed to clear the Legislature, and the 1985 session is considered the most conservative in years.

And a state lottery bill is expected to have an even tougher time in clearing the Senate, if it gets that far.

Since the Idaho Constitution prohibits gambling in any form, if the Legislature approves the lottery proposal, it also would have to win voter approval in 1986 in the form of a constitutional amendment.

By the narrowest of margins, the Legislature last week approved a resolution freezing most state employee salaries. If even one lawmaker in either chamber had switched votes, the proposal would have been defeated.

"That just cut a week off the session," said one veteran lawmaker. A sponsor, Rep. Robert Forrey, R-Nampa, called it the first "clear choice" of the session on money matters. "We can raise taxes and carry on business as usual or tighten our belts," he said. "I believe we should tighten our belts."

The House Health and Welfare Committee postponed until at least Tuesday a showdown on competing bills covering child day-care center licensing.

Last week, the panel barely approved one bill setting up an industry licensing board under the Bureau of Occupational Licensing. Rep. Donna Scott, R-Twin Falls, has prepared a new version of competing legislation.

She said Friday she has received conflicting advice on the bill and wants to hold it until next week for clarification.

Meanwhile, House Bill 95, which creates the new industry licensing board, will be up for a final vote in the House this week. But Rep. Chris Hooper, R-Boise, chairman of Health and Welfare, said he will ask the House to hold HB95 until it's clear what happens to the competing bill. "Relative responsibility," which was a controversial subject when it came before the Idaho Legislature last year, will be back again in the next few weeks.

The House Health and Welfare Committee on Friday approved introduction of legislation designed to restore an Idaho law rejected by the federal government.

Idaho's previous law was rejected by the federal government because it was limited only to Medicaid costs, not all medical expenses.

Also postponed until this week was the House Education Committee's consideration of a bill sponsored by Rep. Francis Field, R-Grand View, to change state law so classroom teachers would not have a right to a "continuing contract" until after five years of service instead of the current three-year requirement.

The Senate Education Committee on Monday will take up the public school appropriation.

Congressmen hold farm bill forum

LEWISTON (AP) — Three members of Idaho's congressional delegation caught a barrage of conflicting suggestions for revising government support of farm commodities during a forum attended by more than 200 people.

Proposed solutions for coping with the economic crisis in agriculture were diverse at Saturday's meeting, sponsored by U.S. Sens. James McClure and Steve Symms and Rep. Larry Craig as a means for gathering input for the 1985 farm bill.

The Republican lawmakers will hold forums this week in Caldwell, Pocatello and Twin Falls.

The delegation told the farmers they face several years of transition toward a more market-oriented farm economy that probably will eliminate the least-efficient producers. Even if farmers were unanimous in their proposals for change, it would be difficult to promote those views through an urban-dominated Congress, the lawmakers agreed.

The farmers agreed on several points, however: That high interest rates, the overvalued dollar abroad and the quick shift from an inflationary economy of the 1970s to a deflationary economy in the 1980s were all causes of their plight. They generally endorsed President Reagan's plans to reduce the huge federal deficit, interest rates and governmental controls over agriculture.

"Most farmers tell me they would like a market-oriented farm economy," said Symms. The immediate problem seemed to be to dispose of the overloaded bins of grain so the supply-demand forces would be more favorable for the farmers, Symms said.

"We are seeking answers. Where are we, and how do we get out of this without losing farmers and without dependency on the federal government?" Symms asked.

Charles Droz, director of the federal Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service for the Pacific Northwest, accompanied the lawmakers. "Our farm programs have been a dismal failure," he said. "The larger the government payments, the faster the small farmers have disappeared. If more money alone was the solution, we should be solving our problems, because our expenditures have quadrupled in recent years."

Idaho received $90 million for the ASCS program last year. Droz said a transition period of three or four years will be needed to free farmers from their government dependency for market-oriented operations. He said the challenge is to keep farm production costs down while selling the products.

Gary Morris of Pottlatch gave the delegation a thick packet signed by about 60 people who had met several times last week. Based on that, he suggested that the target price for wheat be increased 30 percent for 1986.

2 sentenced for blowing up outhouse

POCATELLO (AP) — Two Challis men who blew up an outhouse in Challis National Forest have been ordered to pay for the damage.

Robert Fisher, 20, and Larry Knight, 19, were ordered to each pay the government $5,970.50 for the damage caused by explosives last Aug. 12 at Mt. Creek Campground.

Each man also must serve five years probation.

U.S. District Judge Marion Callister also ordered Fisher to serve six months in jail at the discretion of a probation officer, and to perform 100 hours of community service.

The judge ordered Knight to spend 120 days at a Boise halfway house.

Cattle deaths from nitrate up this year

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Nitrate poisonings in unusual numbers have caused the deaths of more than 100 cattle in the Inland Northwest this winter, said a toxicologist at Washington State University.

The cattle died from ingesting hay containing toxic levels of nitrate, said Dr. Robert Krieger of the Washington Animal Disease Diagnostic Laboratory. Cases involving six herds have been reported since December.

"Nitrate poisonings are not new, but this year the number of cases is unusually high," Krieger said.

Krieger said he is unable to explain the increase, believing it is more coincidence than anything else.

Weather and the use of marginal-quality hays may have been contributing factors in some cases, he said. Certain types of hay are classified as nitrate accumulators that tend to have naturally elevated levels of nitrate.

Cloudy weather that many regions of the Northwest experienced last June could have retarded the photosynthesis process, allowing nitrate to accumulate and remain at high levels, he said.

The greatest herd loss was 47 animals at Blackfoot, Idaho. Ranchers in Yakima and Ritzville have also lost cattle, he said.

Death results from a failure of the respiratory system as nitrates inhibit the blood from taking up oxygen.

Energy agency asks for ruling on electricity

BOISE (AP) — The U.S. Department of Energy is asking the Idaho Public Utilities Commission for a ruling that would allow only Idaho Power Co. to serve the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

But PUC officials say the matter may be settled in court.

At issue is whether INEL falls in the service area of Idaho Power or Utah Power and Light Co., PUC officials said.

Under a 1957 agreement the energy department arranged with the two companies, Idaho Power provides most of the energy used at INEL. The power delivered over UP&L lines, officials said.

The department also pays UP&L $1.2 million a year for the right to back-up power when Idaho Power is unable to meet power needs at the 300-square-mile site that spans five eastern Idaho counties.

Idaho Power's energy sources are mostly hydroelectric and dependent on stream flows, which vary from year to year.

The department, which conducts nuclear power research, has objected to the price it must pay for back-up power, but the PUC has ruled that the department must renegotiate any contract it has with UP&L, officials said.

The department's new proposal asks the PUC to determine which utility has the sole responsibility for providing power to INEL.

Commissioners have said in the past that the PUC may not have jurisdiction over the matter because Idaho's so-called "anti-pricing act" may prohibit it from ordering a utility out of an area it serves.

The question may have to be settled in district court, commissioners said.

Idaho Falls zoo under study

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Mayor Tom Campbell plans to appoint a citizens committee that will study the Idaho Falls zoo, a target of ongoing criticism over conditions some say are inhumane.

A recent meeting on the zoo drew criticism about the way animals are treated.

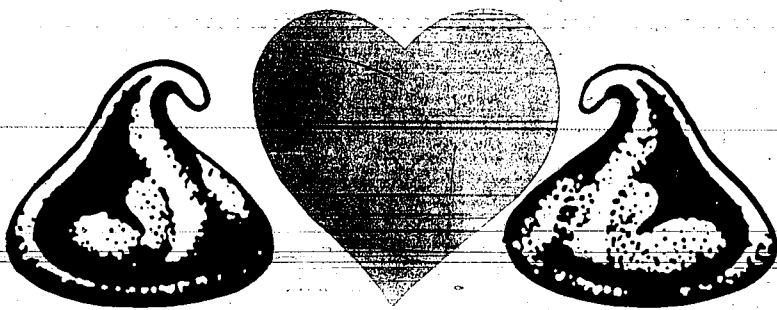

"I am becoming increasingly depressed the zoo is trying to keep animals it shouldn't be within these facilities," said Jerry JAYNE, one of about 20 people at the meeting sponsored by the Benewah County Idaho Falls Parks and Recreation Commission. Jayne said wolves and monkeys are kept in cages that are too small for them.

Other criticism concerned the quarters a Siberian tiger occupies, and one participant said the zoo should house animals elsewhere until facilities can be upgraded.

Campbell intends to name about six people to a committee that will study various aspects of the zoo.

United States Football League adopting a policy of austerity, for a change

By DAVE GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

When the New Jersey Generals signed Doug Flutie to a five-year contract estimated at from $5.5 million to $7.5 million, it was heralded as another chapter in the free-spending history of the United States Football League.

It was anything but. For the USFL, small is becoming big again.

As the league approaches its third season, its last in the spring before taking on the National Football League in the fall of 1986, most of its 14 teams have reverted to the league's original concept — live cheaply with a nucleus of low-priced journeymen, using one or two high-paid stars to sell tickets.

"The market has pretty much dried up," says Leigh Steinberg, the agent who last year negotiated quarterback Steve Young's $40 million contract with the Los Angeles Express. "What we're seeing is a retrenchment, a return to the original concept of the USFL."

For a league that lost an estimated $70 million last season and more than $100 million in its first two years, retrenchment is a matter of survival.

Last year at this time, the USFL had expanded from 12 teams to 18 and was grabbing big-name players by the bushel. By the time the NFL held its draft last May 1, about a third of the top 100 college prospects had been signed by the USFL and name NFL players like Joe Cribbs, Doug Williams, Brian Sipe and Gary Barbone had jumped to the new league.

So far this season, only one of college football's top 100 has signed — Douglas Richard Flutie, quarterback, Boston College, third consecutive Heisman Trophy winner to take the USFL's money and run.

Moreover, other than Cris Collinsworth of the Cincinnati Bengals, who signed a futures contract two years ago with the Tampa Bay Bandits, no other established NFL players have jumped this year. Washington offensive lineman Mark May visited New Jersey's camp for two days last week, then re-signed with the Redskins a day later.

The retrenchment policy is likely to continue — only New Jersey, Memphis and Jacksonville have shown the inclination this year to spend the money for blue-chip players. But even their budgets are limited and more big-money acquisitions would be counter to new Commissioner Harry Usher's policy of imposing financial parity from the top in a league where the top payrolls are three times the size of the bottom.

"If you're going to have a league that's not going to go right out of sight, you have to say, 'Let's curtail some of this incentive to buy the biggest and the best all the time,'" says Usher, who succeeded Clint Simmons as the USFL's commissioner two weeks ago.

"There's a continual pull and tug between the finances of the individual clubs and the competitive aspect of the league itself," Usher says. "The league is only as strong as its weakest member and it can't allow an economic policy to develop where the wealthiest clubs can buy everyone out."

Most USFL teams say they are willing to stick with what they have.

"If we go down to a 40-man roster, it will be very difficult for (draft choices) to make the team," says John Ralston, president of the Portland or Boston through New Orleans Breakers, which hasn't even contacted most of its draft choices.

"We'd rather let them go into the NFL, let the NFL train them, and when the NFL cuts them, we'll get them back next spring."

Usher will have a task in equalizing team payrolls; not only are the teams unbalanced financially, so are the resources of the owners. For New Jersey's Donald Trump, builder of New York skyscrapers, a few million here or there is nothing; for other owners, whose fortunes are counted in the millions or tens of millions, a large loss is — well, a large loss.

The USFL begins its 1985 season with the top payroll teams, New Jersey and Los Angeles, spending more than $7 million on salaries. 3/times as much as the San Antonio Gunslingers, who have a $2 million payroll.

Los Angeles is a prime example of what overspending can do.

Last year, despite signing Young and 18 other prime prospects, the Express drew only 10,000 a game in the spacious Coliseum. They finished the year an estimated $18 million in debt, with owner J. William Oldenburg in deep legal and financial straits.

This year, the league is running the Express and the team is quietly divesting itself of some of those 1984 rookies, most recently running back Kevin Mack, who signed with the NFL's Cleveland Browns.

The individual salary structure is also skewed.

The USFL has four of pro football's five million-dollar-a-year players, led by Herschel Walker of the Generals (Heisman '82), whose base salary is

The rich keep getting richer in the Big Sky

By The Associated Press

The Big Sky Conference basketball lead ended up in a two-way tie this weekend between Montana and Weber State.

Montana forward Larry Krystkowiak scored 19 points at home Saturday as the Grizzlies rolled over Boise State 65-49 to improve their conference record to 7-2, 19-4 for the season.

Randy Worster and Shawn Campbell combined for 32 points to lead Weber State to a 77-62 win over Nevada-Reno in Ogden, Utah. They started the night with identical 6-2 records, but Nevada-Reno saw its hope for a tie in the conference lead slip away early when Montana wracked up a 33-20 halftime advantage.

Weber State finished the night 7-2 in conference, 18-5 for the season, while Nevada-Reno finished with 6-3, 9-9.

Weber State coach Nell McCarthy credited the play of guards Kent Hagan, Alan Campbell and Aaron McCarthy with harassing the Wolf Pack shooters, especially Rob Harden.

"I thought our guys did a good job of defending him," McCarthy said.

The Wildcats have had to make some major adjustments in the last two weeks since forward Charles Carradine has been out of the lineup, McCarthy said. Carradine has missed the last five games because of an irregular heartbeat and undergoes tests Monday.

"We have had to compensate for the loss of a major source of our team's defensive quickness," McCarthy said.

In the second half Saturday, Shawn Campbell caught fire in the inside the key and carried the scoring load for the Wildcats. He finished with 16.

Guard Kent Hagan added 14 points for the winners while Alan Campbell contributed 11.

Leading the way for Nevada-Reno was Dwayne Randall, who scored 17. Tony Sommers added 14, Ed Porter 12 and Harden 11.

The Wolfpack was never able to draw closer than eight points in the second half.

"We didn't shoot the ball very well at all tonight, and that's the name of the game," said Nevada-Reno Coach Sunny Allen.

In Missoula, Mont., Saturday, Montana was up 35-24 at the break. Leading 14-11 early in the first half, Montana yotted off 10 straight points with seven minutes left in the half.

In the second half, the Broncos quickly closed the deficit to 37-29, but center Larry McBride, who made seven of eight field goal attempts for the game, hit a short jumper and a slam dunk to hold off Boise. McBride finished with 16.

"Boise switched from a 2-3 to a 1-3 zone, and it gave us some problems. It's very aggressive on the ball, and they front everything and try to keep you from turning it (the ball) to the other side," said Montana Coach Mike Montgomery.

"On the other hand, we did get inside for a couple of baskets, and at that point, that's what we needed," he said.

Craig Spjutte topped Boise with 14 points, 11 in the first half, and Frank Johnson added 11.

Boise State fell to 2-7 in the Big Sky and 11-40 overall.

In other Big Sky action, Montana State Coach Stu Starnier is crediting "a lot of defensive pressure" for a Saturday 81-61 win over Idaho in Hozeman, Mont.

"We showed fortitude to sustain some effort," Starnier said.

Senior guard Jeff Epperly tossed in 18 points and helped fuel the Bobcats' second-half surge, in which Montana State outscored the Vandals by 22 points after Idaho had taken a 37-35 halftime lead.

Montana State held a slim 44-43 lead with just less than 16 minutes left in the game when it reeled off 11 straight points to pull away for good.

Idaho was able to mount only one rally in the second half, cutting the gap to seven points at 57-50 with about 10 minutes remaining. Montana State then ripped off another nine straight points to put the contest out of reach.

Frank Garza of Idaho led all scorers with 28 points, 23 of which came in the first half.

In Pocatello Saturday, Nelson Peterson dumped in 28 points and forward Donn Holston added 21 as Idaho State University ran away from Northern Arizona 88-56 in another Big Sky game.

David Allen scored 14 to lead the Lumberjacks and was followed by Andy Hurd with 12.

West wins one

NBA All-Star

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Ralph Sampson scored 11 of his game-high 24 points in the fourth quarter and the Western Conference broke a five-game National Basketball Association All-Star Game losing streak with a 140-129 victory Sunday over the cold-shooting Eastern Conference.

The 7-foot-4 Sampson, who, with fellow All-Star Akeem Olajuwon, forms the Houston Rockets' imposing "Twin Towers" offense, also had 10 rebounds. He was named Most Valuable Player of the game, played before a crowd of 42,746 — an all-time record in any NBA game.

The East helped the West break its losing skid as it had trouble finding the basket after a quick start in the first quarter. Early in the fourth period, the East was shooting only 39.4 percent from the field and improved only slightly the rest of the game.

The West never trailed after taking a 34-33 lead late in the first quarter, although the East managed five ties after that.

The final deadlock was 70-70, but Larry Nance of the Phoenix Suns, deft dunk champion Saturday as the league's slam-dunk champion when he finished fifth behind winner Dominique Wilkins, started a 24-13 streak with two straight baskets.

Sampson completed the run with a layup that gave the West a 94-83 lead with 2:20 left in the third quarter. The closest East came after that was 97-93 in the first minute of the fourth quarter, but Sampson scored the next two baskets and the East never seriously threatened again.

George Gervin followed Sampson in the West scoring column with 23 points, 15 of them in the first half, while Ervin "Magic" Johnson had 21 points and 15 assists.

For the East, Isiah Thomas had 22 points, Larry Bird 21 and Terry Cummings 17. Thomas suffered a bruised thigh in the first half, did not play in the third period and scored only five points in the fourth period.

The previous high attendance for any NBA event was 41,163 on Feb. 4, 1979, for a regular-season double-header at the Houston Astrodome. The previous all-time high for an All-Star Game was 31,745 in 1979 at the Pontiac, Mich., Silverdome.

More snow in forecast for Sun Valley today

Sun Valley — Sun Valley experienced temperatures in the teens Sunday under cloudy skies, with increasing cloudiness and more snow in the forecast for today. There is 68 inches of snow at the top of Bald Mountain, including an inch of new snow. All runs have packed powder, and all facilities are open today. Hours: 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

IDAHO SKI REPORT

Bald Mountain — Closed today, reopens Thursday.

Magie Mountain — Closed today, reopens Friday.

It wasn't such a bad weekend after all

BOISE — Time for a bit of revisionist thinking, as a Saturday night say.

Years truly called "disappointing" that three Magic Valley participants made Saturday's finals of the Idaho High School Wrestling Tournament. Certainly the Fourth District has never been a hotbed (hotmat?) of wrestling. But as I pointed out, the area's representation was the smallest in recent years.

Then I mentioned how shameful, awful, and dastardly this was to a couple of local wrestling coaches. Their responses went along the lines of, "Heck, in some years we didn't have even that many in the finals."

Their comments got me thinking — which can be a self-destructive process. In this case, it was instructive. For I realized that this year's Magic Valley group didn't do badly at all when compared to previous contingents.

Fifty-two wrestlers from area schools qualified for the journey. Eleven placed first through fourth. This, too, is the lowest number in recent years. Magic Valley had 12 placers in 1984, 13 in 1983 and 19 in 1982.

However, last year's Magic Valley had 73 grapplers at state. The Fourth District's A-3 schools were allowed to bring three wrestlers from each weight class, while the A-2s took two in each weight. This year, the respective representations were two and one, under the state's system of rotating privileges.

In sum, 11 out of 58 is markedly better than 12 out of 73. Though the overall quality of wrestling in the Magic Valley may not be improving rapidly — a situation the gentlemen starting Magic Valley Power hope to change — it's hardly withering, as I might have implied.

I spied a modest soul wearing another version of the T-shirt bearing the classic message: "Girls play volleyball/boys play basketball/men wrestle." I had first seen this profound message emblazoned on a fellow's chest at last year's state tourney in Pocatello.

A Highland team wore a T-shirt with a similar message: "Wrestling is for studs."

Gee, all you volleyball and basketball players, doesn't this make you feel inferior and insignificant?

The tourney's most entertaining scene by far unfolded at the very end, when Salmon's Brad Holtbaugh and Kuna's Andy Mitchell met for the A-2 heavyweight championship.

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Brad Daugherty hit nine of his team's final 21 points to lead No. 15 North Carolina to a hard-fought 75-70 victory over Louisiana State University in a nationally televised college basketball game Sunday.

Daugherty finished with 19 points to lead all scorers. LSU led by as much as 10 points in the first half, but Carolina whittled that to just three points, 39-36, at halftime.

North Carolina took its first lead of the game five minutes into the second half on a layup by Steve Hale.

Fresno St. 63 Nevada-Las Vegas 52
FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Senior center Scott Barnes and junior forward Jos Kulpers each scored 18 points to lead Fresno State to a 63-52 upset Saturday.

Nevada-Las Vegas in Pacific Coast Athletic Association basketball.

The loss snapped a 17-game Las Vegas winning streak, the longest streak in the nation. It also prevented Las Vegas Coach Jerry Tarkanian from getting his 400th career coaching win and was the first loss in NCAA play for the Rebels.

Kulpers from Holland scored 11 of his points in the first half as the Bulldogs took a 24-22 halftime lead. Fresno State opened up a 10-point lead with just under 10 minutes left in the game but Las Vegas was able to cut the margin to four points with 8:31 left on a pair of baskets by Riehle Adams and Spoon James.

Kulpers then hit a three-point basket and Fresno State controlled the remainder of the game.

Barnes also had a game-high 11 rebounds and teammate Mitch Arnold added 12 points. Arnon Gilliam led Las Vegas with 13 points and Adams added 12.

Fresno State is now 9-2 in the conference and 14-6 overall. Las Vegas dropped to 11-1 in the conference and 18-3 overall.

The triumph improved Utah's record to 5-7 in the conference and 10-14 overall.

The loss virtually eliminated New Mexico from the league title chase, with the Lobos dropping to 8-4 in the WAC and 15-8 overall.

Hendrix, who over a seven-minute stretch in the second half scored all 14 of Utah's points, rallied the Utes from a 36-28 halftime deficit.

Oregon St. 53 Oregon St. 51
EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Freshman guard Eric Knox hit two free throws with 18 seconds to play to give No. 16 Oregon State a 53-51 Pacific 10 Conference victory over Oregon Saturday at MacArthur Court.

The victory gave the Beavers a 7-3 Pac-10 record to keep them in the thick of the title race behind first-place USC, 9-2.

Seven-foot Oregon center Blair Hasmussen won game-high scoring honors for the Ducks with 21 points. Rasmussen's four straight unanswered baskets brought Oregon from a 37-31 deficit to a 39-37 lead with 8:52 to play and set up Knox's closing heroics.

MARK O'MEARA
Outlasts Stadler

O'Meara wins his second consecutive PGA event

By BOB GREEN
The Associated Press

HONOLULU — Mark O'Meara grabbed his second consecutive PGA Tour victory Sunday, a one-shot triumph in the Hawaiian Open, when his decisive pressure putt on the 17th hole wore an end to Craig Stadler's comeback bid.

"I made a late rush — a little too late," Stadler said after his closing 64 briefly tied O'Meara.

The drama came when Stadler, playing well in front of O'Meara, birdied the 18th hole at the Waialae Country Club. That tied them for the top spot at 20 under par and finished the day's work for Stadler.

Golf

hole," he said. It got it to the hole, and in the hole. It turned out to be the winner.

O'Meara, 28 years old, who won the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am last week, became the first man to win consecutive Tour titles since Gil Morgan won the first two events of 1983.

"Mark is on a roll. Gosh, but he's playing well," Stadler said. "O'Meara won this one, by a single stroke, with a 69 over the final 18 holes and a 267 total, 21 shots under par. The victory was worth $90,000 from the total purse of $500,000 and lifted O'Meara into the season's money-winning lead at $194,625.

Stadler, playing well ahead of O'Meara, came to the par-5 18th needing a birdie to tie the front-runner. After a massive drive, he needed only an iron for his second shot and put it on the green, some 40 feet from the flag. He came within inches of an eagle putt and tapped in for the birdie that put him in a tie for the lead. O'Meara, at that time, was playing the 17th and giving every indication he was crumbling under the pressure. O'Meara had opened the door to Stadler's bid when he missed short birdie putts — from 3 and 8 feet — on both the 15th and 16th. "I just hit bad putts," O'Meara said. But, after Stadler had checked his card and was chatting with a television commentator, O'Meara ran in a 25-to-30 foot birdie putt on the 17th and had the lead again. It was O'Meara's 20th birdie of the tournament.

Sheehan shades Lopez to take Sarasota LPGA

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Patty Sheehan birdied the final hole to break out of a tie with Nancy Lopez and finish with a 10-under 278 to win the $200,000 Sarasota Classic Sunday.

Sheehan's 6-under 66 was the low score for the Round that became a daylong duel with Lopez, who carded a 4-under 69 for a 273.

"It was just one of those days that I really hit the ball well," Sheehan said. "The putts fell that I needed. This was a classic confrontation between two players who really wanted to win."

The victory was worth $30,000 to Sheehan, whose eight titles in 1983 and 1984 were the most by any player on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

Sheehan started the day one shot back of Lopez and third-round leader Patty Hayes, who entered final play with 5-under 1398. Sheehan birdied her first two holes and continued on to a six-birdie, no-bogey round.

Tied for third, four shots back at 6-under 282, were Jane Blalock, who had 67 Sunday, and Betsy King, who fired a 70. Janet Anderson's 70 for a 5-under 283 earned her fifth, while Donna Hill White was another stroke back after her 71 round; Hayes, meanwhile, had a final-round 76 and was down the list at 1-under 287.

The leaders were still fighting for sole possession of the top spot as Sheehan prepared to hit into the green of the par-5 18th at the 6,124-yard Bent Tree Golf & Racquet Club. But she heard a roar coming from the 17th, green and thought Lopez had birdied to move ahead of her.

Sheehan hit a 5-iron short of the green, then put a sand wedge 8 feet from the hole and calmly made the putt.

Lopez needed a birdie to tie and went for the green on her second shot, hitting a 4-wood just off the edge of the green next to one of the gallery bleachers. She was left with a 6-foot chip that she put within 10 feet of the hole.

Lopez, who won the Sarasota Classic in 1978, earned $18,500 for her efforts Sunday.

Wilander, Evert advance at Lipton tournament

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The No. 2 seeds — Chris Evert Lloyd and Sweden's Mats Wilander — continued their winning ways, while three seeded players tumbled Sunday in the $1.8 million Lipton International Players Championships tennis tournament.

Kathy Rinaldi eliminated No. 8 Zina Garrison and West Germany's Bettina Bunge ousted No. 14 Pam Casale in women's play, and hard-hitting Mike Leach upset No. 10 Jimmy Arias in the men's singles.

In a night match, the women's top seed, Martina Navratilova, met Sweden's Caterina Lindqvist with the victor moving into the quarterfinals.

Aided by his opponent's three double-faults in the seventh game of the decisive third set, Wilander struggled past Bob Green 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 in a third-round battle before Lloyd defeated ninth-seeded Kathy Jordan 6-4, 6-4 to move into the quarterfinals.

The singles winners here on the hardwoods of Laver's International Tennis Resort will pocket $112,500 each. The tournament, the only non-Grand Slam event with a two-week format of 128-player field for both men and women, is jointly owned by the men's Association of Tennis Professionals (ATP) and the Women's Tennis Association (WTA).

Green, who reached the fourth round in the U.S. Open last year before falling to eventual champion John McEnroe, jumped into a 4-1 lead against Wilander in the final set of this first-year, Grand Slam-size event, and was serving at 4-2 when his service deserted him.

He double-faulted at 15-0 and again at 30-15. His third double-fault came on break point, pulling Wilander to 3-4.

Second-seeded in the men's singles, Wilander wrapped up the third-round match by ripping off the final five games.

"Maybe he got a little nervous and didn't know how to end the match," Wilander said of Green. At 1-4, "I tried to take more risks on my serve and concentrate more on mine."

Swede defeats Girardelli in slalom

BOHMIO, Italy (AP) — Sweden's John Nilsson upset heavy pre-race favorite Marc Girardelli in the men's slalom at the World Alpine Skiing Championships Sunday, capturing the title held by veteran teammate Ingemar Stenmark.

The Austrian-born Girardelli, the overall World Cup leader skiing for Luxembourg, finished second in the closing event of the championships, while Robert Zoller of Austria wound up third. Stenmark rounded out the Swedish euphoria, jumping from sixth in the first run to fourth place on the second.

It was Sweden's only medal during the championships dominated by the

Skiing

Swiss, who captured four gold, three silver and one bronze.

Nilsson finished fourth in the slalom at last year's Olympic Games in Sarajevo, missing a bronze by five-hundredths of a second.

"I said to myself 'never fourth again,'" the jubilant 21-year-old Swede said afterwards. "This is my first victory but I've had two previous second places in World Cup slalom racing this season."

Nilsson, considered the heir to the legendary Stenmark in the slalom, said that after finishing third in the first run down the Orler track "I knew I had a chance at a medal, but I never thought of gold."

"The first thing I'm going to do is call my mother and father," the winner added.

Nilsson's victory was one of three major upsets at the championships. In the women's giant slalom, unheralded Dinann Hoffe of the United States came from obscurity to take the gold over a field of seasoned competitors, while West Germany's Martina Wassenauer upset Swiss ace Pirmin Zurbriggen and Girardelli to win the men's giant slalom.

Decker-Sloney hurts her leg again

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The injury to star-crossed Mary Sloney in the Villals-U.S. Olympic international track and field meet might be more serious than first believed, her coach, Dick Brown, said Sunday.

"The injury plagued Sloney, the former Mary Decker, was forced to withdraw from the women's 1,500-meter race Saturday night, just over two laps remaining, with what appeared to be a severe cramp in her right calf."

But Brown said: "I think the cramp probably caused some torn tissue. We will probably know in two or three days."

Track

The extent of the damage will be determined after Sloney returns to her home in Eugene, Ore. and is examined by Dr. Stan James.

Meanwhile, Brown said that Sloney, who was on a pace that would have made her the first woman to break four minutes indoors, would "continue to lie" in the injured area, "to stop the blood from flowing and leaking."

(foot)," said the disappointed Sloney, owner of the world indoor best of 4 minutes, eight-tenths of a second. "I don't know exactly what's wrong with it."

"Last night, they iced it, they elevated it, they treated it with anti-inflammatory drugs. It (the pain) is right in the belly of the muscle."

NOTICE OF EMERGENCY RULE-MAKING AND NOTICE OF INTENDED RULE-MAKING.

In compliance with Sections 67-5203 (b) and 67-5204 (b) (2), Idaho Code, notice is hereby given that the Division of Welfare, Department of Health and Welfare, State of Idaho, has undertaken emergency procedures for rule-making. The action, under Docket Number 0305-8406E and Docket Number 0301-8409E, involves the adoption, amendment, renumbering, and repeal of rules governing Medical Assistance, Title 3, Chapter 9, and the adoption of rules governing the Department of Health and Welfare. The Department has no discretion as to the substantive requirements of the proposed amendment which is designated solely to comply with the provisions of the Statewide Home and Community-Based Services Waiver granted under Section 1915(c) of the Social Security Act.

Emergency rule-making is necessary because if these rules are not made effective immediately, some individuals may be forced to enter nursing homes unnecessarily in order to obtain necessary medical services, resulting in the loss of personal resources such as their home or apartment and unnecessary mental anguish for the recipient and/or the family, with the potential of additional deterioration.

The rules, which were adopted by emergency procedures on the 15th day of February, 1985, and filed by the undersigned on the 21st day of December, 1984, were effective on the 21st day of November, 1984, and will expire at the end of one hundred twenty (120) days on the 20th day of March, 1985.

In addition, notice is

LEGAL NOTICE

also given, in compliance with Section 67-5203(a)(1), Idaho Code, that the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, Division of Welfare, has initiated regular rule-making under Docket Number 0303-8501, and proposed to adopt, of these emergency rules as permanent rules.

The following is a descriptive summary of the substance of the emergency and intended permanent action and of the principal issues involved:

The Department has implemented home and community-based services on a statewide basis. Previously, home and community-based services were limited to specific service areas in the state. Expansion of this program was granted by the United States Department of Health and Human Services on November 21, 1984.

Within the time limits specified below, any person can review the proposed rules—in the DHW Bureau of Administrative Services or in any of regional administrative offices of the Department. Copies of the proposed rules will be made available upon written request specifying the docket number(s) cited above.

Any person who is affected by the proposed rules is encouraged to submit information concerning the anticipated economic impact of the proposed action. For assistance on technical questions concerning the proposed rules, contact Linda Caballero, Department of Health and Welfare, (208) 334-4337, Boise, Idaho. All written comments and data concerning the proposed rules must be directed to the undersigned and must be postmarked or delivered on or before February 25, 1985.

Provisions for public hearings are waived, as allowed by Section 67-5203(a)(4), Idaho Code.

The Department has no discretion as to the substantive requirements of the proposed amendment which is designated solely to comply with the provisions of the Statewide Home and Community-Based Services Waiver granted under Section 1915(c) of the Social Security Act.
