House, Senate split on Contra help

By IKE SHANAHAN
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Democratic-controlled House on Tuesday night rejected 248-180 President Reagan's proposal for $14 million in direct military aid to Contra insurgents seeking to overthrow the leftist government of Nicaragua.

The same resolution was approved 53-46 by the Republican-led Senate only a few hours earlier.

Combined, the two votes set up a continuing congressional debate over whether to allow Reagan to provide non-lethal assistance to the rebels.

In both houses, Reagan won some additional support with a last-minute pledge to reopen direct negotiations between the United States and the Sandinista government, a key issue in Democratic opposition to Reagan's policy toward Central America.

Reagan also promised not to use the money for military aid until the end of the current fiscal year on Sept. 30.

The House vote was the first of three on aid to the Contras, and the two remaining alternatives were expected to be much closer when votes are taken Wednesday.

One choice sponsored by House Democrats would require that the $14 million be spent through the United Nations or the International Red Cross for Nicaraguan refugees and to enforce any peace negotiated by countries in the Central American region.

The second alternative, proposed by House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois and supported by the president, would give recognition to the Contras by distributing non-lethal aid to them through the United States Agency for International Development.

In the Senate, 43 Republicans and 10 Democrats voted for the Contra-aid proposal; 37 Democrats and nine Republicans voted against. Sen. John East, R-I.C., did not vote because he is in the hospital.

Specifically, the Senate approved an appropriation for "military or paramilitary operations in Nicaragua."

But Reagan promised in a letter delivered to Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole only a few hours before the vote that he would use the funds only for non-lethal purposes for the rest of the fiscal year ending on Sept. 30.

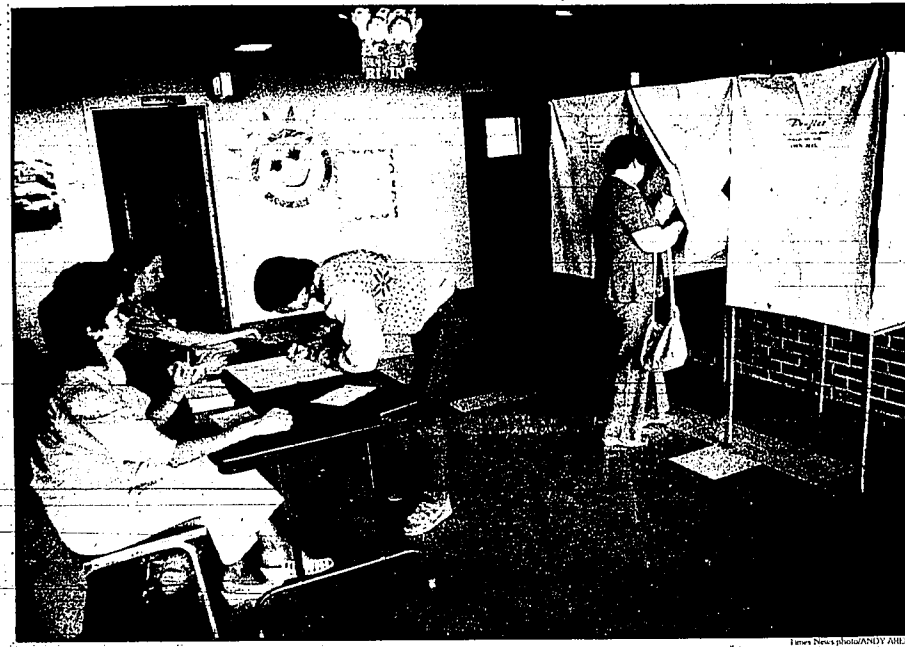

Despite Democratic skepticism about

Reagan's intentions, Dole said, "I think we can trust the word of the president of the United States."

In a written statement, Reagan called the Senate's action "an historic vote for freedom and democracy in Central America." Secretary of State George Shultz, appearing on Capitol Hill with Dole, said, "The Senate stood up for freedom and liberty in this hemisphere."

Reagan's letter was a surprise, and marked an open, last-minute effort to sway wavering senators and House members to his side in a

Kimberly school patrons pass override

By CAROLYN MILLER
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — A $95,000 one-year override levy was passed Tuesday by Kimberly School District voters.

Superintendent Richard Bauscher said he was "glad by the public support of the school district. We will try to make the dollars go as far as we can for quality education."

"It was a record turnout of 392 votes which three times as many voters as cast their ballots last year," said Bauscher. Seventy-five percent of the voters cast yes ballots, he said.

Bauscher said the election results indicated 294 votes in favor of the override and 98 against.

The override levy was necessary, said Bauscher, "due to the failure of the 1985 state legislative session to appropriate enough money. The override represents approximately a 3 percent increase."

The levy will cost taxpayers approximately $1.33 per $1,000 of assessed property value, which is 49 cents per $1,000 more than residents are paying on the existing levy, says Bauscher.

According to Bauscher the override levy will pay for those items needing immediate attention including repairing and replacing four building roofs, equipment for an additional first-grade classroom, replacing unsafe sidewalks and stairs, extending concrete in several locations, meeting building codes and safety recommendations and installing new windows and doors.

Pool proposal in Twin Falls 6 votes short

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Tuesday swimming pool bond election went down to defeat for the lack of six more votes for the pool.

Some 1,839 of the 2,770 people who cast ballots favored the pool, but a two-thirds majority was needed and that made only 66.4 percent.

The City Council will consider a recount, several members said Tuesday night.

"It was just too close," said council member Gale Kleinkopf. "I'm sure it would have been easy to pick up six votes somewhere. If they turned it down like by 10 percent, I could see it. Something this close is really disappointing."

"It was very disappointing," said council member Erik Andersen, also on the committee. "I did expect to win. I haven't heard much opposition."

"The real key to the loss, I think, was that some voters got overconfident," said Lance Clow, co-chairman of a residents' committee supporting the pool.

About half of the city's 5,551 voters turned out to slightly more than half in the city's ill-fated attempt to pass a bond in August 1984 and slightly fewer turned out in the first of the city's three pool bond elections in 1983.

Part of the problem may have been the rainy weather voters had to endure Tuesday, Clow said.

Clow, who helped on the first pool bond also, said he did not know what the city could change on the plan to make the project more acceptable to voters.

After polling registered voters this winter, city officials decided an uncovered swimming pool costing about $1.2 million and located at Harmon Park had the best chance of passing. The city had $500,000 set aside for the pool and needed to raise $700,000 with a bond.

A similar proposal passed in 1983 by 70 percent before a bond counsel declared it invalid on a technicality.

The bond passed in six precincts but failed in Precinct One near the courthouse, Precinct Three which includes South Park, and Precinct Five which includes part of the presidential streets and condominiums near the College of Southern Idaho. Voters were most opposed to the project — only 54 percent supported it — in Precinct Four, which is the farthest from the pool. Voters there also live near a small, private pool.

A week before the election, council members asked what they would do if the vote went down to defeat disagreed. Some said the council would have to take a defeat as a sign from the voters to not want a pool and the $500,000 should be spent for other needs, possibly street repairs. Others said they would keep working for a swimming pool, possibly looking at other ways of financing it.

Better relations remain his objective Gorbachev says U.S. scuttles disarmament

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Mikhail S. Gorbachev said Tuesday he wants better relations with the United States, but devoted much of a party speech to accusations that Washington started the arms race and wants to scuttle disarmament.

The remarks were made in an address to a Communist Party Central Committee meeting at which the new 54-year-old leader oversaw a consolidation of his power with the addition of three full members to the ruling Politburo.

"The completed first stage of the Geneva talks already gives grounds to say that Washington does not seek agreement with the Soviet Union," Gorbachev said. His reference was to the end on Tuesday of the first round of U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms talks that began March 12.

Tying the arms race to the general state of world tension, he said, "It must be said with certainty that responsibility for the present situation rests, in the first place, with the ruling circles of the United States.

"They continue to come out as initiators of the arms' race and sabotage disarmament, which the world community knows well."

Despite the tough talk, Gorbachev did not indicate a change in previously outlined policy — which includes better relations with the United States — according to a text of his speech distributed by the official news agency Tass.

Gorbachev said the superpowers must seek ways to "set straight" their relations.

Homespun former senator dies at 88

The Associated Press

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Former Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., the self-styled "country lawyer" whose homespun humor, animated eyebrows and love of the Constitution made him a folk hero when he presided over the Senate Watergate hearings, died of respiratory failure Tuesday.

Ervin died about 2:15 p.m. MST at Bowman Gray Medical Center at N.C. Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem, according to Roger Rollman, a spokesman at the hospital.

Ervin became ill March 30, suffering from abdominal pain, emphysema and an infected gall bladder. After gall bladder surgery at Grace Hospital in Morganton, Ervin was moved to Bowman Gray on Monday suffering from acute kidney failure. Rollman said the kidney failure was a factor in Ervin's death.

During his 20 years in the Senate, Ervin was both a critic of civil rights legislation and a champion of civil liberties. He fought affirmative action proposals, battled efforts to return prayer to public school and exposed military surveillance of anti-

President launches drive for budget passage

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan said Tuesday that Congress should "stop making excuses and start showing some backbone and leadership" by approving a politically hazardous budget plan limiting Social Security increases and killing some popular spending programs.

Arguing that Amtrak subsidies and the Job Corps should be terminated along with other programs, Reagan declared, "We can no longer afford to finance everything."

The Senate opens debate on the budget package today. Tonight, Reagan will make an address on the budget from the Oval Office.

Reagan addressed the annual meeting of the National Association of Realtors in opening a lobbying campaign for congressional approval of a plan intended to shrink the federal deficit below $100 billion by 1988 without raising taxes.

The audience of several thousand real estate brokers cheered and applauded the president repeatedly and promised to urge Congress to vote for the plan endorsed by Reagan and Senate Republican leaders.

In a full-page newspaper advertisement, the association called the proposal "big, bold, brave" and said it should be supported, even though "no body could like every part of it."

Reagan readily acknowledged that passage of the budget "will not be easy to get through the political process." He said lobbyists representing various interest groups "are out in force," working with sympathetic members of Congress to substitute tax increases for budget cuts.

"Do you think the American people want their taxes increased," Reagan said.

"No," the audience shouted.

"Well, do you think Congress should stop making excuses and start showing some backbone and leadership," the president said.

"Yes," the audience replied with a burst of applause.

California resists tempting resolution

As a gifted communicator, President Reagan has the remarkable ability to continue his impassioned plea for a balanced-budget constitutional amendment at the same time he has submitted five federal budgets with a built-in total deficit of nearly $1 trillion. That's trillion, or $1,000,000,000,000.

Even the National Governors Association endorsed the concept this year, in an apparent effort to rationalize its demand for a 1986 budget freeze that would spare several state-aid programs from the Reagan budget ax. Going back into the 1970s, legislatures of 32 states have adopted resolutions endorsing the amendment. Fortunately, the California Senate Rules Committee did not fall for the balanced-budget shell game, and refused this week to speed the measure along to a Senate committee-of-the-whole for an exercise in demagoguery.

Instead, the committee sent the resolution to the Judiciary Committee, where, if common sense prevails, it will languish through the rest of the state Legislature's two-year session. There is a chance that Michigan will become the 33rd state to call for a constitutional convention this year. California should not suffer the ignominy of becoming the 34th and last state that is needed to assemble the first convention in the 196 years since the U.S. Constitution was ratified.

As in the past, the argument has been made that since virtually every state must have a balanced budget, why not the federal government? In fact, most states are not required by their constitutions to have balanced budgets — only that their governors submit budgets that theoretically can be balanced by tax increases, spending cuts or other means. Additionally, most states are not debt-free.

There is nothing in the world to prevent Reagan or any President from presenting a balanced budget to Congress each and every year. The President could withdraw his budget today and submit a new one that is balanced. If Congress sent it back unbalanced, through a series of "budget-busting" appropriation bills, Reagan could veto them, just as he has promised to do so many times.

Legislators in 32 states have demonstrated how easy it is for a state lawmaker to cast a throwaway vote for a simple little resolution to Congress and then to wash his hands of any responsibility for the outcome. So far, California has resisted that temptation, and should continue to do so.

Some lessons for Congress in economy

John Makin

Last week's news that the economy grew at an annual rate of only 1.3 percent was just godsend. It came just as Congress is settling down to do battle on the budget. The bad news can be turned into good news if it serves to remind Congress of three economic lessons.

The first lesson concerns the baseline used in making deficit projections. As every budget committee staffer knows only too well, budget projections depend on what you assume about the economy. The economic slowdown, which began last summer, is telling us that the relationship also runs the other way: what you can assume about the economy depends on budget projections.

The difference between the Congressional Budget Office's baseline and the Office of Management and Budget's baseline is unimportant. What is important is the difference between the baseline that reflects action to reduce deficits and one that does not. A no-action baseline can be calculated by estimating the effect that continued high real interest rates and a strong dollar will have on economic growth and the rate of unemployment. If these calculations lead to an estimate of a 1 percentage point drop in average real growth over the next three years, from 3.4 percent to 2.4 percent, and a 0.2 percentage point rise in the unemployment rate, then the no-action baseline deficit for 1985-1988 reads as follows: 1985 — $225 billion; 1986 — $260 billion; 1987 — $330 billion; 1988 — $405 billion.

The action baseline is necessary to sustain the optimistic assumptions about the economy that appear in typical state baseline calculations. If the 1985-88 sequence of deficit reductions approximating $50-$100-$150 billion is achieved, then the action baseline can legitimately be calculated from existing state baselines. The point is that the difference between the no-action deficit baseline and the action deficit baseline is not the $300 billion currently estimated. It is closer to twice that level — $600 billion.

The wide gap between the action and no-action baseline results from simple but compelling logic. If the performance of the economy is going to be unaffected by action to reduce deficits and if such action is politically painful, then why take it? The point is that failure to cut spending growth to the action baseline during 1985 is like forgoing an investment that yields a very high rate of return. That's had economics, and, as Herbert Hoover and Jimmy Carter know, had economics is bad politics.

The second and third lessons are directed at the members of Congress and the administration and the dwindling number of economists in the private sector who claim that we're going to grow out of the deficits. In the past, this group has pointed gleefully to predictions that the economy would slow down in 1983 and 1984 and concluded that we are on the brink of a new economic era of even higher growth.

The best way to combat ignorance is with insight. The second lesson explains why the economy was so strong during 1983 and the first half of 1984. Rapid investment growth was temporarily stimulated by front-loaded depreciation measures that tended to concentrate capital spending into a short interval of time. The pattern of investment in response to rapid depreciation measures is well documented and has made it possible for some economists to predict the economic slowdown we are now experiencing.

We have also learned that a strong economy and stable monetary policy strengthen the currency. When the investment surge ends and the strong dollar sharply reduces exports while increasing imports, economic growth drops sharply. The way out is to unwind the process by cutting deficits, reducing real interest rates, and thereby creating conditions for more sustainable growth of investment output and employment. In addition to the outlook for the economy, the major determinant of investment is the user cost of capital, which in turn is determined by real interest rates and tax provisions. Tax provisions can temporarily cut user cost as they did in 1982 and 1983. Lower real interest rates can do the job just as well and with more lasting effect.

The third lesson is really implicit in the second but it bears emphasis. We are not on the brink of a new era of economic growth. Average real growth in the United States has dropped steadily over the past three decades. It was 4.2 percent in the 1960s, 3.2 percent in the 1970s and 2.1 percent from 1980 through 1984. At the same time the volatility of growth rates steadily increased. While the downward trend may be reversed, such hopes are hardly the basis for formulating sound public policy.

Three groups in Congress need to come together to help turn the current crop of bad economic news into good news. The Republican moderates, who can't really bear to do radical surgery on the budget by eliminating some programs, will have to buy into the Senate administration deficit-reduction plan, which recognizes that the all-important out-year deficits aren't going to come down without elimination of some programs. The Democrats, who want to squeeze some political mileage out of the 2 percent reduction in COLAs, ought to back off and adopt the notion that shares-the-pain-across-the-board cuts in proposed spending will be necessary. Last, the conservative Republicans who see us growing out of the deficit problem ought to remain as quiet as they were on the day when 1985's first-quarter growth number was released and cast their votes for a responsible deficit-reduction plan.

Letters/ Accusation of being anti-education 'point man' is wrong, says Neibaur

Deficit spending is out

Terry Gilbert of the Idaho Education Association, in a guest opinion, was critical of the state Legislature; the Republican Party and in particular, Tom Stivers and me for underfunding public schools in this past session.

First, Governor Evans said he would not support a sales tax increase and when the chairman of the Revenue and Taxation Committee was approached to consider a one cent sales tax increase (60 million dollars), he said he wouldn't even consider it because of the Governor's position and the economic times.

The alternative tax raising measures didn't have support in either body of the Legislature. Other agencies of state government must also be funded. We froze state employees salaries. We held nearly every state agency at approximately low increases, except prisons, law enforcement and the office of aging and of course education.

Stivers' accusation that I was the point man to underfund education is wrong. Our committee is charged with balancing the budget. We will not deficit spend. We have always given education every break we could. Education should share the bad economic times with the good times.

Stivers has had 3 1/2 years of recession, with the future still not too bright. I feel that the teachers are being treated fairly. Gilbert chides us about the taxes paid per thousand dollars of income being less now than in 1976-77. He should consider that the people passed and demanded that reduction in 1979 in a referendum body of the Legislature.

The average teachers pay in the state of Idaho is $19,875 in 1985 for working 185 days. The average pay in 1980 was $13,610, so you can see, they have progressed well during this recession in the state of Idaho is in.

A word about gifted and talented programs. This costs an extra $2 million dollars for 2,300 students, or approximately $775 to $800 per student. Could this money be used more wisely for learning materials for all students?

Teaching is a noble profession, but I do feel that we can only tax so much and that other agencies must have the opportunity to operate as they were designed to do.

All people in this state should have equal consideration, not just those who have the time and the ability to put pressure on the Legislature and school boards.

REP. MACK W. NEIBAUR
Paul

Weinberger should resign

When I watch the evening news and hear Congressmen speak on the issues that are critical to the well-being of this nation, I think of when Sen. William E. Borah spoke at the Bush High School in 1936. There he stated "Few of you realize that in my work I content with members who speak but little English." Today, these members of Congress speak fluent English and are skilled in manipulating billions into the hands of great corporations who in reality own their job.

The Department of Defense has become the sewer through which billions appropriated for protection of this nation is flushed into the pockets of those who are in complete control of that house of straw called the United States Congress.

These giant contractors who live on the well-documented overcharges and padded costs then range from dog walking to evening gowns and tuxedos to posh dinners and vacation homes to $564 for an 85 cent screwdriver, $706,222 for a coffee maker, $27 for a plastic teaspoon, $658 for a pair of pliers. The list is endless. Down this rathole goes billions of tax dollars.

The exposure of contractors who have raked the nation out of billions causes but little demand for reform. The place to start is at the head with the resignation of Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger who apparently looks the other way while untold millions are siphoned away in outright graft, overcharges and the ridiculous pensions for armchair generals and admirals in the Pentagon. We cannot afford another Vietnam which was a prime example of war administered by these bo-mediated toady drinkers.

We are treated to much publicity on the MX missile, but how much would you wager that the Kremlin knows more about this missile, its construction and its placement, than the Pentagon?

The Bolshevik Old Guard in the Kremlin is pushing with younger, more knowledgeable men taking their places. Can we continue to meet them with minds more attuned to past and outmoded strategy?

Should we become involved in war, would we become paper tigers, throwing thousands of our young men into a battle directed by old pensioners and politicians.

I again ask for the resignation of Sec. Caspar Weinberger. He has failed in being aware of the damage being done our nation by the fraud in defense contracts and in being aware has failed to curb such practices. In short he has failed the American people and made the taxpayer the butt of something that is not a joke.

A publicity campaign has been launched praising Caspar Weinberger for his tireless work in promoting his job but does that compensate for the billions already lost or for the billions appropriated for future defense of our nation?

But instead of my party, I got advice.

I hereby wish to relieve the slot machine of its odious reputation as that of being that most treacherous and fleckle of hand-operated machines. For I have since had dealings with the Jerome County Courthouse payphone and have found said machine to be the absolute paragon of whatever would be a good word to use here.

I fear through some misconception that it has become linked with the bowels of the earth, or a poorly-run madhouse, or a convey of hippies sky-high on heroine, acid, pot, state coffee and coke.

Saturday morning, I tried to negotiate with this particular machine, as I've said, (properly), endeavoring to give it an excessive amount of cash for the privilege of communication. I had long heard the rumor that that is what a telephone is for.

However! Not this particular machine! This particular machine is persona non grata! This machine is rejected. This machine is a word that I can't think of, sorry.

Anyway, I fed the monster quarters while it over and over and over and over and over again repeated its state message, "Please deposit $1.15!" Then, horribly, I inserted a Canadian quarter and forever alienated that noxious box. It said, "Please deposit $1.15!" I said, "Excuse me, I've got to go get real money." It promptly barred up all my money and I had to start all over.

To extend the agony, the dispatcher dispatched me two dimes and a nickel, all (she said) she had and I went back to the dreaded creature to try to placate it and place that call. No way. No way. In hell was that thing going to let me call anybody!

I re-dialed, through 27 renditions of, "Please deposit $1.15 and then, and then, and then . . . I got to talk to a human being, and this human being says, oh, yes, true story . . . "Please deposit $1.15." "I just did lady!"

"I'm sorry, I'll have to return your money, this computer didn't register it."
So I belched $1.15 at me and I stared at it for awhile but there were cops behind me watching me noticing my strange behavior so I didn't beat it up and kill it like I wanted to. Not wanting to hear 45 to 60 more melodious renditions of "Please deposit $1.15" I drove to Twin Falls with my message.

Lafferty transcripts petition considered

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah Supreme Court has taken under advisement a petition to make public the transcripts of competency hearings for Ron Lafferty, the self-proclaimed prophet accused in the slaying of his sister-in-law and her daughter.

The high court heard arguments Tuesday on the action brought by the Society of Professional Journalists against 4th District Judge J. Robert Bullock.

Jury selection is scheduled for Thursday in Lafferty's trial in 4th District Court on charges he killed Brenda Wright Lafferty, 24, and her 15-month-old daughter, Erica, on July 24 at their American Fork home.

Following an April 2 competency hearing, Bullock ruled that Lafferty, who wants to defend himself on the charges, was able to understand the charges and possible punishment.

The judge sealed the records of Lafferty's competency hearings on Jan. 29 and April 2 and ordered attorneys not to discuss the case.

Attorney Alan Sullivan, representing the Society, argued that when Bullock sealed the transcripts and his memorandum of findings that resulted in the closing of the April 2 hearing, he "violated the U.S. Constitution's First Amendment guarantees and the public's right to know."

"The reasons for this secrecy are known only to the defense attorney, the prosecution and the Utah Supreme Court," Sullivan said. "This is totally at odds with the teachings of the U.S. Constitution and the presumably of this court."

Attorney Steve Mikita, arguing against disclosure, said sensitive information revealed in the hearing ruled out automatic access for news organizations and the public.

Plane suit is reinstated

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Supreme Court has ordered new court proceedings in a lawsuit filed over a highly publicized airplane crash, when two survivors admitted they ate human flesh after being trapped for days in an isolated Idaho mountain area.

The court ruled Monday that 4th District Judge Allen Schwartzman applied the wrong law when he decided that a lawsuit filed against the airplane's maker, Cessna Aircraft Co. of Wichita, Kan., did not meet a time limit.

But the court upheld Schwartzman's earlier ruling in the case, against a lawsuit filed against the operator of a Canadian air transport service.

In May of 1979, a prominent Canadian auto dealer, Donald V. Johnson, his daughter, Donna, age 17 at the time; Brenton Dyer, then age 25 and pilot; Norman Pischke, all of Estevan, Saskatchewan, Canada, left on a trip to Boise to pick up hunting dogs.

After stops in North Dakota and Montana, the plane disappeared en route, and wasn't found despite a massive search.

Two weeks later, Donna Johnson and Dyer walked out of a Central Idaho mountain wilderness area near Challis.

What's what

The Rhine bargemen have pennants for everything. A black flag with an oak leaf cluster means the captain's wife has died. No unmarried woman is permitted aboard until the last strand of that flag has blown away. Or otherwise removed, presumably. That one is traditional. Not so traditional was the flag hoisted by a more modern barge captain to indicate his wife was aboard. It was a red battle axe on a field of blue.

JOHN WAYNE

Q: In "how many of his 150-plus movies did John Wayne do?"

A: Seven - "Sands of De Sade," "The Alamo," "The Cowboys," "The Shootist," "Fighting Seabees," "Hear the Wild Wind," and "Wake of the Red Witch."

Q: Is it conceivable that a 6-year-old golfer could make a hole-in-one?

A: Somebody must've told you about Tommy Moore, 6, who did that thing in West Virginia in 1967. Youngest ever to do so. Oldest to make a hole-in-one, so far, was George Ancliff, 94, in Minnesota in 1983.

MIT students at Cambridge, Mass., used two bicycle wheels, two pie plates, and a roll of 400-pound-test braided nylon line to make the world's biggest yo-yo. In 1973, this. They dropped it from the Cambridge 19-story Green Building. It only rebounded nine stories. Onlookers booed. So-yo-yo.

Not just a few but many a fox in the wild has been seen to chase its own tail around and around. Even until the curious birds and rabbits gather to watch. It's then that the fox breaks its spin to pounce outward upon the closest onlooker. A clever hunting tactic. Instinct, probably.

Do you spend 48 minutes a day going back and forth to work? That's another American average now.

Claims process isn't too cumbersome

Personnel chief defends firing system

BOISE (AP) — Richard Hutchison, director of the Idaho personnel system, says it's a myth that the state can't fire anyone because of a cumbersome and lengthy grievance and appeals process.

Hutchison, appearing Tuesday afternoon before an interim legislative committee, had these facts:

In the last 10 years, the state has fired 30 to 40 employees per year. Only 70 have gone through the appeals process, and only 13 have been ordered back to work.

"Many employees aren't fired," he told legislators, because they are first given an opportunity to resign if they don't measure up. And many employees are terminated before they complete their six-month or one year probationary period.

A 23-member legislative committee is looking into the state's personnel system. Under direction of co-chairmen Sen. Phil Batt, R-Wilder, and Rep. Robert Collins, R-Preston, the committee spent most of its first day of hearings taking testimony from large corporations on their personnel matters.

Hutchison focused on the Hay Plan, a system adopted in 1975 assigning values to each job. The numerical values are based on know-how required for the job, problem-solving and accountability.

Some jobs get an additional factor if working conditions are hazardous or bad, he said.

Hutchison said the system means every state job is weighed and assigned a value, and everyone whose job has that value is paid the same.

Batt asked Hutchison if the Hay Plan could keep Idaho from being sued on "equal pay" issues. "It probably has shut off all the litigation going on in states surrounding us," said Hutchison.

Hutchison said to make the plan work properly, the Legislature must put up enough money each year so Idaho pay scales can be adjusted to match comparable jobs in private industry.

"Let the system work," he urged. But he said when lawmakers decide on an across-the-board raise, or flat percentage increases, or freeze salaries, the Hay system can't work properly.

"It's simply a fiscal problem," he said.

Earlier, the personnel system of one of Idaho's largest corporations, Morrison-Knudsen Co., Inc., was described as one dictated by market conditions in a highly competitive industry.

Thomas M. Sneliker, director of corporate personnel for the Boise based worldwide engineering, construction and shipbuilding firm, testified before the committee.

Judging from questions posed to Sneliker, legislators appeared to be concerned about the difficulty involved in firing state employees, fringe benefits and whether the state's seniority system is artificially inflating salaries.

Sneliker described M-K as being in a service industry, offering what clients want, but in a highly competitive market. He said the company runs frequent salary surveys. "But the driving force is the market," he said.

Insurance hike feared

BOISE (AP) — Idaho is looking for a replacement for the insurance coverage that it dropped its coverage as of July 1, but the head of the Division of Insurance Management says finding one may mean a rate increase of up to 400 percent.

Steve Swadley said Great American Insurance Cos. of Cincinnati, Ohio, cancelled the state's property insurance coverage as of the beginning of fiscal 1986. He said the generally tight nationwide insurance market and a "bad loss experience" during the current fiscal year were responsible for the action.

Efforts to reach Great American officials for comment were unsuccessful on Tuesday.

The coverage on more than a billion dollars in property valuation, including state buildings and facilities at Idaho's four colleges and universities, is expected to leap from $264,000 for the current fiscal year to "over $1 million" in fiscal 1986 under a new insurance carrier, Swadley said.

A new policy also may include a higher deductible, he said. "We're in the process of approaching about 10 different markets right now."

Land-swap hearings planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Before two federal agencies swap responsibilities for administering public lands, including huge tracts in Idaho, the public will be given a chance to comment, says Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho.

McClure said Tuesday he plans field hearings in Idaho this summer on the proposed land interchange between the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Forest Service.

The two agencies announced plans to change management responsibilities for certain tracts, a move designed to save administrative expense. The BLM and Forest Service plan to submit a draft of proposed legislation to Congress early in June. McClure is chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee and said it will be September at the earliest before the full committee will consider the proposal.

Albertson's complains over tax dispute

SANDPOINT (AP) — Albertson's Inc., has sent Bonner County almost $143,000, along with a formal complaint in response to an attempt by two Coeur d'Alene attorneys to seize the supermarket chain's sales tax receipts.

Bonner County Clerk Cliff Chapin has confirmed that the money, in the form of a certificate of deposit, has arrived in First District Court. But what happens from there is for the courts to determine, he said.

The money that went to the store received a court order to garnish state sales tax receipts last week. The order had been issued in the Sandpoint court about two weeks ago.

Attorneys W.W. Nixon and Ray McNeil used the novel approach to collect money they are owed by the state after the two successfully challenged the Legislature's 1982 redistricting plan.

Though the court awarded fees and interest, the lawmakers refused to budget the money.

"Until I get an order from the court releasing it, it's going to stay right where it's at," Chapin said Monday of the certificate. A court hearing is scheduled for May 6 in Sandpoint.

Attorney General Jim Jones conceded Tuesday that the two lawyers must feel frustrated in their attempts to obtain the court-ordered judgment which he strongly opposed.

"But once the court awarded attorneys fees in that case, the judgment should be paid," Jones said. Still, he warned that if litigants with judgments against the state used what he called "extra-legal means" the system will be thrown into chaos.

Jones predicted that the state would prevail in blocking the attachment of the sales tax revenues, and he speculated that the state Legislature would eventually appropriate the money to pay the attorney's bill.

Albertson's became a party to the dispute when the lawyers went after the sales tax receipts because the chain's collections for one month would nearly match the state's debt to them.

The Idaho State Tax Commission is arguing that sales tax receipts are not liable to garnishment, and that the First District Court was not the proper court to decide the issue. The commission wants the court order allowing the garnishment set aside.

Albertson's officials, meanwhile, don't like being caught in the middle. In the complaint filed with Bonner

County against both sides, the company said two different parties are laying claim to the sales tax receipts.

Albertson's maintains in the complaint that it is "totally obligated" to deliver the tax receipts to the tax commission. Yet a writ is telling the chain to do otherwise.

Air plan nears final approval

BOISE (AP) — All hurdles for federal approval of an air-quality plan here have been cleared, and the endorsement should be official within weeks, the Environmental Protection Agency said.

EPA approval of the Idaho air-quality improvement plan for the Boise area will become official when it is published in the Federal Register. Once that happens, the threat of monetary sanctions tied to the Boise area's air quality will be removed, said Mark Masarik, EPA air and waste team leader in Boise.

The central element of the air plan is a mandatory "reid" inspection and a mandatory "reid" began in August. The program is in effect throughout Ada County.

The EPA has predicted the county will be in full compliance with federal clean-air standards by the end of 1986.

Center employees told to keep mum

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Idaho Department of Health and Welfare employees have been instructed not to talk to attorneys for the plaintiffs in a lawsuit against the state Youth Services Center.

In a letter dated April 16, DHW Director Rose Bowman instructed employees to contact the department's attorney, Mike deAngelo, if they are approached by anyone representing the plaintiffs in the lawsuit.

The lawsuit, which names state health and welfare officials as defendants, is scheduled to go to trial May 20.

Lindy High, DHW spokesman, said the directive was issued "to make sure we weren't out of compliance with the court's ruling."

U.S. District Court Judge Ray McNichol has ordered an end to the discovery period, she said.

Attorneys for the Youth Law Center and National Center for Youth Law in California allege that treatment and policies at the YSC are unconstitutional.

Gorbachev tightens grip on Politburo

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Tuesday added three men, including the head of the KGB secret police, to the ruling Politburo in a move seen as tightening the new Soviet leader's hold on the Communist Party hierarchy.

The appointments were made public at the regular spring meeting of the party's Central Committee, which also announced that the 27th Communist Party congress will be held on Feb. 25, 1986.

Gorbachev, 54, became party general secretary on March 11 after the death of 73-year-old Konstantin U. Chernenko. Tuesday's meeting of the Central Committee was the first since Gorbachev assumed party leadership.

In an address to the 300-plus members of the policy-setting body, Gorbachev said the United States had demonstrated in the first round of the Geneva arms talks that it does not want an agreement. He accused the Reagan administration of reneging on a pledge to discuss a weapons ban in space.

The Politburo, which at 10 voting members following Chernenko's death was at its smallest size in years, was enlarged to 13.

Throughout the 13 months of Chernenko's rule, no changes were made on the Politburo or on the Central Committee's powerful Secretariat.

The three new full Politburo members are:

- KGB chief Viktor Chebrikov, 61, promoted from alternate membership.
- Nikolai Ryzhkov, 55, who has a background in heavy industry and is chief of the Central Committee's economic department.
- Yegor Ligachev, 64, head of the party department that exercises control over membership and appointments.

The three new men have been closely identified with Chernenko's predecessor, Yuri V. Andropov, who was considered to be Gorbachev's mentor.

Andropov named Chebrikov to the post he had once occupied, that of KGB chief. Ligachev and Gorbachev helped organize party and parliamentary elections in 1983-84.

The new Politburo members have been at nearly all major party and government meetings on the economy and ideology that Gorbachev has attended in recent months.

The appointment of Ryzhkov and Ligachev was significant because Politburo members usually serve a term as alternates first. Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, in 1973, was the last non-alternate to become a full member.

Talks' first round ends; Gorbachev hits U.S.

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The first round of superpower arms talks ended Tuesday, and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev accused the United States of reneging on a pledge to discuss a ban on space-based weapons.

Summing up the first six weeks of talks, chief U.S. negotiator Max M. Kampelman told reporters "a great deal remains to be done" to bridge the gap between the superpowers.

negotiations to be difficult, and they have been."

Reading from a prepared statement, Kampelman said, "We look forward to the resumption of our sessions when the second round opens May 30. A great deal remains to be done."

Kampelman did not answer questions. It was his first public statement in Geneva since the talks opened March 12.

"We believe that the first round served a useful purpose in helping to bring about increased understanding of one another's positions," he said.

The negotiators have generally been silent about the talks, with all disclosures coming from Moscow or Washington.

Kampelman said the U.S. delegation "will have nothing more to say publicly about the negotiations."

To date, U.S. and Soviet negotiators have met for 54 hours in 21 sessions. Most of those were meetings of working groups in three separate areas — strategic nuclear missiles, medium-range rockets and space weapons and defensive systems.

Speaking to reporters after the final two-hour negotiating session, Kampelman told reporters: "The American delegation expected these

Neves' body returns home amid grieving

BELO HORIZONTE, Brazil (AP) — The body of President-elect Tancredo Neves came home Tuesday to a thunderous outpouring of emotion in the state where he was born and forged his political career.

In front of the governor's palace where the body was taken to lie in state, surging crowds toppled an iron security fence that crushed and killed at least five people and injured dozens more, said Dr. Antonio de Farias Vecchio, coordinator of the city's main emergency ward.

Hundreds of thousands of people packed the airport and lined downtown streets, chanting "Tancredo, Tancredo, Tancredo." In farewell to the 75-year-old leader who had become a symbol of democracy in this vast South American nation.

Neves, whose political career spanned 50 years, died Sunday of a bacterial infection and complications from seven operations. He underwent the first abdominal operation March 14, the eve of his scheduled inauguration as Brazil's first civilian president in 21 years. Vice President Jose Sarney ran the country during Neves' illness and became president after Neves' death.

U.S. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige is among the foreign representatives to attend the funeral.

Beirut militia pulls off post

ABRA, Lebanon (AP) — Jubilant Christian militiamen withdrew Tuesday from five hilltop positions overlooking Sidon after nearly a month of fighting that left at least 113 people dead.

Police said a Palestinian guerrilla and a Lebanese soldier were killed in a gunfight with the withdrawing Christians of the Lebanese Forces militia at the Mieh Mieh refugee camp and several other combatants were wounded.

The Christian militiamen, led by Gilbert Ghostine, had been ordered from their home base in Beirut to the area around Sidon, 25 miles south of the Lebanese capital, to support local Christian forces battling Muslim militias.

Ghostine called the 25-day siege of Sidon a "military victory."

He said his 450 militiamen will return to Beirut by today after vacating four other posts, leaving local militias in Christian-controlled villages to garrison their areas.

Prosecutor claims Mengele still lives

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — The prosecutor heading the West German search for Josef Mengele said Tuesday he was convinced that the fugitive Nazi war criminal is alive and probably hiding in Paraguay.

"From the evidence I have, I am convinced that Mengele is still alive and that he is somewhere in South America," Frankfurt prosecutor Hans Eberhard Klein said. "Most evidence we have indicates Mengele is living in Paraguay."

Mengele, who would be 74, vanished at the end of World War II.

Army vets tour towns they helped liberate

BERLIN (AP) — More than 100 U.S. Army veterans Tuesday toured East German towns they liberated in the final weeks of World War II, the state-run East German news agency said.

"The residents here will never forget the role played by American soldiers in the victory of the anti-Hitler coalition," Rudolf Ludwig, mayor of the town of Weissenfels, told the veterans.

The veterans, former members of the U.S. Army's 67th Infantry Division of V Corps, visited Weissenfels and Luetzen, two towns 18 miles southwest of Leipzig, according to the news agency ADN.

The group is to travel to Torgau, on the Elbe River, on Thursday for a reunion with Russian Red Army soldiers. The advancing Russian and American soldiers linked up at Torgau 40 years ago this week, liberating Adolf Hitler's crumbling Third Reich.

ADN said several veterans, including Dan O'Shea of Deep River, Conn. and Donald Durst, of Lavale, Md., spent Tuesday examining sites they fought over 40 years ago.

The leader of the veterans' group, William Beswick, of West Point, Va., signed the Weissenfels guest book and expressed gratitude for the warm welcome extended to the visiting Americans, according to ADN.

The agency said Beswick was one of the first Allied soldiers to enter the town.

TWIN FALLS — Changes in the population of southern and northern Idaho are causing a fight among alcohol and drug abuse treatment groups over dwindling state and federal funds.

The local Alcohol Intoxication Treatment Act committee acted Tuesday to urge the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare to use new state population figures showing an increase in the southern Idaho region to calculate the amount of money that goes to each region for AITA programs.

Roberta Crocker, of the Health and Welfare Substance Abuse program, told the committee the move could help the local group save of a $10,000 loss next year. She says cuts in federal support and reduced revenues from liquor sales are putting the AITA groups into competition with each other.

Crocker told the group its proposal could increase its funding next year by almost $8,000, but the committee's resolution says that any funds in excess of what it receives this year will be allocated to the regions that lose funding next year as a result of the population shift.

In northern Idaho, an AITA committee has passed a resolution urging Health and Welfare not to use the new population figures, according to Ed Burns, the supervisor of the Substance Abuse Section of the Department of Health and Welfare.

Burns says the northern Idaho group said the change would violate legislative intent and says the change in funding would upset northern Idaho programs by changing the northern Idaho fund base.

The local AITA committee's resolution goes beyond the adoption of new population figures and calls for the funding levels for the seven committees to be adjusted according to how many patients are served at the state's Orofino alcohol treatment center from each region.

Because the Orofino treatment center is supported by the whole state, but is used more by northern Idahoans, the local AITA committee wants Health and Welfare to adjust downward the funding to their northern Idaho counterparts and increase the share of funds that goes to southern Idaho groups.

Burns said he and Ralph Carpenter of the Division of Health Administration will rule on the matter this week in cooperation with the Substance Abuse Advisory Council. He says the Council is split on the matter.

Burns said he thinks the new population figures should be used, but that the adjustment in funding to the seven groups based on their region's use of the Orofino facility should not be used.

He says he is persuaded by the northern Idaho group's argument that many of those treated at the center are court-ordered patients and are not referred to the center by northern Idaho alcohol treatment groups.

Regional library consultant plan shot down

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho State Library has withdrawn its plan to spend $60,000 for a library consultant based in southern Idaho.

The board decided not to pay for an office to be established and a consultant's salary to be paid after librarians in this part of the state criticized the plan, said state librarian Charles Bolles.

Several area librarians said the Magic Valley Regional System is providing better services than a librarian consultant covering half the state could, and without the additional cost of a separate office.

On Friday, the state board did agree to pay for one consultant in the state. Originally, the state planned to hire two consultants and set up offices for them in Moscow and Pocatello. Bolles said he did not know where the remaining consultant would be based.

The $60,000 of federal money the state saved will be put back into a grant fund made up of federal money designated for libraries.

About $20,000 of that will be distributed equally for the purchase of books to the 75 smallest libraries in the state, Bolles said. Libraries serving fewer than 5,000 people and spending less than $40,000 a year will be eligible, he said.

That money will fulfill a request by the state Legislature for $15,000 be allocated from the Idaho State Library for materials.

Librarians may only be able to spend that money on non-fiction works, because some officials feel that "as a matter of philosophy that the state's interest in on the part of education and information, not recreation," Bolles said.

In addition to the $60,000, the state was not able to find libraries interested in $56,000 in some grant areas, Bolles said. There were no grant applications for the establishment of new library districts or adding unserved areas to an existing library district.

Grants to establish community referral centers in libraries and to develop long-range plans for staff development were also unpopular.

The remaining money, $96,000, will be offered in new grants in any of the areas already established by the state library, but some preference will be given to libraries wanting to spend the money on microfiches or continuing education, Bolles said.

The grant system has been criticized by librarians in the Magic Valley who said spending money as it had been done in the past on books to rotate through at least 20 libraries in the region benefited communities more. Most grants were only available to the largest

Area libraries receive federal grants

TWIN FALLS — Fifteen Magic Valley libraries have received federal grants administered through the Idaho State Library, most to purchase more sophisticated equipment.

Three libraries also have been granted state approval, subject to final approval from the U.S. Department of Education, for construction grants.

These grants include $5,175 for remodeling and building an addition at the Jerome Civic Club Memorial Library, $2,350 for handicapped access at the Twin Falls Library and $414 for energy conservation at the Bellevue Library. The libraries will be required to match 50 percent of construction costs with local money.

The Ketchum and Twin-Falls libraries will receive IBM-PC computers and accessory equipment to make data base searches. Twin Falls also received a $982 grant to make long-range plans for staff development.

Fourteen libraries received grants for microfiche readers and Washington Library Network directories which list holdings of major libraries from Alaska to Arizona.

Libraries receiving those grants are in Twin Falls, Burley, Jerome, Rupert, Bellevue, Buhl, Filer, Gooding, Hansen, Carey, Oakley, Richfield, Shoshone and Wendell.

Johnson plant buyout eyed

All-Idaho stock plan readied

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The group of investors trying to start a new electronics company in the E.F. Johnson Co. factory at Twin Falls is planning to finance the project with an all-Idaho public stock offering of between $2 and $4 million, the two organizers say.

"We hope to submit the draft prospectus to the (Idaho) Department of Finance by May 1," said Tom Walker Jr., a Twin Falls attorney and a leader of the group.

At the same time, plant manager Dick Converse, who has been designing a business plan, said GemTec Inc., the proposed company, is "in preliminary negotiations" with the two companies that own segments of the mobile telephone facility on the city's south side.

The group, which could expand, hopes to use the money to buy or lease the plant and its manufacturing equipment, as well as to support start-up operations.

The plant's production line is scheduled to stop by the end of the year as a result of the sale of the entire E.F. Johnson Co. to Diversified Energies Inc., a Minnesota-natural gas supplier. Under the terms of the agreement, which now is being finalized, the plant itself would be retained by E. F. Johnson's former parent, Western Union Corp., while the equipment and its contracts would belong to DEI.

Walker said Tuesday that 17 local investors have contributed $300,000 — a total of $85,000 — to offer the stock and to try to obtain the plant. The offering will be made only to Idaho residents, he said.

"We want a lot of people in the local area to take an interest," he said. "The concept we have is the more investors we have, the more likely that we can keep the company here." The numbers of investors could amount to between 4,000 and 6,000 eventually, Walker said.

"We could make the business plan work on $2 (million) but $4 (million) gives us a cushion we would be more comfortable with," Walker says.

"Until (the) prospectus is approved, we really can't talk about the particulars with respect to it," he said. A prospectus details for potential stockholders the proposed company's business plans and other financial information.

The proposed company officially will be incorporated as GemTec Inc. on Friday when papers are filed with the Idaho Secretary of State, Walker said.

Blaine's medical debts down to size

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — After reporting outstanding debts of nearly $200,000 little more than a month ago, the Blaine County Medical Center has reduced its debts to $30,000, the center's president said Monday.

President Tim Gilmore told the Blaine County Board of Commissioners the center now has no debts that are 70 days past due, and he doesn't expect it to need any emergency support in the 18 months.

"We are not worried about our cash flow right now," said Gilmore, who works for Rural West Management, a hospital management firm based in McCall.

To reduce the debts, Gilmore said the center "had to get tough" in the collection of its bills from former patients. He said the center has made several out-of-court settlements in the last month to reduce what it owes.

Despite the success, he said, the effort has made some in the community unhappy, especially those who hired attorneys to deal with the pressure from the center.

Twin foals

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — Two healthy foals — a rare set of twins — are prancing and springing about the pasture of Dick Marlow of Wendell.

Veterinarian Katherine Stapp of Hagerman says only one in 10,000 horse births produces twins, and of these, both foals live only one time in 100 births.

"If they live, it's very, very unusual," the doctor says.

Marlow says he had no idea his quarter horse mare would have twins on her fifth pregnancy.

At 5:30 a.m. on March 15, the horseman checked his mare and discovered a black foal and a bay foal in the stall straw, fresh from birth.

"They hadn't even got up yet," he recalls. "It was shocking."

This is not the first time Marlow has had twin horses born during his many years of horse breeding. But, he says, it is the first time both have lived.

Attending veterinarian Darwin Yoder of Wendell says the fillies are small but most likely will grow to normal size.

"They seem to be doing very well," he adds. Stapp says twin horses are the most rare twins of all domesticated animals.

"And the survival rate is even more rare," she says.

Another set of foals was born in Gooding County "long, long ago," recalls Stapp, but one of them died at birth.

The thoroughbred sire of the new Wendell twins is named Shake Man Shake, says Marlow, so the foals may be named Shake a da One and Shake a da Two.

Charboneau offered conflicting stories, witnesses testify

By MARILYN HAAK ESSEX
Special To The Times-News

BOISE — Jamie Charboneau gave conflicting stories concerning his presence in Owyhee County about a week after his former wife reported that he abducted her and stole her car, witnesses testified Tuesday at Charboneau's first-degree murder trial.

Gary Stowell, a cowboy who lives in Elko County, Nev., said Charboneau on June 26th of last year claimed to be a rodeo clown from Arizona who was counting "studs" for "the government." Stowell said he gave Charboneau a ride from southern Owyhee County about 20 or 25 miles north.

Charboneau said rattlesnakes scared away his horse and that his pickup truck was out of fuel in the Sheep Creek area in southern Owyhee County and northern Nevada, Stowell said.

But Albert Baringna, who manages range operations in Owyhee County and northern Nevada for Simplot Livestock Co., said Charboneau on June 26 introduced himself as "Sam" at a Simplot camp in Owyhee County.

Baringna, who said he knew Charboneau as a youth but didn't recognize him that day, said the defendant claimed to be counting wild horses for the government and claimed to be from Montana. The witness said he went to the camp to meet his wife and daughters and found Charboneau there when he arrived.

Charboneau said his pickup was out of gasoline and his horse ran away during the night, but made no mention of rattlesnakes.

Baringna testified.

Baringna said he knew Charboneau as a youth because the defendant's grandfather, Orville Johnson, owned property in the area until about four years ago.

Charboneau, 28, is being tried for first-degree murder in the shooting death of his former wife, Marilyn Arbaugh. She was gunned down last July 1 at her rural Jerome County home.

Charboneau also is on trial for grand theft and kidnapping stemming from Arbaugh's allegations that Charboneau abducted her and stole her car after she finished work last July 21.

Arbaugh's Fiat station wagon was found burned in southern Owyhee County just inside the Idaho state line near what once was the Johnson property.

The case is being tried before 5th District Judge Phillip Becker in Boise on a charge of venue from Jerome County.

Dick Stowell and Baringna said Charboneau claimed "they" would meet him with another horse at Indian Hot Springs, which lies at the fork of the Bruneau and Jarbidge Rivers. But Charboneau never mentioned which governmental agency he supposedly was working for or specifically who would bring a fresh mount, the witnesses said.

Both witnesses also remembered Charboneau carrying a backpack similar to the one Arbaugh used as a purse and left in her car. That backpack later was found stuffed in a building at the Arbaugh home after her death.

Baringna said he pressed Charboneau for information on what agency employed him.

Browns get first shot at Kosar

By DAVE GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Bernie Kosar was given the chance Tuesday to play for the team of his choice, the Cleveland Browns, when National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle upheld two trades for the University of Miami quarterback.

Rozelle's decision was an affirmation of the status quo that gives Kosar the right to decide whether he wants to play for the Browns or the Minnesota Vikings.

He upheld both the trade between Minnesota and Houston that gave the Vikings the first crack at Kosar in next Tuesday's regular college draft, and the deal between the Browns and the Buffalo Bills that gave Cleveland Kosar's rights in a supplemental draft.

That left the decision squarely in the hands of Kosar, who has two years of college eligibility left but has said he intends to complete his studies this summer.

He can notify the league by Thursday — Rozelle's deadline — that he intends to opt for the regular draft and Minnesota; or he can forgo that, complete his studies, then announce he wants to play in the NFL and give Cleveland his shot.

But Dr. John Geletka, a dentist and friend of the family who has been acting as Kosar's agent, made it clear which way the 29-year-old quarterback was leaning.

"I still think he feels the same," Geletka said. "I think he has a Cleveland preference."

Kosar may announce his plans on Wednesday. Miami's sports information office announced that he would hold at news conference at the school at 10 a.m. EST.

Rozelle's decision capped five weeks of sometimes frenzied behind-the-scenes maneuvering for Kosar, the only quarterback considered worth a first-round pick in this year's draft.

It began on March 13, when Kosar announced that he would obtain his degree this summer and turn pro rather than return for his third season with the Hurricanes, whom he led to college football national championship in 1983.

That immediately became a hot item on Houston, which held the second pick in the draft and had the first shot at Kosar because Buffalo, which has the first pick, had already signed Virginia Tech defensive end Bruce Smith. Finally, two weeks ago, the Oilers traded their first-round pick to Minnesota, which picks third, in exchange for the Vikings' first- and second-round picks.

On the same day, however, the Browns dealt their top pick in the 1986 draft and an undisclosed player, believed to be linebacker Chip Banks, to Buffalo for the first pick in the supplemental draft.

The resultant muddle forced Rozelle to step in. The commissioner suspended the April 15 date by which Kosar was to formally notify the league that he is entering the draft, and summoned representatives of all four teams involved to his New York office for a hearing.

Killer Dome whiffs In Payette

By The Associated Press

PAYETTE — The public relations gimmick to transform the Payette High School dome into a huge baseball bearing the autograph of Hall-of-Famer Harmon Killebrew has fallen to local opposition.

Businessman George Klenc, who wanted to paint red stitching on the white dome and add the signature of one of the school's most famous alumni, said Tuesday there remained too much criticism of the scheme within the community, particularly from students at the school.

"They don't like it," junior class president Tina Wright said. "They think it's tacky."

Contending it could become one of the state's biggest tourist attractions, Klenc touted the plan earlier this month as a way promoting the western Idaho community. He said it would probably cost $20,000, but the money could be obtained through private donations from those interested in promoting baseball.

Killebrew, a 1954 graduate of Payette High, was inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame last year after 22-year career with the Washington Senators turned Minnesota Twins. He currently operates a business with former Idaho Congressman Ralph Harding in Boise in addition to doing television commentary for the Twins, and lives in nearby Ontario, Ore.

A documentary on Killebrew's life is still being planned by Grey Wolf Films Inc. of Los Angeles, according to spokesman Michael Schroeder. But he said the prospects for the school district to reap up to $100,000 from that venture evaporated with the demise of the dome scheme since the dome would have been a focal point of the film. The owner of the film company is also a Payette High School graduate.

Killebrew signed a bonus contract with the Senators in 1953 and over the next two decades became one of the most feared right-handed power hitters in the history of baseball while playing third base for the Senators and the Twins. He concluded his career as a designated hitter with the Kansas City Royals in 1979.

Educators say proposed GPA rule too tough

NEW YORK (AP) — College officials say a plan for stricter academic standards for freshmen, approved by the NCAA two years ago, likely will be modified because it would prevent too many blacks from getting scholarships.

The New York Times on Tuesday said critics of the plan cited a study which showed that nearly 80 percent of black male college athletes entering school in 1977 and 1982 would fail to meet the new standards. Among white male athletes, 40 percent would not meet the standards, the study showed.

The Times said the plan's critics included some presidents of black universities and many coaches.

It said that while they are not opposed to higher academic standards for athletes, the proposal should be changed so that blacks would not suffer disproportionate consequences.

"We have never been against standards, but our position is that there must be revisions," Joseph Johnson, president of predominantly black Grambling State University in Louisiana told the Times.

Johnson is a member of a committee of seven established by the NCAA to study the new standards, which are scheduled to take effect next year. The committee will meet in Chicago starting today. Proposed changes would be forwarded to the NCAA for consideration next January, the last scheduled full meeting before the new rules take effect.

Supporters of the plan, including many college presidents and the American Council on Education, said they would go along with some changes.

"There is a substantial defect in it because it fails to recognize academic disparity," Robert Atwell, president of the council, told the Times.

As for easing the standards, Atwell said Tuesday from his Washington office, "We want to modify. We don't want to emasculate."

He warned that a watered-down version, "would be a travesty. A denial of everything we're trying to do to protect the high-risk student from the ravages of intercollegiate sports."

The council represents 1,500 colleges and universities.

The standards would require a grade-point average of at least 2.0, a possible 4.0, in 11 college preparatory courses, scores of 700 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test or 15 on the American College Testing exam.

Failure to meet those standards would make athletes ineligible for competition in his freshman year. The practical effect of the rule, officials told the Times, is that most colleges would not offer scholarships to ineligible individuals.

Most opposition centers on the test score requirement, with some officials maintaining that the standardized tests did not reflect the cultural and education background of most blacks, especially those who are poor.

Traditionally, blacks have scored far lower on the tests than whites, and some officials — particularly the heads of black colleges, the Times said — want to drop the test score requirement or use it as an alternative to the grade-point average requirement.

The American Council on Education, for one, wants to retain the test score requirement, but is willing to modify the rule so that students who do poorly on the test can retain eligibility if their grad point average exceeds 2.0 by a sufficient amount.

"My interest would be for combining the two (test scores and grade-point average) into a predictor," Atwell said. "For example, the higher the grade-point average, the lower the test score could be, and the higher the test score, the lower the grade-point average."

The average score for blacks taking the SAT in 1983-84 was 715. The average score for whites is 932. A perfect score is 1,600.

Birmingham agrees to bail out its USFL club

By HOYT HARWELL
The Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — The City Council reversed itself Tuesday and agreed to play ball with the Birmingham Stallions, offering the club a possible $1 million bailout to keep the United States Football League franchise from folding.

With strings attached, the council approved $2.4 million package for the team, which has been hurting for money since its major investor, Marvin Warner, withdrew his support last month.

Stallions President Jerry Sklar said leads the league with a 7-2 mark, has a $3.5 million dollar annual payroll.

In approving the $1 million, the council stipulated that the team cannot spend any of the money until Tuesday, a day after USFL team owners meet to discuss whether to play the 1986 season in the fall as planned or keep playing in the spring next year.

In addition, the council will have to vote again next Tuesday on specific language of the financial package of loans and investments.

Mayor Richard Arrington recommended that the city, through the Alabama State Fair Authority, lend $350,000 to the Stallions next week. City Attorney Jim North said team investors have pledged to raise another $350,000 this week.

Arrington's plan calls for the city to put up another $650,000 over a three-week period starting May 15, provided team investors have raised an additional $500,000 by then.

John Carlton, an attorney hired by the city to help work out the details, said the combination of $1 million from the city and $350,000 from investors would be enough for the Stallions to finish the season, which ends July 31, and compete in the playoffs.

North said $300,000 of the city's investment would be in loans, since a loan could be recovered easier than an investment. If the team folds, he said the other $100,000 could be invested in limited partnerships.

Warner, a native of Birmingham who put up the big money when the Stallions began operating in 1983, pulled out after the recent collapse of his savings bank in Cincinnati.

State law prevents the city from providing money to the team directly, but not through a third party. "I think we're all grateful to the mayor and City Council for this show of confidence," said Stallions Coach

Rolle Dotsch. "It makes me, the staff and the team feel better about it."

"It was getting pretty tight and this is a very positive sign. Hopefully, we can work our way out from here."

Arrington said last week he would not recommend help from the city unless he thought the league had a 50-50 chance of making it through this season and into the next. He said Tuesday he now believes it can.

His proposal fell one vote short when first brought up at Tuesday council meeting, but Councilman John Katopodis lobbied for an hour and swayed the votes of two members for another rollcall.

Cavaliers surprise Bird-less Celtics for first time in 18 games

By CHUCK MELVIN
The Associated Press

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Larry Bird or no Larry Bird, the Boston Celtics are the defending National Basketball Association champions, and a victory over them is to be cherished.

So said Cleveland Cavaliers' Coach George Karl after his team stayed alive in the first round of the NBA playoffs with a 105-98 victory over Boston on Tuesday night.

"I said to the players after the game, 'Be proud about tonight. Don't let Larry Bird not playing take away from what we did,'" Karl said. "That team probably wins 55 (regular-season) games without Larry Bird. Instead of 63 with him."

World-B-Free fired in 32 points to offset a brilliant performance by Boston's Scott Wedman, who filled in for Bird.

"Wedman has that capability," said Celtics' Coach K.C. Jones, whose club still holds a 2-1 edge in the best-of-five series. "I had the audacity to think that we could win with this lineup."

Game 4 will be played Thursday in Cleveland, and Game 5, if necessary, will be in Boston.

The victory before a sellout crowd of 20,000 was Cleveland's first over the Celtics since January 1983, snapping a streak of 17 losses.

The Celtics played without forward Larry Bird, who missed only his second playoff game in six years. Bird has been troubled by bursitis and bone chips in his right elbow and was left at the Celtics' hotel.

Wedman, however, took Bird's place in the starting lineup and scored 21 points, including 12 in the fourth quarter. Bird had averaged 35 points a game in the Celtics' two victories over Cleveland in Boston.

The Cavaliers led 76-66 entering the third quarter after overcoming a final-quarter rally that carried the Celtics within a point at 58-57.

Wedman had four of Boston's eight unanswered points to start the final quarter, cutting the Cleveland lead to 76-74.

Wedman then hit two long jumpers and Robert Parish made an inside shot to bring the Celtics within two points three more times.

NL: Braves' Mahler makes Padres 4th victim

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Rick Mahler won his major league leading fourth game and Terry Harper lined a three-run double Tuesday night to lead the Atlanta Braves past the San Diego Padres 4-2.

Mahler, 4-0, won his fourth start of the season by going seven innings and allowing five hits. Bruce Sutter pitched the final two innings for his third save.

The loss went to Mark Thurmond, 0-2, who lasted only three innings and gave up all the Braves' runs.

Harper broke a 1-1 tie with two outs in the third inning with his double to left-center field. Mahler and Rafael Ramirez both singled to start the third. Glenn Hubbard bunted into a forceout at third, but Brad Kominsky walked to load the bases. After Thurmond retired Dale Murphy, Harper doubled to clear the bases.

Baseball

Cardinals past the New York Mets 8-3 in a rain-delayed game.

St. Louis broke a 2-2 tie in the third inning against reliever Tom Gorman, 1-1. Smith led off with a walk, stole second and took third on a single by Tommy Herr.

With Jack Clark at the plate and a 2-2 count, the game was delayed by rain for 68 minutes. When play resumed, Clark bounced into a forceout at second that allowed Smith to score.

Kurt Kepshire, who entered the game with a 15.63 earned run average, pitched seven-plus innings to get the victory and improve to 1-2.

MONTREAL (AP) — Vance Law walked with the bases loaded in the 10th inning Tuesday to force Andre Dawson home as the Montreal Expos downed the Philadelphia 5-4 and snapped the Phillies' three-game winning streak.

After giving up a lead-off single to Dawson, Phillies reliever Charlie Hudson, 0-2, struck out Hubie Brooks and then walked three straight batters.

Jeff Reardon, 1-0, pitched three innings of scoreless relief to earn the win.

Chicago 5 Pittsburgh 0

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Rick Sutcliffe scattered eight hits and belted a long home run and Ryne Sandberg, last year's National League Most Valuable Player, also homered for his first run batted in of the year Tuesday night as the Chicago Cubs blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-0.

Sutcliffe, 3-1, who had won 16 straight regular-season games before losing his first start in Montreal, did not allow a Pittsburgh runner past second base. He struck out seven and walked one, and also triggered a two-run third inning with a single off loser Mike Bielecki, 1-1.

Houston 6 Cincinnati 4

HOUSTON (AP) — Kevin Bass homered and drove in four runs and rookie Ron Mathis won his first major league game Tuesday night as the Houston Astros defeated the Cincinnati Reds 6-4.

Bass, who cracked RBI singles in the first and third innings, belted a two-run homer in the eighth inning off Cincinnati starter John Stuper, 2-1. It was the second home run in two nights for Bass; and his two homers matched his 1984 total.

Mathis, 1-0, took a two-hitter and a 6-0 lead into the eighth before running into problems. The Reds chased him with a walk and three hits, including a two-run single by Gary Redus, and Frank DiPino took over for Mathis.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mike Krukow scattered seven hits as the San Francisco Giants ended a seven-game losing streak and snapped Fernando Valenzuela's scoreless inning streak of 29 1/3 innings with a 2-1 triumph Tuesday.

Valenzuela, 2-2, allowed only four hits while striking out eight and stretching his streak for innings without an earned run to 33. But he was a victim of two unearned runs in the fifth inning and lost for the ninth time in the last 10 decisions in Candlestick Park.

Krukow, 2-0, struck out 10 in beating the Dodgers for the second time this season, both complete games.

A save by Giant second baseman Manny Trillo on a pop-up by Valenzuela in the seventh led to run that closed the gap to 2-1.

Mariano Duncan followed with a single and Al Oliver doubled to center.

AL: Seattle loses its 7th game in eight

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Tom Brunansky slammed a two-run homer and Frank Viola fired a six-hitter Tuesday night to lead the Minnesota Twins to a 4-2 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Minnesota has won three straight after losing nine in a row while Seattle has lost three in a row and seven of its last eight games after winning his first six games of the season.

Brunansky's home run, his fourth of the year, was his fifth in only 14 career at-bats off Seattle starter Salome Barojas, 0-1. Brunansky's first-inning blow came after Kent Hrbek walked with two outs.

Viola, 2-2, limited the Mariners to two hits through the first seven innings. He struck out four while walking none in his second complete game of the season.

Boston 5 New York 4

NEW YORK (AP) — Dwight Evans drove in his second run of the game with an 11th-inning single and the Boston Red Sox scored two unearned runs to beat the New York Yankees for the fourth straight time this season 5-4 Tuesday night.

Marty Barrett started the inning with a single off New York relief ace Dave Righetti, 1-1, and Jackie Gutierrez sacrificed. Wade Boggs beat out an infield single up the middle as Barrett went to third and Evans' single to left broke the tie.

The winner was Bobby Ojeda, 2-0, who allowed one hit over the final 1 2/3 innings. Until the Boston run, Righetti had posted an unblemished record with four saves plus a victory, accounting for all five of the Yankee triumphs.

Baltimore 11 Texas 1

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Storm Davis pitched a three-hitter and Rick Dempsey, Dan Ford and Mike Young homered Tuesday night to lead the Baltimore Orioles to an 11-1 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Davis, 1-0, entered the game with an 8.31 earned run average, having lasted only 13 innings in his three previous starts. He retired 19 batters in a row after the Rangers loaded the bases with no one out in the first inning but managed only one run as Larry Parrish grounded into a double play. Davis walked four and struck out four.

Detroit 4 Cleveland 3

CLEVELAND (AP) — Kurt Gibson collected three hits, including a two-run bloop double to snap a fifth-inning tie, and Dan Petry, Bill Scherrer and Willie Hernandez combined on a nine-hitter Tuesday as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Cleveland Indians 4-3.

Petry, 3-1, gave up six hits while striking out two and walking one over the first 6 1/2 innings. Hernandez came on in the eighth for Scherrer to register his third save.

Kansas City 7 Toronto 6

TORONTO (AP) — George Brett put Kansas City in front with a three-run double and Jorge Orta added a two-run homer as the Royals rallied for five runs in the ninth inning and edged the Toronto Blue Jays 7-6 Tuesday night.

Bill Caudill, who came on in relief of Doyle Alexander after seven innings, breezed through the eighth but got in trouble in the ninth when Jim Sundberg and pinch hitter Dene Torg opened with singles and Willie Wilson was hit by a pitch to load the bases.

Royal's relief ace milled down his second save. Joe Beckwith, 1-1, pitched a perfect eighth and was the winner.

Competition fierce in city's bowling leagues

TWIN FALLS — With the league bowling season winding down, the competition is getting fierce. Last week's men's league action was a good example. Jerry Miller, bowling with the Valley League at the Magic Bowl, had the week's high game, a 268. But Ed Hoover, who bowls with the Magic Church League at the Magic Bowl, was just a pin behind at 267 and Jim Anderson, a member of the Valley League at Magic Bowl, bowled a 266.

Across town at the Bowladrome, Al Koolman had a 263 with the Twin Falls Reformed Church League. In all, the bowlers came within 10 points of Miller's 268.

There was no contest for the top series, however. Hoover bowled a 723 with the Wonder League at the Magic Bowl, 60 pins better than the next-best score.

Top women's game belonged to Melody Werry, with a 244 with the Liberation League at the Bowladrome. Toni Wannman, who bowls with a Ladies Valley League at the Bowladrome, was just a point behind, at 243.

Shirley Cardwell, who bowls with the Magic City League at the Bowladrome, had the top series, a 598. That was three pins better than Wannman's 595.

Replacement to be found for Crosby

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Nathaniel Crosby, who for eight years hosted the popular golf tournament at Pebble Beach that bore his father's name, said Tuesday he was disappointed no compromise was reached so the family could continue sponsoring the 44-year-old Bing Crosby National Pro-Am.

"This came as a surprise to me in the middle of the night," Crosby said of his mother Kathryn's announcement on Monday that the family was withdrawing its name because of efforts to link corporate sponsors with the tournament.

Golf

Reached in Madrid, where he was attending a tournament, Crosby said he "would have tried to compromise with them (the Professional Golfers Association). I did not discuss this with my mother before."

"Naturally, I'm disappointed," Crosby, 23, said of the end of the Crosby link with the competition that his father began in 1937 for his Hollywood friends.

"I just think that it's really a shame that it had to come to this. The purses are becoming so high for each tournament that it is impossible for the tournament to remain the way it was in the past. The prize money can hardly be covered with the gate alone," he said.

The Monterey Peninsula Golf Foundation, governing body of the event, issued a statement on Tuesday that the winter classic "will continue its operations as in past years."

Without providing details, PGA Commissioner Deane Beman said the tournament will be held under a new name and new sponsorship.

William Bortland, who succeeded Harry Holmes as chairman of the board of the Monterey Peninsula Golf Foundation, said he felt it was a "great shame that we couldn't work out a solution."

"It was just a difference of opinion regarding the future operations of the tournament," he added.

"The sincerest effort was made on behalf of the foundation to convince the Crosby family to stay involved," Beman said.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. was in touch with tournament officials about possible sponsorship of the event, which began as a casual gathering of the late singer-actor and his friends and mushroomed into the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am.

Tourney executive committee member Dick Searle said AT&T offered a month ago to co-sponsor the event for $750,000, but the family rejected the offer. He said the telecommunications giant spent $1.5 million in advertising the event.

"Jim Monroe, AT&T's public relations manager for central California, said the company is interested in sponsoring the tournament," but to date no decision has been made.

Holmes, whose name was linked to AT&T's bid, resigned last week.

"Everything was on the up and up," Searle said, but added that last Sunday the Crosby family decided they "didn't want the AT&T name stuck on" and they decided to pull out.

The "Old Glambro" was a unique tournament, the only one that allowed amateurs to compete every day of the competition. It raised about $1 million a year for local youth programs.

Old recipes bring back memories of grandma's kitchen

One of the most interesting facts I heard this year dealt with how many hours a week a homemaker (unemployed outside the home) spent in households. In a survey in 1920, she spent 52 hours. That really is understandable when you think of the hints that helped the housewives of that day, like cleaning a rusty stove top with kerosene, beating rugs on a line and no "convenience" foods.

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

Then the same survey was taken 10 years ago in 1975. The average homemaker then spent 55 hours a week in households! What happened? With all these beautiful appliances to help us, the explosion of foods almost ready-to-eat... I guess it must be the axiom that work expands to fill the time allowed for it. What brought all this to mind was a cookbook I found entitled "Forgotten Recipes" by Jaime Rodack. She collected old magazines and compiled this cookbook. Reading it brought back some memories of my mother's and grandmother's kitchens. Remember "limbales"? They were the hit of the "club set" and could be made using almost anything. Limbales are grated or flaked ingredients held together with a mixture of egg and liquid and baked in muffin tins or specially shaped molds. They were then served usually with a sauce. This recipe took me back to watching my grandmother set up a luncheon for her bridge club.

CHEESE SAUCE
1 1/2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 cup milk
1/2 cup grated cheese
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
1/4 teaspoon paprika
Melt the butter in a small saucepan and stir in the cornstarch. Stir in the milk and bring to a boiling point. Beat well and add the cheese and seasonings. Stir until the cheese has melted and pour over the baked limbales. I asked friend husband what foods he remembered from his childhood that are no longer served today, and they were all dessert type things. We really do remember those things longest that tingle our sweet tooth. Here's a good example of a super dessert taken from the 1920s. A couple of ingredients have been updated to things more available in today's supermarket.

SALMON TIMBALES
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 cup milk
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 cup flaked salmon, drained
1 pimento, finely chopped
Mix the eggs, milk and seasonings together. Add the salmon and pimento and mix well. Put into timble molds or muffin cups and bake 30 to 40 minutes.

ICE BOX CAKE
3/4 pound powdered sugar
1/2 pound butter, softened
4 eggs, separated
1/4 teaspoon vanilla extract
8 strawberry shortcake cups (usually in the produce section by the strawberries)
1 - 8 1/2 ounce can crushed pineapple
Maraschino cherries
1 pint whipping cream
Cream the sugar and butter together. Add egg yolks one at a time. See JONES on Page C2.

Bright colors making statement in tableware

By MINNIE BERNARDINO
Los Angeles Times

Exciting things are happening in the table-top market. Color has boldly stepped in. Although country and traditional floral patterns are still very much around, bright designs in primary colors have made strong statements in tableware. The success of the "brights" in table-top accessories, particularly the reds, whites and blacks, was the basis for continuing the trend in the new contemporary collection by Taitu, a Texas-based dinnerware company that has been in business since 1962. Designed by co-owner Emillo Bergamin in Italy, Taitu's full line of modern as well as traditional porcelain china reflects balance and asymmetry in design. Why the name Taitu? We asked co-owner Keith Smith in a recent telephone interview. He said that Bergamin named the business after Empress Taitu of Ethiopia (1869-1913), who has always been known for good taste and liking the best. Smith said that the company never discontinues a pattern and that the colors are consistent. "We're the only porcelain dinnerware with that true red color, which is very hard to get in to porcelain." "Everything with Taitu is designed like fashion," Smith said. "The layer-on-layer look is achieved... like ready-to-wear (clothes)." Because colors are so basic (there now are 14 solid colors), they are easy to match with existing accessories. "You can even layer solid plates with any old china you have... but coordinate in good taste and always use porcelain on porcelain," Smith advises.

Tomorrow's kitchens focus on convenience, fast cooking

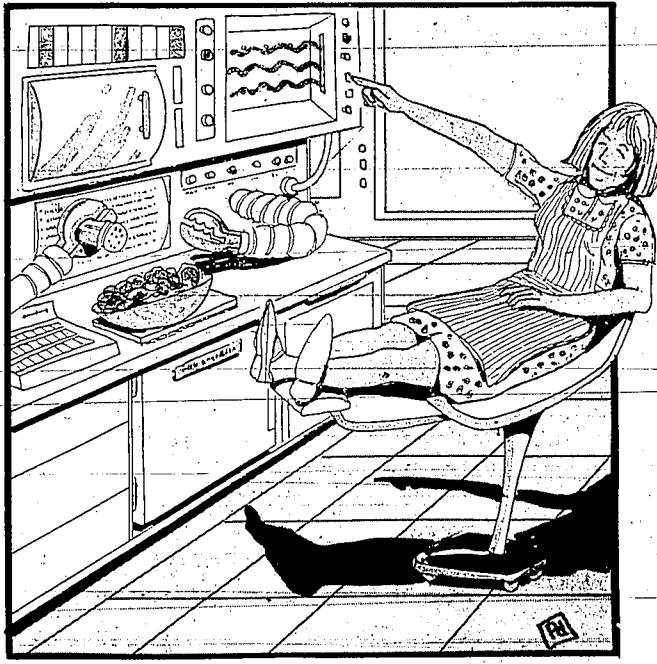

Operations Central may describe kitchen by end of century

By CAROLE SUGARMAN
The Washington Post

Operations Central may someday be more than the pulse of your spaceship. It may also be your kitchen. Picture this scenario: After you leave for work in the morning, you centrally controlled computer turns on the dishwasher, then recycles the water to the washing machine. Later, an ironing board pops out of a cabinet, and a robot arm presses your washed and dried shirts. By the time you get home, your flounder has been microwaved and the irradiated milk in your pantry has been chilled. There's little left to do but eat and spend a leisurely evening in the "kitchen" playing electronic checkers and catching up on some computerized banking or watching your favorite taped daytime soap. If the seers of our kitchen future are right, this forecast may not be so far-fetched. We're already part way there. But by the year 2000, the kitchen will be a multipurpose planning and entertainment center, a compact and efficient set-up of integrated electronic appliances and equipment, according to a study conducted for the Whirlpool Corp. by the University of Southern California.

In fact, says the study, the kitchen as we know it today may become obsolete. The growing phenomena of more and more single-parent households, women increasingly joining the work force and more meals being eaten outside the home are having a profound effect on the traditional notion of the family kitchen, concludes the study. We are entering a world of smaller homes, smaller cooking areas and less and less time to cook in them. While we may have to wait a while for high-tech electronic kitchens, some of these ideas — down-size and integrated appliances and space-saving kitchen layouts — are already quite popular. It's not that futurists, interior designers and kitchen-appliance manufacturers see an end to kitchens as we know them for those who love to cook. There will always be "traditional" features for those who want to simmer a soup all day or roll a pastry. But cooking may become more and more a special interest, a weekend activity. In fact, according to Ellen Chavers of the Kitchen and Bath Association, cooking may become "theater" — joint entertainment for guests and hosts in kitchens with work-around islands and peninsula counters. Mainly though, the kitchen of the future will be a consolidated work and living space used for several functions and activities. Here are some of the ideas in the works and the experts' predictions: Integrated cabinets and appliances: According to the USC study, more and more appliances will be built into cabinets, so that builders rather than consumers will take responsibility for appliance installation. This integration concept is already being seen in the products of some companies, including Black & Decker, which has just introduced a line of Spacemaker appliances that affix to the bottom of overhead cabinets. A can opener, coffee maker and toaster oven are among the appliances that hang between the upper cabinets and kitchen counter. Hidden features: Shelves or cabinets that open into floor-to-ceiling pantries or mini-refrigerators will give the feeling, when closed, that there's a lot less going on in the kitchen than meets the eye. One future possibility, according to Houston architect Victor Mironetschuk of PDI Architects-Planners, is a revolving cabinet that works similarly to a lazy susan spice rack. Only this cabinet may accommodate a computer on one side; then flip it around and it's a broom closet on the other side, said Mironetschuk. Multi-functional appliances: In the

Consumers can help raise money to help public television

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

Deep down, I always believed that saving box tops and labels would one day become a "rite" and that conversation of fashionable cocktail parties eventually would turn to whether trial-size proofs qualified for a Nabisco $20 refund. Well, that day may be coming closer.

For the first time, you can use your box tops and labels to make a contribution to public television—and become a supporter of the arts.

On Sunday, April 28, a special coupon insert will appear in most newspapers around the country. It will announce that General Foods has underwritten the cost of producing a new program for public television and that consumers can help raise $1,000,000 for public television—and receive a gift for themselves—by sending in proofs of purchase from any of nine General Foods brands.

And what is the television series that General Foods would like supermarket shoppers to watch? "Master Chefs" maybe? Or a new program with Julia Child?

No such luck. It is called "The Sporting Life," and it will be hosted by pitcher Jim Palmer, winner of 238 baseball games and three Cy Young awards. The choice of programming was still a mystery to me when I interviewed Palmer.

Supermarket Shopper

"The Sporting Life" is exactly the kind of sports program you won't find on the commercial networks," said Palmer. "The networks don't delve into the inner, private world of the athlete—they don't show what an athlete must do to succeed—the hard work and dedication required."

"But what about food shopping?" I asked him, a little embarrassed to switch the subject.

"I have always done the supermarket shopping," he said, "and you have to know your supermarket, and I pride myself in getting through it with the greatest of ease."

"Are you a coupon user?"

"Of course I use coupons. It's a great way to save money."

Palmer also told me that he still remembers his first refund offer. He received a free towel for sending in five candy box tops.

The initial guest list of "The Sporting Life" includes Jim "Catfish" Hunter, who will talk about his days as a star pitcher for the Oakland A's and the New York Yankees; Dr. James Allen, a Utah physician who spends weekends competing in rodeos; and Jockey Angel Cordero.

But why a sports series, and where are the woman athletes?

Phyllis Behar and Roberta London, the executive producers, assured me that several of the first 10 shows would involve women in sports.

I certainly hope so, but I think General Foods missed the boat. If they really want to motivate us to send in more Jell-O labels, perhaps Palmer can give us an inside look at the sport of couponing and refunding. He could describe what the avid refunder must go through to succeed—the hard work, the stress, the dedication.

But General Foods does deserve credit for bringing the power of the proof of purchase to the aid of public television. Whether or not the careers of the famous and not-so-famous in sports interest you, I urge you to send in these proofs and show that smart shoppers care about supporting quality television.

Future

multi-purpose kitchen of the future, Cheever from the Kitchen and Bath Association envisions several combination appliances and equipment, including an entertainment bar that lifts off to become a laundry sink and a programmed microwave refrigerator that defrosts and cooks before you get home.

And Edward Cornish, president of the World Future Society, sees multi-purpose robots in the kitchen. These robots don't necessarily look like people, says Cornish, but more like computerized appliances with arms that may be able to husk corn and cut green beans simultaneously.

Without being very specific (for fear of divulging company products in the planning stages), Hal Rosenbaum, director of market research and planning at Sunbeam, says that the company is developing single appliances that perform several tasks.

These are appliances that do not function by removing or rearranging parts, says Rosenbaum. Instead, different functions are performed by the flick of a variety of switches.

Modular appliances: Houston architect Victor Milrontschuk of EDI Architects-Planners has developed a prototype of the FlexHouse, a shell of a structure in which you can easily convert rooms into new sizes and uses.

The kitchen, which might consist of a few modules (a seating area, a stove and oven complex), could be transferred to another location in the house or even moved to another home.

Another idea, according to Cheever of the Kitchen and Bath Association, might be "movable centers." Less frequently used equipment or work centers might raise up from the floor or drop down from the ceiling, Cheever said.

Microwaves: Practically all the experts predict an increase in the use of microwave ovens. In fact, says Rebecca Lovingood, associate professor of household equipment at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, many people will have two or three microwaves so that cooking can become even faster.

To coordinate the technology, adds Lovingood, an increasing variety of foods packaged for microwave use will be developed.

Refrigerators: Some experts predict that refrigerators will be better designed to hold more frozen foods (for the microwave). On the other hand, others predict that the opposite may occur; the resurgence of fresh foods may further expand vegetable and fruit handlers.

If and when food irradiation becomes widespread, however, refrigerators would be needed only to chill foods that people prefer cold, says the USC study, and freezers could become obsolete altogether.

Demise of the dining room: Gene Dreyfus of Child-Dreyfus, a design consulting company, figures that because of the increasing cost of construction and high interest rates, and because most people underutilize their dining rooms, it could now cost a couple about $1,000 to book their own dining room for Easter dinner.

To get better use out of this setup, the kitchen and dining room will blend into one room, containing perhaps a library and game area, said Dreyfus. And many experts predict that the home computer will be the focal point of the room, a trend that some designers and architects are seeing already.

to sugar mixture and beat well after every addition.

In another bowl, beat egg whites until they are stiff and fold them into the sugar mixture along with the vanilla stringing.

Use an 8-inch or 9-inch square glass baking pan. Line it with two pieces of waxed paper cut to fit over the bottom and up over the sides. Lay them in cross-wise and leave enough over to cover finished cake.

Place four of the shortcake cups in the bottom. That's the first layer. Cover them with half the filling for layer two. Cover that layer with half the crushed pineapple making layer three. For layer four, place whole or sliced maraschino cherries on top of the pineapple. This is not a solid layer, just scatter them so everyone is going to get some with their piece.

Whip 1 cup (½ pint) of the whipping cream until stiff and spread it for layer five.

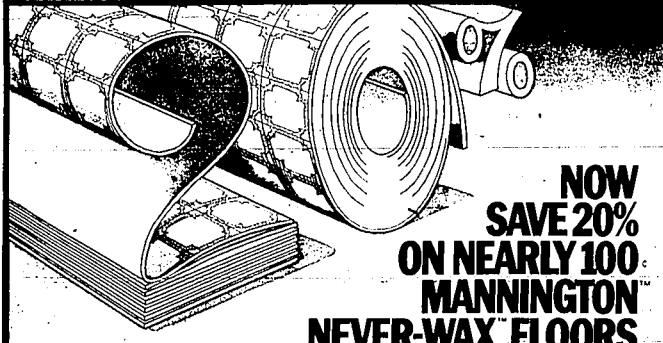

Then start all over again and repeat each of the five layers on top of the original set.

Cover the cake making sure the waxed paper is hanging over the sides of the pan.

Chill overnight. When ready to serve, open the waxed paper and turn refrigerator down onto a serving platter. Whip the other cup of whipping cream until stiff and spread it over the whole cake. You can garnish the top with more cherries if you wish.

I know that one will take some of you back a few years. It's really an excellent recipe and great for summer. Enjoy!

Rhubarb tart, with whipped cream added, offers a feast for the eyes as well as taste buds

Savor fresh new rhubarb prepared as a tasty tart

As discerning palates turn to sweet delicacies this spring, they'll think of fresh rhubarb and what better way to savor its tangy sweetness than tucked in a tart?

Prepared like a pie, but without the top crust, Rhubarb Tart with clove-studded whipped cream is a feast for the eyes as well as the taste buds.

The pie shell can be prepared ahead and chilled before baking. After the crust cools, it's easy to pour in orange-spiked rhubarb sauce. Whipped cream is added just before serving.

Washington state has a prime climate for growing fresh rhubarb. In fact, 45 percent of the field crop and 90 percent of the hothouse rhubarb in the U. S. is grown in the fertile valleys of western Washington.

When purchasing rhubarb, look for firm, straight stalks and a bright red color. Refrigerate at home, but don't wash until ready to use.

Fresh rhubarb can be used in a variety of ways: chiffon pie, meringue pie, tarts and other desserts and breads. Or try adding fresh rhubarb to a chicken fricassee or lamb stew.

For more information or free recipes, write the Washington Rhubarb Growers, Box 537, Sumner, Wash., 98390.

RHUBARB TART WITH CLOVE-STUDED WHIPPED CREAM

Walnut Crust:
10 oz. finely chopped walnuts
1/2 lb. (2 sticks) unsalted margarine, softened
1/2 cup sugar
3 cups flour
1 egg, beaten
1 tsp. vanilla

In a food processor or electric mixer, mix together all ingredients until well blended. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Press into a buttered 10-inch pie pan or springform pan. Chill for 30 minutes before baking. Bake for 15 minutes or until golden brown.

Filling:
6 cups rhubarb, cut in 1/2" pieces (about 1 1/2 lbs.)
1/2 cups sugar
1/4 cup quick cooking tapioca granules
4 tsp. grated orange peel
1/2 tsp. salt
2 Tbsp. unsalted margarine
1 tablespoon orange liqueur

Combine first six ingredients in large, heavy saucepan. Let stand for 30 minutes, mixing occasionally. Bring to a boil, stirring medium. Reduce heat to medium and cook until liquid thickens and rhubarb softens, stirring often. Remove from heat. Mix in margarine and liqueur. Cool completely. Can be made the day before. Turn filling into crust on top with Clove-Studded Whipped Cream.

Clove-Studded Whipped Cream
1/2 cup heavy cream, very cold
1/4 tsp. ground cloves
Chill small, deep bowl and beaters for about 20 minutes. Whip cream until stiff and fold in ground cloves.

California grape season arrives, bringing welcome menu additions

By TOM HOGE
The Associated Press

The season for California grapes has arrived. Every state grows some grapes, but California contributes the greatest part of the crop destined for commercial consumption.

Two of California's major table grapes, the Perlette with its frosty green hue and the red Cardinal, become available in May. The Perlette is around until July and the Cardinal season runs through August.

Thompson seedless arrive in June.

The popularity of grapes in America has soared in recent years, moving up from 10th among fresh fruits in 1972 to fifth place in 1982, according to the California Table Grape Commission. The emphasis on natural foods has been a big factor in this dramatic increase. Physical fitness has become an important motivation in our diet.

The California grape season, under normal weather conditions, begins about mid-May and continues through January of the following year.

Unlike many fresh fruits, grapes can be harvested only when they are ripe. After picking they will not get any sweeter.

The fruit must be well protected after harvesting, since it is vulnerable to warm temperature, excessive moisture and mold.

The origin of grapes is obscure, but it is believed that they existed as far back as 4000 B.C. The Scriptures say that grapes were the first vegetation planted by Noah after the Flood.

Most of the grapes produced commercially in America are said to come from vines of the same species that were cultivated in Asia Minor in prehistoric times.

Grapes are good in many dishes, both hot and cold, but my favorite is in salads such as this one, featuring chicken.

Salad greens, including lettuce and cucumber
1-1/2 cup dairy sour cream
1 ounce white wine
1/2 cup walnut bits
Marinate chicken, celery and green pepper in French dressing 1 hour. Add grapes and season with salt and pepper. Arrange on greens. Mix sour cream and wine and add to salad. Garnish with nuts. Serves 4.

Make potato chips from scratch

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
The Associated Press

A New York friend of mine, on a recent visit to Savannah, Ga., had lunch at a popular restaurant (Crystal Beer Parlor) which first opened in the early 1930s and serves Southern coastal specialties. To her delight, the shrimp salad sandwich she ordered came accompanied by extra-delicious freshly made potato chips.

At home again, with the help of some home economist friends, she duplicated the restaurant's potato chips and sent me the recipe. When we tried it in our own kitchen, we found it worked well.

POTATO CHIPS
1 1/2 pounds (about) baking potatoes (4 medium), peeled
1 quart (about) corn oil

Using a vegetable slicer, slice potatoes crosswise into very thin slices. Soak in very cold water for 30 minutes; rinse. Repeat at least 3 more times to remove a good deal of the starch.

Pour oil into a heavy 3-quart saucepan or deep fryer, filling no more than 2/3 full. Heat over medium-high heat to 375 degrees. Meanwhile, drain potatoes and dry thoroughly with towels. Place potatoes, about 1 cup at a time, in frying basket. Carefully lower into oil; stir. Fry 2 to 3 minutes or until golden brown. Drain on paper towels. If desired, sprinkle with salt. Serve immediately; chips will not stay crisp if stored. Makes about 6 cups.

METHOD: Several hours in advance, fry potato slices 1 minute or until tender but not brown. Drain on paper towels. At serving time, reheat oil to 375 degrees. Place blanched potatoes, about 1 cup at a time, in frying basket. Fry 1 to 2 minutes or until golden. Drain on paper towels. Serve immediately; chips will not stay crisp if stored.

Leading mental disorder

Depression can affect nearly everyone

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Depression affects nearly everyone in varying degrees, but when it is severe enough to require treatment the condition usually has both psychological and biological causes.

This was part of an overview of the complexity of this leading mental disorder presented by three professionals Monday night at a seminar sponsored by the Utah Central Idaho Mental Health Association in the CSI Shields building.

The workshop, the first of a three-session series, was attended by nearly 200 people, according to Edna Kulken, president. Next Monday's topic will be on "Eating Disorders — Anorexia and Bulimia" with Candyeve Reynolds, Eugene, Ore., psychologist and director of an eating disorder clinic, as speaker.

Ken Diebert, administrator of the Canyon View psychiatric hospital which will open here next month, moderated Monday night's panel which included Dr. Morris Morgret, psychologist, and Dr. Richard Worst, psychiatrist, both Twin Falls.

Diebert said one of every 12 people suffers from depression which was the cause of an estimated 16 percent of all 1984 hospital admissions.

He stressed that it is normal to feel depressed after the loss of a loved one, or other major upsetting changes, and it is only when depression symptoms "exceed the cause" and continue for an inappropriate length of time that one should consider seeking professional help.

Among the symptoms, which also can indicate other physical problems, "to add to the confusion," are insomnia, poor appetite, decreased sexual drive, feelings of worthlessness and inappropriate guilt, inability to think and loss of interest in normal life activities.

No single one of these indicates clinical depression, Diebert said, and symptoms vary widely in different individuals. It is estimated that nearly 25 percent of all doctor visits are related to depression.

While admitting the complexity of the subject, Diebert said research has shown there is a hereditary correlation and changes in the brain structure occur in clinical depression.

Morgret discussed the difficulties of living with someone who is depressed and stressed the importance of the depressed person having someone "who would listen to them."

He stressed that listeners must avoid the temptation to "do the same feelings," should not be judgmental but "should just sit down and listen."

Depressed people tend to believe their condition is all their own fault, he said, which only adds to their depression.

Worst, terming depression a "mixed bag," said it usually is a mixture of both biological and psychological causes, and the latter often can trigger the chemical imbalances which are a major factor in much severe depression.

"In some cases this imbalance is a medical disorder, just as much as diabetes," the psychiatrist said. "The chemical imbalance in the nervous system is now known to be a 'pre-disposed' (hereditary) condition in some people which can be triggered by major stresses in their lives, such as marital or work difficulties or even 'post traumatic stress' following a sometimes apparent minor accident or injury."

Recent research now shows depression also can occur after a bad case of flu or shingles, may be caused by medication or be a symptom of various medical problems, such as brain tumor or multiple sclerosis.

"Psychiatrists live in dread that we may miss diagnosing these many medical problems whose first symptoms often appear to be clinical depression," Dr. Worst said.

If the depressed patient has a significant number of symptoms, blood tests show no biological cause and there is a family tendency toward depression, then antidepressant drugs are prescribed.

Dr. Worst said knowledge is improving constantly and predicted in a few years lab tests will show exactly what chemical is lacking and what medication will be effective in each individual patient.

Reading opens up world of pleasure, learning

DEAR ABBY: As an eighth-grade English and social studies teacher, I am trying to encourage my students to establish a habit of reading.

Students tend to emulate and identify with famous people, so I am asking various celebrities to help me with this project. As you know, Abby, better educated students grow up to be more informed and responsible citizens.

Would you please write a paragraph or two, stressing the importance of reading?

Thank you for your time and help.

—RAY SNYTHE, PORTLAND
DEAR MR. SMYTHE: With pleasure. If I could give young people one piece of advice, it would be, read, read, read!

Reading will open up new worlds, real and imagined. Read for information, read for pleasure, read for inspiration. Our libraries contain a wealth of information and entertainment, and it's all yours — as much as you want — free for the taking!

The person who DOES NOT read has no advantage over the person who CANNOT read.

And since last week was National Library Week, I want to encourage parents to read to their very young children. This loving act will create a bond of closeness between parent and child as well as make the child aware of the buried treasures that can be found in books.

Let me share with you the closing paragraph from one of my favorite poems, "The Reading Mother" by Strickland Gillilan:

Ritual of shaving found in history

BOSTON (AP) — Shaving, one of the most enduring male rituals, dates back thousands of years and even Shakespeare emphasized the desirability of shaving in many of his plays, according to research by a manufacturer of shaving products.

For example, in "Much Ado About Nothing," published in 1600, "I could not endow a husband with a beard on his face." And, from the same play: "Indeed, he looks younger than he did, by the loss of a beard."

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

"You may have tangible wealth untold;
Caskets of jewels and coffers of gold.
"Richer than I you can never be —
"I had a mother who read to me."

DEAR ABBY: "Walter in Beverly Hills" was way off base when he said, "The cook is the highest paid employee in the restaurant — in fact, in the better restaurants the cook has more money than the people who eat there."

Abby, some chefs may make that kind of money, but there's a big difference between a cook and a chef. A chef is a well-trained, specially schooled, high-salaried professional for whom cooking is an art — not just a job.

In case you don't know it, the most overworked and underpaid employee in a restaurant is the busboy. Everything you touch, the busboy has washed before you got there, but he'll wash it again after you leave. He gives the cook clean plates for the food, and the waiter clean silver and clean glasses.

He's the one you see balancing a tray with about 100 pounds of dishes on it. If a busboy makes a minimum wage, he's lucky. Fortunately, the waiters and waitresses do share their tips with him, but it's not much.

Don't get me wrong, everybody in the restaurant business really works hard and few get rich, but if there's an extra tip to be given, remind your readers to give it to the busboy.

—SAN ANTONIO COOK
DEAR COOK: Thanks for the reminder. And may I remind you that sometimes the "busboy" is a girl.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

THE AGES BOBBY WOLF

Dear Mr. Wolff:
If one pre-empt's in third or fourth position (after two or three passes), is he limited to a maximum of nine HCP?
Frisky Frank, Knoxville, Tenn.
ANSWER: Before partner has had an opportunity to bid, your pre-empt's would be limited to nine HCP or fewer. Otherwise partner would be forced to guess. After he has passed, it is good strategy to vary tactics within reasonable limits, hoping to force the opponents into bad guesses. In fourth position there is usually little reason for you to pre-empt, since you can pass and the hand-will be thrown in.

Dear Mr. Wolff:
After this bidding, the opponents ran five quick heart winners. Is it time for me to trade in my partner for a new model?
Partner Op.
1♦ 1♥ 1NT 2♥
3♣ Pass 3NT All pass
Poor Game, Little Rock, Ark.
ANSWER: Your partner either was very unlucky or he likes to play the hand. I suspect he is some kind of bidding hog although I would need to know the entire hand before passing judgment.

Partner doubles a three-heart proxy. Can you clarify? After a pass by RHO, what should I bid with this hand? W was vulnerable.
Dear Mr. Wolff:
