Silver-lined clouds are reflected in a local white feathered clouds passed through the mountains west of Twin Falls, Idaho, on Friday, only hours after a rain of over 2 inches fell on the area.

Honduras in turmoil over court seating

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Police arrested the new president of the Supreme Court on Friday, according to his wife, hours after he and four other justices were sworn in by Congress in a power struggle with President Roberto Suazo Cordova.

Congress President Efraín Bu Giron, responding to the arrest of Judge Ramon Valladares Soto, called an emergency session of the legislature Friday night. Reporters counted 50 congressmen present, more than the majority of 42 needed to conduct business.

A military spokesman told The Associated Press that Suazo Cordova had ordered the arrests of all five new justices, and that the head of the armed forces, Gen. Walter Lopez Reyes, "is willing to carry it out."

Suazo Cordova's clash with Congress over the nine-member Supreme Court has become the most critical issue of his three-year-old government.

Eva Reina de Valladares, the wife of Judge Valladares Soto, said he was taken away by secret police — the Honduran equivalent of the FBI. She called the action an "outrage" and pleaded that her husband not be mistreated.

Another of the new judges, Miguel

Gooding's prison to become reality

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — The first privately operated, protective custody prison facility in the United States will be built in Gooding.

City officials reached an agreement for the sale of the vacant state tuberculosis hospital to Buckingham Security Ltd. of Lewisburg, Pa., Friday.

Joe Fenton, vice president of Buckingham Security, made a $10,000 down payment on the $100,000 purchase price Friday and said his company plans to begin construction in late July or August.

The Idaho State Land Board agreed last fall to sell the property to the city of Gooding for $100,000 with the provision that the 35-year-old hospital building and surrounding 6.6 acres be sold to a private party and used for a private correctional facility.

Fenton said Buckingham plans to invest approximately $12 million to convert the site to a 650-bed facility, serving the Western United States.

Gooding Mayor Gene Heller said Buckingham has commitments from several Western states corrections departments to use the "protective custody" prison.

According to the proposal, western states' prison officials will contract with Buckingham for inmate care.

"It is a strong plus for Gooding and the Magic Valley," Heller said.

When the facility is in full operation, it is projected to employ 300 people and Heller said Buckingham also plans to contract locally for auxiliary services.

City Council president Bob Moline said the final contract papers will be signed this morning.

Yarbrough receives 25-year sentence

GARY YARBROUGH 'I can't conform'

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
The Associated Press

BOISE — Gary Lee Yarbrough, a self-acknowledged "front-line Aryan warrior" tied to a group suspected in armored-car robberies and other crimes, was sentenced to 25 years in prison Friday for 11 weapons violations.

U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan also sentenced Yarbrough to five years probation for assaulting FBI agents, and imposed $600 in fines covering all of the counts against the 29-year-old man.

"I don't want to go down into the cesspool with this country," Yarbrough said when Ryan gave him an opportunity to speak before the sentencing.

"I can't conform to a system that is totally anti-Christ. I'm sorry," said Yarbrough, dwelling on his philosophical and political views in the time Ryan granted.

Yarbrough, the former security chief of the Aryan Nations white supremacist group based in the Idaho

Panhandle, has been linked to the murder of Denver radio host Alan Berg but was not charged, it was said.

He was accused of being a felon in possession of firearms and faced other weapons charges after authorities seized a cache of automatic guns, sniper rifles and explosives at his home near Sandpoint. The weapons included the gun Denver police say was used to kill Berg.

A week after pleading guilty to the charges, Yarbrough was convicted of assaulting three FBI agents who searched his home under surveillance during the fall. He has said he will appeal the assault conviction.

Yarbrough faced a maximum penalty of 71 years in prison and $10,000 in fines on all of the counts for which he was sentenced on Friday.

Yarbrough's arrest in November after a Portland, Ore., motel shooting was early in a string of arrests involving members of The Order, a splinter group of the Aryan Nations.

Japanese are object of U.S. Senate's anger

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anger at Japan flared again Friday as senators warned they will retaliate unless Tokyo removes trade barriers and the Reagan administration said the matter was of "highest importance."

"They (the Japanese) are cutting off their nose to spite their face because the (U.S.) reaction is going to deny to them tens of billions of dollars in markets," said Senate Finance Chairman Robert Packwood, R-Ore.

Packwood's comments came the day after the Senate unanimously passed a non-binding resolution urging President Reagan to fight back with quotas and import tariffs if Japan doesn't open its markets.

Meanwhile, Reagan dispatched a personal envoy to Japan to try to ease trade tensions before Congress takes anti-Japanese protectionist action. The Washington Post reported on Saturday editions.

Option taxes topic of Sun Valley forum

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — State Sen. Larry Anderson, R-Twin Falls, said Friday the Idaho Legislature's refusal to give cities and counties the local control over taxes is contrary to the conservative philosophy its majority leadership professes to embrace.

Speaking at a luncheon of the Sun Valley-Kelchum Chamber of Commerce on Friday, Anderson said the attitude of the Legislature toward local option taxes goes against the principle of decentralizing government.

A rookie legislator in the past session, Anderson said he "could hardly believe" the attitudes toward local option taxes among the Senate's conservative leaders.

Conservatives "like local control," he said.

"It's not right that mayors and city councils should bring their problems to the state Legislature. If communities need to raise more money, they should be able to do that," Anderson said.

"That seems like pretty good conservative philosophy to me," he told the chamber that helped sponsor an amendment during the past legislative session to correct constitutional concerns about the state's resort cities local option tax.

The constitutionality of the state law creating the tax is in doubt after Fifth District Judge George Granata Jr. is ruling last fall that it lacks proper safeguards to prevent abuse by those imposing it.

The ruling came in a suit by the Sun Valley Co. against the city of Sun Valley over the city's 5-percent local option tax.

However, the amendment, and other local option tax proposals, died in the Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee, of which Anderson is a member.

In an emotional speech, Anderson told the chamber that he had worked hard and defied the wishes of the Senate's conservative leadership to bring the amendment before the committee after it passed the House by a sizable margin.

After he introduced the bill, Anderson said, he was taken aside by Senate leaders and lectured about "the integrity of the committee system."

However, the senator from Magic Valley's floating district that covers several counties, said he stood his ground against the leadership.

Because of the size of the floating district, Anderson said, he told his critics that he has a wide range of constituents and has "to make some noise for all of them."

He said he told the Senate leaders that "the in-

Indian tribes are gearing up for next battle: water rights

By RICK SHOUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The public hearing on the Snake River water rights case, which could be the last major cause of uncertainty about Snake River water appropriations — uncertainty which extends to the Snake River, is expected to begin in the next few days, negotiators of the Snake River water rights case said.

The tribes are expected to make claims for water to irrigate some 400,000 acres of land on their half-million-acre reservation, which is situated in the Snake River valley north of Twin Falls.

The negotiations were requested by a legislative resolution, as a precursor to the planned adjudication of all water rights within the Snake River Basin.

Rosholt says his consultant company clients "didn't necessarily support the resolution." He says the meetings may have been proposed with the 1986 general election in mind.

The meetings were at the request of the Indians. I think this was the governor's way of saying "I don't need any consternation on the water front," as the 1986 sentiment election approach, he says.

In the event a state-wide federal court, during the adjudication process, issued a decree affirming the Indians' claims to new water, Rosholt says, "There are exposures in the Snake River valley to a natural flow right." On the first-in-time, first-in-right (basis), these guys down here (on the Twin Falls and Northside tracts) have more to lose if you cast off the junior right.

These people have always owned the water rights as part of their real property rights. He adds.

Two injured in midtown crash

TWIN FALLS — Two people were seriously injured at 7 p.m. Friday when the vehicle in which they were riding jumped a curb on Kimberly road and crashed into the concrete base of a large sign at the Stinkie Service Station.

City police said Marvin Dixon, 36, of Route 5, Twin Falls, was the driver of the vehicle. His wife, Christine Dixon, 38, was a passenger in the car.

Dixon was westbound, officers said the vehicle appeared to have gone into a slide and then bounced over the curb and into the sign post and base.

Mrs. Dixon was treated for neck and head injuries and her husband suffered a fractured rib and internal injuries and was in critical condition late Friday night.

Officers said extrication equipment was called to the scene to cut the vehicle open and free the driver from the wreckage. County officers assisted and a fire engine from Boise was called because of gasoline leaking from the damaged vehicle. Officers said investigation of the accident is continuing.

Wallet with cash turned in TWIN FALLS — An owner who might find a wallet containing $200 in cash and a payroll check for $477 would turn it over to police, but Ken Bloomquist of Evergreen Drive in Twin Falls is different.

Bloomquist brought a wallet to the Twin Falls Police Department Friday night and police found it contained a number of bills and the owner's pay check. Bloomquist said he found it floating in the gutter near a shopping mall and asked that officers attempt to find the owner.

Identification in the wallet indicated the owner resided in Kimberly, but late Friday night he had not been located although police in Kimberly and Twin Falls were watching for the man.

Canadian C-130 planes crash

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Canadian Forces officials said two C-130 transport planes crashed Friday night near the Canadian Forces Base Natimou, north of Edmonton.

A spokesman at the base declined to give further details.

Witness Frank Boogman said he and his family were eating dinner at their home near the base when they saw three of the four-engine Hercules aircraft flying in formation. He said two appeared to drop suddenly and he then saw a huge fireball, and flames and smoke were visible for a considerable time afterwards.

Other witnesses said it appeared the two planes touched wings and then crashed into a hangar. One person said he saw a parachute floating to earth after the crash.

Karen Quinlan birthday noted

MORRIS PLAINS, N.J. (AP) — Priests and family members gathered Friday at the bedside of Karen Ann Quinlan to mark the 31st birthday of the woman who lapsed into a coma nearly 10 years ago and whose parents waged a historic right-to-die case battle.

A Mass was held shortly after 7 p.m., said a spokesman for the Morris View Nursing Home.

Mgr. Thomas Trapasso, who has served as the family's spiritual adviser, said about a dozen people, including the immediate family and three other priests, were expected to attend.

The religious ceremony has been held every year since Mrs. Quinlan was taken to the nursing home in June 1976, he said.

Judge suspended for ruling

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The state Supreme Court on Friday suspended a semi-retired judge who dismissed rape charges against a man because the alleged victim was late for trial, then reinstated the charges five days later.

"Trial judges live with this all the time," said 77-year-old Allegheny County Judge J. Quint Salmon. "It's highly improper for any judge to comment on any matter still pending before the court. Therefore I have no comment."

Prosecutors criticized Salmon after the charges were dismissed on March 20, and demonstrators protested his decision by picketing the courthouse and his home in neighboring Beaver County.

Police exercise in school room

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Police and educators launched investigations Friday into a police training exercise that forced students out of their classroom so two rifle-toting officers could use it for a simulated sniper training situation.

Virginia Gordon, principal at E.R. Taylor Elementary School, said Friday she had agreed to allow the two special response team officers from a nearby police training facility to use a classroom for the 40-minute exercise.

The armed officers arrived at the school at about 1:30 p.m. on March 13 and were directed to an empty fifth-grade classroom after Mrs. Gordon asked the teacher to take her 33 pupils to the library.

Search for bodies is fruitless

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Police searching for bodies Friday dug up the lawn at the home of an art dealer who has been implicated in the sadomasochistic slaying of a modeling student, but the hunt was fruitless.

The search at the summer home of Andrew Crispo, 39, was abandoned about noon.

The purpose of the digging was to "look for possible human remains alleged to have been disposed of on the Crispo property," said L. Robert Dunn, commander of homicide investigations for Suffolk County Police.

The body of Elgi Dag Vestri, a 28-year-old modeling student, was found March 10 on an estate in Rockland County, about 75 miles northwest of Southampton. Vestri's body was clad only in a hooded leather mask that police say is of a type used in sadomasochistic sex.

Police refused to confirm or deny the arrest report.

Suzanne Covadonga said earlier Friday that the legislature's removal of five of the nine justices and swearing in of the five new judges was a virtual coup. He said he would "not permit" the installation of judges elected illegally in violation of the constitution.

The president ordered the armed forces to a state of alert, according to the military official who spoke on condition that he not be identified. But there was no interference at the installation ceremony at the legislature.

In a 15-hour session that ended early Friday, the 52-member legislature removed five justices for alleged corruption. Suzanne Covadonga later said on nationwide television that the "situation amounts to a rupture of the constitutional order and, therefore, a technical coup."

By Girón told lawmakers before the vote "We are stating principles that are not limited exactly as occurred with the former justices, the democratic regime declines and opens the doors to social unrest."

He later told reporters — 50 legislators from four political parties voted to remove the judges and to urgently respond to the demands of our nation."

The high court is appointed by the legislature but has had the president's complete backing. The nine justices were known to be his friends.

"What is occurring is simply the weakening of the unfortunate influence of Suzanne Covadonga in his attempts to control the government powers and the political, social, student and professional organizations of the country," J. Orlando Gomez Cisneros, a leader of the president's Liberal Party, said during the Thursday night session.

Yarbrough

The Order has been tied to armored-car robberies in California and Washington last year, and to the June 'submachine gun killing of Berg, a Jew-who-used his program to denounce extremists."

Ryan's sentence followed the recommendation of Assistant U.S. Attorney Ron Howen. Yarbrough's attorney, James Kaufman, requested a prison term of five years. Yarbrough could be eligible for parole in about eight years.

Wearing a full red beard and dressed in brown suit, Yarbrough stood before Ryan and admitted that he had a "pretty colorful" past that includes juvenile and criminal offenses outside Idaho. But he said he had left behind to start a new life in the state.

"I wanted to be left alone to pursue my religion and teach my children the way I wanted to teach them, not the way the government wanted to teach them," the father of two said.

He discounted the seriousness of the crimes for which he was being sentenced, arguing that although firing in the direction of the FBI agents was wrong, he did so out of concern for his privacy and property.

"I can't understand how our United States government cannot understand my constitutional rights to privacy and to protect my home when I feel I'm being threatened," he said.

Yarbrough said the agents deliberately intimidated him in a ploy to have him charged and to search his home.

"I don't see any dead FBI agents. I don't see any dead federal judges. I don't see any dead lawyers," he told the jury.

Yarbrough also said he was a survival instructor with valid reasons to possess the weapons found at his home.

In his statement to Ryan, Yarbrough also denied he is a racist and said that although blacks and Indians "can stand up and say they're proud," a white man who does that is labeled a racist and bigot.

Kaufman, claiming prosecutors wanted Yarbrough punished for the Berg killing and other offenses with which he has not been charged, depicted his client as a victim of media hype that cast the man as a "monster" leading an army against the federal government.

"We're not here to punish Yarbrough. The Order or the Nationalists Church," Kaufman said. "We can't sentence him here. His very crime hasn't been charged with."

In urging a five-year sentence, Kaufman said Yarbrough "needs to go up and face life" and would be incarcerated for a longer time.

Kaufman also questioned whether there were any real victims in Yarbrough's case.

"There's no evidence of facts here that are really shocking to the conscience of the court," Kaufman said.

Howen recalled that some of the weapons found in Yarbrough's home had no purpose other than to maim or kill people.

Yarbrough's arrest in Portland came after a shootout from which he escaped. "The Order," Robert Mathews, escaped. Mathews later died in a fire at a Whidbey Island, Wash., house he occupied during a standoff with police.

tegrity of the committee system didn't elect me and send me here. The people elected me and sent me here and I'm not going to stop fighting for them."

"They ignored me," he said.

If Granata's decision is upheld by the Idaho Supreme Court, the chamber would have to work with the tax's opponents to find an acceptable solution to get around another local option tax passed, Anderson said.

"The time now is not to be angry. The time is to go to those people and ask them what's bothering them," he said. "The legislators' process is a 'system of compromise,'" he said.

The cities of Ketchum and Sun Valley not only met stiff opposition from the Sun Valley Co., but unexpectedly that of several utilities, including Idaho Power Co. and Utah Power and Light, when it tried to get the amendment through the Legislature.

"It was just stunned when I saw those lobbyists' moving around," Anderson said.

"We did something up there to upset them and I don't know what," he said.

Those guidelines will help the Legislature in amending the resort cities option tax and creating other local option taxes, he said.

"I'm hopeful the Supreme Court comes up with those guidelines so all the interests in the state and in the (Wood-River) valley, can sit down and decide the best direction for such taxes," Evans said.

"I think the Legislature was proper in delaying that issue until the Supreme Court can provide some guidelines," he said.

Evans said the Legislature is fearful of the mishandling of taxes on the local level.

"I encourage the chamber and the cities of Ketchum and Sun Valley to begin early and build state-wide support for the option tax before they approach — the Legislature — with another proposal."

Other state politicians also advised the supporters of the tax to work with their adversaries. These included Sen. Gail Bray, D-Boise, Rep. Gary Robbins, R-Dietrich, and Gov. John Evans. R said he hopes the Supreme Court offers some guidelines for restructuring the tax when it hears the city of Sun Valley's appeal of Granata's decision later this spring.

Water

Winters Doctrine, which resulted from a 1908 Supreme Court case on Indian water rights.

Clive Strong, who heads the attorney general's Natural Resources Division, says that doctrine provides a "water" right, dating from the establishment of the reservation, for "all practical, irrigable acreage."

In the case of Fort Hall, the reserved water right's priority date would be 1867, well ahead of the 1900-era priority dates in force for diversion at Milner Dam.

Howen's potential sticking point for the tribes in their efforts to assert a reserved right for water to irrigate 100,000 new acres of land, is a tribal ordinance passed by the Fort Hall Business Council in the mid-1960s, which authorized construction of the Milner Dam — an irrigation project on the reservation.

According to a 1978 study by Phillip Rastler, then an assistant attorney general, assigned to the state's Department of Water Resources: "A congressionally imposed reservation right in the Milner works was consent to the priority and validity of 'non-Indian' rights previously established under the laws of the State of Idaho to the waters of the Snake River and its tributaries arising on or flowing through the Fort Hall Bottom with the reservation."

It was that prerequisite — consent to the priority and validity of non-Indian rights — which the Indians' business council approved, Rastler states.

However, Funke says the proper interpretation of that ordinance is that the priority of existing non-Indian uses was consented to only in relation to the tribes' water rights for Milner and not for other water rights on the reservation.

In addition to their reserved rights under the Winters doctrine, some tribes have successfully asserted additional, aboriginal rights to minimum stream flows for watercourses in which they have fished or hunted for thousands of years.

Funke says the Shoshone-Bannock tribes intend to assert such rights for Snake and Salmon river tributaries lying outside of the reservation's boundaries.

Alan Robertson, a hydrologist with the Department of Water Resources, says the Indians could claim as much as 800,000 acre feet per year. But he says the water could be made available despite the river's "fully appropriated" status.

There are still sites available to build additional upstream reservoir storage and the water-use on the river is characterized by a large amount of existing storage and by "liberal" water use practices, he said.

"There's a lot of water in the upper Snake. It's very liberally used and has a lot of storage."

More development by the Indians is probably possible without running folks out of water, he said. But he adds the institutional changes in water-use practices are needed to free up the water for the Indians' or other appropriators' uses.

However, to provide that financial incentive, some party needs to be willing to purchase the excess water.

The tribes, under the Winters doctrine, are likely to be unwilling to pay for a water right they already claim to hold. Likewise, existing junior users — such as those served by the diversion at Milner — may show similar reluctance.

Funke offers another option. "The tribe and the state hope the federal government will provide additional upstream storage," he says.

Portuguese welcome royal pair on visit

OPORTO, Portugal (AP) — Thousands of people waved miniature Union Jacks and Portuguese flags Friday to welcome Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip to this northern city, home of the British-dominated port wine industry.

The royal couple, accompanied by Portuguese President Antonio Ramalho Eanes and his wife, Manuela, were treated to the cheers of residents lining their route into Oporto after flying in from Lisbon, the capital 200 miles to the south.

Acting Mayor Carlos Brito presented the monarch with the keys to the city before the queen, wearing a peacock blue ensemble and matching feathered hat, stepped out on to a balcony to watch folk dancers perform in her honor.

The royal party then traveled to a picturesque old neighborhood by the Douro River, where dozens of row boats, sculls and old port wine boats greeted them.

After a luncheon held by city officials, the royal couple walked to the city's business club for a reception with Portuguese and locally based British businessmen.

Choirboy gets award for hit pop record

LONDON (AP) — Paul Miles Kingston, a 12-year-old choirboy, was awarded a silver record disc Friday for a Latin song that has reached No. 3 on the pop charts and has sold more than 250,000 copies in Britain.

Paul, of the Winchester Cathedral choir, sings a duet in "Pie Jesu," a single release from British composer Andrew Lloyd Webber's hit album, "Requiem."

The boy and co-singer Sarah Brightman; Lloyd Webber's wife, were presented with silver discs by the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Most Rev. Robert Runcie, in ceremonies at his Lambeth Palace residence.

Silver discs are awarded when single records sell 250,000 copies or more.

Lloyd Webber was awarded a gold disc for the album, which has sold more than 100,000 copies in Britain and has reached No. 5 in the British album charts. Gold discs are for albums that sell more than 100,000 copies.

Director practices psychology in films

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eleven years ago, director Adam Brooks considered a career as a doctor. Today, he views himself as a practicing physician — but his patients are his films.

"I hurt people physically or psychologically in the first reel and then try and heal them," explained the 28-year-old director of the new comedy, "Almost You."

The movie opens with an argument and is followed by a car accident, an acute case of burnout, an assault with a crutch and a stab or two at adultery. The healing occurs under his direction.

"Almost You" won a special jury prize at the U.S. Independent Film Festival in Utah in January.

Fans mob shopping of Star Wars films

By The Associated Press

Hundreds of fans spent the night outdoors for a chance to visit a galaxy far, far away, but the Force was not with all of them as tickets to see the complete "Star Wars" trilogy sold out in minutes in eight cities.

"Star Wars" from 1977, "The Empire Strikes Back" from 1980 and "Return of the Jedi" from 1983 were screened in sequence Thursday at $10 a head to benefit the Public Broadcasting Service's children's programming fund.

The studio and LucasFilms doesn't make a penny from this, and the theater is only taking expenses, said Dennis Higgins of 20th Century Fox, which released the three movies together for the first time.

Many devotees of the science fiction genre about the adventures of Luke Skywalker, Princess Leia, Darth Vader, Han Solo, Chewbacca, Obi-Wan Kenobi and a pair of robots began lining up Wednesday for a chance to sit through the 6-hour 48-minute showing.

By the time the ticket office opened Thursday at the RKO Warner Twin just off New York's Times Square, an estimated 2,000 fans had lined up along 48th Street and down Eighth Avenue. Only 1,000 seats were available.

"It's like waiting to meet God," said Jon Robert Shaps.

"I've seen Star Wars 250 times and can recite entire scenes by heart," said Bill Karp of Plainview.

In Denver, some people waited in the cold as long as 17 hours, but tickets for the 913 seats were sold out in 25 minutes, said Dave McNeely, manager of the Continental theater. About 500 people had to be turned away, he said.

Jay Skinner and Mark Baumgart were the first to buy tickets at the Continental, having slept in a car in the parking lot overnight before inaugurating the ticket line at 6 a.m.

"They've never done this before and they might never do it again," said Baumgart.

James Norris, 19, a University of Colorado student, had spent the night in the theater parking lot, too. Over-nights supplies for him and his friends, Paul Power, 20, and David Schulerud, 16, included lawn chairs, sleeping bags, a portable stereo, peanut butter, graham crackers, two kinds of jelly, bread, vanilla wafers and four brands of beer.

"It makes you forget how dull the rest of the world is — and Harrison Ford is in it," said Elliott Duffy, 18, a student at the University of Colorado, who got to the Continental before dawn. "I realize I'll never get shot at by a laser, but this is one way to experience it."

It took only 45 minutes to fill all 1,252 seats in San Francisco's Coronet Theater.

Good refuses parole

Sandra Good is still loyal to Charles Manson family

ALDERSON, W.Va. (AP) — Sandra Good, a member of the Charles Manson family who served 10 years for mailing death threats to businessmen, refused to leave prison Friday because she would be prohibited from associating with Manson or his other followers, officials said.

Ms. Good, who has a child by Manson, refused to accept a release certificate containing "a condition that she not associate with any members or former members of the Manson family," said Wynne Sizler, warden of the Federal Correctional Institution for Women.

"She has been an excellent prisoner in her 10 years here, but she remains very committed to Charlie Manson," added Dave Helman, the warden's executive assistant.

Ms. Good also objected to placement in a halfway house in Camden, N.J., officials said. Helman said she had initially been scheduled to go to Sacramento, Calif., but "there was a lot of adverse reaction" in that state and the federal parole commission changed her destination. The Manson family was based in southern California.

Several times in the past month, Ms. Good has said she does not want to leave the prison, where she has been serving a 15-year sentence. She was convicted of sending death threats through the mail to corporate officials whom she claimed were polluting the planet. Officials said they had no choice but to schedule her release because of the time off for good behavior she had accumulated.

Ms. Good said in a recent interview that "I want to be where my family is, and my family is in prison." Although she was not involved in the Manson family murders of actress Sharon Tate and eight other people in 1969, she defended Manson's actions.

Her rejection of the release terms requires the prison to continue holding her, Ms. Sizler said. "She will have a hearing by the federal parole commission in the next 60 days," the warden said. "At that point they will give her another date for release based upon coming up with another plan."

A 33-year-old former California surfer girl, Ms. Good has worked as a gardener at Alderson, the nation's only federal prison for women. Officials said her closest friend has been Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme.

Preliminary test on vaccine to curb colorectal cancer shows promise

NEW YORK (AP) — The initial success of individually tailored cancer vaccines sharply reduced the recurrence and severity of colorectal cancer in a new study has prompted a large-scale, national trial of the vaccines.

In a study reported in the current issue of the journal Cancer, doctors found that vaccines made of living cancer cells from a patient's tumor can slow or prevent the subsequent appearance of cancer elsewhere in the body.

"We're very excited about it," said Dr. Herbert C. Hoover, chief of surgical oncology at the State University of New York in Stony Brook. But he quickly added that "we need further study."

"We don't want people to get the idea we've got a cure for cancer," he said.

The American Cancer Society estimates that 138,000 Americans will get cancer of the colon or rectum in 1985, and 60,000 will die from the disease. Only lung cancer will kill more people, the cancer society says.

Hoover said he and researchers at six other institutions in the Eastern Cooperative Oncology Group have begun a four- or five-year study of 400 to 500 patients to determine, with greater certainty, whether or not the vaccine is effective.

In the initial study, 20 patients were given the vaccine. Four of them have had recurrences in the two to four years they've been followed, but none have died, Hoover said.

In a comparable group of 20 patients not given the vaccine, nine have had recurrences and four have died. The vaccine is not intended to pre-empt colorectal cancer, but only to block recurrences in patients who have already had colorectal tumors surgically removed. Hoover emphasized.

Computers at IRS creating backlog

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pesky problems with a new computer system have created a backlog of more than 1 million individual tax returns waiting to be processed by the Internal Revenue Service.

One result will be a longer waiting period to get a refund, but IRS officials said Friday that the delay generally will be only four or five days.

That would mean most people die a refund on returns filed by now should expect a wait of eight weeks. "But it always takes eight to 10 weeks at the end of the filing season," IRS spokesman Wilson Fadelly said.

The filing deadline is April 15, and the law gives the IRS 45 days to process returns after that date. If processing delays a refund beyond June 1, the IRS is required to pay interest. "We're doing everything possible to meet that date," Fadelly said.

Students expelled for punk clothes

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — About 40 students were suspended Friday for showing up at a junior high school in punk-style clothing, one day after a protest against the school's ban on such fashions led to four arrests.

George Haekenson, an associate superintendent with the Minneapolis school district, said that, except for the one-day suspensions and someone setting off a fire alarm, classes resumed without disruption Friday.

Susan B. Atoney Junior High School.

A meeting for parents at the 900-student school in south Minneapolis was set for April 9 to discuss the dress policy, Haekenson said. Officials also said they plan to meet with student representatives Monday.

Principal Rachel Leonard, in letters to parents last Friday, said the administration was banning "dress that is overly conspicuous or overly distracting." Violators faced suspension.

Cited in the letters as examples of inappropriate "punk" or "breaker" dress were spiked hair, studded bracelets and belts, exposed underwear, ripped and torn clothing, tattooed or marked skin, gaudy makeup and shower caps.

Thursday's student protest began with a sit-down demonstration in the school. The students then moved outside where many sat in the street, some chanting, "We don't need no dress code."

Mother of wrongly convicted man forgives woman for lie about rape

CHICAGO (AP) — In a tearful exchange Friday on national television, the mother of a 28-year-old man imprisoned six years for rape forgave her son's accuser for what the young woman says was a lie.

"You're forgiven, Cathy," Barbara Dotson said in reply to Cathleen Crowell's emotional apology. "I just want my son back, and I thank you so much for coming forward. It took a lot of courage."

Mrs. Dotson's son, Gary, was convicted in 1979 on charges of rape and aggravated kidnapping after Ms. Crowell accused him of a crime she now says she made up.

"I'm so sorry for what I did to you and your family, especially to Gary and his name and how I took six years away from him," said Ms. Crowell, a 23-year-old mother of two who lives in a small town in New Hampshire. "And I really want your forgiveness, especially Gary's forgiveness."

"I wish I was wealthy, I wish I could give him six years, and I wish I had $1 million I could give him to start his life over with, but I don't," Ms. Crowell said, her voice breaking.

"I'd give him anything I have, my family has, for him."

The exchange took place on NBC's "Today" show, where Mrs. Dotson and Ms. Crowell appeared in separate studios.

Mrs. Crowell is the woman's maiden name and she has declined to make public her married name. The Chicago Tribune reported in Friday's editions that her last name is Webb. Her attorney, John McLario, could not be reached to confirm this.

In an affidavit filed Tuesday, Ms. Crowell, formerly of suburban Tomewood, recanted the testimony that led to Dotson's imprisonment. The affidavit said that in mid-1977 when she was 16 she had sex with a teen-age boy and was "concerned about the consequences of my promiscuity and thought I was pregnant and therefore decided to claim I was raped."

Police arrested Dotson, of suburban Country Club Hills, after Ms. Crowell's made-up description of a suspect seemed to match Dotson's. She later picked him out of a lineup, saying he was her attacker. Circuit Court Judge Richard L.

Samuels, who originally sentenced Dotson to from 25 to 30 years in prison, has agreed to reconsider the case at a hearing on Thursday, with both Ms. Crowell and Dotson expected to appear.

McLario has said Ms. Crowell faces the possibility of being charged with perjury but that he did not expect this to happen. Mrs. Dotson said her family did not intend to file any complaint for damages.

Army winds up drug test mailings

WASHINGTON (AP) — After nine months, the Army says it has just completed notifying more than 48,000 active-duty and former soldiers that they have a right to challenge urine tests that indicated they had used drugs.

Elaine Henrich, an Army spokeswoman, said Friday the service has mailed roughly 48,000 letters since last June "and there are only a few hundred left to go."

The letters advise the recipients that if they were disciplined or discharged from the service because of positive drug tests given during an 18-month period in 1982 and 1983, they have the right to petition for a special review to clear their records, regain lost rank or re-enter the Army.

According to the spokeswoman, records should be cleared and that they are being given a second chance to respond to date. She added that no figures are available as yet on the outcome of the reviews for those who did respond, "although I know no one has asked to come back into the service."

Thus the active-duty and former Air Force personnel who receive notices will be informed that the service has already decided their records should be cleared and that they are being given a second chance to return to the Air Force.

The Air Force says it has so far sent out such notices to 522 active-duty personnel.

Youth kept alive with heart pumps

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A teenager who was said to be well 10 days ago was being kept alive Friday by external pumps that were assisting his diseased heart, surgeons said.

Doctors were hesitant to transplant a heart into the youth because they feared a mysterious viral infection would destroy it.

Michael C. Jones, 16, of Indiana, was listed in critical condition at Jewish Hospital. Doctors said his blood circulation was being aided by two small pumps similar to the Jarvik-7 artificial heart, which has been implanted in William Schroeder and Murray Haydon at Humana Hospital Aulderson in Louisville.

Court rules against lawyers' daily lunches

CHICAGO (AP) — The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled that chicken Vesuvio are not tax-deductible, at least not for law firm partners who meet for lunch daily at their favorite restaurant.

Attorney John D. Moss, a partner in the firm of Parrillo, Weiss & Moss, attempted in 1976 and 1977 to write off his portion of the lunches he shared every working day with his partners at Cafe Angelo near the firm's downtown offices.

When the Internal Revenue Service disallowed the $1,000-a-year deduction, Moss challenged the IRS in court.

A three-judge appellate panel rejected Moss' challenge Thursday because only the partners took part in the luncheons.

"They know each other well already," Judge Richard Posner wrote. "They don't need the social lubrication that a meal with an outsider provides — at least don't need it daily."

Duarte seeks support in legislature

JOSE DUARTE
Wants more party seats

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The president's job is not at stake in Sunday's elections, but Jose Napoleon Duarte is running hard to try to change the balance in a legislature that has blocked or hamstrung many of his policies.

Voters will choose a 60-member National Assembly and 262 mayors. Duarte's moderate Christian Democrats are given little chance of picking up the seven seats needed for a majority in the assembly, but he wants at least to keep the rightist bloc from gaining enough strength to override his veto.

The elections have, in effect, become a referendum on the president's first 10 months in office, and even the Christian Democrat campaign reflects that.

One of its full-page newspaper advertisements reads: "We have the man. We should support him."

Campaign ads by the opposition call Duarte's government "the dictatorship" and point in general terms to joblessness, closed schools and violence.

A fierce brand of mudslinging marked the three previous political campaigns held during the U.S.-backed government's 5½-year-old war against leftist guerrillas, but this one has been fairly quiet despite its importance to both sides.

The leftists, as usual, are not participating. Guerrilla leaders said they would not disrupt the elections so long as troops stayed out of their territory, but nonetheless have attacked 17 municipal buildings and 11 telecommunications offices in five weeks.

Civil registries are stored in the city buildings, but because the Central Electoral Council has microfilm copies of voter lists, the losses are not expected to affect balloting.

Destruction of a telephone office can isolate a small town, however, because it often is the only place to make or receive a call.

Rebels ordered drivers to stay off the country's roads as of Thursday, a tactic they use frequently to damage the economy. They did not say how long the ban would last.

Troops were guarding highways and 10,000 soldiers were deployed, particularly in the eastern and northern regions where the rebels are strongest.

There are many critical issues in El Salvador that Duarte's administration and the rightist-controlled National Assembly have been unable to resolve.

The war persists, prices are soaring and unemployment or underemployment remains near 50 percent.

Two rounds of peace talks have been held with the leftists, but there has been no visible progress that Duarte could use to his advantage. A third round was postponed until after the elections.

Media make reports tied to Soviets public

PARIS (AP) — The newspaper Le Monde and a television station made public Friday the contents of what they said were secret Soviet documents that convinced President Francois Mitterrand to expel 47 Soviet diplomats and officials in 1983.

The Soviet Embassy immediately protested what it called a "calumnious campaign of flagrant distortion" and asked the French government to "cut it short."

Le Monde said the documents provide a glimpse of the extent to which the Soviet Union relies on industrial espionage.

The expected newspaper-published for the first time the identities of the 47 it said were expelled April 5, 1983. It listed numerous embassy officials, UNESCO representatives and the director of the official Soviet news agency Tass in Paris, O.A. Chirkov.

A six-page synthesis of a 185-page report, said to have been photographed in Moscow and provided to the television station TF1 by sources in France's counterintelligence service, dealt with information allegedly obtained by Soviet agents over a period of three to four years.

According to the report, which carried the signature of Leonid Smirnov, vice president of the Presidium of the Council of Ministers and head of the Commission for Military Industry, the information enabled the Soviets to improve certain arms, missiles and combat planes.

Militiamen exchange fire in Beirut; battles reported in south Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rival militiamen exchanged sniper fire in Beirut on Friday and there were artillery battles around the southern port city of Sidon.

A cease-fire halted fighting between Muslim militias in the northern city of Tripoli. Police said seven people had been killed and more than 25 wounded in the three cities.

Reports from southern Lebanon said an Israeli officer has told village leaders "Israeli will withdraw" its troops sooner than planned.

A four-party team called for a cease-fire between warring militias in Beirut, but the conflict continued across the "green line" separating the Christian and Muslim sectors of the city.

Lebanese army units and Christian militiamen traded artillery fire in and around the southern city of Sidon, but a truce declared Thursday night between rival Muslim militias in Tripoli, Lebanon's northern port, was reported holding.

A source in south Lebanon said an Israeli army major, Shlomo Eliya, informed village leaders that the army would withdraw from Tyre, Lebanon's southernmost port, by April 10 and would leave Lebanon altogether by May 15. The source spoke on condition he not be identified.

Israeli leaders originally set late summer as the target date for full withdrawal, but guerrilla attacks on the troops increased and they began talking about June.

The source added, however, that Eliya also told a meeting Monday in the Shiite Muslim village of Bint Jbeil that Israel would keep a force of "advisers" in Lebanon to maintain contact with local militias it created to guard its northern border from attack.

Eliya said the militia enclave would stretch into areas patrolled by U.N. soldiers, the source reported.

The Israeli military commander in Tel Aviv said four of his soldiers were slightly wounded Friday by a rocket fired at their position at Lake Qaraoun in south Lebanon. It also said Israeli troops killed three guerrillas in an overnight clash on the Litani River, Israel's front line in the area.

In Beirut, a four-party committee representing the army and Lebanon's three principal warring militias called a "prompt cease-fire and a cessation of 'retrenchment'" at midday along the green line.

Sniping persisted in the shell-pocked former commercial district, however, and the committee said its members were touring the area in an attempt to enforce the truce.

An earlier cease-fire had halted overnight battles with rocket-propelled grenades.

Artillery battles broke out at midday between Sidon's army garrison and Christian militiamen on the hills just west of the city, shattering a truce called at dawn, police and journalists in the city reported.

Police said the fighting spread Friday afternoon to the neighboring town of Mieh Mieh, where Christian militiamen traded mortar and rocket fire with Palestinians in an adjacent refugee camp.

The state radio said President Amin Gemayel was intervening to halt the fighting in Sidon, Lebanon's third-largest city, which Israel's occupation army evacuated Feb. 16.

The battle started Thursday in the south Lebanon provincial capital, 25 miles south of Beirut.

In the northern port of Tripoli, a cease-fire called Thursday night between Sunni Muslim militiamen of the fundamentalist Islamic Unification movement and irregulars of the pro-Syrian Arabian Knights organization held through Friday afternoon, police reported.

It was the first major clash between the two militias since a Syrian-sponsored truce Dec. 20 halted their two-year struggle for dominance in Lebanon's second-largest city.

Common Market countries discuss effects of economy

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Leaders of the 10 European Common Market nations gathered Friday to discuss ways to cope with the effects of U.S. economic trends.

The leaders, headed by Italian Premier Bettino Craxi, also were expected to discuss the implications for Europe of American research into a space-based missile defense.

The summit began nine hours after it was announced that Spain and Portugal had reached agreement with the Common Market on terms of their entry into the world's largest trading bloc next January.

Craxi, as holder of the rotating presidency of Common Market summits, welcomed the two prospective new members on behalf of the 10 current member countries.

Marathon negotiations on membership terms for Spain and Portugal ended with an agreement that capped more than six years of bargaining. The treaties of accession still must be approved by the national parliaments of all Common Market countries, plus those of Spain and Portugal.

The agreement between the two Iberian nations will enter the Common Market Jan. 1, 1986.

Details of the agreement were not available. It is thought Spain and Portugal will integrate their agriculture and industry into the Common Market during a period of up to 10 years.

Reaction in Madrid and Lisbon was jubilant Friday. Premier Mario Soares of Portugal said: "Now we are in Europe and I'm very happy about it." He spoke in an interview with a Lisbon radio station.

"A new stage is beginning for Spain and if we succeed in being up to the task ahead of us, we will be able to take a great leap forward," Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez told a news conference.

In an early round of Friday's summit talks the 10 leaders considered a report warning of the dangers to Europe of wild swings in the value of the U.S. dollar and the large U.S. budget and trade deficits.

Soviet chief working behind scenes

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Mikhail S. Gorbachev's first three weeks as Communist Party chief have been marked by heavy publicity for a renewed discipline drive linked to his administration.

But in contrast to the publicly accorded his predecessors, photographs and films of the 54-year-old Party general secretary have not been regular features in newspaper and television reports. Gorbachev's name is rarely cited in editorials by the state-run dailies and his portrait has not appeared on Moscow streets.

Reasons for this restraint are hard to pinpoint, and it is still too early to determine whether it marks a permanent change of style.

A Soviet source said the Kremlin has ordered editors to avoid lionizing the new party chief — a policy that could simply be intended to paint Gorbachev as modest and hard-working.

The relatively low-key publicity may spring from a desire or need to promote the concept of collective leadership while policies associated with Gorbachev are being vigorously publicized.

The party daily Pravda and regional papers have given prominent coverage over the past week to local party meetings at which warnings were made to dishonest, tax-and unqualified officials.

On Friday, the official news agency Tass announced the removal from office of the third member of the party's powerful Central Committee in the past week.

In a dispatch from Minsk, capital of the Byelorussian republic, Tass said Vladimir A. Mikhalich, local party chief since 1977, "was freed from responsibilities as first secretary of the regional party in connection with his transfer to other work."

Last Saturday, Tass reported that the Soviet minister of power and electrification and the head of the Kirov regional party committee had also been removed. It was not clear if the officials would keep their seats on the Central Committee.

Elsewhere, a district party boss retired in Turkmenistan without the usual note of thanks that would indicate an honorable departure, and a member of the Azerbaijan republic's Central Committee was kicked out of the party for misusing his position.

Over the past two years, Pravda said 44 party officials in the Perm region of central Russia had been relieved of all responsibilities on grounds of incompetence, and said another 312 town and district of-

MIKHAIL GORBACHEV
Policies publicized

Officials had been fired for "unseemly deeds."

The officials were removed before Gorbachev took office; but the Pravda report may have been intended to back the drive for tighter discipline.

Such a campaign is not new. Gorbachev's reputed mentor, Yuri V. Andropov, launched one during his 15 months as president and Communist Party leader.

But after apparently losing steam under Gorbachev's predecessor, Konstantin U. Chernenko, the discipline drive is again being prominently mentioned, and is constantly linked to the new leadership.

Speakers at local party meetings have borrowed phrases from Gorbachev's speech to the Central Committee plenum that made him general secretary on March 11, in which he called for stricter accountability by party and government officials.

These formulations, and others from Gorbachev's speech, can be found in virtually every press report on the party meetings, which began March 21.

But Gorbachev himself is rarely quoted or mentioned by name, and his activities are being given less attention than were those of past Soviet leaders.

This contrasts sharply with past practice.

Throughout the Soviet Union's 67-year history, the image of the party leader has always been closely linked with the administration. Portraits of each have adorned several prominent squares, and were removed quickly upon his death. The successor's image was then posted.

Chernenko became party chief in February 1984 following Andropov's death.

Judge narrowly wins vote to top Greek post

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Judge Aristos Sartzetakis was narrowly elected president of Greece on Friday in a rowdy Parliament vote that was disputed by the conservative opposition.

The 56-year-old supreme court justice appealed in a telecast for national unity, saying "Our country is too small to support the luxury of national divisions."

The choice of Sartzetakis as president could herald a swing to the left by Prime Minister Andreas Papandreu, whose Socialist Party gave the withdrawing support from the pro-Western, conservative president, Constantine Caramanlis last month.

Papandreu plans constitutional amendments that will transfer the president's executive powers to the prime minister and the ruling party. Caramanlis was widely regarded as a restraint on Papandreu. The prime minister has promised sweeping domestic and economic reforms and his winning platform in 1981 included a pledge to close the four U.S. military bases in Greece when their operating agreement expires in 1988. Caramanlis, who led Greece back to democracy after the 1967-74 dictatorship, resigned the presidency three weeks ago after his unexpected rejection by the Socialists and in protest against plans to amend the 1975 constitution.

During the Parliament session, speaker Michael Stephanides struggled to keep order as conservatives hissed and thumped their desks when the Socialist Cabinet ministers voted, and as the Socialists cheered wildly each time Papandreu got up to speak.

Sartzetakis will be sworn in Saturday at a special ceremony in Parliament at which Archbishop Seraphim, Orthodox primate of Greece, will officiate.

The president-elect is a member of no political party. Sartzetakis, the only presidential candidate Friday, waved from the balcony of his fourth-floor apartment in the residential district of Holargos at a crowd of more than 1,000 chanting "You are the symbol of democracy!"

Iraq says 'devastating' blow given to Iranians

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq said its warplanes rained Tehran on Friday to "force the rulers of Iran to accept the principle of total peace."

The air raid, reported by a military spokesman on state television, was the only major action reported in an otherwise calm day in the 4½-year-old war. The spokesman said the attack on the Iranian capital was "devastating," but did not give details or say how many aircraft were involved.

Potential mediators headed again for the region and in Moscow, the Soviet Union told its Iraqi allies it wants a negotiated peace.

peaceful, however, Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani said Iran would not consider a general cease-fire because it was preparing a "major offensive" against Iraq. It has offered to observe a truce in attacks on civilian targets.

Rafsanjani's comment was carried in a report by Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency that was monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus.

J.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, beginning a tour of the Middle East on Friday, has made himself available as a mediator if he gets invitations from both sides. He said Thursday that he had one from Iraq, but not from Iran.

County rejects injury claim

BLACKFOOT (AP) — Bingham County officials have rejected a $300,000 claim filed by an Idaho State University engineering student injured in an accident involving a school van and a county road grader.

The Bingham County Commission received a claim from Anthony Brown, 24, from Carmen, in the Salmon area. The claim covered injuries sustained by Brown in a Feb. 21 accident at the intersection of Highway 26 and Willow Road.

Brown suffered a broken vertebra.

Commission Chairman Dale Arava said the claim will be referred to Jay Stout, deputy county prosecutor, who will decide whether to send it to the county's insurance company.

Panel to seek new insurance

CALDWELL (AP) — Faced with a 900 percent increase in liability insurance premiums, the Canyon County Commission has agreed to let its current commercial policy expire and look for a new carrier or launch a self-insurance program.

Commission Chairman Carlos Bledsoe said the county just simply cannot afford the proposed premium increase from $18,000 to $182,000 a year so there is no alternative but to let the policy expire at midnight Sunday.

Although the county plans to talk with a Utah insurance company before deciding whether to launch a self-insurance program, Bledsoe conceded that local insurance agents have contacted companies across the nation and found none that would take the county's policy over. He blamed the spiraling rates on increased claims both nationally and against the county.

Murder charges may be filed

CALDWELL (AP) — Claiming Magistrate Alfred Perry overstepped his authority, Canyon County Prosecutor Richard Harris says he may refile second-degree murder charges against a Greenleaf man accused of being intoxicated when his truck hit another car last month and killed two people.

Harris said he made a final decision next week, but he was highly critical Friday of Perry's decision a day earlier to reduce the original second-degree murder charges against Angel Puga, 40, to felonious vehicular manslaughter.

Perry, citing previous cases in which second-degree murder charges were voided under similar circumstances, said the prosecutor had failed to prove Puga intended to kill Tillie Fillmore and her 11-year-old daughter Janet as required by Idaho law.

He said he may decide to drop the vehicular manslaughter charges, refile the murder charges and take the matter before a different magistrate in hopes of obtaining a more favorable decision.

BLM studies Lookout Butte

BOISE (AP) — The Bureau of Land Management has been directed to reassess its rejection of an area on the Idaho-Oregon border for wilderness study.

Chief Whitlock, BLM director for Idaho, said the agency in 1981 declared that the 104,800-acre Lookout Butte area in southwestern Idaho and southeastern Oregon south of the Owyhee River lacked wilderness characteristics.

The area is a plateau adjacent to the 440,000-acre Owyhee Canyonlands wilderness study areas.

The Committee for Idaho's High Desert appealed to the Interior Board of Land Appeals, which recently set aside the decision and remanded the case to the BLM.

Whitlock said the agency planned to issue a revised decision by July.

District expecting shortfall

MONTPELIER (AP) — Officials in the Bear Lake School District are looking for ways to offset an expected budget shortfall of nearly $300,000 for the 1985-86 school year.

Board members last week heard a financial report from business manager Michael Sorenson that projected a zero-balance at the beginning of the next school year and an expected shortfall of $250,456 by June 30, 1986.

Sorenson said that figure did not include salaries for at least two of the seven additional teachers the district must hire to meet state guidelines and accreditation standards.

Also not included are provisions for paving the high school parking lot or installing new turf on the football field, he said.

Board members, which face re-election in May, now are considering whether to seek a plant facilities levy or some other source of revenue to meet the expected financial crunch.

Remedial program funding urged

BOISE (AP) — Upgrading education standards must be coupled with the funding of remedial programs to ensure borderline students a reasonable chance of high school graduation, a national education spokeswoman says.

Mary Hatwood Futrell, president of the National Education Association, said Friday the national dropout is 850,000 students a year.

Ms. Futrell, who teaches in Alexandria, Va., predicted that figure would increase. If stricter graduation requirements are implemented without providing financial support to help students who can't perform at the new level.

Inadequate funding for remedial programs where stricter guidelines have been implemented amounts to programming some students for failure, she said.

Ms. Futrell spoke to about 500 members of the Idaho Education Association during their annual meeting in Boise.

Ms. Futrell said the NEA supported increasing base teacher salaries to at least $20,000 a year, "so we can compete as professionals."

Merit pay programs have failed because administrations have not provided necessary funding.

In North Carolina, merit pay funding was provided for only a small percentage of teachers, she said. Those who ultimately got a merit raise were teachers whose names were drawn from a hat, Ms. Futrell said.

She likened merit pay to a waitress receiving a tip — one must be at "the right table at the right time" and getting "the right customer."

Ms. Futrell said she supports the rights of parents to educate their children at home, but believes certain guidelines must be in place.

Home education became an issue in Idaho last year when three New Plymouth couples were jailed for failing to send their children to school or provide them with an approved educational program.

Ms. Futrell said about 10,000 families nationwide are involved in home-schooling programs.

Police call off seige at home

BOISE (AP) — Local authorities surrounded a single-family home on Boise's west side early this morning after gunshots were reportedly fired from inside the house. But the seige ended several hours later after officials decided the situation presented no immediate danger.

No injuries were reported during the incident. Police said they believed Terry Wayne Haight, 31, who was the target of the seige, may have been using drugs and drinking and had fallen asleep.

"There has not been any hostages, and we're talking about a man who has a weapon in his own home," said Ada County Sheriff Vaughn Kitten. "We just don't think it's a situation that's explosive at this time."

Police Lt. Bill Braddock said officers continued watching the house from a distance to insure the situation remained peaceful.

The incident began shortly after 3 a.m., when officers from both the city and county went to the home after Haight got into an argument with paramedics, Braddock said. The paramedics had been called to the house by Haight's wife who feared her 2 1/2-month-old baby then left the house with a relative, he said.

After talking with the couple, the officers left about 4 a.m. when they were assured the Haight's would settle their disagreement peacefully, Braddock said. Mrs. Haight and the couple's 2 1/2-month-old baby then left the house with a relative, he said. A half hour later, however, Braddock said Mrs. Haight returned to the house, got into another argument with her husband, at which time he fired five shots, Braddock said. The shots were not directed at Mrs. Haight, who then fled and called police.

Settlement may be used for potholes

POCATELLO (AP) — Local potholed streets could get a boost from an unusual source — money paid by local gas dealers to settle a gas price fixing civil suit.

Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones said Friday the state is leaning strongly toward turning over the settlements, minus legal fees and state expenses, to the local highway district. "Help is on the way for the potholes," said Jones in a telephone interview.

Four defendants in the suit — Herzog Oil, Earl Pixton, Don Blesner and Continental Fuel — have already settled out of court for a combined $80,000 in damages.

Jones expects the other defendants — Triangle Oil, Roberts TBA, James B. Leese, Howard O. Miller and H. David Miller — to eventually settle out of court as a result of a decision by U.S. District Judge Ray McNichols last week to deny their motion to dismiss the case.

Jones, who was pondering adding new defendants to the case, said he doubts that will happen.

The state will run advertisements Sunday in three newspapers advising the public of the possibility the damages will be given to the local highway district.

Jones tells individuals how they may opt out of the suit if they wish to pursue damages on their own, but Jones thinks it's highly unlikely anyone will do so.

Corrections Board seeks new member

BOISE (AP) — Amid criticism that the Commission on Pardons and Paroles has been too lenient with violent criminals and a state investigation into activities of the panel's new chairman, the state Corrections Board is looking for applicants to file a vacancy on the commission.

Notices seeking applications for the job have been sent to media outlets in southwestern Idaho and a spokesman said a decision will be made next week on expanding the public solicitation.

The vacancy was created earlier this month when the state Senate effectively ousted Chairman Ellie Kiser amid claims that she has been too lenient with prison inmates convicted of violent crimes. The chamber following the recommendation of its Judiciary Committee, refused to confirm Mrs. Kiser to a new term on the commission.

Since then, Gov. John Evans has speculated that it may be difficult for the board to find qualified applicants for the job because of the Legislature's handling of Mrs. Kiser's reappointment. It was the second time the Senate has denied confirmation to a commission appointee on those grounds.

Deckard enters race for chairman of Idaho GOP

BOISE (AP) — Pledging to "stay the conservative course," former state Rep. Jerry Deckard has entered the race to succeed Dennis Olsen as chairman of the state Republican Party.

"Dennis Olsen has laid a very strong foundation for the party for the years to come; and I see no reason to change it," Deckard said Friday in announcing his candidacy for the job. Olsen held six years before his untimely death earlier this month at his Idaho Falls home.

The announcement by Deckard, a former

Eagle mayor and owner of a construction company, will apparently make it a two-man race when the state GOP Central Committee meets April 13 to select a new chairman.

The only other announced candidate for the job is Idaho Falls attorney Blake Hall, and Deckard conceded that it will be a close vote between the two of them.

Although perceived by many around the state as a moderate Republican, Deckard said he has consistently supported the state party platform and would have no trouble working with conservative offshoots facing re-election next year like U.S. Sen. Steve Symms.

"The chairman's political philosophy is not as important as his organizational skills and his ability to represent the party," contended Deckard, who said his major focus as chairman would be expanding and solidifying the GOP grassroots organization across Idaho.

Calling 1986 a critical election year, Deckard said he did not agree with others who are calling the potential Democratic slate for state and federal offices a "Dream Ticket" with Democratic Gov. John Evans challenging Symms, former Gov. Cecil Andrus seeking to regain his old job and freshman Congressman Richard Stallings building a strong record for which to retain the seat he captured last year after two decades of Republican control.

Deckard, claiming more visibility for a party chairman from the media center of southwestern Idaho, said he decided to run after meeting with party leaders and testing his support in the eastern and southern parts of the state.

He said he has promised the party to deliver the 1986 election, claiming it is critical for Republicans to regain the governor's seat.

Merger's hot issue is high school

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

HANSEN — Differences over the placement of the high school continue to divide the Hansen, Kimberly and Murtaugh school boards in their discussion of the consolidation of the three districts.

At a Thursday night meeting of the three boards, the Kimberly board proposed that the high school be built on a site near the Kimberly-Hansen boundary and that the existing Kimberly High School be used for the junior high school.

The Murtaugh board proposed that the high school and junior high school be built in Hansen proper.

Kimberly board chairman Kent Taylor said the area between Kimberly and Twin Falls will grow the most, but that proposing the school be built in northwest Kimberly is not in the spirit of compromise.

After the boards recessed for discussion of the two proposals, Hansen board chairman Richard Youree said the Hansen board felt Hansen was the most logical site for the high school. He said Hansen had land for the school and a gymnasium that would save the consolidated district from having to build a new gym.

The three boards agreed Thursday night that trustee district boundaries in any consolidated school district proposal should run north and south.

Though all three boards said the consolidated district board should have five or seven members, Murtaugh chairman Allen Cummins said the Murtaugh board is leaning toward favoring a five-member board.

Kimberly and Murtaugh also split on the question whether to consolidate debt in a consolidated district. Kimberly proposed the debt be consolidated, while Murtaugh proposed the debt not be consolidated.

Taylor said that a consolidated district would limit the amount of school-constructor funds available under a bond issue if the debts of Kimberly and Hansen were not assumed by the new district.

Cummins said Murtaugh patrons would never support a consolidated district if Murtaugh taxpayers had to take on the debts of the other two districts.

Kimberly's proposal included a provision that the Murtaugh Elementary School be upgraded to a standard equal to or greater than the elementary schools in the other two districts.

Murtaugh's proposal also included provisions for the renovation of the Murtaugh elementary school.

"I think we have started addressing some of these issues we have been staying away from. I'm glad the lines of communication are open, said chairman of the joint boards, Richard Youree.

The boards voted unanimously at the end of the meeting to collect accurate census data for each town for use in drawing trustee district boundaries for a consolidated district.

No date was set for the next joint board meeting.

Trucks rip up roads

Near Jerome

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Spring in Jerome County doesn't just mean green grass, flowers and song birds to many rural residents and to Jerome Highway District officials.

Early spring is when dairies begin cleaning out their corrals and when trucks begin hauling manure to farm fields for fertilizer. It's not a pleasant season, say residents who live near dairies and who must drive the county roads behind the manure trucks.

But to Clarence Miller, director of the Jerome Highway District, there are other problems. He said the large trucks of contract haulers that move the smelly commodity are causing serious highway break-up that will cost Jerome County taxpayers dearly.

"If they would just wait a few weeks until the rest of the frost has gone out of the ground and it dries up a little, it would save a lot of money and problems," Miller said.

He said some of the dairies are cooperating and have held off on the hauling, but others are going ahead in spite of appeals for a delay to save the roads.

Farmers are anxious to get the manure in the fields for fertilizer so they can begin working ground, he said, and dairies are anxious to clean out the winter's accumulation of wastes.

In addition, Miller charged Friday that contractors are not observing the spring break-up load limits that are posted on county roads. He said they are filling their large trucks to capacity which pits them well over the legal load limits.

A mobile "port of entry" from the Idaho Department of Transportation was operating in the county this week and a lot of tickets were written Wednesday, Miller said. However, he said most of the trucks were again hauling full loads on Thursday.

"When you have one overload truck right after another going over the road for several days it creates a hydraulic action that pumps the mud up to the ground surface just below the pavement and the pavement crumbles," he said.

Miller said there was a lot of moisture last fall and the ground was wet several feet down before it froze. When it froze, it stayed frozen for longer than usual. He said there is moisture still under the upper layer of frost, which the heavy traffic pumps to the surface.

"I don't think it's right for about a dozen dairies to create a problem that is going to cost the rest of the taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars," Miller said.

He added it may be necessary to leave the broken roads to gravel around dairy farms since it is almost impossible to maintain the paving during spring break-up periods if the manure hauling continues.

Bomb threat clears school

Classes resume after search

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

CASTLEFORD — Both the Castleford high school and elementary school buildings were evacuated and searched Friday morning after a telephoned bomb threat at the high school.

Superintendent Robert Hutchin said the call was received at the school office at 10:18 a.m. A muffled voice, presumed to have been that of a man, called and warned that a bomb would go off in the high school in 45 minutes.

Hutchin said school officials immediately evacuated the buildings and notified Castleford and Twin Falls County officers. He said that following a search, students were returned to the building to complete the day's schedule.

Since then, he said the school office had received a couple of calls in which no one responded when the clerk answered, but no further threats. There were no problems or incidents in the evacuation and search, Hutchin added.

Chief Deputy Sheriff Harold Jensen said the high school and the Castleford elementary school, located on the same property, were both evacuated, although only the high school was mentioned in the threat.

Children were placed in buses and then moved into the gymnasium after it had been thoroughly checked by officers.

"Our officers went in immediately and made a search of the building," Jensen said. "And once the time limit (45 minutes) had passed they returned and checked everything in both buildings. We didn't just go through lockers, but we checked every inch of the buildings."

Jensen said in view of what happened in Boise recently when a bomb discharged in a school, officers and school officials were taking no chances.

"If (the Boise school bombing) was probably that once in a thousand times that there actually was a bomb, but we can't afford to take such a call seriously," Jensen said.

Trailer overturns, fertilizer dumped

HANSEN — About 20,000 pounds of zinc sulfate spilled Friday morning at the junction of Idaho Highway 50 and Interstate Highway 84 northeast of Hansen, but no serious problems resulted, according to Idaho State Police in Twin Falls.

The spill that occurred in Jerome County brought state and county officials to the scene for investigation and clean-up measures. Officials said the chemical is a fertilizer and was in a solid, granulated form.

ISP officials said the truck, driven by James C. Martin, no age given, from Yakima, Wash., had just made a delivery in Hansen and was north-bound on Highway 50, turning west on the entrance ramp of I-84. The truck overturned and the fertilizer spilled. One had been emptied in the earlier delivery.

A "pup" trailer behind the first was carrying the 20,000 pounds of fertilizer.

As the truck went around the curve onto the freeway entrance the small loaded trailer tipped over the guardrail and into a borrow pit, spilling its contents.

Officers cited Martin for traveling too fast for road conditions and for failing to properly secure his load. There were no injuries and no problems in cleaning the spilled fertilizer, officers said, although officers were not clear on what was done with the spilled material.

Jerome County officers said they were told that once the material contacts the ground it cannot be salvaged without being reprocessed.

Officials said the Environmental Protection Agency joined law enforcement officers in the investigation and clean-up process.

New telephone books will be available next week

TWIN FALLS — Distribution of Mountain Bell telephone directories to nearly 95,000 telephone customers in the Twin Falls area will begin on Friday, company officials say.

The directories, which are published by U. S. West Direct, contain Mountain Bell residence, government and business listings and a Yellow Pages section. Listings for Continental Telephone, Piler Mutual Telephone, Gem State Utilities and Rural Telephone customers are also included in the book.

Customers in Twin Falls, Bliss, Buhl, Castleford, Dietrich, Eden, Gooding, Hogenman, Halley-Bellevue, Hazelton, Jerome, Kel-chum, Kimberly-Hansen, Murtaugh, Shoshone, Stanley, Sun Valley, Wendell, Carey, Piler, Hollister, Richfield, Three Creek, Jackpot and Jarbridge will receive directories.

This year's directories feature a new cover design, which is being introduced during the year throughout the 14-state area served by U.S. West Direct. The new design contains simple, bold graphics for clear identification of the directories.

The covers are dominated by the title "The White Pages" in blue letters on white and "The Yellow Pages" in distinctive red letters on a yellow background.

"With the recent proliferation of companies publishing directories in many areas, customers have expressed the desire to know which book is published for the local telephone company," said Scott Bringham, district sales manager of U.S. West Direct.

"Many of the current books have a similar cover style, and we believe the new design will create a unique and memorable identity for our products."

The Twin Falls directory, which contains 544 pages of white and yellow pages, is 13 pages larger than the 1984 book. Customers who notice other changes customers may notice is movement of the area code and time zone map from the back cover to inside the back cover. An additional white page lists Jarbridge customers of Rural Telephone Company for the first time.

Bringham suggested that customers discard last year's telephone directory upon receipt of the current telephone book to eliminate the possibility of using old telephone numbers that have changed.

Delivery of the directories is expected to be completed by late April. Mountain Bell customers who do not receive a directory by April 30th should contact the company at 1-833-333-3333. Customers of independent telephone companies should contact their local company.

State can provide help for disabled people's problems

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Despite the preponderance of austerity-minded state budget writers, at least small victories are possible in establishing programs for the developmentally disabled, a handful of Magic Valley residents learned Thursday evening.

Addressing a public forum at the Adult and Childhood Development Center in Twin Falls, John Watts, executive director of the Idaho State Council on Developmental Disabilities, recounted some of the council's successful efforts to establish programs intended to help Idahoans afflicted with developmental disabilities.

The organization, which acts as a planning and advocacy body for the state's developmentally disabled, spends most of its $400,000 annual budget in pilot programs intended to benefit the developmentally disabled, he says. During the 1983 legislative session one such pilot program — to provide training to parents for home therapy of their disabled children — was established in the state's Department of Health and Welfare, he says.

"We make grants for project development and find someone to fill the gap after we get the project going," says Watts, adding that the council has a "hitting average" of better than 50 percent in establishing pilot programs that are continued by a state or local agency or non-profit organization when the council's financial support is removed.

The council is operating a smattering of pilot projects including: establishing a Special Olympics program in a couple of north Idaho cities, establishing a support group for parents of the developmentally disabled and establishing curricula for teaching living skills to the disabled, he says.

Thursday's meeting in Twin Falls offered an example of how the council is sought out for its advocacy role.

Cheryl Nickles of Jerome, the mother of a 6-year-old autistic son, recently joined with other Idaho parents of autistic children in establishing the Idaho Autism Association. She told Watts of the special problems faced by parents of children with autism and of the lack of programs and available funds to address those problems and to provide the special therapy and training that those children require. She said there is "a need to lobby for a more intensive program."

Watts told her how to apply for a grant from the council. The council is the product of both state and federal law and operates on a $300,000 annual federal appropriation and $100,000 in state contributions, most of which are "in-kind" contributions of staff or facilities, says Watts.

Glenns Ferry search continues

GLENN'S FERRY — Daily search efforts are continuing along Snake River east of Glenn's Ferry. A missing couple whose vehicle plunged into the river early on March 23.

Elmore County officers said the search is continuing each morning for the bodies of Ronnie and Deanna Crone, ages 18 and 19. Their vehicle was pulled from the river Saturday afternoon but neither of the occupants has been found.

City officers attempted to stop the young couple and another Glenns Ferry man, Darren Bybee early Saturday morning. The two were allegedly racing when officers tried to catch them.

The Bybee vehicle went out of control and rolled over and officers later found a broken seat belt, indicating a vehicle had gone into the river. Search revealed the Crone's car in the river near where the guardrail had been torn away.

The committee is seeking volunteers to help process mailings. Coffee and doughnuts will be served.

Burley man to face charge

PIOCHE, Nev. (AP) — A Burley man has been bound over for trial on cocaine trafficking charges following a month-long investigation into drug-smuggling activities in Las Vegas area.

Ronald Lee Russell, 35, remained in the Lincoln County, Nev., jail Friday following his preliminary hearing before Justice of the Peace Sarah Gettker. Bond was set at $40,000.

Russell was arrested earlier this month after authorities were tipped off by another suspect in the drug investigation that a shipment of cocaine was headed toward Idaho. Police found a pound of cocaine valued at $35,000 to $40,000 in his car when he was pulled over in Alamo, Nev. The cocaine was part of some 3.5 kilograms of drugs worth more than $200,000 confiscated as a result of the month-long investigation.

The competition is open to junior and senior high school students. The music competition is open to vocal and instrumental, is 10-12 classification or instrumentation is acceptable. All music must be memorized. Music finalists will present a concert to the public on April 27 at the Academy at 7:30 p.m.

The art competition is divided into two divisions: grades 7-9 and grades 10-12. Participants are asked to submit work in one of the following categories: landscapes, animal, fantasy, still life, graphic illustration, figurative and abstract.

Air base plans exercise

MOUNTAIN-HOME — The Air Force is beginning plans for increased aerial exercises to take place at Mountain Home Air Force Base for a week in July, says Air Force Captain Jim Tynan.

Tynan, who is the chief of public affairs at the Mountain Home Air Force Base, said Thursday the Air Force's assessment of the environmental impact of the exercises is "in its embryonic stages."

Tynan says the exercises will include other branches of the U.S. military and will mean an increase in supersonic military plane traffic and an increase in sonic booms in the Mountain Home area between July 22 and 26.

Faith, family help woman deal with result of accident

BY MEBBS BRUMBACH
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Easter is a day of celebration, a time of beginnings and an occasion for spring finery to debut.

For Carmen Keven of Twin Falls, Idaho, the celebration has special meaning. As she sings the Easter cantata with the church choir, her new apparel will be a final and permanent prosthetic leg.

But she doesn't think of herself as handicapped. The prosthesis is "just something that slows me down a little."

"Sure, I'm slow and it's awkward now to bend," she says, but with the help of her husband, Dick, she's getting back to the everyday tasks of life. Speaking of her husband, Keven, she says he's "just beautiful" and adds, "I'd never have been able to go through it all without him and the support of the rest of the family, my friends and the church."

Keven and her husband have been married 39 years, she says. "I know the teamwork is accentuated."

When Keven sweeps the floor, her husband follows up with dust pan and broom. And he helps with the wash, she adds, "because it's done downstairs. When she does it herself, she just takes off the artificial leg and slides down the stairs."

Contrary to her belief that she doesn't have a story worth repeating, her friends at First United Methodist Church say her spirit has been a joy and an inspiration to them ever since the accident on Nov. 2.

That Friday was a day of strong winds. Keven was driving home from work. She was helping Dick in the bean fields. As she changed hands for a firmer hold on the combine, a particularly strong gust knocked her off her feet.

"Although Keven couldn't straighten her right leg, the broken knee didn't hurt at the time," perhaps it was shock. "Then she laughs at herself, remembering being taken to the hospital directly off the combine with her hair her biggest worry."

"I must have been six inches thick with dirt," she says.

There followed, for Keven, a hazy series of events. Surgery was performed on her knee with a resultant plate and six screws. "There's so much I don't remember about the what I had — just wonderful — like a different person — like there wasn't anything bothering me and I had been cured. There was nothing to worry about or dread."

From this perspective, Keven reflects on the "good life" she has had and plans to continue.

She was transferred to University Hospital in Salt Lake City for kidney dialysis, where she underwent five of these procedures before the organs began to function independently. More devitalized tissue was removed from her leg, and it was after this second surgical procedure that Keven began to "receive hints" that her right leg might have to be removed above the knee.

"The deterioration of the leg was found to be worse than anticipated," she says.

Keven accepted the amputation and says simply, "I just figured I could get along without it. There are so many things still worth doing."

This outlook was enhanced by an experience, after the amputation, that Keven finds difficult to describe.

Her words are hesitant — her face radiant. "I don't know if you class it as a miracle or not, but — well, others have told of life renewed because of an experience with the Lord. I felt completely different than what I had — just wonderful — like a different person — like there wasn't anything bothering me and I had been cured. There was nothing to worry about or dread."

From this perspective, Keven reflects on the "good life" she has had and plans to continue.

Camilla Kimball speaks to women

PROVO (AP) — Camilla Eyring Kimball, wife of Mormon Church President Spencer W. Kimball, encouraged women to seek knowledge and become more involved in community service.

"There is joy in learning. There is joy in service," she said in a keynote speech Thursday to nearly 7,000 people on the opening day of a three-day women's conference at Brigham Young University, owned and operated by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Thursday also was the 90th birthday of Kimball and BYU students wished him well by tying 90 helium-filled balloons to the top of the Kimball Tower.

Kimball attended a weekly meeting of church leaders in the Salt Lake Temple, and then had lunch with a small group of friends and associates in his apartment in the Westin Hotel Utah, across the street from the temple.

Kimball has been in trail health since a third skull operation in 1981.

"He's not in vigorous health, but he's there and he's our prophet," said Boyd K. Packer of the church's Council of the Twelve.

Mrs. Kimball also recently celebrated her 90th birthday, "something of an achievement, showing that I've been able to hang on through one more cycle of two seasons."

A former teacher, she described values and risks of education in helping to foster women of faith.

The values were being able to see the goodness in people, learning to appreciate the world, and wanting greater capacity for service.

One of the risks of education is that it may lead to a false pride — but ignorance also has its risks, she added.

Although her education was interrupted by marriage and to raise a family, she never stopped being curious and trying to learn from those around her and from books.

There is a special interchange of ideas that takes place in the classroom, she said, but all learning does not have to happen there.

Reagan pushing businesses into space

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first pilot to break the sound barrier, the first man to set foot on the moon and the first woman to walk in space will serve on a presidential commission to help open up space as a new field for American business.

Thomas O. Paine, a former administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, will serve as chairman.

The 14 members of the commission will include retired Air Force Brigadier Gen. Charles E. Yeager, the first man to fly a plane faster than sound.

Addressing the commission at a luncheon, Reagan said space "should and will become an increasing sphere of investment and commercial activity, a center of attention for entrepreneurs and businessmen."

Computer Technology Aviation Inc. and Kathryn D. Sullivan, a NASA astronaut in Houston, Texas, who was the first woman to walk in space.

"To maximize our benefits, we must look beyond short-term steps to develop long-term goals for our national civilian space enterprise," he said.

Frontier stockholder says airline may fold

DENVER (AP) — The chairman of GenCorp, Frontier Airlines' major shareholder, says the airline could be liquidated or whittled down to a small regional carrier if it is not sold soon.

M.G. O'Neill outlined the possibility on Thursday at GenCorp's annual meeting in Akron, Ohio. His comments at the meeting were reported in Denver newspapers Friday.

Joseph A. Frates. The group offered $18 per share for Frontier's 12 million shares — a total of $192 million.

Spokesmen for the acquisition group and for Frontier say negotiations continue for the sale, but no agreement has been reached.

A Frontier spokesman in Denver voiced hope on Thursday that the sale can be completed, and liquidation can be avoided.

He said that unless the airline is sold soon, GenCorp will liquidate or reduce Frontier in size by Nov. 30, the end of the Denver-based Frontier's fiscal year.

While stressing that he would prefer to sell the airline, O'Neill noted that talks concerning the possible sale of Frontier to a coalition of its employees or investors have dragged on since December.

"I would believe the proposed sale of Frontier to our employees is a reasonable one, but we are optimistic about its chances of success," said Bob Schulman, director of public relations for the airline.

Jim Ritchie, spokesman for GenCorp in Akron, said O'Neill "didn't say or intend" to unduly emphasize the liquidation option.

GenCorp is Frontier's chief stockholder, with 45 percent of its outstanding common stock.

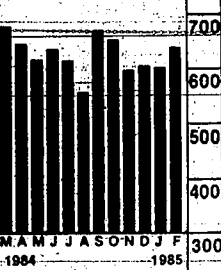

"A fairer characterization of a rather long-winded discussion was that liquidation was one of the options, not that liquidation was likely," Ritchie said. "We have been working diligently on the employee buyout proposal."

The latest offer-to-buy Frontier came March 1 from an acquisition group that includes Frontier employees and Tulsa, Okla., investor

Single-Family Homes Sold in Thousands

Seasonally Adjusted

New home sales rise in February

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of new, single-family homes climbed 6.2 percent in February following a slight drop the month before, the government reported today.

The increase put sales at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 638,000 in February, compared to a rate of 601,000 in January.

The report by the Commerce Department and the Department of Housing and Urban Development represented a downward revision for sales in January. Originally, the government said sales that month had increased 2.6 percent.

The housing industry experienced a sharp slowdown last spring as interest rates began climbing. Rates peaked in July and have fallen for seven consecutive months, leading to a pickup in home sales.

Fixed-rate conventional mortgage averaged 13.47 percent in early February, down from a high of 15.2 percent in July.

The sales report said the biggest gain last month came in the South, where sales increased 15 percent. Sales were up 1.1 percent in the Northeast and 0.6 percent in the West.

Sales dropped a sharp 10 percent in the Midwest.

The average price of a home climbed above $100,000 again, hitting $101,300 in February, compared to $97,900 in January.

The median price of a home was $83,100 in February, compared to $82,600 in January. The median price means that half the homes sold for more and half for less.

The median price for all resale homes in the United States dropped in February by $300.

The realtors base their calculations which require principal and interest payments to total no more than 25 percent of a borrower's yearly income.

THE ACES BOBBY WOLFF

"God must love the common man, he made so many of them." -Abraham Lincoln.

In most games, South would make his no-trump game with little effort. It takes the uncommon defense to beat the game, and few would take note of the missed opportunity after the play was finished.

When West leads his fourth-best heart and when those two juicy heart honors appear in dummy, most Easts would pounce quickly with the ace and return the six. Let's see what happens against this impulsive defense.

Dummy wins and a club finesse loses to West's queen. West delays matters by exiting with a spade, but he knows that East cannot hold any more entries. Dummy wins the spade and knocks out West's club ace. On lead, West knows that it is now or never to cash the jack of hearts. South is held in nice tricks, but that's all he needs to chalk up his vulnerable game.

Each time that East signals encouragement with his heart six instead of rushing in with his ace. When the first club finesse loses, West leads a second heart to East's ace, and a third heart back through South to 10-completes the job. The defenders get three hearts and two clubs, and the game goes down one.

Briefly in Sports

Date for golf tourney switched

TWIN FALLS — Saturday, June 1 will be the date for the Educators' Golf Tournament at the Jackpot Golf Course. The event is usually held on Good Friday. Further information will be sent to participating schools by Ed Peterson.

Gooding links open for play

GOODING — The Gooding Municipal Golf Course opened for play Friday. The course emerged from the snow in good condition. However, golf carts and spiked shoes will be restricted for a while. Fees remain the same as last year. A snack bar and dining area will be added to the present pro shop later this spring.

Outlaw hoops event in Rupert

RUPERT — A men's outlaw basketball tournament will be held April 17-20 at the Civic Center. The team fee is $30. Clubs interested in playing should call Bob Maloney, 436-3110 days or 436-3119 evenings before Friday.

Webb rallies at PBA tourney

BALTIMORE (AP) — Wayne Webb of Indianapolis will be going for his second straight Pro Bowlers Association title as the top-seeded player after vaulting from 13th place into the lead in Friday night's sixth round of the $130,000 Fair Lakes Open. Webb, 33, won last week's "Life Beer" Championship in Milwaukee, averaged better than 228 for eight games in the sixth round and won six of his eight matches. His 42-game pinfall total of 9,669 left him 52 pins ahead of Henry Gonzalez of Colorado Springs, Colo. Also qualifying for today's TV finals were Mark Williams of Beaumont, Texas; Bob Handley of Pompano Beach, Fla., and Charlie Tapp of South St. Paul, Minn.

Car dealer may purchase Jazz

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A car dealer is one of two potential major investors the Utah Jazz National Basketball Association franchise is considering in an effort to stay in Salt Lake City, a newspaper reported Friday. In a copyright story, the Deseret News said Larry H. Miller was one of local investors the financially troubled team was working with to retire a $6 million debt. "If I get involved in the deal, we'll do it in a way that takes care of the problem," said Miller, who owns four Utah car dealerships, two in Phoenix, Ariz., and one in Moscow.

SMU cager charged: Forgery

DALLAS (AP) — Larry Davis, a four-year starter for Southern Methodist's University basketball team, who just completed his senior season, has been charged with two counts of forgery. Davis, 22, was arrested at his Dallas apartment Thursday by University Park police. He was released about midnight on $7,500 bond, the Dallas Times-Herald reported Friday.

Celtics top Philadelphia

BOSTON (AP) — Larry Bird scored 15 of his game-high 24 points in the fourth quarter to help the Boston Celtics survive a furious Philadelphia spurt and beat the 76ers 112-108 in the NBA Friday night. The victory was Boston's 10th straight, tying its longest winning streak of the season. Philadelphia played without Julius Erving, who had an ankle injury, and lost for the fourth time in six games. In opening a six-game Atlantic Division lead over second-place Philadelphia, the Celtics held large leads most of the way.

Chance for more snow exists

IDAHO SKI REPORT

some open powder on the runs. The wind Friday was calm and the access road was clear. Pomerelle will operate daily through Easter and for at least two weekends after that. Hours today: 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Soldier Mountain — Soldier reported clear skies with temperatures in the mid-30s on Friday. There are 48 inches of snow at lodge and 52 inches at the top of the mountain, with all runs groomed. The access road has been plowed and is clear in most spots. Soldier will operate daily at least through Easter weekend. Hours today: 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Magic Mountain — Magic reported fog Friday, with a high of 34 degrees. The resort added 12 inches of snow Wednesday and Thursday, bringing the total to 85 inches at the lodge and 96 inches at the top of the mountain with all runs groomed. The access road has been plowed and is bare in most spots. Magic will operate at least through Easter weekend. Hours today: 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Weibring up by 2 at TPC

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — D.A. Weibring, calm and steady amid the varied disasters that struck down some of golf's more glamorous names, coasted a 4-under-par 68 from unforgiving Sawgrass and took the second-round lead Friday in the Tournament Players Championship. Weibring, a bright, chipper 31-year-old who has a single title to show for nine seasons on the PGA Tour, completed two trips over the Players Club at Sawgrass in 136, eight under par and two clear of the strongest field in golf. An angry Bernhard Langer, who was fined $500 for slow play during the course of his round, fell victim to a back-nine collapse — four bogeys in six holes — and dropped from the lead to a share of second at 138. Langer, a West German who last year led the European Order of Merit and won four European tournaments, had a struggling 70 after playing his front side in a course-record 31. Langer, who said he would protest the fine, shared the No. 2 spot at the halfway point of the annual championship of golf's touring pros with Canadian Dan Halldorson, who moved up with a 68. Cal Peete, the game's most accurate player over the past few seasons, had a 3-under-par 69 despite a double bogey and was tied at 139, only three shots back with first-round leader Hale Irwin.
