Reagan visits Bitburg as protests continue

BITBURG, West Germany (AP) - President Reagan, making a determined gesture of reconciliation against a backdrop of protest, led an austere wreath-laying ceremony Sunday at the small military cemetery here that holds graves of German war dead and SS troopers. To mute the storm of protest arising from his homage at the graves of Nazis, Reagan spent an earlier hour at a concentration camp where 50,000 Jews and gentiles were put to death by Adolf Hitler's 12-year dictatorship. "The horror cannot outlast the hope," the president said there - his message to those who accused him of ignoring the Nazi horrors. Reagan, in one of the most controversial acts of his presidency, spent only eight minutes in silence at the Kolmeshöhe Cemetery in Bitburg with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl on a dark, gray day. Neither spoke. Soldiers carried two wreaths of brightly colored flowers to the base of a slate tower. Close by two SS gravestones, the two leaders stood, tight-lipped, their hands on the flowers before them. A bugler played, "I Had a Comrade," the German equivalent of "Taps." Then both walked over to shake hands with a group of spectators, including German Army Col. Berthold von Stauffenberg, whose father, Claus, was executed for trying to assassinate Hitler. Then the two leaders got in their limousines - two minutes ahead of schedule. Reagan looked tired following two days of meetings with the leaders of seven industrial democracies at an economic summit meeting at Bonn that ended Saturday. In the town of Bitburg, supporters waving little American flags lined the streets, but they were overshadowed by jeering demonstrators from the United States, France, West Germany and 14 other countries. Many of the protesters were students wearing the yellow six-pointed Star of David that their forebears were forced to wear during Hitler's repression. "My brother's blood cries out to me from the grave," read one protest banner. Before Reagan arrived, police armed with riot gear scuffled for five minutes with 200 demonstrators, who chanted, "Never again." There were no arrests. Back at Bergen-Belsen, 220 miles to the north, after Reagan left, 50 demonstrators, the mostly American Jews belonging to the New York City-based International Network of Children of Holocaust Survivors, were allowed in. "Never until today has anyone dared to use these graves as part of an attempt to rehabilitate the SS," said Menachem Rosenzweig, who was born in the small camp set up for survivors of Bergen-Belsen after its liberation in 1945. Following the wreath-laying at Bitburg, Reagan drove to the nearby U.S. air base. Standing before U.S. infantrymen in combat fatigues and German soldiers wearing red berets, he addressed the concerns he had aroused. "Some old wounds have been reopened, and this I regret very much, because this should be a time of healing," he said, but he added that God - not he - had judged the deeds of the men buried there. "One of the SS troopers was a boy of 15, a conscript," Reagan said, and "there were thousands of such soldiers to whom Nazism meant no more than a brutal end to a short life. We do not believe in collective guilt." Reagan said the cemetery contained the graves of 48 SS men. Most news accounts, and a physical count by an Associated Press reporter, previously had put the number at 49. Peter Sommer, an aide to Reagan's Na-

President's trip inspires mixed reaction

BITBURG, West Germany (AP) - President Reagan's visit to the military cemetery here inspired jeers, chants and whistles of opposition here and around the world Sunday. But cheers were heard too, as many Germans thanked Reagan for defying a storm of criticism to honor their war dead. "A handful of protesters shouted 'Please don't go' as Reagan's motorcade carried him through the narrow streets of this small farming community to the gravesite in the nearby hills. A grim-faced Reagan and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl laid wreaths at Kolmeshöhe Cemetery, where 49 Nazi SS troopers are buried among some 2,000 war dead. Several thousand persons lined the streets to see the president's limousine motorcade speed by. Sounds of derision came from pockets of protesters, but they were matched at times by cheers from supporters. Banners and banners were held aloft amid the throngs.

"They killed my family," read one. "Why, Mr. President?" queried another. "It's hard to believe," said a third. Along the way to the nearby U.S. Air Force base, the president also viewed signs of support: "Hail to the Chief," "Welcome President Reagan," and "Thanks for liberating us." The president could be seen sitting in the back of his limousine, waving and smiling broadly at the crowd, where dozens of young and old waved tiny U.S. flags.

Security was tight in the tiny hillside gravesite, with protesters lined up several hundred yards away. The limited number of reporters and invited guests allowed in the roped-off site had to pass through metal detectors. Police pried open manhole covers to search for explosives. About 20 minutes before Reagan passed through the center of Bitburg, 25 German police equipped with riot gear charged into about 50 Jewish students and their supporters. The France not alone in distrust of U.S.

By ROBERT BURNS The Associated Press

BONN, West Germany - France's bold rejection at the economic summit of a U.S. plan for opening up trade talks has provoked in a suspicion of American motives that some other European nations share but will not openly express. In public, Francois Mitterrand, the socialist French president, stood alone among the European leaders in questioning Reagan's plea for the leaders of the seven largest industrial democracies to endorse 1986 as the year for new trade negotiations to begin. Yet he was speaking for other major partners of the European Common Market when he told his summit partners that France would not sign a summit-ending communique that named a date for starting talks. Because of Mitterrand's resistance, the one-page declaration issued Saturday said only that the leaders agreed trade negotiations should begin "as soon as possible" and that must wanted to start in 1986.

That's the same noncommittal position in which the summit count-erparts stood before they arrived here for two days of talks. The stalemate does not mean a new round of bargaining will not be held, nor even that talks won't start next year. In fact, the odds are that such negotiations will begin then. But the failure to achieve unanimous agreement in Bonn is a reflection of the depth of suspicion in the French government, and in some other European capitals, of U.S. motives in promoting trade negotiations. Secretary of State George P. Shultz may have confirmed the Europeans' fears when he told reporters the Reagan administration sought freer trade, because "we think that's good for us." France, and to a lesser extent Italy and the smaller members of the 10-nation Common Market, suspect that what is good for the

Challenger readies for return to Earth

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - Challenger's astronauts made final runs on their science experiments Sunday and prepared to fire the space shuttle out of orbit for a long fall toward a high-speed landing in California. They also had another bout with airborne particles of rat food and feces. Mission commander Bob Overmyer maneuvered the spacecraft Sunday for the first time in six days and reported "no problem at all." Challenger "felt like a moving machine again," he said. The maneuver pointed Challenger's nose at the sun and will cause heaters to turn on in the propellant tank of the spacecraft's powerful rocket engines.

This prepares the engines for a firing this morning that will drop the spaceship from orbit and start its Earthward. The spacecraft had been kept in a stable attitude that required no rocket firings. This enabled the astronauts to conduct their experiments, such as a rat growth, that require a near-perfect absence of gravity. Challenger is scheduled to land on a dry lakebed runway at Edwards Air Force Base in California's Mojave Desert at 10:04 a.m. EDT today at the conclusion of the week-long flight. It will cross the California coast near Long Beach three minutes before landing, traveling three times faster than sound.

Chances of black men being slain rank well above average

WASHINGTON (AP) - Americans generally have one chance in 133 of being murdered in an entire lifetime, and black men have a one-in-21 lifetime chance of being slain, the government said Sunday in its first violent crime risk study. The study by the Bureau of Justice Statistics also concluded that some 6 million Americans, or roughly 3 percent of the population over age 12, will likely fall victim each year to robberies, rapes or other assaults. The bureau, a unit of the Justice Department, also calculated that "in an entire lifetime," the chance of being murdered is one in 137.5 for whites, and one in 10,000 for blacks. But for black men, it said, there's a one-in-21 lifetime chance of being murdered. White men have a one-in-131 lifetime chance, white females, one in 369 lifetime chance; and black females, one chance in 104. Murders in the United States reached their highest level in 1983 - one victim out of every 10,000 people. The FBI Uniform Crime Reports, released late last month, showed that murders fell by 3 percent from 1983 to 1984. Overall, reported crime dropped 3 percent. The findings were based in part on five years of National Crime Survey statistics. "The one-in-31 rate for victims of violent crimes other than murder was the rate actually recorded in 1982. But statisticians said they felt it could be extrapolated as a risk factor for this and future years because violent crime incidence rates, excluding murder, remained generally constant," between 1978-82, the period studied. The report said that generally, blacks are more likely than whites to be crime victims.

Young adults run a greater risk than the elderly and people in lower-income brackets are at greater risk than those in higher income categories while married people are less likely to be victims than single or divorced people, it said. These assessments were contained in the newly devised "Crime Risk Index," a government indicator of the chance of becoming a violent crime victim. Steven H. Schlesinger, the bureau's director, cautioned that the 3 percent figure on the proportion of Americans likely to be victimized by robbery, assault or rape in a given year probably understates the peril "over a lifetime." The study noted that the 3 percent figure does not include murder, manslaughter by drunk drivers, kidnapping, child abuse or other violent crimes not measured in the National Crime Survey. Risk assessments to establish the likelihood that people will be victims of robbery, rape, and assault were based on the bureau's National Crime Survey, which draws conclusions with some 125,000 randomly selected interviews about crime from twice-a-year interviews. The risk assessment for murder, however, was based on a separate analysis of 1982 coroner and medical examiner reports to the National Center for Health Statistics. The study's authors, Patrick A. Langan and Christopher A. James, devised a life table, which they called standard actuarial device, to calculate the murder risk. For the purposes of the study, a life was arbitrarily defined as being from birth through age 89, the study said. The assessment of a person's risk of being robbed, raped or assaulted tracked fairly closely with the "victimization" rates produced by the bureau's National Crime Survey, which is based on interviews with crime victims. The survey makes no attempt to include homicide statistics. The proportion of all Americans victimized by violent crime, excluding murder, was approximately 3 percent in 1982, the new study found. The violent crime victimization rate, as reflected in the random interviews, was 3.4 percent of the population in the same year. "This could mean that 3.4 percent of the population was victimized by violent crime, with no one victimized more than once, or it could mean that 1 percent was victimized, with the typical victim averaging 3.4 victimizations," the BJS said. It said the new "Crime Risk Index" was developed because of this weakness in the existing survey.

Helicopter crash kills two

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A helicopter pilot and a cameraman died Sunday when their craft crashed and burned as it was taking off on a trip to shoot television news film.

Dennis Williamson, manager of station KREM-TV, said the Hughes 500 helicopter smashed into the station's transmitter tower and crashed in the parking lot about 8:30 a.m. There were no reports of injuries or damage on the ground.

The pilot and the cameraman were on their way to cover a long-distance foot race, he said.

Williamson said the helicopter was rented from Spokane Helicopter Service, Inc. because the pilot of the station's own chopper was ill. The station's helicopter regularly lands and takes off from the same parking lot, he said.

Gunman wounds officer, dies

SAN YSIDRO, Calif. (AP) — Officers patrolling the U.S.-Mexican border for bandits shot and killed a gunman who had seriously wounded an officer after the man and two companions were stopped for questioning.

The shooting occurred at 11:25 p.m. Saturday in rugged canyon country a quarter-mile north of the border and a half-mile east of San Ysidro, San Diego police Officer Jack Tipton said. The area is frequented by bandits who prey upon illegal aliens trying to slip across the border.

Border Patrol agents Fred Stevens, 39, and John Crockett, 34, accompanied by San Diego police Officer Cesar Solis, 26, spotted three men entering suspiciously, Tipton said.

When the officers approached the men, one spoke to Stevens in Spanish and the border agent responded, Tipton said. The men then apparently recognized the officers' uniforms and ran, he said.

Dotson balks at lie detector

CHICAGO (AP) — Gary Dotson, imprisoned for six years for a rape his former accuser now says never happened, is balking at taking a lie-detector test, his attorney said Sunday.

Dotson lawyer Warren Lupel said he and his client, who is free on bond, had earlier agreed to the test after talking with an aide to Gov. James R. Thompson. Thompson will consider Dotson's bid for clemency during a meeting Thursday with the Illinois Prisoner Review Board.

"He (Dotson) agreed to take it, but he is concerned about it after talking to family members and some other lawyers," Lupel said in a telephone interview.

Senate leaders continue to believe deficit-reduction proposal can pass

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders are predicting they can still hammer out a $50-billion deficit-reduction plan in the coming days, despite a series of early votes restoring billions of dollars to popular programs.

The GOP-run chamber was expected to continue dismantling the Reagan administration-backed plan this week, with votes expected to restore rural housing programs, small business loans and subsidies for Amtrak rail service.

But at some point, once all the politically easy votes have been cast, Republican leaders say the Senate will have to go back over what it's done and start making some unpopular domestic spending cuts in earnest.

"Sooner or later, we've got to put a deficit reduction package together. If it isn't ours, it's got to be somebody's," said Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

The Senate leadership expects to call votes on overall plans once separate votes on specific programs have run their course.

In addition to the plan Majority Leader Robert Dole is attempting to assemble, there are three rival Democratic alternatives, all of which seek to reduce the $200 billion deficit roughly in half by 1988 — the same goal adopted by the administration.

Thus, some items already rejected, like limits on cost-of-living increases for Social Security benefits, are almost surely to reappear in a different form.

A one-year freeze on Social Security increases is expected to be included in the GOP plan, in fact, and is also a feature of two of the three Democratic proposals.

Republican leaders were unable to hold together key elements of the budget compromise they painstakingly negotiated with the president because of united Democratic opposition and Republican defections.

Contractors' bogus billing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense contractors bill the taxpayers for such things as haircuts and ball tickets. Knowing they won't be penalized if caught by Pentagon auditors, two House Armed Services subcommittee chairmen said Sunday.

"They do this because there's no penalty for submitting even the most outrageous bill to the government," Rep. Bill Nichols, D-Fla., of the investigations subcommittee, said in a prepared statement.

Nichols, who along with Rep. Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., of the seapower subcommittee, is investigating contractor billing practices, said that the Pentagon receives tens of thousands of bills monthly.

"The contractor is paid monthly based on estimates of future billings, although the Pentagon has started some new controls," Nichols said.

Television can increase youth obesity

BOSTON (AP) — Heavy doses of television can make children fat, and youngsters who are addicted to the tube early in life often grow to be overweight teen-agers, a new study has found.

The researchers found that among adolescents, the incidence of obesity increases by 2 percent for each additional hour that they average in front of the television each day.

"I'm not saying that television viewing causes all childhood obesity. It doesn't," said Dr. William H. Dietz Jr.

The researchers theorize that dedicated television watchers are fatter than other youngsters because they eat more and exercise less while glued to the set.

The study was conducted by Dietz, who runs an obesity clinic at New England Medical Center, and Dr. Steven L. Gortmaker of the Harvard School of Public Health. It was published in the May issue of the journal Pediatrics.

The study found that children who watch more television than average are fatter than those who watch less. For instance, 10 percent of the teen-agers who watch an hour or less of TV a day are obese, compared with 20 percent of those who watch more than five hours daily.

Fixed exchange rates should be avoided

The French have an important point. There's a direct connection between international trade and currency exchange rates. It's hard to talk about one without taking account of the other. But that isn't quite an argument for trying to reform the world's monetary system, as the French government is now proposing.

At the Bonn meeting, President Reagan is to press for a world trade conference next year to begin another round of dismantling the array of national laws that restrict commerce. It's a good idea. The increase in trade across national boundaries has been a constant contributor to economic growth since World War II, and this kind of conference is periodically necessary to keep the process going. In response, Francois Mitterrand, the president of France, has said that he wants a monetary conference "in the same process" to tie the European, Japanese and American currencies more closely together.

The United States supports both conferences, but it opposes any formal link between them. The reason is that substantial progress is altogether possible on the trade issues, but probably not on exchange rates. It's not because governments don't like fixed exchange rates. The world used them until the early 1970s, and commerce flourished. They were eventually destroyed by prosperity and by the rapid increases in the amounts of private money moving from country to country. By the 1970s, the flows of private capital were large enough to swamp governments' attempts at intervention. For the past dozen years, the rates have been set mainly by the daily buying and selling among banks and brokers in the currency markets. The Reagan administration is quite right when it says that not even the U.S. government has the resources to move those markets very far.

Although the American dollar is dangerously overvalued, that has little to do with the structure of the monetary system. Its causes go back to the huge American budget deficits.

But there is a way to make the exchange rates more stable, and such stability would benefit every trading country in the world. If governments can learn to coordinate their economic policies — and that is the purpose of meetings like the one in Bonn — then exchange rates will naturally settle into a more predictable and dependable pattern. That has been demonstrated by the great success of the European Monetary System, in which France and Germany are the major partners. Closer cooperation would require the Americans to get their budget deficits down and the Europeans to get their growth rates up. Stable exchange rates are the result of good policy, not a substitute for it.

Vietnam not necessarily fought in vain

TWIN FALLS — During the past two weeks, I've conducted interviews with veterans of two wars: one (WWII) immensely popular in America's collective mind; the other (Vietnam) a war of contrasts.

Veterans of both wars were sincere about serving their country and did so honorably, but there are similarities. During the 1940's American leaders had the close and powerful feeling of an enemy, therefore, veterans returned heroes. Vietnam vets returned facing an undesired onus.

Representative is the remark I heard from one Vietnam vet: "When I returned after my first tour in 1966 I was a hero. When I returned after my second one in 1967 they threw eggs at me."

While interviewing two veterans of that war in City Park one brilliant spring morning, we stood in front of the monument that was erected by classmates of S. Sgt. Brent Baumert.

Thirteen names including his are etched across its face — four of them I recognize. That's four too many for me; 13 too many for all of us.

Guest opinion
Terry Rich Hartley

These were honorable, young men serving a government that was functioning under the ether of power, not understanding that an imaginary line had been drawn through strong tribal ties in Southeast Asia; not reasoning that a no-win policy left just that — no way to win — and not knowing what to do about it except to continue throwing young men into harm's way.

In 1948 Ho Chi Minh told the French, "Kill 10 of our men and we will kill one of yours. In the end, it is you who will die." Final tally: Americans, 58,000 dead; North Vietnam, 600,000 dead. Winner: North Vietnam.

American leaders failed to listen to what he had said and had already proved to the French.

American leaders failed to listen to any voices of the past including General Douglas MacArthur's warning against the U.S. ever waging war in Asia. More ancient and more eloquent was Rudyard Kipling: "And the end of the fight is a lonesome white/ with the name of the late deceased/ And the epitaph reads: 'A Fool lies here/ who tried to lustle the East.'"

Yet, America's only losing war, one in which we never lost a major encounter, doesn't have to have been fought in vain. A Vietnam vet recently said it all: "Maybe we can look at it as a lesson. Maybe we know now that we should make sure all our own are fed, that our own porch is clean, before we go out to clean up the world."

For the sake of the families who lost so much, and to those who would lose in a future war based on lack of good sense and a lazy goal, I hope so.

Marked corpsmen a hazard

I was a Navy Corpsman with the Third Marine Division on Floating Battalion before the "official" beginning of the Vietnam War, the Gulf of Tonkin.

When we went ashore, hit the beach, we corpsmen were indistinguishable from the rest of the Marines. Our medical gear was inside our jackets — and we were armed. The enemy was looking for three types: the officer, the man with the automatic weapon and the corpsman. If they killed the corpsman, no wounded Marines return to duty to kill them.

I am proud to have served with the best — the U.S. Marine Corps. But it's not surprising we lost the war, with "clearly marked" corpsmen who couldn't even keep themselves alive.

Birthday provokes observations on growth, human tragedy

Dear Tiffany,

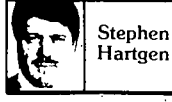

You were 9 on Saturday, a day celebrated by a spin on your new cobalt blue bicycle which your mother and I got for you.

In a way, it is a symbol of your increasing mobility, and hence of your reaching out to explore the world.

Soon, I would guess, you will be zipping over to Aberdeen's on any pretense, then through much of Twin Falls.

Few objects will expand your horizons as much as this bicycle in the next few years. Trips to the library will add immensely to your knowledge and confidence, for they take you further into the world of people and ideas. They will help you understand human character and motives, which aren't always as they appear.

A driver's license and going away to college are likely to expand your horizons even more, but you'll excuse me if I don't rush them on you.

Stephen Hartgen

My own parents' two greatest concerns were, one, of an accident with their son and an automobile and, two, enviousing me as a participant in "Animal House." If only they knew how it really was!

It may be tough for a 9-year-old to comprehend, but yes, Tiffany, we had both bicycles and cars back when I was a kid. It was not that long ago.

Your birthday falls between the anniversaries of two of the more important events in recent world history: the end of World War II in 1945, and the fall of the City of Saigon in 1975, marking the end of the Vietnam War.

Both are in the news this year, one as a 40th anniversary, the other as a 10th.

Tiffany, if I had only one wish for you and your new sister, Rachel, it would be that neither of you would ever have to experience the anguish, sorrow and loss which mankind has so frequently brought on itself in strife.

But sadly, war seems an inextricable part of human history and perhaps of human nature. I am not so naive as to believe war will be eliminated soon from the earth. Maybe it is enough to hope that we never touch this nation, your friends and loved ones.

Even that may be wishful. In the City Park there is a war memorial to the Magic Valley men who were taken from us in the Vietnam War, which while not within my memory, is nonetheless in the recent past. These things are never very far away.

There have been precious few times in human history when the world has been genuinely at peace. Maybe the last was in the time of the Roman Caesars, and that I'm not afraid to tell you, was well before your papa was born.

This week, your grandpa and grandma particularly will recall the end of the European war and how that event finally allowed them to begin their own lives without the looming possibility that their future together might never come about.

It's good for you to remember many details, but I recall perfectly well carried off the train as a child in the arms of my father, a locomotive belching steam behind us. You bet, I was frightened.

I know a father who means well but who never seems to be home when he is needed by his children. Making a living, doing a job, gets in the way. I admire his single devotion to his career, but I think he is missing out as well.

This past year, you have learned to be a big sister for Rachel, although I would like you to remember that she is neither a doll nor, as you affectionately put it, a "merd." The bonding that is happening between you and her is at some point, you will be as much a role model for her as others are for you now. That is part of what is involved with growing up.

Happy Birthday, Sweetheart.
Your Papa

Politics crops up even during recent police training session

BOISE — Politics in Idaho can pop up in unusual places — like at a police training session here.

"I learned a good lesson," says Ada County Commissioner Mike Johnson, who found himself in the middle of an embarrassing imbroglio during the conference.

The administration of Democratic Gov. John Evans cut its losses last month and severed ties with the Pacific Northwest Terrorism Conference.

It was designed as a training session for area law officers, aimed mainly at the August National Governors' Conference. Those sessions are expected to draw many of the nation's political leaders — prime targets for terrorists.

But John Rooney, the governor's director of the Department of Law Enforcement, abruptly dropped state sponsorship after complaints from several anti-war, conservation and anti-nuclear groups. Those groups felt they were being singled out for discussion as possible terrorists — and didn't appreciate the attention.

Other police groups criticized the course for its strong right-wing political content.

Johnson and Sheriff Vaughn Killeen promptly picked up sponsorship, likely because they felt the training sessions were needed but also because of the political possibilities.

Johnson mentioned that he and Killeen were not running for the Senate next year — an indirect reference to the fact that the groups complaining about the session generally have supported Democrats in Idaho politics. The implication is that the Democratic governor dropped state sponsorship because of pressure from the dissident groups.

Evans stoutly denied he had anything to do with the decision and Rooney said it was strictly his decision to withdraw from participation.

Johnson found himself in an extremely awkward position a few days later. James Davis, the Californian organizing the police training session, called a news conference in an effort to justify the decision.

Among other things, Davis said he felt any effort toward disarming the U.S. or to declare a nuclear freeze was an effort to weaken the country militarily, and therefore an effort against the national security.

He stated in broad terms that many anti-nuclear and peace groups are controlled by communists. But he said he was making no allegation that any Idaho organization has communist ties or could be communist-influenced.

Jeanette Ross, a Boise freelance writer representing a pro-conservation Colorado magazine, "High Country News," was denied entry to the room where the news conference was being held because she couldn't show press credentials.

Accused of entry to the session was Kerry Coakley, anti-nuclear Snake River Alliance, who said at a news conference a couple of days earlier that "police and politics don't mix."

Ms. Ross refused to leave — leaving Johnson huffing the door against her foot, pleading with her to leave. In full view of several televising cameras and about a dozen news reporters.

That spectacle may have been embarrassing but did little damage to the career of Johnson, another rising star in Idaho Republican politics.

Johnson, former county eroner, has built a strong power base in Ada County, the state's GOP stronghold. He runs a well-organized, well-financed race to capture a county commission post and return full political control of the state's largest county, with one sixth of Idaho's population, to the Republican Party.

"I think we made a mistake in trying to please everybody," says Johnson. "We should just have run it like any other police training session, instead of trying to meet with everybody to talk about their concerns."

Despite the foot-in-the-door dispute marking the opening day, the terrorism conference went smoothly its two other days.

Johnson says he has no regrets about sponsoring it, but will have to look into questions raised by Idaho Statesman news reports about Davis' qualifications to teach such a course.

The sessions were closed to the public, but Johnson said as far as he could tell, all 60 participants remained in full support of Davis despite the critical newspaper accounts of the seminar.

"If anything, they were supporting Davis more after the news stories," he said.

Mother: Charboneau was fixed on Arbaugh

By MARILYN HAUKE ESSEX
Special to The Times-News

BOISE — Jamie Charboneau's mother testified that Marilyn Arbaugh was the only woman who ever caught her son's interest.

It was a stormy love that Misty McKeel says her son held onto, even after firing a fusillade of bullets into Arbaugh's body last July 1.

"They loved a lot; they fought a lot; they laughed a lot; they cried a lot," McKeel said of the relationship between Charboneau, 25, and Arbaugh, 36.

A six-man, six-woman jury found Charboneau guilty of first-degree murder last week in Arbaugh's death — a conviction for which he could receive the death penalty. The prosecution says it will wait for the results of a pre-sentencing investigation ordered by 5th District Judge Phillip M. Becker — before deciding whether to seek an execution.

Throughout Charboneau's two-and-a-half week trial, special prosecutor Marc Haws painted the defendant as a jealous ex-husband who stalked his former wife of a year and gunned her down for spending the night with another man.

"The motive here is — his state of mind and his inability to give up this woman," said Haws in closing arguments.

Even after their divorce the month before Arbaugh's death, Charboneau introduced himself as her husband, a co-worker of the victim testified.

Arbaugh was killed in the alleyway between a potato cellar and horse corral at El Rancho 93, a Jerome County ranch where she was living. Arbaugh's younger daughter, 11-year-old Tira, said that she heard Charboneau several months earlier threaten to kill her mother if he caught her with another man.

"He couldn't give up Marilyn Arbaugh, and he carried out those threats," Haws said.

Defense attorney Randy Stoker contended that some cases just can't be proved: "He built a defense of confusion in which he attempted to plant questions in the minds of jurors aimed at bringing about a 'reasonable doubt' necessary to win an acquittal or conviction on a lesser charge.

He called witnesses who testified that Arbaugh had shot Charboneau about a year before she was killed and raised the possibility that Arbaugh confronted her ex-husband with a gun the morning she died.

Stoker also mentioned Charboneau's earlier testimony in a pre-trial hearing that Tiffin, Arbaugh's older daughter, fired the fatal shots with her mother's own pistol — an accusation that infuriated members of the Arbaugh family who kept a daily vigil of trial proceedings.

In closing arguments, Stoker brought up testimony on the discrepancy in the number of entry wounds found in Arbaugh's body and the combined total of exit wounds and slugs recovered from the body. With all theories considered, at least three more slugs were fired into Arbaugh's body than the state could account for.

Murderer returns to Jerome, must await court's sentencing

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

Jerome — A 24-year-old convicted murderer, Jamie Charboneau of Jerome, was back in his Jerome County jail cell Sunday to await sentencing in the shooting death of his former wife last July 1.

He was returned from Boise Tuesday night following a jury verdict that ended a nearly three-week murder trial. The county jail has been his home since last July 1 when he was taken into custody at the scene of the shooting of his former wife, Marilyn Arbaugh, 36.

Jerome County Sheriff Elza Hall said the young prisoner returned in the vehicle driven by Chief Deputy Sheriff Larry Webb and that he, Hall, followed in his own vehicle. Hall said he felt the verdict of first-degree murder was a fair one.

Arbaugh was served 120 hours of the trial law enforcement of officers, court officials and clerks, attorneys and many witnesses have spent countless hours in Boise in connection with the trial.

Webb said his usually talkative passenger was very penitent and stated he would return to the 115-mile trip back from Boise.

"He just sat and looked out of the window across the desert and didn't offer any conversation," Webb said, adding he, too, refrained from conversation and asked no questions.

Webb said he felt the verdict was a correct one in view of facts brought out during investigation, which he feels pointed to first degree murder.

"I think justice was served. In view of the violence involved in the shooting, I think a first-degree murder verdict was proper," Webb added.

Fifth District Judge Phillip M. Becker of Gooding, who presided over the lengthy trial in Boise, said Sunday the 2½-week-long trial "was not a pass-a-week experience."

He said it required more time than he had anticipated, as he had originally counted on two weeks for completion. The trial was moved to Boise on a change of venue motion because of wide pre-trial news coverage given the case in Magic Valley.

Becker said he will sentence Charboneau in Fifth District Court in Jerome, following a pre-sentencing investigation. The judge estimated it will take two to four weeks for the pre-sentencing investigation and scheduling a sentence date.

Becker said the trial of the 24-year-old Jerome man was an extremely difficult one for him.

"I would go (back to the motel) following a day's court session and lie down at night hoping that I had been absolutely fair to both sides," Becker said. "I tried to carefully consider both the state's and the defense's positions. After all, the whole life of a very young man was at stake in the rulings I had to make."

Adults get H.S. diplomas, including usual ceremony

TWIN FALLS — Betty Leazer was 56, in constant pain and out of work when she decided it was time to do something about the high school diploma she never had.

Diane Griffin was watching her seven children grow up and thinking it was time for her to do something for herself — like becoming the fourth generation of her family to work for the Buhl Police Department — when she started working for her diploma.

And Bryan Clampton, 16, had come to dislike milking cows even more than he disliked high school.

All three, along with 17 other Magic Valley residents, were awarded their GED's or High School Equivalency Diploma at a graduation ceremony Friday night.

The ceremony was complete with the mortarboards, the pomp and circumstance, and the audience of proud relatives they had missed when they dropped out of high school, but at this ceremony the proud relatives were just as likely to be spouses and children as parents.

For Leazer, who operated the former Speck's Cafe on Main Street with her husband for a decade, the audience included grandchildren.

She dropped out of high school when she was 15 to get married. But needing some extra money, she accepted a temporary job as a waitress at the Hi Ho, then a busy truckstop on Main Street.

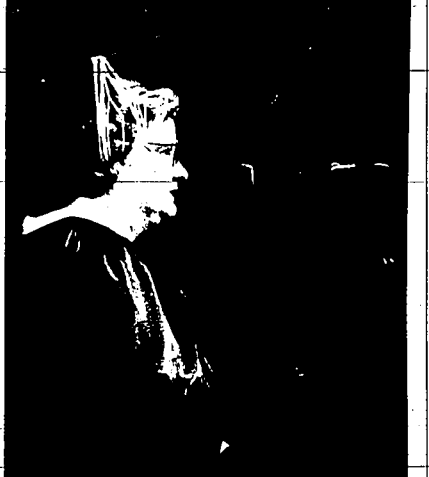

She liked the work. She liked it so much that until three years ago she was still working as a waitress. And if she had her way that is what she would be doing today.

"I still miss the people," she says.

"You've got your regulars. Some days some of them you know what they are going to eat the minute they walked through the door. You could just tell. You knew them.

It was hard work, but a rewarding work. I always liked it. I saw no reason to go back to school," she says.

Three years ago, an automobile

The staff at Magic Valley Rehabilitation Center recommended she get her GED, but it had been 41 years since she had been in school.

"At first I thought I couldn't do it," she says. "After I started I was even more discouraged."

Bad float system dries up Kimberly

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — What appeared to be a malfunctioning float system in Kimberly's city water storage tank Sunday left the town virtually without water and brought an emergency request of residents to refrain from running any water in their homes or on lawns.

Mayor Ron Jones said shortly after 9 p.m. that the system had been switched to an auxiliary float and the tank was filling.

"We were able to get five feet of water in the tank in about a half-hour after we switched to the auxiliary equipment. I think we'll have the tank full in another hour or so," he said.

However, Jones added, that residents would be asked not to sprinkle lawns until at least this morning.

"We want to get it (the storage reservoir) full and keep it full in case of a fire," he said.

He said much of the city's water system is old and occasionally will break down. The float, he said, is similar to a float in a toilet tank, and as long as it continued to float to the top of the tank, it is bringing water into the storage facility. As the float reaches the full level, it shuts off the inflow.

Jones said the float wasn't floating, and appeared to have shut off causing the tank to empty and remain empty. It just wasn't calling for any water from the city wells, he said.

"It seems to be working now and has started all of the pumps so we should be getting enough water. We are pretty sure that's what caused the problem, but we don't want to take any chances," he said.

Fire Chief Dale Vawter said he, too, was concerned about the possibility of a fire while the reservoir was empty, and said recent warm weather had increased demands for water in the Council probably will examine porn problem

By ANNETTE CARY

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council is expected to take up the issue of pornography once again today, but this time Mayor Emery Peterson says he expects the council to vote to bar most of the public from hearing the discussion.

Representatives of Determined Citizens Against Pornography have been invited, however, to attend the closed session on whether the city should attempt to bring charges of distributing obscene materials against Front Page Book Store, he said.

Representatives of the newly formed School/Pornography group have already come before the council in an open work session held two weeks ago. Then representatives of the group urged council members to prosecute the store, saying that other actions the group had been considering taking against the store appeared less likely to be successful.

The council voted 4-3 to prosecute, but the next day the vote was declared non-binding since it occurred at a work session.

Then two council members indicated dissatisfaction with the vote. Council member Mary McClusky said that although she had voted to prosecute, she in fact did not favor prosecution. Council member Doug Vollmer, who had been absent, complained that the mayor should not have counted a vote from him based on a discussion of the issue the two had held earlier in the day.

Young Authors Contest designed to push reading, writing

By The Times-News

A year's worth of writing by Magic Valley students culminated Saturday when judges announced the best-of-the-best stories and poems written this year.

An estimated 6,500 students wrote for the Young Authors Contest this year. The schools throughout the Magic Valley submitted the best story and poem from each class to the valley-wide contest.

Besides honoring the young writers and giving them pride in their craft, the contest is also intended to encourage more reading and writing.

"Most start writing at the beginning of the year," said Sandi Braga, a co-chairperson of the contest and a teacher at Sawtooth Elementary School. "The thing we are really trying to promote is everyday writing so later when they do have to write something, it is not such an ordeal."

Poetry was judged for strength in such areas as figurative language, imagery and coherence. Judges, including published authors and former teachers, read stories for structure, plot, characterization and language skills.

First place winners for poetry include: Jenny Harmon, Acorn school, kindergarten; Laura Robertson, Acorn, first grade; Tavia Gilbert, Sawtooth, second grade; Kirby Lenkor, Sawtooth, third grade; Sara Staten, Lincoln Elementary in Shoshone, fourth grade; Ben Carson, Poppewell in Buhl, fifth grade; Anna Morgan, Buhl middle school, sixth grade; Brenda Pettinger-Robert Stuart, seventh grade; Joe Sullivan, O'Leary, eighth; Mitchell-Zaugg, O'Leary, ninth; and Joel Hess, Jerome High School, senior.

First place in story-writing are: Hannah Milesell, Acorn, kindergarten; Sarah Thornbrow, Poppewell, first grade; Jamie Araceno, Lincoln in Shoshone, second grade; Kevin Bortz, Harrison, third grade; Kirk Black, Morningside, fourth; Jenni McFarland, Kimberly, fourth; Brent Overman, Brad Hurd school, sixth grade; Brad Herd, Dixon Junior High, seventh; Lisa James, Jerome Junior High, eighth; Angela Hine, O'Leary, ninth; Beth Beckman, Jerome High School, 11th grade; and Tammy Turner, Filer High School, senior.

Third place winners in the poetry division are: Heather Jones, Filer Elementary, first grade; Karen Glenn, Kimberly Elementary, second; Shelley Dunlop, Filer Elementary, third grade; Dallas-Willis, Lincoln in Twin Falls, fourth grade; Jill Dranooy, Filer Elementary, fifth grade; Kristi Conley, Kimberly Elementary, sixth; Christy Ryerson, O'Leary, seventh grade; and Christy Ryerson, Hagerman Junior High, eighth.

Winning third in the story division are: KC Busman, Poppewell, first and second grade; Zachary Ball, Sawtooth, second grade; Jaime Gleifer, Sawtooth, third; Lindsey Goslin, Sawtooth, fifth grade; Russell Monson, Sawtooth, sixth grade; Carol Freley, O'Leary, seventh; Jill Anne Freley, O'Leary, seventh; and Tami Childers, Jerome Junior High, eighth grade.

American missionary killed

SA. FERRI (AP) — Gunmen killed an American missionary over the weekend at his home in a Lima suburb, police said Sunday.

They said they were still trying to determine a motive for the Saturday shooting of Thomas Brown, 36, who was born in Illinois, but who spent the last nine years living and working in Lima as a pastor of the Baptist Bible Church.

Local newspapers reported Brown's widow, Frances, as saying her husband was shot through the heart by four men armed with revolvers who seemed familiar with the family's home in the middle-class Puente Piedra district, 13 miles north of Lima.

Reports Sunday in Lima newspapers El Comercio and La Republica said Brown was killing during a robbery attempt. The Express newspaper said he was shot while trying to prevent the men from kidnapping his 13-year old daughter Maria. The newspapers said Brown had three children.

Japanese policy irks Thatcher

By The Associated Press

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Sunday she had warned Japan's prime minister at the Bonn economic summit that Japan must act quickly to reform its trade policy, which she said can be so unfair it "sticks in my gullet."

But she said she fears the Japanese won't do enough to avoid retaliatory sanctions.

Thatcher spoke in a British Broadcasting Corp. radio interview one day after the end of the summit meeting, held in the West German capital by leaders of seven major industrial nations — the United States, Canada, West Germany, France, Italy, Britain and Japan.

London newspapers, whose correspondents were briefed after the summit ended, reported on Sunday that Mrs. Thatcher had been exceptionally blunt with Japan's prime minister, Yasuhiro Nakasone, during their 45-minute meeting.

The papers described her as particularly angry over the loss of a contract with Turkey to build a second bridge over the Bosphorus.

More South African rioting

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — At least 1,000 soldiers and police sealed off and occupied a black township Sunday in the eastern Cape province to quell rioting. Three more blacks were reported killed overnight in new unrest.

The military operation began in a townships after police shot and killed a 27-year-old black man following the torching by arsonists of three houses belonging to policemen, a police spokesman said in Pretoria.

The body of a 48-year-old black man who was "killed with sharp instruments" also was found in the same township.

Police said sporadic rioting broke out in black townships near Johannesburg as well as in the eastern Cape. In Tsakane, east of Johannesburg, a black security guard fired on blacks trying to set fire to his house, killing one man and wounding another, the spokesman said.

Rivalry between anti-apartheid organizations also flared into violence, leaving at least three blacks dead in the eastern Cape since early Friday, including two children aged 3 and 5, activists said.

Battles rage in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Christian and Muslim militias clashed with tanks, mortars and grenades along Beirut's dividing line Sunday, giving residential districts the worst shelling since the sectarian warfare began again eight days ago.

Police said six people were killed and 30 wounded in fighting overnight and during the day along the Green Line, the three-mile-long demarcation between the capital's Christian and Muslim sectors.

A French Defense Ministry statement issued in Paris said an aide to French Defense Minister Charles Hernu suffered slight wounds when "a few shells" fell on the former French ambassador's residence.

Soviet official raps 'Star Wars' system

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet Defense Minister Sergei L. Sokolov said Sunday that U.S. "Star Wars" research poses a greater hazard to peace than the atomic bomb, and vowed to see that the Soviet Union is defended against such a threat.

The 73-year-old career soldier accused the United States of seeking military superiority over the Soviet Union since the end of World War II.

In an interview published Sunday, Sokolov called "outright demagoguery" Pentagon assurances that the Strategic Defense Initiative, commonly called "Star Wars," would make nuclear weapons obsolete.

Sokolov denied that the Soviets are researching their own space-based anti-missile system. He said Soviet military scientific research is restricted to "perfection of space early warning, reconnaissance, communication and navigation systems."

"We are not creating strike space weapons and transmitting defense of the territory of the country," Sokolov told a correspondent of the official news agency Tass.

The interview was published in a question-and-answer format on the front page of Sunday editions of the Star, the newspaper of the Defense Ministry.

The defense minister's comments reiterated longstanding Kremlin military policy, including the claim that the nuclear arsenals of the superpowers are now roughly equal, and that U.S. efforts to develop the Strategic Defense Initiative threaten to upset this balance.

The interview was Sokolov's first major statement on Soviet military policy since he became defense minister on Dec. 27, 1981, two days after the death of his predecessor, Marshal Dmitri F. Ustinov.

"From the military viewpoint, the American 'Star Wars' plan is an inseparable component part of the U.S. nuclear strategy, the first-strike strategy," Sokolov said. "The real meaning of the plan is to get a possibility of a nuclear attack with impunity, to ensure conditions for constant nuclear blackmail of the Soviet Union and other countries."

Sokolov was asked about U.S. assurances that the Star Wars program involves only research, which is not prohibited by the 1972 anti-ballistic missile treaty.

Grownup baboons have brown hair and brown skin, and they slap one another around in some mighty fierce fights, as though violence were natural to them. Baby baboons have black hair and pink skin, and as long as the hair remains black and the skin pink, the grownup baboons won't hit them, as though babies were natural exempt from violence. Q What's the "gambler's fallacy"?
A The false notion that repetition changes the odds. Examples: If you flip a coin five times always getting tails, the odds you'll get heads on the sixth flip are still no better than the odds on each previous flip. If you have five sons consecutively, odds are no better that your fifth child will be a girl. If a heavy hitter strikes out five times in the plate, odds are no better for a hit during the sixth up-to-bat.

Small point is annoying deal to Harry S Truman admirers

DEAR ABBY: Every time I see Harry S. Truman's name spelled Harry S. Truman — with a period after the "S" — I am annoyed because I know it doesn't belong there. Concerning Truman, the following appears in the Encyclopedia Americana, volume 27, page 174 (copyright 1973):

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

... His birthplace was south of the west-central Missouri area into which his grandparents had moved from Kentucky four years earlier. The middle letter "S" in his name is not an abbreviation; it reflects the family's reluctance to choose between his grandfathers — Anderson Shippe Truman and Solomon Young — in selecting his name."

Practically every news source I have ever read about President Truman has made this mistake. Worse yet, I recently came across an advertisement for a gold coin being minted to commemorate the 100th birthday of President Truman, and on the face of it, this glaring error appears!

I am writing to you because your column appears in just about every important newspaper in the United States, and I hope your readers as well as your editors will see this, and quit perpetuating this mistake.

---DAVID LOOMIS,
NACOGDOCHES, TEXAS

DEAR DAVID LOOMIS: I, too, had heard that there should be no period after the "S" in Harry Truman's name, but I noticed there was one on the jacket of the book titled "Harry S. Truman" written by his daughter, Margaret, so I wrote to Margaret and asked: (a) What the "S" in her father's name stood for; and (b) should there be a period after the "S"? Margaret replied: "The 'S' in Dad's name stands for nothing. There was a family argument about what his middle name should be, so to keep peace in the family, he was baptized Harry S."

Margaret further stated: "My father always put a dot after the letter 'S'; that's why it appears on the cover of the biography I wrote about him." So, dear readers, even though the "S" in Harry Truman's name stands for nothing and is not an abbreviation for anything, because Harry himself always put a dot after the letter "S," I would say that it belongs there. Period.

DEAR ABBY: About two years ago, I read your column in the Peru (Ind.) Daily Tribune in which you asked your readers to write to a service-person overseas, so thinking it might be fun, I did just that. Several weeks later I received a letter from an officer in the U.S. Air Force, stationed in Korea.

We corresponded for over a year, never expecting to meet. Then I moved to another city about the same time he was sent to the United States. We soon learned that we were only a few hours' apart, and I decided somewhat hesitantly to meet. It seems that fate was at work for us, for we met, and it was love at first sight for the both of us. We are being married in May.

Thank you, Abby, for had it not been for you, we never would have met.

---IN LOVE IN INDIANA
DEAR DR. LOUIE: Congratulations and best wishes. Thanks for writing. Your letter made my day.

Dawn Columbo goes through leg-toning exercises during a class for pregnant women

Pregnant women cautioned to avoid strenuous exercise

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Pregnant women who want to stay physically fit should avoid heavy exercise, which could force the diversion of blood from the mother's uterus, according to a study by Portland physician team.

A woman can maintain her fitness by walking, bicycling or swimming for a half-hour or so two or three times a week, but harder workouts and competitive sports should wait until after the baby is born, say doctors at Oregon Health Sciences University's Heart Research Laboratory.

Those recommendations stem in part from the laboratory's study of animals and volunteer women who take pregnancy exercise classes at a Portland YMCA. The $100,000-a-year study, financed by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, is led by Dr. James Metcalfe, a medicine professor.

"A lot of people are sedentary and, suddenly, they get pregnant," Metcalfe said. "I don't mean staying in bed — that's very bad for them. (But I don't think anyone should feel compelled to exercise during pregnancy."

Metcalfe, Dr. Mark J. Morton and Marilyn S. Paul, a senior research assistant, have studied more than 140 women since the mid-1970s, focusing on how pregnancy affects blood circulation and the heart.

The researchers want to know if exercise might harm fetal development, especially considering that a woman's heart expands during pregnancy to allow blood flow to increase about 40 percent in a resting state. A stretched-out heart may not be able to handle as much physical stress as a normal one.

Doctors don't understand why the heart gets bigger, although animal studies indicate the increase results from the hormone estrogen.

With more research, Metcalfe estimates more precisely how much exercise or manual labor the body can tolerate.

After a pregnant woman exercises, blood tends to collect in her legs to a much larger extent than in a non-pregnant woman, mainly because the dilated uterus presses against veins that normally return blood to the heart.

The blood finds other ways back to the heart, but the routes are slower, and the heart must beat faster to keep pumping out blood at the same rate. Meanwhile, the woman can feel woozy. If that happens, Metcalfe recommends lying down or lifting the legs.

Mothers with big, healthy babies seem to have high blood flows to the uterus. Mothers who stand at work trap blood in their legs and have smaller babies, Metcalfe said. Teen-age mothers also tend to have smaller babies, although the reasons are unclear.

An out-of-shape woman who begins exercising because of concern for her baby can improve her physical condition even with the light exercise regimen. Metcalfe's team recommends that women who feel they need to get in better shape should start with walking or swimming, and gradually increase their exercise as they feel comfortable.

"For some women, particularly those with heart disease, the changes during pregnancy are dangerous," Metcalfe said.

Excluding deaths from uterine problems linked to pregnancy, heart disease "is the greatest cause of maternal death associated with pregnancy in the United States," Metcalfe said. A nine-year California study showed that heart disease accounted for 22 percent of the non-obstetric deaths of pregnant women.

The YMCA women are taught by Ms. Paul, who urges them to limit their exercise. The women studied so far have had fewer small babies than average, although Metcalfe is reluctant to "credit exercise" based on the limited data available.

Many women are too tired in the first trimester of pregnancy to exercise, and don't attend the class until the fourth month or later. They're encouraged to achieve no more than 70 percent of their calculated maximum heart rate (220 beats per minute minus the woman's age).

"During pregnancy, one tends to get really out of shape," said class member Susan Casperson, 34, of Portland. "Your muscles don't keep up, and it's hard to get back in shape afterward."

Dawn Columbo, 30, of Tigard, was in her second pregnancy, and she gained 60 pounds during her first pregnancy, when she didn't exercise. Now she plays racquetball and takes part in eight fitness classes a week — so many that Ms. Paul encourages her to slow down.

A new rating category is in place as of July 1. This new category is inserted between the current PG and R ratings. It is designated as "PG-13: Parents strongly cautioned to give special guidance for attendance of children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children."

The revised five-category system of the voluntary film industry rating program is now as follows:
G - General Audiences, all ages admitted.
PG - Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.
PG-13 - Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.
R - Restricted, under-17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.
X - No one under 17 admitted. All films rated after July 1 will be given ratings under the new five-category system.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am interested in the letter you have in regard to eating the right foods.

I am a 24-year-old woman and I would like some advice on some type of foods that could give me energy. I was thinking about taking some iron tablets. I take a multivitamin and 1,000 mg of vitamin C. Sometimes it doesn't feel like enough.

DEAR READER: You are not alone. Despite all the talk about a balanced diet many people do not have a very good idea of what that means.

and if their iron level is too low they may need more iron than can be provided by food. However, taking more iron than you need will not provide more energy.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am a 62-year-old secretary in good health and want to continue working past 65.

My iron pills still break easily. Does this mean I need calcium? I can't drink milk. My neighbor, a nurse, says calcium clings to the walls of arteries and the buildup of cholesterol comes after the calcium adherence. Is that true?

Should I avoid calcium tablets? My calcium intake is low and I never take vitamins, although I'm a fresh fruit and vegetable person and use common sense in my diet.

DEAR READER: No, calcium does not cause fatty-cholesterol deposits. You've got it just backwards. Fatty-cholesterol deposits may clog in the course of time. In fact there was a recent study from Iowa State University that showed a high calcium intake in goats decreased the cholesterol level.

What's what

Grownup baboons have brown hair and brown skin, and they slap one another around in same mighty force fights, as though violence were natural to them. Baby baboons have black hair and pink skin, and as long as the hair remains black and the skin pink, the grownup baboons won't hit them, as though babies were naturally exempt from violence. What do you make of that?

Q. What's the "gambler's fallacy"?
A. The false notion that repetition changes the odds. Examples: If you flip a coin five times always getting tails, the odds you'll get heads on the sixth flip are still no better than the odds on each previous flip. If you have five sons consecutively, odds are no better that your fifth child will be a girl. If a heavy hitter strikes out five times at the plate, odds are no better for a hit during the sixth up-to-bat.

Q. If you toppled a row of dominoes from New York City to Los Angeles, how long would it take for the last of them to fall?
A. About 10 weeks.

Pregnant women cautioned to avoid strenuous exercise

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Pregnant women who want to stay physically fit should avoid heavy exercise that could force the diversion of blood from the mother's uterus, according to research by a Portland medical team.

A woman can maintain her fitness by walking, bicycling or swimming for half-hour or so two or three times a week, but harder workouts—and competitive sports should wait until after the baby is born, say doctors at Oregon Health Sciences University's Heart Research Laboratory.

Those recommendations stem in part from the laboratory's study of animals and volunteer women who take pregnancy exercise classes at a Portland YMCA. The $100,000-a-year study, financed by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, is led by Dr. James Metcalfe, a medicine professor.

"A lot of people are sedentary and have healthy babies," Metcalfe said. "I don't mean staying in bed — that's very bad for them. But I don't think anyone should feel compelled to exercise during pregnancy."

Metcalfe, Dr. Mark J. Morlion and Marilyn S. Paul, a senior research assistant, have studied more than 140 women since the mid-1970s, focusing on how pregnancy affects blood circulation in the heart.

Those researchers want to know if exercise might harm fetal development, especially considering that a woman's heart expands during pregnancy to allow blood flow to increase about 40 percent in a resting state. A stretched-out heart may not be able to handle as much physical stress as a normal one.

Doctors don't understand why the heart gets bigger, although animal studies indicate the increase results from the hormone estrogen.

After a pregnant woman exercises, blood tends to collect in her legs to a much larger extent than in a non-pregnant woman, mainly because the bloated uterus presses against veins that normally return blood to the heart.

The blood finds other ways back to the heart, but the routes are slower, and the heart must beat faster to keep pumping out blood at the same rate. Meanwhile, the woman can feel woozy. If that happens, Metcalfe recommends lying down or lifting the legs.

Mothers with big, healthy babies exercise, blood tends to collect in her legs to a much larger extent than in a non-pregnant woman, mainly because the bloated uterus presses against veins that normally return blood to the heart.

Mothers who stand at work part blood in their legs and have smaller babies, Metcalfe said. Teen-age mothers also tend to have smaller babies, although the reasons are unclear.

A mid-fish woman who begins exercising because of concern for her baby can improve her physical condition even with the light exercise regimen Metcalfe's team recommends, but Metcalfe contends that pregnancy is "a bad time to start exercising."

"Should you exercise during pregnancy? Yes, under certain conditions — if they feel good, if the pregnancy's going well, and if they wake up rested in the morning," he said.

But a woman "who's out of shape, slightly anemic, who smokes and has heart disease ... shouldn't get pregnant at all," he said.

For some women, particularly those with heart disease, the changes during pregnancy are dangerous," Metcalfe said.

Excluding deaths from uterine problems linked to pregnancy, heart disease is the greatest cause of maternal death associated with pregnancy in the United States, Metcalfe said. A nine-year, California study showed that heart disease accounted for 22 percent of all non-obstetric deaths of pregnant women.

The YMCA women are taught by Ms. Paul, who urges them to limit their exercise. The women studied so far have had fewer small babies than average, although Metcalfe is reluctant to "overly exercise" based on the limited data available.

Many women are terrified in the first trimester of pregnancy to exercise, and don't attend the class until the fourth month or later. They're encouraged to achieve no more than 70 percent of their calculated maximum heart rate (220 beats per minute minus the woman's age).

"During pregnancy, one tends to get really out of shape," said class member Susan Casperson, 34, of Portland. "You're muscles don't keep up, and it's hard to get back in shape afterward."

Dawn Columbo, 30, of Tigard, now in her second pregnancy, said she gained 60 pounds during her first pregnancy, when she didn't exercise. Now she plays racquetball and takes part in eight fitness classes a week — so many that Ms. Paul encourages her to slow down.

The YMCA women don't reflect a cross-section of the general population, since they can afford to take exercise classes, they don't smoke, and they share a willingness to stay in shape, Metcalfe said.

More isn't just better with vitamins

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am interested in the letter you have in regard to eating the right foods.

I am a 24-year-old woman and I would like some advice on some type of foods that could give me energy. I was thinking about taking some iron tablets. I take a multivitamin and 1,000 mg of vitamin C. Sometimes it does not feel like enough.

DEAR READER: You are not alone. Despite all the talk about a balanced diet many people do not have a very good idea of what that means.

There are four basic food groups: the meat group, which includes red meats, fish and chicken; the dairy group; the fruit and vegetable group and the cereal and bread group.

You need two servings a day from the meat group and four servings a day from the other three groups. Your fruit and vegetable group should include at least one citrus fruit or juice and a green or yellow fruit or vegetable.

I have discussed serving size and menu details on how to plan a balanced diet in The Health Letter, Special Report 16, The Balanced Diet, which I am sending you.

Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me at Box 920, San Antonio, Texas 78292.

Another source of complete protein found in the meat and dairy group. The dairy group also is the main source of absorbable calcium. Most of your bulk can come from the cereal group but there is important bulk in some vegetables and fruit.

Red meat is a good source of iron. It contains heme iron which is more readily absorbed than the elemental iron you get in your vitamin preparations or iron tablets.

Frequently, women in the childbearing years do need extra iron and if their iron level is low low they may need more iron than can be provided by food. However, taking more iron than you need will not provide more energy.

Vitamins do not contain energy. But many of them are important in helping to metabolize your food to release the energy in it.

Taking more vitamins than you need will not give you more energy, either. There is no good reason for you to take 1,000 mg of vitamin C a day. But individuals who have been taking excess amounts of vitamin C should taper off rather than stop abruptly. A sudden decrease can cause a temporary vitamin C deficiency.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am a 62-year-old secretary in good health and want to continue working past 65.

My fingernails split and break easily. Does this mean I need calcium? I can't drink milk. My neighbor, a nurse, says calcium clings to the walls of arteries and the buildup of cholesterol comes after the calcium adherence. Is that true?

Should I avoid calcium tablets? My calcium intake is low and I never take vitamins, although I'm a fresh fruit and vegetable person and use common sense in my diet.

DEAR READER: No, calcium does not cause fatty-cholesterol deposits. You've got it just backwards.

Fatty-cholesterol deposits may calcify in the course of time. In fact there was a recent study from Iowa State University that showed a high calcium intake in goats decreased the cholesterol level.

The calcium binds with bile salts to prevent their reabsorption into the circulation. Since cholesterol is used to form bile salts, eliminating them results in lowering the cholesterol.

Sixers roll into NBA semifinal in four games

By RALPH BERNSTEIN The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA -- Even though the Philadelphia 76ers swept the Milwaukee Bucks in four games...

"We didn't dominate them," said Malone, who scored 31 points...

"We were four tough games," Malone said. "All three of their centers showed that they could play when things were really physical..."

Andrew Toney, who scored 23 points, also said the series wasn't easy. "We just seemed to play better at times," said Toney...

"We were a little sluggish today, but we know what we have to do to win and we did it."

Maurice Cheeks, who contributed 21 points, also said the 76ers were off their game.

"I tried to pick up us because I knew we weren't ourselves. The key was our good defense, which got us back in the game," Cheeks said.

Sixers Coach Billy Cunningham said he felt his team was lucky to be in the game at all at the end of the half, when the Sixers led 52-51.

Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson said he was surprised the Bucks failed to win a game in the series.

"Philadelphia is a sleeping giant right now. They woke up somewhere along the line in the Washington series and they really came to life," he said.

The 76ers broke up the game in the third period, when trailing 71-67 after a 12-3 Milwaukee rally...

The Sixers, who defeated the Washington Bullets in the first round, boosted the lead to 97-67 with 7:01 remaining in the game...

Richardson freed a jumper and a pair of "free throws to give Philadelphia a 30-24 advantage at the end of the quarter."

The Bucks trailed 38-32 with 7:56 left in the second quarter when Terry Cummings erupted for 10 points...

Sydney Moncrief and Paul Pressey each scored 25 points while Erkin Lister grabbed 11 rebounds...

The 76ers won the first two games of the series in Milwaukee 127-105 and 112-108, then came home Friday night and took a 3-0 lead with a 109-104 victory.

Spend A Buck: A horse named desire

By JIM DENT Dallas Times Herald

LOUISVILLE, Ky. -- For the longest time, they didn't believe. He was an impostor next to Chief's Crown, a name that, after all, sounds like royalty...

But Spend A Buck, the horse named for $2 bettors, was a racehorse named desire. In the most definitive Kentucky Derby victory since Assault...

Spend A Buck had run a half-mile and was leading by six lengths. Spend A Buck was too far ahead of the field on the backstretch for ABC-TV to follow him with its cameras...

It was absolutely shocked when I saw his lead on the first turn," trainer Cam Gambolati said. "If you had told me Eternal Prince wouldn't be up there with him, I would have said you were crazy."

me Eternal Prince wouldn't be up there with him, I would have said you were crazy."

Winning the race by 5 1/2 lengths, Spend A Buck was in another world ahead of second-place Stephen's Odyssey and Chief's Crown...

Spend A Buck, the second choice of the bettors, paid $10.20, $5.40 and $3.40. Stephen's Odyssey paid $10.20 and $5, and Chief's Crown paid $2.40.

Gambolati suggested the horse will follow the traditional Triple Crown route, but owner Dennis Diaz might have put an end to that thinking.

"That's a helluva payday (in New Jersey) and, by God, I don't want anybody to think that we won't be here," Diaz said. "I don't want anybody to think that we're going to the Preakness automatically."

the Preakness automatically."

Spend A Buck practically owns New Jersey's Garden State Park, which was repurchased four weeks ago by winning the Cherry Hill mile...

Diaz said the horse definitely will not try both New Jersey and the Preakness.

And Diaz is not ready to dynamite the gold mine. Spend A Buck was thought to be worth $6 million last week for syndication purposes...

"That would be to destroy the horse," Diaz said. "That would be to destroy the horse."

Weber wins Big Sky tennis

BOISE (AP) -- Andrew Vessey and Steve McGlade captured individual championships here Sunday as Weber State rallied to its third straight Big Sky Conference tennis championship...

The Broncos, who came into the tournament with the worst record of the eight Big Sky teams, were defeated in the four-day, round-robin tournament until running into Weber in the final match.

Boise State had an overall record of 8-14 going into the tournament and hadn't won a match in five tries against Big Sky teams.

ONTARIO, Ore. -- Sunday's North Idaho College-Treasure Valley Community College baseball double-header has been postponed until Saturday...

The change means that CSI will have to win at least one game of its scheduled double-header with Ficks College in Rexburg Saturday in order to win the top spot in the northern division of Region 18 and host the regional playoffs.

Sluman wins Tallahassee

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) -- Jeff Sluman rebounded Sunday from a poor third round with his third 7-under-par 65 of the tournament to capture the $200,000 Tallahassee Open by one stroke over Gary Player and Kenny Knicker.

Sluman finished with a four-day total of 19-under-par 269, tying the 72-hole course record set by Chi Chi Rodriguez in 1979 at the Killam Golf and Country Club.

Kriek overcomes Arias

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) -- Johan Kriek continued his mastery of Jimmy Arias, ignoring the heat and humidity to down the young American 4-6, 6-4, 4-3, 6-2 Sunday in the finals of the $12,000 Alan King-Caspar's Palace Tennis Classic.

Clambake to continue without Crosbys

By BOB GREEN The Associated Press

CALHSBAD, Calif. -- In the days of the Great Depression, Bing Crosby decided it would be great fun to bring together some of his friends -- movie types and pro golfers -- and have a little golf tournament.

It was fun. Very low key. Relaxed. Lots of parties. Play a little golf. Swap some stories. The pros made a little money. The show-business types got some tips.

It came to be known as Bing's Clambake. More formally, the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am. For almost a half-century it grew...

into one of the country's premier sports events -- and more. It was a happening, a gathering. It retained the Crosby name even after the death of the founder in 1977.

Now, it is possible, that the name will be missing. The tournament will go on: Same format, same courses. But the Crosby name could disappear from the formal title.

One of golf's leading performers said it doesn't matter. Not, at least, to the current generation of players. "It'll still be the Crosby, no matter what they call it," Tom Watson said. "That's the way it will be known. You're not going to hear guys saying,

"Are you going to be playing in the AT&T? They're still going to say, 'Are you playing in the Crosby?'"

It would be a shame to change the name. But it'll still be the same tournament, and everybody will call it the same thing.

The future of the Crosby became clouded and confused when Catherine Crosby, widow of the founder, announced last month that she was cancelling the event. She lacked the authority to cancel the tournament.

The situation is this: The tournament will continue. It will continue on the same three Monterey Peninsula courses, Pebble Beach, Cypress Point, Spyglass Hill.

It will continue under the same format, pairing an amateur with a pro.

The only thing undecided is the official title of the event. Mrs. Crosby can remove the Crosby name from the tournament. Whether she will do so is not yet known.

For many years, the tournament has been sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Golf Foundation. That group's Board of Directors is the governing body.

The board has been under pressure to increase the pro purse for the tournament, to keep the purse on a level with or above purses for other PGA Tour events. To do so, outside sources of revenue were needed.

AL: Streaking Angels increase lead to three

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Third baseman Doug DeCinces of the California Angels is hitting only .237, but he can convincingly argue against it.

"I may be off to a slow start statistically, but except for a few short stretches I've hit the ball pretty consistently," said DeCinces, who hit his fifth homer of the year with a man on in the third inning on Sunday to propel the Angels to a 5-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Despite his batting average, DeCinces is tied for the club lead in homers with Reggie Jackson and leads the team with 18 RBIs.

The Angels' ninth win in 11 games increased their American League West lead over Minnesota to three games. The Angels also lead the major leagues with 17 wins.

"Why? Because we have a good club," said DeCinces. "I really feel all along that we'll have the ability to score runs, and that with our defense we will make it harder for the other team to score. And our pitching has been really solid."

California posted a 5-2 record on a homestand that represented its first encounter with teams from the AL's thought-to-be stronger East Division.

"I don't think players look at these games any differently," said DeCinces. "If we play our best game, it doesn't matter who it's against."

Baseball

Detroit 4
Chicago 3

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit's Evans belted a two-run homer and three Detroit pitchers combined on a four-hitter Sunday as the Tigers earned a 4-3 comeback victory over the Chicago White Sox.

With the White Sox leading 3-1, Lou Whitaker started the Detroit sixth with a single, went to third on Alan Trammell's hit-and-run single and scored on Kirk Gibson's grounder that forced Trammell.

Then, with two out, Evans drove a one-ball count off Rich Dotson, 0-1, into the upper right field seats for his second home run to give Detroit the lead.

Texas 7
Cleveland 2

CLEVELAND (AP) — Buddy Bell singled and doubled to start a pair of two-run rallies and Charlie Hough limited Cleveland to one earned run in five innings Sunday as the Texas Rangers snapped a three-game losing streak.

Hough, 2-1, allowed five hits, struck out three and walked two in five innings.

New York 6
Kansas City 2

NEW YORK (AP) — Consecutive homers by Rickey Henderson and Don Mattingly in the fifth inning led the New York Yankees to a 6-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals Sunday, completing a three-game weekend sweep.

Dale Berra started the winning rally with a single and then slid hard into Royals second baseman Ernie White as White attempted to turn Billy Sample's ground to third into a double play.

Sample was safe at first but Bobby Meacham struck out. Henderson, however, followed with a 420-foot homer into the left-field seats, his second of the year, snapping a 1-1 tie. Mattingly followed with his first homer of the year, giving Yankees right-hander Phil Niekro, 4-2, all the runs he would need.

Oakland 6
Boston 3

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Carney Lansford drove in Oakland's first three runs with a pair of homers, and Chris Cottrell and Jay Howell combined on a five-hitter to give the A's a 6-3 victory over the Red Sox Sunday.

Lansford's second homer of the day, a two-run drive to left field with two out in the sixth inning, snapped a 1-1 tie. Dwayne Murphy followed with a single off Bruce Hurst, and Dave Kingman blasted his sixth homer of the season to make the score 5-1.

The A's scored an unearned run in the seventh, when Alfredo Griffin delivered an RBI single.

Cottrell, 3-1, allowed all five Boston hits, walked four and struck out four before getting relief help in the ninth from Howell, who recorded his seventh save.

Two of Boston's runs came on homers by Jim Rice, who hit his sixth of the year in the fourth, and No. 7 in the eighth against the beleaguered A's staff, which has given up 39 homers so far this season.

Seattle 1
Toronto 4

SEATTLE (AP) — Ivan Calderon and Ken Phelps slammed homers to back the five-hit pitching of Mark Langston and lead the Seattle Mariners to a 4-1 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Sunday.

Phelps, who had just one hit in 14 at-bats going into the game, belted a 3-2 fastball off Jim Clancy, 0-1, for his second homer of the year in the fourth inning.

NL: Mets keep up pressure

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dwight Gooden was at his best Sunday only when he had to be.

The New York Mets right-hander escaped several close calls Sunday despite erratic control, hanging on for eight innings in a 3-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

The victory, combined with Montreal's loss to Atlanta and Chicago's suspended game with San Diego, brought the Mets to within one-half game of the Cubs in the National League East.

Gooden, 4-1, gave up seven hits and walked three, getting hurt in just the fourth inning when the Reds scored a pair of runs on Dave Van Gorder's bases-loaded double. Gooden also fanned nine, with four of those strikeouts coming while the Reds had runners in scoring position.

"Non are going to get on base, and that's when you've got to bear down and make great pitches," Gooden said.

Atlanta 6
Montreal 1

ATLANTA (AP) — Right-hander Rick Mahler scattered eight hits over eight innings to record his seventh victory without a loss and Terry Harper drove in three runs as the Atlanta Braves beat the Montreal Expos 6-1 Sunday.

Mahler yielded only a second-inning leadoff homer by Dan Driessen, struck out two and walked two as the Braves salvaged the third game of the three-game series.

San Francisco 5
St. Louis 0

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Dave LaPoint tossed a six-hitter and had a key double to lead the San Francisco Giants to a 5-0 win over the St. Louis Cardinals that broke both is own and his team's four-game losing streaks.

LaPoint, who struck out six and walked two, beat Douglas Antujar, 4-1, for his first victory in a San Francisco uniform and second career shutout. LaPoint, obtained by San Francisco in February with three other St. Louis players for Jack Clark, had lost his first four decisions.

Cubs-Padres suspended

CHICAGO (AP) — Keith Moreland's two-run homer in the sixth inning Sunday gave the Chicago Cubs a 4-2 lead over the San Diego Padres in a game suspended by darkness in the seventh inning after twice being delayed by rain.

The game will be resumed July 8 after nearly becoming the first in the major leagues this season to be postponed.

Houston 4
Philadelphia 3

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Jose Cruz continued his hot hitting with a two-run homer and a double and Joe Niekro allowed three runs over seven innings to lead the Houston Astros to a 4-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies Sunday.

Niekro, 2-3, allowed seven hits, struck out three and walked five. Bill Dawley went in and two-third and Frank DiPino got his fourth save by retiring Von Hayes with Garry Maddox on second for the final out.

Pittsburgh 3
Los Angeles 2

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Joe Orsulak and Johnny Ray drew bases-loaded walks off Tom Niedzier and Carlos Diaz with two outs in the eighth inning Sunday as the Pittsburgh Pirates came from behind to beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2.

Erik Jensen met his match at United First:

FREE CHECKING 5-1/4% Interest Account.

Erik needed a checking account that made money instead of costing him money. His bank had raised its per-check and monthly service charges. So Erik came to United First for help. We matched him up with our Checking With Interest Account.

Erik now earns 5-1/4% interest on his checking funds, as long as he keeps a $300 minimum balance in his account. And he can write as many checks as he needs — without a per-check charge.

That's an offer most Idaho banks find hard to match. So, whatever your needs, put United First teamwork to work for you. Like Erik, you'll find your match with a checking account from United First.

Monthly service fee is $5.00 if balance drops below $300

THE ACES BOBBY WOLFF

"Rocking nothing but bad losers. Good losers get into the habit of losing."
 - George E. Allen.

There's only one way to keep from losing today's game, and East's bidding should point the way.

East wins two top hearts and leads a third for good measure. How high should South ruff? If he ruffs low, West overruffs and the game goes one down. South must then content himself in the post-mortem by observing that East has a cold 11 tricks at five clubs.

East's strong bidding, especially when vulnerable, is bound to be based on weird distribution. As it turns out, East's hand is a typical "strong" one. And if East has two very long suits, he must be short in the other suits.

South's winning play is to ruff the third heart with the king of trumps and then run his jack to trap West's queen. This picks up trump and South loses only the first two hearts, scoring 11 tricks.

Might the percentage play of ruffing with the trump king lose? Change East's diamond four to the singleton trump queen and South's play will appear to be foolish. Nevertheless, the high ruff followed by the first heart is the choice, and South must be prepared to pay off if he loses to less probable distribution.

ANSWER: Diamond degree lead aggressively against a small slam. The objective is to build a winner to the heart (when and if) four side gains the lead.
