Legislature leaves cities strapped for cash

By QUANE KENYON The Associated Press

BOISE — The 1985 session of the Idaho Legislature ended with financially strapped local governments again denied the revenue-raising authority they have sought for a dozen years.

"Few gains, few losses," is the terse assessment of the session rendered by Association of Idaho Cities Director Jim Weatherly.

"It was a short session — and it had a long list of unresolved issues," he added.

For the 12th straight session, local government asked the Idaho Legislature for some sort of authority to impose local taxes, or to make local decisions on revenue matters, Weatherly said.

And for the 12th straight year, the Legislature refused to act — although the cities and counties did make some gains.

Gov. John Evans said he's "astounded" at the Legislature's attitude toward local government, since many legislators support local control as a philosophy.

"They preach local control when it's convenient. When it comes to action, they refuse to abide by their own philosophy," Evans said. Many city, county and other local officials went before the Legislature this year, asking for more revenue.

Since the 1978 1 percent property tax initiative, and following legislative action imposing a limit on budget increases, Idaho's fiscal units of government have been caught in a squeeze.

Tax revenue has been sharply restricted. But costs haven't. The result has been cutbacks in services and in spending for things like street maintenance.

The officials told legislators during the session that reserves have been used up, and maintenance has been put off as long as possible.

The House responded, passing a variety of legislation designed to let local officials raise taxes. Most of the bills would have required voter approval.

But all died in the Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee, which is developing a reputation as the Senate's "burial ground" much the same as the House Ways and Means Committee.

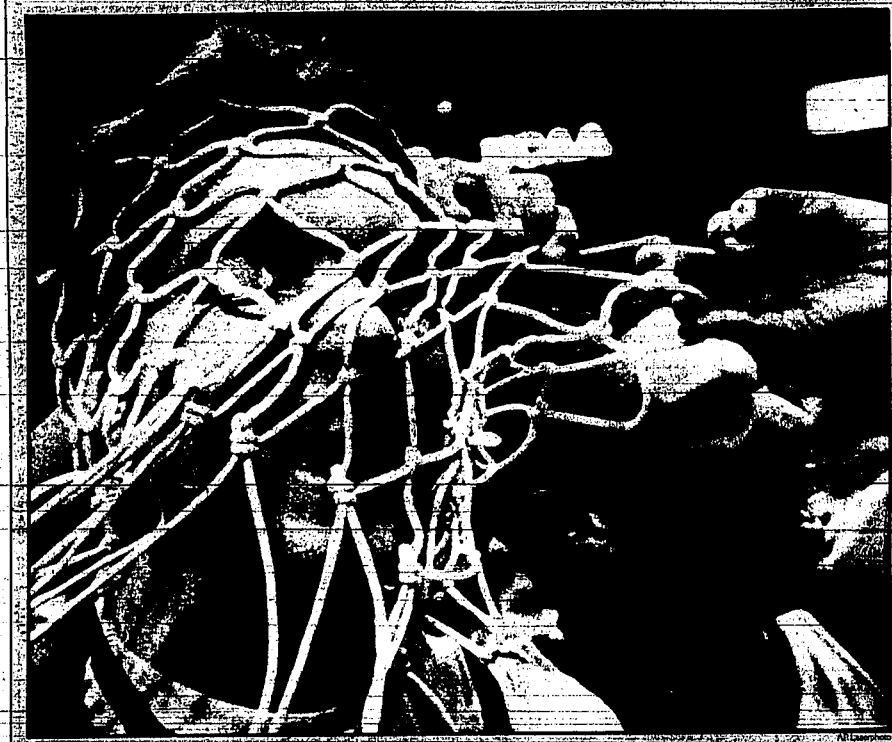

House Speaker Tom Stivers thinks the House didn't do a bad job sorting out tax proposals last session. He notes that the Revenue and Taxation Committee considered, but didn't approve, 31 bills that would have increased taxes one way or another.

And he notes that in the 1984 session, cities and counties got a big boost when the Legislature approved revenue-sharing of sales tax money. That meant $15 million extra to the 240 Idaho cities and counties.

Weatherly agrees that was "significant relief," but says if the federal government drops its revenue-sharing program, local governments will lose ground.

White House lobbies hard for MX votes

Weapons system faces close contests this week in House

By MIKE SHANAHAN The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As the House nears two crucial votes on the MX missile this week, Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. says the White House is "pulling out every stop" to gain final congressional approval for the long-range strategic weapon.

Supporters and opponents agree that the two MX votes, on Tuesday and Thursday, will be extremely close.

"It's a half dozen (votes) one way or the other," O'Neill, D-Mass., said in a weekend interview.

The Senate gave its approval for the MX in twin 55-45 votes last week.

A handful of freshman House members who have never voted in the decade-old fight over the MX, a few Republicans and some veteran Democrats influenced by Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, will decide the outcome, according to congressional sources on both sides of the issue.

Aspin, a Pentagon critic through most of his House career, now supports the production of a limited number of MXs as necessary for the success of the Geneva arms control talks between the United States and the Soviet Union.

That argument is put forth by President Reagan, who called home his chief arms control negotiator, Ross Kappelman, for last-minute lobbying. Kappelman, a Democrat, is meeting with Democratic House members on Monday to emphasize the president's arguments.

"That vote is very, very close," White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan said on NBC television's "Meet the Press" Sunday.

The reason is that the House leadership, although they said it was not going to be partisan issue, started lobbying against the MX and that has made our job a lot more difficult in corraling the Democratic support that we need to go with the Republicans in the House.

Some MX opponents in the House say privately they believe that Reagan would have suffered a major congressional defeat if Aspin had decided the weapon was not needed.

As chairman of the armed services panel, Aspin is expected to pull some House members into supporting resolutions providing $1.5 billion for 21 additional MXs, part of the 100 missiles Reagan wants to add to the U.S. nuclear arsenal.

"There's no question that Aspin is a powerful individual as chairman of the committee," said MX opponent O'Neill. "He's highly regarded and highly respected on the field-of-arguments. He's got a following out there."

O'Neill has been privately criticized by MX foes who believe he should lead the fight against the missile more forcefully, but the speaker said the issue is "a matter of conscience." See CONGRESS on Page A2

Pentagon to order military doctors to get state licenses

By NORMAN BLACK The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon's top health official, armed with a survey showing roughly 20 percent of all military physicians don't have valid state medical licenses, has drafted a directive that would require all active-duty doctors to secure such accreditation.

A state license has never been mandatory for physicians who move directly from medical school into military service. That would change under the new directive, which will ultimately affect more than 3,500 military physicians, dentists and clinical psychologists.

Dr. William Mayer, the assistant secretary of defense for health affairs, informed the surgeons general of the Army, Navy and Air Force of his decision last week during a closed-door meeting. He agreed to discuss the matter late Friday, saying he expected his draft directive to be signed by Defense Secretary Frank C. Weinberger and take effect by summer.

Physicians already working for the Defense Department will be given a grace period of up to three years to gain the accreditation, depending on their current assignment and whether they're posted overseas or aboard ships. The directive will apply immediately to new doctors seeking to enter the service, however.

Mayer asserted the overall quality of military medical care "is in my judgment superior to the national community standard."

He also noted that military physicians have never been required by law or regulation to secure a state license "if a person comes directly

Barnes claims Congress 'misled' about U.S. actions in Nicaragua

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A leading congressional critic of U.S. policies in Central America asked the Reagan administration on Sunday for assurances that the CIA is not using a Honduran anti-terrorist training program as a mask for unauthorized aid to Nicaraguan rebels.

"Repeatedly the Congress has been misled about activities in Central America," said Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., chairman of the House Western Hemisphere affairs subcommittee. "We need to make sure this is not just another example of a mechanism to get involved in the covert war."

If the program, which Barnes said has not been referred to his committee, is a true effort to "help friendly governments fight terrorism," it will have the full support of Congress, he added.

According to a report in Sunday editions of The Washington Post, the Central Intelligence Agency and the U.S. Army's Green Berets are teaching soldiers in Honduras and a dozen additional countries how to fight airplane hijackers and other terrorists. U.S. aid for the Lebanese government's anti-terrorist program has been made public, but assistance elsewhere is being kept secret because countries don't generally want it known they are receiving help from America for political reasons. They also don't want to tip off terrorists about countermeasures.

The appropriate House and Senate committees have been briefed on the program and have been told that the anti-terrorist training in Honduras is being kept separate from CIA work on behalf of rebels trying to overthrow the Marxist government of neighboring Nicaragua, according to unidentified officials quoted by the Post.

Chinese boat to go home

Defection not factor in violence

The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — The government announced Monday that it would allow a Chinese torpedo boat and its crew to return home and said investigators concluded that the violence which left six crewmen dead was not politically motivated.

The torpedo boat had drifted into South Korean waters on Friday with the dead sailors on board and was towed to a port on the west coast.

Government spokesman Lee Won-hong said Monday that all 13 surviving crewmen, including two who were wounded in the clash on board, had said they wanted to return to China. He made no specific mention of reports that some of the crew might have been trying to defect but said the clash was started by two disgruntled crewmen.

Lee said the return of the boat and crew members would be carried out as soon as the vessel was repaired and refueled, and the two wounded men were able to travel. Earlier reports had said they were not seriously hurt.

There was no mention of the six dead, but it was assumed the bodies would be returned at the same time. The Seoul government had been investigating the incident since the boat and crew were taken Saturday to the Kusanan, a port 123 miles south of Seoul. Talks between the two governments, which do not have diplomatic relations, also were reported going on through channels in Hong Kong.

Lee said the investigation found that two crew members reportedly had grievances against their superiors and started a fight while the vessel was taking part in a training exercise.

Blood tests show AIDS
BOISE (AP) — Idaho public health officials are offering free blood screening tests that will show exposure to acquired immune deficiency syndrome, authorities said.

"It's not a test for AIDS," emphasized Dr. Charles Brokopp, state epidemiologist for the Idaho Health and Welfare Department. "If you're tested and it's positive, it doesn't mean you have AIDS. It doesn't even mean you're going to get AIDS."

The test simply shows whether a person has been exposed to and infected by the virus associated with AIDS, he said. The disease itself is not diagnosed until the victim develops some other disease which indicates the body's immune system has been destroyed by the virus.

Insurance firms to rescue
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A group of major insurance companies will fund a proposal this week to provide $1 billion worth of temporary insurance for the private insured savings and loan associations, according to a published report Sunday.

State officials have been working with the insurance industry on the plan that is to be presented to the group by Marsh and McLennan, the world's largest insurance brokerage consulting firm, The Cincinnati Enquirer said.

Robert McAllister, the new superintendent of the state Division of Savings and Loans, refused to comment on the report Sunday.

Drug use at work increasing
NEW YORK (AP) — An increasing number of people are using drugs at work, at the expense of their job performance, and would become heavier users if they were given a general raise, according to a survey of drug hotline callers.

Ninety-two percent of the callers said they sometimes worked while under the influence of drugs, and 64 percent said their performance suffered as a result, said Dr. Arnold M. Washon, director of research for the 800-COCAINE-Helpline, which conducted the survey.

Goetz eager to testify
NEW YORK (AP) — Bernard Goetz "can hardly wait" to testify about the shooting of four youths on a subway train and would be able to appear before a grand jury of the city on Monday after a deadline imposed by the jurors, his lawyers said Sunday.

The offer of a Tuesday appearance by Goetz will be presented to the grand jury Monday, said Mary deBourbon, a spokesman for Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau.

Goetz's lawyers previously had said their schedules would not permit them to be with their client before the grand jury until Friday, the day the grand jury's term is due to expire. Prosecutors had said that would be too late.

Soviet diplomat defects
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A Soviet diplomat who disappeared on March 17 during his daily morning jog in a New Delhi park has defected to the United States, leaving his wife and daughter behind, India confirmed Sunday.

Igor Gezha, a third secretary in the embassy's information department, left India and was granted political asylum in the United States, a spokesman for the Indian External Affairs Ministry said. Gezha, 37, was due to return to Moscow later this year.

Israel denies CBS request
JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's police minister said Sunday there was no reason for a formal inquiry into the killing of two CBS television crewmen by Israeli soldiers because "there is nothing unusual to be investigated."

A CBS vice president, Ernest Elsner, said during a visit here that the deaths Thursday of the cameraman and soundman, both Lebanese, "may simply have been a tragic error."

The network had said earlier, in a letter to Prime Minister Shimon Peres, that the tank fire that killed the two men was "unprovoked" and had called for a government inquiry.

At least 21 hurt as gas explosion rocks Los Angeles shopping area

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A gas explosion blew the front of a discount clothing store Sunday, sparking a fire and injuring at least 21 people, three seriously, and leaving two people missing, officials said.

Fearing additional explosions, authorities evacuated hundreds of people in a block area surrounding the Ross Dress-for-Less store, where at least 75 people were shopping when the blast hit shortly before 5 p.m.

Officials found no natural gas leak, but one from a sewer, which smelled as if it came from a sewer, in a store across the street.

The explosion at the Ross store, a block from the Hollywood's popular Farmers Market, shattered windows up to a block away and scattered remnants of the building throughout the area.

"There was debris a mile in the air, it seemed," said Kim Canada, who works at Mordigan Nursery Inc., across the street from Ross.

"There's a possibility there are more victims in there," said fire department spokesman Ed Reed, adding that two store employees were missing.

Three of the victims were listed in serious condition, but most of the others treated for minor injuries and released, said officials — at four hospitals.

Southern California Gas Co. officials shut off gas to the area, but said they do not know what kind of gas caused the blast. They said their natural gas pipelines apparently were not leaking.

Firefighters stand amid rubble caused by blast

Gas company service representative John Amos said he went into the basement of a K mart across the street, where chibing gas was detected, and found "about two inches of water in some areas of the basement and gas is seeping up through the water."

The gas lacked the odor the gas company puts into its gas but instead had a "sewer" type odor, said Amos. "We are searching for any abandoned (pipe) lines that might be in the area that we don't know about," said Robert Greenland, district supervisor for the gas company.

Excavation had begun Monday of the street in front of the store to install a new sewer line, said Denise K. K... gas company spokeswoman. She said the company had been asked to replace two lines in the vicinity to accommodate the sewer work, and that those lines were found not to be leaking after the explosion.

Revenue

Federal revenue-sharing provides about $19 million per year, he said, about $4 million more than the new state revenue-sharing program. "If we lose federal revenue-sharing, we'll lose the tax left in the cities of McCall," he said.

Weatherly said the Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee did some good things. It killed a House-passed bill which, in effect, limited the 1975 law requiring cities and counties to adopt planning and zoning laws.

Weatherly says it will take a strong education effort to get the Legislature, and particularly the Senate, to reverse the 1972 law that let local units of government control their own finances.

"In the 12-year history of local-option efforts, there never has been a vote on the Senate floor for a local-option bill," he said. "I think it's a trend, he said, "Obviously, we don't have the answer to that."

"But local officials will have to spend more time talking to legislators, particularly senators, to find out what they can do to diversify the local revenue base," he said.

"The lobbying has to be done back home. They need to understand better how local budgets are put together, how local services are funded. I think they're beginning to understand some of the problems that have been created," Weatherly said.

The Legislature considered a wide variety of proposals to give local governments more revenue. They included an increase in the sales tax, county-option sales taxes, removing the limits on budget increases and allowing certain counties to increase their property taxes for operating expenses.

The chief casualty was a revised version of a 1978 law allowing "resort cities" to impose up to 5 percent in local-option taxes. A judge ruled last year that the tax was unconstitutional. The Legislature worked for weeks on a new version, but wound up passing nothing.

The Idaho Supreme Court is scheduled to hear an appeal later this year, but the Legislature's refusal to renew the tax left the cities of McCall, Ketchum, Sun Valley, Lava Hot Springs and Idaho City desparately short of revenue.

The communities have based up to 40 percent of their budgets on that tax, Weatherly said. "It's going to mean severe service reductions in all of the cities," he said.

Silvers said he didn't like the "resort cities" tax in the first place because it singled out a handful of communities for special treatment.

Weatherly said the Legislature approved some things that directly or indirectly will benefit local government. He listed repeal of the old Little Davis-Bacon Act, which may cut costs on locally funded public works projects, approval of the major water rights legislation, — the hazardous waste siting law, and creation of the new Department of Commerce.

But Evans, who pushed for the new Commerce agency, said it won't help lure new industry to Idaho unless the state has other things to offer — such as adequate schools, good roads and the services demanded by the public.

People won't want to come to the state if they find the roads are bad, essential services are underfunded, and the education system is inadequate, Evans said.

The governor said it will take strong, unified efforts by the city and county associations to convince the Legislature to grant local-option taxing authority.

"They've always been able to back away from critical financial issues," he said, because local governments haven't been unified.

Some day, Evans hopes, Idaho will have "an enlightened Legislature" that will allow local governments to make their own financial decisions.

for each House member.

O'Neill said White House lobbyists are "pulling out every stop" to persuade House members to vote for continued funding for the MX. He noted that Reagan is "the most powerful man in the world," with "an awful lot to offer to someone who is in public life."

Common Cause president Fred Wertheimer, who has been lobbying hard against the MX said, "We are focusing on freshmen." He said about 15 new members will be critical to the outcome.

The anti-MX cause was given a boost last week when the House Appropriations Committee voted 26-24 to oppose the MX for the first time.

"That showed we still have a fight on our hands," Wertheimer said. "MX foes say the missiles to be installed — in existing underground Minuteman silos would be destroyed in a first strike Soviet attack. But Reagan and other supporters of the missile say the missile silos eventually will be hardened to survive a Soviet first strike, and they say the MX is needed to discomfit Soviet defense planners.

In other congressional developments, Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., said a small group of key Republicans and top administration officials would meet this week in hopes of finding a budget compromise which can be approved on the Senate floor.

The goal is to find a middle ground in defense cuts and domestic spending proposals which will satisfy both Reagan and enough Democrats to pull together a majority in the Senate over the next few weeks.

from his education into the service, and in case of physicians, does his first or first and second post-graduate years of training in the service."

Nonetheless, Mayer said the large number of physicians found to be working without valid state licenses surprised many people as well as civilians. While offering several medical reasons for changing the old policy, he acknowledged the decision was prompted in part by public perception.

The situation comes at a time when the Pentagon has had to confront several well-publicized malpractice claims as well as critical internal audits. Indeed, several audits released over the past four months have criticized military hospitals for failures to adequately investigate the backgrounds of newly hired health professionals.

"It's partly a problem of perception," Mayer said. "Since much of medicine is still an art that has to do with the patient's feelings about who's taking care of him, the so-called doctor-patient relationship, we think it's important enough that if (the requirement) needs to be added,

1 billion viewers to watch awards show

No clear winners emerge for Oscars

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has a night of suspense for an estimated 1 billion television viewers Monday as the 57th annual Academy Awards opens without a clear favorite to sweep the show.

While in the two previous years "Terms of Endearment" and "Gandhi" predictably took the top honors, the movies and performers of 1984 leave viewers with the chance that none will emerge dominant — even though "Amadeus" tops the nominations with 11. Those include best picture and best director, and F. Murray Abraham and co-star Tom Hulce are nominated for best actor. But multiple nominations from the same movie in the same category tend to split votes, making it difficult to assure three top wins by "Amadeus."

The show will broadcast live across the country on ABC-TV beginning at 9 p.m. EST. It also will be broadcast either live or on tape to an estimated audience of 1 billion in 77 countries including 100 million viewers in China and Poland.

Besides the suspense of announcing the winners, there is the challenge of streamlining 1984's three-hour, 45-minute show into a sleek production that delivers entertainment as well as acceptance speeches.

There are four producers for this year's show instead of one. A flashing red warning light at the podium awaits overlong acceptance speakers, and the orchestra has been ordered to play music for 45 seconds.

SAM WATERSTON Best actor nominee

JUDY DAVIS Best actress nominee

The show's host this year will be Jack Lemmon, a response to movie industry criticism for using in past years Johnny Carson, a television personality.

Co-hosts and presenters, about 40 in all, will be mass-introduced at the beginning of the show to save time, and show producers including actor Gregory Peck, writer-producer Larry Gelbart, director Robert Wise and Academy President Gene Allen have decided to spread the big awards throughout the show.

Most major nominees have told the academy they will attend the show, but the death last week of Sir Michael Redgrave removed two from the list: his daughter, Vanessa, nominated for best actress in "The Bostonians," and longtime friend Dame Peggy Ashcroft, nominated for best supporting actress in "A Passage to India." Both will attend Redgrave's funeral Tuesday in London.

Woody Allen, nominated for best director, was a predictable no-show.

Allen chose to play his clarinet in a New York City jazz club in 1978 while "Annie Hall" won best picture, actress (Diane Keaton) and director (Allen).

The enigmatic Prince, nominated for best original score, also will not attend, said academy spokesman Bob Weiden.

Among the uninformed in New York City media-booster Alan Abel, who has said he plans to somehow infiltrate the show and cause at least a subtle riotous, Abel recently organized a mass-fainting of seven people, including himself, during a live broadcast of the "Phil Donahue Show" in New York City.

Jerry Moon, who heads security for the Academy Awards, says his forces are experienced with all sorts of hoaxers and impostors, and will be taking "a lot of extra special caution" to prevent any surprises.

Singer Phil Collins thought he had a right to be on stage, to sing the best original song nomination "Against All Odds," which he performed for the movie of the same name.

But singer Anne Reinking was selected instead to sing the tune in a dance number. The academy explained it wanted a person more identified with the movies to perform the number.

The five films nominated for best picture are "Amadeus," "The Killing Fields," "A Passage to India," "Places in the Heart," and "A Soldiers' Story."

Poll: Americans want equal cuts in defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly one in three Americans believe there should be deeper cuts in defense spending than in federal domestic programs, according to a U.S. News and World Report public opinion poll released Sunday.

Additionally, 42 percent of those polled said Congress and President Reagan should make at least equal cuts in the Pentagon and domestic program budgets.

The random poll in which 1,542 people were questioned nationwide also found that voters want reform of the federal tax system and compromises by the United States at the Geneva arms control negotiations, just over 40 percent gave Reagan a "good" rating on his job performance.

Reagan is seeking to increase military spending by $30 billion for fiscal year 1986 above the rate of inflation, or a 5.9 percent increase. He is seeking domestic cuts of $40 billion, and deeper percentage reductions in many programs like aid to education and a major cutback of the federal government's subsidy for Amtrak rail passenger service.

The magazine poll found 33 percent urging deeper military than domestic cuts, 42 percent urging equal reductions, 11 percent seeking deeper domestic cuts and nine percent suggesting no reductions at all in federal

Some 49 percent of those polled said they are worried "a lot" by rising federal deficits.

Four in five, 87.9 percent, said major reforms are needed in the federal tax system, with most support coming among residents in farm states, and college-educated families with incomes over $25,000.

On nuclear arms control, the poll found 85 percent of Americans believe the United States should be prepared to make concessions in Geneva.

Of those polled, 39 percent said President Reagan "is on the right track" with his Central American policies, while 33 percent disagreed with that statement.

In a personal question, 52 percent said their economic status was about the same as a year ago.

Although the poll indicated basic disagreements with Reagan's policies, especially on military spending, it found that 40.6 percent of Americans believe the president is doing a good job while 41.3 percent rated his performance as fair.

Sixteen percent gave Reagan a poor rating. The U.S. News poll, with an estimated error margin of 3 percent, involved door-to-door interviewing of 1,542 randomly selected men and women in 301 communities across the country.

Bar owners pleased with ban on 'happy hour'

BOSTON (AP) — Three months after Massachusetts banned "happy hours" in drinking establishments, many bar owners say they're glad to be rid of the cheap-drink promotions and state officials report compliance has been good.

"I've never liked them in the first place," said pub owner Robert Byrne of Osterville, who runs several establishments on Cape Cod and Boston's South Shore.

"From a selfish point of view, why would I want to sell a product for $1 when I could get $1.50 for it?" he said.

The Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission regulation went into effect Dec. 10 as part of a state campaign against drunken driving. It followed ordinances adopted by numerous cities and towns that prohibited happy hours to discourage excessive drinking in a short period of time.

The statewide regulation prohibits free or cut-rate drinks, two-for-one drink specials, unlimited drinks for a fixed price and special prices for groups, such as "ladies' night" promotions.

ABCC Chairman George McCarthy says no licenses have been revoked for noncompliance and there have been few reports of alleged violations.

"We've gotten a few complaints, mostly in the college towns, and our inspectors are telling them about the regulation," McCarthy said.

"The industry (people) all squeal on one another, and the corner barroom will complain if the place around the corner is doing something not completely above board," he said.

Bar and restaurant owners have flooded the ABCC office with questions about the happy hour ban. The commission plans to send license holders information answering the most frequently asked questions.

Ray Murgia, executive vice president of the Massachusetts Restaurant Association, said he has heard "not a single" complaint about the ban from the organization's 2,000 members, representing 7,000 establishments.

Teachers said to have test copies in advance

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — State police are investigating a report that a competing organization that opposes the test said Sunday that teachers told him copies were for sale for as much as $1,000 before the test was given at 277 sites on Saturday.

KARK-TV of Little Rock reported Saturday evening that a teacher gave a scandal to embarrass Gov. Bill Clinton, who pushed the teacher testing law through a special legislative session in 1983.

choice questions — 50 in math and 50 in reading — and an essay section. Those who fail the test can take it again up to four times and receive remedial work. Those who do not pass by June 1987 can't get their teaching certificate renewed.

Mike Rausch, KARK executive producer, said in a telephone interview Friday that the station had the copy Friday, but did not air the story until it confirmed that the material was a true copy of the test.

Tests were given in two sessions, one Saturday morning and one in the afternoon.

Jean Roberts, Clinton's press secretary, said Sunday that Clinton would not comment on the matter until the investigation was complete.

The 17,500-member AEA called the test humiliating and not a valid measure of teacher competence. It promised to defend in court teachers who boycotted the test, although it denied encouraging a boycott.

State Education Director Tommy Ventner said Saturday that about 90 percent of the state's 27,600 teachers took the test, meaning that only about 2,500 stayed away.

The test included 100 multiple-choice questions — 50 in math and 50 in reading — and an essay section. Those who fail the test can take it again up to four times and receive remedial work. Those who do not pass by June 1987 can't get their teaching certificate renewed.

U.S. agents contend that corruption extends to the highest ranks of the Mexican Federal Judicial Police and the Directorate of Federal Security, the magazine, citing unidentified sources, said in its April 1 issue.

The DEA blames Mexican corruption for the slaying of DEA agent Enrique Camarena Salazar, whose body was found earlier this month on a ranch 60 miles east of Guadalajara, Mexico.

The payments to hundreds of police were said to come from Rafael Caro Quintero, whom U.S. officials called the enforcer among four criminal leaders who head a consortium called La Familia (The Family), the magazine said.

Six local police and a former police agent have been charged in Camarena's kidnapping and death. Mexican officials told DEA officials that one of those charged in Camarena's kidnapping and death had confessed that Caro Quintero ordered the killing, the magazine said.

Couple files lawsuit over accidental conception

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman who became pregnant after she supposedly was sterilized says the doctors and hospital should pay for the upbringing of her daughter, according to a lawsuit made public Sunday.

The case has reached the state's highest court, the Court of Appeals, which must decide what kind of damages Susanne O'Toole and her husband Brian would be entitled to should negligence be established at a later trial.

At issue is the accidental conception of the O'Tooles' daughter, KellyAnne Marie, now a 3-year-old child. They also have three other children.

"We love her and everything, but that's not the point. It's hard bringing up too many children," said O'Toole. "This is something that never should have happened."

But Andrea Atkins, attorney for the doctors, Benjamin Greenberg and Arthur Leber, said the parents should have "limited recourse against the doctors for their failure to consign their daughter to oblivion."

Bach tricentennial is worth celebrating

Many anniversaries are remembered. A few demand grateful celebration. Three centuries ago Thursday, Johann Sebastian Bach was born in Eisenach, Germany, and the human spirit ever since has been the better for it. A temperamental and often quarrelsome man, Bach attracted little love from his contemporaries and slight appreciation from his several employers, and for half a century after his death in 1750 his music was largely neglected. But his influence on later composers — on Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven especially — was great, and the enormous musical legacy that he left has proved triumphantly enduring.

For Bach, the chief aim of all music "should be none else but the Glory of God and the recreation of the mind." He produced, often under the stimulus of deadline, an enormous quantity of work, little of which was published while he lived, some of which has only recently come to light. It was just a few months ago that Yale University announced the discovery of 33 previously unknown Bach choral preludes for organ in its manuscript collection. The first performance of these works is scheduled for Sunday.

But the Bach tricentennial is not for a day only. The coming weeks will see numerous celebratory performances of Bach's music, including a series of 20 programs that National Public Radio will broadcast beginning in April. In Bach's own lifetime some few thousand knew his works. He has since come to belong to uncounted millions, and to secure his place for the ages.

Gorbachev reforms may be dangerous

Based on his speed in assuming the post of general secretary of the Communist Party, Mikhail S. Gorbachev appears to be a man in a hurry. On accepting his position he immediately outlined a rough blueprint of the economic actions that he presumably plans to take. But Gorbachev may find that it is easier to manipulate the Politburo than the economy, and that he may have to proceed at a considerably more cautious pace than some of the more optimistic proponents of economic reform in the Soviet Union would like.

For that matter, it is unclear at this point exactly what it is that Gorbachev has in mind for the future. A look at his speech accepting the post of general secretary, as well as some earlier speeches, suggests that he is very much aware that there is a problem. However, his solutions, while potentially far-reaching, appear to be inconsistent and politically too ambitious.

Beginning in December 1984, Gorbachev began to call for a "radical intensification in the economy." He repeated that sentiment in his acceptance speech, but it is unclear whether he means increasing or decreasing centralization.

For example, his earlier speeches also emphasize the need for "intensive development of the economy," a code phrase for more centralization and discipline, precisely the direction also advocated by Yuri V. Andropov, Gorbachev's mentor.

By cracking down on alcoholism, absenteeism and corruption, Andropov vividly demonstrated how much slack there was in the economy, and output increased immediately. But now much of the most easily corrected waste and indolence has been remedied. So except for some continuing waste in the production of crude oil, where production actually declined in 1984, a renewed assault by Gorbachev on the lack of discipline is not likely to lead to any marked improvement in output.

That does not mean that there is no waste; it means only that it resists the conventional tactics used to eliminate it.

However, while an emphasis on discipline and centralization may bring about some increase in the production of the existing product mix of the Soviet economy, the economic challenge for the Soviet Union lies in a different direction. Producing more machine tools and steel is hardly the biggest challenge facing the Soviet Union. (The Russians already produce three to four times more machine tools, and 50 percent more steel, than the United States.)

Instead, what the Soviet Union needs is to master the production of biotechnology and high-technology products in the civilian economy. For instance, the gap between the sophistication of computer production in the Soviet Union and the United States actually is growing.

Unfortunately, the products of the new high-technology generation do not seem to flourish in an environment of increased discipline and centralization. If anything, what is needed is decentralization, particularly of investment, and more independence for factory managers and enterprises.

Gorbachev seems sensitive to this problem: Along with his call for "the intensification of the economy" is a call for "expanding the rights (and enhancing the independence of enterprises." That stirs thoughts of the Hungarian reforms, and even the more heretical Chinese reforms. Yet Gorbachev can't walk down the street in two directions at once. Increased centralization and discipline do not facilitate independence and initiative.

Because of Gorbachev's "youth" — it is nice to think that someone who is 54 is regarded as young — we are predisposed to expect that he will be a reformer. But the words and record of the bureaucrats with whom he must work are not very promising. They have successfully managed to frustrate and abort all reforms introduced by previous Soviet leaders.

Nor, for that matter, is it necessarily true that the young make the best reformers. In fact, in recent years some of the most dramatic reforms have come from older men such as Pope John XXIII, Deng Xiaoping and Ronald Reagan. Having less to lose, they seem more willing to risk structural overhaul.

Gorbachev may yet bring about the reform that he seems to believe is necessary, but he must first clearly what he wants, and then convince himself and his colleagues that his alternative is feasible, and not threatening to the power and the prerogatives of the members of the "nomenklatura," his fellow bureaucrats. Even for a man in a hurry, that will not be easy.

Idaho Republicans head for more conservative leadership

BOISE—The Idaho Republican Central Committee meets here April 13 to pick a new state chairman, and the person selected to succeed the late Dennis Olsen will signal whether the state GOP will remain under conservative control.

It appears Blake Hall, a 32-year-old Idaho Falls attorney, is the front-runner to succeed Olsen, who died recently of a heart attack at the age of 54.

And that would wed the Idaho GOP to the same philosophy it has held in recent years—very conservative.

It's hard to argue with success. Republicans control the Legislature, hold all but one of the state's four congressional seats and have a majority on the policy making state Land Board.

But an exception to the Republican success string is the governor's chair, which Democrats have held since 1970. And a popular vote-getter, Cecil Andrus, appears almost certain to run again in 1986.

Quane Kenyon

Sen. Steve Symms' Senate seat is up for reelection, along with the two congressional seats.

That makes the new state chairman's job an important one — and the person winning the position will have to work well with the major candidates.

These factors point to Hall as the new chairman. He worked in the office of Sen. James McClure for two years, and helped campaign for Lt. Gov. David Teroy, likely to be the GOP standard-bearer in the governor's race.

Hall worked closely with Olsen, and twice nominated Olsen for state chairman at GOP state conventions.

Two other top party officials have indicated no desire to run. First vice-chairman Lee Shellman, Coeur d'Alene, who will conduct the April 13 meeting to elect a new chairman, said his private business doesn't leave him enough time to serve as party chairman.

Second vice-chairman and Sen. Ann Rydchall of Idaho Falls feels she couldn't serve both as state chairwoman and in the Idaho Senate.

Jerry Deckard, former Eagle mayor and state representative, seems the only possible major challenge to Hall. Deckard is more moderate than Hall and if he were elected, that could mean a GOP swing to more of a middle-of-the-road philosophy.

Also mentioned as distant possibilities are Dick Bauer of American Falls, party treasurer, and Rich Hendricks of Preston, who got his start in GOP politics working as a top aide to George Hansen.

Republicans may need a close-knit organization next year. Gov. John Evans, who has all but announced for the Senate against Symms, says Democrats have a chance to field a very strong ticket next year. That includes Evans and Andrus at the top, supported by Congressman Richard Stallings and possibly Bill Hilar in another bid for the 1st District post held by Rep. Larry Craig.

Evans drew a laugh from the Idaho Press Club a few days ago as he was complaining about the major legislation which passed the Idaho House but which was ignored or defeated in the Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee. That panel is headed by Sen. Diane Watkins, who is mulling a bid for the 2nd District congressional job.

Evans was asked what it will take to remove Watkins as chairman of Local Government, so cities and counties can have a hope of getting important legislation enacted. "Run him for Congress," quipped Evans.

Democrats have fallen from grace, but they could recover

We have read about it in history books, of course, but this is the first time many of us have actually seen it happen: a majority party's fall from grace.

Led out of the minority party wilderness by Franklin D. Roosevelt during the Great Depression a half-century ago, the Democrats have in recent years seen the majority weakened and then disappear altogether. Last year's presidential election hardly caused the decline; it did signal how far the process has gone.

One can certainly argue about whether the Republicans are, or are about to become, a true majority party — but one can no longer pretend that the Democrats still occupy that status.

While the Democrats still dominate governorships and state legislatures, at the federal level the party has lost four out of the last five presidential elections, three by landslides. It lost control of the U.S. Senate in 1980 and clings to a majority in the House. Recent polls show the Democrats commanding less voter loyalty than any time in the last 50 years.

Democratic party leaders of all persuasions understand that, which is why they are engaged in such an agonizing reappraisal of what to do next. And, never reluctant to aid an institution in distress, political pundits are contributing all manner of advice on how the party might regroup.

One of the most thoughtful suggestions comes from Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca, who brings impressive credentials as a rebuilder of failing institutions. He recently counseled 135 Democratic members of the U.S. House of Representatives that the party must regain "the purity of its ideology."

One might at first glance be inclined to dismiss Iacocca's prescription. Who has ever implied that any big mainstream party in the United States has ever been, or might somehow become, ideologically pure? In fact, many of us believe that it is a great virtue of both the Democrats and the Republicans that they sufficiently respect the diversity of the country that they reject the very idea of a narrow, inflexible definition of political truth.

Of course, Iacocca never intended to counsel dogma or purity. He meant to tell Democrats to "be yourselves." Honor your best traditions, he was advising. Don't worry if that brings you some short-term electoral discomfort.

Thus understood, Iacocca's advice may sound naively idealistic, especially in the present environment where so much emphasis is being placed on successfully adapting the party to the new political era. A veritable industry has sprung up in the United States around the assumption that the electorate can readily be manipulated if only the right buttons are pushed.

Thus pollsters plumb voters' psyches to determine what really moves them, media experts counsel on the best use of television, and political strategists advise on how various policy formulations can win over voters. Against all this manipulative energy and resolute pragmatism, "be yourself" appears soft-headed, even fatalistic. In fact, though, Iacocca's advice is imminently practical.

That is not to say that the Democrats don't need to adapt to new political circumstances. Over the last 20 years or so the party has seen the conditions on which its New Deal majority status was built, eroded and replaced. The Democrats argued in the New Deal era that the national government was too small and national programs insufficient to meet the needs of a complex, interdependent industrial society. A decisive majority of Americans agreed that "more government" was the answer. Today "more" no longer seems nearly as satisfying. How could it?

LEE IACOCCA Offers good advice

In 1940, the national government spent just $9 billion, or $68 per person; by 1984, it was expending about $350 billion, $3,600 per capita. The economic problems of the Depression era involved falling prices, underconsumption and unemployment. In contrast, persistent inflationary pressures and massive deficits are the bane of the contemporary economy. Many Southerners long looked to the Democratic Party not just because their Civil War memories, but because they resided in the poorest region of the United States, left out of the industrial growth over which the Republican Party had presided.

In the last quarter century, however, the South has enjoyed extraordinary economic gains, not only absolutely but relative to other regions. The South's politics is no longer that of an economic "have not."

In the late 1960s, close to 30 percent of the civilian labor force belonged to trade unions, and the Democrats benefited greatly from having this powerful, still growing interest group aligned with them. Today, because of major occupational changes, trade union membership has declined, to the point where it now represents just 18 percent of the civilian work force. Union backing no longer confers on the Democrats the benefits it once did — as the 1984 electoral experience again forcefully reminded us.

All those changes and more, involving fundamental transformations of American society, have altered the context of American politics. They have hardly invalidated the Democrats' approach to governing, but they have, in the eyes of many voters, raised serious challenges to it.

That is the source of the Democrats' present discontent. So of course it is true that a reversal of the Democrats' decline from majority status requires that the party find a policy approach more attuned to present-day needs and expectations.

Many in the chorus of politicians and pundits chanting "new ideas" don't seem to understand, however, that successful adaptation must be carried out in a very restricted framework. The Democratic Party can't just put a blank sheet of paper in the typewriter; it is an continuing organization, with values, traditions and core constituencies.

The new ideas on which majority parties have been built historically have been policies simultaneously serving two different sets of objectives: First, they have been successful responses to broad national needs, and second, they have been consistent with the party's heritage.

It is hard enough to figure out policies that achieved the former; getting those that do both is formidably difficult indeed. Of course, the Democrats want successful new ideas. Every party in American history has sought the same. But only rarely have historical circumstances conspired to make possible a set of programs that at once is in accord with national interests and partisan traditions.

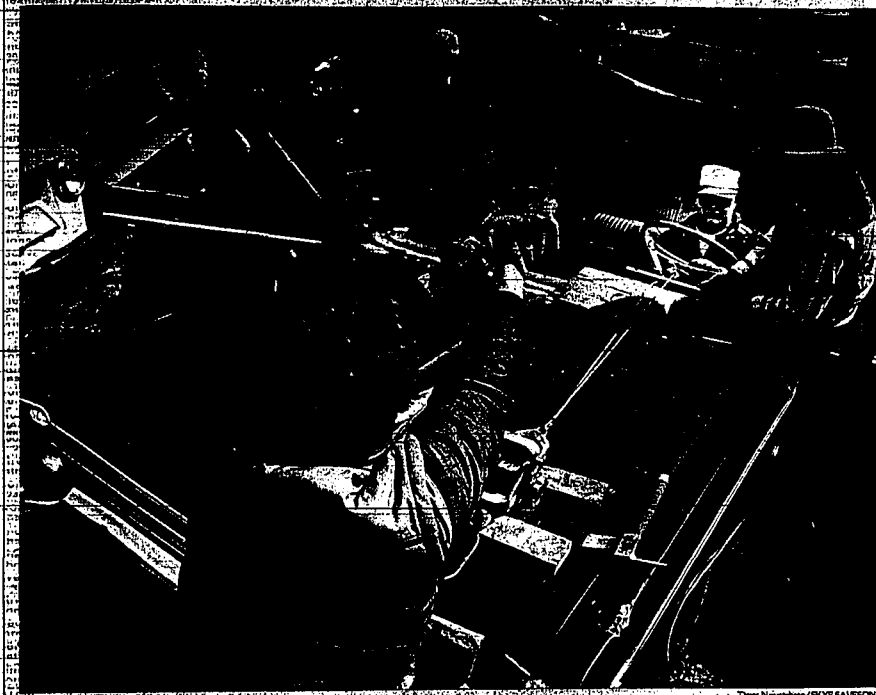

There are, of course, severe limits on what any political party can do to arrive at a set of policies that are at once effective sponsors of the country's needs and consistent articulations of the party's core values and constituencies. At times such a reconciliation cannot be achieved at all.

For instance, there was no way in the 1830s that the Republicans could take the lead in initiating the new governmental programs that the country needed while remaining true to their own best tradition as the party of relatively limited domestic government. In those circumstances, whatever it might wish, the party could only endure until changed circumstances again made "less government" a compelling slogan.

That is what makes Lee Iacocca's recommendation so attractive, even if it was awkwardly phrased.

Forget all of the petty tactical maneuvering on minor matters, he urged the Democrats. Come back to your vision of America; and then seek policies to realize it. Present those intelligently and straightforwardly to the American people, and let the chips fall as they will. It is good advice.

Couple still missing after river search

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

GLENN'S FERRY — Another full day of dragging the bottom of the Snake River and searching along the banks did not turn up any sign of Ronnie and Deanna Stevenson Crone, whose car broke through a bridge guardrail and into the Snake River Saturday morning.

"We still haven't turned up anything . . . I think they're in the water someplace," said Elmore County Deputy Sheriff Dana Ross Sunday evening.

Ross said there were nine boats on the riverbank for more than five hours Sunday. Deanna Crone's father was among the searchers, Ross said. Husband and wife Ronnie and Deanna Crone were believed to be in their older model Oldsmobile Cutlass when it drove off the bridge and into the Snake River Saturday. Elmore County Sheriff Larry Olson has said. Glenns Ferry City Police had been in pursuit of the Olson's car, and a pickup truck driven by Darren Bybee of Glenns Ferry early Saturday morning before the car crashed through the bridge guardrail.

Ross said a County boat and a State Fish and Game Department boat dragged the river, working with volunteer boats to scour the murky 45-degree water. The searchers worked the water from the bridge near Glenns Ferry to a point seven miles down stream, Ross said. He said the majority of the searchers worked between the bridge and Three Island State Park.

Ross said the river drops from 6 to 28 feet deep near where the Crone's car hit and that the current is strong there.

Search efforts will continue for two more days until the Crone's are found, said Ross. He said searchers will be back out on the river at 10 a.m. today. Police said Bybee's truck rolled during a high-speed chase that started about 2:45 a.m. when police chased the "two cars" allegedly speeding out of town.

Bybee was uninjured, police said. Police lost sight of the Crone's car and did not spot it again until about 3:05 a.m. when Idaho State Police Officer Richard Willis spotted the car driving toward the bridge, according to police reports.

Willis lost the car again, but then discovered a section of guardrail that had been broken through at the south side of the bridge on the east side of the road, police said.

The car was recovered between noon and 1 p.m. Saturday, after one of the boats dragging the river hooked onto a set of tire chains. All windows except the windshield were broken out of the car when it was lifted from the river Saturday afternoon.

Health district to ask for more money

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — To protect its own fiscal health next year, the South Central District Health Department will request more money from the counties in the Magic Valley.

If the counties don't come through as expected, however, the district will be forced to cut staff.

At a Wednesday meeting, the district's Board of Health approved the preliminary 1986 budget of $1.5 million, which would go into effect Oct. 1. The final approval on the proposed budget will be made in July by a group composed of the commissioners from the counties in the Magic Valley.

In the 1986 budget, the district expects to receive $507,000 generated by ad valorem taxes in the counties. The amount is 7 percent more than the county contribution in the 1985, $1.4 million budget.

Last year, the district requested an overall 2 percent increase from the counties over the previous year's contribution.

But, the counties voted to give to the district less than the 2 percent.

This year, the request to the counties will cover the lost revenue from the past two years, District Director Gerald Hurst said.

While the total county contribution in the district budget will increase 7 percent, the payments from the individual counties will not increase by that same percentage.

County contributions to the district are mandated by law — are supposed to be based on the market value of property and the population in a county.

From Cassia County, for instance, the district has requested $75,030 for the 1986 budget. That's an increase of about five percent over this year. From Blaine County, meanwhile, the district will be seeking a 23 percent increase.

Hurst, members of the board and district staff will spend the next months visiting each county board to discuss the budget and solicit support.

"We have to see if they still want a health department," board chairman Bill Chaney said. "Whenever we lose county appropriations, we are working for someone else besides the county."

In this year's budget, the district earned $440,000 from contracts to operate preventive health programs compared to the $472,500 collected from the counties.

The amount of county dollars received also affects other revenue to the district, Hurst added. For example, the amount of money from the state is formulated on how much money the counties contribute. For every dollar collected from a county, $3.35 was generated by that dollar from other sources.

As a result, $6.35 was spent in the counties for services ranging from immunization clinics to restaurant inspection, Hurst said.

But, because the counties gave less than expected, See HEALTH on Page A6

TFHS debate team captures state title

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

Twin Falls High School debaters Chris Scholes and Paul Stukenholtz won the Idaho State Debate Championship Saturday, beating Bonneville and bringing the gold to Twin Falls for only the third time since 1941.

"This is the first time since I've been coach that we've swept Gem State Conference, District (Four and Five), and State . . . that's quite an accomplishment," Nicholson said.

"We were walking a pretty tight line," Coach R.L. "Nick" Nicholson said Sunday. The Bruin team beat Idaho Falls in the semi-final on a split decision after beating Boise High in earlier rounds.

Nicholson said Boise High and Idaho Falls were ranked two of the three best teams in the state along with Twin Falls. The Bruins took the championship from Bonneville on a 3-2 decision, Nicholson said.

Scholes said that in the final match-up, he and Stukenholtz argued the affirmative side of the resolution that the United States should provide employment for all U.S. citizens living in poverty.

The two of them had been more successful arguing against the proposition all season, but that they lost the coin-flip at the outset of the final debate, Scholes said.

Kovarsky leaving Filer school post

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

FILER — After serving in a dual role as both Filer School District Superintendent and high school principal for two years, Sheldon Kovarsky will be passing on the job of principal to someone new in July.

Kovarsky, who will remain superintendent, said at a school board meeting this week that the school district received 22 applications from all over the U.S. for the position of principal.

From the applications, Kovarsky said the field had been narrowed down to six applicants from out of the district and two teachers within the district.

On Tuesday the board will meet to screen the six applications from outside the area and choose three finalists.

Those three, plus the two local teachers, will then be interviewed by the school district senate, composed of teachers' representatives and the student body president, administrators and the board.

By the middle of April, a new principal will be chosen by the board to start the job in July, the superintendent said.

In 1983 Kovarsky had planned to serve in both positions for just one year until the district had enough money to hire another principal.

Since a high school principal would have cost the district $60,000 in salary over the past two years and Kovarsky was only paid $1,000 for the position, he pointed out that he had saved the taxpayers some money.

"I saved the district 50 grand," he said laughing. "And I did a very good job, by the way."

Few businesses trying industrial bonds

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Few businesses have taken advantage of the industrial revenue bonds offered through Twin Falls County.

Joe Citek, a member of the county's industrial revenue bond board, says the uncertainty of the economy may be to blame.

"The economic conditions aren't conducive for large capital investing," Citek says. Businesses or farmers, who also may apply for the bonds, may not be willing to risk expansion or large investments in their operation at this time.

There have been two applications for the tax-exempt bonds since the Economic Development Corp. of Twin Falls County was created by county ordinance in 1983 to issue the bonds.

The state law that allowed for industrial revenue bonds, in essence, permits local governments to extend their tax-exempt status to bonds that are sold to finance private projects. The local government is not held liable for any bond sales, however.

The purpose of the bonds is to make Idaho competitive with other states, Citek says. The bonds are more attractive than regular financing because the interest on them is tax-exempt and usually lower.

The county benefits by encouraging more businesses, which expands the tax base.

Yet, the application process for the bonds is expensive and complex. It costs $100 just to take an application. When the forms are completed, there is a $2,500 non-refundable fee. The county corporation also charges a percentage on the interest during the life of the bond.

Aside from the fees, the business probably will have to hire its own bond counsel to review its application, Citek says.

Before any bonds are issued a public hearing will be held.

When issued by the Economic Development Corp., the bonds are sold through a bank or other financial institution.

Only one business has gone through the entire process. While six companies have taken applications, only two have returned them. Of those two, the board issued bonds to one company to expand its processing operation. The other applicant did not complete the process.

There are no pending applications.

Citek says the industrial revenue bond program is a good one.

His only complaint is the cost to the Economic Development Corp. for the process of reviewing bond applications.

The corporation, which has to be self-supporting, uses the fees to pay its way. A large expense is the hiring of a bond attorney to review the applications which must meet federal standards in order to receive the tax-exemption, Citek says.

The corporation, which has to pay income taxes, has remained in the black so far. But, the costs of processing applications could become massive if special experts, such as engineers, are required.

While the corporation has the right to charge a business for its expenses, the up-front bills may be large, he adds.

Another complaint of Citek's is that the corporation was prohibited from spending money on projects that would promote business, such as the purchase of land for an industrial park or on advertising for the bonds.

Under state law, the revenue bonds may be used for manufacturing, processing, production, assembly, warehousing, solid waste disposal, recreation and energy facilities, excluding those for the transmission, distribution or production of energy.

The bonds can be used either for construction or to acquire machinery, utilities, roads, parking and storage areas, among other things.

Most projects must not cost more than $10 million over a six-year period.

Jerome girl finds legislative work tough but fun

By INA HADAM
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Being a legislative page wasn't an easy job, says Rae Anderson, a senior at Jerome High School who served six weeks as a page in the Senate during the recent Legislature.

"We worked so hard I lost eight pounds. Even though I ate like a cow," she says, but adding that she "loved every minute of it and would have stayed the entire session if it would have let me."

She says there were lots of errands to run between floors, but that more times than not it was just quicker to take the stairs instead of the elevators.

Anderson says she didn't know at first she would be paid, but with the hectic schedule and hard work the pages really earn their $21 per day.

Most of the pages live at the dormitory at Boise State University and have to pay their own expenses, but Anderson says she lived with her grandmother and was able to make her $21 per day go a little further.

Anderson is now a member of the workings of government, attending Girl's State last year where she served as a supreme court justice.

The past two years, she has also been the delegation spokesperson in the mock legislature of the state convention held by the Youth in Government organization.

Again this year, she was elected at the regional convention to be a delegate to state convention in Boise in April. She says she hopes to be a senator and a committee chairman this time.

Anderson says to become a page you have to have a sponsor from your district, adding that her sponsor was Sen. Lynn Tominga. She says Sen. Walt Yarbrough and Rep. Tom Stivers also recommended her to the Attaché Committee that selects all the pages, messengers and secretaries.

Although she was assigned to work for Sens. Darrell McRoberts, Lee Staker, Jerry Thorne, and Larry Anderson, in addition to Tominga and Yarbrough, she says "the rest of our duties were left to the imagination of the other 42 senators, 15 secretaries and the sergeant-at-arms and his assistant."

Duties ranged from getting the bills on the desks every morning to doing research on specific bills, and keeping the bill books in numerical order.

She said there was always two pages in positions on the floor and two pages in the back to take messages.

Anderson says she is not planning on a career in politics partly because it is such hard work. She says she plans to study electrical engineering in college because she likes math. But did concede that she will minor in political science and speech.

Anderson, the daughter of Brian and Judy Anderson of Jerome, has participated in speech and debate contests during her high school years.

Two other Jerome seniors and classmates of Anderson, Nicole and Michelle Hymas, both daughters of Forrest and Cheryl Hymas, worked in the Legislature during the last portion of the session.

Snake oil salesmen of '80s watched closely by FDA

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — They're amazing! They're exciting! They're miraculous! And they're safe, painless and natural.

They're the wonders offered by the snake oil salesmen of the '80s, the pills and lotions and creams that will smooth wrinkles, shed weight, enlarge breasts, improve a person's sex life — all for a price.

The quest to relieve the sick and unhappy of their dollars is watched with more interest than ever from a federal office building here, in a suburb north of Washington, where the Food and Drug Administration maintains its headquarters and attempts to stop the worst cases of the centuries-old pursuit of medical quackery.

It's a pursuit that still flourishes, says FDA spokesman Bruce Brown, because of a combination of gullibility and the desire to believe. And it's big business; the House Select Committee on Aging has estimated that medical quackery costs the consumer $10 billion a year.

The FDA is responsible for reviewing medical devices and drugs for safety and effectiveness. "FDA is not meeting the standard or even presented for review — can be seized. But the threat of seizure, which often requires lengthy court proceedings, doesn't dissuade people from trying to market new gadgets of questionable worth."

KAREN KOWLOK
Models alleged diet aid

Take the Vision-Dieter glasses on Brown's desk.

They could be mistaken for industrial safety glasses — plain, plastic lenses without frames. But a Little Rock, Ark., optometrist sold them at $19.95 a pair as a miracle way to lose weight.

The theory was that the tinted lenses — one brown, one blue — would send confusing signals to the brain and cause "a very low-level confusion in the subconscious" that would somehow disrupt a person's desire to eat.

The problem, said the FDA, was that the optometrist refused to seek FDA licensing for the glasses as medical devices, which would require submitting proof that they worked. In 1982, U.S. marshals seized 62 pairs of the glasses, and a federal judge ordered their destruction, except for a handful kept for educational purposes.

But in some ways the Vision-Dieter glasses are the exception, rather than the rule, Brown says. With only seven people working full time on medical fraud, Brown said, the agency does not have the manpower to track down all the quacks who produce harmless devices.

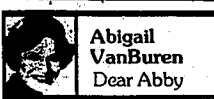

"About 95 percent are economic fraud alone," said Brown. "We have to concentrate our resources on direct and indirect threats to health."

In 1982, for example, FDA moved to stop the marketing of so-called "fat pills" that were touted as a way to prevent people from becoming intoxicated while drinking.

Fake cancer cures are a high priority for the agency. The quack cures are considered an indirect threat to health because cancer patients using them may forgo legitimate treatments.

Driving lessons cause good marriage to slip out of gear

DEAR ABBY: Someone wrote in to say that women whose husbands always drove them around were at a terrible disadvantage should they become widowed without having learned how to drive. He then urged all married men to teach their wives how to drive.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

I'm all for women learning how to drive, but I have never met a man who taught his wife to drive who would recommend it to another man. A man can teach another man's wife how to drive, but when it comes to teaching his own wife, it's one big fight from beginning to end.

I am not smart enough to explain it in technical terms, but there is something about the husband-wife relationship that makes it impossible for the wife to accept criticism or instruction from her own husband. And for some reason, a man has very little patience with his own wife's mistakes.

Newlyweds or old-timers, it makes no difference: If there's a man alive who ever taught his wife how to drive without a fight, I'd like to know how he did it.

DEAR ABBY: I need advice fast. My mother, who just turned 65, had an operation two months ago for cancer of the lung. One-third of her lung was removed and she's been on oxygen ever since. Her doctor says she's doing fairly well. Now my problem: I have caught my mother smoking several times. Her doctor told her not to smoke, but she smokes anyway.

My father has a heart condition, and if he found out, it would tear him apart. And if her doctor knew this, I don't know what he'd do.

I love my mother and don't want her to turn against me, but I know that not saying anything to my father and the doctor isn't right. How should I handle this situation?

DEAR ABBY: I'm so angry I'm ready to explode! I am soon to be married, and I cannot believe the number of people who are bringing guests to my wedding. A great deal of planning went into making up our guest list, keeping in mind both the size of the room and the cost of the affair, and I resent all these extra people, most of whom I don't even know.

Only one person called to ask if he could bring a guest. Abby, this is not a backyard barbecue; it's a formal wedding, for God's sake!

What should a bride do when the dining room for her sit-down wedding dinner accommodates 210, and the response cards indicate that 234 will attend? (Incidentally, the dinners cost $76 a plate.)

Has anyone ever telephoned an invited guest who penciled in a couple of extra guests and said, "I'm sorry, but I can't accommodate your guests"? I've heard, "There's always room for one more," and I suppose there is — but 247? Any suggestions?

— FURIOUS ON LONG ISLAND

DEAR ABBY: I'm sure you are aware that smoking around oxygen can be disastrous, so for that reason alone you must tell the doctor that your mother is smoking.

Although the cancerous portion of your mother's lung was removed, her craving for tobacco was not, so she also needs to be treated for nicotine addiction. Tell your mother's doctor at once. It could save her life.

DEAR UPSET: I'm sure you are aware that smoking around oxygen can be disastrous, so for that reason alone you must tell the doctor that your mother is smoking.

Although the cancerous portion of your mother's lung was removed, her craving for tobacco was not, so she also needs to be treated for nicotine addiction. Tell your mother's doctor at once. It could save her life.

DEAR FURIOUS: If you're asking for my permission to call those who penciled in extra guests to say, "Sorry, I can't accommodate your guests," you have it.

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38323, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Salvadorans march Sunday to mark the fifth anniversary of Archbishop Romero's death.

Slain archbishop's successor calls for renewed investigation of killing

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Thousands of people filled San Salvador's main cathedral and the square outside Sunday for a Mass commemorating the fifth anniversary of Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero's assassination.

Rivera y Damas, told the crowd of some 6,000 that authorities should reopen an investigation of the killing.

Rivera y Damas said that "his death must be clarified and those guilty must be punished."

Rivera y Damas also said he deplored the death of retired Gen. Jose Alberto Medina, an extreme rightist who was gunned down in San Salvador street Saturday.

Anonymous callers told news organizations that leftist guerrillas were responsible.

About 5,000 people packed Metropolitan Cathedral to hear the Mass and about 1,000 more stood in the square outside, listening over loudspeakers. The crowd included young men, apparently leftist militants, whose faces were partially covered by leaflets or photos of Rivera y Damas also said he deplored the death of retired Gen. Jose Alberto Medina, an extreme rightist who was gunned down in San Salvador street Saturday.

Anonymous callers told news organizations that leftist guerrillas were responsible.

About 5,000 people packed Metropolitan Cathedral to hear the Mass and about 1,000 more stood in the square outside, listening over loudspeakers. The crowd included young men, apparently leftist militants, whose faces were partially covered by leaflets or photos of

Nicaragua says U.S. blocking loan request

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A Nicaraguan banking official said Sunday that U.S. pressure on the Inter-American Development Bank was blocking a $38 million loan intended to help small farmers.

U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz wrote a letter Jan. 30 to bank President Antonio Ortiz Mesa urging disapproval of the loan. The Associated Press received a copy of that letter, the contents of which were confirmed by a spokesman for the bank, Joseph Hinzshaw.

The letter said in part: "monies received from the Bank would relieve financial pressures on (Nicaragua) and free up other monies that could be used to help consolidate the Marxist regime and finance Nicaragua's aggression against its neighbors."

Nicaragua says the new money would be used to boost production of coffee, corn, cotton and other crops. A small fraction of the $38 million would go to cooperative farms, the rest to private agriculture.

José Luis Cuadra Chamorro, president of Nicaragua's Central Bank, rejected as "childish" the idea that the loan would let Nicaragua spend more on arms. The country does not have the money to divert elsewhere, and bank supervision would make that impossible anyway, he said.

In an interview on the eve of a banking conference in Vienna, Cuadra said: "To me it's not clear why the ones who support private enterprise, the most... the U.S. — would be against that loan."

Referring to the Shultz letter, Cuadra said in an interview that the United States was seeking to block the loan "using... mostly political reasons."

"What concerns us the most is that in this case it is not the executive director of the U.S. IDB (the bank) that has voted against the loan, since it has not gone to the board yet," said Cuadra.

300 feared dead as boat sinks in Bangladesh river

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — As many as 300 people were missing and feared drowned in the sinking of a river boat during a storm.

The private double-decker ferry capsized and sank Saturday afternoon in the Buri Ganga River about six miles west of Dhaka.

At least 100 passengers, mostly from the upper deck, swam about 60 yards to shore, but passengers on the lower deck — many of them women and children — could not escape when water pressure sealed the doors of their compartment, survivors said.

Rescuers recovered 26 bodies from the ferry's hull before salvage operations were suspended Sunday because of heavy rains and high winds.

Officials declined to speculate on the death toll.

Black mourners attend funeral for riot victims

UTENHAGE, South Africa (AP) — Thousands of black mourners — 35,000, by some accounts — attended the funeral Sunday of six black township killed in riots at Kwanobuhle, outside Uitenhage.

Hundreds of police in armored cars kept watch from a distance, but there was no trouble.

A pall of smoke from smoldering houses hung over the area after another night of violence.

And in overnight clashes with police, three more blacks were killed — raising the toll to 29 since the latest round of bloodshed began last Thursday in the black township of Langa, near this industrial city in Cape Province.

Black reporters for the Eastern Province Herald newspaper estimated the crowd of mourners at 35,000; but police spokesman Col. Gerrie van Rooyen said about 8,000 blacks joined the funeral and procession to the cemetery. White reporters were barred from the township.

Mono Babela, a reporter for the Johannesburg-based black newspaper, City Press, said at least 25,000 blacks attended the funeral, on a large open square in the township. Babela, based in Fort Elizabeth, said it was by far the largest funeral in memory in the eastern Cape.

Police stayed on the edge of township, watching the funeral from hillside through binoculars. A police helicopter monitored events from overhead.

But police otherwise kept out of sight throughout the five-hour funeral and procession to the cemetery to avoid confrontations.

"We didn't go into the township at all during the funeral," van Rooyen said, adding that there were no clashes during the day anywhere in Cape Province.

Speakers from the United Democratic Front coalition and other organizations opposing apartheid held, the white-minority government's official system of race segregation, addressed the mourners.

The atmosphere "was very tense, but there were no clashes," a black reporter said later.

Thousands of mourners later traveled in cars, trucks and vans through the whites-only city of Uitenhage en route to the black town of Langa, where the latest trouble began.

Uniformed police and reservists posted at almost every street corner made sure the cars did not stop. Blacks jeered and shouted, "We're going to get you, whitey!" but there was no violence.

Three houses, apparently those of blacks regarded as government collaborators, were torched overnight, and van Rooyen said demonstrators also burned a liquor store and a shop. That brought the number of destroyed houses to 21 since Thursday.

IRA says it killed informant

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — The Irish Republican Army said Sunday that it had killed a police informer and offered what it called a 14-day amnesty to other informers.

Earlier in the day, Irish police said officers found an IRA arms cache at a remote farmhouse. Police said eight rifles, bullets, four walkie-talkie radios, a letter bomb and timing devices were found behind a secret wall panel at a farmhouse near the County Mayo village of Killykelly.

IRA statement said John Corcoran, whose body was found near Cork late Saturday, had been executed after admitting "under questioning" that he had operated as a police informer for more than seven years.

The outlawed IRA claimed the 45-year-old warehouse manager had given information to police which led to the arrest of three men charged with a 1981 post office robbery.

The IRA claimed informers in the Irish Republic were being recruited by "intimidation and blackmail" and offered an amnesty for 14 days. It did not give an details on the amnesty.

Possibility for winter Games eyed

Consultant: Utah can host Olympics

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A Utah Winter Olympics Games can't make money, but there's a good chance they could make money, says a consultant hired to look at the feasibility of holding the 1992 or 1996 Games along the Wasatch Front.

Consultant H. A. Connolly of Underwood McLellan Ltd. said he is unable to put a price tag on a Utah Olympics. However, Calgary, Alberta, will spend about $850 million to host the two-week-long 1988 Games, he said.

Of that figure, the ABC broadcasting network reportedly will pay $310 million for the television rights, Calgary's Olympic organizing committee is responsible for raising about $20 million through ticket sales and fund-raising activities, the Canadian government will contribute about $200 million and the provincial government will add $120 million.

Salt Lake business and government leaders originally said they were interested in bidding on the 1990 Games. But in a meeting with officials in Calgary earlier this year, they were told they would have a better chance of securing the 1996 Games if they bid on the 1992 Games first.

Utah leaders said Salt Lake's Olympics would be scaled down from the Calgary Games, mainly because the U.S. government is unlikely to match the Canadian government's contribution. Connolly said Salt Lake City is in a better position to host the Olympics than Calgary was when it began pursuing the 1988 Games.

He said one reason is Salt Lake has several facilities already available and close to alpine ski sites. In comparison, Calgary has had to build several structures to accommodate the Olympics, he said.

Salt Lake City has twice as many hotel rooms, better airline service and the resources of several nearby colleges and universities to help stage the Games, Connolly said.

Connolly said the two Cottonwood Canyons and Park City have a number of superior sites for alpine-ski runs, with Snowbird in Little Cottonwood Canyon the apparent No. 1 site for the downhill races. Snow Basin near Ogden could accommodate a downhill course as well, he said.

Snowbird already has offered its lodging facilities to serve as an athletes' village for the alpine events. Using Snowbird's option, Connolly said one scenario would feature the downhill and slalom competition at Snowbird with the giant slalom at Park City.

Another possible combination would place the downhill and slalom at Snowbird and the giant slalom at Sallute in Big Cottonwood Canyon.

Regardless of which option is used, consultants said a 2 1/2-mile tunnel would be needed to link Big and Little Cottonwood canyons.

David Eshof, a Salt Lake engineer who is working with Underwood McLellan, said the $100 million tunnel would make the canyons safer to drive and relieve existing traffic problems.

The Salt Palace in Salt Lake City is considered too small for ice hockey, but it would be excellent for figure skating, consultants said.

Barton named blind commission administrator

BOISE (AP) — Howard Barton, interim administrator of the Idaho Commission for the Blind, has been chosen to fill the job permanently. Barton, 54, was chosen unanimously Saturday by the commission's three-member board.

Barton previously served as administrator of the commission from April 1975 until September 1982. He stepped in as interim administrator after the February 1984 firing of administrator Ramona Walhof.

His appointment was contested at the time by members of the National Federation of the Blind, of which Ms. Walhof was a member. But Barton consistently has been supported by the commission's board.

"I see a lot stronger Howard Barton, this time than I did last time," said board chairman Larry Barnes, referring to Barton's previous tenure.

Barnes said Barton was chosen from a field of 26 candidates because of "the experience he's had working with the blind here and how effectively he's handled the interim time as an administrator."

He said the administrator's position pays between $32,000 and $33,000 a year.

Commission board member Brian Wardle said that under Barton's interim administration, "the commission has really turned around."

"The agency now is stronger than it has been for a long time," Wardle said. He said naming Barton as the agency's administrator should be stabilizing the commission, which serves between 600 and 700 blind people throughout the state.

Alta blast probe may take weeks

ALTA, Utah (AP) — Research into the cause of an explosion that killed two people and injured seven others at the Goldminer's Daughters Lodge in Alta may take weeks, an official says.

Alta Fire Marshal Toby Levitt said Saturday investigators still have a great deal of work to do in sorting out details of the blast.

Three floors of rooms at the northeast corner of the lodge were blown apart by the March 15 explosion, initially blamed on a propane gas leak.

It killed Doreen Dwyer, 29, Columbia, S.C., and Barbara Corallo, 49, Livermore, Calif. — Meanwhile, two people remained hospitalized with injuries sustained in the blast.

Elynn Wiens, 45, Hartland, Wis., was listed in critical condition at St. Mark's Hospital near Salt Lake City, while Loretta Houston, 23, Houston, was in critical but stable condition at the University of Utah Health Sciences Center.

Levitt said pictures taken after the explosion and after the rescue operations started are being studied. In addition, snow samples and core samples of materials at and near the site still are being analyzed, he said.

"We have a great deal of evidence to go over and it just takes a long time," Levitt said.

James Shane, lodge owner, asked fire and safety officials the day after the explosion for permission to move employees into the lodge and begin cleaning the rooms, but permission was denied, Levitt said.

Levitt said Shane will have to get permission from the U.S. Forest Service, which leases land to Shane and ski hill operators, and Alta city officials before workers or employees can enter the lodge.

The Salt Lake County Attorney's office said Friday no criminal charges would be filed in the explosion. That announcement was made after fire investigators ruled that arson was not involved in the blast, Levitt said.

McClure gets dead flowers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. James McClure was offered dead flowers for what the League of Conservation Voters said was his lousy performance on environmental issues, and the Idaho Republican responded by sending the league a stacked deck of cards.

The league gave McClure a zero for his 1983 and 1984 votes on environmental issues, but he rebutted with a list of issues intended to show the group he is sensitive to the environment.

Sen. Steve Symms and former Rep. George Hansen, both Republicans, also received zero ratings. Gannett News Service reported. The tally gives Idaho three of the five members of Congress who, in the league's estimation, did all wrong.

Idaho's other Republican congressman, Larry Craig, received a 25 on a scale of 100.

"The league's inaccurate and incomplete analysis of my support for conservation is worthy of a national award (or) disinformation and doublespeak," McClure said.

He sent his press aide, Bill Livingston, to deliver McClure's cards to the league "as a symbol of their unwillingness to play straight with the American people."

With the money you save on an Idaho First LowPay Auto Loan, you can buy something nice for your wife.

Frankly, this isn't for everybody. But if you trade in your car every few years, or if you want a better car for the same budget, or if you're in one of those high tax brackets, or if you'd simply like a lot lower monthly car payments, it might be for you.

How low is "a lot lower?" At today's interest rates, about 20% lower.

For instance, if you went out today and bought a Plymouth Voyager for $11,900, your monthly payment would be about $75 less than with conventional financing.

That's based on 20% down, at the current 14.78% interest rate, with four years to pay (you can take from two to five years if you like).

Another interesting feature of the Idaho First LowPay Auto Loan is that you may not need a down payment. That's right. No down payment.

If you qualify, you can buy that Voyager or a Toyota or Chevy or Lincoln or LeBaron or Mercedes or most any car (even, we suppose, a Rolls) for no money down.

In that sense, an Idaho First LowPay Auto Loan is just like a lease. But better — because you own the car and because you can deduct your interest payments from your income tax.

Those are the main advantages of the loan. Now here's how it works. We figure out how much your car will be worth at the end of your loan (two to five years). We subtract that amount from the purchase price of the car. Then you pay only the amount your car is expected to depreciate during the loan, plus interest.

At the end of the loan, you have three options: You can return the car to us. Or, just pay off the balance — that same amount we figured it would be worth — and the car's yours. We'll even re-finance it if you like.

As we said, however, it's not for everybody. So if you're dreaming about a new car, sit down with one of our loan officers and get the facts. Or ask your car dealer about an Idaho First LowPay Auto Loan.

And with the money you save, who knows what you could do? Maybe buy something nice for your husband.

*Based on the following example:

Conventional Financing		LowPay Auto Loan
Purchase price	$11,900.00	Purchase price	$11,900.00
20% down payment	2,380.00	20% down payment	2,380.00
48 payments at 14%		Balloon at end of loan	5,280.00
Annual Percentage Rate	280.53	47 payments at 14.78%
		Annual Percentage Rate	185.85
		Annual Percentage Rate may vary.

Villanova crashes Final Four party

By ED SHEARER
The Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Tears were rolling down Rolie Massimino's chubby cheeks moments after he reached his elusive goal — the NCAA basketball tournament's Final Four. "I think we're over the hump now," Massimino said Sunday after his Villanova Wildcats, once seventh-ranked North Carolina 56-44 to capture the NCAA Southeast Regional championship.

By winning the Southeast Regional championship, Villanova, 22-10, became the first Big East Conference team to reach the national semifinals. The Wildcats will face No. 5 Memphis State, 30-3, at Lexington, Ky., Saturday. Memphis State won the Midwest Regional Saturday 63-61 over Oklahoma.

In four attempts during his 12 seasons at Villanova. The Wildcats stopped one of college basketball's traditional powers with a swarming defense that forced 19 turnovers. After trailing 22-17 at halftime, the Wildcats got six points each from Harold Pressley, Dwayne McClain and substitute Harold Jensen in a 22-7 run that gave Villanova a 43-33 lead with just over eight minutes remaining, and the Tar Heels were never able to seriously challenge after that. "I started Jensen in the second half on a whim," Massimino said of the 6-foot-5 sophomore who scored all 10 of his points after intermission. "Their defense was more active than I've seen it on tape," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith, who was seeking his eighth Final Four appearance.

"We weren't really sharp in the second half," he said. "We threw a couple of passes I couldn't believe. A lot of it was mental and you have to credit that to their aggressive defense. This is the time to be sharp, and Villanova certainly was," Smith said. Villanova was led by Pressley with 15 points and Dwayne McClain and Gary McLain with 11 each. Brad Daugherty had 17 for North Carolina. The game may have turned at the end of the first half. North Carolina, 27-9, had a 22-14 lead in the final minute of the first half and was holding the ball for the final shot when Kenny Smith was called for traveling with seven seconds to play. McClain hit a tip-in at the buzzer and turned it into a three-point play by sinking a foul shot that chopped the Carolina lead to 22-17 and gave Villanova momentum going to the locker room. Villanova trailed 26-21 after Daugherty hit a layup two minutes into the second half before Ed Pinckney started a 10-0 spurt by hitting a layup. McClain had the last two baskets to give the Wildcats a 31-26 lead with 14:29 to go. After North Carolina cut the lead to one on two baskets by Daugherty, Jensen hit three baskets in the 15-18 100 range and Pressley added two buckets, including a slam dunk off a steal that provided a 43-33 lead with 8:13 to play. North Carolina was never able to get closer than seven points the rest of the way.

It was only Villanova's second victory over North Carolina in six meetings, including a loss to the Tar Heels in the 1982 East Regional finals. Villanova also lost to Houston in a regional championship game in 1982 and fell to Duke in a 1978 regional championship contest. It was the second time in three years that North Carolina lost in the regional championship game, following an upset by Georgia in the East finals two years ago. The Tar Heels lost to Indiana in the regional semifinals last year. Villanova, which finished third in the Big East, had entered the NCAA as the eighth seed and knocked off top-seeded and second-ranked Michigan in the second round and fifth-seeded Maryland Friday night.

Woodhouse just wants to have fun On the basketball court

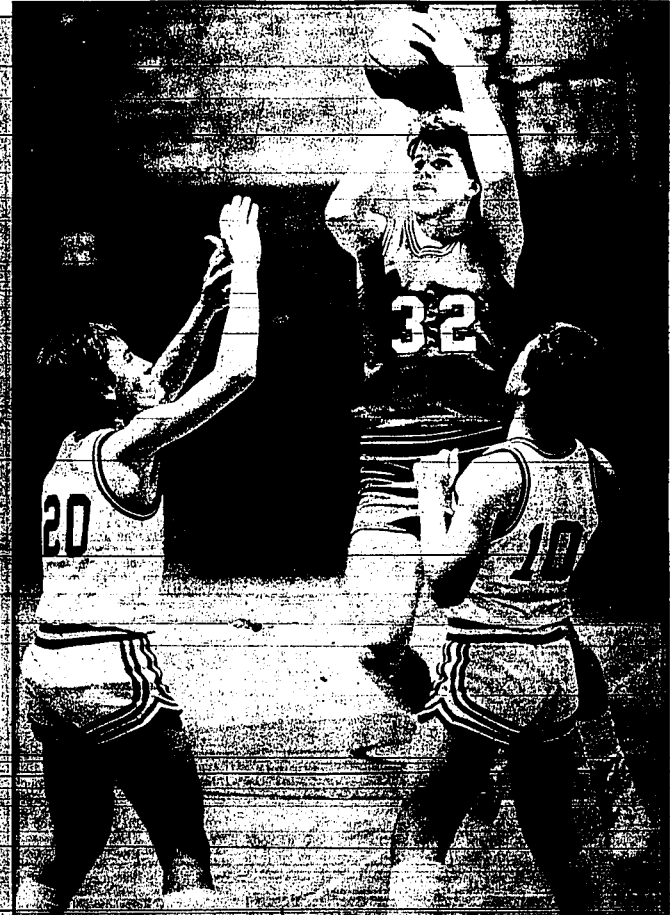

By ELYNN McROBERTS
Times-News writer

OF THE 100 or so high school basketball coaches who believe in stressing a particular aspect of athletics, Win or Lose, they fall into two categories: those who enjoy the game and those who don't. If he's not doing anything in his spare time, Cory Woodhouse is a prep basketball player at Oakley's Cory Woodhouse has enjoyed himself. "It's fun competing," the experienced senior says in summing up his participation in three years of basketball (red and white). Particularly a basketball standpoint, Woodhouse has been a state leader. And Oakley's all-time leading point guard this season (200 points) and a fourth-place finish at the state tournament.

Easter Seals prep all-star games today

TWIN FALLS — Three dozen of the Magic Valley's best high school senior basketball players will get together tonight for the 14th Annual Magic Valley Easter Seals All-Star Basketball Games, capping the prep basketball season in the area. The girls' all-star contest is scheduled for 7 p.m. at the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium, while the boys' game will follow at 8:45.

The games provide funding for both the Idaho Easter Seals Society and the Fourth District High School Activities Association. Only graduating seniors were eligible in the balloting, which was conducted among Magic Valley prep basketball coaches. The East boys have won eight of the previous 13 games, while the West girls have won eight of the 10 games that have been played. The state A-1 tournament to set a record for most points in a single game is scheduled for Saturday at the state fairgrounds. Currently the Idaho boys' basketball mentor Knowles, who played for District 1, is still the state's all-time leading A-1 scorer with 1,936 points.

Cory Woodhouse puts up a shot between two Twin Falls High JV's earlier in season.

Incidentally, the senior's time book of career points are 99 (total) points and a 40-point game high effort against Hansen last season. A Mini-Cassia record, according to Anderson. "One could talk all day about the scoring records," the senior has either broken or at least threatened, but observers say he has a comparable flair for assisting. "Cory is one of the greatest passers to come out of Oakley. He's a very versatile player," says Anderson. "A lot of his find out on the court about the ball and stop there. He's developed all aspects of his game," says Castleton Coach Kelly Murphy. "He's a very good passer as well as a shooter." Woodhouse says his development as an assist man is due to his teammates. He points out that when teams keyed on him to shut off his shooting, he could find the ball off and be sure it would be caught.

St. John's sacks Pack Hoyas next

By JOHN MOSSMAN
The Associated Press

DENVER — With five seconds left, he finally let go, high-fiving his players and assistant coaches in a touching sideline scene. St. John's Coach Lou Carmeseca was finally headed to the Final Four.

"When I looked at the clock and saw five seconds left I thought, 'That's it, we're going, we're going,'" Carmeseca said moments after his Redmen had defeated No. 16 North Carolina State 69-60 Sunday in the NCAA West Regional championship game. Carmeseca, whose St. John's teams have won 371 games in 17 seasons but who never before had reached the Final Four of the NCAA tournament, said he was "very much elated, very happy. After 1,000 games, this one... when I'm going down into the grave, this is the one I'll remember."

The third-ranked Redmen, paced by 25 points from swingman Chris Mullin and 19 from forward Walter Berry, will face No. 1 Georgetown on Saturday in Lexington, Ky., for the fourth time this season. "We looked at the stats at halftime and saw that North Carolina State had 12 foul shots and we had four and that they outrebanded us," Carmeseca said. "In the second half we just reversed that, but we didn't really do anything different. We played the same defense we always played."

St. John's, 31-3 and the top seed in the West, will be in the Final Four for the first time since 1962 when it lost to Kansas in the championship game. The Redmen's victory capped a successful day for the Big East Conference, which will send a record three teams to the national semifinals. Villanova joined St. John's and Georgetown by upsetting North Carolina 64-61 in the Southeast regional championship game and will meet Metro Conference champion Memphis State in the other semifinal.

St. John's, which hit 25 of 31 free throws to 18 of 23 from N.C. State, didn't play a game in the Wolfpack until the final two minutes. Mullin's rebound basket and two subsequent free throws staked the Redmen to a 47-42 advantage midway through the second half. To that point, the Redmen had converted all 13 of their free-throw attempts.

With 6:18 left, the 6-foot-6 Mullin in a mismatch against State's 5-7 guard Anthony "Spud" Webb went inside for a three-point play. A minute later he popped a 15-foot jumper over Webb to give St. John's a commanding 56-48 lead.

Sun Valley adds skiff of new snow Sunday

Sun Valley — Sun Valley picked up a trace of new snow Sunday, bringing the total on the top of Bald Mountain to 35 inches. ## Dixie wins NJCAA cage championship

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (AP) — Dixie College forward Averan Parrish says his layup that gave the Rebels their first national junior college athletic Association championship was easy. "The hard part was battling back from a 38-33 deficit during the final 15 minutes in the championship contest against a small but tenacious Kankakee, Ill., squad Saturday night. Parrish scored on a feed from center Brent Stephenson, who took scoring honors with 15 points. Parrish, the tournament's MVP, scored 14.

"They were running a 1-3-1 zone, and Brent just kicked it right back to me. It was scary after that. The pass made the basket. He did all the work," Parrish said. Said Stephenson, "We've practiced that a lot this year. He just cut to the basket and I gave it to him." The Rebels, champions of Region 18, ended the year with a 35-1 record, while Kankakee of Illinois finished at 31-9. Dixie defeated the College of Southern Idaho twice during the regular season and again in the first round of the Region 18 tournament in Coeur d'Alene earlier this month. In other games Saturday, Moberly of Missouri took third place with a 67-58 win over Midland of Texas; Allegany of Maryland routed Highland Park of Michigan 99-65 for fifth place; and Kaskaskia of Illinois captured seventh place with a 70-57 win over Westark of Arkansas. Dixie rabbed a 31-30 halftime lead, despite a tenacious Kankakee defense. Kankakee took a five point lead, 38-33, on Cleo Foster's basket with 15:21 left in the second half. But Dixie put together an 8-2 run to take a 41-40 advantage with 12:21 minutes to play. Kankakee took a 55-53 lead on Leroy Parnell's basket with 3:30 left, but the Cavaliers failed to score after that basket. Parrish scored 12 of Dixie's first 14 points, but then went scoreless from 13:41 in the first half until the final minute of the game when he hit a short jumper with 46 seconds remaining to give the Rebels a 57-55 lead. Kankakee's Mike Murff missed a jump shot with three seconds left to

Alan Eaton led Kankakee with 14 points. Estes led four Moberly players in double figures as the Greyhounds blasted Midland 67-58 Saturday to take third place in the men's National Junior College Athletic Association basketball tournament. Estes scored 16 points for Moberly of Missouri, 35-5, while Bernard Dancy and Charles Bledsoe each popped in 14 and Mike Milling added 10. Except for a 2-0 deficit at the start of the game, Moberly never trailed. The Greyhounds held a 35-29 lead at halftime and then used a 12-run during the first six minutes of the second half to establish a 47-37 advantage. • See DIXIE on Page B2

UCLA, 19-12, in NIT Final 4

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The UCLA basketball team paid a visit to the Big Apple three months ago and was a top nine in the Bruins are preparing for a second chance.

"We're going back to New York to show the world who the real Bruins are," said first-year UCLA Coach Wall Hazard after the Bruins wrapped up Fresno State's 19-12 quarterfinal game of the National Invitation Tournament.

"I don't know if you (reporters) had us dead and buried, but we're still alive."

UCLA lost six of its first nine games this season. Among those six losses was an 82-40 setback to power-rated John's at Madison Square Garden, site of Wednesday night's NIT semifinals. The tournament finals will be played Friday night.

"This was my biggest win at UCLA as a coach," Hazard said. "It was a tremendous moment for everyone at UCLA."

The Bruins received outstanding performances from a pair of seniors center Brad Wright and guard Nigel Miguel.

Wright scored 15 points and pulled down 15 rebounds while Miguel added 12 points and, perhaps more importantly, held Mitch Arnold, Fresno State's leading scorer, to just two points. Arnold made only one of his 14 field goal attempts.

Wright played very well, Hazard said. "I knew Miguel would have a good game against Mitch Arnold. I could see the fire in his eyes."

College basketball

"There's no way that I would have believed that we could have had 19 wins this year, but we survived the death march and we're a good basketball team."

The Bruins will bring a 19-12 record into Madison Square Garden. They have won 10 of their last 11 games. Fresno State completed its season with a 23-9 record.

UCLA and Fresno State were playing for the first time since the Bruins overwhelmed the Bulldogs 93-43 in 1950 and for only the fourth time ever. A near-capacity crowd of 12,577 watched the contest at Pauley Pavilion.

"I don't think you can shoot the ball for a period like we did and win ball games," said Fresno State Coach Boyd Grant. "We started with too much energy and shot the ball too quickly and got into a hole."

"We played well enough defensively to win, but only if we had shot the ball better."

Louisville 71 UT-Chattanooga 66

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Mark McSwain and Jeff Hall scored 15 points each as Louisville held off a late rally for a 71-66 victory over Tennessee-Chattanooga Sunday night and a spot in the semifinals of the National Invitation Tournament.

The victory topped Louisville to 18-26 on the season and kept alive the possibility for Louisville coach Demu Crum to extend his streak of 20-win seasons to 13. Tennessee-Chattanooga, the Southern Conference regular season champion, ended the season at 24-9.

Louisville joins Indiana, UCLA and Tennessee in the final four teams. Pairings for the March 27 games in Madison Square Garden will be announced at a later date.

Louisville shot a blistering 71 percent in the first half behind a strong fast break and strong rebounding, to just 38 percent for Tennessee-Chattanooga as it cruised to a 35-24 halftime lead.

But Tennessee-Chattanooga turned the tables in the second half behind Grant Williams. Williams scored 15 of his 32 points in the second half as Chattanooga burned the nets for nearly 60 percent, while Louisville hit just 47 percent.

Chattanooga's pressure defense also forced Louisville into six turnovers during a 10-2 run that pulled the Moccasins to within 52-48 with 7:56 left.

Indiana 94 Marquette 82 (OT)

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Steve Alford scored 29 points Sunday night as Indiana, rallying with free throws at the end of regulation play and in the first overtime, pulled away with 10 more foul shots in double overtime to beat Marquette 94-82 in the quarterfinals of the National Invitation Tournament.

The Hoosiers, 19-13, scored the final five points of the first overtime, including two free throws by Alford with 35 seconds left and one by center Steve Alford after time had expired to tie the game at 76-76.

A slam dunk by Blah gave Indiana the lead at 78-76, and Alford followed with a three-point play. Indiana's next eight points were on free throws, including two by Blah, Alford and Steve Robinson, who had 19 points.

Blah finished with 18 points for the Hoosiers, who advanced to the NIT semifinals in New York on Wednesday.

Indiana appeared doomed late in regulation play as Marquette, led by reserve center Tom Copa, built a six-point lead. The Hoosiers battled back and finally tied the game at 68-68 when freshman Kreglin Smith, replacing injured Daryl Thomas at the foul line, hit two free throws with 20 seconds to go.

Marquette, now 20-11, again built a five-point lead in the first overtime. Alford pulled the Hoosiers within three, then sank two free throws after he was fouled attempting to steal the ball. The Warriors' Robert Hall had a chance to clinch the game with 25 seconds left, but he missed a free throw and Alford rebounded the ball.

Kelly leads Houston to 5th straight win

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Jim Kelly threw two touchdown passes and engineered the Gamblers to Sam Harrell's game-winning 1-yard touchdown drive with 54 seconds to play Sunday en route to a 27-20 United States Football League victory over the Portland Breakers.

Clarence Verdin started the game-winning drive with a 35-yard kickoff return and after Kelly kept for two yards and a first down, Harrell scored.

The touchdown quelled a comeback by the Breakers, who rallied from a 20-6 fourth-quarter deficit to tie it 20-20 with 3:38 to play.

The Gamblers, 5-0, started sluggishly but led 13-3 at the half on a 50-yard Kelly-Vince Courville pass and field goals of 25 and 42 yards by Toni Frisch.

Houston pulled to a 20-4 lead early in the fourth quarter on Kelly's second TD pass, a 13-yard pass to Mark Barusse.

But Portland quarterback Matt Robinson rallied the Breakers with a 32-yard TD pass to Vince Williams and a 7-yard run by Dwight Beverly. Extra points by Tim Mazzetti tied the score with 3:38 to play and set up Houston's winning drive. The Breakers also scored in the third period on Mazzetti's 25-yard field goal. Mazzetti kicked a 26-yarder to cap the Breakers' first drive of the game.

Kelly finished with 16 completions on 30 attempts for 246 yards and was outpassed by Robinson, who finished with 21 of 33 for 289 yards.

New Jersey 28 Tampa Bay 24

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Herschel Walker scored the winning touchdown with 24 seconds left and Doug Flutie passed for two touchdowns as the New Jersey Generals rallied from a 10-point deficit in the fourth period to beat the Tampa Bay Bandits 28-24 Sunday in the United States Football League.

Flutie started the comeback when, with 5:05 remaining, he capped a 62-yard drive by scrambling away from three tacklers and firing a 7-yard scoring pass to Walter Broughton.

Then, with 24 seconds left, Walker took a pitchout and raced 13 yards around the right end for the winning touchdown. The Generals are 3-2.

Oakland 31 Memphis 19

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Bobby Hebert threw two touchdown passes and fullback Albert Beniley ran for 148 yards Sunday as the Oakland Invaders defeated the Memphis Showboats 31-19 in the United States Football League.

Fullback Tom Newton scored the first Oakland touchdown on a 1-yard run eight plays after Daryl Hart fell on a Memphis fumble off the opening kickoff.

Oakland allowed the Showboats to knot the score 7-7 at the first quarter, but stretched its lead to 21-13 at the half. The Invaders added a 34-yard field goal by Novo Bojovic in the third quarter and a touchdown in the final period.

Hebert, who completed 15 of 24 passes for 169 yards, hit wide receiver Gordon Banks for a 1-yard scoring pass in the second period to put the Invaders ahead 14-7. Hebert found wide receiver Anthony Carter for a 15-yard touchdown pass before the half ended.

Oakland, 3-1, took a 24-13 edge in the third period on Bojovic's field goal. Halfback Eric Jordan finished a six-play, 75-yard drive in the final period with a 2-yard TD run.

Birmingham 7 Baltimore 3

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Birmingham running back Joe Cribbs took a pitchout: Robert Hall had a chance to clinch the game with 25 seconds left, but he missed a free throw and Alford rebounded the ball.

The victory, which left Birmingham 4-1, was the first for the Stallions in five meetings with the defending USFL champions. Baltimore's only score, a 21-yard field goal by David Trout, came at the start of the second half after a 62-yard drive stalled at the Stallions' 4-yard line.

The Stars, 1-3-1, played most of the game without leading runner Kelvin Bryant, who suffered a pulled hamstring on a 7-yard carry with 4:38 to play in the first period.

Bosox steal win from under Schrom's nose

By The Associated Press
The Boston Red Sox held hitters for six innings by Minnesota's Ken Schrom, used a double steal and a three-batter error to take a 2-1 lead against reliever Ron Davis and beat the Twins 2-0 in exhibition baseball Sunday.

After Schrom departed, Davis walked leadoff batter Marty Barrett in the seventh and Bill Buckner singled. With Davis pitching from a windup, Barrett and Buckner worked a double steal and Barrett scored on Davis Sax's sacrifice fly.

In the eighth, Davis walked Rick

Budd wins world cross country title

VALDO JAMOR, Portugal (AP) — With an age difference of 20 years, South African-born Zola Budd and Portugal's Carlos Lopes highlighted the start and end of their respective careers Sunday, winning the 1985 women's and men's individual titles in the World Cross Country Championships.

Track

The 38-year-old Lopes, winner of the event in 1976 and 1984, found the men's 12,000-meter course much to his liking even though he complained before the race of "not having legs to stand on."
The veteran distance runner, who won the men's marathon at the Los Angeles Olympic Games last summer, started out well behind in the front pack and only moved up with the early leaders a third of the way through the race.

Budd's time was 15 minutes, 1 second, well ahead of Cathy Branta of the United States, who finished second in 15:47.
The victory was Budd's first major accomplishment since leaving South Africa.
"I was afraid at the start," she told reporters after the race, "but it went much better than I expected. After that I just relaxed into it."
