Idahoans facing boost in taxes?

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE -- The battle over the state budget will shift from the floor of the House and Senate to the House Revenue and Taxation Committee.

The House on Thursday strongly rejected the Republicans' second attempt at a hold-the-line education budget, voting 55-29 against a proposed higher education budget that was more than $5 million under the governor's recommendation.

The schools asked for $9 million more than contained in the defeated budget, which would have set state support at $84.8 million and authorized the schools to spend $107 million from all sources.

The Senate did the same thing a day earlier, rejecting the proposed $298 million public school funding bill by a 30-11 margin.

That prompted some House members to note that means the Legislature will have to raise taxes or find a way to come up with more money.

"Seven and a half percent is not adequate," said Rep. Dean Haagenson, R-Coeur d'Alene. "Yes, I'll support a tax increase. Idaho is not over-taxed, and I believe we all are here with the best interests of Idaho in mind," he said.

and revenue bills originate in the Legislature, and several have been printed and introduced. They range from increases in the state tax rates and sales tax increases to new philosophies such as changing the state personal income tax system to a flat rate with no deductions.

Congressman Larry Craig spoke to the House just before the vote, and several debaters in the House reminded members Craig urged a strong commitment to education.

Continuing to underfund Idaho's colleges and universities is not making a commitment to education — or the state's future, they said.

All 29 votes for the bill were Republicans, mainly those from rural areas. All 17 Democrats voted against, joined by 38 of the 67 Republicans in the House.

Sponsor Rep. Preston Brimhall, R-Idaho Falls, said the state's economy can't afford more money for higher education. He said the bill increases higher education spending by 7 1/2 percent, "and I don't think too many people are getting 7 1/2 percent raises this year."

But in terms of "real dollars," adjusted for inflation, Idaho's colleges and universities have been cut 15 percent since 1978, said Rep. Janet Hay, R-Nampa, former president of the State Board of Education.

She talked about the "trauma" that higher education has suffered, with declining quality and enrollment. "We need to all pull together. Higher education is a system which serves all of the state. We need to defeat this

McDermott lottery bill loses in House by 10-vote margin

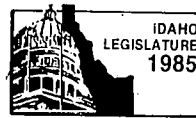

By QUANE KENYON

BOISE -- Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, got out of a sick bed Thursday to carry a state lottery bill in the House.

She should have stayed, falling by 10 votes to draw the two-thirds majority needed to pass the House.

The bill proposed letting Idaho voters to decide if they wanted to amend the Idaho Constitution to repeal a ban on lotteries and games of chance. But debate focused on the perils of gambling, with opponents claiming a state lottery would "open the door" to organized crime, pornography and associated evils.

The vote was 46-30, 10 votes short of the two-thirds majority required to put a proposed constitutional amendment before the voters. Ms. McDermott said up to nine legislators who promised earlier to vote for the bill backed down on the final vote.

Roll call — A3

Democrats Larry Echolfawk of Pocatello and Arlene Mitchell of Lewiston joined 36 Republicans voting against lotteries. Voting for the proposal were 15 Democrats and 31 Republicans.

Ms. McDermott urged House members to end the "hypocrisy" that now prevails because some forms of lotteries, such as church raffles and bingo games, are at least tolerated.

She reminded opponents that her bill, HJR1, would not decide the issue of whether Idaho would allow lotteries. It would only put the issue before voters, she said.

"We should permit the people to vote on an issue of statewide interest. That's not the same as opening the door to all the things which have been brought up here," she said.

Rep. Gary Montgomery, R-Boise, called the lottery proposal a "subterfuge" which would open the door to "debauchery, pornography and organized crime."

"At least we should give the people the right to vote on it," said Rep. Robert Speck, R-Coeur d'Alene.

Rep. Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls, called it a moral issue. He said he opposed the "something for nothing" appeal of gambling.

In response to the argument that the people should be allowed to vote on lotteries, Bateman said that's what legislators were elected for. "They sent us here to exercise our judgment," he said.

He said a lottery would be an "en-

Indictments accuse adoption ring of bilking 200 prospective parents

By JENNIFER BRANDLON
The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Five members of an international adoption ring have been charged with bilking more than 200 prospective parents in 40 states out of hundreds of thousands of dollars with the promise of children from Mexico, federal authorities said Thursday.

U.S. Attorney Brent Ward said the multimount indictments were secretly handed up by grand juries in Boston and Salt Lake City on Wednesday. More indictments could result from a continuing 14-month investigation, he said.

"In some cases, certain defendants told parents that a particular child had been found for them and identified the child by name, birth date, sex or photograph, when in fact no such child was available for adoption," Ward said in a written statement.

The nationwide investigation spearheaded by the FBI and the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service found evidence that the victims — most of them residents of Utah and Massachusetts — paid between $300 and $6,000 each between 1978 and 1983 on the promise of getting Mexican children for adoption, the indictments allege.

In Boston, U.S. Attorney William Weld said investigators believe more than 350 prospective parents applied for children and paid an estimated $750,000 in fees for various adoption services.

Brackett D. Denniston III, chief of the major fraud unit in Weld's office, said it is believed about one third of the 350 actually received children.

Weld said 65 Massachusetts couples paid fees for children they never saw. In Utah, Ward said, at least 32 couples paid a combined $160,000 for Mexican children provided by the defendants, but 40 others paid $102,000 and never received children.

The Fort Worth (Texas) Star-Telegram, which reported the indictments in its Thursday editions, said they capped the largest federal investigation ever into unlicensed adoption intermediaries. Ward declined to confirm the statement.

The Boston indictments allege mail and wire fraud and conspiracy against four of the defendants: Deborah Rue Tanner, 35, of Wilkes, Ariz.; Bryan M. Hall, 33, of El Paso, Texas; Rebecca Kelley, 32, of New Market, Iowa; and Lorenzo Prospero Arzola, an attorney in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, which is across the border from El Paso.

Terry Tanner, 38, Mrs. Tanner's husband, also of Wilkes, was indicted only in Salt Lake City. Also indicted in Salt Lake City were Mrs. Tanner, Hall and Arzola. The Utah indictments charge 19 violations of mail and wire fraud statutes.

Ward said two women who cooperated with authorities, Sharon Tanner of California and Sylvia Jarvis of Utah, would not face charges although they had solicited families.

Whether Sharon Tanner was related to the other Tanners could not immediately be determined.

Syrians to release Levin to envoy today

U.S. newsman escapes captors

By MONA ZIADE
The Associated Press

DAMASCUS, Syria — American journalist Jeremy Levin, kidnapped 11 months ago in Beirut, escaped Thursday in apparent good health and will be turned over to the U.S. ambassador, the Syrian government said.

The official Syrian News Agency reported late Thursday that Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharara summoned U.S. Ambassador William Engleton and told him Levin had managed to escape from his captors in Lebanon and would be turned over to the ambassador this morning at the Foreign Ministry in Damascus.

The official report said Levin "escaped and arrived at a Syrian army position in Lebanon," but did not elaborate.

Earlier, the Syrian government had said it won Levin's release through negotiations, but Levin — the Beirut bureau chief for Cable News Network — was quoted as saying he fled from his captors and walked for two days. "He looks beautiful," Levin's wife, Lucille, said in Washington after she was shown a news photograph of her husband with a beard, rumpled hair and a bewildered look on his face.

The Syrian ambassador in Washington, Raffiq Jouejati, said the reporter had been examined at a medical center in Damascus and found to be well.

But AFP, the French news agency, quoted Levin as saying he could not identify who held him or say exactly how he escaped.

"I fled toward midnight from the two-story villa where I was being held," he was quoted. "I walked for two hours before hearing a dog and human voices."

"I thought my kidnappers were at my heels so I hid under a truck, but when I saw it was Syrian soldiers, I gave myself up," he said.

Levin, 61, disappeared last March 7. According to the AFP interview, he said he was captured by a top gunman about 20 years old.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said in Santa Barbara, Calif., where President Reagan is vacationing, that the U.S. Embassy in Damascus had been informed by the Syrian government that Levin "is in Syrian hands and is safe in Damascus."

"We are certainly pleased that he has been released," Speakes said.

Inflation battle isn't over yet

WASHINGTON — The country would be wrong to declare a 4 percent annual price increase a victory against inflation, since America's luck in reducing double-digit inflation could soon turn sour, a group of former government officials warned Thursday.

The group, headed by Herbert Stein, chairman, President Richard M. Nixon's Council of Economic Advisors, and Henry Fowler, Treasury secretary under President Lyndon B. Johnson, said the Reagan ad-

Bid to cut Evans' regional offices defeated

By BOB FICK
The Associated Press

BOISE — Despite claiming that Democratic Gov. John Evans is using tax dollars to extend his political base, a small band of Republicans lost its bid Thursday to effectively abolish the chief executive's year-old satellite offices in northern and eastern Idaho.

"Some of it's politically motivated because he's running for senator," said Rep. J.F. Chadband, R-Idaho Falls, who failed in his attempt to eliminate the $50,000 in the governor's 1983-1986 budget earmarked for spending those offices.

But he was only able to gain the support of five fellow Republicans on the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee as the spending cut failed on an 18-6 vote. The panel went on to approve a new gubernatorial budget that includes the money for the satellite offices.

Joining Chadband were Sens. Vane of Grand View, Dane Watkins of Idaho Falls, Ventr Crystal of Lewisville and Abwell Parry of Parma and Rep. Preston Brimhall of Idaho Falls.

"It's not a partisan issue — like having access to the governor's office," Sen. Norma Dohler, D-Moscow, declared in support of the Moscow and Pocatello operations.

"I think he's to be commended for that, and we shouldn't penalize him," she said.

Evans opened the two offices about a year ago. The Pocatello office is headed by Elaine Hoffman and has two part-time secretaries while the Moscow office is headed by Steve Scanlin and has one part-time secretary.

"Good for our side," Evans said of the decision by the committee, that has been cutting down even his conservative budget proposals for the year that begins July 1.

The governor, who announced two years ago that he would not seek another term in 1986, has already set up an exploratory committee as a possible challenger for the U.S. Senate against incumbent Republican Steve Symms. Bethine Church, widow of the four-term Democratic Sen. Frank Church, has also expressed interest in possibly challenging Symms, who narrowly defeated her husband in 1980.

Chadband argued that the satellite offices are similar to what he claimed was Evans' political use of the Division of Economic and Community Affairs in his heated 1982 re-election campaign against then GOP Lt. Gov. Phil Batt. At that time, Chadband said, Evans used the agency to promote what he called the "Capitol For A Day" operation where administration officials moved into small towns throughout the state.

Chemical reporting bill loses

Times-News capitol bureau

BOISE — A proposal to require workers and fire officials to be apprised of the nature and type of chemicals being used or stored by Idaho businesses was defeated by a House panel Thursday.

Dubbed "the right to know bill" by its sponsors, the measure intended to inform workers of the health risks posed by certain substances and of the precautionary measures needed to avoid those risks.

The proposal would also have provided state and local fire officials with information that would aid firefighters in existing chemical fires and in protecting themselves from chemical hazards. Richard Duffy, a firefighters union spokesman told members of the House Environmental Affairs Committee.

"The public thinks we know what we're doing. Actually we do not," Duffy said referring to firefighters often to battle fires involving hazardous compounds, often unarmed with knowledge of what they are attempting to extinguish.

The proposal was criticized by Rep. Boyd Hill, R-Meridian, a committee member, who said the bill would create massive paperwork problems.

Pete Skamsar, executive director of the National Federation of Independent Businesses of Idaho, told the committee the proposed law was too vague to be enforced.

Skamsar said employers would be responsible for providing the information on hazardous substances, but he questioned who would determine which substances are hazardous.

Victims' bill emerges in Senate

BOISE (AP) — Although declaring it only a first step, the Idaho Senate has approved legislation creating a Bill of Rights for crime victims and requiring criminals to make restitution.

"This is a beginning in restoring some faith in our criminal justice system by our own," Senate Justice Committee Chairman Roger Fairchild, R-Fruiland, said Thursday.

The measure, backed by Attorney General Jim Jones, was endorsed 38-3 and sent to the House just three days after the chamber rejected another proposal to create a special state fund that would compensate victims of violent crimes.

Critics of that bill argued that it was administratively unworkable, pressing instead for the bill approved Thursday.

Under it, victims are guaranteed notification and appearances during the various stages of criminal prosecution and in later consideration of probation or parole for the perpetrator of the crime. It also requires judges to order criminals to make restitution for losses to their victims unless there is an overriding reason against that action.

"Physiologically, I agree," said Sen. Reed Judge, R-Soda Springs, who opposed the bill along with Phil Batt, R-Wilder, and Yearl Crystal, R-Lewisville. "But in practicality, I don't think it's going to work."

Sen. Lee Staker, R-Idaho Falls, also voted. Fairchild acknowledged that problems with the plan will be identified and the Legislature will have to resolve them in future sessions. But he argued that until some type of victims' program is implemented, the state will have made no headway at all toward helping victims recover from crimes.

"The plan, he said, provides direct linkage between criminal and victim in restitution, it insures rights for the victim and it's a beginning."

House panel introduces flat tax proposal

BOISE (AP) — Should taxpayers get a tax break for charitable contributions? Or should the donations be made because the cause is worthy, with no consideration of tax advantages?

That was the debate in the House Revenue and Taxation Committee Thursday on a bill proposed by Rep. Chris Hooper, R-Boise, to replace state individual tax laws with a flat tax rate.

Hooper said if all exemptions and deductions were removed, a flat tax rate of 11 to 12 percent would generate about the same income. More importantly, he said, the state tax system would become much more fair if the many exemptions and deductions were eliminated.

The bill was approved for printing and introduction, although some committee members said they probably would oppose it later.

Hooper said it's wrong for institutions such as the state's public broadcast system to conduct "begging bowls" to raise contributions, based on the tax breaks people could get.

Those donations should be made because they're to a worthy cause, he said.

Rep. Gary Montgomery, R-Boise, objected.

"One of the most worrisome things we do is to encourage charitable contributions," he said. "The distinctions go beyond economics, he said."

Election bill OK'd

BOISE (AP) — A bipartisan coalition in the Idaho Senate has approved legislation aimed at returning selection of primary election candidates for state and federal offices to the political parties.

Under the proposal, which still faces House review, the political party central committees must decide whether the party will use the new authority.

If the committee opts for the plan, the party must hold its political convention within five days of the deadline for filing for political office.

Senate vote clears budget indecision

Finally, after what was starting to look like a new Dark Ages settling in on the Idaho Legislature, an informal coalition of centrist Republicans and Democrats has mustered the votes to prevent a right-wing gutting of educational funding.

The key vote was Wednesday in the Idaho Senate where 19 Republicans and 11 Democrats teamed up to defeat a $298 million schools budget proposal which virtually every observer has said is too low even to maintain basic educational services in Idaho. Among those voting to kill the measure, and thus open the door for a larger budget, were Magic Valley area Sens. Larry Anderson, Denton Darrington, Darrell McRoberts, Laird Noh and Lynn Tominaga.

The defeated proposal would have eliminated the state's gifted and talented funding, as well as career ladder and teacher equity salary changes, both of which were approved last year.

A new funding level, probably over $300 million, is now likely to emerge, and at least parts of last year's commitments can be made.

We think the career ladder part of the proposal is particularly important and, along with the gifted and talented program, should get top priority after ensuring that normal increases in the state's student population are taken care of.

In the past few years, the state has been forced to shoulder more and more of the funding for public education; it is a responsibility which it should not shirk by setting a budget below what is reasonable.

We agree with Senate Education Committee Chairman Terry Svendsen, R-Cataldo, that there is support among Idahoans for increased spending on public education.

Now, the trick will be to come up with the revenue source. One trial balloon launched this week was for a one-half-cent sales tax increase, imposed for one year only. That suggestion, from Rep. Ernest Hale, Burley, who heads the Education Committee in the House. But that is not likely to be the end of the revenue proposals.

It may seem that, for the moment, the lawmakers are back to "Go." But the defeat this week in the Senate for what many thought was an inadequate education budget has cleared away at least some of the indecisiveness.

We now all know what the educational budget will not be. At what higher level it will be set is still not certain.

Budget says 'Cut the other guy, not me'

WASHINGTON -- This is how it would be reported in the Congressional Record if the president's budget for 1986 ever gets to the floor of the House.

"Mr. Speaker! I have an amendment to offer."
"The gentleman will state it."
"The amendment calls for a new Section One to be inserted following the title, and for subsequent sections to be renumbered accordingly. The new section would read: 'The laws of human nature shall be, and they are hereby, repealed.'"

Without that modest little saving amendment, the budget is done for. For the past 10 days the ordinary noises of this capital city have been drowned out by the greatest chorus of lamentation since Joshua sacked the city of Jericho.

We have discovered what the voters meant to say in their mandate of last November. This was their message to Congress and the White House:

"Don't cut me; cut the other guy. And don't raise my taxes; raise his instead."

If it weren't such a sorry reflection on our sense of national purpose, the situation would be comic. Abstractly, almost everyone knows that the prospective federal deficits must be reduced. Their growing burden upon the economy is intolerable. As a practical matter, almost everyone knows that the deficits can be reduced in only two ways -- by cutting expenditures, or by raising revenues, or by both.

The president proposes substantial reductions over the next few years in farm subsidies. These proposals are wholly justified. The present contradictory policies are indefensible, but not in the view of Sen. James Abdnor of South Dakota. He finds the proposals "unthinkable."

Among the farm programs to be abolished are tobacco supports and rural electrification. Rep. Charles Rose of North Carolina calls the tobacco proposals "ridiculous" and "disastrous."

Spokesmen for the REA cooperatives are aghast. The city boys have another point of view.

"Threat to City Programs Grows," says a headline in a municipal newsletter. Rep. Stewart B. McKinney of Connecticut finds the idea of reducing urban development grants and ending aid to local sewer projects "very, very dangerous to the urban areas of our country."

Under the Reagan budget, funds for education would be cut and funds for the Job Corps would be eliminated. Rep. Augustus Hawkins of California heads a committee on education and job training.

James Kilpatrick

You may guess, if you are a good guesser, what Hawkins thinks of these ideas.

The budget would limit guaranteed student loans to students from families having incomes of less than $12,500. Says the head of the American Council on Education: "This would jeopardize the national security." The president would cut housing subsidies. To a spokesman for the housing industry: "This would represent a devastating blow."

So it goes. The opera people are singing the blues; even a 3 percent cut would ruin them. Government workers are howling with outrage. Directors of charitable institutions are warning that their activities will go to the bowwows if contributions are made less tax-deductible. The veterans lobby is warming up for one colossal protest against cutting benefits his way.

"Don't cut me; cut the other guy." Yes, this is exactly the way human nature works. Virtually no one is willing to sacrifice anything toward the national purpose of reducing those deficits.

It is too much to condemn this as pure selfishness. The librarians, school teachers, college presidents, social workers, railway engineers, airplane pilots, small-business men, tobacco growers and middle-income parents truly believe that the programs that most dearly concern them are good programs.

"They don't want to see them cut. They want to see them expanded. Go out rural housing, says the city fellow. Go out mass transit, says the fellow on the farm.

These attitudes have to change. It will take Reagan's leadership to do it. If we fail to rise as one people to a sense of common purpose, the whole cause of deficit reduction will collapse.

BOSTON -- If you want a sneak preview of children's television shows for 1986, don't delve into the imagination of the young, the dreams of the screenwriters or, heaven forbid, the hopes of the educators. Check out the annual toy fair.

At the huge marketing zoo in New York this week, there is a menagerie of new toy ventures bearing names like Gobots, Bumblebees, Thundercats and She-Ra. Each one of them is going to debut on television as well as the toy shelves. They will soon join the ranks of kiddie toy stars like Masters of the Universe, Care Bears, Transformers and He-Man.

In today's world, a "big toy" comes equipped with a TV series as if it were a battery. The manufacturers at the toy fair boast openly about television "backups" and "support" for their new line. But they aren't just talking about 30-second television ads anymore. They are talking about 30-minute television ads.

Since 1983, when TV first began to air programs that were built on toys, the whole thing has escalated shamelessly.

Ellen Goodman

The trend gives new meaning to the expression "commercial television." In the good old days, we used to worry about television ads directed at kids. Now, kids' television is an ad.

"Would they be willing to turn all of television into a Sears Roebuck catalogue?" asks Peggy Churcen, head of Action for Children's Television (ACT). "The difference is that adults will recognize they are being sold a bill of goods. Children won't."

ACT filed a suit with the Federal Communications Commission about made-for-toys TV. Their point was that young kids have enough trouble distinguishing commercials from programs. The commission had agreed earlier that "basic fairness requires that at least a clear separation be maintained.

These shows are not, by the way, any crumlier than the rest of the Saturday morning lineup. As Churcen says, "They don't cut up grandma and put her in the tank." But they pervert the whole concept of programming into packaging.

Just how vested an interest is kids' television now? Telepictures, which makes Thundercats, has offered to give the stations a piece of the profits from the sale of the toy.

The FCC has promised to respond to the whole issue this spring. Even in the commission's current mode -- pro-business, anti-regulation -- they should see something suspect in this two-team pursuit of the most gullible of viewers. It's too easy, rather like selling candy to a baby.

That, by the way, is next on the kiddie lineup. The first TV show to be created on the candy counter is now in production. It's "Gummy Bears" and it's modeled after little sticky candies.

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe.

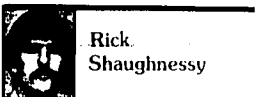

McClure, Crane find support in Idaho Republican ranks

Republican lawmakers received conflicting signals this week as they assembled in various Treasure Valley their rooms to absorb the year's array of serious supporting and promoting party ideology.

On Tuesday, the majority party faithful packed a Boise convention center to observe Lincoln's birthday and to be convinced that if the great emancipator were alive today, he wouldn't be a Democrat.

Mostly they were there for a partisan pep rally not unlike the one Democrats will hold this weekend to honor their perceived ideological roots in presidents Jefferson and Jackson.

As did other dignitaries, Jim McClure, Idaho's senior U.S. senator and the state's ranking Republican office holder, took the occasion to laud President Reagan. But he also assessed as formidable, the task which lies ahead for the party as it seeks to implement the political agenda which Reagan's electoral support is perceived to have mandated.

But McClure, a vocal proponent of Reagan and opponent of Democratic fiscal policies on the national level, offered few words of support to those majority party lawmakers at the state level who display as similar penchant for cutting spending and services.

Specifically, McClure asked that lawmakers improve the opportunities of education in this state as we all believe is necessary.

Glances at Speaker of the House Tom Stivers and President Pro Tem Jim Hirsch showed faces of stone in response to McClure's opinions.

Those two top Republican legislative leaders oppose any tax increases which many, if not most, lawmakers believe are necessary to adequately fund education.

However, McClure's message to the right by education became clouded by the event's key note speaker, Rep. Phil Crane of Illinois.

Crane spent more than 40 minutes attacking Democrats, secular humanism, Marxist dogma and big government. He defined big government as any government expenditure other than for police or defense services.

The man who Time magazine referred to as the "Jack Armstrong" of Illinois makes Reagan appear like a hold out member of SDS by comparison. And in the Lincoln Day crowd he managed to out-estrident.

If Stivers had tried to make any wider, his face likely would have split in two. No weak-willed liberal has Phil Crane. Stivers must have been thinking, Risch's face was obscured but the expressions of others seated at the banquet's head table appeared to show a more somber response to Crane's message that, except in rare cases, the existence of government is wrong.

The conflicting messages of McClure and Crane on governmental spending had come only hours after Senate Republicans had similarly huffed over the subject but at a less academic level.

The 28 Republican state senators had locked themselves in caucus for three hours, seeking a balance between their no-tax-increase campaigns and the perceived needs of Idaho's public schools.

On Wednesday the quandy was at least temporarily resolved. Republicans joined with Democrats to overwhelmingly reject a lean public schools budget that eliminated certain programs and declined to institute others. It was based on a total level of state spending that would require no tax increases.

On Thursday, House Republicans responded likewise, turning their thumbs down to a similarly tight budget proposal for higher education.

From these watershed votes of the two chambers comes an important distinction on the Idaho Legislature.

It appears the Phil Crane Republicans with their "government is unreasonable at any level" philosophy are outnumbered by the Jim McClure Republicans seeking government, particularly education, at a reasonable level.

What remains to be seen is how this identifiable faction of lawmakers will exercise the new-found power they hold and into whose pocket they will reach to provide for their reasonable level of government.

Letters / Jewish people bound together by blood, tradition

Intolerance understood

The Jews are a community bound together by ties of blood and tradition, and not of religion only; the attitude of the rest of the world toward them is sufficient proof of this. When I grew up in Chicago, I discovered for the first time that I was a Jew, and owe this discovery more to Gentiles than Jews.

The tragedy is that the Jews are people of a definite historical type who lack the support of a community, except for Israel to keep them together! Salvation was only possible for the race if every Jew in the world should become attached to a living society to which he as an individual might rejoice to belong and which might enable him to bear the hatred and humiliation he has to put up with from the rest of the world.

America gives the Jew protection from the violent anti-Semitic and racial evildoers. I say Jews basely caricatured schools, comic papers and innumerable other forces of the Gentile majority undermined the confidence of the best of my fellow -- Jews, this could not be allowed to continue.

Only a common enterprise dear to the heart of Jews all over the world could restore this people to health; traditional attitude of the Jews being what it was establishment of Israel, center in Jerusalem were suitable objects to concentrate our efforts honoring; the covenant of the of the Lord to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

Call it nationalism, but a common purpose without which can neither live nor die in this hostile world can always be called by that ugly name. It is a nationalism whose aim is not power, but dignity and health. Absence of intolerance, narrow-mindedness and violent people, outside of U.S. Jews living in hostile lands would in absence aforementioned evil qualities throw over all nationalism in favor of universal humanity. It's good to be a citizen of the U.S.A. and have heritage in Israel Jerusalem.

The objection that Jews cannot hate Israel and Jerusalem. If we want to be a "nation" is based on a misunderstanding of the nature of the state which springs from intolerable of national majorities. Against that intolerance Jews will never be safe, whether we call ourselves a people (or nation) or not.

I have put all this with brutal frankness for sake of brevity, but I know from your writings that you are a man who stands to the sense, not the form.

Jail needed, says inmate

This is from the Twin Falls county Jail. I am writing to you about the conditions of the jail. It is kept up the best that it can be. We have church, Bible study and A.A. and they are great programs and have helped me 100 percent, and others.

But there are other conditions that just are not up to par, there is no recreation at all. You are put in a cell and that is it. You can't rehabilitate a person by building bitterness. We have communion through one of the local merchants twice a week, but if you run out of money in that time or if you don't get money until after they take it, you are out.

We order reading material, but it is the same magazine each month. We need more exercise than we get. We are up here for minor small offenses and we are being treated worse than the people that are doing the major felonies, that are in prison.

What it comes down to is this. If you are going to put people in jail for six months to a year for reform, you have to give the administration and the inmates the facilities to reform with and with this kind of condition, there are a lot of emotional problems and they are under staffed to watch all inmates, and some young life is taken, it happens. You expect the judges and jail administration to help reform, and they want to, but you have to give them, the staff, the facilities to do this with.

Pass the bond for the new jail and reform the people in this community because it could be you or someone you care about that will spend time here. From your inmate that cares.

'Tappers' takes a little ham

In the February 11 edition of the Times-News there was an article about a group of which dancers in Omaha, Neb. called the Grand Auld Players. The article stated that there are probably only two or three groups of its kind in the U.S. One such group is in Twin Falls!

Started by Aileen Weir in the fall of 1981, the original group was called the Corn Ball Dancers, but changed its name to the Shim Sham Tappers, after months of practice on a dance which included the Shim Sham they finally performed publicly for the Lady Elks. Later they performed for several other groups in Magic Valley.

In the fall of 1983 reinforcements add new sparkle to the group and since then they have become quite professional looking. Presently they are planning costumes for a new production which includes such old classics as "Put-ting on the Ritz" and "Forty Second Street."

How do you know if you could qualify to become a member of the troupe? Well you have to have a little ham in you and a big sense of humor.

Textbook content proposal and comments draw criticism

Let children choose

I read with dismay your article concerning the legislative possibility of creating legislation which would promote certain reading material in our classrooms. In your article you stated the bill proposes we only offer our children "Mom and apple pie" material. In the same sentence, you further wrote that the legislation would promote teaching our children the Biblical theory of the beginning of man along with the scientific theory of evolution.

I was struck by the inconsistency of this. On the one hand we will only allow our children the Mom and apple pie side of life, but on the other we will allow them to study both theories of how we got here.

We will allow them to debate how they got here, but once they are here, we only study "good" side of life. How will they recognize "evil", if they only study "good"? How will they recognize the economics of Karl Marx, if they only study Adam Smith? How will they know hot from cold, sweet from sour, high from low, happy from sad and good from bad - if they only know one side of life? How can we really prepare them for the realities of the world unless they are properly exposed to it?

I, for one parent, want my children to know Capitalism, Socialism and Communism; Buddhism, Christianity, Atheism, Democrat, Republican, Libertarian, apple, cherry and even some lemon pie. To prepare them for this I believe I have instituted in them a foundation (the key word here) of the difference between positive action vs. negative action, and what each could bring them. I have taught them the difference between right and wrong, as I know it to be. And, above all, I have told them that the way to fight "evil" is to be able to first recognize it. This man doesn't like it.

I want my children to make their own choices, therefore I will not allow them to join a religion before they are old enough to know what they are doing. I myself, am generally a republican, but I do not want them to make that choice until they have explored the democracy way of doing things. They need to be their own person, not clone of me, or their teachers, or the state.

With all of the confusion, lawsuits, misdirected anger, and bitter disputes, this type of educational proposal by the legislature sure adds icing to the cake of private education. Public education in this country has become a mushy, non-distinguishable, over-done apple pie producing mediocre students. And this man doesn't like it.

Creationists object

In response to your editorial of Thursday and to the letter by A.G. Chrisman, of Burley, in which you both seem quite paranoid regarding one of your favorite "whipping boys" that "frigitening, freedom-deavouring" Christian Coalition and their "right-wing" agenda. You both remind me of a man, who knew better but was being willfully argumentive and devious, who told me that since the word "Trinity" appeared nowhere in the Bible, the Trinity did therefore not exist. My rebuttal, that the Father, Son and Holy Spirit should add up to three, had no effect upon him, for his mind was already closed.

Although your editorials sometimes sorely lack in logic and good sense, and Mr. Chrisman's diatribes of the past would suggest both a closed and empty mind, I will temporarily give you both the benefit of a doubt and attempt to cast some pearls at you which I hope that you will consider, instead of destroying them and, thus, refrain from your tendencies to gore and mutilate those who disagree with you.

If you are acquainted with the Webster's Dictionary, you'll find "secularism" -- "a system of doctrines that reject any form of religious faith or worship." And you will also find "humanism" -- interests and ideas of people, rather than those of the natural world or religion. "The concept of 'secular humanism' is no vague concept, except to those with vague minds."

I thought that I had encountered the entire range of Mr. Chrisman's shallow, "knee-jerk" reasoning, from previous utterances of his but, somewhere, he unearthed an even more sick bit of inference when he stated that "fundamentalists are anti-abortion for economic reasons," or to paraphrase him, "we need more kids to lighten the national debt burden per person born." Enough for Mr. Chrisman, that's enough attention to him for a couple of decades' worth.

Mr. Editor, you state that public school textbooks should be free of bias and should exemplify "scientific inquiry and analysis" and not be "dosed with creationistic origins of mankind." The textbooks should be "authoritative, modern," and students should learn to think, not "parrot back someone else's values." You also admonish us "to not let a minority impose itself on the rest of us." It is next to impossible to find a text book in any subject that is free from bias. I have taught in the biological sciences since 1956, and the most common bias I have always found is that of doctrinaire evolutionism. The origin of mankind is clearly a matter of faith, it is beyond the scope of true, unbiased scientific inquiry. How fair is it then to subject public school children to the doctrine of evolution? Since when is "modern" or "authoritarian" the basis of determining truth? Those "authorities" are we speaking of? On the origin of mankind, who is the authority -- the creator or the created? Here are we now, full circle, back to "secular humanism." We know what it is, let's stop beating around the bush, it is the forcing of school children to be exposed to a Godless, totalitarian, propaganda machine, which we call the "public schools." And, if surveys of the United States citizenry are correct, there are a lot more people in this country who believe in God, and would prefer to believe that they originated from a created Adam and Eve than from obscure biochemical "evidence" that couldn't even occur in an oxygen atmosphere (which there is more proof of than the postulated methane ammonia atmosphere). It would seem that a minority of atheists and Marxists have imposed themselves upon us for too long and it is time for the American public to cast off this influence.

We creationists object to your view of our reasoning to be "claptrap", who are you to judge? We are responsible to God, not to ourselves, so the term "self-righteous" would be more applicable to humanists. The Bible states that "the beginning of wisdom is the fear of the Lord." Are you wise? Exercising legal right

The trouble with people today is they watch TV so much they have lost the art of communication. Therefore we go the "letter to the editor," so having our information on the material we've read from the newspapers. The newspapers have censored this material so the writer is responding to half truths, such as the last news report not reporting that "half" our speakers were professional educators presenting valuable information before the House Education Committee. In the case of the recent letter written by Karen Edson in the Times-News, had this writer read some of the letters I have had consored from seeing print, she would have known the Christian Coalition Association is "not" attempting to get their religion taught but to prevent other religions that "are" being taught in the classrooms of this state. I am speaking of the Buddha; Hindu; and Humanist religion that have been exempted before the Textbook Committee and the Idaho Legislature, as present in our Idaho textbooks. Since Idaho law has permitted the State Textbook Committee to censor the books prior to going to the local districts, we are exercising our legal rights by asking for the textbooks to be of such quality as not to undermine others religious beliefs. This legal right was given by the U.S. Supreme Court to the state legislative bodies. For further detail, please write or call and we'll be glad to clarify much of the misrepresented information concerning our efforts. LEAH COASH

Feels injustice done

I feel there are some facts the public should be acquainted with, for other people besides myself have had similar experiences.

I got hurt in 1977 on the job. I received workmen's compensation for 2 years, 60 percent salary for the first year and 50 percent the second year. When I applied for Social Security, they sent state Voc Rehab to get me to re-educate for a new job. I attended college for 2 years and graduated in 1980.

State Voc Rehab couldn't find me a job as they promised, so they said Magic Valley Rehab to spend 2 weeks educating me on how to find and land a job. Then Magic Valley Rehab was to find me a job which I was going to get as a result of my training. They didn't find me a job either, but they testified in a legal hearing they could. I also applied for every job I could on my own, with no success. My previous work record was A-1, but with my age and health, no one would hire me so I was sent back to Magic Valley Rehab after 5 years when the statute of limitations had run out. That's when they finally gave me a form saying there were no jobs I could find. It was too late -- the insurance company had gotten what they wanted. No one will hire me. I've had no way to get any income for the last 7 1/2 years.

I feel Magic Valley Rehab has done me a terrible injustice. So have the state laws governing accident insurance, also the state Industrial Accident Board. We spend lots of taxpayers' dollars for Voc Rehab. I truly believe it is not helping that much. They are just protecting their jobs. But thanks to them, the insurance company didn't have to pay anything. When donations are asked for, think about it. Find someone who has gone to Voc Rehab for help and ask just how much benefit that person received from it. It is apparent that Magic Valley Rehab doesn't work free either.

FERRRELL W. BELL
Jerome

Editor's note: Magic Valley Rehabilitation Services Inc. does offer programs to help disabled workers, such as the writer, to effectively seek new jobs. But it acts independently, not as an agent for any insurance company or other agency, contrary to the implication in the letter, said executive director Jeff Crumrine.

Crumrine said he cannot not discuss specifics of Mr. Bell's case because of confidentiality regulations. However, a review of the case indicates that Mr. Bell may have some job possibilities that have not explored earlier by mutual agreement, Crumrine said.

Crumrine invited Mr. Bell to contact him directly at the office in Twin Falls to look further into those options.

Halt the usurers

I am always so thrilled when another true American appears on the scene. Lavinia Fogarty's letter contained so much that it would be wise for freedom loving people to heed.

We, as Americans do have some inalienable rights which are endowed by our creator. I heard a prosecutor make light of such claims but still he knew it to be factual. I am convinced that it took a lot of pressure to get our legislators to pass that child-safety-seat regulation. Just give a thought to the money some one will make by such sales as well as rentals. I am sure that if our concerned legislators decide parents must carry a scale in the car to prove a child is over 40 pounds the parents will, in the majority, say "It's the law" and buy that scale.

If they decide to weight us down with so many items required, in order to comply with the regulations we just might have to all begin pulling a trailer. This too, would feather the nests of the oppressors because the trailer would have to be licensed and controlled.

I have never yet seen a statistic published showing how many babies lived after being involved in wrecks without safety belts. I doubt that I will; no rake off of the public there. I did read where one know-it-all classed those who would leave a child unrestrained as hard hearted. This means that until business and leaders have fixed it so we cannot live ordinary lives without being cruel, illegal or criminal. One step at a time; that is how it has happened or it would not have happened at all. We first accept a Communistic control, then seeing we have so humbly complied another is set forth on and on.

If they are so concerned for our children, just why is it they care more for one if it is under four years or weighs less than 40 pounds? The older ones are of value too, that is, to the parents who are the ones who really care.

The most rotten thing I read was where if a parent could prove the seat was in the car, though not in use they would not be cited. Does that mean a thought, is that concern for the child or a sale for someone? America is awakening and I am convinced the time is near when it won't be safe for any patriot to stop any citizen who fully intends to mind their own business, abide by the US Constitution and harm no disarming the citizenry and this has been the aim in America. The fact that we peace-loving people do have our guns is the only reason we still have one single right allowed us. The time is ripe. We, the people, the muster, should step in and our servants who have usurped the office of master that it is time to halt, to turn back. Knowing this our government has decided to stop all terrorists, forgetting that government is worst of all but planning to name anything like self protection terrorism.

"Thank you Lavinia. It is good to know we don't stand alone yet."

A tribute to a friend

- "She walks in beauty like the night."
- "She is a phantom of delight."
- "To know her is to love her."

These lines, written as the first line of poems, could easily have been written about our friend who, at 98 years of age, recently left our world for a better place -- one without pain, without tears, and without heartaches.

When this lovable person lived among us here in Heritage many of us knew her and loved her -- none other than Ruth F. Neale.

During her lifetime she had her share -- and perhaps a bit more -- of broken bones, serious illnesses, and severe surgeries.

For some time her glasses and hearing aid helped her to live a fairly normal life but as age and failing health took their toll, finally Ruth became almost totally blind and she lost the greater part of her hearing.

With all her handicaps she could still smile and put once over felt sorry for herself.

Those who cared for her in Heritage and also in her Pocatello nursing home had this to say about our dear friend Ruth: "Everything was always all right; she never complained; she was always considerate of those who served her; she never forgot to smile and say thank you."

Is it any wonder that those whose lives she touched loved her dearly?

Generous to a fault was Ruth, never too busy to lend an ear to a friend's troubles or complaints; in her quiet way she shared, she sympathized, she loved -- because that was the way she was made.

Surely, to have known her was to love her! Thank you dearest Ruth, for being you.

Senate vote clears budget indecision

Finally, after what was starting to look like a new Dark Ages settling in on the Idaho Legislature, an informal coalition of centrist Republicans and Democrats has mustered the votes to prevent a right-wing gutting of educational funding.

The key vote was Wednesday in the Idaho Senate where 19 Republicans and 11 Democrats teamed up to defeat a $298-million schools budget proposal which virtually every observer has said is too low even to maintain basic educational services in Idaho. Among those voting to kill the measure, and thus open the door for a larger budget, were Magic Valley area Sens. Larry Anderson, Denton Darrington, Darrell McRoberts, Laird Noh and Lynn Tomingna.

The defeated proposal would have eliminated the state's gifted and talented funding, as well as career ladder and teacher equity salary changes, both of which were approved last year.

A new funding level, probably over $300 million, is now likely to emerge, and at least parts of last year's commitments can be made.

We think the career ladder part of the proposal is particularly important and, along with the gifted and talented program, should get top priority after ensuring that normal increases in the state's student population are taken care of.

In the past few years, the state has been forced to shoulder more and more of the funding for public education; it is a responsibility which it should not shirk by setting a budget below what is reasonable.

We agree with Senate Education Committee Chairman Terry Sverdsen, R-Cataldo, that there is support among Idahoans for increased spending on public education.

Now, the trick will be to come up with the revenue source. One trial balloon launched this week was for a one-half-cent sales tax increase, imposed for one year only. That suggestion, from Rep. Ernest Hale, Burley, who heads the Education Committee in the House, But that is not likely to be the end of the revenue proposals.

It may seem that, for the moment, the lawmakers are back to "Go." But the defeat this week in the Senate for what many thought was an inadequate education budget has cleared away at least some of the indecisiveness.

We now all know what the educational budget will not be. At what higher level it will be set is still not certain.

Budget says 'Cut the other guy, not me'

WASHINGTON -- This is how it would be reported in the Congressional Record if the president's budget for 1986 ever gets to the floor of the House.

"Mr. Speaker! I have an amendment to offer. The gentleman will state it."
"The amendment calls for a new Section One to be inserted following the title, and for subsequent sections to be renumbered accordingly. The new section would read: 'The laws of human nature shall be, and they are hereby, repealed.'"
"Without that modest little saving amendment, the budget is done. For the past 10 days the ordinary noises of this capital city have been drowned out by the greatest chorus of lamentation since Joshua sacked the city of Jericho."

We have discovered what the voters meant to say in their mandate of last November. This was their message to Congress and the White House: "Don't cut me; cut the other guy. And don't raise my taxes; raise his instead."

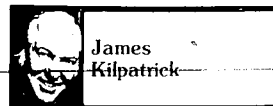

If it weren't such a sorry reflection on our sense of national purpose, the situation would be comic. Abstractly, almost everyone knows that the prospective federal deficits must be reduced. Their growing burden upon the economy is intolerable. As a practical matter, almost everyone knows that the deficits can be reduced in only two ways -- by cutting expenditures, or by raising revenues, or by both.

The president proposes substantial reductions over the next few years in farm subsidies. These proposals are wholly justified. The present contradictory policies are untenable. But not in the view of Sen. James Abdnor of South Dakota. He finds the proposals "unthinkable."

Among the farm programs to be abolished are tobacco supports and rural electrification. Rep. Charles Rose of North Carolina calls the tobacco proposals "ridiculous" and "disastrous."

The city boys have another point of view: "Threat to City Programs Grows," says a headline in a municipal newsletter. Rep. Stewart B. McKinney of Connecticut finds the idea of reducing urban development grants and ending aid to local sewer projects "very, very dangerous to the urban areas of our country."

Under the Reagan budget, funds for education would be cut and funds for the Job Corps would be eliminated. Rep. Augustus Hawkins of California heads a committee on education and job training.

James Kilpatrick

You may guess, if you are a good guesser, what Hawkins thinks of these ideas.

The budget would limit guaranteed student loans to students from families having incomes of less than $12,500. Says the head of the American Council on Education: "This would jeopardize the national security." The president would cut housing subsidies. To a spokesman for the housing industry: "This would represent a devastating blow."

So it goes. The opera people are singing the blues; even a 3 percent cut would ruin them. Government workers are howling with outrage. Directors of charitable institutions are warning that their activities will go to the bowwows if contributions are made less tax-deductible. The veterans libby is warming up for one colossal protest against cutting benefits in any way. "Don't cut me, cut the other guy." Yes, this is exactly the way human nature works. Virtually no one is willing to sacrifice anything toward the national purpose of reducing those deficits.

It is too much to condemn this as pure selfishness. The librarians, school teachers, college presidents, social workers, railway engineers, airplane pilots, small-business men, tobacco growers and middle-income parents truly believe that the programs that most dearly concern them are good programs.

"They don't want to see them cut. They want to see them expanded. Go out rural housing, says the city fellow. Go out mass transit, says the fellow on the farm."

These attitudes have to change. It will take Reagan's leadership to do it. If we fail to rise as one people to a sense of common purpose, the whole cause of deficit reduction will collapse.

BOSTON -- If you want a sneak preview of children's television shows for 1986, do not delve into the imagination of the young, the dreams of the screenwriters or, heaven forbid, the hopes of the educators. Check out the annual toy fair.

At the huge marketing zoo in New York this week, there is a menagerie of new toy creatures bearing names like Gobals, Bumbions, Thundercats and She-Ita. Each one of them is going to debut on television as well as the toy shelves. They will soon join the ranks of kiddie toy stars like Masters of the Universe, Care Bears, Transformers and He-Man.

In today's world, a "big toy" comes equipped with a TV series as if it were a battery. The manufacturers at the toy fair boast openly about television "backups" and "support" for their new line. But they aren't just talking about 30-second television ads anymore. They are talking about 30-minute television ads.

Since 1983, when TV first began to air programs that were built on toys, the whole thing has escalated shamelessly.

Ellen Goodman

The trend gives new meaning to the expression "commercial television." In the good old days, we used to worry about television ads directed at kids. Now, kids' television is an ad.

"Who'd be willing to turn all of television into a Sears Roebuck catalogue?" asks Peggy Charren, head of Action for Children's Television (ACT). "The difference is that adults will recognize they are being sold a bill of goods. Children won't."

ACT filed a suit with the Federal Communications Commission about made-for-teens TV. Their point was that young kids have enough trouble distinguishing commercials from programs. The commission had agreed earlier that "basic

These shows are not, by the way, any crummiest than the rest of the Saturday morning lineup. As Charren says, "They don't cut up grandma and put her in the trunk." But they pervert the whole concept of programming into packaging.

Just how vested an interest is kids' television now? Telepictures, which makes Thundercats, has offered to give the stations a piece of the profits from the sale of the toy.

The FCC has promised to respond to the whole issue this spring. Even in the commission's current mode -- pro-business, anti-regulation -- they should see something suspect in this two-team pursuit of the most glibbly of viewers. It's too easy, rather like selling candy to a baby.

"And, by the way, is next on the kid-vid lineup. The first TV show to be created on the candy counter is now in production. It's 'Gummi Bears' and it's modeled after little sticky candies.

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe.

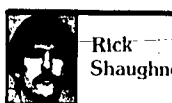

McClure, Crane find support in Idaho Republican ranks

Republican lawmakers received conflicting signals this week as they assembled in various Treasure Valley choir rooms to absorb the year's array of sermons supporting and promoting party ideology.

On Tuesday, the majority party faithful packed a Boise convention center to observe Lincoln's birthday and to be convinced that if the great emancipator were alive today, he wouldn't be a Democrat.

But mostly they were there for a partisan pep rally not unlike the one Democrats will hold this weekend to honor their perceived ideological roots in presidents Jefferson and Jackson.

As did other dignitaries, Jim McClure, Idaho's senior U.S. senator and the state's ranking Republican office holder, took the occasion to laud President Reagan. But he also assessed as formidable the task which lies ahead for the party as it seeks to implement the political agenda which Reagan's electoral support is perceived to have mandated.

But McClure, a vocal proponent of Reagan and opponent of Democratic fiscal policies on the national level, offered few words of support to those majority party lawmakers at the state level who display a similar penchant for cutting spending and services.

Specifically, McClure asked that lawmakers improve the opportunities of education in this state as we all believe is necessary.

Clare's at Speaker of the House Tom Stivers and President Pro Tem Jim Ritsch showed faces of stone in response to McClure's comments.

Those two top Republican legislative leaders oppose any tax increases which many, if not most, lawmakers believe are necessary to adequately fund education.

However, McClure's message to do right by education became clouded by the event's key-note speaker, Phil Crane of Illinois.

Crane spent more than 40 minutes attacking Democrats, social humanism, Marxism, dogma and big government. He defined big government as any government expenditure other than for police or defense services.

The man who McClure referred to as "the Jack Armstrong" of Illinois makes Reagan appear like a hold-out member of SDS by comparison. And in the Lincoln Day crowd he found some admirers.

If Stivers had tried to smile any wider, his face likely would have split in two. No weak-willed liberal this Phil Crane. Stivers must have been thinking, Ritsch's face was obscured but the expressions of others seated at the banquet's head table appeared to show a more somber response to Crane's message that, except in rare cases, the existence of government is wrong.

The conflicting messages of McClure and Crane on government spending had come only hours after Senate Republicans had similarly battled over the subject but at a less academic level.

The 28 Republican state senators had huddled themselves in caucus for three hours, seeking a balance between their no tax increase campaigns and the perceived needs of Idaho's public schools.

On Wednesday the quantity was at least temporarily resolved. Republicans joined with Democrats to overwhelmingly reject a lean public schools budget that eliminated certain programs and declined to institute others. It was based on a total level of state spending that would require no tax increases. On Thursday, House Republicans responded likewise, turning their thumbs down to a similarly tight budget proposal for higher education.

From these watershed votes of the two chambers comes an important distinction on the 4th Idaho Legislature.

It appears the Phil Crane Republicans with their "government is unreasonable as any level" philosophy are outnumbered by the Jim McClure Republicans seeking government, particularly education, at a reasonable level.

What remains to be seen is how this identifiable faction of lawmakers will exercise the new-found power they hold and into whose pocket they will reach to provide for their reasonable level of government.

Letters / Jewish people bound together by blood, tradition

Intolerance understood

The Jews are a community bound together by ties of blood and tradition, and not of religion only: the attitude of the rest of the world toward them is sufficient proof of this. When I grew up in Chicago, I discovered for the first time that I was a Jew, and owe this discovery more to Gentiles than Jews.

The tragedy is that the Jews are people of a definite historical type who lack the support of a community, except for Israel to keep them together! Salvation was only possible for the race if every Jew in the world should become attached to a living society to which he as an individual might rejoice to belong and which might enable him to bear the hatred and humiliations he has to put up with from the rest of the world.

America gives the Jew protection from the violent anti-Semitic and racist evildoers. I say Jews basically caricatured schools, comic papers and innumerable other forces of the Gentile majority undermined the confidence of the best of my fellow -- Jews, this could not be allowed to continue.

Only a common enterprise dear to the heart of Jews all over the world could restore this people to health; traditional attitude of the Jews being what it is establishment of Israel, center in Jerusalem were suitable objects to concentrate our efforts honoring the covenant of the of the Lord to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

Call it nationalism, but a communal purpose without which can neither live nor die in this hostile world can always be called by that ugly name. It is a nationalism whose aim is not power, but dignity and health. Absence of intolerance, narrow-mindedness and violent people, outside of U.S. Jewry. "But in hostile world in absence of aforementioned evil qualities throw over all nationalism in favor of universal humanity. It's good to be a citizen of the U.S.A. and have heritage in Israel Jerusalem.

The objection that Jews cannot rule Israel and Jerusalem, if we wait to be a "nation" is based on a misunderstanding of the nature of the state which springs from intolerance of national majorities. Against that Intolerance Jews will never be safe, whether we call ourselves a people (or nation) or not.

Have put all this with brutal frankness for sake of brevity, but I know from your writings that you are a man who stands to the sense, not the form.

Jail needed, says inmate

This is from the Twin Falls County Jail. I am writing to you about the conditions of the jail. It is kept up the best that it can be. We have church, Bible study and A.A. and they are great programs and have helped me 100 percent, and others.

But there are other conditions that just are not up to par, there is no recreation at all. You are put in a cell and that is it. You can't rehabilitate a person by building bitterness. We have communion through one of the local merchants twice a week, but if your run out of money in that time or if you don't get money until after they take it, you are out.

We order reading material, but it is the same magazine each month. We need more exercise than we get. We are up here for minor small offenses and we are being treated worse than the people that are doing the major felonies, that are in prison.

What it comes down to is this, if you are going to put people in jail for six months to a year for reform, you have to give the administration and the inmates the facilities to reform with and with this kind of condition, there are a lot of emotional problems and they are under stressed to watch all inmates, and some young life is taken, it happens. You expect the judges and jail administration to help reform, and they want to, but you have to give them, the staff, the facilities to do this with.

Pass the bond for the new jail and reform the people in this community because it could be you or someone you care about that will spend time here. From your inmate that cares.

'Tappers' takes a little ham

In the February 11 edition of the Times-News there was an article about a group of women dancers in Omaha, Neb. called the Grand Auldie Players. The article stated that they are probably only two or three groups of its kind in the U.S. One such group is in Twin Falls!

Started by Aileen Weir in the fall of 1981, the original group was called the Corn Ball Dancers, but changed its name to the Shm Shm Tappers, when after months of practice on a dance which included the Shm Shm they finally performed publicly for the Lady Elks. Later they performed for several other groups in Magic Valley.

In the fall of 1983 reinforcements add new sparkle to the group and since then they have become quite professional looking. Presently they are planning costumes for a new production which includes such old classics as "Pulling on the Ritz" and "Forty Second Street."

How do you know if you could qualify to become a member of the troupe? Well you have to have a little ham in you and a big sense of humor!

Textbook content proposal and comments draw criticism

Let children choose

I read with dismay your article concerning the legislature possibly considering legislation which would promote certain reading material in our classrooms. In your article you stated that the bill proposes to offer our children "Mama and apple pie" material. In the same sentence, you further wrote that the legislation would promote teaching our children the Biblical theory of the beginning of man along with the scientific theory of evolution.

I was struck by the inconsistency of this. On the one hand we will only allow our children the Mom and apple pie of life, but on the other we will allow them to study both theories of how we got here.

We will allow them to debate how they got here, but once they are here, we only study "good" side of life. How will they recognize "evil", if they only study "good"? How will they recognize the economics of Karl Marx, if they only study Adam Smith? How will they know hot from cold, sweet from sour, high from low, happy from sad and good from bad? If they only know one side of life? How can we really prepare them for the realities of the world unless they are properly exposed to it?

I, for one parent, want my children to know Capitalism, Socialism and Communism; Buddhism, Christianity, Atheism, Democrat, Republican, Libertarian, apple, cherry and even some lemon pie. To prepare for this I believe I have installed in them a foundation (the key word here) of the difference between positive action vs. negative action, and what each will bring them. I have taught them the difference between right and wrong, as I know it to be. And above all, I have taught them that the way to fight "evil" is to be able to first recognize it.

I want my children to make their own choices, therefore I will not allow them to join a religion before they are old enough to know what they are doing. I myself, am generally a republican, but I do not want them to make that choice until they have explored the democrat way of doing things. They need to be their own personal regulators of me -- or their teachers, -- at the state.

With all of the confusion, lawsuits, misdirected anger, and bitter disputes, this type of educational proposal by the legislature sure adds icing to the cake of private education. Public education in this country has become a mushy, non-distinguishable, overdone apple pie producing mediocre students. And this mushy doesn't like it!

Creationists object

In response to your editorial of Thursday and to the letter by A.G. Chrisman, of Burley, in which you both seem quite paranoid regarding one of your favorite "whipping boys", I thought that I had encountered the entire range of Mr. Chrisman's shallow, "knee-jerk" reasoning, from previous utterances of his but, somewhere, he heartened an even more sickly bit of inference when he stated that "fundamentalists are in a shambles for economic reasons" -- to paraphrase him, "we need more kids to lighten the national debt burden per person born." Enough for Mr. Chrisman, that's enough attention to him for a couple of decades' worth.

Mr. Editor, you state that public school textbooks should be free of bias and should exemplify "scientific inquiry and analysis" and not be "cloaked with creationistic origins of mankind." The textbooks should be "authoritative, modern," and students should learn to think, not "parrot back someone else's values." You also admonish us "to not let a minority impose itself on the rest of us." It is next to impossible to find a text book in any subject, that is free from bias. I have taught in the biological sciences since 1956, and the most common bias I have always found is that of doctrine evolutionism. The origin of mankind is clearly a matter of faith, it is beyond the scope of true, unbiased scientific inquiry. How fair is it then to subject public school children to the doctrine of evolution? Since "modern" or "authoritarian" is the basis of determining truth! Whose "authority" are we speaking of? On the origin of mankind, who is the authority -- the creator or the created? Here are we now, full circle, back to "secular humanism." We know what it is, let's stop beating around the bush, it is the forcing of school children to be exposed to a Godless, totalitarian, propaganda machine, which we call the "public schools." And, if surveys of the United States citizenry are correct, there are a lot more people in this country who believe in God, and would prefer to believe that they originated from a created Adam and Eve than from obscure biochemical "accident" that couldn't even occur in an oxygen atmosphere (which there is more proof of than the postulated methane ammonia atmosphere). It would seem that a majority of atheists and Marxists have imposed themselves upon us for too long and it is time for the American public to cast off this influence.

We creationists object to your view of our reasoning to be "claptrap," who are you to judge? We are responsible to God, not to ourselves, so the term "self-righteous" would be more applicable to humanists. The Bible states that "the beginning of wisdom is the fear of the Lord." Are you wise? speakers were professional educators presenting valuable information before the House Education Committee. In the case of the recent letter written by Karen Edson in the Times-News, had this writer read some of the sections I have had censored from seeing print, she would have known the Christian Coalition Association is "not" attempting to get their religion taught but to prevent other religions that "are" being taught in the classrooms of this state. I am speaking of the Buddha; Hindu; and Humanist religion that have been exposed before the Textbook Committee and the Idaho Legislature, as present in our Idaho textbooks. Since Idaho has permitted the State Textbook Committee to censor the books prior to going to the local districts, we are exercising our legal rights by asking for the textbooks to be of such quality as not to undermine others religious beliefs. This legal right was given by the U.S. Supreme Court to the state legislative bodies. Feels injustice done

I feel there are some facts the public should be acquainted with, for other people besides myself have had similar experiences.

I got hurt in 1977 on the job. I received workmen's compensation for 2 years, 60 percent salary for the first year and 50 percent the second year. When I applied for Social Security, they sent me to Voc Rehab to get me re-educated for a new job. I attended college for 2 years and graduated in 1980.

State Voc Rehab couldn't find me a job as they promised, so they paid Magic Valley Rehab to spend 2 weeks educating me on how to find and land a job. Then Magic Valley Rehab was to find me a job which I was going to get as a result of my training. They didn't find me a job either, but they testified in a legal hearing they could. I also applied for every job I could on my own, with no success. My previous work record was A-1, but with my age and health, no one would hire me so I was sent back to Magic Valley Rehab after 5 years when the statute of limitations had run out. That's when they finally gave me a form saying there were no jobs I could find. It was too late -- the insurance company had gotten what they wanted. No one will hire me. I've had no way to get any income for the last 7 1/2 years.

I feel Magic Valley Rehab has done me a terrible injustice. So have the state laws governing accident insurance, also the state Industrial Accident Board. We spend lots of taxpayers' dollars for Voc Rehab. I truly believe it is not helping that much. They are just protecting their jobs. But thanks to them, the insurance company didn't have to pay anything. When questions are asked for, think about it. I find someone who has gone to Voc Rehab for help and ask just how much benefit that person received from it. It is apparent that Magic Valley Rehab doesn't work free either.

FERRELL W. BELL

Editor's note: Magic Valley Rehabilitation Services Inc. does offer programs to help disabled workers, such as the writer, to effectively seek new jobs. But it acts independently, not as an agent for any insurance company or other agency, contrary to the implication in the letter, said executive-director Jeff Crumrine.

Crumrine said he cannot not discuss specifics of Mr. Bell's case because of confidentiality regulations. However, a review of the case indicates that Mr. Bell may have some job possibilities that were not explored earlier by mutual agreement, Crumrine said.

Crumrine invited Mr. Bell to contact him directly at the office in Twin Falls to look further into those options.

Halt the usurers

I am always so thrilled when another true American appears on the scene. Lawlna Pearson's letter contained so much that it would be wise for freedom loving people to heed.

We, as Americans do have some inalienable rights which are endowed by our creator. I heard a prosecutor make light of such claims but still he knew it to be factual. I am convinced that it took a lot of pressure to get our legislators to pass that child-safety-seat regulation. Just give a thought to the money some will make by such sales as well as rentals. I am sure that if our concerned legislators decide parents must carry a scale in the car to prove a child is over 40 pounds the parents will, in the majority, say "it's the law" and buy that scale.

If they decide to weight us down with so many items required, in order to comply with the regulations we just might have to all begin pulling a trailer. This too, would feather the nests of the oppressors because the trailer would have to be licensed and controlled.

I have never yet seen a statistic published showing how many babies lived after being involved in wrecks without safety belts. I doubt that I will, nor rake off of the public there. I did read where one know-it-all classed those who would leave a child unrestrained as hardhearted. This means that until business and leaders have fixed it so we cannot live ordinary lives without being cruel, illegal or criminal. One step at a time; that is how it has happened or it would not have happened at all. We first accept a Communistic control, then seeing we have so humbly complied another is set forth on and on.

If they are so concerned for our children, just why is it they care more for one if it is under four years or weighs less than 40 pounds? The older ones are of value too, that is, to the parents who are the ones who really care.

The most rotten thing I read was where if a parent could prove the seat was in the car, though not in use they would not be cited. Give that a thought. Is that concern for the child or a sale for someone? America is awakening and I am convinced the time is near when it won't be safe for any patrolman to stop any citizen who fully intends to mind their own business, abide by the US Constitution and harm no disarming the citizenry and this has been the aim in America. The fact that we peace-loving people do have our guns is the only reason we still have one single right allowed us. The time is ripe. We, the people, the master, should step in and tell our servants who have usurped the office of master that it's time to halt, to turn back. Knowing this our government has decided to stop all terrorists, forgetting that government is worst of all but planning to name anything like self protection terrorism.

Thank you Lawlna. It is good to know we don't stand alone yet.

A tribute to a friend

1. "She walks in beauty like the night..."
 2. "She is a phantom of delight..."
 3. "To know her is to love her..."
- The above lines, written as the first line of poems, could easily have been written about our friend who, at 98 years of age, recently left our world for a better place -- one without pain, without tears, and without heartaches.

When this lovely person lived among us here in Heritage many of us knew her and loved her -- none other than Ruth E. Neale.

During her lifetime she had her share -- and perhaps a bit more -- of broken bones, serious illnesses, and severe surgeries.

For some time her glasses and hearing aid helped her to live a fairly normal life but as age and failing health took their toll, finally Ruth became almost totally blind and she lost the greater part of her hearing.

With all her handicaps she could still smile and not once ever felt sorry for herself.

Those who cared for her in Heritage and also in her Pocatello nursing home had this to say about our dear friend Ruth: "Everything was always all right; she never complained; she was always considerate of those who served her; she never forgot to smile and say thank you."

Is it any wonder that those whose lives she touched loved her dearly? Generous to a fault was Ruth, never too busy to lend an ear to a friend's troubles or complaints; in her quiet way she shared, she sympathized, she loved -- because that was the way she was made.

Surely, to have known her was to love her! Thank you dearest Ruth, for being you.

Power outages plague East in wake of heavy snowstorm

By ROGER PETERSON
The Associated Press

Thousands of people were still without power Thursday in the wake of a snowstorm and National Guardsmen were mobilized in Kentucky, Ohio and West Virginia to help rescue stranded residents and plow drift-choked highways.

The waning storm that had dumped 2 feet of snow on the central Appalachians and blown up drifts 20 feet high in eastern Kentucky scattered a few more inches of snow Wednesday across the Great Lakes, and most of the Ohio Valley, while temperatures dipped to record lows in Florida.

Travelers' advisories for 1-5 inches of new snow were posted for all of Michigan, and advisories warning of new snow and drifting were issued for northeastern Wisconsin, western Pennsylvania, western New York, northern and central Indiana and most of West Virginia.

Highways had been choked by deep snow and drifts from Illinois to West Virginia and from northern Georgia to Michigan, where schools were closed again Wednesday in at least 28 counties and snowplows still couldn't keep pace with blowing, drifting snow in several areas.

Bad weather has been blamed for 45 deaths since Saturday, most of them traffic fatalities.

In eastern Kentucky, where up to 23 inches of snow piled up drifts as high as 20 feet, 90 National Guardsmen were mobilized to clear highways, and helicopters were used to fly the sick to hospitals and take cots and blankets to an emergency shelter.

As many as 300 motorists abandoned their vehicles to take shelter late Tuesday in Kentucky's Montgomery County, about 45 miles east of Lexington. All but about 15 had gone home by Thursday "and we're hoping to get the rest of them home today," said Montgomery County sheriff's deputy Bob Harley in Mount Sterling.

Harley said the effort to clear highways was hampered by abandoned cars. "We're trying to round the people up, get their keys, get them started. We're pushing them to the side of the road, through fences, anywhere we can get them to get the main roads open."

"We've got D-9 dozers, every piece of equipment in the county working on them," he said.

About 40 National Guardsmen were called out in West Virginia, where 40-mph wind also pushed drifts as high as 20 feet, isolating thousands of Appalachian Power Co. customers who were without power. More than 4,000 remained powerless Thursday morning in the southwestern part of the state.

Six more counties in Ohio were made eligible for National Guard assistance Thursday in Ohio. The Guard had been called up in four southern counties the day before after some areas got up to 16 inches of snow that blocked even mail carriers.

About 3,500 Detroit Edison customers remained without electricity Thursday in Michigan, where a snow-piled barn collapsed on 22,900 baby chickens, killing 12,000, and a bowling alley roof fell in without injuring anyone.

All major roads in northeastern Illinois were reopened by Wednesday night, troopers reported Thursday, but Amtrak cut back on service between Chicago and several Midwest cities. Snowbanks as big as houses had closed Interstate 57 near Kankakee Tuesday night and stranded hundreds of motorists.

Suspects in Kansas shooting may be tied to other crimes

COLBY, Kan. (AP) -- Suspects in a shooting spree that left four people dead after a three-county police chase may be linked to violent crimes in Texas and Arkansas, authorities said Thursday.

A restaurant manager, two hostages taken at a grain elevator and one of four suspects were killed Wednesday and four people were injured in the shooting, police said.

"There's an uneasiness all over town," said Paul Dougherty, chief administrator of Citizens Medical Center, the hospital in Colby, a Thomas County town of 5,500, where three people wounded in the incident were admitted.

"Everybody's pretty well shook up," said Ernie Seemann, retired manager of the Bartlett and Co. grain elevator in tiny nearby Levant, where the two slain hostages were seized Wednesday afternoon. "You just don't think it would happen in a place like this, but I guess it does."

"They just had to be mad dogs," said Dean Shaw, co-owner of Shaw Motor Co. at Grainfield in neighboring Gove County, where the restaurant manager was killed.

Thomas County Attorney Perry Murray was interviewing police and witnesses Thursday in preparation for filing charges against three people in custody in Colby, said Murray's secretary, Deborah Harvey.

Murray was considering charges of first degree murder and attempted murder, along with possible other charges including kidnapping and auto theft, she said.

Meanwhile, Texas officials were checking to see if the people held in Colby may have been linked to a Feb. 10 shooting at a service station in the Texas town of Waksam, and Arkansas authorities wanted to question the three about a Feb. 11 shooting in which a woman was killed during a robbery.

Those in custody were identified as Daniel Eugene Remeta, 27, of Traverse City, Mich.; Lisa J. Dunn, 18, of Suttons Bay, Mich.; and James C. Hunter, 33, of Amoret, Mo.

The three were arrested Wednesday following a shootout at a farmhouse in Ravlins County in which a companion -- Mark Anthony Walter, 18, of Suttons Bay -- was killed.

Remeta and Ms. Dunn were wounded, and Remeta was hospitalized under police guard Thursday, while Ms. Dunn and Hunter were both held at the county jail.

Officials said the shooting spree began with an apparent robbery at a restaurant at Grainfield, about 35 miles southeast of Colby. The body of manager Larry McFarland, 27, was found there around 3:30 p.m. Wednesday.

About 30 minutes later, Thomas County Undersheriff Ben Albright, 27, was shot and wounded after he stopped a vehicle with Michigan license plates at Levant, nine miles west of Colby, officials said.

Minutes later, Rick Schroeder, 29, of Levant, and Glenn Moore, 55, of Colby, were abducted at the grain elevator in Levant, and Maurice Christie, 61, the elevator manager, was shot and wounded.

The bodies of Schroeder and Moore, who were driven away in Moore's pickup truck, were found about 4:30 p.m. along a road northwest of Levant.

"They appeared to be execution-style killings," said Thomas County Sheriff Tom Jones. "They were just actually laid down in a road and shot two or three times in the head."

Crews ready to probe mine

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) -- Crews on Thursday prepared to probe deeper into a smoldering mine where 27 workers died in December, while a federal judge allowed Emery Mining Corp. to attend hearings on the disaster, but barred reporters from the sessions.

Emery workers began ventilating reclaimed portions of the Wilberg Mine 125 southeast of Salt Lake City in preparation for probing deeper into its smoldering, subterranean passages.

It will take months before crews can reach the bodies of 26 men and a woman who remain entombed in the mine, said Emery spokesman Robert Henrie.

"They have constructed all of the temporary seals and they are now in the process of ventilating the areas of the mine they have recovered. All in all, things are going very well," Henrie said.

The sealing of four tunnel junctions to isolate the recovered section from the rest of the mine would likely be completed by Sunday, he said.

Cancer victim dies in fluke accident

LOS ANGELES (AP) -- A 5-year-old girl whose father once spirited her off to Mexico to treat her leukemia with the drug Laetrile died after she was struck by a spare tire in a traffic accident, authorities said Thursday.

Amanda Joy Accardi and her father, Michael Accardi, were driving to a hospital for her weekly leukemia treatment when the accident occurred. She had been in remission, but her medical condition was uncertain at the time.

Amanda died at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center on Saturday, a day after her father's car went out of control in the rain, struck a metal guard rail and ran onto a dirt embankment, said California Highway Patrol Officer Jim Kirkpatrick.

The impact of the crash, on the Golden State Freeway a few miles north of downtown Los Angeles, dislodged the car's spare tire, rained it through the back seat and into Amanda's head, Kirkpatrick said.

Accardi, 29, complained of head, neck and back pains but said he would seek his own medical help, Kirkpatrick added.

The story of Amanda's medical treatment drew national attention in 1981.

Governor to insist on ban

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) -- Gov. Rafael Hernandez Colon said Thursday he would insist that the Reagan administration honor a treaty banning nuclear arms on Puerto Rico.

His remarks, made near the end of his State of the Commonwealth address, followed a report that the U.S. military has been authorized by the White House to deploy warheads on the island in case of war.

Hernandez Colon referred to a 1967 treaty signed by the United States which prohibits nuclear weapons in Latin America and said, "the position of my administration unequivocally is that the treaty that prohibits the use of nuclear arms in Puerto Rico must be complied with."

President Carter made Puerto Rico part of the treaty in 1979.

Schroeder quietly marks 53rd birthday

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Artificial heart patient William Schroeder exchanged valentines with his wife and received cards from admirers around the country Thursday as he quietly celebrated his 53rd birthday.

The Schroeders planned a family reunion of sorts Thursday evening when all six of their children were to arrive from their "hometown" of Jasper, Ind.

"He's not feeling up to par as I understand it," Schroeder's son, Melvin, 31, said Wednesday night. "We'll just see how well he feels and hope he can enjoy it as much as possible."

Although Schroeder had a persistent fever accompanied by flu-like symptoms, his admirers were tuned to the spirit of the day. Birthday and Valentine's Day cards were being delivered to Schroeder as they arrived at the hospital from well-wishers all over the country.

In a special Valentine's Day resolution, Jasper City Council cited Schroeder's contributions to mankind and the artificial-heart program.

Five representatives of the Lexington Striders, a walking club, delivered a 6-foot-tall card signed by 113 club members.

Meanwhile, medical staff of the Humana Hospital Audubon planned a 10-way-celery-cake — Humana Inc. spokeswoman Linda Broadus said.

Doctors at one point had hoped to give Schroeder a special gift — his release from the hospital room where he has lived since the Nov. 25 implant.

Those plans were derailed in part because renovation of a nearby apartment is unfinished and because of his persistent fluctuating temperature.

Doctors initially suspected the temperature — it has risen as high as 105 degrees — was a reaction to medication. But the fever remained after the drugs were discontinued. They then suspected a flu virus, but the illness has continued too long.

Robert Irvine, Humana's public relations director, conceded that doctors "don't know, basically, what's causing it, and they want to find out."

They hope the answer comes with results of tests performed Wednesday by implant surgeon William C. DeVries.

Melvin Schroeder said family members are concerned by the slow recovery. But doctors are not alarmed, Irvine said, because Schroeder has shown no signs of infection.

Despite the most recent setback, and concern about speech and memory problems lingering from Schroeder's strokes on Dec. 13, the family and the medical team are preparing for his discharge. Though no date has been set, Irvine has said Schroeder could be released late this month.

Nurses who will help Margaret Schroeder care for her husband began learning earlier this week how to operate the 32-pound air pump that powers his Jarvik 7 heart.

And Schroeder may have the chance to ride about town soon in a specially fitted van.

DeVries and other members of the implant team, meanwhile, are prepared to perform another in the series of experimental operations.

"We're looking at several people right now. We do not have surgery scheduled," Ms. Broadus said.

Justice Department shares FBI findings with prosecutor

NEW YORK (AP) — The Justice Department has completed an investigation of charges that the FBI wrongly obtained wiretaps now being used against Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan, and is sharing its findings with prosecutors, officials said Thursday.

Stephen R. Bookin, an assistant district attorney in the Bronx, declined to discuss the findings of the inquiry and said authorities had not decided on any possible action, including steps against the FBI agents involved.

However, he said the Justice Department, after more than a month of delay, was cooperating with its efforts to defend the wiretaps as evidence in the criminal case against Donovan and nine other men.

John Russell, a Justice Department spokesman in Washington, confirmed that investigators had completed their "spagework" into allegations about the wiretaps, but that there had been no decision on any action. He wiretaps and an electronic "bug" were placed in 1979 in the office of William Masselli, a reputed organized crime figure and now a co-defendant in the Donovan case, which involves alleged fraud in a subway construction project. Masselli charges that FBI agents deceived a federal judge into authorizing the surveillance by concealing that they already had an informer in his office. His lawyer has called the surveillance "legally sanctioned" and wants it rejected as evidence.

Bookin revealed the federal inquiry on Jan. 9, when he said in state court that the Justice Department was refusing to cooperate with him while it investigated the allegations concerning the wiretaps.

But Thursday, at another hearing in the trial-level state court, Bookin said the federal investigators have let him review transcripts of 50 interviews and agreed to let him contact at least three interviews of his own, including two of FBI agents.

Bookin appeared in court seeking more time to prepare his defense of the surveillance for use against Donovan, Masselli and the others. They are charged with defrauding the Transit Authority of $7.4 million by overstating payments to a minority subcontractor in a subway tunneling job in 1979 and 1980.

Donovan, a construction executive at the time, remains an unpaid leaver from the Reagan cabinet.

Bookin was granted an extension until March 6.

Also Thursday, the defendants filed court papers backing up their motions that the case be dismissed, largely on the ground that no crime was committed. "This is not a criminal case in fact or in law," the chief statement argued.

Brink's employees charged with helping neo-Nazis stage robbery

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two employees of the Brink's armored-car firm were ordered held without bail Thursday, pending trial on charges of providing inside information to a neo-Nazi group that staged a $3.6 million robbery and was planning a bigger haul.

Charles Ostrout, 51, of Lookout in northern California's remote Modoc County, is charged with aiding members of a group called The Order in a $3.6 million robbery of a Brink's armored car near Ukiah last July.

He is also charged with taking part in a conspiracy to rob either the Brink's San Francisco cash vault or an incoming shipment of $30 million in cash from Hawaii.

Ronald King, 45, of Hayward, is charged with conspiracy in the planned robbery, which was never carried out.

The two were ordered held for trial by U.S. Magistrate F. Steele Langford, who said both had been included into The Order. Later Thursday, U.S. District Judge William Orick set trial for May 6.

"If released, the defendants would have access to a network of communications, false identifications and safe houses, provided by 'The Order,'" Langford said in denying bail.

The potential penalties for the charges — 60 years for Ostrout, 20 years for King — made them flight risks, he added.

King, an 18-year Brink's employee, was the operations manager of the company's San Francisco office, and Ostrout was the money room manager. Both have been on disability leave since last fall.

Seventeen men described by prosecutors as members of The Order are under arrest in six states in connection with a series of robberies and other crimes in California and the Northwest. Federal authorities say the crimes here meant to finance a right-wing guerrilla army.

In his order holding King and Ostrout without bail, Langford issued a five-page ruling that largely repeated the version of events stated Tuesday in the case by Assistant U.S. Attorney Bob Ward.

"The Order, also known as Under Schweigen or 'silent brotherhood,'" was a group of "right-wing racists who believed in using violent means to accomplish their goal of an 'Aryan revolution,'" he said.

Ostrout provided a map of the armored car route and a recommendation of the best place to stage the Ukiah robbery, which was carried out by 12 armed and masked men, Langford said. Ostrout got $30,000 from the proceeds, Langford said.

The magistrate also said Ostrout gave people who were planning the second robbery information about the Brink's cash vault and staff, told them of a faulty alarm and gave them a company identification card so that phony cards could be used in the robbery.

Weinberger ducks query on Russians' use of bomb

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, saying his personal opinion didn't matter, ducked a question on a TV call-in show Thursday about whether he personally believes the Soviet Union would really launch a nuclear attack against the United States.

Weinberger spent 30 minutes taking calls from viewers of the C-SPAN network.

"I would like to know whether really deep, deep in your heart you really believe the Russians would drop the first bomb on us?" asked an unidentified woman from Seattle, Wash.

"Well, it really isn't a question of what I believe deep in my heart or elsewhere," Weinberger replied. "It's a question of having us have a sufficient degree of strength, so that the Soviets would know that if they had any such plan, that doing that would bring about such a very high cost to them — cause them such enormous damage — that they would simply not even think about it any further."

"That's the degree of retaliatory strength that we need," he continued. "We don't have any aggressive intentions. So we have to have a defensive strategy — to be ready, but to be strong enough, so that no one would, in fact, dare attack us."

Soviet delegation visits U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The highest ranking Soviet parliamentary delegation in more than a decade is scheduled to visit the United States early next month, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., announced Thursday.

The 30-person delegation will be headed by Vladimir V. Shcherbitsky, a full member of the Soviet Politburo since 1971. He is also a member of the presidium of the Supreme Soviet, first secretary of Ukrainian Communist Party and a former premier of the Ukraine.

Other than Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who makes fairly frequent visits to the United States, Shcherbitsky is the highest ranking Soviet official to visit here since 1973, O'Neill said.

The visit comes immediately before the re-opening of U.S.-Soviet arms control talks in Geneva.

Push French UN detachment aside

Israelis knock down buildings in village

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli soldiers rolled into a south Lebanon village Thursday, pushed French U.N. peacekeeping troops aside and bulldozed four buildings they claimed were guerrilla weapon storehouses. Sources in the area, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said the Israelis knocked down three houses and a Shiite Moslem civic center and arrested more than 60 villagers during an eight-hour occupation of Bourj Rahal. Shiite guerrillas make frequent raids on Israeli forces in the area.

Israeli troops in about 20 armored personnel carriers and trucks entered Bourj Rahal at about 7 a.m. Timur Goksel, spokesman for the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon, said French peacekeeping troops tried to prevent destruction of the houses and the Husseiniyeh cultural center in the village northwest of Tyre, a port city in Israeli-occupied territory. "There was a scuffle and strong arguments between the French and Israelis," Goksel said. "The French were trying to prevent them from demolishing the houses."

Goksel said the Israelis claimed the buildings contained weapons and explosives. Israeli forces frequently raze buildings they suspect are being used for arms storage.

The U.N. force, known as UNIFIL, has been in place since Israeli forces withdrew in June 1978 after their first invasion of southern Lebanon in pursuit of Palestinian guerrillas, which lasted three months. Israel invaded again in June 1982 and now is in the first phase of a three-stage withdrawal. The report by the Israeli military command said 11 guerrillas were killed and nine captured near the Awali River, which forms the northern line of Israel's current occupation zone. It said Israeli troops encountered the 20-man guerrilla unit after the guerrillas crossed the Awali. There have been frequent guerrilla attacks on the Israeli army from a cluster of Shiite villages around Tyre, including Bourj Rahal. Sources said an Israeli foot patrol came under small-arms fire near Bourj Rahal on Thursday and at least three rocket-propelled grenade attacks were reported in the area. Shiite leaders have pledged the attacks will increase until Israel ends the occupation. The Israelis are preparing to pull back from the Awali, 47 miles north of the Israeli border, to a new deployment line 17 miles farther south. Under a plan approved by the Israeli Parliament last month, that first phase of the withdrawal from Lebanon is to be completed by Monday.

Residents of Sidon, largest city in the occupied territory, said an explosive charge went off Thursday as two Israeli armored personnel carriers passed through the Shiite Moslem neighborhood of Haret Saïda. They said Israeli soldiers responded with random fire.

An Israeli patrol of tanks and other armored vehicles stood by later as a bulldozer cleared away an earthen barricade between the Ein el-Hijweh Palestinian refugee camp and the village of Darb es-Sim, Lebanese police reported.

The area on the edge of Sidon that contains the camp and the nearby Christian village is one in which it is feared violence may break out after Israeli troops withdraw.

Angolan rebels to free 22 hostages

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Angolan rebels said Thursday they will free 22 American, British and Filipino hostages under a plan being worked out with the International Red Cross. The hostages were captured six weeks ago.

A spokesman for the National Council for the Total Independence of Angola, or UNITA, contacted by The Associated Press in Lisbon, said the two Americans, three Britons and 17 Filipinos arrived "in fine health" at the rebels' Jamba base in southern Angola last weekend after a 600-mile trek across country. The spokesman said the International Committee of the Red Cross in Geneva had proposed a plan, at the rebels' request, for repatriation of the hostages.

Chinese officials send out warnings of 'unhealthy' holiday tendencies

PEKING (AP) — With Chinese New Year less than a week away, the state-run press warned Thursday that a spree of extravagance, price-gouging and gift-giving is tainting the holiday spirit and the Communist Party's economic reform.

The party mouthpiece People's Daily (Renmin Ribao) and other major papers reported that officials and factory bosses from southwest Guangxi to northeast Liaoning were throwing big banquets at public expense, accepting gifts, and passing out bonus cash to workers.

"These unhealthy tendencies violate the Central Committee's policies, create confusion in the reform, sabotage the state plan and normal economic life, posing a great danger," the People's Daily said in a front-page commentary.

The New Year, known in China as Chun Jie, or the spring festival, is the traditional time of family reunions, weddings, good eating, drinking and gift-giving.

The three-day holiday, which begins this year on Feb. 20, is the time when Chinese greet each other by saying "Gong xi fa cai," which means, "Wishing you riches and fortune." This year's celebration is the first under the party's major reforms, which are designed to give China a market-oriented economy, relax state control, promote competition and smash the "big pot" of egalitarianism that has characterized the Chinese system for the past three decades.

The reforms, promulgated Oct. 20, have caused a wave of unauthorized price increases, panic buying, fears of inflation, and illegal selling of goods by officials, party members and even army officers, according to accounts in the Chinese press.

Kirkpatrick has no plans to enter politics

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Outgoing U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick said Thursday she had been approached by supporters who believe she "would make a strong candidate" for political office, on the basis of public opinion polls.

But Mrs. Kirkpatrick insisted in an interview with The Associated Press. "I have never considered running for office. I am not now considering running for office. I have no intentions of running for office."

porters have urged her to seek political office, Mrs. Kirkpatrick replied, "People haven't approached me about running for office. There are people who have approached me to tell me about polls they have seen which lead them to think I would make a strong candidate."

She said she had not seen the polls herself.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick was commenting on a statement by U.S. Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., who told reporters Wednesday night that the departing

U.N. envoy soon would be switching from the Democratic to the Republican Party and "could be a candidate for any office, especially president."

D'Amato, Mrs. Kirkpatrick said in the interview, was expressing his personal views and she had not authorized his statement. She said she had not discussed the matter with the senator before he spoke to reporters at a Lincoln Day Dinner in New York. Mrs. Kirkpatrick was guest speaker at the New York County Republican fund-raising dinner.

Vietnamese forces overrun Cambodian guerrilla complex

Uniformed Khmer Rouge refugee washes newborn son

KHAO SARAPEE, Thailand (AP) — Vietnamese troops and armor sweeping through the jungle behind a ferocious artillery barrage overran one Khmer Rouge stronghold Thursday and seized part of another in the western Cambodia mountains, Thai military officers reported.

The Thai border commander predicted the entire guerrilla complex would fall by Friday. A knowledgeable Soviet bloc diplomat said it may be the "turning point of the war," that broke out after Vietnam invaded Cambodia and ousted Pol Pot's Khmer Rouge regime in January 1979.

With guerrilla forward defense lines shattered by three days of withering artillery fire, 13,000 Vietnamese troops surged from the south and east in a pincer movement that overwhelmed the Khao Din stronghold and captured half the guerrilla headquarters at Phnom Malai, said Col. Chetta Thannajol, deputy commander of the Eastern (border) Field Force.

The force commander said Vietnamese troops were within two miles of Plum Thmei, the communist Khmer Rouge showcase camp and reported operations center that Phnom Malai protected. Maj. Gen. Salya Sripheh it could be over by Friday for the Khmer Rouge in the steaming, malarial enclave that juts like a tooth into Thailand.

Hundreds of guerrillas fleeing the assault on Khao Din trudged northward near this hamlet about 19 miles south of the key Thai border town of Aranyaprathet. The seasoned fighters, who have roamed the Cambodia countryside for years, took everything with them -- field guns, food, even war elephants.

Also driven by the Vietnamese offensive, which intensified with a rain of thousands of artillery and mortar rounds Tuesday, were up to 30,000 civilians fleeing every major Khmer Rouge-controlled camp along the 40-mile half-front south of Aranyaprathet.

They made their way into Thailand, joining 150,000 who already had sought haven from the three-month-long offensive and 30,000 more who fled last April.

The refugees built a sprawling, makeshift camp at the base of Sarapee Hill, spurred by the thundering echoes of artillery. One woman dug a bunker next to her tent, a sheet of blue plastic strung on bamboo poles, and lowered her four small children into it to make sure they would fit if the Vietnamese shelled the camp.

Vietnam turned its guns on the Khmer Rouge in western Battambang Province after overrunning bases of another guerrilla group, the Khmer People's National Liberation Front. The two-pronged drive was designed to trap the guerrillas in the pocket with their backs to the border of Thailand's Prachinburi province.

He said the guerrillas were blocked on the southeastern flank by 2,000 troops moving between the two other units.

'Star Wars' research could torpedo arms talks, Soviet official warns

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — A top Soviet disarmament official said Thursday that further American research on the "Star Wars" space defense program would "certainly torpedo" U.S.-Soviet arms control negotiations.

"If the Americans press us to negotiate on (other weapons) and go ahead with research and elaboration on the so-called Star Wars it would certainly torpedo the negotiations," said Viktor Issraelyan, the chief Soviet delegate to the Geneva disarmament conference.

Issraelyan also told reporters there "won't be any chemical weapons agreement in 1985" if the United States sticks to a draft treaty proposed last April by Vice President George Bush. Discussing the Strategic Defense Initiative, popularly termed Star Wars, Issraelyan reiterated that Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko agreed in January that one goal of the coming bilateral arms talks was to avoid an arms race in outer space.

"Why should a party to the negotiations spend billions on research to construct such weapons in outer space?" he said. "If the plans and programs are followed and implemented I have no doubt the negotiations will blow up," he said.

President Reagan said earlier this week he was going forward with the Star Wars program even if the superpowers came to an agreement on limiting offensive nuclear weapons. The government plans to spend $25 billion in exploratory research on the plan.

Issraelyan said the Geneva negotiations were to be "interrelated" talks on three areas -- intermediate range nuclear weapons, strategic nuclear weapons and space weapons.

The Geneva conference, which begins March 12, is the world's only multilateral disarmament forum. Geneva arms talks have been deadlocked for more than a decade on the question of a chemical weapons ban because of disputes on verification and enforcement.

Brezhnev's son-in-law loses ministry post, military rank

MOSCOW (AP) — Leonid Brezhnev's son-in-law has lost his job as first deputy interior minister and been dropped to lower rank, a ministry official said Thursday.

Yuri Churbanov, 48, is married to the late Soviet leader's daughter Gailina, whose name was mentioned in a circus bribery scandal leaked to the Western press three years ago.

The Interior Ministry duty officer, who would not give his name, told The Associated Press that Churbanov was demoted in December from the post he had held since February, 1980, when his father-in-law was in power.

"He now occupies another managerial post in our system but he is no longer first deputy minister," the official said.

He refused to be more specific and it was not known whether Churbanov, listed in Western references as a lieutenant-general in the internal forces, also was demoted in military rank.

The duty officer gave no reason for Churbanov's demotion in the ministry, which has charge of the uniformed police.

He was replaced by Vasily Trushin, former second secretary of the Moscow Communist Party committee, the official said.

In February 1982, Soviet sources leaked reports that a ranking circus official friendly with Gailina Churbanov had been arrested in a bribery scandal.

Mining firm seeks waiver of soil check

BOISE (AP) -- The attorney for a mining company that may have allowed mercury contamination at its site is asking the Health and Welfare Board to waive a monitoring order.

Robert Anderson, attorney for mining operator George Gray, made a last-minute plea Tuesday for the board to hear further comments on the case. The formal hearing on the operation was held in October, and a hearing examiner made his recommendation in December.

In other action, the board and Merrill Walker, owner of Rockland

Garage and Oil, reached an agreement on a cleanup and monitoring plan for underground petroleum storage tanks in Rockland.

The proposed order would require Powell Mining Co. to take water and soil samples from the mining site near Florence to check for mercury contamination.

If the samples show unsafe levels of mercury, operator George Gray would be required to submit a cleanup plan and would be subject to a $1,000 a day fine, the proposal said.

The operation, started in August 1984, is owned by Powell Mining Co.

and leased to Micro Gold II.

Health and Welfare Department spokeswoman Cheryl Koshuta said Gray failed to obtain the needed permits before starting the project. He also failed to line the ponds where mercury was being used to recover gold fillings, which can allow the chemical to seep into the groundwater, she said.

Anderson said the order would set limits on the amount of mercury that would be allowed in Meadow Creek, a Salmon River tributary that is directly downhill from the mining site.

Ms. Koshuta said the strict limit was set in the proposal to protect fish.

Anderson also argued that the state acknowledged the mining operation in a letter and then failed to specifically ask that Gray request a permit application. That state's part implied consent on the amount of mercury for failing to obtain a permit a mute point, he said.

Ms. Koshuta argued that the order be put into place. High levels of mercury were found in a pond at the site, and the state needs to make sure the substance is not migrating, she said.

Bancroft inventor finally wins patent

BANCROFT (AP) — It took 13 years, endless correspondence with federal agencies and a trip to Washington, D.C., but a Bancroft man finally has received a patent on his invention.

James Gessford has been notified that he has been granted a patent on his process for honeycomb webbing for fiberglass, a process that increases strength and durability two to three times above regular laminated fiberglass.

The process involves a specially developed corrugated cardboard base that bends several directions, covered with fiberglass and attached to a fiberglass base.

Gessford and his MNK company is manufacturing various items at plants in Pocatello and Bancroft. He's building a new 10,000 square foot plant in Bancroft.

Another dog law citation for ex-council woman

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Former Coeur d'Alene council member Lois Land-Albrecht has received yet another citation for letting her dog, Bandito, run loose.

"This time it's World War III and you can quote me," said the 67-year-old woman who helped write and pass the dog control ordinance.

"I'm taking this to the Supreme Court," she said. "If they think I'm going to pay a fine, they've got another thing coming."

"I'm getting sick and tired of them picking on my Bandito just because he doesn't have papers ..."

Her beloved pet is already a two-time loser, having been twice convicted in First District Court trials.

While begrudgingly paying a fine each time, she alleged that the charges against her dog were political motivated.

According to the $25 citation, Bandito was spotted running free Tuesday morning. As animal control officer Mike Borg was trying to capture the dog, Ms. Land-Albrecht drove up and called the dog to her car. Borg allowed the dog to get into the vehicle, then told her he wanted to talk to her about the violation.

At that point, Borg's report states, Ms. Land-Albrecht rolled up her window and drove away. Borg followed and issued the citation in a parking lot.

"He's even got my weight wrong," she said of Borg's citation. "It says 175 and I'm only 172 and I can prove it."

Police Chief Frank Premo said,

"I'll say one thing for her. She is steadfast in her loyalty to that animal."

Ms. Land-Albrecht said she is fed up with people taking their frustrations out on animals.

"I need that dog to protect me from the Coeur d'Alene police," she said.

Craig asks legislators to back cut in imports

BOISE (AP) — Claiming the Canadian government must help in the resolution of economic problems, in the United States, Idaho Republican Congressman Larry Craig Thursday called on state lawmakers to back efforts to secure a voluntary reduction in timber imports from that nation.

"It is our hope to be able to leverage them down through a voluntary restraint program," Craig told the state Senate in calling for its endorsement of trade bills that begin with Canada Feb. 26 in Ottawa.

Craig contended that up to half of the 10,000 unemployed Northwest timber industry workers are off the job because of the massive rise in Canadian timber imports in recent years. He said he hoped the negotiations would result in that import level being cut from the current 37 percent to about 25 percent.

"Your help and your expression on behalf of our efforts would be well appreciated," said Craig, who has introduced import restriction legislation with Rep. James Weaver, D-Ore.

"We need the Canadians, but they need us," he said. "They can share with us in the good times, but they must also share with us in the bad times. But today they are taking such tremendous advantage of the market ..."

That is something this nation should not tolerate, and I think we can negotiate them down.

Craig also renewed his strong support for a "well-founded educational system," that he said will play a crucial role in helping Idaho achieve the economic diversity it needs to cope with cyclical ups and downs in the national economy.

While conceding the major budget problems facing lawmakers this year, Craig said there is a definite need for retention of Lewis-Clark State College as a four-year school in the state.

He said that school, a target of some lawmakers seeking budget savings, offers unique educational opportunities to north central Idaho residents and will play a key role in laying the ground work for economic diversification.

While Idaho will continue to have strong timber, agricultural and mining industries, which are the key to its resource-based economy, Craig said the educational system, and Lewis-Clark, will be critical to attracting the new non-resource industries needed "to soften the blows of economic cycles that we will have from time to time."

Warden changes plan, stalls guards' protest

BOISE (AP) — Union guards planning a demonstration at the state prison suspended the protest after the warden agreed to continue staffing a tower they say is essential for their safety.

"I don't want to fight inmates and staff," Warden Arvon Arave said Thursday.

He said that in a Wednesday meeting with guards he agreed not to quit staffing a key tower. Arave had proposed taking guards from towers much of the time so they could work in a contraband crackdown at the prison south of Boise.

But faced with the ire of the guards, he changed that plan and said he has taken people from other positions for the contraband project. They include a guard assigned to the maximum-security unit and one who had patrolled the prison perimeter.

Guards staged a mass grievance and planned a demonstration today after declaring the original plan to reduce staffing of the towers would threaten their safety and increase the possibility of inmates escaping.

"Towers are pretty much sacred cows" among prison personnel, Arave said.

Shoshone County prepares for floods

WALLACE (AP) — There's a "powder keg" of snow perched on the hills above the Coeur d'Alene River drainage, say Shoshone County flood-watchers.

The January snow depth and the more important water content measurement at the Lookout Pass gauge were among the highest ever recorded for that time of year — twice the average — prompting concern that January's customary two-week thaw might bring the river and its tributaries over their banks.

It didn't, thanks to colder-than-normal temperatures the next four weeks. And because last month was one of the driest Januarys on record, the snow at Lookout measured Feb. 1 as just 118 percent of normal, although the snow's water content is 131 percent of average.

Although December and January are popularly considered to be the on-flood-danger months, the Coeur d'Alene and St. Joe River drainages don't respect such convenient pigeon-holing, said Joe Clegg, Washington Water Power Co.'s system operations supervisor.

Clegg has spent 35 years studying the capriciousness of the water systems that drive WWP's hydroelectric dams.

The highest water in the Coeur d'Alene-St. Joe-Spokane river system came in December 1931.

The third-highest is the one best remembered locally. The flood of Feb. 16, 1974, forced mass evacuations from Wallace to Cataldo in the Silver Valley and caused an estimated $1.5 million damage.

High water during the past century also has come in February and April, Clegg said.

"In the Spokane River drainage, it seems you can get a flood any time," he said. "We haven't had anything in March, yet."

Snow in the lower elevations, which generally runs off during the January thaw, clings tenaciously to the hillsides. Water measurements at the Sherwin snow course near St. Maries and at Burke were 152 and 125 percent of normal Feb. 1, Clegg said.

"Lower elevation (4,000 feet and below) snow is still looking pretty heavy," he said.

The runoff from the lower elevations into Coeur d'Alene Lake hasn't begun, because of sub-freezing temperatures, he said.

The lake level, regulated by WWP's dam on the Spokane River at Post Falls since 1906, is at its lowest since 1979, although the current runoff is sufficient to drive two of the dam's six generators.

That could change in a hurry with rain in the lower elevations.

The creeks and rivers can rise from normal to flood peaks in just two days during the winter, said Bob Troiano, a Coeur d'Alene-based conservation technician for the federal Soil Conservation Service, one of the agencies monitoring the flood situation.

In late winter and spring, floods take longer — often five days — to peak, Troiano said.

During normal runoff, snow in the "transient zone" below 4,500 feet melts during the day. But at night the temperature drops, temporarily halting the thaw.

The biggest variable is the weather. The 1974 thaw came so quickly that nine inches of snow at Latour and Wolf Lodge creeks disappeared in 24 hours. Six inches of rain fell in three days. Water overflowed the banks of Coeur d'Alene Lake, Placer Creek, Pine Creek and the rest of the Coeur d'Alene and St. Joe drainages.

The area will have about five days warning from the National Weather Service of flood-conducive weather, say county engineer Dick Gatten and disaster coordinator Gery Hooper.

Cascade man wants cut in phone rate

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A telephone company that serves more than 20 rural communities, including 360 customers at Fairfield and 250 at Carey, provides shoddy service and deserves a rate decrease, not an increase, a Cascade man told state regulators on Thursday.

Earl Putnam testified at a hearing on a Continental Telephone Co. of the West proposal for an overall revenue increase of 16 percent.

Continental could achieve a substantial part of its sought-after revenue by changing its ways and operating "in a prudent, business-like manner," Putnam told the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

He was the lone customer testified to speak at a hearing, otherwise devoted to testimony by the PUC staff, which said Continental's request is too high.

Thursday's hearing was the second in the rate case. Commissioners heard testimony from the company and other witnesses last month in McCall.

Continental's revenue proposal would boost the company's income from all rates and charges by 56 percent, and from basic monthly exchange rates by an average 75 percent.

The PUC staff recommends an overall increase of 5.6 percent, or $173,000. That would raise all local rates and charges an average 19 percent.

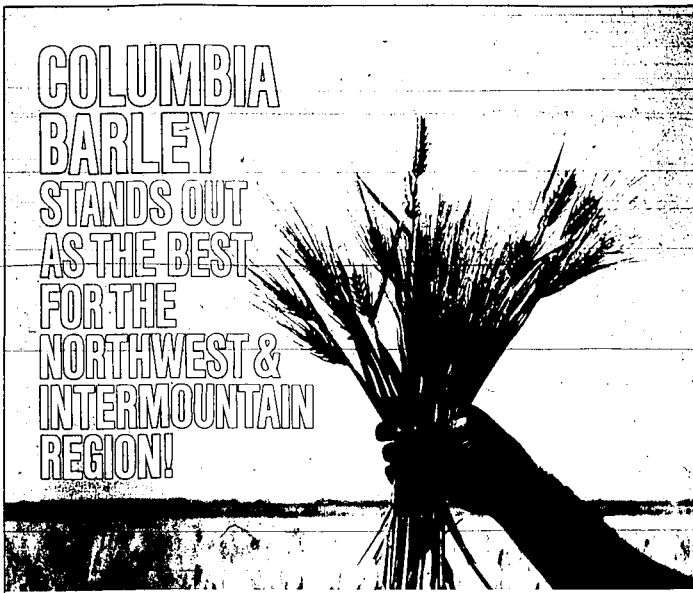

Putnam said that people in the Valley County area have had trouble getting telephone-line extensions from Continental, and that the company provides too few pay phones in the Cascade vicinity. Putnam also complained about a lack of directories at coin phones and said linemen earn too much money.

Dee Monson, telephone services manager for Continental, said in an interview that the proposed rate increase "is quite substantial, but we're facing some basic technological changes now."

The company needs to stay abreast of technological advances if it is to be competitive in its industry, he said.

"We do have a revenue deficiency, and that's why we're here," said Monson, who added Continental has strived to provide good service.

COLUMBIA BARLEY STANDS OUT AS THE BEST FOR THE NORTHWEST & INTERMOUNTAIN REGION!

Columbia Stands For Yield! Bred exclusively for the Northwest and Intermountain region, Columbia has proved it has one of the highest yield potentials of any barley around. In central Oregon, growers cited yields in excess of 7600 Lbs./Acre. At the Malheur Experiment Station, Columbia produced over 6400 Lbs./A. third in the test, but the least lodging with only 10%. Utah growers reported yields of 6670 Lbs./A. Idaho yields went as high as 9200 Lbs./A. Several Columbia Basin growers had yields of over 8100 Lbs./A. All yields were of excellent quality with 46 Lbs. Bushel Weight or better. Columbia really responds to good management, soil fertility and irrigation!

Columbia Stands For Profit! Its heads are tight and do not shatter even after maturity. It has impressive disease resistance...to net blotch, mildew and scald with moderate resistance to leaf rust. Kernels are heavier with a thinner hull. This stiff-strawed, six-rowed, spring-feed barley really makes it!

Columbia Stands! It has outstanding resistance to lodging. Plant height is 37 to 39 inches, 4 to 6 inches shorter than Step-toe. This optimum height and its short, stiff straw provides Columbia with probably the finest standability you've ever seen in a field of barley!

Idaho court upholds ruling against worker

BOISE (AP) — A lumberjack who suffered a heart attack after working in the southeastern Idaho mountains is not entitled to worker's compensation benefits from his employer, the Idaho Supreme Court has ruled.

The high court's decision affirms an order by the Idaho Industrial Commission that Harry Ray Horner should not receive benefits he claimed against Ponderosa Pine Logging. Horner, who was 40 years old at the time of his heart attack in July, 1981, took a job with Ponderosa a month earlier after working as a logger on the Oregon coast since the age of 18.

He claimed the strenuous work, high altitude and cold weather in the Georgetown Canyon area of Bear Lake County, where he was employed by Ponderosa, contributed to his heart condition.

However, a referee for the Industrial Commission found after hearing testimony from doctors who had examined Horner that his condition was indicative of a long-term disease process. The referee agreed with a doctor who said that while the work may have caused Horner pain, the disease itself was not the result of his employment with Ponderosa.

The Industrial Commission referee was also convinced that Horner should not be awarded benefits by the fact that he had been off the job for four days before his heart attack. Horner argued on appeal to the Supreme Court that there was insufficient evidence that his heart attack was not aggravated or accelerated by his work.

The court disagreed, ruling that the commission's findings were indeed "supported by substantial competent evidence."

Stocks top 1,300 again but falter late in day

By CHET CURRIER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK The stock market turned downward in late trading Thursday after making a short-lived run past the 1,300 level in the Dow Jones industrial average for the second straight session.

Computer and technology issues, which have been under pressure since early in the week, recorded some of the day's most notable losses.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, up more than 5 points early in the day to around 1,303, wound up with a net loss at 1,297.92.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 139.73 million shares, against 142.16 million Wednesday.

Analysts said enthusiasm remained high about the economic outlook and the stock market's raising start on 1985. However, they said it was evident that some traders were using the 1,300 mark in the Dow as a cue to cash in some profits.

Some market-watchers say that round-number figure is less significant than it may appear, since other measures of market trends have regularly been setting new highs of late. Still, it seemed to stand as a psychological obstacle that the market was having some trouble overcoming.

Another source of caution in Thursday's activity was the Federal Reserve's weekly report on the money supply, due out after the close in New York. The central bank's relatively stimulative credit policy has played a major role in setting the recent ebullient mood on Wall Street.

As it turned out, the Fed reported a $1.4 billion increase in the basic measure of the money supply for the week ended Feb. 4. The figure, which came atop upward revision of some past money-supply data, seemed to cause no great stir in the credit markets.

For the day, rates on short-term Treasury bills dropped about 5 basis points, or hundredths of a percentage point. Prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, rose about $5 for every $1,000 in face value.

Technology issues continued the rocky ride that began two days earlier, when Data General said its earnings for the quarter ending March 31 would come in sharply below expectations.

Data General shares, down more than 16 points Tuesday and Wednesday, recovered 1 1/2 to 57 1/2. But Digital Equipment fell 6 to 110 1/2; International Business Machines was off 1 1/2 at 137; and Texas Instruments lost 2 1/2 to 119 1/2.

Some financial services stocks also were weak. Merrill Lynch gave up 1 1/2 to 35; PaineWebber 1 1/2 to 40 1/2; and F. Hoffmann 7 to 40.

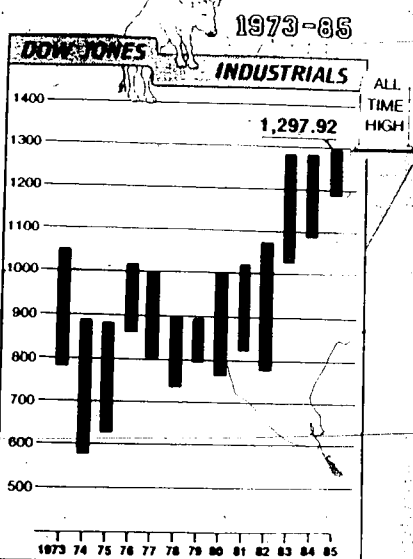

Unocal was unchanged at 48 in active trading. After the close a partnership including Mesa Petroleum said it had bought some 13.7 million Unocal shares, but had no present plans to seek to acquire control of the company.

In the daily tally on the Big Board, declining issues held a slim edge on gainers. The exchange's composite index dropped .30 to 105.70.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 164.84 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrial stocks fell 1.16 to 203.63, and S&P's 500 stock composite index was down 94 at 102.41.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market edged up 0.1 to 298.35. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 231.11, down 1.1.

Fourth quarter earnings up fivefold Chrysler reports profit of $2.4 billion

By EDWARD MILLER
The Associated Press

HIGHLAND PARK — Chrysler Corp. said Thursday its fourth-quarter profit soared fivefold from a year earlier, lifting its full-year earnings to a record $2.4 billion.

Chrysler's profit in 1984, its second consecutive year of record earnings, lifted the combined profits of the Big Three U.S. automakers — Chrysler, General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. — to nearly $10 billion.

GM earlier said it earned a record $4.5 billion last year, and Ford said its 1984 profit was $2.9 billion.

"I'm a little scared right now," Iacocca said.

The quotas, which currently limit Japanese shipments to 1.85 million cars annually, had the effect of keeping Japan's share of the U.S. market at about 20 percent last year.

Japan has yet to announce whether it plans to extend the quotas or not. But Iacocca said that if they did, Chrysler would be forced to close plants and slash an ambitious five-year, $10.5 billion investment plan.

Should it cut production, Chrysler would "start at the small cars and move up," Iacocca said.

Chrysler, Ford and the United Auto Workers union have asked the Reagan administration to pressure Japan to extend the quotas for a 10th year. GM has said it is prepared to import more than 200,000 Japanese cars on its own if the quotas are lifted. Despite the pleas from Detroit, "these (U.S. industry) profits will just add fuel to the fire for removing Japan's voluntary restraints," said John Hammond, who follows the industry for Data Resources Inc. of Lexington, Mass.

Hammond said the quotas were designed to help the U.S. car industry recover from its severe four-year sales slump that began in 1979.

Chrysler's fourth-quarter profit was $609.7 million, or $4.91 a share, up from $118.3 million, or 91 cents a share, a year earlier. Sales rose to $5.3 billion from $3.8 billion.

Chrysler's full-year earnings equaled $18.88 a share and compared with 1983 profit of $70.9 million, or $5.79 a share. Annual sales climbed to $19.6 billion from $13.3 billion.

Iacocca reiterated his view that the bulk of the Japanese cost advantage on cars is caused by the strong U.S. dollar against the yen.

"Every time we improve productivity, the dollar gets stronger and we seem to lose what we gained," he said.

Meanwhile, inventories of Chrysler cars have been building despite higher sales. The cut inventory, Chrysler said it will offer $50 to Americans who trade in a 1979 or newer Chrysler for a new one. The deal also will be offered to company employees.

Iacocca also said Chrysler would spend $50 million to give its employees $500 each for the "work worry and sacrifice" they experienced during the company's battle back from bankruptcy.

Business gaining inventory control

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sales of manufactured goods climbed 0.6 percent in December, double the rate of increase of inventories during the month, the government reported Thursday.

Both government and private analysts said the figures showed that businesses were succeeding in getting bulging inventories under control.

The Commerce Department said the sales increase was the third consecutive monthly gain and followed an even larger 1 percent rise in November. From July through September, sales had fallen as overall economic growth slowed considerably.

Many economists were concerned that economic growth could slow even further as businesses cut back on orders in an effort to work down excess inventories.

However, those fears were eased by the small 0.3 percent inventory increase in December, which followed an even lower 0.2 percent November gain.

Roger Brimmer, economist for Data Resources Inc., a Lexington, Mass., economic forecasting firm, said price discounts in November and December apparently helped to move products out of the stores.

"The shelves were kept pretty lean so the recovery can proceed in the first half of 1985," he said. "The inventory imbalance that was feared by those who have existed at the end of the third quarter was at least partially, if not totally, corrected during the fourth quarter."

Michael Evans, head of The Washington forecasting firm, said inventory building has slowed dramatically from rates well above 1 percent recorded in early 1984.

"The inventory binge that went on in the first half of the year and into the summer has been reversed," he said. "The drawdown phase for inventories took only one quarter, instead of the usual two quarters."

Robert Ortner, chief economist at the Commerce Department, said inventory levels may still be too high at the retail level, especially at department stores, but he said stocks at other levels "seem to be under control."

The department's report said sales totaled $419.9 billion in December, while the inventory level rose to $566.5 billion.

Investors should check gains changes

Sylvia Porter

Under the new tax law, you need wait only for more than six months to sell stocks or other investments you bought after June 22, 1981, at a profit that will be taxed as the more favorable long-term capital gain.

On your first June 22, 1984, investments, you have to wait for more than a year to qualify as long-term gains (during which time your paper profit may shrink drastically or drop away altogether).

This is a highly important change to all investors. To be more specific, if you bought capital assets — stocks, bonds, a house — on or before June 22, 1981, your gain or loss on selling an asset will be a long-term gain or loss if you held it for more than one year before selling it. It will be a short-term gain or loss if you held it for only one year or less before selling it.

If you bought your stocks, house, or other asset after June 22, 1981, your gain or loss on selling an asset will be a long-term gain or loss if you held it for more than six months before selling it. Your gain or loss, however, will be a short-term gain or loss if you held it for only six months or less before selling it.

The effective tax on long-term capital gains cannot exceed 20 percent. Long-term capital gains are getting a real tax break.

If you sold any stocks, bonds, or the like, during 1984, you may for the first time receive from your broker a new information return Form 1099-B or another statement reporting the proceeds of your sales.

If you do receive such form or statement, a copy of which the broker sends to the Internal Revenue Service, you will have to reconcile the total on the form or statement with the total sales you will report on your 1984 Schedule D — Capital Gains and Losses, of Form 1040.

The newly required reconciliation is made in Section A, Part VI of Schedule D. In making the reconciliation, you must show the proceeds of any sales you reported that were not reported to you on any Form 1099-B, etc., and any proceeds shown on any such forms that you are not reporting with an explanation of why you aren't reporting the sale.

WARNING! Report all income. The IRS has been checking on an increasing scale whether taxpayers are including in their returns all the income reported as paid to them by banks, corporations, etc. Taxes have been assessed, plus interest, on any income unreported by the taxpayer.

For 1984 returns, the IRS is getting even tougher. Any 1984 income for which an information return (Form 1099) was filed for you that you don't report on your 1984 return could be hit with tax plus interest plus 50 percent negligence penalty plus 50 percent of the regular interest. If this happens, you can avoid the added penalties only if you can convince the IRS that you weren't negligent.

If you had any income from bartering in 1984 you also may receive similar information forms and the like reporting your bartering income. Again, you will have to show where such income was reported on Form 1040 or any of the attached schedules. If you believe some of the income was not taxable, you will have to explain why it wasn't taxable.

BE ON GUARD! After you complete your '84 return, you must be prepared to start paying your 1985 taxes. The first installment payment of your 1985 tax may also be due April 15, 1985. If you don't prepay enough of your 1985 tax through your estimated tax payments or through your withholding, you can be hit with a penalty that will be figured at 13 percent until at least June 30, 1985. The IRS will then set a new rate.

Generally, you must pay an estimated tax if you expect to owe, after withholding and credits, at least $500 in tax for 1985; and expect your withholding to be less than 80 percent of the tax shown on your 1985 tax, or 100 percent of the tax shown on your '84 return (assuming the return covered all 12 months).

As an employee, you may be able to estimate your tax requirements retroactively. Request your employer to withhold much higher than required amounts from your salary in the latter part of 1985. While the withholding actually may take place in December 1985, the withheld amount is viewed as being withheld equally over the year. If, say, your employer withheld $5,000 of your year-end salary, you are considered to have paid one-fourth, or $1,250, on April 15, June 15, Sept. 15 and in the last quarter.

This can reduce or eliminate any amount that may have been required as an estimated tax payment on those dates. A real safety net for you.

Home economics teacher lends a hand

Students set up upholstery business

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — With a little venture capital from home economics teacher Marya Duncan, a group of Twin Falls High School sophomores is setting up an upholstery shop at school.

Unofficially called "Vocational-Exploration Enterprises," the loosely-organized group has a manager, Bob Hendriks, and an assistant manager, Bret Preece. Hendriks and Preece work with Brian Nelson, Mike Suarez and Lorenzo Gonzalez.

Working after school and on weekends, the five students have re-upholstered three chairs since school started, and are finishing their fourth. So far, their method is to strip the cover from a chair and use the old fabric as a pattern for the new upholstery fabric. Duncan has a heavy-duty, professional sewing machine the group uses to sew the covers before tacking them to the chair.

Thursday morning, all five were in Duncan's classroom, sewing, repairing the wooden frame, and stretching and tacking the fabric with a staple gun.

"You have to have at least two people, pulling and stapling is hard," Hendriks says. He and Gonzalez carefully wrapped the arm of a chair with a heavy tweed material, working the pleats and wrinkles out of the corners before stapling the fabric to the wooden arm.

Across the room, Nelson sat at the sewing machine, putting finishing touches on the fabric for the chair's back-cushion before handstitching strips of padding onto the inside of the cushion with a thick needle.

Though none of them said they had looked for summer or weekend work as upholsterers, Nelson said he got involved in the projects hoping it would lead to a job.

The simulated business program is skill and career oriented, Duncan says. With Vocational-Exploration Enterprises, she says the students are earning a little pocket money and developing job skills that may lead them to careers in upholstery.

Duncan's latest loan was paid off Wednesday, when the group's last chair sold for $90. Thursday was pay day, and as the next chair was being readied for sale, she handed out each worker's wages for their hours spent on the last chair.

Negotiating process hurt, says attorney

Teacher group files court brief

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls School Board has destroyed the good faith negotiating process, says the attorney for the Twin Falls Education Association.

In his 57-page post-trial brief, TFEA attorney Byron Johnson makes the argument that since December 1984, the board's actions have been a detriment to good faith bargaining. Johnson's brief was filed Monday.

The TFEA went to court seeking an injunction against the district to force them to return to the negotiations table and to reinstate the district's old health insurance policy.

"Whatever the court may conclude about the good faith of the parties prior to December 1984, the actions of the board and its negotiators in December 1984 and since then can only be characterized as being totally destructive of the good faith negotiations process established by the Legislature in the Professional Negotiations Act," Johnson says in the concluding section of his brief.

"The ultimatums given to the association by the board, the unilateral actions of the board, and the refusal of the board to proceed to fact-finding have made it impossible for the negotiations process to be completed."

Snow slide cleared from canyon road

TWIN FALLS — The Rock Creek Canyon road, closed since Sunday because of snow slides, was reopened to traffic at 4 p.m. Thursday.

Twin Falls Highway District Manager Clyde Burgey, announced Thursday afternoon that the road would be open to traffic and in good condition when crews finished the day's work.

He had earlier said he did not expect to have it open before Saturday. Road crews have worked throughout the week to clear snow from several slides that blocked the road following last week's heavy snow and winds.

The Magic Mountain Ski Resort will re-open Friday, according to Ken Lee, co-owner.

Highway crews have cleared three major slides from the road and widened the traffic lanes. Several smaller slides were cleared Monday.

Dale Hough, recreation officer for the Twin Falls ranger district of the Sawtooth National Forest, said Thursday evening that the road is in good condition and the slide dangers appear to be over. Highway crews will be doing some touch-up work today, he added.

"It has been getting pretty cold up there. The temperature dropped way down the past few nights," Hough said.

Hough and other forest officials have been in the area the past few days to check out slide conditions and areas where snow has already slid. He said they attempted to get back to snowmobile and cross-country ski trails Thursday but encountered a number of small slides. Hough said snowmobilers and cross-country skiers should be able to use the trails as long as they stay away from steep slopes and canyons as there is still some hazard of more slides.

He said the temperature in the area was 18 degrees early Thursday but climbed to 41 degrees during the afternoon.

Court asked to stop PUC order on Little Wood hydro plant

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho Power Co. is again placing the complicated question of payments to small power producers before the Idaho Supreme Court, as the result of a state ruling on a Shoshone area hydroelectric station.

The electric utility Thursday asked the Supreme Court to block a Feb. 6 order by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission requiring Idaho Power to buy electricity from Gen-Hon 2, a small hydro plant located on the Little Wood River two miles east of Shoshone.

The PUC said Idaho Power must purchase the electricity at a fixed rate over a period of time set by developers George and Bonnie Arkosch of Coalinga. The PUC based its ruling on Idaho Supreme Court opinions about Idaho Power's obligations under federal law from another small hydro developer, Alton Energy Corp.

However, Idaho Power spokesman Larry Taylor said Thursday the PUC misinterpreted the top court's rulings and exceeded its authority in the order.

At issue is whether the PUC, which regulates rates charged by electric companies, can force the utility to lock in fixed payments over a long period of time in the contract.

"Our contention was in that case (Alton Energy) and is that the Supreme Court agreed that the PUC has to retain jurisdiction over the rate and therefore can change the rate in the future should it decide that a different rate is just, fair and reasonable," Taylor said.

The PUC found in its ruling that federal law allows fixed contracts. It also said the Idaho Supreme Court's last opinion on the subject in mid-December allows the state agency to decide whether any specific fixed-rate contract is fair.

Federal law requires Idaho Power and other electric utilities to pay for any power generated by small production plants. The 1978 National Energy Act gave developers of cogeneration plants a guaranteed market for their electricity because they save utilities such as Idaho Power the costs of building large generating plants.

The Supreme Court's answer on the contracts will reach much farther than the Arkosch development, which has generating capacity of 927 kilowatts. Idaho Power already has agreed to buy from 31 small power producers, but "out in the wings we have 90 other projects that want contracts, and they total almost 225,000 watts," said Taylor. The West already has too much electric generating capacity and locking in prices will harm Idaho Power ratepayers by forcing them to pay more than necessary for electricity, he argues.

Attorney Tom Arkosch of Emmett, who represents his parents, declined comment on the Idaho Power challenge because it remains in litigation.

In its ruling, the PUC also rebuked Idaho Power for including in some contracts a clause objecting to being forced to purchase power from small hydro developers.

At the same time, it sided with Idaho Power in several other technical issues, including the right to discount a small power producer to protect its own equipment.

House to consider changes to 'bed-and-booze tax' laws

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News Capitol Bureau

BOISE — Efforts to amend and retain Idaho's resort-cities, local-option sales tax will reach a crucial juncture Monday morning in a hearing before the House State Affairs Committee.

The tax contributes about $500,000 to city tax coffers each year. Loss of that revenue would result in the curtailment of many tourist-oriented city services, the city claims.

The Sun Valley Co., which brought the suit before Granata, contends the tax has an adverse effect on its lodging and beverage business.

Carl Burkett, a Boise attorney who represents the company, says the tax allows Sun Valley residents to shift portions of their share of taxes for city services onto the backs of tourists. The city was able to provide local services before imposition of the tax and could do so again, he adds.

Granata ruled the law unconstitutional because it provided an overly broad delegation of the Legislature's authority to raise taxes.

That decision is being appealed to the Idaho Supreme Court. If the court upholds Granata's decision and if the Legislature fails to approve the proposed corrections, the city of Sun Valley stands to lose the revenue source.

State Affairs Committee Chairman Walt Little, R-New Plymouth, says if the committee finds no constitutional problems with the bill, he favors returning the bill to the House Revenue and Taxation Committee where it originated.

But Little adds that the attorney general's "legal guidance" which found no constitutional flaws in the legislation, also interprets the proposed changes in a manner that would cause the city of McCall to be ineligible to impose the tax.

Store benefits group

TWIN FALLS — With a stock of more than 2,000 hardback volumes, the Port of Hope will open a used book store Tuesday.

The store will be located across from Sears at 428 Main Ave. N. in Twin Falls.

Staff member Penny Y. Main described the collection of books as "incredible."

Besides the usual fare of fiction and non-fiction, customers will find more than 200 books published before 1920. A few even date back to the 1800's and all are in good condition, Main said.

The shelves also will contain a range of children's, religious, historical and self-help books. Specialty items include material for the recovered alcoholic, Main said.

Port of Hope obtained the books through donations. While the organization's primary business is substance abuse counseling, it has dabbled in the retail business to help support its programs.

At a Port of Hope thrift store in Twin Falls, there was a large number of hardback books. When the thrift store closed in November because of increasing operation costs, its merchandise was liquidated. The books, however, were kept and stored.

"We felt we did quite a business

Kathy Gill hopes an armchair will encourage browsing with the books (at the thrift store.) We decided to keep them and see what we could do," Main said.

She said she knows of no other similar store to offer such a large amount of hardback books.

The Port of Hope will keep the store stocked with donations of books, Main added. Contributions are tax deductible.

Proceeds from the shop will help support the programs offered by Port of Hope, a non-profit organization.

The Port of Hope book store will be open Tuesdays through Fridays from noon to 6 p.m. and on Saturdays from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Panel OKs 2 bills on consolidation

By The Times-News and The Associated Press

BOISE — The House Education Committee gave routine approval Thursday to print and introduce two bills Rep. Donna Scott says are designed to help the proposed consolidation of Hansen, Kimberly and Murlaugh schools.

After consolidation, current state law allows districts to keep their state funding for five years, as if they were separate districts. Scott's bill extends that to seven years.

The deadline increased to 10 years to give newly consolidated districts an economic helping hand, but the deadline was cut to seven years to make the increase more palatable to legislators.

"We dropped back to what we thought would fly. We wanted to be on the safe side, so we asked for an additional two," Taylor said.

A second bill would allow school district patrons to decide whether to consolidate debts at the same time as they decide whether to consolidate.

Debt consolidation has been a stumbling block since Murlaugh has no bonded indebtedness, while the other two schools do.

Consolidation is a word that immediately gets school district patrons stirred up, says Rep. Donna Scott, R-Twin Falls.

"When you say consolidation to school districts, immediately they get excited and fear a mandate from the state," she told the House Education Committee on Thursday.

But consolidation can work, she said. "It can't come from the top down, it has to come from the local level," she said.

Brooks judgment set aside

BOISE (AP) — A default judgment against a former state representative accused of failing to make payments on irrigation equipment has been set aside. A U.S. District Court judge removed the default ruling against John Brooks on Tuesday and scheduled a trial for July 18 in Boise. Lindsay Credit Corp. filed the case against the Gooding Republican, who was defeated last year after five terms in the Idaho Legislature.

Ski patrol screening slated

TWIN FALLS — A candidate screening for anyone interested in becoming part of the Magic Mountain Ski Patrol has been scheduled for March 17 at the resort southeast of Twin Falls. Patrol Leader Robert Pettigrove said people interested need only show up at the resort then and contact any patrolman on duty. Patrol members ski free at the resort, but they must also meet some rigid training and qualifications, he said.

"It takes a full ski season for a candidate to prepare and meet the National Ski Patrol System's requirements," Pettigrove said. "We are looking for people who want to serve the skiing public, are good skiers, willing to dedicate a lot of time and training and do a lot of patrolling," he said.

Advanced first-aid and CPR training are required, but there are first-aid instructors available on the local patrol to train candidates. Toboggan handling and loading, lift evacuation, avalanche search and rescue and other techniques will be among the training items for new candidates.

Men or women interested in patrol duty are required to pay certain fees for training and furnish their own equipment. Additionally, over the past several seasons has cut into the present patrol membership and the resort is planning expansion, which will require a larger ski patrol in the next few seasons.

Man stable after accident

OAKLEY — A Boise man was in stable condition Thursday in Cassia Memorial Hospital in Burley after suffering injuries in an accident at the Oakley Dam construction site. Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal said Patrick Scheeline, 34, of Boise, was reportedly working with a high pressure hose blowing concrete into the spillway tunnel. Crystal said the hose "ruptured" under the pressure and struck Scheeline in the chest. He suffered a four-inch head laceration and concussion. He was taken to the hospital in Burley by ambulance. Hospital officials said he was "doing fine" Thursday afternoon. The accident occurred about 8:20 p.m., Crystal said. Workers are reinforcing the dam's spillway tunnel to prepare for spring runoff.

Agriculture film featured

GOODING — A film about modern American agriculture will be shown at the annual banquet and business meeting of the Wood River Resource Area membership Feb. 27. This year's event in the Lincoln Inn in Gooding will begin with a social hour at 6:30 p.m. followed at 7:30 p.m. with a prime rib dinner. Gale Roberts, Soil Conservation Service in Halley, will be master of ceremonies and there will be door prizes furnished by mayors of cities within the development area. Sponsors, wives and friends are invited to attend. The cost is $8 per person. Louis Pence, area manager, said the film, "Down on the Farm," is more than the usual entertainment. It explains why the system pits the short-term need for profit against the long-term needs of the land, he said.

It will be shown by the Wood River Soil Conservation district. The organization covers the area of Blaine, Camas, Gooding and Lincoln Counties. Everett "Buck" Ward of Shoshone is chairman.

Man arrested for sex abuse

TWIN FALLS — A 19-year-old man was arrested this week for allegedly exposing himself to a 6-year-old girl. Robert Graham of 1036 Blue Lakes Blvd. was charged Wednesday with sexual abuse of a minor under 16. The incident took place between April and May 1983, while the child was at a babysitter's house in Twin Falls, according to a complaint filed in Fifth District Magistrate Court. Graham was released on his own recognizance.

Birch Society shows video

TWIN FALLS — A video taped interview with an anti-Communist leader from Costa Rica will be shown Tuesday at the College of Southern Idaho. Willy Solis Jr. had been scheduled to speak in person about Communism in Central America at a meeting sponsored by the Magic Valley chapters of the John Birch Society. But Solis was murdered Nov. 26 by Communists, according to Birch member Orville Knighton of Twin Falls. Solis was a leader of an anti-Communist movement in Costa Rica. As a youth, Solis was honored by the Boy Scouts of America for his outstanding service, according to the society. In his homeland, Solis had founded and commanded a youth education program. Solis was readying for a second speaking tour of the United States when he was murdered, Knighton said. The incident occurred while Solis was on a bus headed for San Jose. The presentation will begin at 7:30 p.m. in room 117 of the Shields Building at the College of Southern Idaho. Admission is free.

Baby's death investigated

JEROME — The death of an 11-month-old Hazelton child is under investigation in Jerome County. Pending completion of tests and reports following an autopsy. Tanya L. Slaten, daughter of Gary and Rosemarie Slaten, died at the family home Feb. 3 of unknown causes. She weighed only 10 pounds at the time of death. Jerome County Coroner Gerald Oster said he is waiting for a full pathological report, including blood tests, before he will decide if an inquest will be called. He said preliminary reports show no signs of disease that would have caused the death. Sheriff Elza Hall and his officers made an investigation at the home at the time of the death, and Hall said he recommended an inquest be held.

He and Oster, however, agreed to follow recommendations of Prosecuting Attorney Mark Gause to hold off on an inquest until final autopsy reports are received. Gause said it may be that tests will provide answers and an inquest will not be needed. Hall said the child was one of six children in the family and appeared to have been in ill health for some time.

Kimberly OKs computer purchase

By CAROLYN MILLER Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly City Council voted Tuesday to purchase a computer for the city and also decided to hire a computer specialist to write a program to specifically fit the city's needs. Following discussion and a recommendation by City Clerk Edythe Widmer, the council voted to purchase or lease a Hewlett Packard computer. The purchase cost, including two terminals, would be $9,275, it was noted. Rick Widmer, a computer lab assistant at the College of Southern Idaho, presented the council with a letter of recommendation and qualification and said he would write the program, assemble and connect the computer for $3,500.

Widmer said a program addressing the city's needs could be written in three months. He also said he would add any necessary changes within one year without any additional charge. Widmer said Kimberly's accounting firm of Evans and Condie would oversee the programming to insure accuracy, at no charge. Kimberly City Attorney Dick Greenwood discussed the drawing up of a contract for Widmer, and council members voted to delay any specific decisions until the computer has been purchased. In other business: James Wright, chairman of the committee to investigate the consolidation of Kimberly, Hansen and Murtaugh schools, told the council that if consolidation is passed, it would not actually take effect until a new high school is constructed. Wright also said the earliest election can be held to vote on consolidation would be in June. He said the state Department of Education has recommended that the site of the proposed high school be in or near the city of Kimberly in order to take advantage of police and fire protection as well as being able to make use of Kimberly water and sewer facilities.

Mayor Ron Jones suggested a committee be formed consisting of members of the city zoning commission, police department and persons from other departments affected by the construction of a new high school near Kimberly. Mayor Ron Jones presented a diploma to city employee Steve Birkby, who recently finished a course offered by A.W. Chesterton Co., manufacturer of mechanical packing and seals. Council members approved a request from the clerk's office for two Olympia typewriters at a total cost of $1,586. Nancy Taylor was appointed by the council to replace Vern Farley, who recently resigned his position on the zoning commission. Mayor Ron Jones suggested a policy be drawn up specifically stating the rules regulating the use of city fire trucks for county fires. Kimberly Fire Chief Dale Vawser said calls are answered if an emergency exists out of the county and that the old fire engine is available should an emergency exist within the city limits. Mayor Ron Jones said the need exists for a rural and city fire chief. Council members agreed that the city fire department should answer county calls with only one truck. The council also said the department can respond to calls outside the city limits, with the understanding that the council has given permission until a specific policy can be formulated. Mayor Ron Jones suggested a 1974 Oldsmobile be considered for purchase as a police vehicle at a cost of $800. Council members agreed to the purchase if the vehicle is shown to be in satisfactory condition.

Widmer said a program addressing the city's needs could be written in three months. He also said he would add any necessary changes within one year without any additional charge.

Lawsuit

Continued from Page B1 The bulk of Johnson's brief deals with a series of allegations that the board, among other things, improperly bypassed the Association in negotiations, engaged in "surface negotiations, took actions to cripple the association as the representative of certificated personnel, made unreasonable demands and created the false impression that the district could not afford to pay for salary proposals made by the association during negotiations. Johnson also brings up and argues seven additional legal questions in the end of his brief, most of which were claims made by the board in its answer to the original complaint. In his answer to the teachers suit, board attorney Phil Oberrecht argued that the TFEA came into court with "unclean hands" due to bad faith actions and thus could not seek equitable relief in court. "The important point in this case is not to determine whose hands are clean or whose hands are cleaner than the hands of the other parties, but to require the parties to complete the statutory procedures for negotiations," Johnson argues in his brief. Another argument of Oberrecht's was that there was a financial emergency entitling the board to take action without completing negotiations. Johnson argues that there was no financial emergency. "No evidence was offered by the board to explain why the four thousand dollars necessary to maintain the health insurance plan in its existing form until after the conclusion of negotiations, including fact-finding, would not be financially possible for the district. This is especially significant since the evidence indicates that since December the Association has been trying to obtain a fact-finding date from the board and the board has refused to set a fact-finding date." Oberrecht will file a brief on the board's behalf and then Johnson will be allowed to file a final brief.

Pro sports teams may just get money's worth for big salaries

By HAL BOCK
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — David Whitford has a dollars-and-cents theory about why the San Francisco 49ers beat the Miami Dolphins so decisively in last month's Super Bowl.

As part of his annual examination of player salaries in Sport Magazine, Whitford, the associate editor, compared the paychecks of Miami's touchdown battery of quarterback Dan Marino, and receivers Mark Duper and Mark Clayton against those of San Francisco's Joe Montana, Freddie Solomon and Dwight Clark.

"Together, Marino, Duper and Clayton made a little more than $100,000," Whitford said. "That's less than Clark made by himself."

"You get what you pay for."

Individual salaries are fascinating, but so are the sidelights on the list of sports' capitalists. There is, for example, Whitford's nomination of slugger Dave Kingman as both the Bargain of the Year and the Bust of the Year.

"He was a bust for the (New York) Mets, who owed him $675,000 on his contract when they released him, and had to pay $635,000 of it," Whitford said. "He was a bargain for the (Oakland) A's, who paid him the minimum $40,000 for 35 home runs and 118 runs batted in."

Then there is the case of pitcher LaMarr Hoyt, whose contract includes a throw-in clause of a $25,000 bonus if he finishes the season as the top hitter at his position.

This was not a terrific risk for the Chicago White Sox because of the American League's designated hitter rule, which limited his swings drastically. But Hoyt was traded to National League champion San Diego last December and now he can't wait to renew acquaintances with the batter's box.

Atlanta inherited a strange clause in Rick Cerone's contract when the Braves acquired the veteran catcher from the New York Yankees. Depending on his finish in the Most Valuable Player balloting, Cerone can earn a series of escalating bonuses. That's not terribly unusual. What is, though, is the $100,000 he gets if he never wins the MVP award. He is well along in collecting that payoff.

No. 1 on the Sport list for the second year in a row is Marvyn Marvin Hagler, with a $3.3 million payroll for middleweight championship defenses against Juan Holman and Mustafa Hamsha. Two other boxers follow Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini, for the $3.2 million he earned in two fights, and Thomas Hearns, $2.5 million for three bouts.

The top non-boxer on the list is tennis star Martina Navratilova at $2,173,556, which includes a $1 million bonus for winning four consecutive Grand Slam tournaments.

The list includes 46 $1 million-a-year performers, nine of them cracking that plateau for the first time this year. The most dramatic increase in that group was enjoyed by Cleveland designated hitter Andre Thornton, who cashed in on his free-agent status to jump from $370,000 last year to $1.1 million in 1985.

At the other end of the scale are six athletes — basketball players Sam Bowie and Cedric Maxwell, baseball players Tom Hume, Joe Morgan and Kent Tekulve, and football player Billy Sims — who share the bottom rung of the top 100. Each made $800,000.

Bliss is about to break a long-standing slump

BLISS — Bliss will claim its first Northside Conference boys' basketball championship in at least 20 years here tonight.

The Bears, 14-3 for the season and 11-0, assured themselves of the crown Thursday night with a 60-31 victory over Ketchum-Sun Valley Community School. They host Camas County (3-14 and 2-9) in their regular-season finale this evening.

Times-News records dating back to the 1964-65 season indicate that Bliss has not won a regular-season league championship in boys' basketball in the interim.

Going into Thursday night's game, the Bears led second-place Dietrich by one game. The Blue Devils, 15-4, wrapped up their league schedule on Tuesday by beating Ketchum-Sun Valley, improving their record to 10-2.

Oakley clinches — BA

Regardless of the outcome of Thursday's and Friday's games, the Bears have already nailed down the top seed in next week's District 4 Class A-1 Northside sub-district tournament in Gooding and the first-round bye that goes with it. They did that by assuring themselves of a least a tie for the conference championship and by beating runner-up Dietrich twice during the regular season.

Tonight's 8 p.m. game is a makeup for a game originally scheduled for Tuesday night, but postponed because of heavy snow in Fairfield.

Buhl falls to Rigby; but Madison romps

TWIN FALLS — An all-star performance by Annette Smith punctuated an impressive showing by defending champion Madison Thursday as the eight-team field settled to four hopefuls in the Idaho Class A-2 girls' basketball tournament.

Madison, with Smith hitting 27 points and standing a bunch of college recruiters in line, toppled Post Falls 60-33 after Preston, frittering away an early big lead but rallying for another, had dropped Weiser 51-46. In the evening session, Payette hit the final eight points of the game to outlast spunky St. Maries 52-46 and Rigby wound up by outsting host district champion Buhl 42-34 in the finale.

Indians learned lessons well

BUHL. Unlike many parents, one would never hear Janet Smutny complaining that "I never get to spend time with my kids."

Smutny is surrounded by nearly her entire family every night on the court as the Buhl girls basketball coach.

While two of her daughters, Gina and Gayla, suit up for the Indians, Smutny's husband Stan and her brother Larry Shark join her at the bench as fellow coaches.

A family affair of sorts, and a successful one at that. Since taking the varsity girls' basketball helm six years ago, Smutny has co-coached Buhl into its third straight District 4 Class A-2 title this year and a second consecutive South-Central Idaho Conference crown (the Indians tied with Mountain Home last season). Buhl is currently representing the Fourth District at the state tournament at College of Southern Idaho.

Nonetheless, a successful coaching career that saw the Buhl girls finish 7-1 in SCIC play this year and 16-5 overall before taking the district tournament in three straight games came about more by chance than acute planning.

After a vacancy was left in the position, "some parents went to the superintendent and asked if I would coach," recalls Smutny, a first-grade teacher at Pappewell Elementary School in Buhl. "I told him no . . . I had never even thought about coaching."

Then she got to thinking. Both her son and older daughters had played basketball — she is a mother of five — and she decided if her husband and brother could help, the position just might be a good move. After watching countless games from the parents' section, a move to the bench seemed rather natural.

"It's a good family thing for us," Smutny says of the decision.

"That's what has been the most rewarding — spending time together."

organized, competitive athletics for women at that time, Smutny points out that "in those days, we had intramurals if the boys didn't want the gym at noon."

In addition to her hoop post, Smutny has coached softball for 14 years, working with many of the girls that now play basketball for her. Eight of her 11 varsity players, in fact, went through her softball program as 12- to 15-year-olds.

"That was one of the things that made me interested — a lot of the kids I find coached were playing basketball," says the Buhl native.

Those kids, incidentally, are what Smutny would much rather talk about. She is just as likely to tell of

No repeat of state title for Kimberly

By GREG KILMER
Special to The Times-News

MOSCOW — Kimberly's hopes for a second straight Idaho Class A-3 girls' basketball title ended here Thursday afternoon when the Bulldogs fell to Timberline High School of Weppoo 59-47 in the state tournament's first round.

"They hurt us with their press," Kimberly Coach Terry Dowd said. "We didn't play very well, but we're young. Maybe it was just the excitement of the trip. They did a great job with the fast break. Nobody hurt us all year with it like they did."

The victory earned Timberline, the runner-up team from District 2, a 7:25 p.m. MST appointment with New-Plymouth High in one of the tournament's semifinal games. Grace High will take on the winner of the late Fruitland-Kamiah game in the other semifinal contest.

MOSCOW — Richfield took advantage of its only two leads of the game as it knocked off Clark County High School of Dubois 44-42 here Thursday in the opening round of the Idaho Class A-4 high school girls' basketball tournament.

District 4 runner-up Oakley wasn't so lucky, losing to Greenleaf Friends Academy, 68-38.

Richfield will meet Highland of Craigmont at 9:05 p.m. MST today in one semifinal game. Oakley faces a 10 a.m. MST loser-out contest with Mullan.

Richfield center Pegen Thomas hit the first shot of the contest to give the Tigers their first lead. It wasn't until 47 seconds remained in the contest when Richfield's Joell Hilderbrand sank a turnaround jumper that the Tigers took their final lead.

"All year long, we've started slowly. We're young and this is the state tournament," Tiger Coach Jim Thomas said. "Tiger Coach Jim Thomas said, 'This team knows what to do when it's behind. We get momentum off it.'"

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Roy Tarpley scored 21 points, including 17 in the first half, and Antoine Joubert hit the basket that put Michigan ahead for good late in the game as the third-ranked Wolverines beat No. 11 Iowa 56-52 Thursday night to stay atop the Big Ten Conference basketball standings.

Michigan had to rally from a five-point deficit in the final 4½ minutes to win its 10th straight game and hike its record to 19-3 overall and 10-2 in the Big Ten. Iowa fell 1½ games behind Michigan, dropping to 8-3 in the conference and 19-5 for the season.

Led by Wright and Stokes, Iowa overcame a 29-24 halftime deficit to take a 49-44 lead on a free throw by Andre Banks with 4:51 left.

However, Michigan reserve guard Garde Thompson hit two straight jump shots and Joubert made a short jumper in the lane to give the Wolverines a 50-49 lead with 2:22 remaining. Tarpley followed with his only basket of the second half for a 52-49 edge and the Wolverines never trailed again.

Tarpley was a one-man show in the first half, going 7-for-7 from the field and 3-for-3 at the free throw line. However, Iowa contained him in the second half and he missed his first four shots before finally connecting late in the game.

Rockets' Olajuwon collects 25 rebounds against New York

NEW YORK (AP) — After watching Akeem Olajuwon score 30 points and pull down a National Basketball Association season-high 25 rebounds to lead Houston to a 113-105 victory over the New York Knicks Thursday night, Rockets Coach Bill Fitch shot another salvo in the Rookie of the Year race.

"Let's hold another draft in New York tomorrow and see who's first," Fitch said of Olajuwon's performance. "I love Michael Jordan, but if I were his mother, the best I could do is split the ballot for Rookie of the Year."

Olajuwon was picked first in last year's NBA draft ahead of Sam Bowie, selected by Portland, and Jordan, who went to Chicago.

Olajuwon's latest performance surpassed the previous NBA season high of 24 rebounds by Philadelphia's Moses Malone. His total of 15 rebounds at the offensive end bettered his own NBA season high of 14.

"Naturally, he was such a destructive force," Knicks Coach Hubie Brown said. "He either got fouled or put it back in. He was the main ingredient."

"I went for every rebound," said Olajuwon, who paced Houston to a 73-44 rebounding advantage over the

Pro basketball

Knicks. "If I go up for 10 rebounds, I'm going to get about six of them. It was certainly one of my best games."

The victory, Houston's first in New York in eight tries since 1979, gave the Rockets a 30-21 record, one more triumph than they had all last season in 82 games. The Knicks, 18-35, had their four-game home winning streak snapped as they returned to Madison Square Garden after losing five times on a six-game road trip.

The Rockets led 44-29 in the second quarter but the Knicks cut the deficit to seven at halftime and finally tied the score twice in the fourth period, 92-92 and 94-94. NBA scoring leader Bernard King scored 14 of his 23 points in the final period to pace the New York rally.

Olajuwon and Ralph Sampson, who finished with 22 points, had seven points each in the last eight minutes to keep the Rockets in front. Pat Cummings scored 20 points for New York and Lewis Lloyd had 25 for the Rockets. After the final tie, Olajuwon's basket with 7:27 remaining triggered an 11-3 burst and put Houston ahead for good.

Houston hit 61.5 percent of its shots in the first quarter to open a 36-23 lead. Olajuwon scored 12 points, Lloyd nine and Sampson eight in the period. The Rockets went on to lead by 15 on three occasions in the second quarter before Trent Tucker scored nine points during a 20-11 New York streak that cut Houston's advantage to 55-49.

Cummings drove the length of the court for a layup to send the game in overtime, tied 114-114.

Cummings scored six of the Buck's first eight points in the overtime period, putting Milwaukee up 122-118.

Moncrief sank a turnaround jumper to put the Bucks on top 124-122, but with 56 seconds left Bill Garnett tied the score 124-124.

Paul Pressey sank two free throws to put the Bucks on top for good, 126-124. Then, after a steal by Moncrief, Pressey pumped in another to widen the lead to 128-124.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — George Gervin scored 24 points as the San Antonio Spurs used a stout defense to tie a franchise record for steals in a 131-102 National Basketball Association triumph over the Phoenix Suns Thursday night.

The Spurs made 21 steals in the game to record their third straight victory and keep pace with the division-leading Denver Nuggets. The Spurs had 21 steals in 1976 against Utah and two years later against New Jersey.

Denver 138 Texas 123

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Forward Alex English scored 33 points and then sat out the fourth period as the Denver Nuggets pounded the slumping Kansas City Kings 138-123 in a National Basketball Association game Thursday night.

The victory improved the Midwest Division-leading Nuggets' record to 33-30, while the hapless Kings dropped to 16-45 and lost for the 15th time in their last 18 outings.

After posting a 33-29 lead in the first period, Denver jumped to a 54-42 advantage with 5:18 to play in the half. Then English and the Denver front line went to work, helping the Nuggets outscore Kansas City 23-8 during the remaining time.

The quicker Timberline lineup's full-court pressure turned back the rally with mostly easily breakaways. At the end of the third quarter, Timberline enjoyed a seven-point lead.

Kimberly got no closer in the final stanza, mostly due to the Spartans' Janet Brown and Lori Morris. The two led Timberline attacked with 20 and 14 points, respectively.

After trailing by two points at the end of the first quarter, the Spartans outscored Kimberly 19-9 to open up a 30-19 lead at the half. The Bulldogs countered with three quick field goals to narrow the deficit to 30-25, but that was as close they could get. The quicker Timberline lineup's full-court pressure turned back the rally with mostly easily breakaways. At the end of the third quarter, Timberline enjoyed a seven-point lead.

Kimberly got no closer in the final stanza, mostly due to the Spartans' Janet Brown and Lori Morris. The two led Timberline attacked with 20 and 14 points, respectively.

For the Bulldogs, Audra Urie led the way with 21 points, followed by Pauli Pettelers with 12.

Firth was led by 10 points from guard Amy Orme and forward Debra Reeder scored 11. Firth fell to 10-7 for the year.

Lietzke at 65.
Both Lietzke and Hallberg recorded their scores on the south course, which in the past has been regarded as the more difficult of the two courses that are used for the first two rounds here. But several players said the south course's superior condition had equalized the two this year.
The final two rounds of the Williams, which pays the winner $72,000 out of a total purse of $100,000, are played on the south layout.
"You'll see some very good scores with this weather," said Hallberg, the runner-up to Gary Koch here last year and Williams champion in 1983. "The greens are slow and firm -- you can roll your putts aggressively, and you wind up knocking more in."
Hallberg, 26, bogeyed one hole and hit into the water on another, but compensated with a deadly accurate short game and some critical putts. He used short irons or wedges to chip to within three feet of the hole on five occasions, knocked in birdie putts of 12, 15 and 20 feet and scored an eagle 3 on the 512-yard, par-5 sixth hole.
"I love that golf course. Every time I play there, I feel like I don't lose my patience I'll play well," he said. "I was just going up to the putts and knocking them in. It was very exciting for me."
Pooley, who hasn't won a PGA Tour event since 1980, sank a 30-foot birdie putt on the 170-yard, par-3 17th hole and missed only one green all day en route to his 64, which is one stroke higher than the tournament record set in 1984 by Tommy Nakajima.

Mecom calls off Saints' sale

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — John Mecom Jr., the owner of the New Orleans Saints, called off negotiations Thursday with the Chicago-based family trying to buy his National Football League franchise, yet the patriarch of the Pritzker family said the deal is still alive.
A.N. Pritzker criticized Mecom saying "He's impossible. He's tough to deal with."
However, Pritzker said he believes there's a chance that a deal might go through.
"No, it's not dead. They've rejected the latest offer. I don't think it's dead, but it could be dying," he said.

A's pitcher faces drug charge

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — Oakland A's pitcher Mike Norris, who was involved in a drug-related arrest last year, was booked early Thursday on several offenses including possession of cocaine, the California Highway Patrol reported.
Highway patrolmen stopped a car driven by Norris late Wednesday night on Interstate 580 just south of Oakland, Fred Martin of the Hayward CHP office said.
The pitcher was arrested and held for investigation of driving under the combined influence of alcohol and drugs, resisting arrest, and possession of one-quarter gram of cocaine. Norris also was cited for possession of less than an ounce of marijuana. He was released from custody Thursday.

Sunday's Boise fight still on BOISE (AP) — Ticket sales for Sunday's heavyweight boxing at the Boise State University pavilion are back on.

Employees at the Pavilion offices confirmed on Thursday that sales had resumed, but they wouldn't discuss what had taken place since suspension of the sales was announced a day earlier.
Sales were blocked after Pavilion officials said fight promoter Paul Brown failed to post a $15,000 performance bond. Brown contended he was being punished for the bad performance of a previous promoter, and he said the matter would be resolved by Thursday.
Brown is staging a fight headlined by Sandpoint's Jeff McCracken and has promised guest appearances by boxing greats Muhammad Ali and Archie Moore.

Reds extend Parker's contract

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds signed outfielder Dave Parker to a three-year contract extension Thursday aimed at keeping him with the team for the rest of his major league career.
Parker, 33, has a year left on his current contract, meaning he'll be in a Reds' uniform through the 1988 season. The new contract also has an option for the 1989 season.
Parker was the Reds' first major free-agent acquisition. He left the Pittsburgh Pirates after 11 seasons, returning to his hometown under a two-year contract with the Reds last season that pays him a reported $800,000 a year.
Terms of the new contract weren't disclosed. Parker said it's not the biggest contract of his career, but he's happy that it will keep him in his hometown for probably the rest of his career.

LA JOLLA, Calif. — Veterans Gary Hallberg, Howard Twitty, Tommy Valentine and Don Pooley led a barrage of sub-par rounds with under 64s Thursday and tied for the first round lead at the Inso-Andy Williams San Diego Open golf tournament.
Unseasonably warm weather spurred by a Santa Ana front created near-perfect conditions for the golfers, with temperatures in the upper 70s and virtually no wind at the Torrey Pines Golf Course, located in a canyon and bordered on the west by the Pacific Ocean in this coastal community north of San Diego.

"I don't remember the last time I played golf in February -- anywhere in the United States -- where you didn't even think about taking a sweater with you to the course in the morning," said Bruce Lietzke, who fired a 7-under 65.
"The players responded in kind. Two thirds of the 155 touring professionals butted par in the first round, and it appeared as though a two-round score of 140 or better -- a under par -- might be required to make the cut for the final two rounds."

And she had to do it the hard way. Lloyd broke Graf in the sixth game of the opening set when the 15-year-old West German, who had been so accurate with her groundstrokes, began piling up a bundle of unforced errors. Then, in the seventh game, Lloyd saved two break points -- at 15-40 -- to hold service.
She broke Graf in the eighth game when Graf sent three forehands down the line, all of them wide, including the last two points. And she closed out the set in the 10th game on the fourth set point as Graf, making one of her rare ventures away from the baseline, netted a forehand volley.
On the third set point, Lloyd ended a

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. (AP) — After her customary slow start, second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd crushed West Germany's Steffi Graf 6-4, 6-2 Thursday night to join Martina Navratilova in the women's final of the $1.8 million Lipton International Players Championships tennis tournament.

Don Gill lives the western life on his ranch near Glens Ferry that he portrays in his pencil and ink drawings

Cartoonist parodies the cowboy's life

Don Gill finds ideas for his drawings when he steps out his own back door

By APRIL BISHOP
Times-News correspondent

GLENS FERRY -- From the wild eyed, lop-eared broncs to the skinny, bowlegged cowboys, the cartoons from the pencil of western artist Don Gill earn laughter and rueful grins from most everyone who has ever straddled a horse.

Gill's nationally published cartoon, "Buckaroos," features a motley crew of cowboy characters coping with a multitude of con-created problems. "Fights" mad mama cows and greenbroke cow ponies all come in for a gentle jab from Gill's satirical pencil.

Rich in detail, Gill's cartoons are parodies on the western way of life. He even has a trademark that he works into each scene somewhere in each cartoon is a little mouse, peeking from a crack in the floor, or perhaps from behind a clump of grass.

"I took it out temporarily," grins Gill during an interview at his Elmore County home. "But I put it back in when all the old ladies kept complaining that they couldn't find it."

Gill's cartooning began 12 years ago when, as a high school sophomore, he sent a cartoon to his uncle, Jim Gill, who was working for Simplot. Another employee, veterinarian Baxter Black, saw the cartoon and liked it so much he arranged to have the student artist do calendar illustrations for the Western Stockman feed stores.

Since then, Baxter Black has turned author, and not surprisingly, chose Gill to illustrate his books. The pair teamed up on several books for the Record Stockman Press, a publishing company from Denver, Colo.

The first book, "A Cowboy and His Dog" came out in 1980, followed by "A Rider, A Roper and a Heckuva Windmill Man" in 1981. Both books did very well, according to Gill.

Black's third book, "On The Edge Of Common Sense," teamed Don's artistry with such western cartoonists as Lex Graham, Dick Spencer, Jerry Palen, Herb Mignery and Ace Reid.

"Working with Ace Reid was an honor," says Gill. "I used to try and draw like him when I was a little boy." Herb Mignery and Jerry Palen are also favorites, Gill says.

"We all got together in Denver for a week, to have our picture taken for the book cover, and to do a little promoting," says Gill. "Ace told stories all week, and I got to meet Herb and Jerry Palen, whom I had only talked to over the phone."

Baxter and Don's most recent book, "Doc, While You're Here," has only been out for two months and Gill is hard at work on three more books.

Currently, he is illustrating a book by Jack Miller that features Gill's "serious" side. "Tough and Tender" shows a side of Gill's art that isn't as well known as his cartoons. Most of Gill's non-cartoon work is commissioned, including art for world champion team roper Leo Canarrillo of California. Gill also displays his "serious" work in Brown's Art Gallery of Boise.

Gill is a busy man, with deadlines to meet for cartoons, books, calendars and even magazine covers.

"I usually do the covers for the Tange Country Report of Ogden," says Gill, who also has cartoons ap-

Poet's book looks at love

'The Cleaving'
now available

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS -- Magic Valley poetry lovers wishing for an amorous mental trip can climb aboard William Studebaker's newest collection of poetry, "The Cleaving."

The recently published collection is divided into three groups: "Yearning," "Heartache" and "Fulfillment," titled after the daughters of the Hindu God, Desire. The persona, unlike Buddha, doesn't resist the temptations of love. He experiences lust, amare and agape.

The agape, he discovers, is not the "spiritual love" of romantic or religious persons. It is the acceptance of self, of desire, of woman, of the need to be prepared for love's imbalances.

Studebaker says a male voice speaks all the poems, all of which are addressed to a woman. Initially, she is the object of his experiences -- and the fanciful woman of trite expectations.

But, in the third section, "Fulfillment," the persona realizes that he is the object of her experiences, and she, too, knows lust, amare and agape. He finds himself bound to her as he admits to himself her "self."

In discovering her, he discovers his "self." And thus "The Cleaving" is a paradox: two separate persons bound together by a passionate acceptance of self.

"Cleaving is one of those interesting words with double meaning. It

WILLIAM STUDEBAKER
Watches out for ideas means both 'to cut' and 'to bind.' Studebaker says, explaining the book's title.

The poet says he's dealt with all of the emotions involved in "The Cleaving," but that the setting, characters, conflicts and ideas actually come from watching others, and from gossip and rumors that he's heard.

And, in comparing it with his other published works, Studebaker says this collection is a departure in terms of theme in that the others dealt more with nature, landscape and odd characters.

"This is more from a mythical, universal thing and not tied to a place or time. It's more of a cultural statement than the others," he says, adding that in "The Cleaving" he tied symbols and themes together.

Chamber Players to perform Sunday

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY

Based in Boise, the ensemble was formed in 1982 by experienced musicians Karen Krout, Peter Stemp and Patricia Paulson -- who have performed for many years throughout the country and who currently occupy principal chairs in the Boise Philharmonic Orchestra.

Krout, violinist, in her fourth season as concertmaster of the Boise Philharmonic, is active as a performer and recitalist throughout Idaho. Her solo performances with the Boise Philharmonic, the Boise State University Orchestra and the Great Falls Symphony have been enthusiastically received.

Stemp holds a bachelor's degree from Fresno State College and a master's degree in music from Hart College of Music. Stemp is principal oboist of the Boise Philharmonic Orchestra.

Paulson is in her third season as principal bassoonist with the Boise Philharmonic. Gaining a bachelor's degree from the San Francisco Conservatory of Music, she performed

Guitarist to play at college

JIM GREENINGER

TWIN FALLS -- Hailed by critics as one of the Northwest's most accomplished classical guitarists, Jim Greeninger is bringing his music to the College of Southern Idaho Mini-Auditorium Saturday at 8 p.m.

An Oregon native now living in Aurora, Ore., Greeninger lived in Sun Valley from 1971 to 1976 where he performed and advised for the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities. He also performed with the Sun Valley Orchestra and Sun Valley Trio.

Greeninger is also a guitar builder, having studied under master luthier Jeffrey Elliot of Portland, Ore.

Greeninger says he builds his own instruments, combining old and new concepts to create the best possible guitar, acoustically and visually.

Greeninger has been absent from the concert stage for two seasons, using the time for research and designing of his instruments and to engineer and record an album.

The Mini Auditorium is located on campus in the Vocational-Technical Building. Admission is $2 general audience and free to seniors and students with activity cards.

Photographer captures beauty of Idaho

By BARBARA NEWEIRT
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM -- Wood River Valley photographer David R. Stoecklein leads an active life.

A self-described "workaholic," the nationally known photographer works seven days a week -- sunup to sundown on photographic assignments that may end up as a magazine cover for a skiing magazine, in a fashion layout or even in National Geographic.

Stoecklein's photos have appeared in Skiing magazine, Outside, Backpacker, Skiera Directory, Sun Valley magazine as well as provided illustrations to sell skis, ski gear and accessories, cameras, fishing rods and hunting gear.

He has also contributed largely to the State of Idaho's tourism advertising brochures and has had photographs appear in National Geographic.

"My work is very versatile," says Stoecklein. "One day I may be shooting a ski shot, the next day I may be in Arizona doing a desert spread, and the next day I may be back shooting a fashion production."

The 35-year-old Stoecklein owns and operates his photographic

David R. Stoecklein's work has been widely published business from an office based in Ketchum and has a staff of three full-time assistants and three part-time assistants. He has some 500,000 photos in circulation with a large portion of his collection on file with outlets in New York City, Los Angeles, Seattle, Salt Lake City and Tokyo, Japan.

"On any given day there are approximately 10,000 photos in the mail, either going to or coming from customers," says Stoecklein, the sole photographer for his business.

In his book, "Sun Valley Signatures," Stoecklein captured on film some of the beauty of southern Idaho's scenic areas, including the Wood River Valley, Copper Basin, Stanley Basin, the desert lands south of here and the Ingerman Valley. Published by Chapter One Bookstore in 1982, the book has proved quite successful.

"The money is the least important. It is the type of book that people can send to their friends or relatives who live far away and say this is how I am living in the Sun Valley area," says Stoecklein.

The book was the culmination of three years' work for Stoecklein, a pictorial image of what the area means to him. As an avid outdoorsman, he accesses remote areas of the back country as well as portraying familiar scenes in Ketchum and Sun Valley.

Stoecklein is currently working on a second book to be titled Sun Valley Signatures II. The book will go to press in July and is expected to be in book stores by November.

Stoecklein says one of the reasons for compiling a second book on this area is he feels he has "grown a lot" since the publication of the first book.

"My imagery has changed a lot in the way I look at things, in the way I look at light. Also, I have purchased more sophisticated equipment that enables me to be more creative," he says.

Sun Valley Signatures II will be bigger in size and volume than the first Sun Valley Signatures. It will be a hardcover publication rather than softcover.

Gill

pearing regularly in more than a dozen newspapers in the Midwest.
"I'm usually behind," adds Gill, who will most likely be getting even more calls for his work since an article featuring him recently appeared in the Western Horseman, a national magazine for horse lovers.
Gill's wife, Ginny, handles the business end of his career.
"She's the one who chews on me to get things done," he says with a grin.
When trying to remember just when he did start drawing, Gill sits still for a moment, then grins again and says, "Tell, I don't know. I used to keep my mom about broke buying papers."
Gill says he draws his inspiration for his cartoons from real life.
"You live 'em, if you have my kind of luck," he says.
Born into a "cow" family, Gill was raised around horses and cows, dealing daily with the vagaries of the cattle business. So when the wall of ideas runs dry, Gill says he just goes "outside and does a little work."
Gill and wife live quietly with their children, Jessica, Sarah and Wesley, on their ranch at Paradise Valley, near King Hill.

On their 160 acres, the Gills raise registered herefords and Brahmas, which furnish Don with that many more ideas. He claims the bulls are especially fond of Ginny's oatmeal cookies.
Usually every evening Gill's armed with his trusty Eversharp pencil and Bristol pad, loitering in his recliner, drawing.
"I work mostly at night, in my chair. I like to be comfortable," says Gill. He prefers pencil and ink, but would eventually like to get into bronzes. Right now he says he doesn't have the time to work in oils, even though he would like to.
Getting up, Gill heads out to work his bulls and get his chores done. His luck holds and he comes trudging back into the house with an armload of frozen water hose to be thrown in the bathtub to thaw.
Ginny looks skyward with a heavy sigh, then laughs.
"Sometime" those frozen water hoses will be in a cartoon, and somewhere in the scene will be a little mouse, with a big grin.

Studebaker

Studebaker, who currently is assistant professor of English at the College of Southern Idaho, has also experienced many other occupations including being a firefighter, host-man, miner, irrigator, cowboy and carpenter.

He says those jobs influence some of his poetry but not "The Cleaving." However, the geographical regions where those jobs took him did play a role in this latest collection whenever he would shift to figurative, metaphorical language.

The poet says that when he begins a book he "goes for the ride" as opposed to having "the entire collection already put together in his mind." It always leave myself open for inspiration and change," he says, pointing out that he actually called "The Cleaving" back from the publisher to add structure to it.

"The Cleaving" is available from Continuum Press, Spaulding Hall, 1430 Campus, 8th Ave. & 6th Street, Lewistown, ID 83501. List price is $6.95 plus $1 shipping for the first book, $6 for each additional book.

part of doing his work," says Stoecklein. "Doing a book is one of the few times I get to see a project through. It's a labor of love."
Stoecklein was raised and lived in Piltzsburg, Pa. until he moved to Mammoth, Calif. in 1970. He began peddling his photos of local scenic door-to-door to area motels.
After moving to Alta, Utah, in 1971 Stoecklein began selling postcards. A year later this evolved into the formation of Mountain Graphics, which published a line of ski posters, post cards and note cards. The business grew to employ some 35 people and supplied over 2,000 retail stores, including Sears and J.C. Penney's.
Stoecklein says at this point, the business "grew too big."
The photographer says he found himself spending all his time managing the company instead of doing the photographic work he loved. So he sold the business and moved to Sun Valley in 1979.

Now he takes all the shots by himself with the organizational help of his assistants and support from his wife, Mary.
Stoecklein says his work places him in all types of conditions. One production he did required the renting of live wolves and mountain lions. During the shooting, Stoecklein says he got too close to one mountain lion and suddenly found himself in the lion's arms. Fortunately, the lion merely cuddled and purred at him, he adds.
Being afraid of heights, Stoecklein vividly remembers an incident which happened while on an assignment for North Face Ski clothing.
"A helicopter was used to take the skiers, crew and myself to an unskied area in the back country. Getting off the helicopter, we jumped into arm-pit-deep powder snow and proceeded to set up a base tent. The helicopter was unable to land on the snow, so I had to climb back aboard the skis of the helicopter to get into it."

"Suddenly the wind from the pro-

More people putting bite on

PITTSBURGH (AP) — More people are biting other people than ever before, and in some cases even themselves. The affection is behind the toothy assaults, a doctor says.
There were 218 reported cases of people biting other people in Pittsburgh in 1984, said Dr. Guy Catone, director of oral surgery at Allegheny General Hospital. The number has risen about 10 percent each year since 1970, he said.
Catone said in about 10 cases each year, the bites resulted from too much passion between lovers.

"Lovers want to do this... bite each other's earlobe and that sort of thing," he said. "I know that people think it's humorous at first — I know I did. But it is a real problem. Somebody will bite somebody's lip off or a nose."
Most reported human biting, however, takes place in street fights or other violent attacks.

'The Killing Fields' is shockingly realistic

By The Los Angeles Times

To assist parents in evaluating movies for family viewing, the Los Angeles Times lists current movies and indicates areas of content (theme, language, sex, violence) that may be inappropriate for the very young or impressionable. MPAA or the Times' ratings are in parentheses.

Ratings are by the Motion Picture Association. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times reviewers.

THE FALCON AND THE SNOWMAN (R) nudity and language. A thoughtful, intensely dramatic, superbly acted depiction of one of the most baffling spy stories of recent times. This is not the stuff of John Carre and Robert Ludlum. "The Falcon and the Snowman" concerns real people in familiar settings, driven to desperate deeds almost by whim. John Schlesinger ("Darling," "Sunday, Bloody Sunday") is admittedly drawn to "people on the fringe." With "The Falcon and the Snowman" the director has a combination as perfect as Dustin Hoffman and Jon Voight in "Midnight Cowboy." Timothy Hutton as the falconer Boyce is the strong center of the film with a brilliant portrayal of a confused sense of rectitude. Sean Penn has the more flamboyant role as the dope-dealing Lee, and he is nothing less than sensational.

THE KILLING FIELDS (R) Shockingly realistic wartime violence. This story of an enduring friendship and the will to survive is utterly grippingly mesmerizing. Set against the backdrop of the civil war in Cambodia in the mid-1970s, it is a film to search out and share. It must simply not be missed. With Sam Waterston and Haing Ngor.

A PASSAGE TO INDIA (PG) Adult situations. This is a civilized, affecting, humorous, surprising, ironic, intelligent film. Big in scope and location, it is at the same time an intense six character drama. In this stunningly fine production, director David Lean has served novelist E.M. Forster beautifully. The casting is as nearly perfect as you could hope for: Alec Guinness as Prof. Godbole, Victor Banerjee as Dr. Aziz, Judy Davis as Adela Quested, Peggy Ashcroft as Mrs. Moore, Nigel Havers as Ronny Heasley and James Fox as Fielding.

PROTOCOL (PG) Goldie Hawn is likable even if this movie is not. She's talented, sexy, funny and smart. Her Sunny Davis, a cocktail waitress who stumbles into the world of high-stakes international politics, starts out pretty batly and then swerves constantly between being a space cadet and a moral exemplar, a dodo and a potential national savior. Director Herbert Ross, when not campaigning for his star's canonization, directs her affairs with his usual suave athleticism.

Paper plates may go to war

HAMPTON, Va. (AP) -- U.S. soldiers on future battlefields may eat from camouflaged paper plates rather than the familiar metal mess kits, Army officials say.

But there are still problems in developing the idea -- such as how to dispose of the plates without giving away clues to the enemy, said Capt. Edward Crosbie.

Crosbie, who is assigned to the Combat Development Directorate of the Army's Training and Doctrine Command headquarters at Fort Monroe, said a large-scale test using paper plates and plastic utensils may be conducted in a simulated wartime environment soon.

The Army occasionally uses paper plates on maneuvers, but they have never been used in combat.

Paper products for a combat environment would carry camouflage designs, but if not deeply buried or made to self-destruct they could still tell enemy intelligence gatherers a great deal about opposing forces.

'Falcon and Snowman' superbly acted

By BOB THOMAS
The Associated Press

"The Falcon and the Snowman" (R - nudity and language) is a thoughtful, intensely dramatic, superbly acted depiction of one of the most baffling spy stories of recent times.

Based on Robert Lindsay's best seller, it tells the story of Christopher Boyce and Dautton Lee, young Californians who almost light-heartedly sold vital defense data to the Soviets.

Fellow altar boys and close friends, Boyce and Lee grew up with all the advantages of affluent suburban Los Angeles. A thoughtful young man with a hobby of falconry, Boyce dropped out of priesthood studies to study law. Between semesters he worked at a defense firm in an absurdly lax secret-intelligence room.

Angered by revelations of CIA misdeeds abroad, especially in Australia, Boyce decides to subvert the American effort by selling details of intelligence-gathering satellites to the Soviet Union. His accomplice is Dautton Lee, who is already in trouble with the law over his drug dealings. Lee becomes courier to the Soviet embassy in Mexico City.

This is not the stuff of John Carre and Robert Ludlum. "The Falcon and the Snowman" concerns real people in familiar settings, driven to desperate deeds almost by whim. That's what makes the film so compelling.

As with Schlesinger films, the rest of the cast is impeccable. David Sebel is especially fine as the Russian intelligence officer, exasperated at dealing with such feckless amateurs yet anxious to acquire important secrets.

What's what

Common to almost all everywhere, I'm told, is the wasteful little toting, however hopeless a dream. It's for the days of old when the pastor was the center of his small society, the intellectual and spiritual source from which all the villagers, rich and poor, drew some sort of sustenance and strength.

Q. Who was the first licensed pilot to occupy the White House?
A. Dwight Eisenhower.

Men tend to get angry at things to know what else can be done. One significant thing, at least, and our Chief Prognosticator expects it: Link airports to city centers with unnumbered overhead monorail trolleys. No, not those little rascals that race in and out of the airport parking lots, but lengthy monorails that network the suburbs. Plane crashes kill fewer air passengers than do car crashes and from airports.

MIDGETS

Q. How many methods of computing interest are there?
A. At least 54 widely used methods, according to the American Bankers Association. Probably about 100, counting the more obscure. Two accounts, paying exactly the same rate of interest, can differ by as much as 171 percent over six months, studies show.

You might while away a little time at stoptops, too, by counting the kinds of people automatically stereotyped with what's now called a "poor image." Skip the usual minorities; their plights are known. No. 1 on this list of those handicapped by less well recognized prejudice are "stepmothers." Any others?

Johnson scores another Broadway hit

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
The Associated Press

NEW YORK -- When Van Johnson was big box office, in the bobby sox days of World War II, he'd flourish on Thursday morning and start uniform and with a different co-star.

"If it wasn't June, it was Esther. If it wasn't Esther, it was Judy," he says. "I was very busy."

Today, at 68, Johnson, with much of his red hair turned to silver, is again on the front lines. He's recently taken over the role of Georges, the nightclub owner, in "La Cage aux folles," last year's biggest musical hit. Although he starred in the London company of "The Music Man" 25 years ago, this is his first leading part in a major musical on Broadway.

'I was scared to death. Every night before I go on, I still am. Every performer is nervous. You want to do your best.'

—Van Johnson

"I was a child of divorce, so my father used to give me a dime to get me out of the house. It was pure escapism because I missed my mother. I thought everybody should stick together," he says. "I wondered how you got to be one of those people up on the screen and thought maybe I was born to give that pleasure to other people."

His other passion was going up to Providence every year with his father to see the extravaganza presented by the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus. He put on shows in the backyard and set up a trapeze.

"I used to do what was called a muscle grinder, flipping yourself over the top of a bar. Nearly broke my neck," he says. "I used to write all the circus stars. That's why I try to answer all my fan letters because those people all answered mine."

But he knew he had to come to New York and he arrived in 1935 at age 19 with $5 in his pocket. His first job was in "Entre Nous," a musical revue at the Cherry Lane Theatre in Greenwich Village.

"We never got paid but it didn't seem to matter," Johnson says. "It was sweet nostalgia. No heavy turnover."

He did vaudeville, burlesque -- appearing with Bud Abbott and Lou Costello -- and nightclubs. He danced in the chorus at the Roxy, one of the last of New York's lavish movie palaces. And he eventually ended up in "New Faces of '36," another revue that featured some talented newcomers with names like Henry Fonda, Imogene Coca and Gypsy Rose Lee.

Johnson went into Rodgers and Hart's college musical "Too Many Girls" in 1939 and understudied one of the leads, a Cuban bongo player named Desi Arnaz.

"Desi was late one day for a matinee. So they put this dark Cuban makeup on me. Can you imagine me playing the bongos?" he says. Fortunately, Arnaz showed up, and Johnson didn't have to play them.

The following year, he was tapped for another Rodgers and Hart show: "Pal Joey," and stayed with it until Hollywood beckoned. A screen test at Columbia Pictures didn't turn out well and neither did a second, sometime later, at Warner Bros. Johnson was ready to return to New York, but another friend, a young comedian named Lucille Ball, persuaded him to meet with an executive at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The third time he was lucky.

At first, the studio dyed his hair black and covered up the freckles, but with his appearance in an episode of a short subject series called "Crime Does Not Pay," Johnson was on his way to movie stardom.

It was at MGM that Johnson flourished as one of the brightest lights in a stable of stars that included Spencer Tracy, Clark Gable, Lana Turner, Judy Garland, Elizabeth Taylor, June Allyson, Esther Williams and Greer Garson.

The pictures poured out -- such popular films as "A Guy Named Joe," "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo," "Weekend at the Waldorf" and "In The Good Old Summertime."

"MGM was the best of the studios -- the cream because its founder, Louis B. Mayer, had the best taste. The product had a beautiful Tiffany quality to it. Mr. Mayer loved troubles on a plush carpet," Johnson says.

It's that kind of style and glamour he says brought him to "La Cage aux folles."

"Those songs! Those beautiful, talented people! Those fabulous costumes! I am in never-never land," Johnson says. "It's absolutely magical."

Rare Toulouse-Lautrec works shown

By MARILYN AUGUST
The Associated Press

PARIS -- No one stepped higher or showed more shining petticoats than "La Goulue," the black-stockinged queen of cancan who thrilled dance hall audiences at Montmartre's Moulin Rouge during the turn of the century.

The now-faded panels, which stand 10 feet high and 12 feet wide, are part of a special exhibition titled "La Baraque de la Goulue" ("The House of La Goulue"). It is on display at the Musee d'Art et d'Essai until March 5.

"La Danse au Moulin Rouge" shows the glamorous femme fatale with her partner, Valentin le Desserteur, while "La Goulue au Almee" -- in belly-dancing oriental costume -- reflects Paris' infatuation with the Orient.

The show also features numerous rare photographs, posters, book illustrations, advertisements and other paintings that bring to life the gaiety and titillation of music and dance hall acts. There are even young women in low-cut, tight-fitting bodices hiking up their ruffled skirts to reveal lacy undergarments and long-legged beauties doing splits as a charmed audience looks on.

The 80-year-old murals have been fragile, and exorbitant insurance costs prohibit them from traveling, museum officials said.

Toulouse-Lautrec was not the only artist to take up the novel art of poster-making, but critics agree that with his uncanny use of black combined with broad spreads of pure color, he was clearly the best.

"They were painted very quickly, probably outdoors," said Isabelle Calin, a museum expert who collaborated on the show. "Toulouse-Lautrec used a poor quality, rough canvass which absorbed a lot of the paint, which is why the panels look so faded and dull."

Paintings of mystery master to be shown in Amsterdam

By PAMELA WILLIAMS
The Associated Press

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands -- Art historians have gleaned much of what they know about the life of the affluent 500 years ago from the work of one artist, whose detailed depiction of that time will be exhibited at this city's famed Rijksmuseum.

But what the experts don't know is who the artist was.

The artist as been known through the ages as "The Master of the Print Room" or the "Master of the Housebook." He or she is believed to be responsible for about 120 prints and paintings dating from about 1470 to 1500.

women dominating men by being coyly manipulative -- a more complex view of relations between the sexes than was usually seen in the art of that time.

"Early in the 16th century, there was a big movement on the part of women to gain power, which is made clear by the content of the prints," said Kok in a recent interview with The Associated Press.

He holds the title Keeper of Prints at the Rijksprentenkabinet Dutch for National Print Room, the largest collection of the master's work.

In one of the master's drawings, an elderly woman is seen buying the love of a young man. In another, King Solomon is shown paying to a forbidden Idol to gain the love of one of his concubines.

Yet another drawing shows a smiling Delilah as she cuts off Samson's hair while he sleeps.

Because of the strong roles women were given in the prints, they have become a focus of study by women's groups in recent years, according to Kok.

The "Master of the Print Room" is also known as "Master of the Housebook" because pen drawings attributed to the artist are contained in a collection of drawings by several late medieval artists, who are known to art historians as "the Housebook."

Those drawings are being lent to the exhibit from a "German princely collection," according to the museum.

Former boyfriend now woman's priest

DEAR ABBY: I loved this boy (now a man) with all my heart all through school. "John" loved me, too, but we never went all the way. I would have, but John was stronger than I was, and he never let it happen.

He was an altar boy and dedicated to his religion. I'm also Catholic and thought that one day we would marry. Instead, John went to the seminary to become a priest. He was ordained and assigned to a parish out of town. In the meantime, I got married and had a family.

Sixteen years later, John moved back to town, and now he is my parish priest!

I still have strong feelings for him and I think he feels the same about me, too, although he hardly ever looks me in the eye. He took my confession twice, but I never confessed the sin that was really in my heart (my desire for him).

The temptation is terrible, and the guilt about my feelings is weighing heavily on my conscience. I cannot deny my feelings. I don't want to hurt John, myself or my family. Please help me.

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

—A SINNER IN MY HEART
DEAR SINNER: Reduce the temptation by changing to another parish. It would be a kindness to John, and a favor to yourself.

DEAR ABBY: My best friend, "Denny," was engaged to be married three months ago, so I threw a party for him that turned out to be a big mistake.

I hired "Salome," an exotic dancer, to entertain at this party the night before the wedding, and Denny ended up in bed with her. To make a long story short, Denny's fiancée heard about it and called off the wedding.

Now Denny is making plans to marry Salome. My question: Should I give Denny another shot?

DEAR LESTER: I vote no, but if you do, don't hire another exotic dancer. Ask Salome to dance — and retain the seventh veil for her wedding.

DEAR ABBY: I have some advice that could save a lot of people a lot of heartbreak. Recently my father died. He was an attorney and most people would consider him a wealthy man.

I have one sister who has a history of emotional problems and is marginally employed. My father left her enough money to buy a house and be assured that she would never have to "worry." He left my mother this rest.

He left me not so much as a bubbly gum wrapper? If people knew this I'm sure they would be shocked because I had always been the "apple of his eye."

I am so hurt and humiliated, I can't see straight. My husband has a decent job, but we're far from rich. Every other paycheck goes to the house. You know what mortgage rates are these days — and our car has 90,000 miles on it. Frankly, we could have used a little something. Anyway, please tell your readers this: If you're planning to exclude one of your children from your will on the grounds that he or she is apparently self-sufficient, at least say something about the person in your will — not that "so-and-so is already well-provided for." And please leave that child SOMETHING — even if it's only something of sentimental value. It will make a lot of difference in the way you are remembered.

—SHUT OUT
DEAR SHUT OUT: Good advice. Thanks for a valuable item.

Radical mastectomies may not be necessary

NEW YORK (AP) — A study of 2,200 women with breast cancer shows that those who undergo simple removal of the tumor and radiation treatment do just as well as women who undergo disfiguring mastectomy surgery, according to Newsweek magazine.

The study of women treated in more than 100 U.S. cancer centers was conducted by the National Surgical Adjuvant Breast Project. Newsweek reported in its Feb. 18 edition.

The women were diagnosed as having tumors no larger than 4 centimeters in diameter and, for the most part, showed little or no cancer spread to lymph nodes under the arm.

Women in the control group underwent a total mastectomy, resulting in loss of the entire breast, together with removal of the lymph nodes. The others received a "lumpectomy," in which the tumor and a margin of tissue around it were removed, along with the lymph nodes.

Half of the lumpectomy group received five weeks of postoperative radiation therapy. The women have been followed for three to seven years.

The head of the study, Dr. Bernard Fisher of the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine, has given at least two reports on the study's findings at medical conferences, the magazine said.

Newsweek reported that Fisher told the conferences that 92 percent of women who underwent lumpectomies together with radiation were free of cancer after five years. Fisher reportedly noted that this figure compares favorably with the outcome for the women who had mastectomies, the magazine said.

Among those women who had lumpectomies without radiation, however, only 74 percent were free of cancer after five years, the magazine said.

Fisher declined to discuss the study's findings in a telephone interview with The Associated Press on Sunday, saying he did not want to break trust with the New England Journal of Medicine. He said the Journal would publish the study's findings in its March 14 issue.

Fisher, in the Sunday conversation, would not disclose the recovery rate the study found for women who had undergone mastectomies.

"That's the heart of the study" and obviously I would be breaching my trust (with New England Journal) if I were to discuss it now," he said. "All of the details will be in the article."
