 maintained official silence.
 At the Israeli Embassy here Washington, spokesman Victor Harel said: "The negotiations are at a very delicate point and we prefer to refrain from any comment."
 Berri told reporters in Beirut: "I'm waiting for an answer. Until now I don't receive any answer from the U.S. government. But I think we're in the end — and this time."
 "I'm more optimistic now... and I think it ends of this will be ended for this affair... with American help," he said in an interview with NBC News.
 Berri, who leads the Amal militia also is the justice minister in the Lebanese government, told journalists in Beirut that "many positive steps" were taken in the previous 24 hours. He would not elaborate.
 Hijackers seized the TWA jet June

14 between Athens and Rome, killed a U.S. Navy petty officer and released more than 100 people. They and Berri's Amal militia had held 40 Americans hostage until one — Jimmy Dell Palmer of Little Rock, Ark. — was freed Wednesday.
 Newspapers in Israel reported that Israel might free more of the Lebanese-held in Altif prison, more than 500 of whom are Shites, but journalists who visited the area Thursday reported no signs of unusual activity.
 Israel has said it will condition the prisoners as security releases in south Lebanon warrant, but does not want to give the impression of allowing the demands of terrorists. It freed 31 prisoners Monday, but stated officially that it was not related to the Beirut hostage situation.
 Marcel Laugel, first secretary of the French Embassy, met with Berri

Thursday and told reporters afterward: "Moving the hostages to an embassy would be a long-term get. It will take a lot of talks to get them there."
 He also discussed with Berri the fate of two French nationals kidnapped by gunmen May 22. The Amal leader promised on Wednesday that magazine writer Jean-Paul Kaufmann and scientific researcher Michel Saurat would be released with the Americans.
 The Frenchmen are among 12 Westerners, including seven Americans, held by kidnappers in Lebanon.
 Berri said at his news conference Tuesday that the kidnappers had agreed to release the two Frenchmen. He also said he had tried repeatedly to find out about the American kidnap victims, but with no success.
 Asked how he felt about the meeting with Berri, Laugel said: "I am like a bottle — half full, half empty. I am half optimistic, half pessimistic."

 American hostage ally Nancy Conwell of Houston, Texas, told ABC News in an interview Thursday that many hostages have a "profound sympathy" for their captors' cause, "for the reason the Amal have in saying, 'Israel free my people!'"
 The ABC reporter also met with the Rev. James McLoughlin of Geneva, Ill., and Ralf Traugott of Lunenburg, Mass., at an undisclosed location.
 The 36 captive passengers are being held in Moselem west Beirut and the three flight crew members are on the Boeing 727 at Beirut airport.
 Secretary of State George P. Shultz, speaking in San Francisco on Wednesday night, demanded the release of all American hostages, including the seven kidnap victims.

Court rules Jackpot casino exempt from fatality lawsuit

BOISE (AP) — A Jackpot, Nev., casino accused of serving excessive alcohol to a driver involved in a fatal accident is exempt from a lawsuit by the victims' survivors, the Idaho Supreme Court ruled in overturning an appellate court decision.
 With one justice dissenting, the Supreme Court issued its opinion on Thursday in a case stemming from the deaths of Muellic and Martin Braun. The husband and wife were killed in a head-on crash on U.S. 93 just north of the Nevada border in 1981.
 The Braun family filed a lawsuit against the driver of the other vehicle, Clovas Rader, and against Cactus Pete's Inc., a casino Rader patronized before the accident.

Disney World visitors escape flames

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Passengers aboard an elevated Disney World monorail train "showed great presence of mind," calmly climbing out windows when fire broke out in a rear car, a spokesman for the tourist attraction said Thursday.
 Six of the 200 people evacuated were taken to a hospital "for precautionary purposes" after the Wednesday night accident, said Disney spokesman Charles Ridgway. "None of them required treatment and (all) were released right away," he said.
 The six-car train, traveling on an electronically charged beam 30 to 40 feet above ground, was en route from Epcot Center to the Magic Kingdom's ticket and transportation center when the operator noticed a flashing light indicating trouble.

 were before the hijacking, and those efforts continue." While he said the administration hoped the effort to free the would also lead to release of the seven, he answered "that's right" when asked if the efforts were separate.
 Mrs. Say, whose brother was kidnapped March 16, said that after the second or third day of the TWA hijacking she was told "by the State Department that for me to try to get Terry released, or the other six hostages, through any kind of a package deal, would only complicate matters."

 Administration officials declined to publicly or privately speculate whether linking the group of seven to the 39 could throw a monkey wrench into the sensitive, diplomatic maneuverings for release of the hijacking hostages.

 Nabih Berri, the Shiite leader who is handling negotiations from the hijackers' side for the release of the 39

American hostages, has said the seven aren't under his control.
 However, Berri offered on Wednesday to release two French citizens held captive since before the hijacking. Were that to happen, it might raise questions whether he could not also have obtained the release of the other seven Americans.

Violence

 to harm others; nothing makes me angrier. That's why I'm in this field, and I'm confident that the Yale Divinity School, served in a parish and church that acts as a resource to clergy and social workers who deal with violence.
 Although the church, pastors and ministers, and congregations can contribute to continued violence in church member's family by ignoring, denying or accepting the problem, they can also help stop the abuse, she said.
 Religious value systems are the primary cause used by both victims and abusers to understand an abusive situation, she said. Yet, the religious community, clergy and lay people, tend to ignore the immense potential they have to stop the abuse and aid the social worker, she said.

Religious communities and social workers, who have traditionally viewed each other with mistrust, must begin to work cooperatively, Fortune said.
 Although religious communities and social workers have similar goals of nurturing peaceful family life, religious people tend to think that social workers are "all atheist agents of the state" or "communists" who want to break up families, she said.
 Most of the 35 social workers to whom Fortune spoke said that they believe in an organized religion, yet had many problems breaking through the barriers erected by religious abusers. They said that religion, especially in rural Idaho, is used to isolate victims and abusers from treatment.
 Some of the social workers added that they were not certain how they should deal with a person's religion when trying to end abuse.

 Fortune said that religious communities must realize that religious issues are useful in a victim's decision to seek help and that, given a rigid choice between upsetting their religious community by reporting the abuse and remaining silent about the abuse, they will almost always choose to remain silent.
 Fortune offered examples of the types of cases in which religion figures. She said that since religion teaches about marriage, parental honor, sexuality and punishment, it easily becomes entangled in cases of incest, rape, beatings and mental abuse.
 She added that pastors often testify at sentencing hearings that a sexual molester is actually a wonderful person who could harm no one and sings in the church choir every Sunday.

 Some 23 of 25 sex offenders told her they were active Christians. They asked her to "tell pastors not to forgive us so quickly" because that was the least helpful to them.
 Fortune also offered examples of how the religious community can play a positive role in stopping the abuse.
 She mentioned a Baptist minister who told a man who had just confessed incest with his 3-year-old daughter that God forgave him his sin if he truly repented. The minister immediately had the man call the Child Protection Service to arrange treatment. She said that the man was very surprised because he thought that all he had to do was repent. "The pastor knew that wasn't all," Fortune said.
 She added that religious communities could link with social workers to create family violence education and prevention programs because churches are one of the few institutions that bring people together weekly to discuss and ponder questions on the quality of life.

U.S. accuses Gorbachev of threatening to break off talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States accused Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Thursday of distortion and a "thinly-veiled threat" to break off negotiations to reverse the nuclear arms race.

"The accusation followed Gorbachev's warning that the talks would collapse if the Reagan administration kept using them "as a decoy, as a cover, for military preparations."

A State Department spokesman said the wrangling would not interfere with preparations for a meeting between Gorbachev and President Reagan. "Both the United States and the Soviet side have expressed a desire to have a meeting between the two leaders," said Edward P. Djerjelan. "That situation remains."

At the heart of the superpower dispute is the U.S. "Star Wars" program, a $26 billion research drive for an anti-missile shield. The Soviets insist the agreement in January to reopen the Geneva talks put the Strategic Defense Initiative on the bargaining table. The United States disagrees, saying research is not a "bargaining chip" and that the negotiators should get on with the job of reducing missile arsenals.

The bitter, public exchange between Gorbachev and the State Department might cloud the future of the negotiations in Geneva, Switzerland, which apparently are deadlocked.

They have already sustained one breakdown, a 15-month suspension beginning in late 1983 when the Soviets walked out to protest the deployment of new U.S. Pershing 2 and cruise missile in Western Europe, targeted on Soviet territory.

The current round is due to recess July 16. A date already has been set for the next round, according to a U.S. official who demanded anonymity. He declined to say when the two sides planned to renew their talks.

Gorbachev fired the first volley in the latest exchange, saying in a nationally televised speech on Wednesday that the Soviet Union would reassess its participation in the talks if the United States continued "marking time."

The Soviet leader said an agreement in Geneva was possible if the United States "ventured to take a more reasonable stand."

But, he said, the American negotiators were "avoiding solutions to the problems" under discussion "and using that time to intensify their programs of arms buildup — in space, on the land and on the seas."

In rebuttal, the State Department said, "we are astonished by Mr. Gorbachev's distorted characterization" of the negotiations.

"Accusing the Soviets of being the ones who were 'marking time,'" the lengthy statement read by spokesman Djerjelan said "we have yet to see any concrete new proposals for the reduction of offensive nuclear arms."

It went on to accuse the Soviets of "hypocrisy" by linking negotiations over offensive missiles, submarines and bombers to the Strategic Defense Initiative.

The Soviets are conducting their own research program and have deployed both anti-ballistic missile and anti-satellite systems, the statement said.

Like Gorbachev, however, the State Department did not close the door entirely to progress at the bargaining table. If the Soviet negotiators take a constructive approach "progress will be possible," the department said.

A U.S.-Soviet agreement in January led to the "reopening of negotiations in a new framework. As — long-range bombers, submarines and land-based missiles — are being dealt with separately from U.S. and Soviet missiles in Europe.

This time, however, a third sub-group was created to take up U.S. and Soviet defense systems, including Star Wars.

The Soviets quickly took the position that progress should be simultaneous, on all fronts, while the United States insisted missile reduction should not be "held hostage" to the dispute over defenses.

Djerjelan said there was "a conceptual inter-relationship" between offense and defense but not "linkage in terms that progress in any one of the three groups would be held hostage to progress in the others."

House votes to bar combat troops from any action against Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House overwhelmingly Thursday to bar the use of U.S. combat troops against the leftist government of Nicaragua, as the chamber headed toward approval of a 1986 Pentagon budget that freezes defense spending.

The ban was approved, 312-111, after 10 hours of sometimes-arcane debate during which the specter of the Vietnam war was often invoked by both sides.

Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., proposed the ban, arguing that it would only write into law President Reagan's stated intention not to use American soldiers to fight the Sandinistas.

But opponents said it would unfairly tie Reagan's hands in a time of attack against American people and installations overseas and would illegally limit the president's constitutional role as commander-in-chief.

The fight came as the Democratic-controlled House strove to finish work on a bill authorizing most of a proposed $292 billion Pentagon budget for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

That would be $10 billion less than the defense bill approved earlier by the Republican-run Senate, which proposed to permit military spending to rise at the expected rate of inflation. Reagan supports the Senate plan, although he originally sought a 5.9 percent hike beyond inflation.

Differences between the two measures will have to be worked out later by a conference committee.

Later Thursday, the House approved a $4 billion cut in spending next year on military retirement and directed the Pentagon to come up with reforms to a system which has been criticized as too generous.

None of the 1.4 million people now receiving retirement pay nor the 2.1 million people now in uniform would have their benefits reduced.

The cuts mean the Pentagon will only pay aside $14.2 billion next year for retirement, rather than the $18.2 billion which had been requested. The Senate proposed a smaller cut — $1.8 billion — in retirement.

The $4 billion cut was contained in the bill sent to the floor by the House Armed Services Committee. Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla., lost by a dramatic vote Thursday when he moved to restore that money.

The House also gave voice-over approval to a proposal making espionage a crime punishable by death under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

The measure was sponsored by Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., who said, "I can think of nothing that's more dramatically demonstrated the need for this than the Walker case." That was a reference to the current Navy spy case, in which four men are charging with passing secrets to the Soviet Union.

The Nicaraguan debate was the latest round in the long-running fight over the administration's Central America policy.

Budget talks recessed again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate negotiators proposed a package of $59 billion in tax increases, and minor retreats on military spending and freezing Social Security benefits, as stalled budget talks between the House and Senate revived for less than 90 minutes Thursday.

Rep. William H. Gray III, D-Pa., chairman of the House Budget Committee, said, "I'm going to look at this as a serious proposal."

"But he added, "I don't want the House conferees to make a snap judgment."

So the talks, which were convened for the first time since they collapsed Tuesday, were recessed until after Congress returns from its Fourth of July recess July 8.

The new proposals from a bipartisan group of senators appeared to be aimed more than anything at eliciting a counterproposal from the House.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said he called the public session Thursday in response to a statement by House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., on Wednesday favoring increased taxes for higher-income Social Security recipients.

But House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, one of the conferees, said O'Neill "didn't offer this as an attempt to break a logjam here."

Domenici, however, said he had considered it as a "substantial offer."

Nonetheless, the senators offered their plan, drafted by a group headed by Sens. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., and Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., the top Democrat on the Budget Committee.

Theodor Rangen's life spanned nearly a full century, two continents, and at least two nation's cultures. But throughout his life, the sharp Buhl businessman maintained a common touch with people that kept his business vital and active.

Rangen died this week at 90, a classic example of how hard work and commitment could carry a person to success in America.

Born in Norway in 1895, he and his wife, Maria Joa, came to America and Twin Falls in 1922.

By 1925, he had moved to Buhl to manage the Buhl Feed and Ice Co., of which he soon became a partner and then owner.

By the 1930s, the firm was a major fertilizer, feed and seed business which Rangen expanded in the 1950s even more by getting in on the ground floor as a supplier to the area's infant trout farms.

In the 1960s, the company added a trout food research center on Billingsley Creek in the Hagerman Valley.

Up to the time he retired in his 80s, he kept an active hand in the company, waiting on customers and providing tours of the trout facilities, often followed by trout barbecues. He was known by his employees as someone concerned about their welfare and their safety.

Beyond his own business, Rangen was an active member of the community, in the Castleford Men's Club and St. John's Lutheran Church. He and his wife celebrated their 70th wedding anniversary last fall. The couple have several children, including son Thorleif, who now manages Rangen, Inc.

Although Rangen was one of the earliest pioneers in the valley, it would be difficult to name one who had a broader impact on agriculture here.

Throughout his career, he showed both imagination and business acumen, as well as an appreciation for his employees and the potential of this valley.

In these tough economic times, Rangen's life could well serve as an example of what one man can accomplish.

The Magic Valley owes him much, and we all extend our sympathy to his family for their, and our, loss.

Jets, TV are lofty tools of privileged few

Understanding lags behind technology

BOSTON — If there is a single photograph to characterize the contrasts of late 20th-century world, I suppose it is a shot of a village farmer hoeing a field, with a jet passing overhead.

Or maybe it's the same picture taken from the window of the plane, a perfect landscape with not a single face visible below.

Either way, it is a portrait of a gap. A gap of 30,000 feet of space, and much more experience, between those in the air and those on earth. A gap between travelers who streak from one continent to another for business and pleasure, and natives who are rooted in their problems below. A gap between those who are flying over boundaries, and those who may be fighting over them.

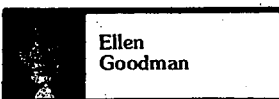

The more you study such a photograph the more you realize why air travel, the airport, the plane, has become a target of terrorism.

No, it makes no rational sense for a sect to capture a group of air passengers, for a group to apparently blow up a plane over the Atlantic, for fanatics to settle their tribal, political, religious grievances with a bomb in a Tokyo or a German airport.

There is no reason to choose the air over the sea or the land for terrorism, unless the plane is more than an easy mark.

Unless it is also now a symbol for the terrorist. A symbol of the powerful flying in comfortable machines over the less powerful. A symbol of how invisible the little people become to those who are, literally, above them.

If the plane is such a symbol, then the satisfaction of the deranged or the disaffected who drag-such a creature out of the sky and harness it for their own political use is very clear. What sweet revenge in bringing the lofty down to earth.

Like most frequent flyers, I am uneasy with this notion of the plane as unwelcome ambassador of a powerful minority. But not just out of fear.

In my daily life, I do not regard air travel as a measure of my distance from others on this earth. I think of it as an instrument of the global village.

I am struck regularly by the fact there is no major airport much more than a day away from another. I have assumed that this ability to travel brings us closer.

But as the ports of the global village become scenes of tribal terrorism, I am much less confident of that. It may be that planes have brought us no closer together than missiles which can traverse continents in minutes.

Even the words and images that bounce almost instantly up from Beirut and down from satellites to our television sets seem less like the connecting tissue today.

In the novel, "White Noise," author Don DeLillo writes, "For most people there are only two places in the world. Where they live and their TV set." But there are times when television is a lease, when we are as near and far from others as the hostages in a film clip are from their families.

We often use this other instrument of the global village the way we use the planes, to make an escape. The messages come to us in a rush, but the understanding jet lags behind. We don't necessarily get any closer.

At times, the technology that increasingly binds the privileged into "one world" increases our alienation from the rest. We forget how vulnerable this world is, really, to the local passions of distant disputes, until these passions bring us down to earth.

Just last week, while airline passengers were held captive to such passions, a Saudi prince was a passenger in outer space. Prince Sultan Salman alauderian from the east. We forgot how vulnerable in the capsule of "Discovery." He watched one long, connected expanse of water, land, mountains go by. He saw the edge of the world.

Then Prince Saud was asked to describe what he thought of the world from his new vantage point. He said what other astronauts have said: "Looking at it from here, the troubles all over the world... look very strange as you see the boundaries and border lines disappearing."

But what he did not see from his lofty technological perch was the farmer with the hoe. Or the man with the bomb.

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe.

They're full of protein and crunchy, too

Forget cattle—let's herd the 'hoppers'

I would never have believed it. And I wouldn't yet, if it hadn't appeared in a leading Idaho newspaper. As it should, that makes it true.

"Seven grasshoppers consume as much as a single grazing cow..." Gadzooks! This calls for some calculations.

The same article reported concentrations of grasshoppers up to 1,800 per square yard. But let's be conservative — we'll say 700. That's 100 cow — equivalents per square yard. There are 4,840 square yards per acre. The federal government plans to spray 3,000,000 acres. By our new grasshopper formula, we find that we are spraying an area with — let's see — 100 x 4,840 x 3,000,000 equals 242 billion cow-equivalents!

The Bureau of Land Management has been saying for years that we have been over-grazing our public land. That theory is now shot. We could have been grazing 242 billion head of cattle without doing any more damage than the grasshoppers.

The trouble with trying to graze 100 cows on a square yard is that their heads keep bumping together, so we'd better stick to grasshoppers. We have a potential bonanza here. All we have to do is find enough grasshopper herders.

Names will be a problem. In naming cows I'm partial to "Bossy," but there are a lot of good ones. With grasshoppers it's more difficult. "Hoppy" is good, or "Legs." "Jimmy" is excellent, but it's more of a cricket name.

The amount of protein we could generate each year staggers the imagination. Just looking at a grasshopper you can tell that he is bursting with protein.

Market potential is unlimited. What's crunchier than popcorn? Deep-fried grasshoppers. We could sell to every movie house in the world. When I was a kid we used to squeeze grasshoppers to get "tobacco juice." This nicotine-free substitute would have the tobacco-growing states begging for mercy while millions of dollars would pour into Idaho.

If this enterprise catches on, Julia Child will not doubt write a "Grasshopper Gourmet" cookbook. This would be the first of a new generation of diet books. Richard Simmons could dress up in a grasshopper suit while leading his group of overweights through vigorous routines.

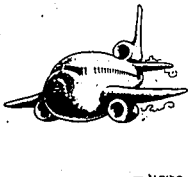

We could also tag some of these hoppers and put them into an open-top enclosure. Then we'd hold a lottery. The ticket-holder whose grasshopper jumped out first, over a ten foot wall, would win the jackpot. The proceeds could be used to double the salaries of our teachers.

There would be so many hoppers left over that we'd have to find other uses for them. Maybe we could use them for livestock feed. I'll bet a cow could eat at least seven.

THE 13 WARNING SIGNS OF IDIOCY

Letters/ Gilbert: TFEA trying to help educators flourish, not merely survive

Knighton's attitude wrong

I trust the readers of the Times-News article of June 13 ("School Board Looks to Help District Morale") were discerning as they read board member Bob Knighton's comments.

As the article indicated, central office administrator Kent Heaton advised board member Jack McVee that he was being named to a committee to try to help working morale. The committee is comprised of teachers who belong to TFEA and those who do not. You see, the morale of nearly all teachers has been devastated by the unnecessary and protracted struggle with the board to achieve decent salary and working conditions. It should not be a matter of pride to citizens of Twin Falls that our district is known as the most negative teaching environment in the state right now.

So the idea of forming a committee to boost teacher morale has been a very poor avenue to address the problem. Of course, the most positive effect on morale will occur when negotiations for the year just passed and the one forthcoming are successfully completed.

But, along comes Mr. Knighton commenting on the differences between teachers and "union" (Association members). It should have been consistently tried to separate the teacher and the union, "he" was quoted in the June 13 article. "They are not all negative, as is the TFEA," he said.

What is the message in Mr. Knighton's vitriolic attitude? Should one conclude from his comments that there are two types of teachers here, the "good" teachers and then the association teachers? Or should one conclude that only those "bad" TFEA teachers are concerned about achieving decent working conditions and dignity and fair pay?

Board negotiator, Jerry Gates, told Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service representative Tom Curdie during mediation last winter that teachers in the district need a little "ass kicking" to use his words. Perhaps Mr. Knighton was just "kicking a little ass."

Mr. Knighton may be interested to know that a May 1985 TFEA survey indicated board member and non-member support for TFEA's efforts to negotiate a contract this past year.

As the reader may recall, the TFEA recently advanced a positive proposal to settle negotiations for '84-'85 and '85-'86 with little incident. The TFEA suggested that each party mutually agree to accept the fact. Under the recommendations as a basis for the '85-'86 contract and that negotiations for '85-'86 be limited to salary and insurance issues. Ninety-seven percent of the teachers in the May survey approved of this proposal.

The board let the offer slide by. The teachers have endured an intolerable situation in Twin Falls patiently for over a year. They have taught our young people during the most negative professional year of their lives. They should be uplifted, not put down. They should be raised, not vilified.

The TFEA under president Ray Grubbs is attempting to create a positive environment where education and educators may flourish, not simply survive. Mr. Heaton and Dr. McVee deserve praise for addressing the morale problem, too.

We would welcome Mr. Knighton's cooperation and positive spirit as we try to turn this district around. What about it, Bob?

Causa seminar applauded

I would like to congratulate the members of the Idaho Congress that attended the seminars on communist aggression sponsored by the Causa. It is no doubt that each one of them put me to rest on the matter of bad press and public misunderstanding would have on their political careers. But what these men and women apparently put ahead of their own interests is the threat that communism poses on each and every freedom-loving individual.

We should thank, not condemn, those congressmen and women for seeking to become more informed on communist practices. Only when all Americans truly understand the threat that communism is, will we be able to understand and rid the world of this horrible menace to humanity.

Thanks for yard sale help

We would like to thank those people in Twin Falls for their generous donations to our yard sale. We had so many "treasures" donated that we needed to run it three days instead of the intended two.

Many people will benefit from this project as it will enable gleaners to go out and then bring back donated produce and share it with other people.

The emergency medical fund which is designed to help low income people that are needing medication, prescriptions, etc. and do not have the funds to purchase them will also benefit from this project.

Only a small amount of money per year per household is allotted as this program is on a donation basis only and the need is always great.

Once again thanks to all of you who made it possible.

Drug center a Nampa plus

This letter is in response to the statements made by Jerry Clapp in the Times-News June 27. I just wonder what kind of an administrative position he held at an alcoholic hospital to make such stupid remarks and rile up his neighbors against the relocation of a Port of Hope Center in his neighborhood. Mr. Clapp also states that the treatment center will draw undesirable people.

Baloney!

In my opinion, he must have been out to lunch or in an office shuffling papers and signing time cards!

The Port of Hope residents are the best neighbors you can have. They are so busy going to meetings, listening to lectures and watching films on alcohol and drug abuse, they don't have time to cause any problems in the neighborhood.

In fact, they are an asset to any community they locate in. The structures are painted fresh and new, the landscape is immaculate as if an oriental gardener had just trimmed the property with a pair of hand scissors!

Except for a small sign in front of the building you would never know that a group of individuals were inside recovering from alcoholism or drug abuse. Just visit or drive by a Port of Hope Center anywhere in Idaho and you will see for yourself. They enhance property values 10-fold!

The Port of Hope residents are not noisy, they do not drink or take drugs, don't throw loud night parties, play loud stereos, park old cars and junk on the property, throw the garbage out the back door, gossip, have fights or leave the premises to bother a soul. They are too damn busy working the program to get clean and sober!

Mr. Clapp also suggested that it's common knowledge there is a high incidence of drug abuse and alcoholism in the criminal element and homosexuals. I don't know where his information is coming from. Only a very small percentage of the residents of the Port of Hope are referred by the courts and then they are well-screened before entering the program.

If Mr. Clapp was informed and knowledgeable in the field of alcoholism and drug abuse he would know that each day and every hour of the day the residents live by the motto "God, grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change, the courage to change the things I can and the wisdom to know the difference..."

Senate panel votes against Reynolds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee on Thursday voted down the nomination of William Bradford Reynolds, as associate attorney general, possibly killing his chances of advancing to the Justice Department's third-ranking post.

Even President Reagan's personal lobbying wasn't enough to save the Justice Department's civil rights chief, whose nomination can now advance to the floor only by a rarely used discharge petition.

Several senators said they believed Reynolds, in his testimony before the committee, had been evasive. Opposing senators and civil rights groups also contended that Reynolds has not enforced civil rights laws protecting minorities, the handicapped and women.

At the Justice Department, Reynolds, who denied misleading the Senate, but acknowledged his recollection failed in some instances, issued a statement saying, "Obviously, I am disappointed that the Senate Judiciary Committee voted as it did. Reynolds added that "the civil rights policies of the administration have been effective in combatting unlawful discrimination of every sort. I personally remain dedicated to working with the president and the attorney general to make sure that the progress we have made over the past four years will continue throughout the second term."

John V. Wilson, a Justice

spokesman, reiterated that Reynolds "intends to remain in his present job." But Wilson said he could not comment on whether Reynolds or his administration supporters had given up eventual hope of confirmation by the full Senate.

The Judiciary Committee, whose members often debate like scholarly lawyers, erupted into turmoil at one point when Reynolds supporter Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., unexpectedly introduced a motion to advance the nomination with an unfavorable recommendation.

That final, desperation move came after the committee already had voted 10-8 against moving the nomination along with a favorable recommendation, and defeated, 9-9, a move to advance Reynolds without a recommendation.

Before rejecting Laxalt's move on a 9-9 vote, senators publicly apologized for screaming at each other. The eruption occurred after Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., committee chairman, permitted a vote on the Laxalt motion over the objection of Democrats, who tried to disrupt it by walking out.

The initial tally of 8-3 in favor of reporting unfavorably was reversed when the missing Democrats returned and were allowed to vote following the apogee.

Republican Sens. Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania and Charles McC. Mathias of Maryland both broke with the president and voted against a favorable recommendation. Specter supported the "no recommendation" and "unfavorable" recommendation motions, but Mathias did not.

Democrats hung together to oppose all the motions, including Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., the only senator who refused before the meeting to disclose his views on Reynolds.

"Mr. Reynolds' answers to numerous questions were deceptive, lacking in forthrightness, evasive and misleading," in testimony before the committee, said Heflin.

In a written statement, Reagan called it "unjust and deeply wrong (that) some members of the committee chose to use the confirmation process to conduct an ideological assault on so superbly qualified a candidate."

"Let me emphasize that Mr. Reynolds' civil rights views reflect my own; the policies he pursued are the policies of this administration, and they will remain our policies as long as I am president," Reagan said. He added that the civil rights chief "retains my full faith and confidence."

Attorney General Edwin Meese II issued a statement saying, "I share the president's deep disappointment."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the administration has not decided whether to push for a discharge petition to force the nomination to the floor.

Pentagon says tests uncovered 11 spies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lie-detector tests prompted at least 11 people in the last three years to admit they had been recruited or actually worked as spies for foreign governments, the Defense Department said Thursday.

Four other applicants for highly sensitive intelligence jobs admitted during such tests that friends or family members were engaged in espionage, the department said in a newly declassified report.

In four other cases, polygraph examinations disclosed criminal activities such as illegal drug use, the report said. In three instances, lie-detector tests were successfully used to determine the unauthorized disclosure or destruction of classified information.

In one instance, a man who was subsequently exposed as a Soviet spy "was found dead in his automobile" after he failed a lie-detector test, the report said.

The report was released one day after the House approved a plan that would permit the Pentagon to make widespread use of polygraph exams when granting or reviewing security clearances.

Dole: air terrorism global menace

MONTREAL (AP) — U.S. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, describing air terrorism as a "burgeoning global menace," called Thursday for urgent international action to safeguard world aviation.

Mrs. Dole, speaking to a special meeting of the International Civil Aviation Organization, presented a seven-point proposal to fight back against a wave of airplane hijackings and bombings.

"International terrorism is a burgeoning global menace against which this international organization must take further measures," Mrs.

Dole told the 33-member governing council of the organization, a U.N. agency based in Montreal.

Mrs. Dole urged the organization to:

- Urgently focus the agency's attention on international terrorism.
- Monitor various countries' investigations of recent attacks on airplanes and airports.
- Examine security practices for aircraft and cargo, and consider recommending "a vastly increased security program."
- Review existing standards on prevention and resolution of hijackings.

— Set up a method for international inspections of security procedures at airports around the world.

— Consider expanding the agency's training program.

— Call a special session of the full 156-nation organization membership for late summer to review progress in improving aviation security.

The agency sets standards and recommends procedures for all aspects of civil aviation, including security at international airports, but does not have authority to enforce the rules on security. Enforcement is up to each of the 156 member nations.

AFL-CIO rips court's union ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The AFL-CIO on Thursday said a Supreme Court decision barring union discipline against members who resign during a walkout will make it more difficult to conduct effective strikes.

Employers' groups hailed the ruling, saying that it took away some of the union's power to intimidate the rank-and-file.

The Supreme Court voted 5-4 to uphold a decision by the National Labor Relations Board in 1982 that union rules prohibiting resignations during a strike violate national labor law which makes restraint or coercion of employees illegal. The court declared that it was deferring to the expertise of the NLRB in the matter.

"The Reagan labor board is not worthy of such trust by the courts," said a statement by the 13.7 million-member AFL-CIO. "Its determination to invalidate union resignation rules is the product of the present board's fevered desire to restrict union self-government and to weaken the ability of unions to improve wages and working conditions through effective strikes."

The court ruled on a case involving 10 union members who quit the union, returned to their jobs during a walkout and were later fined by the labor organization. The employer filed unfair labor practice charges against the union.

"The board's decision most certainly will deprive union members and union members alone of the basic right to set their own membership rules," said the AFL-CIO, "but while this ruling will make it more difficult to conduct effective strikes, we believe that in the end the board's ultimate objective to cripple labor unions will not be achieved."

The key vote in the court ruling was cast by Justice Byron White, who in a separate concurring opinion said the NLRB "just as easily could have ruled on the union side in the case."

There is nothing in the legislative history to indicate that the board's interpretation is the only acceptable construction of the (National Labor Relations Act), White wrote. He said "the relevant sections are also susceptible to the construction urged by the union in this case."

White even went so far as to say that if the NLRB had argued in favor of the union position, "I would accord its view appropriate deference."

In the 1982 case before the NLRB, the votes in favor of management's position were cast by two appointees of President Reagan and a political independent who was a holdover from the Carter administration.

Federal land swap plan criticized at hearing

By KENNETH A. BROWN
Times-News writer

BOISE — Neither representatives from local governments, the mining industry, nor environmental groups had many positive things to say Thursday about the proposed land swap between the Bureau of Land Management and the Forest Service.

Testifying at a hearing Thursday afternoon in Boise, representatives of the three different groups criticized the two agencies for failing to give the public sufficient time or information to comment on the swap.

Many of those who testified had not even heard of the hearing until Wednesday.

Chuck Shaddock, mayor of Burley, said that while the Forest Service and the BLM spent four years developing the plan, his town has had only a few months to study and analyze the federal proposals.

Burley will lose 34 jobs under current plans for the land swap.

Shaddock equated the town's trying to challenge the plan intelligently to an amateur basketball team "trying to take the floor against the L.A. Lakers."

Shaddock asked the panel of government representatives if the hearing was intended to be substantive "or merely superficial, a time when proponents have a superior opportunity to present their position."

Thursday's hearing in Boise was the second and final administrative hearing in the state. The first was held in Pocatello on Tuesday. The two agencies will, however, be accepting written comments until July 8.

Originally no public hearings had been scheduled by either agency. Robert Rowen, a former Forest Service employee who spent 35 years with the agency, accused the two agencies of developing the plan "under a veil of secretary." Rowen said the agencies have also put considerable pressure on their staffs to back the plan, in effect, "muzzling professionals to support a nefarious political scheme."

Both national and regional representatives for each of the two agencies attended the meeting to hear public comment and give short presentations on the plan.

According to the two federal agencies, the purpose of the land swap is threefold: to enhance public service, improve management efficiency, and reduce agency cost.

Under the plan, 34 million acres would change hands, with the Forest Service gaining 2.3 million acres in the swap. The Forest Service would also gain management rights for the minerals beneath its lands, gaining control of 205 million acres of subsurface lands. Currently the BLM has subsurface rights of control over mineral beneath Forest Service lands.

According to Robert Harrison, a consulting geologist who testified at the hearing, the proposed Forest Service control of mineral rights could be a major problem for the mining and oil industry. Harrison said the Forest Service does not have the appropriate expertise or administrative structure to manage mineral resources.

Savings is the major benefit touted by the government. Once fully implemented, the land swap would save between $27 and $32 million a year, according to BLM and Forest Service figures.

A number of those who testified, however, questioned the savings figure. Nick Cozakos, a former BLM administrator, now with the Burley Chamber of Commerce, said the projected savings of the program have not been adequately documented. Cozakos also said that federal calculations have not included the cost of moving families. A substantial number of employees from each agency would be relocated in the swap.

Over two-thirds of the program's projected savings come from the 750 to 800 jobs that would be eliminated in the swap.

Alan Haurath, president of the Idaho Environmental Council, questioned the projected savings of the program and said that while staff cuts are planned, there has been "no guarantee of commensurate reductions in workload" for the two agencies.

Rowen also questioned the projected savings. "As for cost savings, it's silly to say that's the case when you consider the resource disruption, the disruption public users, and the lowering of employee morale this swap will bring about."

Rowen added that the objectives of both land agencies are to serve the public and manage public resources. The current proposal, Rowen said, "does violence to both."

Hazardous liquids stored in Buena Vista warehouse

State tells Muir to move chemicals

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — State fire officials have told Elmo Muir to immediately remove hazardous materials from the Buena Vista neighborhood warehouse he uses or otherwise comply with the Uniform Building Code.

Muir said Thursday he would like to remove the agriculture chemicals stored there to a warehouse being built for him by a construction company owned by City Councilman Jack Miller. However, Miller did not apply for a building permit for a warehouse to store hazardous materials.

"As far as I knew, occupancy was for storage," Miller said. "I think I made an assumption."

Muir called the state fire marshal's office late Thursday afternoon and said he would be removing the agricultural chemicals from the warehouse, said Deputy State Fire Marshal John Boros.

Muir should send a letter to the state by July 8 outlining how he planned to deal with the problem, Boros wrote in a letter dated Wednesday. Immediate action is necessary "due to this extreme hazardous condition," he wrote.

Boros inspected the building on June 14, after a preliminary investigation was completed by city officials at his request. The investigation followed a complaint made to the state by a Twin Falls resident alleging improper storage of hazardous materials and chemicals in the warehouse.

"The inspection revealed that more hazardous materials than allowed by the code is stored in the warehouse, Boros said.

An inventory of the warehouse on June 14 showed that 3,616 gallons of Velpar L — a flammable, liquid weed killer — were stored in the warehouse.

"All it takes is a match; it is just like gasoline," said City Fire Commander Phil Clough.

Some 675 gallons of other flammable liquids, 573 gallons of a combustible liquid, poisons and 5,241 gallons of corrosive liquids were also stored there.

The inspection showed that the building does not conform to standards for storage of hazardous materials, Boros said. The warehouse should be 60 feet from adjoining property, he said. It should be no larger than 8,700 square feet. The Buena Vista warehouse is 12,000 square feet, Boros said.

"We do have a hazardous situation," he said. "We have very volatile materials in there. One could get wet." Both highly flammable liquids and materials that can spontaneously ignite when they become wet are stored there, he said.

The letter from Boros was "out-of-order," Muir said Thursday. City inspections made once or twice a year had not found fire hazards before, he said. He refused to comment further.

Until recently, the city had not made any inspections of the warehouse, since police and fire departments were consolidated and Public Safety Director Tim Qualls look over in 1984, Clough said.

Today, Muir and Miller plan to meet with city building inspection officials to discuss constructing a separate area in the new warehouse in the Chamber of Commerce Industrial Park for storage of hazardous materials, Miller said.

He believed that Muir was quitting the agricultural chemical storage business when he submitted a request for a building permit, Miller said.

"If the end use of the building is different than what we made application for, we're going to have to be accountable for it," Miller said.

"I think the city has to have certain guidelines," he said. But he also said he "wondered if we're not over-reacting on herbicides and pesticides." See CHEMICALS on Page A8

Sierra ordered to pay

TWIN FALLS — A former president of the Sierra Investment Corp. will receive a $54,000 settlement from the company.

John Hadley filed suit in April 1984 in Fifth District Court in Twin Falls against the National Corp. of Twin Falls, formerly the Sierra Investment Corp.

The plaintiff had sought more than $400,000 in wages and damages over a claim that the company violated the terms of his contract.

In his complaint, Hadley stated he was hired May 8, 1981, as president of Sierra Investment. The six-year contract he signed with the firm called for a $48,000-a-year salary over a period of five years. He alleged he was paid through Jan. 15, 1984, but not for February or March of 1984.

Hadley also claimed the contract stipulated he receive a $250,000 life insurance policy and other benefits.

Hadley charged that in September 1983 the defendant firm stopped honoring the additional provisions of the contract. These included a membership in the Blue Lakes Country Club and his right to participate in the residential development of 25 acres of land owned by the company and located east of the Sierra Life Insurance Co. headquarters in Twin Falls.

Hadley had asked the court to award him $108,000 in salary and interest, $42,200 for benefits that were cancelled and $250,000 for losses from the proposed land development.

In an order filed June 17, the court awarded an $54,000 to Hadley. The award was agreed to by both parties.

The court order also states that Hadley will be paid $3,000 each month until the award is satisfied.

Five-term legislator from Filer

Knigge may take state post

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Republican Rep. Lawrence Knigge of Filer is expected to give up his District 23 House seat next week.

Knigge could not be reached for comment late Thursday, but Rep. Donna Scott of Twin Falls said he had accepted a position with the state Department of Agriculture in Boise. He has been considering becoming a state employee for some time, Scott said.

As an employee of the agriculture department, he would no longer be eligible to hold public office. A move to Boise would also force him to give up his seat.

The Republican Central Committee for Twin Falls County is prepared to meet, should Knigge step down, Committee Chairman Mark Stubbs said Thursday.

The law requires that the committee select three applicants for vacant House positions. The governor then makes the final selection.

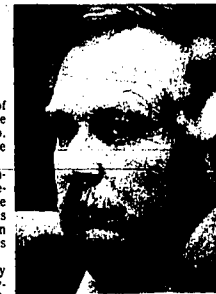

The committee would have its selections for the position made by late July or early August, Stubbs said.

Applicants may be from any area of Twin Falls County.

Doug Jones, 36, a farmer south of Filer, says he plans to apply for the position. He filled in briefly for Rep. Roy Brackett in the 47th legislative session.

Knigge has farmed land in Filer until recently. A fifth-term representative, he has been among the most moderate of the Twin Falls County delegation. In the 1985 session he served on the agricultural affairs and appropriations committees.

In May 1984, Knigge pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of reckless driving after having been charged with driving under the influence of alcohol Jan. 7.

War on 'hoppers' moving north to Blaine County

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

Wood River Valley

HAILEY — The grasshopper war has escalated into Blaine County as officials anticipate spraying about 175,000 acres of rangeland early next month to stop the invading insects.

Because of higher elevations and cooler temperatures in Blaine County, grasshopper populations have been hatching later than those in other areas of the Magic Valley, said Rod McCoy, the University of Idaho county extension agent. Some grasshoppers probably are ready to hatch, while others are in the early stages of growth in the northern county.

Weather is an important factor in the growth of the insect, McCoy added.

Grasshoppers lay eggs in the ground, which remain until hatching is complete — fully formed, as small. The insects mature and develop in six or seven different stages, marked by growth of new skeletal shells and wings. The growth and hatchings are affected by weather.

Although some of the grasshoppers plaguing Blaine County are in the early stages of development, they are capable of eating large amounts of "grass or anything," McCoy said.

Some sections in an estimated block of 50,000 acres south of Pico attacked by grasshoppers look as if the grasses had been burned away to a stubble, McCoy said. The block, along with an estimated 125,000 acres to the south and east of Carey, are targeted for spraying with Malathion under the federally funded Aid to Plant Health Inspection Service program.

In the two trouble spots, county extension agents counted grasshoppers Monday and Tuesday and found a minimum of 16 grasshoppers per square yard. On the other extreme, more than 50 grasshoppers were counted in a square yard in other sections.

Spraying is warranted when more than eight grasshoppers are found in a square yard.

McCoy said money was collected Thursday from the five private who own 7,000 acres of private land within or near the public land targeted for spraying.

Under the terms of the APHIS program, private land owners must pay for the spraying of their land.

A committee composed of ranchers and farmers will draw the money and contracts with APHIS. See HOPPERS on Page A8

Computer provides at-home banking

By DOUG WRIGHT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — How can a person withdraw money from a banking account and receive it without even leaving home?

By using the "Touch Tone Teller," a computerized banking system provided to members of the Idaho Central Credit Employees Credit Union, the first available in Idaho, allows members to talk with a voice-activated computer and make certain banking transactions over the phone 23 hours a day, says Todd Belknap, director of the credit union.

Not only can members withdraw money and have a check sent to the primary address listed on their account, they can also transfer money from one account, another and transfer money from savings or checking to make a loan payment, says Belknap.

The computer can also tell them what their current balance is and if a particular check has cleared, he adds.

To use the service, members only need to call the toll-free number from anywhere in Idaho and punch in their account and PEN numbers. The computer is actuated by the number tones and will begin a vocabulary tape which talks to the listener.

The user then follows the instructions of the tape and punches in the numbers corresponding to the type and amount of the transaction. The computer takes care of the member's wishes instantly, says Belknap.

Idaho Central is the only major financial institution in the state to offer this service, which surprises Belknap a little. "Idaho has some pretty major financial institutions and the convenience and ease of such a system would seem to make it attractive to banks," he says.

At least in Central's case, the response to the service has been "excellent" since its introduction in October 1984, says Belknap. "In May alone, we had 13,728 calls on the system."

Security on the system was Belknap's major concern when he decided to purchase the service from ECON Corp. of Wisconsin. "We were really worried about the possibility of someone else gaining access to a person's account."

However, because of the system's design and the requirement of both an account number and PEN number to activate the system, "the chance for misuse is very minimal," says Belknap.

"Even if a person, through some bizarre means, could gain access to someone else's account, the transactions available would not help him. The only real way a theft could occur is if the thief beat me to my mailbox on the day the check arrived and managed to cash the check," he said.

In the future, the credit union plans to expand the types of transactions that the phone-teller can do and make it a total information system. People will be able to find out the current interest rates offered, which checks have not cleared within certain amount parameters, like between $500 and $1,000, and balance their checkbook.

In one-and-a-half to two years we're even looking at making this a bill-paying service. All a member will have to do is enter his account number, and the amount to be paid to a certain company, and the computer will do it for him," said Belknap.

The telephone service is free of charge to any Idaho Central member, says Belknap. The credit union is open to any person. In the retail or wholesale sales community and employees of the state, family members of these people are also eligible.

Misrepresentation charged
TWIN FALLS — A 30-year-old man was charged Wednesday in Fifth District Magistrate Court with obtaining a prescription drug by misrepresentation.

Floyd Larry Fisher of 177 Washington St. S. in Twin Falls, allegedly telephoned a Twin Falls doctor June 21 and said he was a patient of the doctor's, according to a complaint filed with the court. Fisher allegedly told the doctor he was suffering from a bad toothache and later picked up Tylenol No. 3, a narcotic, from a Twin Falls drug store after the doctor called in the prescription.

The doctor later discovered his real patient was out of town and had been for some time. When Fisher allegedly called back Thursday for more pills, the doctor alerted police.

In addition to the felony charge, Fisher is being held in Twin Falls County Jail in lieu of a $2,500 bond for an alleged parole violation in California.

A public defender has been appointed to represent Fisher.

Buhl board mulls closed campus at noon for middle school students

By KAREN MAIN
 Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Buhl School Superintendent Gus Spiropoulos proposed that the middle school, whose closed campus was changed to an open campus last November, should be closed again.

The superintendent told the school board Tuesday that middle school students should not be given "free rein" to leave the grounds during lunch.

"I've never been comfortable with sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders being given that much latitude," Spiropoulos said.

Quite a few parents are concerned about the young students wandering around at lunch, and some homeowners near the school have complained about the students on their property, he said.

In November 1984, board members adopted an open campus policy because they said the district did not have enough personnel to enforce the closed campus policy which was adopted in May 1982, although the responsibility for students staying on campus should have rested with the students and their parents.

But, Spiropoulos said he would like to see the board vote in July to give the district authority to enforce the campus at the start of the next school year and offer ways to successfully enforce the policy.

The only exception to the closed campus policy should be that students who live within walking distance of the school can go home for lunch, he said.

"I'm going on record as making the recommendation that we shut the campus down," the superintendent said.

for the spraying, McCoy said. The county agents act as coordinators and gather information about grasshopper populations.

"We are anticipating going to contract Friday or Monday," McCoy said. "Our goal is to be spraying by the fifth or sixth of July. Realistically, it probably will be on the tenth of July," McCoy said.

The county and private landowners are in a race with nature to spray before the grasshoppers develop wings and fly into farmlands to feast, McCoy said. Right now, the insects are just "hopping around" in the desert.

If the weather becomes hot enough, some grasshoppers may develop wings as early as the first week in July, he said.

Since Blaine County is in the "tail end" of the spraying program, McCoy said he fears the federal program will run out of funds before the committees can contract for spraying. The program, which ran out of money once before, can only be refunded so often before funding dries up completely.

"Once that happens, we're a dead duck," McCoy said.

Some Blaine County farmers are not waiting for the federal spraying program and have attempted to rid the grasshoppers from their own rangeland adjoining their farms.

One farmer recently sprayed 1,000 acres east of Carey where small, but ravenous grasshoppers numbered about 150 per square yard. The farmer sprayed early enough to save most of his crop, McCoy said.

Another farmer reported to the county agent that 20 to 30 acres of his barley fields west of Carey have been damaged. That farmer also is spraying.

Elsewhere in southern Idaho, late-starting grasshopper populations are just now being sprayed. Such was the case in Adams County, said Don Nielson of the APHIS office in Twin Falls.

Nielson also reported that blocks of land already targeted for spraying have been expanded because of late time between hatchings.

Gov. John Evans will be taking a firsthand look at the grasshopper problem in the southern part of the state this week. According to his office, Evans visited the Twin Falls APHIS office Thursday and will fly to Gooding and Pocatello.

Mountain garden near Ketchum opens colorful display for summer

KETCHUM — The Dorothy Perry Garden, nestled in the Clear Creek Canyon south of Ketchum, is now open for its fourth summer.

The gardens display a profusion of color in contrast to the sagebrush hillsides nearby and is a welcome sight for sore eyes.

The English-style garden, with flowers adapted to the Wood River Valley's high altitude, was started in 1952 when Dorothy Perry and her husband, Clark, settled here.

The gardens were opened to the public in 1982, one year after Dorothy Perry died. Her daughter, Polly Bledbach, now manages the gardens and provides guided tours on Thursdays throughout the summer months.

Bledbach said the garden is a non-profit foundation which aims to teach people about horticulture.

"The main purpose of the gardens is for people to be able to come and see what grows well in this climate. Anything that grows here successfully can also grow anywhere down south or in Ketchum," she said.

Bledbach shares her mother's gardening experiences with the public so individuals can be more successful with their own gardens, she said. It encourages questions from visitors.

The garden contains over 80 different varieties of perennials, from the tall delphinium, hollyhocks, veronicas and peonies to the smaller forget-me-nots, baby's breath, wild columbine, lily-of-the-valley, phlox, lupine and English daisies.

Maintaining the garden grounds is a full-time job, said Bledbach. Along with two helpers and an intern from the horticulture program from Boise State University, Bledbach keeps this quiet mountain oasis in perfect condition.

Due to the early growing season this year, the garden will remain open each Thursday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. until mid-August. Persons wishing to view the grounds are asked to make reservations by calling 725-5042. The tour is free of charge.

Miss Rodeo title draws 12 students

FILER — Twelve young horsewomen from throughout the state will compete for the title of Miss High School Rodeo Idaho during the state high school rodeo now under way at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds here.

There are two contestants from each district in the state. The girls, who have already won several contests to win the district title, have been put through a rigorous schedule this week, including a written test on high school rodeo rules, interviews ranging from world events to horsemanship, as well as actual horsemanship.

The contestants include Dalana Jolley, Albion, and Vicki Crafton, Buhl, both District 6; Darcy Gelger, New Meadows, and Shawna Elberly, pesticides.

The code is less strictly enforced in other areas of the state, including Jerome County, he said.

Plans for the warehouse under construction have been approved for a general warehouse. But current plans for steel frame construction with wood siding are not acceptable for storage of hazardous chemicals, building inspectors say.

Neighbors of the warehouse Muir uses have for years opposed storage of farm chemicals near their homes.

A copy of the letter from Boros was sent to Edna Ratis, a Buena Vista neighborhood resident, but she could not be reached Thursday for comment.

Mother hits roof after discovering daughter uses birth control pills

DEAR ABBY: Three weeks ago I accidentally found my daughter's birth control pills, and I haven't been able to sleep since. She's 18, a straight-A student and active in our church. She's worked since she was 16 and saved every penny for college. She was a perfect child (we thought). She's planning to go away to college in the fall.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

When I found those pills I hit the ceiling, and told her since she's having sex, she should get married and forget about college. I didn't really mean it, but she hurt me so bad I wanted to hurt her.

Her steady boyfriend is in his second year of college. He still picks her up but doesn't come in the house. We used to think he was tops. He doesn't drink or smoke and he goes to our church.

My husband was heartlacked when I told him, but he hadn't said anything to our daughter. He's too embarrassed to guess maybe we should be thankful that she was smart enough to go to a doctor for pills, but I cannot condone premarital sex. What should I do?

DEAR ABBY: Amy and I are getting married next month. We are both 23 and very much in love, but we're having a minor disagreement. We can't seem to settle. I have never smoked, but Amy has been a heavy cigarette smoker since high school, and she's made it very clear that she plans to smoke at our wedding reception. She says that after the ceremony she will "need" a cigarette to calm her nerves, and she's sure our guests will understand.

I told her that the sight of a bride smoking a cigarette in her bridal gown and veil would be disgusting, and probably a breach of etiquette.

I've sadly accepted Amy's addiction to nicotine, but it is unreasonable to ask her to refrain from smoking on this very special occasion?

DEAR ABBY: For years I've been trying to find the answer to this question: How did "Peggy" come to be the nickname for "Margaret"?

I hope you or one of your readers can come up with the answer, as I have been trying for years to find out without success.

My given name is Margaret, but I have always been called Peggy. I like the name of Peggy, but when people ask me how Margaret came to be Peggy, I don't have an answer.

PEGGY (REALLY MARGARET)
DEAR PEGGY: If someone out there knows the answer, I'll pass it along. Readers?

DEAR ABBY: What advice have you for a lady when she is out to dinner in a top restaurant with an older gentleman she knows to be very well-to-do, and he leaves a very poor tip? The service on all of these occasions was excellent.

ABBY: I'm talking about a "tip" of $1 for a dinner check in the neighborhood of $50.

This has occurred several times with the same gentleman. So far, I've pretended not to notice, but I've been so embarrassed that I've considered leaving a few dollars of my own on the table. Of course, I'd do this subtly so he wouldn't see me.

—EMBARRASSED
DEAR EMBARRASSED: (A) Tell him you'd be glad to "pitch in" (for the tip if he's a little short). (B) Add enough of your own money to his to make it a respectable tip. But why be subtle? If he sees you, so what? It might help loosen the old tightwad up a bit.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38823, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

—DISAPPOINTED MOM
DEAR MOM: You shouldn't "do" anything other than accept the fact that your daughter is no longer a minor and you can't control her actions.

I am not asking you to condone premarital sex, but I urge you not to destroy your once wonderful mother-daughter relationship because you don't see eye to eye on this one issue.

Be thankful she's not risking pregnancy, and love her for her adultness.

Anniversaries The Pugmires

KING HILL — Howard and Mattilda Pugmire, former King Hill residents, will be honored at an open house Saturday in Pocatello for their golden wedding anniversary.

Friends are invited to call from 5 to 8 p.m. at the Joviet Reception Center, corner of McKinley and Elm Street, across from the Westwood Mall in Pocatello.

The couple was married July 25, 1935, in Blackfoot. He worked for the Union Pacific Railroad Co. for 40 years. She was a 4-H leader, active in the King Hill Grange and Scouts. They lived in Pocatello since 1937, except from 1968 to 1976 when they lived in King Hill.

The couple has 10 children, 25 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Lack of help brings end to Hagerman art show

HAGERMAN — The arts and crafts show held annually since 1977 in the Hagerman City Park will not be held this year.

Sumnerfest, featuring the work of 50 to more than 75 artists each year, was always a good show, says organizer Fern Pothier. But, she says, not enough people are helping to produce the show, and it is too much work for one person.

"I came to Hagerman to retire and didn't," Pothier says. "I'm going to rest on it awhile and see what happens. It might be that somebody might pick it (Sumnerfest) up and start it again."

The Hagerman Valley Historical Society has helped sponsor Sumnerfest for the last two years, Pothier explains, but interest in the show has dropped off, and no one has volunteered to be the new chairman. So, she says, Sumnerfest is ended for this year — and maybe permanently.

Guerrillas urge violence on Apartheid

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The African National Congress on Thursday called for a full-scale uprising against white rule, urging black police and soldiers in South Africa "to turn your guns against your masters."

"The end of apartheid is near," the guerrilla organization said in its "call to the people," sent from ANC's office in Lusaka.

It was the strongest such summons ever issued by the black nationalist group, which was formed in 1912, banned by the government in 1960, and which abandoned its policy of non-violent resistance the following year.

The ANC also said South African police set a trap that was responsible for the hand grenade and bomb explosions that killed eight blacks and wounded seven in townships east of Johannesburg on Wednesday.

It said police posing as guerrillas gave grenades to inexperienced activists and "deliberately instructed them wrongly," causing the grenades to blow up in their hands.

Police headquarters in Pretoria gave a different account. It said the grenades or bombs went off in the young men's hands as they prepared to attack black policemen's homes in a "coordinated terrorist attack." The wounded men were hospitalized under police guard. News reports said they could face charges of sabotage or terrorism.

The multiracial South African Council of Churches rejected the police account, saying it shared "the belief of the people (in the townships)" that the grenade incidents "came from the side of the authorities." The council suspended a national meeting in Johannesburg so delegates could attend a memorial service for grenade victims in Duduzi township.

To cover their desertion, the militiamen asked that the Finnish soldiers stage a raid on their position so it looked as if they had been forced to surrender.

Finns aid defectors from Israeli-backed militia

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A U.N. investigation has found that Finnish peacekeepers staged a fake attack and helped members of an Israeli-backed militia defect to the Shillite militia area in south Lebanon, U.N. sources said Thursday.

The finding is contained in a report of the June 7 incident that prompted the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army to take hostage 25 members of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon. All the U.N. soldiers were released unharmed by June 15 although 21 Finns were held for eight days.

U.N. Spokesman Timur Goxsel declined to comment on the findings of the investigation headed by Col Jean Pons, deputy commander of the 18-nation, 5,700-member U.N. force.

The report was submitted to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar and was to be officially released in New York.

Eleven militiamen, all Shiite

Muslims, deserted from the predominantly Christian South Lebanon Army with Finnish help and were not the victims of a forcible abduction by Israeli soldiers as claimed by militia chief Antoine Lahd, said U.N. sources who were familiar with the report's findings.

But the investigation also determined that the Finns did not coordinate their actions with U.N. headquarters.

The sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said U.N. investigators determined that the Finnish commander, V. Hakala, had been approached by the 11 militiamen. They told him they wanted to desert but feared reprisals by Lahd's militia against their families.

To cover their desertion, the militiamen asked that the Finnish soldiers stage a raid on their position so it looked as if they had been forced to surrender.

British survey ship detects faint signals at crash scene

DORK, Ireland (AP) — Faint signals have been detected from the seabed that could be from the flight recorders of the Air-India jumbo jet that crashed in the North Atlantic with the loss of 329 lives, investigators said Thursday.

HMCS Challenger, a British seabed survey ship, "has intercepted a weak and intermittent signal, but we can't confirm that it is from the flight recorders," said a spokesman at the Royal Navy's command center at Northwood, northwest of London.

The ship "has not been able to hold the signal long enough to locate and analyze it," he said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Investigators fear the missing "black box" recorders are more than a mile under the sea on the ocean floor, possibly lying in mud. The Boeing 747 crashed Sunday about 120 miles southwest of Ireland.

Experts examining the wreckage say the jet broke up in the air on the flight from Canada to India via London. Debris was scattered over an area five miles long and only 131 bodies were recovered.

Voters oust city government

POCATELLO (AP) — Voters turned out in near record numbers to oust the city's 34 1/2-year-old council manager government by a near 700-vote margin. In all, 8,106 ballots were cast Wednesday, or about 30 percent of the 26,000 registered voters in Pocatello. Unofficial results show that 4,401 people voted against retaining the present system. About 3,700 voted in support of the seven-member council and City Manager Charles Moss. A simple majority was needed to maintain the current system, which opponents called "socialistic" and unresponsive to voters. The Pocatello mayor currently holds a titular position and is appointed by fellow council members. Supporters of the city manager format argued that it has given Pocatello an efficient government since 1951 and the change would centralize too much control with an elected mayor not subject to oversight by the council.

Plan will aid small business

SPOKANE (AP) — Fledgling small businesses stand a better chance of survival under an incubator concept designed to help them through difficult start-up periods, Idaho Gov. John Evans says. The concept is evident in Idaho, Evans said in a speech prepared for a Thursday conference sponsored by the federal Small Business Administration. One example is the work of Boise businessman Edward Hight, who has provided space for a number of budding entrepreneurs and has shared services with them, Evans said. He said that 99.8 percent of the businesses in Idaho employ fewer than 500 people, and 92 percent have fewer than 20 employees. "As you can plainly see, the economic health of our state is directly related to the ability of small business to grow and expand," Evans said.

Rexburg policeman resigns

REXBURG (AP) — Rexburg Police Lt. Clifford Hammer has resigned, citing "discrimination, persecution and harassment" because he blew the whistle on a captain charged with taking a handgun to work with the department about 14 years ago. Hammer, who had been with the department about 14 years, said Thursday he brought about the investigation of Don Fowler, a captain in the Rexburg department. Fowler is awaiting a preliminary hearing on a charge of grand theft. He is accused of taking a .32-caliber pistol seized as evidence and selling it to another Rexburg police officer, Mike Dyer, who has since resigned. Fowler was on paid leave until returning to work in April. Hammer declined to comment on his resignation or the Fowler case until he talks to an attorney.

Judge sticks to death rulings

BOISE (AP) — Second District Judge George R. Reinhardt refused to reconsider the death sentences handed two Texas brothers convicted of killing a Marine Corps captain and his wife in north-central Idaho. Attorneys for Bryan Stuart Lankford, 24, of Conrow, Texas, and Mark Henry Lankford, 28, of Houston, had sought post-conviction relief hearings, which concluded Wednesday at the Idaho State Penitentiary in Boise. The Lankfords were convicted separately last year of first-degree murder and sentenced to death for the June 21, 1983, slayings of Robert and Cheryl Bravence.

Cities lose legal fees battle

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Two Oregon cities and four Oregon public utility districts, successful defendants in the Washington Public Power Supply System nuclear plant cleanup case, will have to bear their own legal costs, the Washington Supreme Court ruled today. The court held unanimously that the utilities weren't sufficiently overburdened by having to fight their case in Washington to bring into play the state's law allowing courts to grant legal fees to out-of-state defendants who prevail. No specific amount of fees and costs was sought, but lawyers for the utilities estimated the total at more than $700,000 during arguments.

Escaped jail inmates caught

BOISE (AP) — Two minimum-custody inmates who escaped from the Idaho State Penitentiary Wednesday afternoon are back in custody, an Ada County Sheriff's detective says. Bruce Blum and Wade Galley, both 29, are believed to have left the prison area south of Boise by car on Wednesday. They were discovered missing during a routine security check of the prison's greenhouse area. But Detective L.D. Smith said Boise police took both men into custody without incident Thursday morning after they were spotted by an off-duty Ada County sheriff's deputy near a Boise exit of Interstate 84.

Craig says Canadians won't curb wood flow

WASHINGTON (AP) — A meeting with the premier of British Columbia on the possibility of setting voluntary limits on the importation of Canadian softwood lumber was "totally unproductive," Congressman Larry Craig says. The Idaho Republican, along with Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, met with Premier William Bennett in Washington Thursday, but left disappointed with his response to their requests aimed at helping the foundering Northwest timber industry. Craig and Symms are among lawmakers upset that Canada's subsidy to its domestic timber industry results in what they consider the dumping of cheap Canadian softwood onto U.S. markets. "I have been told by many members of the House and the Senate who met with Mr. Bennett that he would not, even consider any voluntary agreement with the U.S. to limit their softwood coming into our country," Craig said. "My meeting with Mr. Bennett had a similar conclusion," he said. "I would say that this leaves relations rather tenuous." Craig moderated a meeting on the issue Tuesday between 60 members of the House and Senate and Reagan administration officials including Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige. Leaders of both parties came away from that meeting convinced that Congress would have to legislate limits to Canadian imports if no voluntary action was taken soon, he said.

High-tech industry stalled

BOISE (AP) — New industry won't flow to Idaho just because it's a good place to live; it must be pursued aggressively, says the manager of Boise plant employing nearly half of the state's high-tech industry. Regardless, said Doug Carnahan, in a Thursday appearance before the Idaho Press Club, there appears to be little prospect for big expansion in Idaho's young electronics industry in the near future. Carnahan earlier this month succeeded Ray Smelek as general manager of Hewlett-Packard's Boise operations. The Boise plants employ about 2,000, all "high tech" industries in the state have about 6,000 workers. He said there isn't anything particularly wrong with the industry, except that it's suffering from "inflation" from producing more than the market can absorb. But Carnahan said it isn't up to the

FERC launches 16-month river study

By SUSAN GALLAGHER The Associated Press

BOISE (AP) — Federal regulators have started a 16-month process that will examine how proposals for formal hydropower projects cumulatively would affect the the Salmon River Basin. Federal Energy Regulatory Commission representatives were in Boise on Thursday to start building a record the commission will evaluate when deciding requests for hydropower licenses and license exemptions affecting the Salmon basin. About 20 such proposals are on file with FERC which has been swamped with hydropower applications since Congress passed incentive legislation in 1978. "Obviously, there may be winners and losers in this process," said Ken Pusateri, FERC's deputy executive director in Washington, D.C. "Not everybody is going to be satisfied with it." FERC staff members held an all-day session to collect public comment on the evaluation strategy intended to measure how hydropower projects would affect fish habitat and other resources. The Salmon is one of three Western river basins FERC has targeted for comprehensive evaluations. The others are the Owens River Basin in California and the Snohomish River Basin in Washington. Pusateri said members of the

FERC staff spent the past week in Idaho to learn about hydropower proposals and issues surrounding them. "We've walked the projects from top to bottom the last three days," he said. Speakers at Thursday's session included a rancher who wants to develop a power project in the Riggin area, where he lives. David Cereghino, also representing other prospective hydropower developers in the Riggin area, told the FERC staff he questions the need for the evaluation process, but is prepared to cooperate. "What we would like to do at this point is get on with it," he said of the application and development steps. Cereghino said during a break from the proceeding that he has spent four years and $50,000 preparing for the project he envisions as a way to supplement his cattle business and improve the irrigation system on his ranch. At the outset, there was no indication from regulators that securing approval would take so long, he said. "Time is money in this process," Cereghino said. "If we can be delayed long enough, we could fall out strictly from economics." On Thursday the FERC panel also heard from a National Marine Fisheries Service administrator who said the evaluation approach allows little chance to tailor studies to individual basins.

$6.7 million gap could squeeze schools

Board wants legislative session to fix budget

NEW MEADOWS (AP) — If there's a big revenue shortfall in the next state budget, the Idaho Board of Education says the Legislature should hold a special session to deal with it. The board, meeting here Thursday, heard a report from state budget officials that there may be a $6.7 million shortage of state revenue in the budget which ends Sunday. But Mary Peterson, the governor's budget director, said there will be no holdback this year. State agencies have been instructed to carry bills over into the next fiscal year, he said. That will compound problems in the new budget, Peterson said. Counting the carryover shortage, the state could be up to $17 million short in the budget starting July 1, he said. That could have a big impact on education budgets, which take three-fourths of all state general tax revenue.

error and legislators to meet in a special session to work on the revenue problems. It will be sent to all state legislators, board members said. Evans said if the shortage is covered by a holdback ordered by the governor, state agencies, and education in particular, will suffer. He said if that happens, there will be no urgency for the Legislature to deal with the shortage when it convenes next winter. And agencies will lose from the base used to figure funding needs, he said. "I don't want to minimize the problem," said Peterson. He said the best way to handle the current budget's shortages is to carry them over into the next fiscal year, then deal with both years' shortages at the same time. He said revenue figures are still estimates, and accurate reports won't be available until the middle of next month. Since 75 percent of general state tax revenues go to education, any cutback or holdback would strongly affect public schools and higher education.

The plan lists five goals: — Maintaining and enhancing quality in higher education. — Assuring that higher education is both affordable and accessible to Idaho students. — Maintaining diversity and avoiding unnecessary duplication. — Promoting Idaho's economic revitalization. — Strengthening Idaho's system accountability.

Jerry Evans, state superintendent of public instruction, said the shortage could be even higher. "The shortage could be greater than it appears," said Evans. He said the state made a "horrendous mistake" earlier this year when a $5.8 million reserve fund was used to balance the state budget. A short time later, the board approved a resolution, urging the governor and legislators to meet in a special session to work on the revenue problems. It will be sent to all state legislators, board members said. Evans said if the shortage is covered by a holdback ordered by the governor, state agencies, and education in particular, will suffer. He said if that happens, there will be no urgency for the Legislature to deal with the shortage when it convenes next winter. And agencies will lose from the base used to figure funding needs, he said. "I don't want to minimize the problem," said Peterson. He said revenue figures are still estimates, and accurate reports won't be available until the middle of next month. Since 75 percent of general state tax revenues go to education, any cutback or holdback would strongly affect public schools and higher education.

In other action, the board took its first look at a new five-year plan for higher education. It will be reviewed and adopted before the Legislature convenes in January.

Crews bring Oregon blaze under control

PORTLAND (AP) — The state's largest blaze of the year was brought under control Thursday after it consumed 34,435 acres of southeast Oregon rangeland. The fire broke out Sunday night after lightning struck 17 miles south of Rome. No injuries or property damage was reported from the fire, which scorched sagebrush and grass in remote Malheur County. Crews began leaving the scene Thursday after the blaze was controlled, said U.S. Bureau of Land Management spokesman Bill Kell. At its height, 122 firefighters, 28 engines, three water tankers, two helicopters, two bulldozers and a grader were battling the blaze.

Taking advantage of roads and natural breaks, crews managed Wednesday to draw a 21-mile line to contain the blaze and winds cooperated by diminishing from 35 mph to about 10 mph, Kell said. Meanwhile, two of five men burned while fighting a blaze last weekend at the Kah-Nee-Ta resort in central Oregon remained in critical condition Thursday, said a spokeswoman at Portland's Emanuel Hospital. The other three remained hospitalized in serious condition. The cause of the 920-acre blaze on the Warm Springs Indian Reservation still is being investigated, said a spokesman for the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Guerrillas urge violence on Apartheid

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The African National Congress on Thursday called for a full-scale uprising against white rule, urging black police and soldiers in South Africa "to turn your guns against your masters."

"The end of apartheid is near," the guerrilla organization said in its "call to the people," sent from ANC's office in Lusaka, Zambia.

It was the strongest such summons ever issued by the black nationalist group, which was formed in 1912, banned by the government in 1960, and which abandoned its policy of non-violent resistance the following year.

The ANC also said South African police set a trap that was responsible for the hand grenade and bomb explosions that killed eight blacks and wounded seven in townships east of Johannesburg on Wednesday.

It said police posing as guerrillas gave grenades to inexperienced activists and "deliberately instructed them wrongly," causing the grenades to blow up in their hands.

Police headquarters in Pretoria gave a different account. It said the grenades or bombs went off in the young men's hands as they prepared to attack black policemen's homes in a "coordinated terrorist attack." The wounded men were hospitalized under police guard. News reports said they could face charges of sabotage or terrorism.

The multiracial South African Council of Churches rejected the police account, saying it shared "the belief of the people (in the townships)" that the grenade incidents "came from the side of the authorities." The council suspended a national meeting in Johannesburg so delegates could attend a memorial service for grenade victims in Duduzwa township.

Finns aid defectors from Israeli-backed militia

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A U.N. investigation has found that Finnish peacekeepers staged a fake attack and helped members of an Israeli-backed militia defect to the Shiite militia Amal in south Lebanon, U.N. sources said Thursday.

The finding is contained in a report on the June 7 incident that prompted the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army to take hostage 25 members of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon. All the U.N. soldiers were released unharmed by June 15 although 21 Finns were held for eight days.

U.N. Spokesman Timur Goxsel declined to comment on the findings of the investigation headed by Col. Jean Pons, deputy commander of the 10-nation, 5,700-member U.N. force.

The report was submitted to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar and was to be officially released in New York.

Eleven militiamen, all Shiite

Moslems, deserted from the predominantly Christian South Lebanon Army with Finnish help and were not the victims of a forcible abduction by Finnish soldiers as claimed by militia chief Antoine Lahd, said U.N. sources who were familiar with the report's findings.

But the investigation also determined that the Finns did not coordinate their actions with U.N. headquarters.

The sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said U.N. investigators determined that the Finnish commander, V. Hakala, had been approached by the 11 militiamen. They told him they wanted to desert but feared reprisals by Lahd's militia against their families.

To cover their desertion, the militiamen asked that the Finnish soldiers stage a raid on their position so it looked as if they had been forced to surrender.

British survey ship detects faint signals at crash scene

CORK, Ireland (AP) — Faint signals have been detected from the seabed that could be from the flight recorders of the Air-India jumbo jet that crashed in the North Atlantic with the loss of 329 lives, investigators said Thursday.

HMS Challenger, a British seabed survey ship, "has intercepted a weak and intermittent signal, but we can't confirm that it is from the flight recorders," said a spokesman at the Royal Navy's command center at Northwood, northwest of London.

The ship "has not been able to hold the signal long enough to locate and analyze it," he said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Investigators fear the missing "black box" recorders are more than a mile under the sea on the ocean floor, possibly buried in mud. The Boeing 747 crashed Sunday about 120 miles southwest of Ireland.

Experts examining the wreckage say the jet broke up in the air on the flight from Canada to India via London. Debris was scattered over an area five miles long and only 131 bodies were recovered.

"The private sector needs to be more competitive, more productive," he said. "We need to pay attention to our customers' needs and you will see the industry flourish again." Carnahan said multinational corporations such as Hewlett-Packard are finding an increasing need to build production facilities abroad, where the markets are. The market operations such as Boise aren't likely to grow in the near future. He projected his company's growth prospects in Idaho in the near future at zero to 10 percent per year — and likely at the low end of that. Carnahan is general manager of Hewlett-Packard's facilities in Bristol, England, a post assumed by his Boise predecessor, Ray Smelek.

FERC launches 16-month river study

By SUSAN GALLAGHER The Associated Press

BOISE (AP) — Federal regulators have started a 16-month process that will examine how proposals for small hydropower projects cumulatively would affect the Salmon River Basin.

Federal Energy Regulatory Commission representatives were in Boise on Thursday to start building a record the commission will evaluate when they request for hydropower licenses and license exemptions affecting the Salmon Basin. About 20 such proposals are on file with FERC, which has been swamped with hydropower applications since Congress passed incentive legislation in

FERC staff members held an all-day session to collect public comment on the evaluation strategy intended to measure how hydropower projects would affect fish habitat and other resources.

The Salmon is one of three Western river basins FERC has targeted for the comprehensive evaluations. The others are the Owens River Basin in California and the Snohomish River Basin in Washington.

Pusateri said members of the FERC staff spent the past week in Idaho to learn about hydropower proposals and issues surrounding them. "We've walked the projects from top to bottom the last three days," he said.

Speakers at Thursday's session included a rancher who wants to develop a power project in the Riggin's area, where he lives. David Cereghino, also representing other prospective hydropower developers in the Riggin's area, told the FERC staff he questions the need for the evaluation process, but is prepared to cooperate.

"What we would like to do at this point is get on with it," he said of the application and development steps. Cereghino said during a break from the proceeding that he has spent four years and $50,000 preparing for the project he envisioned as a way to supplement his cattle business and improve the irrigation system on his ranch. At the outset, there was no indication from regulators that securing approval would take so long, he said.

"Time is money in this process," Cereghino said.

"If we can be delayed long enough, we could fall out strictly from economics." On Thursday the FERC panel also heard from a National Marine Fisheries Service administrator who said the evaluation approach allowed little chance to tailor studies to individual basins.

$6.7 million gap could squeeze schools

Board wants legislative session to fix budget

NEW MEADOWS (AP) — If there's a big revenue shortfall in the next state budget, the Idaho Board of Education says the Legislature should hold a special session to deal with it.

The board, meeting here Thursday, issued a report from state budget officials that there may be a $6.7 million shortage of state revenue in the budget which ends Sunday.

But Marty Peterson, the governor's budget director, said there will be no holdback this year. State agencies have been instructed to carry bills over into the next fiscal year, he said. "That will compound problems in the new budget," Peterson said. Counting the carryover shortage, the state could be up to $17 million short in the budget starting July 1, he said. That could have a big impact on education budgets, which take three-fourths of all state general tax revenue.

Jerry Evans, state superintendent of public instruction, said the shortage could be even higher. "The shortage could be even greater than it appears," said Evans.

He said the state made a "horrendous mistake" earlier this year when a $5.8 million reserve fund was used to balance the state budget.

A short time later, the board approved a resolution, urging the governor and legislators to meet in a special session to work on the revenue problems. It will be sent to all state legislators, board members said.

Evans said if the shortage is covered by a holdback ordered by the governor, state agencies, and education in particular, will suffer. He said if that happens, there will be no urgency for the Legislature to deal with the shortage when it convenes next winter.

And agencies will lose from the base used to figure funding needs, he said.

"I don't want to minimize the problem," said Peterson. He said the best way to handle the current budget's shortages is to carry them over into the next fiscal year, then deal with both years' shortages at the same time.

He said revenue figures are still estimates, and accurate reports won't be available until the middle of next month.

Since 75 percent of general state tax revenues go to education, any cut-back or holdback would strongly affect public schools and higher education.

In other action, the board took its first look at a new five-year plan for higher education. It will be reviewed and adopted before the Legislature convenes in January.

The plan lists five goals: — Maintaining and enhancing quality in higher education. — Assuring that higher education is both affordable and accessible to Idaho students.

— Maintaining diversity and avoiding unnecessary duplication. — Promoting Idaho's economic revitalization. — Strengthening Idaho's system of accountability.

Crews bring Oregon blaze under control

PORTLAND (AP) — The state's largest fire of the year was brought under control Thursday after it consumed 34,435 acres of southeast Oregon rangeland. The fire broke out Sunday night after lightning struck 17 miles south of Rome.

No injuries or property damage was reported from the fire, which scorched sagebrush and grass in remote Malheur County.

Crews began leaving the scene Thursday after the blaze was controlled, said U.S. Bureau of Land Management spokesman Bill Kell. At his height, 122 firefighters, 28 engines, three water tankers, two helicopters, two bulldozers and a grader were battling the blaze.

Taking advantage of roads and natural breaks, crews managed Wednesday to draw a 21-mile line to contain the blaze and winds cooperated by diminishing from 35 mph to about 10 mph, Kell said.

Meanwhile, two of five men burned while fighting a blaze last weekend at the Kan-Nee-Ta resort in central Oregon remained in critical condition Thursday, said a spokeswoman at Portland's Emanuel Hospital. The other three remained hospitalized in serious condition.

The cause of the 920-acre blaze on the Warm Springs Indian Reservation still is being investigated, said a spokesman for the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Jausoro first Idahoan to win NEA award

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — Basque accordionist Jimmy Jausoro of Boise is the first Idahoan to win a National Heritage Fellowship from the National Endowment for the Arts. Qualifying criteria for the $5,000 award are authenticity, excellence and significance within a particular artistic tradition.

According to Steve Siporin, folk arts coordinator for the Idaho Commission on the Arts, and the man who nominated Jausoro for the fellowship, it is the most prestigious award in traditional arts in this country and is a recognition of extraordinary accomplishment and achievement.

And, the irony of it is that Siporin, with the aid of some of Jausoro's friends, compiled data necessary for the nomination without telling Jausoro of their plans.

"He's such a very modest, quiet person that it's kind of hard for him to take it," Siporin says, adding that now Jausoro has won, he will be expected to appear at a special awards ceremony in Washington, D.C., in September.

Siporin says the whole idea behind the award is based on a program in Japan where they designate artists as a national treasure and support the artist for life. "Of course, in America it would be very hard to use public money for that sort of thing," he says, noting that the award is, nevertheless, as prestigious as its Japanese counterpart.

Siporin says he nominated Jausoro because he

At Basque Festival: 'Ondo pasateko'

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

ELKO — The 22nd National Basque Festival, easily one of the region's largest and most colorful cultural celebrations, will be held this year in Elko July 6 and 7.

For more than two decades, hundreds of Basques have gathered each summer in Elko to play petata (Basque handball), dance the colorful "jota" contests and, as participants say, "Ondo pasateko," or "Have a good time."

For the second year in a row, the event will feature a grueling five-sport marathon — the Basque pentathlon — that includes four top Basque athletes from Spain.

The pentathlon is designed to test the strength and stamina of two-man teams in five non-stop events in which the winners must clock the fastest overall time in lifting a 230-pound granite ball 20 times, dragging a half-ton concrete block 120 feet, chopping six logs, carrying a 104-pound weight in each hand for 500 feet, then running two miles.

"They do this in Spain on a regular basis," says Bob Echeverria, president of the Elko Basque Club which sponsors the festival. "They fill (all arenas) just to watch these five events."

Four other athletes, all Pelota players from the Spanish Federation of Handball Players, will also put on exhibitions at the "fronton," or handball courts in the Elko City Park.

For a mood enhancer, the Elko Basque Club "Arinak" dancers will perform a demonstration on Friday night before the festival in front of the Stockmen's Motor Hotel, then, beginning Saturday morning, activities move into high gear with pelota semi-finals at the fronton, followed by a parade led by the San Francisco "La Cille Basque" band through downtown Elko at 11:30 a.m.

The formal Basque games begin at 1 p.m. with the singing of the U.S. and Basque national anthems. As the last refrains of "Guernicak Arbolak," the Basque anthem, conclude, spectators will be treated to an afternoon of contests of strength and relay races in addition to the pentathlon. All this is mixed with traditional Basque dancing.

This year, the weight-lifting and carrying contests are divided into two groups by age. For the greatest number of lifts in a three-minute period, Juniors (under 25 years old) will lift a 190-pound cylinder and seniors will lift a 250-pound cylinder. Carrying contests will have juniors holding 75-pound weights in each hand, with seniors carrying 104 pounds.

After relay contests pit three-man teams competing in weightlifting, wood chopping and throwing, a festival dance is slated for the National Guard Armory in which chorizos (Basque sausages) will be served.

On Sunday, the festival will shift to the City Park with an outdoor Basque and English mass at 11 a.m. At noon, a shepherders' bread contest is scheduled, followed by a Basque feed at 1 p.m.

An $8 ticket guarantees a heaping plate of steak, lamb chops, Basque beans, salad, bread and dessert, along with wine, brandy and coffee.

Afternoon events will include the pelota finals, Jota contests for children and adults, and the Irizintz contest, in which participants demonstrate the original Basque war cry which is described as a long, wavering yell somewhere between a laugh, a shriek and a horse's neigh.

For more information, contact the Elko Chamber of Commerce at (702) 738-7135.

Wood Riser Music Festival blends classical sounds in unusual format

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — The 4th annual Wood Riser Music Festival, presented by the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities, is offering a full schedule of events including a young peoples/family concert, an evening of songs and arias and a free outdoor concert next to the pond in Sun Valley.

A classical music lover's delight, the festival kicks off July 3 at 6 p.m. with the New World Brass Quintet appearing at Trail Creek Cabin grounds. The quintet, which has performed throughout the U.S., has a repertoire which spans six centuries of chamber music from Renaissance to the present.

A favorite in Las Vegas, the group erases the popular image of stuffy, tuxedo-clad chamber musicians, resembling a conclave of penguins, often spotting their repertoire with jazz and contemporary music along with bits of humor.

The members of the group, all highly trained classical musicians, began playing together in 1977 while all were employed in various hotel or

Local artist in Utah Arts Festival

TWIN FALLS — Blaine Billman, a Twin Falls wildlife artist, is helping in the Utah Arts Festival, the largest of its kind in the Intermountain West. The five-day event, which began June 26, will run through June 30 in Salt Lake City at Triad Center on South Temple between 300 and 400 West.

As one of 75 visual artists chosen from 365 applicants from throughout the nation, Billman will be exhibiting and selling his North American wildlife drawings. In past years he has also shown his highly detailed pen and ink renderings at the National Wildlife Show in Kansas City, the Southeastern Wildlife Exposition in Charleston, S.C., the Idaho Art Exhibition at the National Museum of American Art-Smithsonian and the Oklahoma Wildlife Art Show.

The Utah Arts Festival is an outdoor event which attracts 400,000 visitors annually. It celebrates the diversity of the arts by showcasing 75 visual artists, 90 performing artists, 30 demonstrating craftsmen and 21 food artists.

Highlights of this year's festival include the Saturday evening performance of the internationally-acclaimed Philip Glass Ensemble and a continuing display of Sky Art — huge, helium-filled works created by Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Otto Plien.

Performances and exhibits run from noon to midnight Wednesday through Saturday and noon to 6 p.m. on Sunday. Admission is free.

Authors' deadline nears

TWIN FALLS — Time is running out for Idaho authors and their publishers to submit fiction, creative nonfiction and poetry manuscripts to meet the Western States Book Awards' deadline of July 15.

To be eligible for the awards, work must be written by an author resident in Idaho or in another of the foundations' member states and must be at least the equivalent of 40 typeset pages. Work must be previously unpublished, but must already have been accepted for publication in 1986 by a publisher in Alaska, Arizona, Colorado, Hawaii, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington, Wyoming, California or Texas.

The author and the publisher of the winning title in each category win the awards together, with $2,500 awarded to each author and $5,000 to each publisher. Authors and publishers will both receive extensive support through national publicity, advertising, and marketing.

Authors wishing to have an entry form sent to their publisher should contact the Western States Arts Foundation at 207 Shelby Street, Santa Fe, N.M., or call 505-988-1166

Indian artifacts on display in Ketchum

KETCHUM — Kneeland Gallery at 4th and Leadville in Ketchum is offering viewers the opportunity to examine museum-quality Indian artifacts July 29 at a special show entitled "Indian Art and Artifacts."

The display will open with a reception July 5 from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. during which Pawel Raczka of Pawel Raczka Galleries of Spokane will be present to answer questions and provide insights into the techniques, construction and history of his collection. Objects to be shown include a war shirt from the Blackfoot tribe, women's clothing, baskets, medicine bags and pipe bags.

In addition, Westwood Galleries of Portland will be offering ceramic pieces by Glen LaFontaine, a highly regarded Native American artist from the Portland area who will also be at the reception.

LaFontaine is best known for his compelling ceramic figures of Indian shamans and warriors decorated with glaze and stain. These figures are described as having a tangible power and presence despite being less than three feet in height.

Also being shown for the first time in Idaho are LaFontaine's new drawings on clay — pieces that have the appearance of antique hide paintings in their depiction of warriors, animals and buffalo hunters.

The ceramic 'Warrior' was created by Portland artist Glen LaFontaine

Networks pull out all stops in covering hostage crisis

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Tom Brokaw arrived in Beirut on Wednesday to help cover the hostage crisis there, and the NBC anchorman's unexpected presence served to dramatize the extraordinary network deployment of personnel and technology since the hijacking of TWA Flight 847 nearly two weeks ago.

By the time Brokaw reached Beirut, from vacation in Africa, more than 60 correspondents and technicians for the four American networks already were at work in the strife-torn Lebanese capital, and had been for several days. Before the hijacking, only a handful of American TV reporters were in the country. "Each network was in routine, if complex and rather costly, communication with this country, three of them using transportable satellite relay equipment, shipped to the Mediterranean island of Cyprus late last week.

Network executives indicated each might be spending as much as $100,000 a day to cover the story. "The TV networks as a matter of course dispatch reporters and support personnel to cover major news events, but the task in this instance was complicated by the volatile situation in Beirut and by the lack of an accessible satellite ground station there."

"This is a breaking story of great interest to both those covering and those watching," said Robert Murphy, vice president for news coverage for ABC News, "and the desire to be instant does put a strain on the process."

Indeed, live picture coverage from Beirut still is not possible, and videotape must be delivered elsewhere for transmission to New York.

The most agreeable route is the 45-minute flight to Cyprus, and a videotape "Nightly News" report prepared by Brokaw the day he arrived was shipped there for relay on a transportable satellite uplink the network tracked down in Nebraska toward the end of last week.

On Cyprus, ABC and NBC share the same satellite uplink, positioned near the island airport at Larnaca, and CBS has its own movable ground station nearby. Both were installed late last week. Cable News Network, meanwhile, used the satellite facilities of the Cypriot television network located some distance from the airport.

The alternative is a three- or four-hour drive to Damascus in neighboring Syria to use television relay facilities there.

"With both the airport in Beirut and the highway to Damascus unreliable," said ABC's Murphy, "we generally make two copies of the same tape and send one to each place. Whatever gets there first, we use."

All four networks pulled most of their people out of Beirut late last year, in the belief that American journalists were particularly attractive to kidnapers. In that context, once word was out that the Athens-to-Rome flight had been hijacked, the order of business for network executives was clear.

"First we get the people in," said Robert Muller, general manager for news operations for NBC News, "and then we find a way to get the story out."

Airwaves crackle with frustration

By JONATHAN KAP
The Washington Post

Americans are singing the blues over the hostage crisis and the refrain is one of frustration and anger.

Ken Scott, a singer-songwriter and talk show host in Nashville, Monday nationally released his single, "Let Our People Go." And a tape of a song called "The Chicken Shiltes," written by Chance Jones and Roger Hallmark, has already hit the airwaves.

Scott's song includes words of support for President Reagan's decision not to take military action and a mellow, guitar-strummin' plea to Shiite Amlal leader Nabin Berri:

Mr. Berri, if you're listening,
Please let our people go.
...There is nothing to be gained from hate,
As everybody knows.

But "Chicken Shiltes" takes a tougher stance on singer Roger Hallmark threatens to bomb the terrorists as patriotic tunes play in the background.

Or, as the main refrain suggests, "We're gonna wiring the necks of that bunch of chicken Shiltes."

"I'm mad," said Hallmark, who is from Birmingham. "I think that's the general consensus of most Americans ... There's just so little we can do about it. It's like they're pointing a gun at our heads."

Hallmark and Chance wrote and recorded the song a week ago and sent cassettes to 12 radio stations. "By the weekend, it was just going crazy in Atlanta," he said.

'Cocoon' conquers 'Rambo' sales with story of seniors and aliens

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Cocoon" burst like a butterfly in its first weekend of release, with the warm story of extra-terrestrials and the fountain of eternal youth, whisking away the top spot from the brutal "Rambo: First Blood Part 2."

The film featuring some of Hollywood's elderly and middle-aged stars — Don Ameche, Willford Brimley, Hume Cronyn, Jack Gilford and Maureen Stapleton, Jessica Tandy, Gwen Verdon and Herta Ware — grossed $7.9 million.

The 20th Century Fox film directed by Ron Howard, who previously directed "Splash," a romantic comedy about a mermaid, earned at whopping $6,982 average for each of the 1,140 theaters in which it appeared.

Sylvester Stallone's "Rambo," meanwhile, dropped to second place in the box office, but the Tri-Star movie still grossed $7.2 million at 2,074 screens for a five-week total of $96.9 million.

"The Goonies," a Warner Bros.

film based on a Steven Spielberg story that Spielberg also co-produced, came in third with $5.3 million at 1,705 theaters for a $32.6 million three-week total.

Coming in fourth was "Lifeforce," a science-fiction-horror film from Tri-Star, earning $4.2 million in its first week, followed by the Chevy Chase comedy "Fletch," a Universal presentation that earned $4 million for a four-week total of $30.9 million.

The Jack Nicholson-Kathleen Turner movie "Prizzi's Honor" landed in sixth place by pulling in $3.3 million at only 722 theaters for a two-week total of $9.8 million. The 20th Century Fox film earned $4,601 per screen, second only to the per screen average of "Cocoon," another 20th Century Fox release.

Here are the top 10 films at the box office over the weekend, followed by distributor, weekend gross, number of screens, total gross and number of weeks in release.

1. "Cocoon," 20th Century Fox, $7.9 million, 1,140 screens, $7.9 million, one week.
2. "Rambo: First Blood Part 2," Tri-Star, $7.3 million, 2,074 screens, $96.9 million, five weeks.
3. "The Goonies," Warner Bros., $6.3 million, 1,705 screens, $32.6 million, three weeks.
4. "Lifeforce," Tri-Star, $4.2 million, 1,528 screens, $4.2 million, one week.
5. "Fletch," Universal, $4 million, 1,223 screens, $30.9 million, four weeks.
6. "Prizzi's Honor," 20th Century Fox, $3.3 million, 722 screens, $9.8 million, two weeks.
7. "Return to Oz," Disney, $2.8 million, 1,238 screens, $2.8 million, one week.
8. "A View to a Kill," MGM-UA, $2.5 million, 1,245, $40.1 million, five weeks.
9. "Brewster's Millions," Universal, $1.7 million, 965, $31.8 million, five weeks.
10. "Secret Admirer," Orion, $1.7 million, 1,265, $5.6 million, two weeks.

has reproduced a native music, and because of the social and cultural impact his music has had for Basques in Boise and the region. "He is the center of the community," Siporin says.

Jausoro grew up in Nampa during a time when it was a gathering place for Basque shepherders. During the 1920s and 1930s he frequented the local boarding houses and hotels listening to the older men tell stories, sing Basque songs and play the button accordion.

After trying the small button instruments, he took his first job in order to earn the funds necessary to buy a big Hohner piano accordion, the first of seven instruments he has owned in his lifetime of playing for Basque clubs and performances.

At first, his repertoire included a mix of American popular tunes, Basque folk and popular music. During World War II, he continued to play his accordion in the Navy, then, after the war, he worked on the railroad in Idaho and formed a local dance band.

Jausoro remembers that gradually his thoughts turned more and more toward the music of his forebears.

In 1969 he formed a dance group named after a performing group from the Basque region in Spain where he had many times visited.

According to Siporin, that group, the Oinkari Dancers, has grown from a half dozen members in 1969 to over 200 today. "One being an Oinkari dancer," he says, "that brings an Oinkari dance has even become a right of passage for young Basques growing up in Boise."

Helping to preserve the Basque heritage, Jausoro and his long-time accompanist, Domingo Ansolegui, work with the young dancers at rehearsals, giving advice on authenticity, taste and Basque cultural standards. They also use the Basque language, helping the dancers to become fluent.

Because of that, in 1983, the two musicians were awarded the first Idaho State Folk Arts Award for their artistic contribution to the Basque community of Idaho.

Siporin wrote in his nomination of Jausoro for the more recent national award: "Jimmy exemplifies the way in which an artistic tradition, personalized and carried forward by an individual folk artist, can become the dynamic expression that binds an ethnic community together."

Trumpeter Walter Blanton arranged the 18th Century classic, "Bianca e Desidero," by Louis-Nicolas Clarambaull, and Bach's "Wir glauben an el enen Gott." Thomas Gause, also trumpeter in the quintet, has contributed many works including two pieces by Duke Ellington and "Children's Songs" by jazz pianist Chick Corea.

On July 3 at 8 p.m., the Pablo Casals Trio is slated to perform at the Opera House. In recognition of their musical talents, the legendary cellist, Casals, bestowed his name upon this trio.

The Opera House will again resonate with the classics on July 9 at 9 p.m. when the Philadelphia String Quartet celebrates a quarter century of music making that has been praised for its beauty and depth. Then, on July 10 at noon, the quartet will regroup for an outdoor performance at Sun Valley before moving on to a young people's concert at the Presbyterian Church of the Big Wood in Ketchum at 6:30 p.m. On July 11 at 8 p.m. they will perform a final concert at the Liberty Theater in Halley.

Since its founding, the quartet has been at the forefront in the performance of contemporary music while continuing to deepen its understanding of the great masterworks of the past. The Philadelphia String Quartet is known for utilizing the entire repertoire of chamber music literature from Haydn and Mozart through Bartok and Shostakovich as well as the most challenging works of the 20th Century.

The Evening of Songs and Arias is scheduled to begin on July 14 in the Lodge Dining Room with a four-course meal at 6 p.m. and the performance at 8 p.m. The concert will feature Constantine Hauman and Angelina Reaux, both sopranos and residents of New York City, whose biographies indicate that they are well on their way to strong singing careers.

The program will include solo and duet selections by Mozart, Handel, R. Strauss, Bernstein and Gershwin.

Earth Fair flat; more promotion needed

HAILEY — The basket lady was there, the willow weavers, the smoked trout man and a potter or two.

The ants showed up, a dog ran through.

The air was ripe with wondrous scents — old Sol basked the park with a rich, golden ray.

So why did the people choose to stay away?

And stay away they did, from last weekend's second annual Earth Fair in Halley. In complete contrast to its debut last year, the Earth Fair saw nearly as many craftsmen show up to display their work in the Halley City Park as patrons.

"I doubt if 30 people have walked through here," was one artisan's lament near the end of Saturday's show. "I don't even know for sure if I'll set up tomorrow."

According to Janet O'Rowley, who organized the Earth Fair with help from several others, this year's exhibition was poorly attended because of lack of promotion.

"We're going to do a lot of things different for next year," she said. "We've got to promote more, to draw people off Main Street down the two blocks to the park."

What's what

The wristwatch telephone is just around the corner, says our Chief Prognosticator. Don't believe I'll turn there.

Do you like to spend cash, and go for short scenic drives, and read your newspaper, maybe in front of the fireplace? Pretty basic, that. Claim is mankind is where it's at because of the creation of money, the invention of the wheel, the development of the written word, and the control of fire.

If the salinity of seawater isn't at least 0.9 percent, shipworms can't thrive.

The salinity of the Baltic Sea only registers 0.7. Won't support those wood-eating worms. Any Sherlock Holmes will tell you therefore, wrecked ships recovered by salvagers from the bottom of the Baltic remain in much better condition than wrecked ships recovered elsewhere.

GIN
The word "gin" as in "cotton gin" started out as nothing more than slang for "engine."

In San Francisco, that attraction visited by the most tourists is the Golden Gate Bridge. Client asks what attraction is visited by the most tourists in Paris. The Notre Dame Cathedral.

Brazil has more land and more people than all the other nine South American countries put together.

Book pushers in the Library of Congress every year -- to make room for the new stuff' coming in -- move what's on 37 miles of shelves.

MAKE THAT LEMONS
You've read that British sailors are called "limeys" because their forefathers drank lime juice to prevent scurvy. But our language man, who cares more than most, says that's not quite right. What they drank, he says, was really lemon juice then known as lime juice.

The mythical Chinese dragon was inspired by real monsters of a sort, and they still exist -- lizards weighing up to 300 pounds and measuring 10 feet in length on three islands of the Lesser Sunda east of Bali. In a word: "Awesome!"

On file, too, among our Love and War man's chauvinistic quotations is that line by Lord Byron: "It is easier to die for a woman one loves than to live with her."

Canadian artist travels globe stalking his wildlife subjects

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — Canadian wildlife artist Robert Bateman travels the world for his subjects. There's a herd of bison in British Columbia, an alligator in the Arizona desert and fur seals at an old whaling station on Kerguelen in the southern Indian Ocean.

And he pays as close attention to rocks, earth, plants and water as he does to his subjects. There's a heron in the Arizona desert and fur seals at an old whaling station on Kerguelen in the southern Indian Ocean.

"The wonderful thing about watching the wild is that you can't imagine what you're going to see," Bateman said.

"I was lecturing to a group in Antarctica and at Port Lockroy we saw Gentoo penguin chicks under a snowbank, licking droplets of melting ice above them because their diet is very salty. You couldn't have expected to see that when you woke up in the morning."

Works by the Canadian artist recently went on show at the Tryon and Moorland Gallery, with prices for the works ranging from a low of $450 for a bear's head etching to $47,000 for an acrylic painting of lions in long grass.

"I know the prices are horribly high, but it's the dealers who do it," Bateman said in an interview. "I try to encourage them to keep low."

Aylmer Tryon, who founded his gallery 22 years ago, said that Bateman is "a great naturalist as well as a fine artist."

"You cannot do wildlife unless you know it," Tryon said. Bateman is 55, a father of five, lives on the Niagara Escarpment, 40 miles west of Toronto and is one of the world's outstanding portrayers of animals and birds. Bateman was painting and bird watching by the time he was 12.

"I always wanted to paint," Bateman said, "but as nobody pays you to paint, I studied geography at the University of Ontario because I knew I could get summer work in the wilderness and paint there."

"That's what happened. I went to the Arctic and to Newfoundland and was paid for mapping by the Geological Survey of Canada. I was a full-time teacher of geography and art in high school until I was 46, because teachers get long holidays. I taught for fun and painted for real."

He never went to art school, though he did go one evening a week for five years to a life drawing class. However, he doesn't think art courses are necessary for producing artists.

"If you're going to be an artist, you will, and you can always talk to an artist if you have any questions."

Robert Bateman poses beside one of his nature studies

Bateman said. He also considers it "ridiculous" to take a course on nature watching.

"You need an inquisitive mind and an observant eye. As I drive along by every bird that goes by, and I'm troubled if I can't."

Though he grew up in Toronto, his second home was the Royal Ontario Museum, which combines natural history and applied arts. The artists who most influenced him were Andrew Wyeth, Edgar Degas, Hokusai and Hiroshige and artists of China's Sung dynasty which lasted until 1279.

"Bateman's feeling for wild animals and birds is deeply moving," Wyeth has said. Bateman prefers to paint large birds rather than little "cute ones," because there's much more to study. "I think of the bird as a series of planes, convex and concave surfaces, textures and tones and colors. There are more of those with an eagle than a sparrow. They give me the sense of visual adventure that I get from looking at a Van Eyck or a Turner."

Bateman never knows what the public will like best. "I thought no one would particularly like this painting of killer whales, which I prefer to call orca," he said. "But it's proved incredibly popular, that and the moose, which is a dark painting and breaks all the rules—mountain country but no snowy peaks, for instance. You must be true to yourself, take chances and go ahead and do them. Trying to paint for the market or for popularity is a sure way to be a nonentity. Marketing is a dealer's business."

Bateman is passionate about protecting wildlife. "Every inch of the natural world is particular and special," he said. "It's different from place to place and also in time. In 10 lifetimes I couldn't scratch the surface of what is there."

A show of Bateman's paintings will be staged next year at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington. He has just been made a Member of Honor of the Swiss-based World Wildlife Fund.

'Newhart' ties 'Cosby' for top TV ratings

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — CBS' Bob Newhart took a giant leap on NBC's Bill Cosby for first place in the Nielsen ratings last week, but NBC continued its dominance over its rival networks.

"Newhart," 14th last week, and other CBS Monday night shows got an assist from ABC's major league baseball telecast. The baseball games traditionally draw only a small audience.

Besides "Newhart," "Kate & Allie" and "Cagney & Lacey" were in the Top 10. "Scarcecrow & Mrs. King," which didn't make the Top 20 the week before, was tied for 13th place.

However, NBC won its fifth consecutive weekly victory after dwelling in the cellar for nine years prior to the just-ended season. NBC finished the 1984-85 season second to CBS after finishing first eight of the last nine weeks.

NBC had a network average of 13.0 in the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings. CBS was second with 12.7 and ABC was third with 10.2. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute 12.0 percent of the nation's TV homes were tuned to NBC.

NBC had six shows in the Top 10 and CBS had three. ABC's only entry was its magazine show "20/20," which normally gains in the ratings during the summer because it uses original material. CBS' "60 Minutes" on the other hand, reruns old stories and generally has a slight drop in ratings.

The summer rerun season is also a time for viewer sampling of shows not watched during the regular season.

PG-13 Rating Introduced

A new rating category is in place as of July 1. This new category is inserted between the current PG and R ratings. It is designated as "PG-13: Parents are strongly cautioned for attendance of children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children."

The revised five-category system of the voluntary film industry rating program is now as follows:

- G: General Audiences, all ages admitted.
 - PG: Parental guidance suggested. Some material may be suitable for children.
 - PG-13: Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.
 - R: Restricted, under-17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.
 - X: No one under 17 admitted.
- All films rated after July 1 will be given ratings under the new five-category system.

'Summer' best for Hemingway, bullfighting aficionados

Reviewed by BARNABY CONRAD
Special to the Los Angeles Times

They say bullfighting is indefensible but irresistible. A lot of people are going to find this book indefensible and highly restorable. For dyed-in-the-wool buffs of la fiesta brava, "The Dangerous Summer" will be a must. Likewise for ardent Ernest Hemingway fans who missed this work's lone appearance in Life magazine a quarter of a century ago and who want to read every published word of the Master.

But one wonders how much the average reader will enjoy this account of his several months in 1939 of the intense rivalry between young Antonio Ordonez and the veteran Luis Miguel Domingun. With Arruza retired and Manolete dead, they were the two best matadors in the world, as well as friends and brothers-in-law, but each was out to prove that he was The Best, even if it killed one or both of them in the process.

Hemingway followed them around day by day from city to city, and we get a blow-by-blow, bull-by-bull, veronica-by-veronica, description of each fight. I can't imagine the non-afficionado deriving much pleasure from these encounters, in spite of James Michener's highly knowledgeable introduction. At least in "Death in the Afternoon," still the best of taurine literature, Hemingway had all sorts of humor and diversions and excursions away from the theme of lauramachy. In this book, you get bullfights and more bullfights, broken up only by detailed and tedious descriptions of drinking and dining. At one point he writes, "There were many things and people to joke about since the people who make a cult of bullfighting are only barely sane and those who are matador worshippers are even more vulnerable."

That's fine, but he doesn't share many of the jokes with us. Unless you consider the following a jokey way to spend an afternoon:
"At the party Antonio held cigarettes in his mouth for me to shoot the ashes off. We did this seven times with the shooting gallery's tiny rifles and at the end he was puffing the cigarettes down to see how short he could make them."
"Finally he said, 'Ernesto, we've gone as far as we can go. The last one just brushed my lips.'
"I quit while I was still ahead..."
There are occasional insights and revelations, forays into the psyche of the aging matador becoming aware for perhaps the first time of his frailties and mortality; his own death is less than two years away. Longstreet once wrote of him that he'd spent "a great deal of his life slaughtering thousands of birds, animals, big fish and, in the end, the biggest game of all — himself."

There are even some of Hemingway's religious views in this book: "It there was time at the ring nearly everyone slipped into the chapel to pray once before the pasero. Antonio knew I prayed for him and never for myself. I was not fighting and I had quit praying for myself during the Spanish Civil War when I saw the terrible things that happened to other people and I felt that to pray for one self was selfish and egotistical. In case my prayers were invalid, as they well might have been, and to make sure someone competent was doing it I took out a membership in the Jesuit Seminary Fund Association at New Orleans for Carmen and Antonio. There was a class graduating who, when they were ordained, would pray for them each day."

There are tantalizing bits of starry-eyed hindsight from the old Hemingway that set you up for something wonderful, but then nothing ever quite materializes from them. Hemingway could describe the sights and smells of a Spanish town or countryside and evoke a mood by taking inventory of and celebrating the commonplace as no one else could.

"It was something that had been settled and I was happy when the word came from the operating room that once again while the horn had gone well up into the abdomen of Luis Miguel it had not perforated the intestines."
And some of the dialogue! This is about the book's last bull:
"How did you know he had enough gas to come the second and the third times?" asked.
"I knew it," he said. "How do you know anything?"
"But what could you see?"
"I knew him very well by then."
"His car?"
"Everything, I know you. You know, Mike that..."

'Give Peace a Chance' now a game

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Michelle Alexander, 9, has created a board game she calls "Give Peace a Chance" for a third-grade class project at her school for gifted children in Fresno.

The game is weighted toward compromise by superpowers, with 20 points going to the country that declares itself a nuclear-free zone.

Two players roll dice to move their pieces, carrying flags of the United States or Soviet Union, around an edge of the board divided into eight spaces. At the center is a world map to remind players of the fate they hold.

Players gain two points when they land on a space that says: "Welcome to Geneva, shake hands and smile." They can add five points when they share an invention that benefits both countries or when they extend an invitation to children from the opponent's country.

The stakes go up to 10 points when players pull troops out of an "important area."

But a player can lose 10 points and three turns by landing on a space where they invade a smaller country, or forfeit 15 points and two turns for rejecting a compromise in arms negotiations.

"I invented this game to stop war," Michelle wrote in a paper explaining her project. "The object is to get the most points, hopefully by compromising and making your country a nuclear-free zone. This means the children of the world will be able to grow up..."

She was required as part of the project to set a price for the game. She settled on $5, "something almost anyone can afford even if you have to pay it out of your allowance a week at a time."

The game and other inventions by classmates have been on display at the Fresno Arts Center.

NCAA won't divulge 'death penalty' schools

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The NCAA decided Thursday not to make public the names of schools that are subject to having their programs suspended under the new enforcement penalty structure, a spokesman said.

The toughest penalties for recruiting and academic abuse, including suspension of programs convicted of major violations twice within five years, were adopted by near-unanimous vote at a special convention last week in New Orleans.

In a controversial move, delegates agreed to make the so-called "death penalty" measure retroactive to Sept. 1, 1980. Any school since that date that has had a program on at least a one-year probation with sanctions against either post-season or television appearances is immediately vulnerable to the unprecedented penalty, which includes a two-year ban on recruiting and scholarships in the affected sport.

The sanctions will apply to the last sport penalized even if the first case involved a different sport. About 15 schools are thought to be in that category.

David Cawood, an assistant executive director of the NCAA, said the decision not to publicize the schools was made in a conference call Thursday by the six-person administrative committee, chaired by NCAA President Jack Davis of Oregon State.

"The NCAA plans to write each involved institution and notify it of its status," said Cawood. "The NCAA has had a long-standing policy of not providing information on past cases that are closed. This policy basically exists because the NCAA Council traditionally has felt that the national office should be in a position of providing negative information related to past infractions cases that would result in stinging out a particular institution or a group of institutions. An additional concern is that publishing such a list could be used as a negative recruiting device."

The key dates in the death penalty provisions are the date the first penalty was begun and the date the second infraction occurred. The NCAA delegates decided that the second major infraction must occur after Sept. 1, 1985. Thus, a school that was assessed a one-year probation in 1982 would not be subject to suspension of its program if a major violation was found to have occurred in 1984. If the 1984 violation resulted in a probation, then the five-year period would begin with the imposition of the penalty for the 1984 infraction.

"We don't want any school to have two strikes against it the minute we approve the legislation," explained one delegate at the time.

Most of the schools that have received one-year probations against either post-season or television appearances since Sept. 1, 1980, are known. A partial list includes Akron, Arizona, Arizona State, Florida, Illinois, Kansas, Southern Cal, Southern Mississippi, Tennessee State, Wisconsin, Wichita State, Oregon, Colorado, UCLA, Southern Methodist and New Mexico.

The UCLA basketball program, to use an example, was put on probation in December 1981. Thus, any Bruin program would be subject to suspension if convicted before December 1986 of committing a major infraction after Sept. 1, 1985.

A school cannot escape the five-year clause by delaying the effective date of a probation through the NCAA appeal process or through the courts.

That calm exterior belies competitiveness of a bull rider

Richfield hand has soft smile, hard ride
By FLYNN McROBERTS
Times-News writer

FILER — Mike Johnson is a very amiable guy. That nature sits in stark contrast to the pugnacity of his greatest interest, bull riding.

A recent Richfield High graduate, Johnson is currently riding bulls, and loving it, in the Idaho High School Rodeo Finals at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds. He enters the event as the District 3 all-around cowboy, decisively capturing the honorary saddle for the division that includes Lincoln, Gooding, Blaine and Jerome counties.

"You can't put it into words," he says, trying to explain why he gets a kick out of bull riding in particular. Immediately after finishing a respectable ride on a horse named "Yellow Trash" in bareback competition here Wednesday night, "Bareback isn't as fun as bull riding. I love bull riding."

As he speaks, Johnson rests comfortably on the aging fairground bleachers, periodically cheering fellow competitors in the arena. He clearly is enjoying himself, and if things go as planned, he will be doing the same next month in Rapid City, S.D., at the high school national finals.

But what about the risk of his favorite event? "They're all dangerous," he says matter-of-factly. "You're going to get hurt sooner or later."

Johnson hasn't always been able to take such a light-hearted view of rodeo competition. As a young boy, he says he can remember literally being scared sick before riding.

"The butterflies set in. . . . Well, I tell ya, those are killers," Johnson recalls. He says part of the draw to rodeo at a young age is the challenge of "conquering the fear. Now it's just fun."

Unfortunately, Johnson had more to deal with than free-wheeling fun in the last year when a bull hooked him in the jaw, breaking it. He spent six weeks with his mouth wired shut and no solid food.

Aside from that injury, he has sustained a lot of bruises and pulled muscles. "Nonetheless, he says the "butterflies don't set in anymore. There's still fear, but you learn to cope with it."

Provided the short, stocky cowboy "copes" well today and Saturday, he

Bronc-busting is fun for Richfield's Mike Johnson but it's a bull riding that starts the butterflies fluttering may head to Rapid City in both bull riding and bareback. If that happens, it won't be his first trip.

As a freshman in high school, Johnson qualified for the national contest in bull riding, but "got blown out" in his words. After missing the next year, he made it as a junior in bull riding and team roping, with Jay Curtis of Gooding.

Johnson hasn't just been taming rough stock, though, in his rodeo action and in breaking colts for his parents, who raise quarter horses. The past Richfield Tiger spent his last few autumns breaking offensive backs as an all-state football selection at linebacker. He was pegged by both the Associated Press and Idaho

Statesman sports writers. Johnson says he likes football, but enjoys rodeo even more — partly due to his much better chance at a bright future wearing a hat and not a helmet. At 5-foot, 6 inches and about 150 pounds, Johnson says, "I'll go a lot farther in rodeo than football. I'm not big enough."

Like most successful rodeo cowboys, Johnson became involved in the sport at an early age. His uncle owns a ranch outside of Richfield where Johnson rode calves, steers and finally bulls.

He has competed in junior rodeos throughout the state and attended several rodeo schools, including those hosted by College of Southern Idaho Coach Shawn Davis and another by Pat O'Maley is a 23-year veteran of bull riding and says Johnson has what it takes to be even a professional success in the event.

"I've seen a lot of guys come and go," he says from his ranch in Shoshone. "And I think Mike can go a long way in bull riding. He has the try and the determination — and knowledge, he knows what he's doing. I think you'll be reading about him."

Does Johnson want to hit the professional rodeo circuit? After seeing his eyes light up when bull riding is discussed, the answer is predictable.

"I'll try it," he says with a smile.

Owner and operator of a private rodeo company, O'Maley is a 23-year veteran of bull riding and says Johnson has what it takes to be even a professional success in the event.

Heil hikes goat-tying rodeo lead

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

FILER — Castellford's Shelte Heil continued to dominate goat-tying after the second night's action at the Idaho State High School Rodeo Finals Thursday night.

Heil, after a time of 9:10 on Wednesday, turned in a 9:06 Thursday. The Marsh Valley District Six champion leads the event with a two-head total of 18:16.

Buhl's Jeff Stewart was high scorer in the saddle bronc competition Thursday. However, his score of 60 was well behind the totals chalked up on Wednesday. Oakley's Steve Manning rode Slim Jim for a 57, good enough for second place Thursday.

On the bareback, Boise's Bruce Page found himself where he was Wednesday. For the second night in a row, he had the best ride of the evening with a 57. His ride of 68 Wednesday is still tops.

Things were tough for the cowboys in the steer wrestling event. Cary Curtis from Driggs took his steer down in 8:05 to win Thursday's competition. Twin Falls' Alan Stutzman, who had a 6:59 on Wednesday, turned in a disappointing 10:42 on Thursday night. Gooding's Ben Yore, who was second after Wednesday's run, also had a disappointing run of 14:10.

McCammom's Michelle Broadie improved her first place standing in the barrel racing event. After scoring a time of 19:15 on Wednesday, she won Thursday's school student rode around the barrels in 18:04 to easily lead the event. Tyla Traugher from Irwin was second with a time of 18:40.

Koskila's Ronda Winberg topped in the second best score of the rodeo in the breakaway roping event. Her time of 4:61 was enough for first place Thursday, but Heil's time of 4:13 on Wednesday still was the best.

Richard Austin of Idaho Falls rode a spinning Ruby Valley for a score of 72 to lead the bull riding calf in the competition.

The team roping event was way off the pace set in Wednesday's first round action.

Poorest casher on tour share lead at Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Bill Sander stormed from the bottom of the professional golf money list Thursday to tie Hal Sutton for the lead of the St. Jude Memphis Classic at Tupper-par 65.

"I didn't know whether we were going to get this thing in today," said Sander, who was in the last threesome at the Colonial Country Club course and finished just before dark.

The first round of the $50,000 tournament was rained out 90 minutes by rain and lightning.

Sander, who has won only $712 this year on the tour, birdied the par-5 18th to tie Sutton.

"It was a good drive and I chipped up for a four-foot putt and I hit it," he said.

David Ogrin, making his best-ever start in a PGA tournament, fired a 66 and John Mahaffey scored a hole-in-one on the par-3 11th hole to move into a tie with George Burns at 67.

Ogrin, on the leader board after the first round were Richard Zokol and Tony Sillis at 68, and Buddy Gardner, Gil Morgan and Bob Tway at 69.

"It never hurts to be leading, I'll tell you," said Sutton after finishing the first hole.

Sutton, a 27-year-old touring pro from Shreveport, La., started Thursday's round on the back nine and was about to hole out on 18 when the sirens sounded signaling the suspension of play.

"I told myself 'Let's get this ball up-and-down and give us the momentum to stop on,'" Sutton said. "Fortunately, I did, hit it out to about three feet and made the putt for a birdie. I think that made a big difference."

Ogrin, a third-year pro from Waikagan, Ill., seemed almost as interested in the Chicago Cubs as he was in golf Thursday.

"Did the Cubs win?" he asked as he came into the clubhouse. When told that the Cubs had won, the 27-year-old golfer grinned.

"All right! Good day. The way I was playing they had to win," he said.

It was easily Ogrin's best start of the season.

"I have been struggling all year on Thursday," he said. "It makes it tough making the cut, let alone making big checks."

Mahaffey's ace came during the morning round.

The 37-year-old Houston pro was at 3-under-par when he unlimbered his 4-iron at No. 5.

"It's really just one of those shots," Mahaffey said, adding that he was his fourth since he joined the tour in 1971 and his second this year.

Wimbledon fans hail female favorites

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Two long-time favorites, top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd and 1977 champion Virginia Wade, brightened the rain-drenched Wimbledon tennis championships Thursday, posting first-round victories.

Lloyd, a three-time champion who only once since 1972 has failed to reach at least the semifinals on the grass courts of the All England Club, breezed past fellow American Mary Lou Piatek 6-1, 6-0.

Wade, playing in her 24th consecutive year and 197th match at Wimbledon, advanced to the second round with a 6-4, 7-5 victory over American Lea Antonopis.

Also winning an opening-round match Thursday was Iva Na, the first Chinese woman in the modern era to play here. A qualifier, Hu stopped Britain's Annabel Croft 6-3, 7-5.

The rain, which played havoc with the schedule the first three days of the tournament, stopped play for about one hour Thursday, and the temperature remained below 70 degrees. Anne White solved that problem by wearing a white body suit in her match against fellow American Pam Shriver, the No. 5 seed.

The White-Shriver match was halted by darkness after she had split the first two sets.

In an upset, Tom Gullikson ousted 12th-seeded Miroslava Metic of Czechoslovakia 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-7, 6-3. But on the final point, which ended with both players sprawled on the court, the American sprained the thumb on his left hand as he dove for the ball.

He got the ball back over the net, but Metic then launched himself through the air, getting his racket on the ball. His shot sailed long and the match was over.

Gullikson probably will get at least a day of rest before he is scheduled to play again.

Besides Lloyd, who is co-seeded No. 1 with Martina Navratilova, other seeded players in the women's singles who advanced to the second round Thursday included No. 3 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, No. 4 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria, No. 7 Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, No. 11 Steffi Graf of West Germany, No. 13 Carling Bassett of Canada, No. 14 Wendy Turnbull of Australia and No. 16 Kathy Rinaldi of the United States.

In the men's division, No. 6 Pat Cash of Australia, No. 8 Kevin Curren of the U.S. and No. 15 Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia were victorious.

It was Lloyd's first action since she suffered a stiff neck during practice last week.

"I felt comfortable today but feel I need some matches to get match-tough on grass," said the Fort Lauderdale, Fla., right-hander.

Piatek probably won't agree.

Lloyd jumped out to a 4-0 lead before Piatek broke the right-hander's serve. It was the last game she posted on the scoreboard.

"She got her groundstrokes going in the second set, but she's played better in her career," Lloyd graciously said of the loser.

Mandlikova, who lost to Lloyd in the final here in 1981, brushed aside Czechoslovakia's Iva Budarova just as easily. And like Lloyd, the only game Mandlikova lost was when she dropped her own serve, that coming in the fourth game of the second set.

Wade won the Wimbledon women's singles in 1977, the same year her opponent won the Wimbledon junior girls' title.

"The real trouble about doing well here is concentration, because I can't see what I'm doing it for," Wade won the Wimbledon women's singles in 1977, the same year her opponent won the Wimbledon junior girls' title.

West Germany's Boris Becker, a 17-year-old with a big serve who is considered a future champion on this fast surface, defeated American Hank Pfister to advance to the second round.

"I'm in the top 20 in the world computer rankings) a little faster than I expected," Becker said. "But I'm playing in a lot of tournaments with people like (Jimmy) Connors, (John) McEnroe and (Ivan) Lendl, and I'm just a nobody."

'Summer' best for Hemingway, bullfighting aficionados

They say bullfighting is indefensible and irrefutable. A lot of people are going to find this book indefensible and highly resistible. For dyed-in-the-wool buffs of la fiesta brava, "The Dangerous Summer" will be a must. Likewise for ardent Ernest Hemingway fans who missed this world's lone appearance in Life magazine a quarter of a century ago and who want to read every published word of the Master.

"Finally he said, 'Ernesto, we've gone as far as we can go. The last one just brushed my lips.'" "I quit while I was still ahead..." There are occasional insights and revelations, forays into the psyche of the aging macho becoming aware for perhaps the first time of his frailties and mortality; his own death is less than two years away. Longstreet once wrote of him that he'd spent "a great deal of his life slaughtering thousands of birds, animals, big fish and, in the end, the biggest game of all — himself." There are even some of Hemingway's religious views in this book: "If there was time at the ring nearly everyone slipped into the chapel to pray once before the paseo. Antonio knew I prayed for him and never for myself. I was not fighting and I had quit praying for myself during the Spanish Civil War when I saw the terrible things that happened to other people and I felt that to pray for oneself was selfish and egotistical. In case my prayers were invalid, as they well might have been, and to make sure someone competent was doing it I took out a membership in the Jesuit Seminary Fund Association at New Orleans for Carmen and Antonio. There was a class graduating who, when they were ordained, would pray for them each day." "There are tantalizing bits of star-dust, hints of the old Hemingway that set you up for something wonderful, but then nothing ever quite materializes from them. Hemingway could describe the sights and smells of a Spanish town or countryside and evoke a mood by taking inventory of and celebrating the commonplace as no one else could."

"It was something that had been settled and I was happy when the word came from the operating room that once again while the horn had gone well up into the abdomen of Luis Miguel it had not perforated the intestines." And some of the dialogue! This is about the book's last bull: "How did you know he had enough gas to come the second and the third times?" I asked. "I knew it," he said. "How do you know anything?" "But what could you see?" "I knew him very well by then." "His ear?" "Everything, I know you. You know me. Like that."

'Give Peace a Chance' now a game

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Michelle Alexander, 9, has created a board game she calls "Give Peace a Chance" for a third-grade class project at her school for gifted children in Fresno.

The game is weighted toward conformity by supplanting with 20 pieces going to the country that declares itself a nuclear-free zone.

Two players roll dice to move their pieces, carrying flags of the United States or Soviet Union, around the country of a board divided into eight spaces. At the center is a world map to remind players of the fate they hold.

Players gain two points when they land on a space that says: "Welcome to Geneva, shake hands and smile." "Wellcome to Geneva, shake hands and smile." When they share an invention that benefits both countries or when they extend an invitation to children from the opponent's country.

The stakes go up to 10 points when players pull troops out of an "important area."

But a player can lose 10 points and three turns by landing on a space where they invade a smaller country; or forfeit 15 points and two turns for rejecting a compromise in arms negotiations.

"I invented this game to stop war," Michelle wrote in a paper explaining her project. "The object is to get the most points, hopefully by compromising and making your country a nuclear-free zone. This means the children of the world will be able to grow up."

She was required as part of the project to set a price for the game. She settled on $5, "something almost anyone can afford even if you have to pay it out of your allowance a week at a time."

The game and other inventions by classmates have been on display at the Fresno Arts Center.

NCAA won't divulge 'death penalty' schools

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The NCAA decided Thursday not to make public the names of schools that are subject to having their programs suspended under the new enforcement penalty structure, a spokesman said.

The toughened penalties for recruiting and academic abuse, including suspension of programs convicted of major violations twice within five years, were adopted by near-unanimous vote at a special convention last week in New Orleans.

In a controversial move, delegates agreed to make the so-called "death penalty" measure retroactive to Sept. 1, 1980. Any school since that date has had a program on at least a one-year probation with sanctions against either post-season or television appearances is immediately vulnerable to the unprecedented penalty, which includes a two-year ban on recruiting and scholarships in the affected sport.

The sanctions will apply to the last sport penalized even if the first case involved a different sport. About 15 schools are thought to be in that category.

David Cowood, an assistant executive director of the NCAA, said the decision not to publicize the schools was made in a conference call Thursday by the six-person administrative committee, chaired by NCAA president Jack Davis of Oregon State.

"The NCAA plans to write each involved institution and notify it of its status," said Cowood. "The NCAA has had a long-standing policy of not providing information on past cases that are closed. This policy basically exists because the NCAA Council traditionally has felt that the national office should be in a position of providing negative information related to past infractions cases that would result in singling out a particular institution or a group of institutions. An additional concern is that publishing such a list could be used as a negative recruiting device."

The key dates in the death penalty provisions are the date the first penalty was begun and the date the second infraction occurred. The NCAA delegates decided that the second major infraction must occur after Sept. 1, 1985. Thus, a school that was assessed a one-year football probation in 1982 would not be subject to suspension of its program if a major violation was found to have occurred in 1984. If the 1984 violation resulted in a probation, then the five-year period would begin with the imposition of the penalty for the 1984 infraction.

"We don't want any school to have two strikes against it the minute we approve the legislation," explained one delegate at the time.

Most of the schools that have received one-year probations against either post-season or television appearances since Sept. 1, 1980, are known. A partial list includes Akron, Arizona, Arizona State, Florida, Illinois, Kansas, Southern Cal, Southern Mississippi, Tennessee State, Wisconsin, Clemson, Wichita State, Oregon, Colorado, UCLA, Southern Methodist and New Mexico.

The UCLA basketball program, to use an example, was put on probation in December 1981. Thus, any Bruin program would be subject to suspension if convicted before December 1986 of committing a major infraction after Sept. 1, 1985.

A school cannot escape the five-year clause by delaying the effective date of a probation through the NCAA appeal process or through the courts.

That calm exterior belies competitiveness of a bull rider

Richfield, hard has soft smile, hard ride

By FLYNN McROBERTS
Times-News writer

FILER — Mike Johnson is a very calm guy. That nature sits in stark contrast to the pugnacity of his greatest interest: bull riding.

A recent Richfield High graduate, Johnson is currently riding bulls, and loving it, in the Idaho High School Rodeo Finals at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds. He enters the event as the District 5 all-around cowboy, decisively capturing the honorary saddle for the division that includes Lincoln, Gooding, Blaine and Jerome counties.

"You can't put it into words," he says, trying to explain why he gets a kick out of bull riding in particular. Immediately after finishing a respectable ride on a horse named "Yellow Trash" in bareback competition here Wednesday night. "Bareback isn't as fun as bull riding. I love bull riding."

As he speaks, Johnson rests comfortably on the aging fairground bleachers, periodically cheering fellow competitors in the arena. He clearly is enjoying himself, and if things turn out as he will be doing the same next month in Rapid City, S.D., at the high school national finals.

But what about the risk of his favorite event? "They're all dangerous," he says matter-of-factly. "You're going to get hurt sooner or later."

Johnson hasn't always been able to take such a light-hearted view of rodeo competition. As a young boy, he says he can remember literally being scared sick before riding.

"The butterflies set in. I tell ya, those are killers," Johnson recalls. He says part of the draw to rodeo at a young age is the challenge of "conquering the fear. Now it's just fun."

Unfortunately, Johnson had more to deal with than free-wheeling fun last year when a bull booked him in the jaw, breaking it. He spent six weeks with his mouth wired shut and no food.

Aside from that injury, he has sustained "a lot of bruises" and pulled muscles. Nonetheless, he says the "butterflies don't set in anymore. There's still fear, but you learn to cope with it."

may head to Rapid City in both bull riding and bareback. If that happens, it won't be his first trip. As a freshman in high school, Johnson qualified for the national contest in bull riding, but "got blown out" in his words. Johnson says, "I'll go a lot farther in rodeo than football. I'm not big enough."

Like most successful rodeo cowboys, Johnson became involved in the sport at an early age. His uncle owns a ranch outside of Richfield where Johnson rode calves, steers and finally bulls.

He has competed in junior rodeos throughout the state and attended several rodeo schools, including those hosted by College of Southern

Statesman sports writers. Johnson says he likes football, but enjoys rodeo even more — partly due to his much better chance at a bright future wearing a hat and not a helmet. At 5 foot, 6 inches and about 150 pounds, Johnson says, "I'll go a lot farther in rodeo than football. I'm not big enough."

Like most successful rodeo cowboys, Johnson became involved in the sport at an early age. His uncle owns a ranch outside of Richfield where Johnson rode calves, steers and finally bulls.

He has competed in junior rodeos throughout the state and attended several rodeo schools, including those hosted by College of Southern Idaho Coach Shawn Davis and another by Pat O'Maley of Shoshone, for whom he currently works.

That experience is now paying off. Johnson admits, he is "riding well right now." Last weekend, he captured championships in two Western States Junior Rodeo Association events. In Richfield, he snagged titles in bull riding and split first and second place in bareback, while at a Burley meet he took the bull riding crown and tied for second and third in bareback.

He hooked yet another bull riding championship in an Eastern Idaho Rodeo in Mackay the week before, O'Maley reports.

Owner and operator of a private rodeo company, O'Maley is a 23-year veteran of bull riding and says Johnson has what it takes to be even a professional success in the event.

"I've seen a lot of guys come and go," he says from his ranch in Shoshone. "And I think Mike can go a long way in bull riding. He has the try and the determination — and knowledge, he knows what he's doing. I think you'll be reading about him."

Does Johnson want to hit the professional rodeo circuit? After seeing his eyes light up when bull riding is discussed, the answer is predictable.

"I'll try it," he says with a smile.

Heil hikes goat-tying rodeo lead

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

FILER — Castelford's Shellee Heil continued to dominate goat tying after the second night's action at the Idaho State High School Rodeo Finals Thursday night.

Heil, after a time of 9:10 on Wednesday, turned in a 9:08 Thursday. The all-around District Six champion leads the event with a two-hour lead of 18:16.

Buhl's Jeff Stewart was high scorer in the steer bronc competition Thursday. However, his score of 69 was well behind the totals chalked up on Wednesday. Oakley's Steve Manning rode Slim Jim for a 57, good enough for second place Thursday.

On the bareback side, Boise's Bruce Pace found himself where he was Wednesday. For the second night in a row, he had the best ride of the evening with a 57. His ride of 68 Wednesday is still tops.

Things were tough for the cowboys in the steer wrestling event. Cary Curtis from Idaho took his set down in 8:705 to win Thursday's competition. Twin Falls' Alan Stutzman, who had a 6:59 on Wednesday, turned in a disappointing 10:742 on Thursday night. Gooding's Ben York, who was second in Wednesday's run, also had a disappointing run of 14:102.

McCammon's Michelle Broadie improved her first place standing in the barrel racing event. After turning in a time of 18:56 on Wednesday, the Marsh Valley high school student rode around the barrels in 18:094 to easily lead the event. Tyla Traugher from Irwin was second with a time of 18:40.

Koski's Ronda Winberg turned in the second best score of the event in the breakaway roping event. Her time of 4:161 was enough for first place Thursday, but Heil's time of 4:130 on Wednesday still was the best.

Richard Austin of Idaho Falls rode a spinning Ruby Valey for a score of 72 to lead the bull riding event in the competition.

The team roping event was way off the pace set in Wednesday's first round action.

Poorest casher on tour share lead at Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Bill Sauton from the bottom of the professional golf money list Thursday to tie Hal Sutton for the lead of the St. Jude Memphis Classic at 7-under-par 65.

"I didn't know whether we were going to get this thing in today," said Sauton, who was in the last threesome on a Colonial Country Club course and finished just before dark.

The first round of the $500,000 tournament was delayed about 90 minutes by rain and lightning.

Sauton, who has won only $712 the year on tour, birdied the par-5 18th to tie Sutton.

"It was a good drive and I chipped up for a four-foot putt and I hit it for the birdie," he said.

David Ogrin, making his best-ever start in a PGA tournament, fired a 66 and John Mahaffey saved a hole-in-one on the par-5 fifth hole to move into a tie with George Burns at 67.

Other golfers on the leader board after the first round were Richard Zokol and Tony Sills at 68, and Buddy Gardner, Bill Morgan and Bob Tway at 69.

"It never hurts to be leading, I'll tell you," said Sutton after finishing the first 18 holes.

Sutton, a 27-year-old touring pro from Shreveport, La., started Thursday's round on the back nine and was about to hole out on 18 when the storm sounded signaling the suspension of play.

"I had gone to the green in two... I told myself 'Let's get this ball up-and-down and give us the momentum to stop on,'" Sutton said. "Fortunately, I did, hit it out to about three feet, and made the putt for a birdie. I think that made a big difference."

Ogrin, a third-year pro from Waukegan, Ill., seemed almost as interested in the Chicago Cubs as he was in golf Thursday.

"Did the Cubs win?" he asked as he came into the clubhouse. When told that the Cubs had won, the 27-year-old golfer grinned.

"All right! Good day. The way I was playing they had to win," he said.

It was easily Ogrin's best start of the season.

"I have been struggling all year on Thursday," he said. "It makes it tough making the cut, let alone making big checks."

Mahaffey's ace came during the morning round.

The 37-year-old Houston pro was at a Sunday-par when he unlimbered his 4-iron at No. 5.

"It's really just one of those shots," Mahaffey said, adding that the ace was his fourth since he joined the tour in 1971 and his second this year.

Wimbledon fans hail female favorites

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Two long-time favorites, top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd and 1977 champion Virginia Wade, brightened the rain-drenched Wimbledon tennis championships Thursday, posting first-round victories.

Lloyd, a three-time champion who only once since 1972 has failed to reach at least the semifinals on the grass courts of the All England Club, breezed past fellow American Mary Lou Piatek 6-1, 6-4.

Wade, playing in her 24th consecutive year and 197th match at Wimbledon, advanced to the second round with a 6-4, 7-5 victory over American Lea Antonoplis.

Also winning an opening-round match Thursday was Hu Na, the first Chinese woman in the modern era to play here. A qualifier, Hu stopped Britain's Annabel Croft 6-3, 7-5.

The rain, which played havoc with the schedule the first three days of the tournament, stopped play for about one hour Thursday, and the temperature remained below 70 degrees.

Anne White solved that problem by wearing a white body suit in her match against fellow American Pam Shriver, the No. 5 seed.

The White-Shriver match was halted by darkness after they had split the first two sets.

Tom Gullikson, Tom Gullikson outlasted 12th-seeded Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-3. But on the final point, which ended with both players sprawled on the court, the American sprained the thumb on his left hand as he dove for the ball.

He got the ball back over the net, but Mecir then launched himself through the air, getting his racket on the ball. His shot sailed long and the match was over.

Gullikson probably will get at least a day of rest before he is scheduled to play again.

Besides Lloyd, who is co-seeded No. 1 with Martina Navratilova, other seeded players in the women's singles who advanced to the second round Thursday included No. 3 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, No. 4 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria, No. 7 Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, No. 11 Steffi Graf of West Germany, No. 13 Carling Bassett of Canada, No. 14 Wendy Turnbull of Australia and No. 16 Kathy Rinaldi of the United States.

In the men's division, No. 6 Pat Cash of Australia, No. 8 Kevin Curren of the U.S. and No. 15 Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia were victorious.

It was Lloyd's first action since she suffered a stiff neck during practice last week.

"I felt comfortable today, but I still need some matches to get match toughness on grass," said the Fort Lauderdale, Fla., right-hander.

Piatek probably wouldn't agree.

Lloyd jumped out to a 4-0 lead before Piatek broke the right-hander's serve. It was the last game she posted on the scoreboard.

"She got her groundstrokes going in the second set, but she's played better in her career," Lloyd graciously said of the loser.

Mandlikova, who lost to Lloyd in the final here in 1981, brushed aside

Czechoslovakia's Iva Budarova just as easily. And like Lloyd, the only game Mandlikova lost was when she dropped her own serve, that coming in the fourth game of the second set.

Wade won the Wimbledon women's singles in 1977. The same year her opponent won the Wimbledon junior girls' title.

"The real trouble about doing well here is concentration, because I cannot see what I am doing it for," the 39-year-old Wade admitted. "I am not going to win the tournament, but I would like to go out to one of the top players."

"The motivation is not that I have to win, but I still have enough pride in my performance that I want to put on a good show."

In somewhat of an upset, "lucky loser" Lea Pichova of Czechoslovakia topped Sweden's Carina Karlsson 2-6, 6-3, 6-3. Last year, Karlsson was one of the "sweethearts" of Wimbledon, becoming the first woman qualifier ever to reach the quarterfinals of this Grand Slam tournament.

Another surprise winner was Greg Holmes, the former NCAA and Pan American champion from Danville, Calif. Holmes surprised Sweden's Henrik Sundstrom 6-3, 4-6, 6-7, 6-4, 6-2. Sundstrom would have been seeded 16th here if officials of the All England Club had gone strictly by computer rankings. Instead, he was supplanted in the seedings by American Tim Mayotte, a serve-and-volley specialist who has a history of doing well at Wimbledon.

West Germany's Boris Becker, a 17-year-old with a big serve who is considered a future champion on this fast surface, defeated American Hank Pfister to advance to the second round.

"I'm in the top 20 (in the world computer rankings) a little faster than I expected," Becker said. "But I'm playing in a lot of tournaments with people like (Jimmy) Connors, (John) McEnroe and (Ivan) Lendl, and there I'm just a nobody."

"I think that's good for me. But I am looking forward to not being a nobody."

Cincinnati sends San Francisco to seventh straight defeat

By The Associated Press

Wayne Krenchick collected three hits, helping the Cincinnati Reds hand the San Francisco Giants their seventh consecutive loss, 7-3 Thursday.

Krenchick hit his second homer in the second inning, and doubled and scored to start a two-run fourth off Jim Gott; 3-5, who took his fifth loss in his last six decisions.

Krenchick also singled home a run in a two-run fifth that put the Reds ahead 7-4.

The Giants completed an 0-7 road trip that left them with 16 losses in their last 22 games. They have lost 19 of their last 21 games at Riverfront Stadium, including seven in a row.

Thursday's loss was the Giants' 21st by one run this season, the most in the National League.

Cards 4, Phils 3

Willie McGee, the National League's leading batter, hit a triple, two singles, walked and scored three runs as the St. Louis Cardinals whipped the Philadelphia Phillies 4-3.

St. Louis took a 3-0 lead in the first when McGee tripled and scored on Tommy Herr's infield out.

The Cards made it 2-0 in the fourth on McGee's single and a three-base error by shortstop Derrel Thomas on Herr's groundout that rolled all the way to the left-center field wall.

Philadelpia got a run back after Kephire had retired

Major leagues

11 batters in a row when Ozzie Virgil led off the fifth with his 10th homer of the season.

The Cards made it 3-1 in the sixth as McGee opened with a walk, advanced to second on a groundout and scored on Jack Clark's double. In the seventh, Ozzie Smith hit his third homer run of the year to make it 4-1.

Cubs 4, Mets 2

Ryne Sandberg, Billy Hatcher and Leon Durham homered and Rick Sutcliffe pitched a five-hitter to lead the Chicago Cubs to a 4-2 victory over the New York Mets.

It was the Cubs' second straight triumph after suffering a 13-game losing streak which included five losses to the Mets.

Sutcliffe, 7-6, turned in his sixth complete game but was touched for home runs by George Foster and Clint Hurdle. Ron Darling, 6-2, who had shut out the Cubs and Sutcliffe 0-0 on June 17 in New York, was the loser.

Sandberg hit his ninth homer in the Chicago first but the Mets tied it in the second on Foster's fourth homer.

Padres 5, Dodgers 4

Kevin McReynolds drove in three runs with a homer and a two-run single and Jerry Royster singled in the game-winning run in the sixth inning as the San Diego Padres edged the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-4.

Royster's game-winning hit, his third of the day, came against Fernando Valenzuela, 7-8, and drove in Gary Templeton, who had singled and stolen second.

The Padres beat Valenzuela for the second time this year reaching the Dodger left-hander for nine hits and six walks and all five runs in the six innings he worked.

Braves 4, Astros 1

Claude Washington and Terry Harper each cracked two hits and scored once as the Atlanta Braves defeated the slumping Houston Astros 4-1.

The victory was the Braves' fourth straight and marked the first time since June 7, 1984 that the Braves had won as many consecutive games. The loss was the Astros' third straight and the sixth in their last seven games.

Loser Nolan Ryan, 8-5, pitched seven innings and struck out seven to increase his all-time streak to mark to 3,983, putting him 75 strikeouts ahead of runnerup Steve Carlton.

Jays 7, Brewers 3

Jesse Barfield drove in two runs, scored three times and swiped two bases to spark the Toronto Blue Jays to a 7-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Barfield's efforts helped make a winner of left-hander Jimmy Key, 6-2, who scattered seven hits, struck out three and walked three in 5 2/3 innings. Key, who has won six straight decisions, was lifted after being touched for a pair of runs in the sixth.

With two outs, Earnest Riles walked and Mark Brouhard followed with a run-scoring double. Bobby Clark drove in Brouhard with a single before Jim Ackerman came on to retire pinch-hitter Charlie Moore en route to his ninth save.

Expos 4, Pirates 2

Tim Lincecum hit a two-run homer and Jeff Reardon notched his major league-leading 22nd save as the Montreal Expos beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-2.

David Palmer, 6-6, checked the Pirates on seven hits over the first six innings, but appeared to tire in the seventh when Pittsburgh struck with two outs for both of its runs.

Joe Orsulak tripled and scored on Johnny Ray's single before Jason Thompson hit a run-scoring double in the right field wall. Tim Burke, a former Pirate farmhand, came on to strike out George Hendrick and pitched 1 2/3 innings before Reardon pitched the ninth.

Softball touney canceled

TWIN FALLS — Due to lack of interest, the Twin Falls Men's Softball Association open tournament scheduled for this weekend has been canceled.
Officials are looking to reschedule the event for July 6-7, but that date reportedly doesn't appear promising either.
Several local teams are heading to Boise for a regional qualifying meet this weekend.

Golf meeting postponed

TWIN FALLS — Because the Fourth of July falls on Thursday, the Twin Falls Municipal Women's Golf Association will not conduct its regular meeting.
The business meeting has been rescheduled for July 11 with a scramble to follow.

Astros expect long strike

HOUSTON (AP) — If major league baseball players go on strike, the walkout this summer will be a long one, Houston Astros owner J. Morgan Kousser told his players.
McMullen, a member of the Player Relations Committee negotiating board, called a one-hour closed-door team meeting on Wednesday to go over the owners' proposals to the players union. He also said the owners are unified.
Bob Knepper, the Astros' representative to the Major League Players Association, characterized the meeting as informative, but said the discussion did not change his feeling that the players would walk out.

Orioles trade for Wiggins

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Alan Wiggins, San Diego's suspended second baseman, was officially traded to the Baltimore Orioles on Thursday for reliever Roy Lee Jackson and a player to be named later.
In a statement released during the Padres afternoon game with the Los Angeles Dodgers, the Padres said they had completed the deal speculated about for several weeks.
Wiggins, who recently completed his second rehabilitation in three years for a cocaine addiction, was effectively banished from the Padres by team President Ballard Smith, who said Wiggins would never play for the team again.

Kelly gets starting nod

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Gamblers quarterback Jim Kelly is covered from a knee injury suffered last month and will start the United States Football League team's playoff game Saturday against the Birmingham Stallions.
Kelly practiced Wednesday and said he believed the ligament damage in his right knee had healed.
"I think so, because I feel fine," he said.
Kelly missed four games after suffering the injury May 26. Houston lost three of those contests with backup Todd Dillon at quarterback.

Aussies beat Pac-10 cagers

NEWCASTLE, Australia (AP) — Australia's national team exploded in the last 10 minutes to score a 96-69 victory over the Pac-10 all-star basketball team here Thursday night.
Center Ray Bonner hit 18 points and pulled down 12 rebounds as the Australians outscored the American collegians 53-20 after the Pac-10 had jumped to a 49-43 lead shortly after halftime.

Kuiper moves to radio booth

CINCINNATI (AP) — The San Francisco Giants general manager Duane Kuiper has his unconditional release Thursday, and said the 10-year major league veteran was retiring to do radio commentary for the National League team.
Kuiper, 35, finished his career with only one home run in 3,379 at-bats and a .271 batting average. He first came up in 1974 with the Cleveland Indians, who traded him to the Giants in November 1981 for pitcher Ed Whitson.

Doug Flutie works out

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — New Jersey quarterback Doug Flutie, out with a broken collar bone the last three weeks, practiced Thursday for the first time as the Patriots prepared a United States Football League playoff game against the Baltimore Stars.
General's Coach Walt Michaels would not say whether the rookie from Boston College would play against the Stars on Monday night, but his orthopedic surgeon, Dr. Mark Schottenfeld, said X-rays taken Tuesday showed sufficient healing to allow him to practice.

KC gets Continental team

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas City businessman Bernard Glannon announced Thursday that he would purchase an expansion franchise in the Continental Basketball Association.
The purchase for $500,000 requires approval by 11 of the 14 CBA owners in a vote scheduled Friday. Glannon said he had received assurances from 12 owners that they would vote in his favor.
The team, to be nicknamed the Sizzlers, would play in Kansas City's Municipal Auditorium. The Kansas City Council is to vote Wednesday on a proposed lease for the auditorium.

Soccer nations set up violence curbs

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — Sports ministers from 21 West European countries Thursday adopted a binding "international" treaty to minimize future outbreaks of violence at soccer matches.
The ministers' meeting followed a series of bloody incidents at Europe's soccer stadiums culminating in a May 29 riot at the European Cup final match in Brussels, Belgium, which claimed 38 lives.
In addition to the treaty, the ministers said they would give European soccer's governing body a detailed list of binding requirements for the design and surveillance of soccer stadiums.
Under the agreement, soccer clubs and stadium owners would have to segregate rival spectators at matches and impose strict controls on ticket sales to prevent the intermingling of rival fans.
The sale of alcohol at stadiums would be restricted or banned, and spectators would be forbidden to bring in any objects which could be used as weapons.
The ministers also pledged to adopt national legislation, giving local courts power to prosecute rowdy spectators on criminal charges, no matter where they're from.
The authorities also would be obligated to provide sufficient police to prevent rioting in and around stadiums and along spectators' transit routes.

The ministers recommended a licensing system for large stadiums where international matches usually are played. A standing committee would be created to monitor compliance with the treaty and recommend possible amendments.
In their resolution, the ministers said they would give the Union of European Football Associations (UEFA) a set of conditions for the play of international matches.
That would include requirements for the design of stadiums, the size of spectator sections, access and exit routes, crowd control monitoring and beverage sales.

Surgical error extends griddler's recuperation

HOBART, Ind. (AP) — The summer plans of Wisconsin safety Robb Johnston were changed by a surgical error that has him hobbling on two fiberglass casts and hospital officials a little red-faced.
Johnston, 21, a former Hobart High School all-state safety, underwent surgery June 13 to remove bone chips in his left foot. But, when he woke up in the recovery room at the University of Wisconsin Hospital in Madison, he noticed "bandages on my right foot."
"I couldn't believe it. I told the nurses that they did the wrong foot and at first, they didn't believe me," said Johnston, expected to start at safety for the Wisconsin Badgers. "They told the doctor (Dr. William Clancy) who had treated me during football season for my left ankle. I went back into the operating room and had surgery on my left foot."
Clancy, the team physician, is taking full responsibility. He said someone inadvertently marked down the wrong foot and X-rays showed an excess bone growth on the right heel as well as the left.
The mistake "bothered me a lot. Tremendously. I've been operating for 14 years and never had a screw-up like this," said Clancy.
"Clancy is a prestigious doctor — probably the best in the country in knee reconstruction," said Johnston. "He treats all the Wisconsin athletes. I guess I just happened to get the black cloud on my shoulders."
"My parents are pretty upset about it, especially my dad (James). He really doesn't like surgery," said Johnston, who arrived home Tuesday after having the first set of casts removed to examine the progress of his recovery.

Budget deficit soars to record high in May

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government suffered a $10.5 billion budget deficit in May, the biggest monthly red ink total on record, the Treasury Department reported Thursday. The deficit last month was 19.2 percent higher than the previous monthly record of $3.9 billion in May 1984.

As usual, the three biggest spending categories last month were the Department of Health and Human Services, which makes Social Security payments; the Defense Department and interest on the national debt.

Defense spending totaled $21.5 billion last month and $15.7 billion for the fiscal year, 9.2 percent above the past year.

For the first eight months of the 1985 fiscal year, the deficit totals $16.2 billion, 11.1 percent higher than at the same time a year earlier.

Interest on the national debt came to $13.9 billion last month and $14.4 billion for the current fiscal year, 18.4 percent above the pace set in fiscal 1984.

So far in this fiscal year, which began Oct. 1, the government has run a deficit every month except April, when a flood of income tax returns resulted in a rare $12.4 billion surplus.

Interest on the national debt came to $13.9 billion last month and $14.4 billion for the current fiscal year, 18.4 percent above the pace set in fiscal 1984.

For May government revenues totaled $39.8 billion, while spending totaled $50.2 billion.

Interest on the national debt came to $13.9 billion last month and $14.4 billion for the current fiscal year, 18.4 percent above the pace set in fiscal 1984.
