GARY DOTSON
Now wants name cleared

Illinois governor frees Dotson

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Gov. James R. Thompson on Sunday freed Gary Dotson, commuting his sentence after Dotson served six years in prison for a rape his former accuser now says never happened.

Thompson, who refused to grant Dotson a pardon proclaiming his innocence, said he was acting "to do justice and mercy" and that "no good purpose would be served" by returning Dotson to prison, where he was serving a 25-to-50-year sentence.

"I'm happy because I know I'm not going back to prison," Dotson said at his family's home, where he watched the televised proceedings. "We're all going to sit around and get loaded."

Dotson, 29, has been free on bond and would have been eligible for parole in three years. He said he would continue trying to clear his name, either through a new trial or by continuing his appeal before an appellate court.

"I've still got a felony on my record that I want to clear," he said.

Thompson, acting a day after the end of a clemency hearing, said he believed the verdict of the jury that convicted Dotson in 1979 was correct.

He also said he did not believe that fear of pregnancy from having had sex with a boyfriend led Catherine Crowell Webb to concoct the rape account in 1979. She has maintained, since coming forward with her recantation in March.

But Thompson noted the length of time Dotson served, that Mrs. Webb wants Dotson freed, and that Dotson behaved well in prison.

to decide it," said Thompson, adding that it had brought a cloud over the Illinois' criminal justice system.

Carl Smith, Mrs. Webb's foster mother, said she thought Thompson "made a very wise decision."

"We have no objection to Dotson getting out of jail," said Mrs. Smith, who has said she finds it hard to believe Mrs. Webb was not raped. "I think he has served long enough."

Carl Nannini, the minister of Mrs. Webb's church in New Hampshire, said he had not talked with Mrs. Webb since Thompson's announcement, adding, "I don't believe anybody will find her until tomorrow or the next day."

Telephone calls went unanswered to the home and office of her attorney, John McLauro.

Thompson's options were to commute Dotson's sentence, grant him a pardon on grounds of innocence or return him to prison.

He made the commutation subject to Dotson's good behavior, saying that was a standard feature of executive clemency decisions and that Dotson will not have to return to the penitentiary unless he violates good conduct during a period of time which will be set.

David Fields, a spokesman for Thompson, said the details of the terms Dotson must meet were to be worked out later.

Fields said even if Dotson were retried and again found guilty of raping Mrs. Webb, Thompson's commutation means he could not be sentenced again for the crime.

Dotson was convicted in 1979 of kidnapping and raping Mrs. Webb, formerly of suburban Homewood. He was released on $100,000 bond May 1.

Wheat Winter's record crop adds to supply problems

BOISE (AP) — Idaho farmers are on the verge of harvesting their largest winter wheat crop on record amid continuing supply problems that will likely force the market price for wheat even lower.

The Agriculture Department reported that based on May 1 field conditions, Idaho producers are expected to harvest 60.3 million bushels of winter wheat this year, 6 percent larger than last year's old record of about 57 million bushels.

The increase in Idaho, primarily the result of a record per-acre yield across the state, comes as the nationwide winter wheat harvest is expected to fall 4 percent from last year to 1.97 billion bushels.

The national crop is down from 1984 2.06 billion bushels primarily because of acreage cutbacks sought by Congress and the Reagan administration to ease America's price-depressing surplus.

But the projected harvest remains the fifth largest on record and if the estimate bears out would leave U.S. stocks virtually unchanged from last year. Wheat exports, however, have continued to decline, and analysts now expect a national average market price to hold at or below the price support level of $3.30 a bushel. The 1984-1985 average market price was $3.38.

In Idaho, producers maintained acreage at the 1984 level of 900,000 acres, and the projected four-bushel increase in the per-acre yield to a record 67 bushels is the reason for the prospect of a record crop. The national per-acre yield is expected to post an average increase of less than one bushel.

"Most of the state's crop came through the winter in generally good condition with the exception of eastern Idaho where there was some damage due to winter kill and snow mold," USDA analysis said.

Still, they added, "Damage appeared less than last year. Although it has been drier than normal recently, soil moisture and irrigation water are in good supply to promote growth."

Idaho farmers had more than 48 million bushels of wheat in storage as spring began this year, up 2.1 million bushels from the same time in 1984. Just over half that was stored on the farm.

The state's wheat stock on May 1 was estimated at 523,000 tons, about a third more than a year ago primarily due to a decline in the state's dairy herd over the winter.

Barley stocks dropped only slightly this year from last, still standing at nearly 30 million bushels, while oat stocks stood at 1.3 million bushels, down 100,000 bushels from 1984, and corn stocks were up a million bushels to 2.3 million.

Cassia County farmer cites 'permanent' law

BOISE (AP) — Without the enactment of new farm legislation this year, some Idaho wheat growers would lose federal price guarantees or be prohibited from growing the crop.

A Cassia County farmer says the Reagan administration is using the threat of so-called "permanent legislation" to spur Congress into passing the kind of farm bill it wants.

Dallin Reese, first vice president of the Utah-Idaho Farmers Union and chairman of the Idaho Wheat Commission, said the administration is spending $23 million to calculate growing allotments that would be required under the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938.

A grower referendum on mandatory planting quotas, one alternative to the act, tentatively has been set for July 19-26.

"I think the administration is dead set on having that referendum vote," Reese said. "I see it as a scare, and also something they can take to Congress and say, 'See, the wheat farmers want a voluntary program. Farmers don't want acreage controls.'"

The effect of reverting to the permanent legislation could be drastic in some parts of Idaho where farm expansion has taken place."

Cassia County has a theoretical wheat allotment of about 71,000 acres in 1977, the last time the number was calculated. (Quotas have not been used since the 1950s.) The county planted 130,000 acres to wheat in 1984, according to the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Under the act, as amended, the U.S. Department of Agriculture must set a wheat marketing quota and hold a producer referendum whenever, in the absence of quotas or other legislation, the supply of wheat is expected to exceed demand.

Agriculture Secretary John Block last month announced a referendum would be held on a 1986 wheat marketing quota of 1,955 million bushels and a national acreage allotment of 54 million bushels.

Marketing quotas must be approved by two-thirds of the eligible producers, those with a financial interest in a farm with an established allotment history. If quotas were approved, program elements would include:

- Mandatory acreage controls with stiff penalties for planting more than allowed in an allotment.

- A two-tiered pricing system setting lower rates for wheat in excess of market quotas.

- A domestic and export certificate program financed by producers and exporters.

- Under certain conditions, a mandatory unpaid diversion to further restrict production.

If market quotas are rejected, different provisions could be implemented. Those include no acreage controls, and price-support loans at 50 percent of parity for wheat grown only under established allotments.

The parity index for wheat in April was $7.67 a bushel, meaning that wheat grown within allotments would be supported at a price of $3.53, or about the same as the current average price for all wheat types. Wheat grown outside allotments, however, would receive no support.

The Idaho impact of returning to the 1938 law is difficult to assess. The state's wheat marketing quota in 1977 was 1.3 million acres, said Jay Boss, state production adjustment

Dutch youths chant for murder of Pope

By KEVIN COSTELLOE
The Associated Press

UTRECHT, Netherlands — Hundreds of anti-establishment youths chanting "We want to kill the pope" battled police Sunday near a conference hall where Pope John Paul II heard liberal Dutch Catholics challenge church doctrine.

About 1,000 youths marched to within several hundred yards of the Jaarbeurs Industrial conference center where John Paul, on the second day of his visit to the Netherlands, was meeting Dutch Catholic clergy and lay people.

When riot police blocked the way, some youths began throwing rocks.

Helmeted officers responded with tear gas and baton charges in a half-hour melee, driving the young people back toward the center of Utrecht, a university city in central Holland and the seat of the Dutch Roman Catholic church.

In two separate incidents, officers surrounded by demonstrators fired pistol shots, police chief Jan Wiaruda said. None of the shots was believed to have hit anyone.

Wiaruda said 14 people had been arrested in the rioting, three policemen and one demonstrator were injured. All were treated and released.

The police chief said a bystander, not involved in the rioting, died of a heart attack. He was not identified.

The pitched battles followed a peaceful march by about 10,000 Dutch radicals, feminists and homosexuals opposing John Paul's visit, the first ever by a pope to the predominantly Protestant Netherlands.

Later, John Paul was jeered by part of a crowd of several thousand outside the conference center. Most held fists aloft, made obscene gestures or whistled derisively. A bottle and a crushed can were thrown, falling just behind John Paul's bullet-proof vehicle. "Can You Believe This Tomfoolery?" read a protest banner in the crowd.

John Paul's 11-day tour, which includes Belgium and Luxembourg, put him at the center of a dispute between the Dutch church's strong liberal wing and a conservative hierarchy

Soccer stand called 'firetrap' in chief's 6-month-old warning

By LARRY THOMPSON
The Associated Press

BRADFORD, England (AP) — A fire chief said Sunday that the old wooden soccer grandstand that was destroyed by a weekend flash fire, killing 52 people and injuring 211, had been identified as a "firetrap" six months earlier.

The Inferno Saturday at the Bradford City Soccer Club's Valley Parade stadium, was England's worst soccer disaster.

West Yorkshire Fire Chief Graham Karren said the club was warned six months ago that its 79-year-old grandstand was a fire risk. But Karren said he was powerless under existing law to insist on improvements.

Investigators combed through the grandstand's ashes with their fingers Sunday, looking for clues to what started the fire.

A police official said it did not seem to be the result of an "arbitrarily criminal act."

On a day when civic celebrations had been planned to honor the championship Bradford City soccer club, flags flew at half staff in this city of 300,000 people, mourning what Sports Minister Neil Macfarlane called "the worst tragedy we have ever seen in English football (soccer)."

The Anglican Bishop of Bradford, the Rt. Rev. Robert Williamson, held a special prayer service Sunday afternoon. About 1,000 people packed Bradford Cathedral, some with hands clasped on their heads and hands, and many wearing the maroon and yellow scarf of the Bradford City club.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A trailer carrying bees overturned Sunday, releasing millions of bees and closing a freeway's southbound lanes for hours as workers with flamethrowers drove the insects back into the hives, authorities said.
"Bees are millions and millions of bees," said California Highway Patrol dispatcher Michael Bartley. "There are 40,000 in a hive and at least 100 hives broke open."

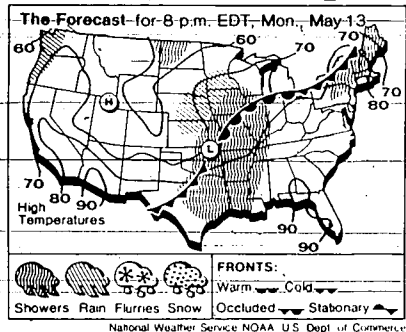

Chagall's art on display

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Hundreds of art lovers lined up outside the Philadelphia Museum of Art before doors opened Sunday for the first day of the first major American exhibition of Marc Chagall's works in 40 years.
Just over 3,500 people attended the day's showing of the exhibition, which was planned as a tribute to a living artist but has become instead a memorial to the man who died March 28, 1957.

'Radical' group blockaded

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Police Sunday blocked off a rowhouse where members of a radical back-to-nature group live, and ordered residents to evacuate the neighborhood.
Residents have pressured city officials to enforce sanitation, health and building codes at the house, where members of the group called MOVE have set up a rooftop lookout tower and have boarded up the windows.

Northern Utah and Nevada:
Clear; fair through tonight. Gradually increasing clouds Tuesday with isolated showers or thunderstorms developing by late in the day. Local southerly breezes Tuesday then shifting winds late in the day. Lows tonight in the 30s and Monday night upper 20s and 40s. Highs upper 60s and 70s.

Nevada: Fair today through Tuesday except variable high clouds north portion late today and Tuesday. Highs mostly mid 60s to upper 70s. Lows Monday night upper 20s and 30s.

Synopsis:
Late afternoon skies across the state were mostly fair Sunday, the National Weather Service said.

Temperatures at 3 p.m. were mostly in the 60s and 70s, with some in the 80s in the south portion while most winds were light elsewhere.

The extended forecast for Southern Idaho Wednesday through Friday is for Fair and warm. Highs in the 70s. Lows upper 30s and 40s. The warmest temperature reported in the state Sunday was 63 degrees at Lewiston. Lowest morning reading was 13 degrees at Stanlie.

The agricultural weather forecast through Friday indicates high pressure will bring warm dry weather to the state for the next several days. The only exception will be on Tuesday when a weak system will brush the north half of the state bringing a chance of light showers.

For Southern Idaho, conditions for field work and planting will remain good with fair and warm weather. Mean four inch soil temperatures will slowly warm 2 to 4 degrees through the period. Evaporation rates will increase around one tenth of an inch by Friday. Winds for spraying, light and variable Monday then southwest to west to 10 to 15 mph on Tuesday.

Networks reap fruitful profits

WASHINGTON (AP) — NBC made most profit last year, from the five local television stations it owns that it did on the entire NBC television network, an industry newsletter reports.
ABC and CBS also were able to make profits in the 30 percent range at their owned stations, according to Monday's edition of Television Digest, which cited "reliable New York financial sources."

CBS was the most profitable network and ABC took in the most money from the sale of network TV commercials, according to the newsletter's report on the closely guarded statistics.
ABC had by far the best financial figures among the radio divisions of the three, said the report.

ABC Television sold the most advertising time in 1984, coming out far ahead of the other networks. ABC's revenue was $2.64 billion, the newsletter said. After the bills were paid, the ABC television network had a pre-tax profit of $200 million.
At the TV network level, CBS took in $2.24 billion and had profits of $200 million; NBC billed $1.93 billion with $100 million in profits, said the report. Last year, only ABC topped the $2 billion figure in sales.

which Thompson presided, made its recommendation to the governor Saturday. By law, the recommendation must be approved by the board. Mrs. Webb, 33, of Lafayette, N.H., told the board she fabricated the story that Dotson raped her in 1977 because she feared she was pregnant after having sex with a teen-age boyfriend, David Belme.

Webb's account of why she fabricated the rape.
Mrs. Webb said she made up the story that Dotson raped her on July 9, 1977, because she had completed the sex act for the first time with Belme. But Belme, now 25 and an airman in Utah, testified Saturday that he and the former Cathleen Crowell had never completed the sex act because he always interrupted the intercourse.
Mrs. Webb said she was not with her any later than the weekend before the alleged rape.
Earlter, Mark Stolorow, a state crime lab expert, testified that in his opinion it was "improbable" that semen in a stain on Mrs. Webb's underwear on the night of the alleged rape — July 9, 1977 — could have resulted from sex more than 24 hours earlier.
Stolorow said his recent re-examination of the evidence indicated the semen could have come from Dotson or Belme, but there was no way to be certain.

He also said a public hair found on Mrs. Webb's body the night of the purported rape could have come from Dotson, but that it was not possible to be sure.
Mrs. Webb, testifying Thursday on the first day of the hearing, said her story of the rape "was a big lie."
Dotson proclaimed his innocence, and urged Thompson to free him, saying that "the nightmare doesn't seem to end."
Dotson has also asked the Cook County Circuit Court for a new trial.
Dotson made the request after Circuit Judge Richard Samuels, who originally sentenced him to prison, rejected last month to overturn the conviction, saying he did not believe Mrs. Webb's recantation.
Dotson also has appealed Samuels' ruling to an appellate court.

Pope

On Sunday, John Paul held meetings in Utrecht with Dutch religious orders, social organizations and missionaries.
It was at the last meeting at which he proclaimed that Hedwig Wasser, chairwoman of the Diocesan Missionary Council of Groningen, departed from her prepared address in a crowded conference hall with the pope sitting 30 feet in front of her.
"Personally I want to add if there is anything more than to expulsion announced against unmarried couples living together, the divorced, homosexuals, married priests and women, are we giving the shepherding of Christ credible treatment?" she asked.
Mrs. Wasser said rigid doctrine had "forced many of us... to be disobedient to the church." She asked why bishops are "religion over us instead of with and in the midst of us?"

Her remarks drew applause and catcalls. The pope, listening as a Dutch priest interpreted, showed no reaction. Afterward, he shook her hand, as he did those of other speakers.
"This was the only way I could express my sentiments," Mrs. Wasser, a 45-year-old mother of three, told reporters afterward. "I wanted to say something liberating... I didn't want only to address the negatives but also address the faithful in the Netherlands over the head of the pope."

Idaho planted 1,500,000 acres of all kinds of wheat in 1984.

But there is little correlation between actual planting history and the allocations, said Glen Jensen, Cassia County executive director for ASCS programs.
Some farmers who have developed new land in the western half of the country probably had no allotments, Jensen said, adding that the Burley office plans to employ three people for a month this spring just to sort out the allotment history.

The best Idaho farmers probably can hope for this year is a continuation of existing farm programs while Congress takes a careful look at the alternatives, said Heese, who personally oversees production limits to raise prices.
"I'd like to have seen them extend the current program before (the administration) went to all the work they have gone to now," he said, adding that no one he has talked to expected the 1985 act will be allowed to take effect.

The fireball that took only four minutes to engulf the wooden grandstand on Saturday prompted immediate calls for improved safety measures at aging sports stadiums throughout the country.
Football Association Chairman Bert Millett said the disaster would almost certainly result in fire authorities closing the stands of several of the 92 Football League clubs.

Several members of Parliament demanded a public inquiry into safety standards in turn-of-the-century stadiums throughout Britain.
He told a news conference 72 of the 211 people injured were still hospitalized Sunday, including three of the 23 police being trying to help people out of the rapidly spreading flames. Two people were reported in critical condition, and five others were described as "poorly."

House may thaw Senate's Social Security benefits freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — The battle of the 1986 budget shifts to the Democrat-controlled House this week as leaders of both parties voice doubt about the future of the Senate-passed freeze on Social Security benefits.

After freezing action for three months to await the Senate vote, the House Budget Committee begins work on its version of the budget on Tuesday. Leaders predict that the spending outline will be debated on the floor of the chamber early next month.

And Democratic and Republicans leaders alike say that the action by the Senate's GOP majority to deny the nation's 35 million Social Security recipients' next year's benefit increase will probably be the first casualty.

"Look, it ain't gonna happen," Assistant Republican Leader Trent Lott of Mississippi said late last week. "I just don't think Social Security is a constructive part of this budget process."

Budget Committee Chairman William H. Gray III, D-Pa., said flatly that the House would not raise taxes to cut the deficit, but he refused to pledge that the House would totally reject the proposed one-year freeze on Social Security cost-of-living increases.

"I can't say what the Budget Committee or the House is going to do, but I can tell you one thing," Gray said Sunday on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation."

"We're probably not going to do what the Senate did to senior citizens by asking them to carry 21 percent of the deficit reduction by a freeze on COLAS as well as increasing their premiums and deductibles on Medicare at the same time."

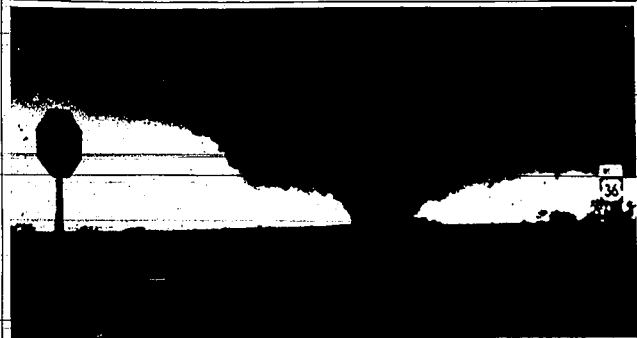

Appearing on the same program, Lott said he thinks a majority of House Republicans oppose the Senate's Social Security freeze. He said budget cuts can be found in other programs such as Amtrak, the Small Business Administration, foreign aid, and operating subsidies for mass transit and the Job Corps.

And House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., says that if a Social Security respite were brought up now, it would go down by as much as a 3-to-1 margin.

O'Neill has made it clear to Democrats on the Budget Committee that, while all potential spending cuts are "on the table," they should proceed with the utmost caution on the politically sensitive Social Security issue.

"The president's promise (to senior citizens) was broken. It's one of the most unbalanced areas of the budget," said Gray Sunday last week.

In other congressional action this week, foreign aid legislation is scheduled for floor debate in both House and Senate.

Floods, winds, low temperatures create havoc in northern Plains

By The Associated Press

Wind whistled across the northern Plains at up to 60 mph Sunday and streams rose out of their banks after storm winds blew out windows around Kansas City, Mo., spraying shards of glass, and knocked out electricity to as many as 25,000 customers.

A high wind warning was posted Sunday for parts of South Dakota, while flood watches were issued for parts of North Dakota, and several small streams in northwestern Minnesota were out of their banks.

One man died Sunday after he and five other people were hit by lightning in Minnesota.

More record lows were posted in the Northwest, where temperatures dipped below freezing.

Rain continued Sunday over much of Minnesota, with flooding along a 30-mile section of the Wild Rice River from Mahanomee to Ada in the northwestern part of the state; where up to 5 inches of rain had fallen during the weekend, the National Weather Service said.

The town of Mahanomee prepared to sandbag as the river rose to 10.29 feet, nearly a foot above flood stage, and one mobile home was evacuated; the weather service said. Downstream around Ada, water was up to the bottom of some bridges.

Bismarck, N.D., had received 2.55 inches of rain in 24 hours by Sunday morning, flooding some intersections, and a pickup truck was washed off a road near Hazelton, about 40 miles southeast of Bismarck.

Dozens of tornadoes and funnel clouds were reported throughout eastern South Dakota the night before, but with little damage, and Wagner got 3.5 inches of rain and hail in about 20 minutes.

Six softball players huddled under a tree near Lake Nokomis in southern Minnesota after their game was stopped there by lightning Saturday and one of them died Sunday.

Darryl Skoy, 29, of Bloomington, was revived at the scene after his heart stopped, but died later at Hennepin County Medical Center, said nursing supervisor Beth Schaefer.

Morning temperatures were unseasonably cold over the Northwest, and Boise dipped to a low of 24 degrees Sunday, well below the old record of 31 set in 1943.

Other records included 31 degrees at Lewiston, 25 at Spokane, Wash., breaking a record that had stood since 1887; 29 at Olympia, Wash., and 38 at Seattle.

Report: Reagan backed CIA plan for Beirut car bombing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA, with President Reagan's approval, organized a Middle East, anti-terrorist operation — that — staged — an unauthorized bombing attack which killed 30 people in Beirut, the Washington Post reported Sunday.

Members of one of the counter-terrorist groups, acting without authorization from the CIA, hired others in Lebanon to detonate the car bomb outside a Beirut apartment building March 8, the newspaper said in a report quoting unidentified sources.

The operation was canceled soon after the bombing when worried administration and CIA officials realized the indirect connection between the blast and their anti-terrorist training program, the newspaper said.

Late last year, Reagan gave his support to the plan, which was pushed forward by anti-State George Shultz and national security affairs adviser Robert McFarlane, the Post said.

It was designed to stage preemptive strikes — including killing suspected terrorists, if necessary — to head off further terrorist attacks in the Middle East, the Post said.

The CIA denied prior knowledge of the March 8 bombing, but at least one source said the spy agency knew it was being planned, according to the Post. The newspaper said CIA personnel had no direct contact with those who carried out the bombing.

A Lebanese intelligence source was quoted as saying that intelligence personnel of his country and other foreigners carried out the March 8 bombing, which was intended to kill Hussein Fadlallah, a suspected terrorist and leader of the Hezbollah, a militant Shiite Muslim movement.

Fadlallah was suspected of involvement in terrorist attacks on U.S. installations, including the suicide bombing of a Marine headquarters and the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, the Post said.

Eighty people died and 200 were injured in the March 8 blast, but Fadlallah escaped injury.

"I believe it was done to show we are strong," the newspaper quoted the official as saying. "You've got to stop terrorism with terrorism."

Administration officials declined Sunday to comment on the report. "The White House doesn't make a practice of commenting on intelligence matters," said spokesman Dale Peterson.

Asked about the newspaper report Sunday in Tel Aviv, where he is on a Middle East tour, Shultz said he had not seen it.

"I do have a very strong view about terrorism that is well known. I also have the view that at this stage, actions will speak a lot louder than words. So I don't have anything to say about it," Shultz added.

Both McFarlane and CIA Director William Casey have given speeches since the bombing, using the same language to assert that the United States has "the specific forces and capabilities we need to carry out operations against terrorist groups."

Foreign trade performance worries beset Business Council members

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — The nation's disastrous foreign trade performance has left leaders of some of America's largest corporations with a decidedly somber view of the future.

The grim assessment of the trade problem came during the just-concluded spring meeting of the Business Council, a group of 200 executives from the country's largest corporations.

"At no other time has a single subject so dominated the concerns of the business community," Edmund T. Pratt Jr., chairman of Piper, said of the trade issue.

While some industries reported they are doing well, the comments of many business leaders showed just how much of a battering industrial America is taking from foreign competition.

Piper said Pfizer's domestic sales of chemicals and minerals have been essentially flat for the past six months.

"We are struggling as is everybody else against a growth of imported chemicals and minerals — products which will today's dollar are able to be sold at what seem like almost ridiculous prices," he said.

John Opel, chairman of International Business Machines Corp., said the strength of the dollar has also depressed — U.S. — corporations' overseas earnings.

"In order to break even in a quarter-to-quarter comparison between 1984 and 1985, IBM's non-U.S. business had to grow somewhere in excess of 16 percent to show any kind of growth at all," Opel said.

While an American company may see its sales climbing overseas, those sales are worth less when they are translated back into U.S. dollars.

General Electric Co. overbilling trial to begin

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — General Electric Co., the nation's fourth largest defense contractor, goes on trial today, accused of overcharging the government by more than $800,000 on Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missile contracts.

GE is charged with four counts of making and presenting false claims for payment and 104 counts of making false statements to the Air Force on retrofitting contracts for the Minuteman Mark 2A.

After the indictment was issued here March 26, Air Force Secretary Verne Orr suspended GE from bidding on any new defense contracts, but he later limited the suspension to the company's Re-entry Systems Division, which was involved in the alleged mischarges.

GE is the largest defense contractor ever suspended from doing business with the government, and the largest ever charged in a criminal indictment with defrauding the military. It did $4,518,015,000 worth of business with the Pentagon in fiscal 1983, the last year for which statistics were available.

Several House Armed Services subcommittees began investigating billing practices of seven major defense contractors last month. So far, congressional auditors have questioned claims totaling $110 million out of total billings of about $3.7 billion.

Military contracts accounted for 15 percent to 20 percent of GE's $2.9 billion in sales last year, according to preliminary figures from the Department of Defense.

Young stars sing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Young actors Drew Barrymore and Danielle Brilbois and 75 other children have raised their voices in song to record a children's version of "We Are the World" to aid famine-stricken Africa.

"I wanted to help all the people that were starving and freezing cold because they don't have any clothes," 8-year-old Malli Misajon of Long Beach said of Saturday's recording session.

The children's version of the Lionel Richie-Michael Jackson song, originally recorded by music superstars to raise money for starving Africans, was the idea of Los Angeles disc jockey Sonny Mendez.

Cards, calls, letters and fetes mark mom's day

By The Associated Press

Women whose pregnancies came after years of difficulty celebrated Mother's Day with their doctor in California, while an elementary school girl in Wyoming summed up the day's meaning in a letter about her mother: "I couldn't do without her."

In Elsmore, Ky., 75-year-old Anna Lovelace was swamped with cards, calls and flowers from her natural daughter and 36 foster children.

"Mother's Day" that's the highest day I have Mrs. Lovelace said.

And 8-year-old Janice Diaz, who makes the morning coffee for her working mom in New York City, says being the only child of a single parent is fine if she helps sell Girl Scout cookies. Mothers, she said, "have to really care for you. They should be fair, and they should be funny."

No matter what size the celebration, children young and old took time to honor their mothers in a celebration that has been a national fixture for 71 years.

Last year, more than 150 million Mother's Day cards were sold nationwide, and telephone companies report it's one of their busiest days.

The holiday is credited to Anna M. Jarvis, a Grafton, W.Va., native, who lived in Philadelphia.

Artificial hearts problematic

NEW YORK (AP) — Artificial heart implants have not been successful so far because the experts have substituted mechanical problems for disease, the head of the world's leading implant program said Sunday.

"We hope that eventually, mechanical heart disease will be much less severe than human heart disease. But at this point, it has certainly not been that successful," said Dr. Alan Lansing of Humana Heart Institute International, which has supervised three of the world's five permanent artificial heart implants.

Of the three patients to receive artificial hearts at Humana, one has died.

Grand jury will look into vigilantism

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The Legion of Doom, a high school vigilante group believed responsible for about 35 crimes committed in a misdirected effort to punish "undesirables," will be investigated by a grand jury this week.

The grand jury sessions Monday through Wednesday will be devoted exclusively to the Legion of Doom, said Tarrant County Assistant District Attorney Scott Wisch.

"They expect to conduct a thorough investigation of the whole matter, however long it takes, and will call as witnesses whoever they deem necessary," he said.

Authorities believe the Legion of Doom was formed last fall in a misdirected effort to curb thefts and drug use at Paschal High School.

House may thaw Senate's Social Security benefits freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — The battle of the 1986 budget shifts to the Democrat-controlled House this week as leaders of both parties voice doubt about the future of the Senate-passed freeze on Social Security benefits.

After delaying action for three months to await the Senate vote, the House Budget Committee begins work on its version of the budget on Tuesday. Leaders predict that the spending outline will be debated on the floor of the chamber early next month.

And Democratic and Republican leaders alike say that the action by the Senate's GOP majority to deny the nation's 35 million Social Security recipients next year's benefit increase will probably be the first casualty.

"Look, it ain't gonna happen," Assistant Republican Leader Trent Lott of Mississippi said late last week. "I just don't think Social Security is a constructive part of this budget process."

Budget Committee Chairman William H. Gray III, D-Pa., said flatly that the House would not raise taxes to cut the deficit, but he refused to pledge that the House would totally reject the proposed one-year freeze on Social Security cost-of-living increases.

"I can't say what the Budget Committee or the House is going to do, but I can tell you one thing," Gray said Sunday on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation."

"We're probably not going to do what the Senate did to senior citizens by asking them to freeze 21 percent of the deficit reduction by a Mass. says that if a Social Security restriction on COLAS as well as increasing their premiums and deductibles on Medicare at the same time."

Appearing on the same program, Lott said he thinks a majority of House Republicans oppose the Senate's Social Security freeze. He said budget cuts can be found in other programs such as Amtrak, the Small Business Administration, foreign aid, operating subsidies for mass transit and the Job Corps.

And House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., says that if a Social Security restriction were brought up now, it would go down by as much as a 3-to-1 margin.

O'Neill has made it clear to Democrats on the Budget Committee that, while all potential spending cuts are "on the table," they should proceed with the utmost caution on the politically sensitive Social Security issue.

"The president's promise (to senior citizens) was broken. It's one of the most unbalanced areas of the budget," said Gray last week.

In other congressional action this week, foreign aid legislation is scheduled for floor debate in both House and Senate.

Agra, Kan. tornado was one of a swath of tornadoes that hit Kansas and Nebraska May 11

Floods, winds, low temperatures create havoc in northern Plains

Wind whistled across the northern Plains at up to 60 mph Sunday and streams rose out of their banks after storm winds blew out windows around Kansas City, Mo., spraying shards of glass, and knocked out electricity to as many as 25,000 customers.

A high wind warning was posted Sunday for parts of South Dakota, while flood watches were issued for parts of North Dakota, and several small streams in northwestern Minnesota were out of their banks.

One man died Sunday after he and five other people were hit by lightning in Minneapolis.

More record lows were posted in the Northwest, where temperatures dipped below freezing.

Rain continued Sunday over much of Minnesota, with flooding along a 30-mile section of the Wild Rice River from Mahanomen to Aita in the northwest part of the state, where up to 4 inches of rain had fallen during the weekend, the National Weather Service said.

The town of Mahanomen prepared to sandbag the river rose to 10.29 feet, nearly a foot above flood stage, and one mobile home was evacuated, the weather service said. Downstream around Aita, water was up to the bottom of some bridges.

Bismarck, N.D., had received 2.55 inches of rain in 24 hours by Sunday morning, flooding some inter-sections, and a pickup truck was washed off a road near Hazleton, about 40 miles southeast of Bismarck.

Dozens of tornadoes and funnel clouds were reported throughout eastern South Dakota the night before, but with little damage, and Wagner got 3.5 inches of rain and hail in about 20 minutes.

Six softball players landed under a tree near Lake Nokomis in southern Minnesota after their game was stopped — were hit by lightning Saturday and one of them died Sunday.

Darryl Skoy, 20, of Bloomington, was revived at the scene after his heart stopped, but died later at Hennepin County Medical Center, said nursing supervisor Beth Schaefer.

Morning temperatures were unseasonably cold over the Northwest, and Boise dipped to a low of 23 degrees Sunday, well below the old record of 43 set in 1943.

Other records included 31 degrees at Lewiston, 25 at Spokane, Wash., breaking a record that had stood since 1907; 29 at Olympia, Wash., and 38 at Seattle.

Report: Reagan backed CIA plan for Beirut car bombing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA, with President Reagan's approval, organized a Middle East anti-terrorist operation that staged an unauthorized bombing attack which killed 80 people in Beirut, the Washington Post reported Sunday.

Members of one of the counter-terrorist groups, acting without authorization from the CIA, hired others in Lebanon to detonate the car bomb outside a Beirut apartment building March 8, the newspaper said in a report quoting unidentified sources.

The operation was canceled soon after the bombing when worried administration and CIA officials realized the indirect connection between the blast and their anti-terrorist training program, the newspaper said.

Late last year, Reagan gave his support to the plan, which was pushed by Secretary of State George Shultz and national security affairs adviser Robert McFarlane, the Post said.

It was designed to stage preemptive

strikes — including killing suspected terrorists, if necessary — to head off further terrorist attacks on U.S. facilities in the Middle East, the Post said.

The CIA denied prior knowledge of the March 8 bombing, but at least one source said the spy agency knew it was being planned, according to the Post. The newspaper said CIA personnel had no direct contact with those who carried out the bombing.

A Lebanese intelligence source was quoted as saying that intelligence personnel of his country and other foreigners carried out the March 8 bombing, which was intended to kill Hussein Fadlallah, a suspected terrorist and leader of the Hezbollah, a militant Shiite Moslem movement.

Fadlallah was suspected of involvement in terrorist attacks on U.S. installations, including the suicide bombing of a Marine headquarters and the bombing of the U.S. Embassy annex, the Post said.

Eighty people died and 200 were injured in the March 8 blast, but 600 others escaped injury.

"I believe it was done to show we are strong," the newspaper quoted the official as saying. "You've got to stop terrorism with terrorism."

Administration officials declined Sunday to comment on the report.

"The White House doesn't make a practice of commenting on intelligence matters," said spokesman Dale Peterson.

Asked about the newspaper report Sunday in Tel Aviv, where he is on a Middle East tour, Shultz said he had not seen it.

"I do have a very strong view about terrorism that is well known. I also have the view that at this stage, actions will speak a lot louder than words. So I don't have anything to say about it," Shultz added.

Both McFarlane and CIA Director William Casey have given speeches since the bombing, using the same language to assert that the United States has "the special forces and capabilities we need to carry out operations against terrorist groups.

Foreign trade performance worries beset Business Council members

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — The nation's disastrous foreign trade performance has left leaders of some of America's largest corporations with a decidedly somber view of the future.

The grim assessment of the trade problem came during the just-concluded spring meeting of the Business Council, composed of 200 executives from the country's largest corporations.

For no other time has a single subject so dominated the concerns of the business community," Edmund T. Pratt Jr., chairman of Pfizer, said of the trade issue.

While some industries reported they are doing well, the comments of many business leaders showed just how much the strength of the dollar and America is taking from foreign competition.

Pratt said Pfizer's domestic sales of chemicals and minerals have been essentially flat for the past six months.

"We are struggling as is everybody else against a growth of imported chemicals and minerals — products which could never compete before but which with today's dollar are able to be sold at what seem like almost ridiculous prices," he said.

John Opel, chairman of International Business Machines Corp., said the strength of the dollar has also depressed U.S. corporations' overseas earnings.

"In order to break even in a quarter-to-quarter comparison between 1984 and 1985, IBM's non-U.S. business had to grow somewhere in excess of 15 percent to show any kind of growth at all," Opel said.

"While an American company may see its sales climbing overseas, those sales are worth less when they are translated back into U.S. dollars.

General Electric Co. overbilling trial to begin

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — General Electric Co., the nation's fourth-largest defense contractor, goes on trial today, accused of overcharging the government by more than $800,000 on Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missile contracts.

GE is charged with four counts of making and presenting false claims for payment and 401 counts of making false statements to the Air Force on refueling contracts for the Minuteman Mark 12A.

After the indictment was issued here March 26, Air Force Secretary Verne Orr suspended GE from bidding on any new defense contracts, but he later limited the suspension to the company's Re-entry Systems Division, which was involved in the alleged mischarges.

GE is the largest defense contractor ever suspended from doing business with the government, and the largest ever charged in a criminal indictment with defrauding the military. It did $4.518,015,000 worth of business with the Pentagon in fiscal 1983, the last year for which statistics were available.

Several House Armed Services subcommittees began investigating billing practices of seven major defense contractors last month. So far, congressional auditors have questioned claims totaling $110 million out of total billings of about $3.7 billion.

Military contracts accounted for 15 percent to 20 percent of GE's $2.9 billion in sales last year, according to preliminary figures from the Department of Defense.

Scenic looks are priority of easements

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — Since 1972, the U.S. Forest Service has bought scenic easements to about 75 percent of the private property in the Sawtooth Recreation Area to protect the area's rustic setting.

In doing so, the Forest Service has stopped two major subdivisions and has severely limited the type of development that can take place in Idaho's largest, multiple-use recreation site, says Al Ashton, the area's superintendent.

The agency has spent about $16 million to acquire the easements since Congress created the recreation area nearly 13 years ago, Ashton says.

agency the power to control the use of land by acquiring scenic easements without changing the uses then in existence.

"Basically, what we are buying is the development right on that property," says Ashton, who took over management of the recreation area in 1976.

Of the 24,423 acres of private land within the recreation area, the Forest Service acquired, or bought the scenic easement on, about 18,000 acres, he says.

Of the 1,100 private land owners there in 1972 when the recreation area was created, the Forest Service has dealt successfully with about 800 of them, Ashton says.

The easements have covered parcels ranging from one-eighth of an acre to 500 acres.

The original legislation allowed for only $19.8 million to buy easements or land, but Ashton says Congress has changed the appropriation to allow the program to continue.

Using its authorization from Congress, the Forest Service has stopped two large subdivisions that could have changed the character of the Sawtooth Valley. These were the Swiss Villa subdivision at Obsidian and the Pettit Lake subdivision.

Ashton says the recreation area is now trying to purchase the scenic easement on a new subdivision on the east side of the Sawtooth Valley across from the entrance to Pettit Lake.

Parents lauded at CSI graduation fete

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The parents who paid for about 600 College of Southern Idaho diplomas got a big hand at the college's 19th graduation ceremony Friday night.

Idaho State University Interim President Clifford M. Trump concluded his address to the class of 1985 with a round of applause for the technically colored crowd of parents, grandparents, siblings and other well-wishers sitting in the bleachers of the CSI gym.

Trump led the students in a second round of applause to honor the CSI faculty sitting behind the students and draped in black gowns and the colored sashes of their departments.

"Learn to live and live to learn," Trump told the graduating class. "You are ready to go ahead to the next step in your lives."

"If it (a CSI education) has been completely successful, the main thing it has taught you is how much more you have to learn," said Trump.

Trump said the idea of education for the many and not just the rich is a peculiarly American idea, invented and developed with "incredible speed" only in the United States.

Whoops, whistles and hoors echoed through the Roman columns on the dais at the north end of the gym as the crowd's brothers, sisters, mothers and dads were handed their diplomas by CSI President Gerald Meyerhoeffer. From the east end of the dais, interpreter Madeline J. Hartwell sent the silent din of her break-neck sign-language interpretation of the ceremony to the deaf people in the audience.

"I know of no other school that has the wholehearted support of the community as CSI does," said CSI board-of-trustees chairman LeRoy Craig. "I think tonight, Doc, we thank you very much."

Craig said in a brief tribute to deceased CSI founder James "Doc" Taylor.

First United Methodist Church Pastor Rev. R. Tom Tucker gave the benediction and student body president Steven J. Schuyler spoke, as well.

Poster child starts 30-kilometer walk

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Born with disabling spina bifida, six-year-old Russell Wortham of Meridian took a one-block walk Saturday to fulfill his official duties as 1985 Idaho March of Dimes Poster Child.

But his 225 companions hiked a 30-kilometer course (about 18.6 miles) during the 13th annual Twin Falls March of Dimes, raising $15,300 for study and treatment of birth defects.

Wearing white WalkAmerica caps, the hikers ranged from a 4-year-old youngster to a 70-year-old young-at-heartier. Many were enthusiastic grade-school and junior high-aged children.

Most walked independently, covering the entire 30 kilometers. Some adults walked as teams, with each covering part of the route.

The walk started at 9 a.m. and looped east as far as the U.S. Snake River Conservation Research Station near Kimberly. By mid-afternoon, walkers were arriving at the finish at McDonald's restaurant in Twin Falls, where a band and refreshments awaited them. Among the way volunteers from the Twin Falls Optimists Club manned check stations.

Twin Falls March of Dimes chairman Joel Brillhart said this year's campaign topped last year's by close to $5,000.

The addition of adult teams from area businesses, such as Rex Restaurants, K mart and Scott's Refrigeration, helped swell the fundraising, he said. "I think the teams contributed easily half of it (the total)," he said.

But gathering the pledges is the core of the campaign, and it is not a team event. Kelli Burgmeister, 26, of Filer was this year's champion with 119 pledges totaling $1,200. She spent several weeks soliciting support from friends and even from bowlers in area leagues.

It was her first March of Dimes, said Burgmeister, who walked the last 15 kilometers for the Twin Falls Bank & Trust Co. team.

Sixty percent of the money collected Saturday stays in Twin Falls for local projects, Brillhart said. In the past, the March of Dimes has paid for scholarships for prospective doctors and nurses, for educational materials, and for equipment such as newborn transportation modules and fetal heart monitors.

The remainder goes to the national March of Dimes for wider ranging research projects and educational materials for distribution throughout the country.

Old Perrine bridge reborn at Gooding crossing

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Repairs to the Idaho Street bridge in Gooding will begin this week.

The Gooding City Council agreed to purchase a used bridge section from Richard Critser, a contractor and surveyor from Jerome, and mount it on the existing abutments.

Critser told the council the bridge stringers and deck are part of the old Perrine Memorial Bridge removed when the new one was built in 1975.

He said he would sell the structure to the city and have it installed for about $7,500 if city crews can remove the old bridge and get the site ready, which council members agreed to do.

The Gooding bridge was damaged in January by city crews using dynamic to dislodge ice jams in the Little Wood River beneath the bridge. The bridge has been closed to traffic since then.

City engineer Bill Block told the council his staff will inspect the existing abutments and oversee placement of the new bridge to insure the work meets necessary standards.

Critser said the bridge section meets or exceeds federal standards for the weight load required.

When the bridge is complete it will be 25 feet long. Because state and federal standards require a 29-foot span for a structure to be classified as a "bridge," the project does not qualify for state or federal money, engineer Scott Bybee told the council.

The council agreed it would not be cost-effective to lengthening the bridge and install new abutments to remove a constriction in the river at the bridge site.

Council President Bob Moline questioned what would really be gained by the more expensive construction of a longer bridge when the river channel is only a few hundred yards downstream.

City crews will begin removing the old bridge this week so engineers can inspect the abutments.

A timely replacement of the bridge is necessary to provide an alternate traffic route later this summer when the Idaho Division of Highways begins resurfacing State Highway-16 and repairing the Main Street bridge, which also was damaged by ice blasting last winter, Moline said.

In other business, Bybee told the council the problems at the city's new waste water treatment plant are getting worse.

Cracks in the concrete floor of one of the buildings began to appear last winter and caused breaks in a water pipe and electric conduit.

He said the problem appears to be the result of unusual settlement at the location and water saturation.

"We have to replace the structural integrity of the foundation," he said.

A preliminary report calls for installing concrete pillars beneath the walls, installing new pipes and replacing the floor, he said.

Who is liable for repair costs to the two-year-old structure is still a question, but Block told the council the one-year warranty on the building has expired.

Expenses increase for firewood cutters

Sawtooth chiefs want better cash flow

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A small army of firewood hunters hauls axes and chain saws into the timber country of the South Hills each year. In 1984, the U.S. Forest Service issued 1,781 firewood permits for the entire Sawtooth National Forest.

A new firewood program that goes into effect on May 23 will cater to the cutters in some respects, but it also will increase their costs.

Sawtooth officials acknowledge they want a better cash harvest from timber sales. More importantly, they also want to concentrate firewood harvests to regenerate aging and seriously weakened stands of timber, top forest managers announced last week.

"We know it is a big issue," said Twin Falls District ranger Jerry Davis. Yet he and other Sawtooth planners don't have a good idea whether the changes will discourage or encourage the woodcutters.

There are two major changes in the program. First, firewood hunters will be restricted to 32,000 acres — about 10 percent — of the South Hills. Previously, they had been able to gather the wood from about 80 percent of the forest. The limits will focus firewood activity in zones that need rejuvenation, officials said. To aid the cutters, the forest service also will topple about 400 acres of trees for firewood hunters to pick up off the ground, said Davis. The cutting will be paced so that about 200 acres at a time are available throughout the summer and into the fall, he said. Secondly, the wood will cost more under a new permit system. While the basic cost for the required firewood permit stays at $10 per family and entitles purchasers to two cords of wood, the price for any additional wood rises to $5 a cord. It had been $2.50.

The Forest Service is anxious to raise more money for its timber management programs. Commercial loggers and firewood collectors have harvested only about half of the hoped-for timber from the South Hills in past years, according to agency statistics. Both the program to upgrade the forests and cash sales are far behind targets.

Although the South Hills comprise only 300,000 acres of the national forest's entire 2 million acres, the area has accounted for at least 35 percent of the firewood permits for the past decade. In the past few years, the public has been chopping about 38 percent of the forest's firewood harvest from South Hills stands, according to Sawtooth figures.

Part of the reason is the nearness of the South Hills to population centers of Twin Falls and Burley. Access into the areas also is good.

In the past decade, firewood gathering has grown and then subsided. In 1974, the Forest Service issued only 997 permits, but in 1980, the agency gave out 8,896, an eight-fold increase.

Until then, firewood permits were free for the asking, says Ed Waldapfel, Sawtooth Forest public information officer. In 1981, the agency began the newly replaced fee system, and both numbers of permits and the amounts of wood collected dropped a third that year.

Forest officials aren't sure why, but the South Hills activity went counter to the trend. Although the numbers of firewood cutters dropped 36 percent, the ones that did some cutting that year came out with more wood. The average woodcutter took home 3.4 cords instead of 2 cords the previous year.

In the past four years, the trend towards larger loads per cutter has continued in the forest at large and in the South Hills. The average firewood permit holder now lugs about 4.5 cords of wood home.

The effects of the new fees — which apply in all areas except in the Fairfield District and in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area north of Galena Summit — are hard to gauge, Waldapfel says.

However, the agency hopes to recoup more of its costs and to attract firewood cutters by maintaining its roads better and offering better wood gathering. "We believe that the increased ease of obtaining firewood will help offset the increase in fees," Davis said.

Last year, the Forest Service took in close to $50,000 from firewood sales along with $20,000 of that being generated in the South Hills, according to agency statistics. The money goes into reforestation, road maintenance, disposal of slash left from cutting and preparation of new firewood areas.

Waldapfel could not supply precise Forest Service expenses for firewood-related activities in the South Hills. However, Sawtooth officials estimate expenses of $25,000 to cut the 400 acres of green trees for firewood collectors.

And overall, the Forest Service will spend $174,000 in the South Hills this year for timber management. Those timber expenses include a wide variety of activities aimed at aiding commercial logging sales and public firewood gathering.

Only limited areas will be open for wood cutting

Glenns Ferry schools want $885,000

Fisherman finds body of Glenns Ferry man

GLENN'S FERRY -- The body of a young Glenns Ferry man who was drowned March 23 when his car plunged into Snake River, was found Sunday by a fisherman.

about two weeks earlier, also about six miles downstream from where the two disappeared.

The young couple was last seen speeding out of Glenns Ferry as if to stop their vehicle and another during a high-speed chase. A short-time later officers found a damaged red car on a bridge that crosses the river on a county road. There was evidence a vehicle had crashed through it and gone into the river. The couple's car was pulled from the river at that point the following day.

Officers and volunteers searched the river with boats and dragging equipment for more than two days before giving up the river search.

GLENN'S FERRY -- At a special meeting of the Glenns Ferry School Board this week, the trustees voted to have an election June 4 for an $885,000 bond issue for construction of a new wing at the school to house seventh- and eighth-grade students, said Superintendent Jim Garrett.

The proposed addition includes four classrooms and a multipurpose room, he said.

Garrett said the money would be levied on the property taxes of the school district in Elmore and Owyhee counties. He said the bond issue amounts to approximately 88 cents per $1,000 of taxable market value of property owned.

fronted with adult lifestyle issues, like smoking and sexuality, but they also go from a one-room classroom situation in elementary school to several classrooms and different teachers in the high school. This comes at a time, he said, when the children are struggling to adjust to the traumatic physical and emotional changes of growing up.

wondered how the school could talk about building extra classrooms when they didn't have enough money to maintain the vocational-technical education program next year.

Teens arrested for burglary TWIN FALLS -- Three fifteen year old juveniles and a 19-year-old adult were taken into custody late Saturday on second degree burglary charges when they allegedly stole an 800 dollar worth of beer from the Safeway Store at 1147 Elmer Ave. E. Police said the two 15-year olds girls entered the store while their two male companions waited outside in a parked vehicle.

Hailey to host Earth Fair '85

HAILEY -- Artists and craftsmen have until June 1 to enter Earth Fair '85 slated for June 22-23 at Hailey City Park. The fair will feature the works of skilled hand-workers who use principally virgin materials gathered from nature including clay, willows, vegetable and animal fibers, wood and obsidian to fashion fine art pieces for use and ornamentation.

According to organizer Janet Crowley, the self-supporting fair was termed "a really fine occasion" by last year's participants. Crowley points out that there were 24 different attractions last year and she is anticipating twice that number this year with four times the number of visitors.

Exhibitors should send $20 to P.O. Box 664, Pleabo, ID 83338, or for information, call 788-2837

Correction

A caption on Page B3 of Sunday's Times-News identified a photograph as depicting the closed Wilson Labor Camp near Paul. The photograph is actually of the Burley Labor Camp, which remains open. The Times-News regrets the error.

Easements

The subdivision went in because of weaknesses in federal and local laws, he says. Although the federal legislation creating the recreation area prohibits subdivisions within the SNRA, it gives the Forest Service only the power to purchase or condemn land and no police power to prevent improper uses to go in, Ashton says. Also, Custer County does not have a comprehensive plan and had no authority to stop the owners of the Wilderness River Ranch from subdividing their lands as long as they met county sanitary standards, he says.

forent easements runs a typical course: appraisal, negotiations and either acceptance or rejections of a government offer, Ashton says. Most follow that course. But if there are problems, a property owner has a right to get his own appraisal, which the Forest Service can either accept or reject.

Forest Service has run into problems with the sale property on which it had negotiated easements in the early years of the SNRA, he says. Although the early easements limited the number of buildings on a parcel of land, they often did not pinpoint their location, and the new owners often want to build on a spot unsuitable to the Forest Service, Ashton says.

For Vanek clan of Burley, shoemaking's all in family

By SARAH MURPHY
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — Irish leprechauns are legendary shoe cobblers, but they would have to go some to match the shoemaking record held by the Otto Vanek family of Burley.

Vanek and his wife, Audrey, run Van's Shoe Repair in Burley, and he says it's been a family affair for a long time.

Genealogical records compiled in Czechoslovakia show an unbroken line of shoemakers in the Vanek family for 330 years.

Vanek says three generations of Vaneks have been continuously involved in the trade at some point during their lives since his father, Charles, emigrated from Prague, Czechoslovakia, in the 1890s.

At present, Vanek says that he, his sons Ron and Max as well as his son-in-law and grandson, are trained in the trade at some point during their lives since his father, Charles, emigrated from Prague, Czechoslovakia, in the 1890s.

Vanek says his father made boots for Czechoslovakian army officers before making his journey to the United States.

After that, in true gypsy style, says Vanek, his father tried his hand at farming in Kansas, selling and repairing Red Wing Shoes and harness-making in Colorado, and running a shoe repair business in Portland, Ore., before settling in

"I'm beginning to like it pretty well after 35 years."

Otto Vanek

Burley.

Vanek says in 1923, he apprenticed in the shoe trade under his father and his two uncles, Frank and Carl. In their shoe repair shop, which was located on a site now occupied by Roper's Department Store in Burley.

Vanek says there were seven boys in the family and all of them followed their father's pattern, each with his own shoe repair business.

After trying his hand during World War II at ship building in Portland, Vanek says he bought out his brother, Joe, who then owned his father's shoe shop, and has been running a shoe repair business in Burley since 1949.

"I'm beginning to like it pretty well after 35 years," says Vanek.

The shoemaker's craft has changed in many ways since his father's time, says Vanek.

"Now, because of the difficulty in obtaining lasts (a wooden form over which the shoe is shaped), we don't make shoes so much any more — we do mostly rebuilding and repair work," he says.

"When I was with Dad, we made work boots for loggers," says Vanek.

"Dad made a last so he could make shoes for my mother, and sometimes he would make up special orthopedic shoes — but now, I just don't have the equipment for that kind of work," he says.

"My son, Ron, makes shoes for his doll shop," says Vanek. "But that's about the extent of shoemaking in our family in this day and age."

Vanek decries the cheap quality of many of the assembly-line shoes people buy today, and particularly seems the non-leather shoes which are so popular now.

"I knew a man who always brought in his good leather shoes for repair," says Vanek. "One day he came in wearing a pair of Hush Puppies, with rubber soles."

"I pointed to his feet and said, 'Why those?'"

In spite of the frustrations brought on by modern trends, Vanek says there are many advantages in running a shoe repair shop.

"I always thought being a mechanic would be nice, but it's a messy job," he says. "Shoe repair is ticklish, but I like it. I receive my satisfaction in knowing I do it right, just like my ancestors did."

Parents earn praise for discipline

DEAR ABBY: Three cheers for the parents who made their sons walk to school and back (a total of 14 miles) for five days when the boys were suspended from the school bus for bad behavior.

A man wrote in accusing those parents of "child abuse." Baloney! Thanks, Abby, for saying you thought the parents should be cloned, not criticized.

Our 13-year-old son was kicked off the school bus for three days for roughhousing. The streets and roads where we live are impossible to walk on — and there are no sidewalks, so I drove him. However, he had to pay me the going rate for taxi service. He hated to part with his own money, but he had no choice.

You had better believe that kid never roughhouses on the school bus again.

— MISSOURI MOM

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

DEAR MOM: Stay tuned for a few words from two bus drivers:

DEAR ABBY: I applaud those parents. I drive high school, junior high and elementary school children. I have 72 lives in my hands, and when I have to keep looking in my rearview mirror to see which kids are ripping up the seats, fighting and throwing things, I can't drive and watch the road the way I should.

In our system a child has to be "written up" three times for bad conduct before he is suspended. Most kids don't care if they're suspended because either their parents will drive them, or they'll just stay home from school.

I'd love to see parents ride the school bus with their kids just once. They'd never want my job.

My husband rode with me once and said, "Never again — I'll suicid!"

Don't use my name. I need this job.

— DRIVEN (NUTS) IN WISCONSIN

DEAR ABBY: Two gold medals for those parents who made their kids walk to school cause the bus caused a disturbance on the school bus. As a school bus driver, I wish there were more parents like them.

Parents don't realize how much danger is involved when kids misbehave on a school bus. I have my dress up envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 30923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

the bus drivers and teachers.

— NEW HAMPSHIRE DRIVER

DEAR ABBY: You will probably get plenty of mail telling you how cruel you are, so I want you to know that I'm on your side. These parents deserve congratulations for teaching their children to respect rules and regulations and people in authority.

If we had more parents like them we wouldn't have to build bigger prisons.

— SAN FRANCISCAN

DEAR SAN FRANCISCAN: My mail has been running 100 to 1 in favor of the parents. Tomorrow, a reprint from an Illinois psychologist who couldn't wait to write — so he sent me a telegram. (Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs; sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 30923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

What's what

You're a "dysmorpho..." if you suffer from the mistaken belief that you're ugly. Researchers, examined medical records compiled by plastic surgeons. They concluded that one out of 50 patients was a dysmorpho. The "before" photo was just as good-looking as the "after."

Q. Why are those atrocious breaks in road surfaces called "potholes"?

A. Early England's roads were dirt over clay. Wheels gouged ruts into them. Pottery makers, needing clean clay for their pots, dug it in spots where the ruts were deep. Teampsters called these spots potholes.

Q. Didn't George Washington have a pet wolf?

A. No, pet foxes. Col. George Armstrong Custer had a pet wolf, though called her Dixie.

Q. Why are those professional football players ever credited with two tackles for safeties in a single game?

A. One only, insofar as I know — former Los Angeles Ram Fred Dryer, later to star in TV's "Hunter."

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES - You outside activities as much as you can during the day. The evening is time for gadding about town.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Stick to the tried and true during the daytime, but tonight study into something new and fascinating.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Steer clear of an argument with a high-strung associate, who is not very conventional and then tonight all works to your favor.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be kind with those who are upset and acting strangely and tonight an associate gives you fine support.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Your workload may seem too heavy, but if you plan your time wisely, you can handle it very well and quickly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Although you want to have a good time, it is best you handle practical affairs during the day and save entertainment for tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Do not get into arguments at home during the daytime and tonight all will be serene there. Be gentle with a family tie who is irate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Much care in motion is necessary today and thereby avoid some kind of accident. Keep poised if associates are in a bad mood during the day.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You may be a little confused and could make mistakes where finances and real estate are concerned, but tonight, you think clearly.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) Although frustrated during the day, take it easy and tonight you gain fine benefits. Avoid pals who pressure you in some way.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY, he or she will easily understand the troubles of others and have a fine solution for them, so be sure to slant the education along lines of trouble-shooting. Teach to be more objective so as not to get personally hurt in the process, and there can be much success here during the lifetime.

Shultz meets mideast chiefs without major breakthrough

QAQA, Jordan (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz met Sunday night with King Hussein on a royal yacht in the Red Sea but no breakthrough was achieved in arranging Arab-Israeli peace talks, a senior U.S. official said.

Hussein and Shultz will meet again Monday morning and the secretary then flies to Vienna, Austria, where he will confer with Soviet officials on the U.S.-Soviet arms reduction talks.

Shultz said earlier Sunday that it was "a hard problem" to find Palestinian peace negotiators acceptable to both Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization. He said a solution is essential, however, if peace talks ever are to get under way between Israel and a joint Jordan-Palestinian delegation.

Hosni Mubarak greets George Shultz at palace in Cairo

PLO boss says U.S. unrealistic

PEKING (AP) — Yasser Arafat insisted Sunday that the PLO must take part in any talks on Middle East peace and said the Reagan administration was "still trying to hide the sun with his finger" in U.S. efforts to get peace talks going.

Arafat spoke to reporters in Peking after three days of talks with Chinese leaders on a Palestinian-Jordanian proposal for an international conference on the Middle East to be held under U.N. auspices.

Asked if he expects results from U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz's current Middle East trip, the PLO chairman said: "We know he is there but still the American administration is insisting not to change their idea. No for the PLO, no for the international state, no for the international conference."

The United States refuses to deal with the Palestine Liberation Organization unless it recognizes Israel's right to exist. Israel considers the PLO as a terrorist organization and says it will not negotiate directly with an Arab delegation containing PLO members.

Iran blames U.S. for exploding Tehran car bomb

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A car packed with TNT exploded on a Tehran street crowded with Sunday shoppers, killing at least 12 people in the Iranian capital and wounding 35, Iran's official news agency reported.

Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency, in reports monitored in Nicosia, said most of those killed and wounded were street vendors, pedestrians and passengers on a parked bus.

IRNA said the explosion occurred at 8:15 a.m. on Nasser Khosrow Avenue, just as the street, one of the busiest in a poor southern neighborhood of Tehran, was filling with people.

The car bomb started a fire that gutted two buildings and two shops, IRNA said. It wrecked seven cars, damaged 16 others, and broke windows 250 yards away, the agency said.

The agency quoted Col. Abbas Moazzami, Tehran's police chief, as saying "U.S. agents" had packed the car trunk with an estimated 110 pounds of TNT.

Soviet policies follow Nazi's U.S. aide lectures French

PARIS (AP) — "The U.S. ambassador to France, Evan Galbraith, on Sunday referred to the Soviet Union as a tyrant and likened some of its policies to those of Nazi Germany," Galbraith spoke on Radio Monte Carlo's weekly Forum program. He was responding to a question about why President Reagan insisted last week on visiting the West German military cemetery at Bitburg where 49 Nazi SS troops are among those buried. The visit drew heated protests.

Asked if he placed the Soviets in the same category as Hitler, Galbraith replied: "Yes, there are concentration camps, goulags, countries which have been absorbed by the Soviet Union. They have the same politics of interior totalitarianism, they have the same politics of expansionism. The tactics are perhaps different, but they are both totalitarian expansionist countries which threaten their neighbors."

Knicks hit NBA jackpot lottery with Ewing

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks, who had almost nothing but had luck for almost a year, had a change of fortune that could last many years Sunday when they won the National Basketball Association lottery and the right to pick Patrick Ewing No. 1 in the June 18 draft.

"It takes a lot of the suspense out of who we're going to pick," said Dave DeBusschere, the Knicks' vice president and former star forward, after New York beat the 7-1 odds against winning the lottery over six other NBA teams. "It will mean a lot to us. Patrick is a marvelous competitor and we're happy to have him. We've had our share of bad breaks the past year and hopefully this is the start of a new regime."

"The bad breaks should be behind us. This was one of the most frustrating years of my life!" DeBusschere sees the Knicks' fortunes changing with the imminent arrival of Ewing, a 7-foot center from Georgetown University. Ewing was a three-time All-American and the 1984-85 college season's Player of the Year. With his size, speed, agility, temperament and attitude, experts view him as a player who could make an NBA team a championship contender for several years.

"I wasn't hoping for a particular team," Ewing said at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C. "I just wanted to get it over with. I was so anxious and keyed up. I think I'm capable of handling any challenge that will come."

"I think Pat would've had a significant impact on any of the seven teams," said Ewing's agent, David Falk. "But in New York, I think he's going to have a particularly high impact. And also with the league being centered in New York, he's going to have an entertainment-impact on the entire league."

The Knicks, who took the NBA champion Boston Celtics to seven games in the 1984 playoff series, finished 47 regular-season games, fell on hard times during the 1984-85 season, winning only 24 times after a terrible run of injuries to key players. Bernard King, their star forward and NBA scoring champion, played only 55 games and centers Bill Cartwright and Marvin Webster missed the entire season.

Commissioner David Stern picked the Knicks' team logo out of an envelope after six other teams were randomly chosen to determine the second through seventh selections in the draft. The seven teams had the worst records in the NBA during the 1984-85 season and were the only clubs not to make the league playoffs.

The draft order after the Knicks will be Indiana, the Los Angeles Clippers, Seattle, Atlanta, Sacramento and Golden State.

Stern first picked seven envelopes, each containing a team logo, and placed them under signs numbered 1-7. The envelopes were then opened in reverse order, 7 through 1, causing the tension to rise to great heights for the hopeful teams.

As the teams in the running for the top choice were eliminated, DeBusschere folded his hands over his mouth and bowed his head in an almost prayerful position.

"I couldn't get down to the last three. I couldn't look. I couldn't listen to the commissioner. I was so nervous. It's just such a wonderful thing," he said. "Going in, I really didn't think we had a chance. But once we got to third, I said, 'Oh God, we've got a chance.'"

When the lottery was completed, DeBusschere punched the air with his fist and unveiled a Knicks' jersey with Ewing's No. 33 and the player's name already on the back.

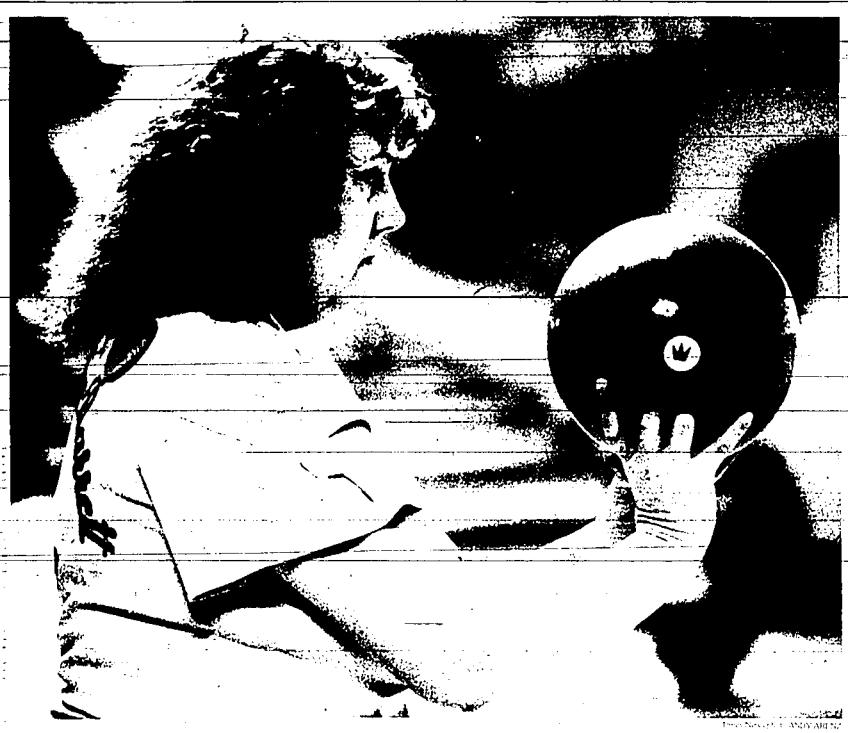

In the week preceding the lottery, the Knicks had obtained a good luck horseshoe belonging to On The Road Again, a pacer who has won nearly $2 million in purses.

The Knicks also saw it as a good omen that they won the No. 1 selection in 1966, the first year under the old coin flip system for determining the No. 1 pick in the draft each year.

The Pacers, second in the lottery, also got the second choice two years ago in a coin flip with Houston. The Rockets got another highly touted center, Ralph Sampson, who became the Rookie of the Year, while the Pacers had to settle for Steve Stipanovich.

Twin Falls team claims bowling lead

TWIN FALLS — A local team, thrown together at the last minute, highlighted several standings changes at the Northwest Women's Bowling tournament Sunday.

Chemical Supply of Twin Falls rolled a 3,074 in Class A team competition, dropping J&S Horseman's Supply, Nampa, to second.

In singles action, Gwen Terry of Tacoma, Wash., grabbed both the high game and high series leads with rolls of 267 and 650, respectively.

Karen Wasko of Twin Falls remained atop the Class B all-events standings with her 2,006, but Teresa Zundell of Rigby bumped Diana Tew's of Shoshone out of second with her 1995 roll.

In Class A doubles, Allee Surplus and Kathy Ketter of Cheney, Wash., took over the top spot at 1,192.

The final change of the day came in Class B singles where Tricia Threlfall of Caldwell rolled a 716 to knock Boise's Patty Schaeffer to second.

High gusty winds conspire against Indy qualifiers

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Nearly everyone, including the record-breaking twosome of Pancho Carter and Scott Brayton, was at least mildly disappointed as sweltering conditions and the vagaries of luck "conspired" against them in the first two days of qualifying for the May 26 Indianapolis 500.

"Wind was probably the most important thing," said Danny Sullivan, one of nine drivers to surpass the year-old, four-lap qualifying mark of 210.029 mph set by 1983 Indy winner Tom Sneva.

"The gusts were nearly constant," Sullivan said. "One lap I'd run real strong and the next lap the wind would come up and push the car

Michigan 500 winner, seemingly had little to be upset about after running four laps Saturday at the 2.5-mile Speedway ranging from 213.944 to 213.159 mph. But even after it became apparent that he had won the prestigious pole position for the first time in his 12-year career, the second-generation Indy car driver was not totally pleased.

"I was just straightaway speed... wasn't anywhere near what I'd hoped it would be," Carter said. "The first engine we had in the car was definitely the best engine — the most horsepower. But we burned a piston in it and we don't even know why. And I had the car set up a little looser than I like to have it. It definitely wasn't a perfect qualifying run."

Bobby Rahal, another of the record breakers and the third-fastest qualifier, noted, "The weather really conspired against us. The wind really came up, the humidity was high and the temperature was up. Those are the absolute worst conditions to run in with these cars."

Still, the Brownsburg, Ind., resident, whose father, Duane Carter Sr., finished fourth at Indy in 1952, was happy with his performance and the $7,500 it earned for the Valvoline-sponsored Galles Racing Team.

"I put together three good qualifying laps and I'll take the fourth (slowest) one," Carter said. "I just tried to push the car a little bit and I had to get out of it (the throttle) a little in turn three."

Brayton, like Carter, was among 27 qualifiers in Saturday's opening round of time trials. And, like Carter, he was in a March racer powered by a stock-block Buick V6 engine. Those cars became the first to start from the front row with a production-based engine since a Studebaker was on the pole in 1931.

"I think what we showed was that the V6 Buick could perform," said Brayton, whose first three laps — the last the fastest at 214.199 — surpassed Sneva's 1984 record of 210.089. "On race day, I think that we'll do even better than our qualification run. In traffic, I think we'll have an advantage because drafting definitely aids our engine."

"That leaves four more spots to be filled next Saturday and Sunday the last two days of time trials. Once the field is full, the bumping process will start, with the slowest cars being eliminated by anyone turning in a faster time. The 33 fastest cars start the race."

The field average for 29 cars is 207.872. Last year's 33-car starting field averaged an Indianapolis record 203.666. The 24-car starting field last September in the Detroit News Grand Prix at Michigan International Speedway set the all-time racing record of 204.669.

Celtics whip Sixers in playoff opener

BOSTON (AP) — Boston got ready for a tough game by playing tough games. Philadelphia got ready for it by taking six days off from any kind of games.

In beating the 76ers 108-93 in Sunday's opener of their Eastern Conference final playoff series, the Celtics found out that rest can be overrated.

"When these two teams meet, it's an instant change, pure and simple," said Boston Coach K.C. Jones. "As the game turned out, it (Boston's busy schedule) was not a factor."

The 76ers hadn't played since the previous Sunday, when they wrapped up their conference semifinal sweep of Milwaukee. The Celtics had just one day off after eliminating Detroit but showed few signs of fatigue down the stretch when Robert Parish and Larry Bird sparked a game-deciding surge.

The second game of the best-of-seven series between the teams which won the last two National Basketball Association titles will be here Tuesday night.

"We can't front them the way we did," said 76ers forward Bobby Jones. "They work the job very well."

The Celtics, who had led by 11 points late in the first half, held just an 81-83 edge with 8:08 left in the game. But they outscored the 76ers 34-10 the rest of the way with Bird getting 10 points and Parish eight.

Leading 92-89, Boston put the game away by outscoring Philadelphia 15-4 in the final five minutes.

Danny Ainge started the rally with an 18-foot jumper and Bird followed with two fast-break baskets to boost the margin to 90-89. The lead never dipped below seven points in the final three minutes and Boston scored the last eight points of the game, four of them by Bird. The second game of the best-of-seven series between the teams which won the last two National Basketball Association championships will be in Boston Tuesday night.

The second game of the best-of-seven series between the teams which won the last two National Basketball Association championships will be in Boston Tuesday night.

The Celtics were led by Kevin McHale with a career-playoff high of 28 points. Parish added 26, including 16 in the second half and Bird had 23, with 14 in the last two periods.

The 76ers were led by Maurice Cheeks with 27 points and Moses Malone with 19.

Philadelphia had six days off since finishing its previous series, while Boston worked the previous night. The Celtics showed few signs of fatigue as they unleashed their fast break.

The Celtics led most of the way, but had to fight back early in the fourth quarter when Philadelphia took its first lead since midway through the first period.

Malone's jumper put the 76ers on top 77-76 with 11:14 to play. McHale hit two free throws 12 seconds later to start an 8-2 run and give Boston the lead for good.

But Malone sank two free throws and Andrew Toney, who scored 16 points, hit a long jumper, making the score 94-83.

Pro golf Eastwood bogies for overtime win

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Bob Eastwood, given new life when Payne Stewart blew a two-shot lead on the final hole, won the Byron Nelson Classic on Sunday when the shaken Stewart made a second consecutive double bogey on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff.

Eastwood, 39, who had labored through 13 seasons before winning his first Tour title five years ago, won his one with a two-put bogey following a visit to a bunker on the first playoff hole.

It was all he needed against Stewart's enormous collapse.

Stewart, who led through most of a hot-and-windy day, held a three-stroke lead with only one hole to go.

But the gritty Eastwood, playing in front of him, ran in a 45-foot birdie putt on the 2nd hole and cut the lead to two.

Stewart, wearing the red and blue of nearby Southern Methodist University and reveling in a display of "Missy Mania" from a milling mob from nearby Dallas, then went to the tee on the last hole with a two-stroke lead.

He drove into a fairway bunker, hit his second into a greenside bunker and then skulled it out there, across the green into the fairway bunker.

And when he failed to get that one up and down, he dropped back into a tie at the end of regulation play at 272, 12 under par on the Las Colinas Sports Club course. Stewart, who didn't make a bogey over the first 17 holes of play, had a closing 68, three under par. And Eastwood played it in 67.

On the first playoff hole, Stewart drove into a fairway bunker, just got it out and put his third shot over the green. Eastwood, meanwhile, hit the sand in two and came out within about 15 feet. Stewart ran his chip, his fourth shot on the par-4 hole, a little further beyond the hole.

Both missed the putts and Eastwood tapped in for a winning bogey.

The victory, the third of his career, was worth $90,000 from the total purse of $500,000 and lifted Eastwood's winnings for the season to $116,500.

Stewart blew past Mac O'Grady, the leader through the first three rounds, with a string of three consecutive birdies beginning on the second hole.

O'Grady, the silent man who refused to talk with reporters, opened the day with a three-shot lead but, by the end of the fourth hole was two back. He didn't make a birdie until the 17th hole and, in search of the first victory of his three-year, four-career, irked back into a tie for third with Tom Watson at 275, three out of the playoff. O'Grady had a last-round 74.

Watson, a four-time winner of the event that carries the name of his friend and mentor, made a move from a position well off the pace. He was six under par for the day — and 10 under for the tournament — through 13 holes.

"What I wanted to do was get to 11 under. Put that on the board early and see what happened. Eleven under is what I had in mind.

"But I screwed up," Watson said.

He missed the green and bogeyed the 14th, got the shot back with a birdie on the 17th, then drove into the trees and bogeyed the 18th, finishing with a 66 and 275, nine under.

A pair of veterans, 45-year-old Lee Trevino and 49-year-old Chi Chi Rodriguez, tied with defending champion Craig Stadler at 277, seven under par and five back.

Trevino, the current PGA champion, had a 67. Stadler matched par 71 and Chi Chi reached a mistone with his 66.

"I had a lot of flashbacks out there," said the little Puerto Rican, who now is in his 26th season of Tour activity and will join the Seniors circuit later this season. "I'm a very lucky guy," he said. "Lots of people have trouble getting a job at 50. I've got a job waiting for me."

Rodriguez' strong finish also enabled him to reach $1 million in career earnings. He was the 51st man to reach that figure.

Whitworth posts 88th career title

SUFFOLK, Va. (AP) — Kathy Whitworth, golfer's all-time leading tournament winner, withstood the challenge of several younger players Sunday to capture her 88th career title in the $200,000 United Virginia Bank golf classic.

She netted the $30,000 victory prize by shooting a final round par-72 for a total of 207 and a one-stroke victory.

Defending champion Amy Alcott shot a 4-under-par 68 to finish second at 208 at the Sleepy Hollow golf course.

Tied for third at 210 were Ted Daniel, Alice Miller and Janet Coles.

The victory was the first in 1985 for the 45-year-old Whitworth, a legend in women's golf. It came 23 years after her first LPGA triumph in Baltimore in 1962.

"I don't find all wins great and exciting," she said. "I still have that competitive desire to win. It keeps me going."

Whitworth, who started the final round with a two-stroke lead, was never out of the lead Sunday, although Alcott and Maria Figueras-Dotti pulled even with six holes to play.

A birdie on the difficult 14th hole was the key in the stretch run, said Whitworth.

"I saw a scoreboard that Amy was creeping up, and I felt I had to get back up to even par for a chance to win," she said.

Whitworth added a birdie from seven feet on the 17th for the winning margin.

After a birdie at the 13th that pulled her even with Whitworth, Alcott was unable to birdie again until the 18th.

"I had birdie chances from ten feet on the 10th, 11th and 17th holes, and just couldn't get the putt to drop," said Alcott, the only two-time winner in tournament history.

Alcott started the final round five shots behind Whitworth, who held a two-stroke advantage over Figueras-Dotti. The second-year pro from Spain hit the skids, bogeying three straight holes starting at the 14th.

She finished in a tie for sixth at 211 after shooting a final round 74.

Miller, the leading money winner on the tour and first-round leader, made a run at Whitworth, drawing within one stroke, but bogled the 10th and 12th to ruin her chances.

The 10th hole was pivotal for Whitworth.

"I hadn't been able to get a birdie on the front nine, but when I knocked in a 25-footer on the 10th, it gave me a big lift," she said.

Whitworth now has $68,009 in 1985, to move to 10th place on the money list.

Miller's $10,833 earnings increased her total to $188,304.

Johnson hopes for pro circuit

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Olympic gold medalist Bill Johnson, saying he will not compete again on the U.S. Ski Team, is optimistic that a proposed professional tour of the world's top downhill racers will begin next winter.

"We feel we're in a strong enough position with enough athletes that the tour will get off the ground," Johnson said Sunday.

Should the pro tour fall through, however, Johnson said he would ski for another country.

"I wouldn't turn me if it said, 'Bill Johnson from Botswana or South Africa' because everyone knows I'm from the U.S.," the 1984 Olympic downhill champion said.

Johnson, in Portland during the weekend for a charity pro-amateur golf tournament, said he was frustrated with trying to maintain his amateur status. He described as hypocritical the world's ski federations and their requirement that athletes maintain amateur standing.

"To talk about amateurs at the Olympics is a joke," he said.

Johnson said he and 15 skiers met recently in West Germany to form the World Sports Association. Among the skiers Johnson said are supporting the pro tour are 1976 Olympic gold medalist Franz Klammer, Leonhard Stock, Harti Weirather and Erwin Reschl.

Another 1985 World Cup overall champion Mark Girardelli of Luxembourg; 1984 overall winner Pirmin Zurbriggen of Switzerland; and Michael Mair of Italy.

Klammer announced his retirement in March after 14 seasons on the World Cup tour and Stock, the 1988 Olympic downhill champion, was dropped from the Austrian "A" team following several seasons of poor results. Weirather and Reschl are still members of the Austrian team, and Mair remains the top Italian downhill.

"We have a group of athletes who are tired of getting ripped off by their associations and federations," Johnson said.

The new association, he added, has not discussed its plans with the International Ski Federation (FIS) or Serge Lang, founder of the World Cup and a member of FIS executive board.

"We feel we're in a strong enough position now that we won't have to deal with them."

Johnson, 25, who grew up near Portland and now lives in Malibu, Calif., said his frustration with the U.S. Ski Team reached a peak with the recent showing of the CBS-TV movie about his Olympic success, "Going for the Gold." To comply with the amateur contract, he was obligated to pay the team $25,000 from his residuals.

"I don't want to pay them for skiing," he said. "They've got to learn how to treat an athlete who's one of the top in the world. They're not treating me the way they should."

The new pro tour is looking for sponsors to pay about $7 million to get the project going, Johnson doesn't expect that to be a problem, noting that the German automaker BMW, Pepsi-Cola and Seven-Up had expressed interest.

"I think that should be easy with all the names we have on the roster of ten" to establish the tour, Johnson said in a telephone interview Sunday from the Mount Bachelor ski resort near Bend.

Johnson also said CBS has made an informal commitment to contract for TV coverage.

The tour probably would include several U.S. sites, including Aspen, Colo., Lake Placid, N.Y., and Lake Tahoe, Calif., he added.

Johnson said he planned to talk with the owners of the Mount Bachelor resort this week, adding, "I think it would be a great site, especially with me being from Oregon."

"They want to get a few more in North America, which would please me. We'll get a lot better draw this way."

Johnson said he was "the main man to get the tour going" because he's an American. "Everyone realized a tour of this kind needs to have more exposure in North America because the major money and TV are here."

The tentative schedule calls for the tour to start in North America with about four events beginning in the final week of November. That will be followed by a race in Japan and four or five in Europe. The finals would be in North America, probably in the first week of March, Johnson said.

"It's a chance to make a lot more money," Johnson added. "For me, I ski for fun, but I also ski for money. I've accomplished every goal I wanted to in skiing."

In addition to his Olympic victory at Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, Johnson won three World Cup downhill races during the 1984 season.

Kimberly drops girls coach

By CAROLYN MILLER
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — Terry Dowd, the most successful girls' basketball coach in Kimberly High School's history, has been fired following complaints aired last week by concerned parents at the Kimberly Board of Trustees meeting.

After the Idaho Class A-3 Girls Basketball Tournament in Moscow in February, which Kimberly won, Kimberly School Superintendent Richard Bauser bearing approximately 15 signatures requesting that Dowd be replaced. Some of the parents whose signatures were on the petition were present at the trustees' meeting where they formally presented their complaints to the school board and to Dowd.

Complaints were primarily directed towards Dowd's alleged use of swearing on the basketball court, a poor attitude among the girls, lack of sportsmanship and what the parents termed an uncaring attitude on the part of Dowd.

Trustee Kent Taylor monitored comments from parents, reminding these present criticism should be kept on a non-personal basis. One parent said he voted the overall opinion of the group by saying their complaint was not against Dowd as a teacher, neighbor or friend, but as a coach.

Taylor requested Dowd reply to the criticism directed towards him and Dowd said he couldn't understand how he could not be doing what he was supposed to be doing when the girls' basketball team had won 70 percent of their games. He also denied having used bad language, and said he felt he had a positive attitude about winning.

"I'll do anything to win short of cheating," he said.

A parent replied by saying, "It isn't winning or losing that is important, that's secondary. We need harmony, no disruption. I have also heard Dowd swear on the floor and I have witnesses."

Taylor thanked those in attendance and Dowd for speaking to the trustees, and asked they support the decision of the board.

Dowd has been head of the girls' varsity basketball program for five years, winning three Canyon Conference titles, two District 4 championships and the 1984 state title. Last year's team, despite finishing fourth in the Canyon Conference, won the district championship and played in the state tournament.

Dowd will be retained as assistant junior varsity volleyball coach and sixth grade teacher.

THE ACES

BOBBY WOLFF

"If a man harbors any sort of fear... it makes him landlord to a ghost."
- Lloyd Douglas

After South had gone down in today's game, he had his alibi ready. "My play-in-album would keep me from losing two trump tricks whenever West's Q-10-x-x in trumps," he claimed.

South took East's club queen with his ace and led a low spade toward dummy's jack. East won, cashed, his club king and led the club 10 to paralyze South. If South ruffed high, West's trump 10 would score another trump trick later and if he ruffed low, West's trump 10 would score quickly. West's heart king also scored and the defenders had four tricks.

"You were afraid of ghosts," said North after he had heard South's alibi. "Had West held Q-10-x-x in trumps, you couldn't have made the game anyway. West would have won his trump queen on the first lead to lead a club, and that club lead would promote West's trump 10 to a sure winner."

Quite right was North. South was chasing boyegame. He would have made the game had he played for a normal 3-2 trump break. Laying down the ace and king on trumps results in only one trump loser, and the defenders get only a club and a heart on top of that.
