Saturday night, NBC-TV reported the four missing hostages were either on a routine flight or in the larger group...

We've been told we're going to Damascus, but we're still waiting for the last four to get here.

Berri had pledged that all $9 will be released.

Israel didn't make any deal but obviously if the hostages reach their homes we won't have the obstacle that we've had until now to proceed with our own way of releasing the prisoners.
Israel freed 31 of the Lebanese on Monday, but there were reports that the release was postponed to avoid giving the impression of bowing to terrorist demands.

apparently ironing out details of the exchange.
Jubran Korieh, spokesman for Syria's president, Hafez Assad, said:
'Syria hopes that every party concerned will fulfill its commitments as the Lebanese prisoners in Aitil will soon be released.'
Berri twice postponed a planned Saturday news conference at which he was expected to announce the hostage release and declare that he had negotiated freedom for the Lebanese in Aitil.

We just have to wait and see what they do," said Robert Moore of Asheville, N.C., brother-in-law of hostage Dr. Richard Young Moon.
"Until this is over, we'll just take this hour after hour," he said.
"We don't know when it [release] is going to be, but we are rejecting that's for sure," said Loretta McLaughlin, 72, of Deerfield, Ill., whose son, the Rev. James W. McLaughlin, was among the hostages.

Larry Speakes said Reagan was "obviously disappointed that the release that we anticipated has not been completed, but he is hopeful that the situation will resolve itself."

helped work out the release arrangement learned that Berri had failed to produce all 59 remaining victims of the June 14 hijacking.
Although a senior administration official had warned Friday night there were "a lot of opportunities for screw-ups," a mood of great expectations swept the White House in the hours before dawn as officials gathered to await word of the 39 remaining hijack victims were on their way home.

and take them on to Frankfurt, West Germany, where Vice President George Bush wants to welcome their return to freedom.
Instead, most of the passengers remained at a school near Beirut International Airport. When they were about an hour overdue in Damascus, a Beirut associate announced that they were being retained pending the receipt of a U.S. guarantee that there would be no retaliation for the hijacking.

The president, speaking in Chicago Heights about his plan for overhauling the income tax system, interjected a few comments about terrorism.
"We cannot accept these repeated and vicious attacks against our nation and its citizens," the president said.
"Terrorists, and those who support them, must — and will — be held to account."

After receiving word at 3 a.m. from the State Department that the hostages were being freed, Axel Traugott made plans to fly to West Germany to greet his brother, Raff.
"I'm not a terribly emotional person," said Traugott, of Boxford, Mass., "but I'll feel ... a lot better once they are on that plane out of the Middle East."
"You get up for every good piece of news, but if you get yourself up for too many things you can easily be let down," Traugott said.

problem through a combination of tax increases and cuts curbs on government benefit programs as the Social Security freeze.
But Reagan's campaign to revise the law that limits tax has made lawmakers jittery about raising the issue of tax increases. The fear is that doing so would be seen as trying to torpedo the overhaul effort.

another reminder last week of the problem they are facing.
The Treasury Department reported the budget deficit in May was $40.5 billion, eclipsing the previous monthly high mark of $35.9 billion in May 1984.
In addition, the deficit for the first eight months of the current fiscal year was $156.2 billion, another record.

which ends Sept. 30, will be about $203 billion, compared with $175.4 billion last year and $195.4 billion in 1983.
Declaring that stopping the deficit surge will not be easy, White House budget director David A. Stockton told an American Enterprise Institute gathering June 17 that "the correction of the current situation requires extraordinary measures of political will and consensus."
"Even the catalytic force of a economic crisis" may be needed, he said.

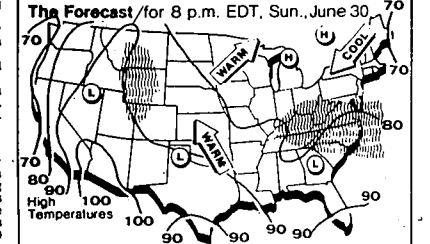

The politicians of the 1970s rode the favorable fiscal trends," he said.
"They enjoyed the easy choices — mostly dispensing the favors of government rather than extracting its costs."
"Those successors in the 1980s have reaped the whirlwind. They face a sentence of hard labor in the political salinities and confront a relentless imperative to take from the people rather than give."

Stockton described the government as divided "between an anti-taxing White House and a defend-the-inherited-spending House of Representatives," with the Senate itself divided in a no man's land in between.

Man charged in child's death

MIAMI (AP) — The father of a brain-damaged girl was charged with first-degree murder Saturday after he allegedly pumped two bullets into her comatose body as she lay in a hospital crib, police said.

Charles Griffith, 25, spent about three hours with his 3-year-old daughter, Joy, in an intensive care unit of Miami Children's Hospital before Friday night's shooting, said Metro-Dade Police Sgt. David Rivers.

"It has all the classical signs of a mercy killing, but God only knows," said James Hutton, a police spokesman. "I don't know if the guy's wrapped too tight."

The father of Miami Beach, was "upset, but calm" after the shooting, Rivers said.

Today is longest day of year

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Sunday feels longer than most days, it isn't your imagination.

Sunday will be the longest day of the year, as scientists add an extra second to keep the world's clocks in time with the Earth and the Sun.

The nation's official atomic clocks in Boulder, Colo., and Washington will get this extra second at 5:59:59 p.m. MDT Sunday, according to the U.S. Naval Observatory, which is the country's official timekeeper.

Leap seconds are used from time to time to accommodate for changes in the Earth's rate of rotation, which is not constant.

The first leap seconds were inserted in 1972. Sunday's addition will mark the 13th leap second inserted since that time. The last was in 1983.

Flea spray has police running

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — The spraying was intended to get rid of fleas in the "County" Emergency Operations Center, but it was police and fire dispatchers who fled.

"We wanted to give it a good going over," said Larry Spahn, director of the county's Department of Facilities Management.

But after the spraying Thursday night, dispatchers complained of headaches, nausea and dizziness. Operations continued from two mobile units until the fumes cleared on Friday.

No one complaining of reaction to the spraying was hospitalized.

'Social hosts' free of liability

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A "social host" who entertains guests at home cannot be held liable in Missouri for serving alcohol to someone who later gets in a traffic accident while intoxicated, a state appeals court has ruled.

The Missouri Court of Appeals said Friday that social hosts cannot be held under the law the same as bar operators, who sell drinks for a living.

"There is, and should be, a legitimate concern for the problem of drunken driving, but the extension of liability to a social host opens the door to areas of the law yet unexplored having a substantial impact on a person's everyday social and family affairs," the court said.

The court upheld a St. Louis Circuit Judge's decision to throw out a wrongful-death claim filed by William Harriman, whose son was killed when the car he was riding in was involved in an accident. Harriman argued that a man at a home where the underage driver had become intoxicated should be held negligent.

Report: drug program falls short of goals

WASHINGTON (AP) — A program to coordinate tactical strikes against drug traffickers has "fallen far short" of success in reducing the flow of narcotics into the United States, congressional investigators said in a report released Saturday.

The General Accounting Office said the National Narcotics Border Interdiction System made a difference in only a small number of drug seizures in which it participated. Most would have occurred anyway, the report said.

The GAO also surveyed federal, state and local law enforcement officials in border regions served by the program. Of those responding, the largest percentage said the program had no effect on drug seizures. A small number said the program worsened law enforcement efforts.

The report was requested by Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., chairman of a House Government Operations subcommittee that has been investigating the effectiveness of law enforcement agencies fighting drug traffickers. English said he expects to hold a hearing on the report in July.

The two-year-old border interdiction system, which operates under Vice President George Bush, is a program to coordinate the work of 13 federal agencies that have responsibilities for intercepting illegal airborne and cross-border importation of narcotics.

"The concept upon which NNBS was founded, the coordination of drug interdiction efforts — is sound, and NNBS has made positive contributions toward enhancing communications among agencies..." the GAO said.

"However, NNBS' accomplishments as a nationwide coordinator of drug interdiction efforts have been minimal, and the improvements... achieved have fallen far short of substantially reducing the flow of illegal drugs into the United States."

The program includes the Coast Guard, U.S. Customs, the Drug Enforcement Administration, the FBI, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, the military services and state and local law enforcement agencies.

Unique in the federal government, NNBS has no budget and no separate staff but operates with money and personnel from the participating agencies.

The central headquarters in Washington is supplemented with offices in New York, Chicago and four southern border areas investigated by the GAO — Miami, New Orleans, El Paso, Texas, and Long Beach, Calif. In interviews and conclusions, the GAO studied 77 drug seizures in which the four centers participated and sent a standardized questionnaire to 58 federal, state and local law enforcement officials in the regions.

Contras fail at efforts to aid refugees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief Nicaraguan rebel force initiated two efforts last year to raise U.S. money for Nicaraguan refugees through outside groups, but almost no aid has reached the civilians, according to interviews with principals and internal documents.

Edgar Chamorro, a former director of the rebels' Nicaraguan Democratic Force, or FDN, said the first fundraising effort, using the Panamanian-based Human Development Foundation, was started last spring with CIA money to divert attention from agency plans to "launder" funds through other governments.

But the CIA denied any illegal attempt to circumvent the congressional aid "cut-off" a year ago that halted CIA support of the FDN, the largest Contra rebel group fighting to oust Nicaragua's leftist government.

In the past month, the House and Senate have voted to resume non-lethal aid to the rebels.

Another FDN-connected corporation, the Nicaraguan Development Council, helped start a second, larger fundraising effort through the Nicaraguan Refugee Fund last summer, according to several individuals close to the fund.

On April 15, the fund held a $250 to $500-a-plate banquet featuring a speech by President Reagan that drew nearly 700 people. But dinner officials say the fund is in debt and some have complained that contributions were not fully accounted for.

Alvaro Rizo, the fund's founder and a former diplomat under the late Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza, said the fund has "very friendly" relations with the FDN's development council but denied any formal ties. Rizo also said no money from the fund has gone to the FDN.

FDN's Washington spokesman Bosco Matamoros, who says he is executive director of the development council, also denied a link between the council and the fund and the fund. But two sources close to the fund who insisted on anonymity said the fund was started last year through an agreement between Miner and Fraser Public Affairs Inc. and the FDN's development council.

Miner and Fraser president, confirmed that her firm did have an agreement with the council to plan a refugee fund and that account was handled by Rizo, who at the time worked at Miner and Fraser. Later, Ms. Fraser said she could find no record of that agreement and claimed it must have been a personal arrangement between the council and Rizo.

She said the fund was incorporated by Rizo last September as part of the planning effort, but early this year the council fund was reorganized with Americans put in prominent positions.

Senator says Reagan cut FBI terrorist plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan Administration turned down the FBI's request for $10.6 million to beef up its counter-terrorism program this year and last year, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said Saturday.

In a statement, Bentsen called the cuts "one of the most foolish things I've seen since I've been up here" and said he would introduce legislation to restore the money.

"Here you have terrorism on the increase around the world, and you know it's going to increase in the United States, and we must fight it. Yet the (Office of Management and Budget), in the administration, cut back by about $11 million on the money that was committed to fight terrorism. I've sources within the FBI that told me about this," Bentsen said.

OMB spokesman Ed Dale said the agency does not discuss budget decisions, but said, "If that was so, all I know is the FBI didn't appeal it."

FBI spokesman Lane Bonner said the agency "supports the administration's efforts in our behalf for FY 1985 and 1986."

In a memorandum to Bentsen, Jim Currie of the Senate Intelligence Committee staff said the requested $10.6 million would have gone for:

- 191 additional agents and other personnel for expansion of hostage rescue teams; terrorism analysis; and expanded terrorism task forces

In Boston; Chicago, New York and Washington plus new task forces in Los Angeles, Newark and San Francisco;

- equipment and training for hostage rescue teams;
- 40 automobiles for agents;
- overtime for local police assisting the FBI.

"The counter-terrorist section of the FBI, which these funds would augment, is the unit that would deal with such things as the Libyan hit squads that were a threat last year or so go or any Shiite or Iranian group that might decide to stage a terrorist attack against a U.S. target," Currie said.

Currie said the administration's budget request of $9.8 million is $10.6 million short of what the FBI submitted to OMB for fiscal year 1986 and in the FY 1985 supplemental request. The FBI's budget in fiscal year 1985 was $39.5 million, he said.

Hijack crisis blurs distinction between Reagan and Carter

WASHINGTON — Of all the commentary about President Reagan's handling of the TWA hijacking, none is more painful to the White House than the comparisons being made with the Iranian hostage crisis. "There is nothing worse than likening Ronald Reagan to Jimmy Carter," says one White House aide. A senior administration official who has been critical of White House attempts to blame "every problem" on Carter, sees this hostage crisis as an example of events finally catching up with Reagan. "Carter got blamed for a downturn in the business cycle and the effects of the energy crisis; we claimed credit for the economic upswing and the oil glut," says this official. "But the fact is the administration has no coherent strategy, whether you are talking about the budget deficit or international terrorism."

A senior State Department official agrees. Reiterating the standard line that the administration will not negotiate with terrorists and will respond militarily to attacks on U.S. citizens, this official says, "We have a policy, but it isn't real."

For nearly two years senior administration officials have attempted to thrash out an effective strategy for dealing with international terrorism. Even before the October 1983 attack on the Marine barracks in Beirut, Secretary of State George P. Shultz and National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane (then deputy to William P. Clark) forcefully argued for the aggressive use of American military power in Lebanon. During a series of crucial meetings in September 1983, Shultz and McFarlane warned that if the legitimate government of Lebanon was undermined, Beirut would become the international center for terrorism. Their efforts to expand U.S. involvement were obstructed by Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, who was ultimately upheld by Reagan. But even after the United States best a hasty retreat from Lebanon, Shultz in particular kept up a steady drumbeat for the more aggressive use of military force.

GEORGE P. SHULTZ favors retaliation

The internal skirmishing between Shultz and Weinberger went public in a series of statements made last autumn, with Weinberger enumerating the risks of military action and Shultz arguing the United States must be prepared to take these risks.

Neither then nor subsequently did Reagan intervene to settle the issue. Instead, he allowed matters to drift. Pentagon officials say the internal debate continued right through the December 1984 hijacking of a Kuwaiti airliner (that left two Americans dead) until now. However, officials in the National Security Council and the State Department who supported Shultz's line took heart from a series of private and not-so-private warnings the administration issued over the last few months. Pua boded by one Shultz supporter less than a month ago, "The next attack on American citizens will bring immediate military retaliation." Despite such rhetoric, when the hostages were taken, Shultz could do little but adopt a wait-and-see attitude, backed by the predictable inertia of the State Department's bureaucracy.

The belief now of State Department officials is that this hostage drama will be resolved peacefully. They believe it is in the power and the interest of Lebanese Shia leader Nabih Berri to arrange a prisoner swap with Israel. However, if as some U.S. oficials hint, the president intends to order a retaliatory military strike once the hostages are released. It will be an action born of frustration rather than an endorsement of Shultz's arguments. In the view of a number of insiders, a one-time military strike will not end the internal debate over creation of a comprehensive anti-terrorism strategy.

The problem is that, if anything, the second-term Reagan staff shows a diminished capacity to forge coherent political, diplomatic or economic strategies.

The departure from the White House of chief of staff James A. Baker III and his replacement by Donald T. Regan has, in the view of a number of insiders, only made planning more difficult. Baker, while never inclined toward long-range strategic thinking, nonetheless were widely viewed as a top-notch problem solver. Regan, to hear from some White House sources (as well as to judge by results), is long on organizational structure and short on substance.

Unlike Baker, the new chief of staff requires daily attendance by all key

White House personnel at an early morning staff meeting. He also places a high priority on regular sessions of what is called the Legislative Strategy Group. But according to participants in both forums, issues are raised on an ad hoc basis. These insiders are particularly critical of Regan's inconsistency and seeming inability to follow through.

Regan, in turn, has been outraged by press leaks about the Legislative Strategy Group sessions. A recent spate of stories prompted him to threaten to bring lie detectors into the White House.

But even Shultz and McFarlane are, at times, guilty of undercutting their own attempts at long-range planning.

If it weren't for the TWA hijacking, the big Middle East news last week would have been Shultz and McFarlane's attempt to provide a political and military boost to Jordan's King Hussein. After purposefully distancing themselves from the peace process for nearly a year — arguing instead for direct Arab-Israeli negotiations — Shultz and McFarlane have jumped at Hussein's relatively modest proposals for progress toward Arab-Israeli peace talks.

Immediately prior to Hussein's visit to Washington at the end of May, McFarlane and Shultz were downbeat in their forecast.

Richard Straus and Ken Wollack are co-editors of the Middle East Policy Survey.

"We work on trust building and self-esteem for the kids too."

All kids need to know that they're loved and understood — but kids who come from alcoholic homes also need to know that they're O.K.

Children of alcoholics (COA's) often learn coping skills that result in what may seem like, strange behavior. COA's feel isolated and may not be aware that others share their fears and concerns.

That's where Walker Act Center COA classes can help. Our eight week session gives kids the chance to learn that they're not alone and to build their trust and self-esteem. Classes for children ages 4-13 are held throughout the Magic Valley area.

For specific information about COA classes contact the Walker Act Center at 1-806-227-4190 or the Twin Falls Outreach Office at 737-2470 for more information.

Island president slain by gunman

HARUO REMELIIK
Shot outside home

KOROR, Palau (AP) — President Haruo Remeliik of the western Pacific island Republic of Palau was shot and killed early Sunday by an unknown assailant, his office said.

Remeliik, in his second term and the only elected president the island republic has known, was shot three times as he walked from his car to his home in the capital city of Koror, said presidential assistant Bonifacio Basilius.

Vice President Alfonso R. Oterong, who succeeds Remeliik, was to return immediately to Palau from New York, said Basilius. Thomas Remengesau, Palau's minister of justice, was named acting president until Oterong's return, said Trust Territory High Commissioner Janet McCoy.

Basilius said the shooting occurred about 12:25 a.m. Sunday — 8:25 a.m. MDT Saturday. Palau is on the west side of the international date line.

Remeliik, 51, became Palau's first president in January 1981. He was re-elected to a second term in November and was sworn in Jan. 1.

A spokeswoman at Koror's hospital confirmed that Remeliik had died.

Police were searching Koror for a suspect, said Basilius.

Remeliik's family was watching television when they heard shots fired, said Basilius. Three of four bullets struck Remeliik, he said.

Palau, a string of 200 islands, has a population of 14,000 spread through eight islands, with 8,000 people living in the capital. Palau is about 600 miles east of the Philippines, 700 miles south of Guam and 4,500 miles southwest of Hawaii.

A part of the Trust Territory of the Pacific administered by the United States under a United Nations mandate proclaimed in 1947, it is in the process of becoming a semi-autonomous republic. The termination of the trust must be approved by Congress and the United Nations, said Kenneth Balles, a State Department spokesman for Pacific Islands affairs.

Basilius could offer no immediate explanation for the shooting.

Irish now say location of flight box doubtful

CORK, Ireland (AP) — Irish officials said Saturday night they doubted the fix reported on the position of the in-flight recorder from an Air-India jumbo jet that crashed in the North Sea with the loss of 329 lives.

"There was a tentative location for the black box but now that's doubtful," said Kate O'Toole, a spokeswoman for the Irish Government Information Service.

She said the government initially believed it had "a tentative fix" based on signals intercepted by a British vessel, but another British ship, the civilian survey vessel Guardline Locator, was in the crash area Saturday "and now the signals are not coming through as strongly. The location is now doubtful." The second British ship was chartered by Indian aviation authorities.

In London, the British Defense Ministry said the Irish had been too hasty in concluding that faint, intermittent signals picked up by a British naval seabed operations vessel, HMS Challenger, came from the recorders.

"The Challenger has not been able to identify the location or sources of the signals. It is just too faint to say what it is," he spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Irish Navy vessel Le Aolfe, towing a sophisticated Canadian deep-sea listening device called a hydrophone, was to leave late Saturday night from Cork for the crash area 120 miles southwest of Ireland.

An Air-India Flight 182 vanished from radar screens and crashed in the North Atlantic last Sunday on a flight from Canada to India via London. Investigators think the crash may have been caused by a terrorist bomb.

The Boeing 747's "black box" flight recorders, believed to be lying on the sea bed under 6,000 feet of water, could provide important clues to the cause of the crash.

A Defense Ministry spokesman in London told the AP: "It remains our view that the faint, intermittent signal picked up by the Challenger has not yielded enough information to say whether or not it came from the recorders."

Falcon program gets boost in breeding pair

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's three-year-old peregrine falcon restoration program has produced its first known breeding pair, complete with at least two nestlings, the head of the Fish and Game Department's nongame wildlife program says.

"What a going-away gift for me. I'm elated," said Mari Morache, who planned to retire effective June 30 after 28 years with the department. "The successful mating is a highly significant development in efforts to restore the species to viable numbers."

Thirty-three peregrines have been released at three "hacking" or nesting sites across southern Idaho since the program began in 1982,

Morache said. "We hope many of them will eventually return as breeders."

Peregrines nested in Idaho naturally until their population across the country was decimated by contact with DDT and other chemicals, he said. The last known breeding pairs in Idaho were reported in the late 1960s.

The Peregrine Fund's World Birds of Prey Center in Boise supplies peregrines for a number of states participating in a restoration program, which began in Idaho three years ago with help from J.R. Simplot Co. and Boise Cascade Corp. Morache said the U.S. Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management also have given valuable cooperation.

Watkins ready to make bid

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — State Sen. Dane Watkins, R-Idaho Falls, said he has received enough contributions for a possible 2nd Congressional District bid and that he will file a financial report with the Federal Election Commission.

Watkins said in a news release that the support he has received so far leaves little doubt that he soon will formally announce his candidacy for the 1986 race against Democrat Richard Stallings.

"The early and significant monetary support I have received thus far is very gratifying and is an indication to me that the old-fashioned values I maintain in my personal and public life are still in style in Idaho's heartland," Watkins said.

Federal law requires the filing of a campaign disclosure report when contributions reach $5,000.

Kooskia to honor colorful ex-senator on Fourth of July

KOOSKIA (AP) — One of the most colorful figures in Idaho's political history will be honored on the Fourth of July with the dedication of a memorial at the Kooskia City Hall.

Former U.S. Senator Glen Taylor died last year after a career that ran the gamut from traveling in a theater company to running for vice president on the 1948 Progressive Party ticket headed by Henry Wallace.

His name survives today in the "Taylor Topper" — a hairpiece he developed that is still sold nationally.

An Independence Day ceremony honoring Taylor in the town he called home will include a skit used by the theater troupe headed by Taylor and his wife, Dora, before he entered politics.

The memorial to be dedicated includes a large stone from the Clearwater River area with an inlaid plaque.

Gould-AMI plans layoff of 200 more

Simplot idles 18 from plant at Conda site

CONDA (AP) — A slowdown in sales of phosphate fertilizer and related products is being blamed for the layoffs of 18 J.R. Simplot Co. workers in Conda, a company official says.

The Smoky Canyon phosphate mining operation also would lose about four temporary employees, the spokesman said.

Phosphate ore is mined at Smoky Canyon and slurried by pipeline to the Conda facility, north of Soda Springs, where it undergoes preliminary processing before being transported to the Simplot fertilizer plant near Pocatello.

Pillsbury buys potato plant from French Co.

SHELLEY (AP) — Pillsbury Co. has purchased the R.T. French Co. potato processing plant and packing shed here, French officials say.

Terms of the agreement were not released, but French Personnel Manager Ken Myers said the sale will be completed before summer's end. Myers said the sale is not expected to affect the more than 800 Idaho employees at the Shelley plant.

Johnny Thompson of Pillsbury's office in Minneapolis, Minn., said Friday no decisions have been made yet on what to do with facilities or the employees.

"Present plans are to continue the operation as it is," he said. "Until we know how we're going to operate, it would be improper for me to comment on what may happen with the employees."

POCATELLO (AP) — A continued downturn in the computer and electronics industry is forcing officials at Gould-AMI Inc.'s Pocatello semiconductor plant to lay off 200 workers, a company spokesman said.

"We are going to be having another layoff, but we haven't finalized the timing or the size of the layoff," said Nancy Horstoch, adding that positions also would be cut from Gould-AMI's plant in Santa Clara, Calif.

Employees were informed of the planned layoffs on Wednesday, she said. "We don't know exactly when this will happen, but it won't be a month from now. It will be much sooner than that."

When 250 Gould-AMI employees were terminated in April, Ms. Horstoch said the company hoped that cut would be the last one this year.

"We really believe with this layoff, we have made a large enough cut to sustain us. . . . Our goal was to just do it once," she said.

But any new layoffs would represent the third round of cuts this year. Gould-AMI laid off 55 workers in February.

About 1,000 people still are employed at the facility.

IRS agents seize antique car from Jerry Lee Lewis's home

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Internal Revenue Service agents have seized two cars and other property from the home of Jerry Lee Lewis, backed by liens filed in federal court that say he owes more than $1.3 million in back income taxes.

Tax agents on Friday went to a luxury downtown apartment building where Lewis occupies a penthouse and seized a late-model Mercedes-Benz from the garage. At his home in Neshville, Miss., about 20 miles south of Memphis, the agents seized a 1955 Chevrolet, a jet ski and a mechanical bull.

Lewis, known for such hits as "Great Balls of Fire" and "Whole Lotta Shakin' Goin' On," has been having trouble with the IRS for several years.

In 1980, the agency auctioned some of his property, including several antique and classic automobiles, musical instruments and firearms.

Hello, I must be going: Collins cancels concert

CLARKSTON, Mich. (AP) — Pop singer Phil Collins canceled a scheduled performance after one song, saying a sore throat prevented him from continuing.

The singer, who was performing Friday night at Pine Knob Music Theater, told the sold-out audience he could not sing anymore. WWJ radio in Detroit reported Saturday.

Policewoman gets job, nude photographs back

NEW YORK (AP) — For Cibella Borges, no nudes is good news.

Miss Borges, 28, who lost her job as a New York City police officer when nude pictures of her appeared in a magazine, has been given those photos as part of an out-of-court settlement of a suit she filed.

"I can sleep now, and know I can become a good cop without worrying about more pictures being printed," said Miss Borges, who regained her job on the force after a court fight and resumed police duty last week.

As part of a settlement of her suit against Club, Miss Borges was given the 80 to 100 photographs that Curran took of her.

Sex therapists say their opponents 'stimulating'

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Opponents of research into human sexuality probably did us more good than harm, say sexual therapy pioneers William H. Masters and Virginia Johnson-Masters.

"They were — a word we never use in this field — stimulating," Masters-Johnson said Friday.

Johnson-Masters said changes in post-World War II America led them to conduct the kind of research they wanted to do, despite opposition.

"The human need (for sexual help) finally pre-empted the repressions of society," she said. "It freed up those people who wanted to bring help to the people who have sexual problems."

"Sex isn't something to be pulled off the shelf now and then but should be a natural part of life, said the couple, in Minneapolis for a convention of the Society for Sex Therapy and Research.

"People cannot make sexual functioning work," Masters said. "They can let it happen."

Oldest living man turns 120 in Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Shigeyoshi Izumi, believed to be the world's oldest man with a verifiable birthday, turned 120 on Saturday and attended a celebration on the remote island of Tokunoshima in southern Japan.

He attributed his longevity to a daily shot of liquor and simple foods.

Town hall officials in Izumi and family members said Izumi got up at his customary time of around 6 a.m. and ate a breakfast of rice gruel and soy bean paste soup.

After taking a morning nap, he was examined by a doctor who allowed him to attend the ceremonies at an elementary school auditorium.

"I am sure," Izumi told State Minister Masaharu Gotoda over the telephone from the ceremonies, the officials said.

Appearing in formal Japanese costume, Izumi received a bouquet of flowers and waved to 500 people who attended despite an approaching typhoon.

He received birthday telegrams from Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone and about 500 other prominent Japanese, officials said.

Navy doctor's abilities questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy admiral who has been overseeing the malpractice investigation of Dr. Donald M. Billig told relatives of one of Billig's patients last fall that he was "a fine surgeon" who would provide "the best of care," the relatives say.

"The patient, Rose Genevieve Sims, died on the operating table.

"The recollection of her relatives' conversations with Rear Adm. William M. McDermott Jr., chief of the Naval Medical Command, raises questions about the extent of McDermott's knowledge about Billig and whether he had an occasion to personally check the surgeon's credentials.

"Ten other Navy officers are facing or have already been disciplined for accepting those credentials as adequate. Billig, who now faces a court-martial on four involuntary manslaughter counts and 28 lesser charges, lost his privileges at a hospital in Monmouth, N.J., before joining the Navy. The Navy has also learned that Billig's vision is flawed.

Joanne Bilbo, daughter of Mrs. Sims, and her husband Thomas Bilbo said they discussed Billig's abilities with McDermott. Mrs. Sims underwent open-heart surgery on Oct. 1, 1984, less than two months before Billig's privileges at the Bethesda Naval Hospital were suspended because of doubts about his "surgical competency."

Ms. Sims died after 12 hours on the operating table under circumstances that we always thought were strange," said Thomas Bilbo.

"They told us she died of intractable hemorrhaging," he said. "They said every time they tried to take her off the heart-lung machine, the stitches wouldn't hold."

"If they had thought her heart was so bad (that veins couldn't be stitched), why would they do it?" asked Mrs. Bilbo.

The four manslaughter counts on which Billig is to be tried do not involve Mrs. Sims.

McDermott declined to discuss the matter with a reporter. The Navy released a brief statement late Friday saying only that McDermott recalled having visited Ms. Sims before her surgery at the Bilbos' request and that "he reassured her."

A Navy spokesman, Lt. Steve Pietropoli, said he could not elaborate on the statement and did not know if McDermott had discussed Billig's qualifications with the Bilbos before the operation.

The Navy confirmed that Billig had operated on Ms. Sims and that McDermott had known Mrs. Bilbo for more than 25 years.

Court picks Utah man to head office

WASHINGTON (AP) — L. Ralph Mecham, a Utah native, has been appointed by the U.S. Supreme Court to head the Administrative Office for the federal court system.

Mecham, a former aide to Sen. Wallace F. Bennett, R-Utah, has resided in Washington since 1952. He most recently worked as a representative of the Arco Corp.

A University of Utah graduate, Mecham earned his law degree from George Washington University while working for Bennett. He also earned a Master's of Public Administration from Harvard.

After Bennett left the Senate, Mecham became vice president at the University of Utah. He was later appointed special assistant to the Secretary of Commerce and federal co-chairman of the Four Corners Regional Commission.

recently at some of the company's stores in other states, including Utah, said Lt. Don Klein of the Arapahoe County Sheriff's Department.

The burglars apparently were able to be in and out of the stores in as little as two minutes, investigators said.

"The loot included rings, necklaces — you name it," said Bob Deutsch, a spokesman for the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department. "They went after the expensive stuff."

The string of burglaries began shortly before midnight Thursday at the Labelle's store near Southwest Plaza in Jefferson County. An alarm went off at 11:39 p.m. and a sheriff's officer reached the store in two minutes, but the burglars were gone.

At 11:57 p.m., the alarm went off at the store on University Boulevard in Arapahoe County. At 12:36 a.m., police in Aurora received an alarm at the store on South Havana Street.

More than $100,000 in jewelry was taken in Arapahoe County, while $50,000 was scooped up in Jefferson County and another $44,000 disappeared at Aurora, officials said.

"We suspect it's the same group," said Klein. "The travel time between stores is about right."

Seismologist Walter Arabasz stands flanked by instruments at the university lab he directs

Utah scientist feels region's pulse in effort to anticipate earthquakes

By JENNIFER BRANDLON
The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — The earth is moving. Sometimes it moves slowly, shifting in infinitesimal steps which take years to perceive. At other times it moves swiftly, tearing the ground in an explosion of power and destruction.

Walter Arabasz is the man with his finger on the pulse of the restless Intermountain Seismic Belt, a bed of minor faults which constantly joggle the region but rarely are sensed except by ultra-sensitive equipment. "What we're trying to do is find some clues as to patterns of earthquake behavior, characteristics of earthquakes that might change with time through a seismic cycle," said Arabasz, who was appointed April 9 as director of the University of Utah Seismograph Stations.

The challenge for Arabasz and his colleagues is, with the help of a chain of about 85 monitoring stations and evidence of prehistoric quakes, to try to determine what an invisible labyrinth of faults will do next. "This much is known — earthquakes result from a buildup of stresses in the planet's crust. Quakes are followed by a series of aftershocks, which redistribute the stresses and start the accumulation process afresh. Stress comes from the thermal turmoil beneath the ground, a process which is lifting the Wasatch Mountains an average of one millimeter per year.

"What we need to know, for each individual fault or each individual region, is where it lies within the earthquake cycle — whether it has a recent memory of a large earthquake, whether it's in an intermediate stage, or whether it's in a late stage of preparation," said Arabasz.

He cited two major concerns about the benign-seeming seismic structure that underlies Utah, Idaho and parts of Montana, Wyoming, Nevada and Arizona, a region which experiences thousands of tremors each year. First, although most faults in the area produce only "background" seismic activity — quakes measuring up to five or six on the Richter scale — there is the chance a midsize quake could hit a densely populated area like Salt Lake City and cause extensive shaking damage to property, possibly costing lives.

Second, there is an ever-present threat from the region's major geological weak point, the 225-mile Wasatch Fault, running north-south along the feet of the Wasatch Mountains through most of Utah's urban centers. The Wasatch Fault is capable of disrupting the earth's surface with an earthquake of 6.5 to 7.5 on the Richter Scale, said Arabasz.

Research is complicated because activity on the faults scattered through the 800-mile seismic belt shows no link to the Wasatch Fault. "Through all this the Wasatch Fault has been sitting in our midst, seemingly unperturbed, waiting for its day," said Arabasz.

Another factor is the leisurely pace of seismic history. Since pioneers settled the Salt Lake Valley in 1847, only once has an earthquake broken the ground's surface in Utah — a 5.6 jolt in 1904 which shoved a wedge of land in Box Elder County's Hansel Valley 1½ feet upward.

"Our yardstick is a measure of time which is realistically on the scale of years," Arabasz observed.

Soviet chiefs criticize market economy

MOSCOW (AP) — Reports of speeches by two officials close to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev made clear Saturday that a freer economy is not part of his plan for achieving greater output and efficiency.

The Communist Party daily newspaper, Pravda, quoted a member of the ruling 13-member Politburo Saturday as calling for a "major party academy to work for revitalization" without any diversions in the direction of a market economy."

Reports of the speech by Yegor K. Ligachev to graduates of the Central Committee's Academy of Social Sciences and a similar address by fellow Politburo member Nikolai I. Ryzhkov to those completing studies at the government's National Economics Academy appeared in Pravda the day after they were delivered.

The schools train managers for industrial enterprises and party organizational jobs.

Both men are said to be close associates of Gorbachev, who elevated them to the ruling body two months ago.

Since becoming party chief March 11, Gorbachev has repeatedly called for higher industrial and agricultural output through greater efficiency and worker discipline. He has called for more economic experiments, but has given few details of his plans for creating incentives.

The speeches by Ligachev and Ryzhkov echoed Gorbachev's statements on the need for greater economic progress.

Ligachev implied criticism of the economic policy of Leonid I. Brezhnev, who led the nation for 18 years until his death in November 1982.

"A sharp and decisive turn has already begun toward overcoming the negative tendencies in the economy and social life accumulated in the late 1970s and early 1980s," Ligachev told the graduates.

Oil company signs papers in China deal

PERKING (AP) — The American company Occidental Petroleum signed the final agreement Saturday for a $650 million joint development of one of the world's largest open-pit coal mines. The deal took five years of negotiations.

Occidental officials said the Pingao "Antaihao" mine in Shanxi province is the biggest U.S.-China joint venture since relations between the countries were normalized in 1979.

"I suppose you're all wondering if this is the final agreement. I can assure you there will be no more signings after this. This is it," Armand Hammer said.

The Occidental Petroleum Corp. chairman, 86, has been doing business with communist countries since Vladimir I. Lenin ruled the Soviet Union.

He spoke to reporters at the signing ceremony in Peking's Great Hall of the People. Vice Premier Li Peng and U.S. Ambassador Arthur W. Hummel attended.

"Even though there were a lot of doubters that this mine would get off the ground, I can tell you now all systems are go," Hammer said.

The project was endangered when one of Occidental's original partners, the Nebraska construction firm Peter Kiewit Sons Inc., pulled out in October 1984.

Problems also arose over a drop in coal prices, the cost of local labor and the share of coal destined for export.

Hammer convinced the state-run Bank of China to become a new finance partner.

"I think we have a good partner in Bank of China, the best partner in the world," he said.

Korean police nab 65 school radicals

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Police raided nine major universities before dawn on Saturday, and said they arrested 65 radical leaders sought in connection with recent violent anti-government demonstrations.

It was the first major police operation on South Korea's campuses since the government of President Chun Doo-hwan last year withdrew all police agents from the universities in a step toward easing restrictive measures.

Among those seized was Park Yong-chul of Korea University, a vice chairman of the Sammin Struggle Committee, sought by police in connection with the student occupation of a U.S. government library in downtown Seoul last month.

Police accused the Sammin group, affiliated with the National Federation of Students, of being responsible for taking over the U.S. Information Service library and other violent anti-government protests since the spring semester began in March.

Nineteen students have been indicted in connection with the 72-hour occupation of the U.S. library.

Police raids started at 4:30 a.m. against seven schools in Seoul, one in Pusan and one in the southern provincial capital of Kwangju, an announcement from National Police headquarters said.

Included were three of South Korea's most prestigious universities — Seoul National, Korea and Yonsei.

Police did not say how many officers took part, but reported seizing 85,824 pieces of evidence, including 158 fire bombs.

Waging war on 'hoppers

Top, Frank Kennedy repairs a spray boom. Center, a DC-4 makes a spraying run in rangeland east of Shoshone. Right, Susie Buhler and Vickie VanEaton mark sprayed blocks. Below, a DC-4 waits at Twin Falls Airport for pilots to arrive for takeoff at sunrise. Small photo, the end result: dead grasshoppers pile up in a farm ditch near Malad.

TWIN FALLS — With crop-destroying grasshoppers foraging over 20,000 square miles of Idaho agricultural lands in concentrations as high as 100 'hoppers per square yard, the grasshopper spraying program has taken on the aspect of war.

A squadron of about 25 private and Air Force planes has been pressed into service, some of them big enough to haul 1,000 gallons of pesticide aloft to spray over range and croplands alike.

County agricultural extension agents, like a bevy of generals, plot daily progress on wall-sized maps and hope for temperate weather and cooperative machinery. Nearby, truckloads of chemicals roll into town to feed the planes, mechanical nemeses of the tiny hordes.

Federal Secretary of Agriculture John Block has declared a state of emergency, freeing another $15 million for spraying. Meanwhile, agricultural extension agents in the state say the government may be too late.

Local officials with the Department of Agriculture predict that more than one third of the state's farmers could be driven out of business by the 'hopper infestation that spread from untilled, unsprayed public range lands and deserts, which is mostly owned by the federal government.

Though 'hoppers are plaguing nine other western states, none has as severe a problem as Idaho, according to Don Nielson of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

This year's problem is more severe than last year's because the spraying didn't begin last year until after the 'hoppers had laid their eggs, says Kerry Locke, Minidoka County agricultural extension agent.

Malathion, the principal chemical being used on the 'hoppers, lasts two to three days before it is broken down by sunlight and becomes ineffective. So far, environmentalists have had little objection to the chemical, saying their largest concern is with accidental spraying of people.

Like Gulliver, the federal agricultural agents have found a formidable foe in a horde of tiny pests.

Two men die in car collision

PAUL — Two Idaho men died about midnight Friday when their car ran a stop sign and was struck by a pickup truck near Paul.

The Mindoka County sheriff's office reported that James Lynn Shelby, 26, of Burley and Curtis Mike Mahoney, 25, of Idaho Falls were traveling northbound on a country road one mile east of Paul in a 1973 Buick driven by Mahoney when the accident occurred.

Arland, Jay Olson, 45, of Heyburn, the driver of a 1961 Ford pickup that struck Mahoney's car, was taken by ambulance to Cassia Memorial Hospital and then by helicopter to Pocatello Regional Medical Center, where he was listed in stable condition, police said. Olson's truck was eastbound when the accident occurred, police said.

Mindoka County Coroner John Fisher said both men were pronounced dead at the scene of the accident.

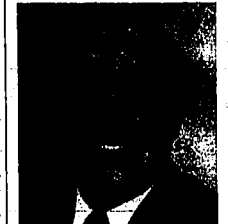

"Mahoney, the driver, sustained acute trauma to the chest," Fisher said. Mahoney hit the steering column and the steering wheel was broken off, said Fisher.

Shelby, the passenger, sustained acute head injuries, Fisher said. Shelby was apparently thrown through the windshield, across the hood of the car and into the path of the car, where he was dragged for approximately 75 yards under the vehicle, Fisher said.

The accident is still under investigation by the Mindoka County Sheriff's office with assistance from the Idaho State Police, police said.

Glenns Ferry cancels 'double tax'

By DIANA HOOLEY
Times-News correspondent

GLENN'S FERRY — The Glenns Ferry Council agreed this week not to District court

The following civil cases were filed during this past week in Fifth District Court in Twin Falls:

Ron Jones and Janice Jones vs. Daryl Jarvis Bellane. The plaintiff alleges an defendant operated his vehicle in a negligent manner which resulted in a collision and injury to the plaintiff. The plaintiff seeks general damages through personal injury in the sum of $200,000, reasonable medical expenses, lost wages and child care expenses, expenses for damage sustained to plaintiff's automobile, loss of consortium for Ron Jones in the sum of $50,000, cost of the suit and attorney's fees.

Henry F. Koch and Marjorie R. Koch vs. Warren Chapman and Elaine Chapman. The plaintiff seeks the balance due and owing on a real estate agreement in the amount of $35,944 plus interest, cost of the suit and attorney's fees.

Clayta Christensen vs. Edward Goebel. David Goebel dba Edward Goebel & Son. The plaintiff seeks money due and owing on a lease agreement in the sum of $7,312 plus interest, cost of the suit and attorney's fees.

"double tax" city residents for the city's recreational program now that the East Elmore County Recreation District has been established and is levying its own tax.

City Clerk Eddie Bostic said this means the city will lose $2,000 in revenue, but the district will be responsible for the softball program, Fourth of July fireworks, and the winter recreation program.

The council agreed to rent the city's recreational facilities to the recreation district this year, but no rental fee was agreed upon.

Council members directed maintenance supervisor Butch Anderson to purchase four legal-sized barricades with flashing lights for the city's use. The action came after the city was named in a lawsuit involving a man who fell in a hole in front of a construction sight marked with city barricades.

"We have to protect ourselves from future incidents," said Mayor Dayle Messery, noting the city's street-side, sidewalk sale and Fourth of July celebration is coming up and barricades will be needed.

The council moved to create an ordinance for the summer mandating alternate day sprinkling. Under the plan, even-numbered homes sprinkle lawns on even-numbered days and odd-numbered homes on odd-numbered days, said Messery. The motion came after Anderson informed the council that the hot weather had caused the city water supplies to reach low levels.

Take comfort in your time of need.

Symms bill would give physicians tax break

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, last week sponsored a bill that gives tax breaks to physician-owned malpractice insurance companies in operation before Jan. 1, 1984, saying the bill will "ultimately lower the price Americans pay for medical services."

But, there may not be any Idaho companies in operation to take advantage of the tax breaks. Idaho Medical Association executive Director Don Sower says there aren't any in Idaho that he knows of.

Contacted in Spokane, Wash. Saturday, Symms said he was not aware the bill would keep new companies from sharing in the tax breaks.

"The purpose is to have lower medical costs for the people of the United States of America and Idaho, this tax preference would be open to any group of physicians," Symms said.

Physician-owned malpractice protection associations are small-scale insurance companies established by groups of physicians to insure themselves at lower prices by eliminating profits and fees normally paid to commercial insurance companies.

Annual premium payments to either type of insurer are tax-deductible. Though annual premiums for malpractice protection associations tend to be less expensive than commercial insurance company premiums, a physician who joins an association must pay an initial lump-sum to build up the company's reserves in case of a malpractice settlement against any physician covered by the company.

This lump sum payment is not now tax-deductible for physicians. The bill sponsored by Symms and Hawaii Senator Spark Matsunaga, would allow physicians to deduct this sum over a period of years.

Supporters of the bill say the tax breaks will make the malpractice protection associations more competitive with commercial insurance on medical bills by allowing doctors to buy less expensive malpractice insurance.

Under the wording of the bill as presented, the tax breaks would be only offered to a physician-owned malpractice insurance company that was "operative and was providing such protection under the laws of any State prior to January 1, 1984."

"If that's a weakness in the bill, I'll amend it in committee," Symms said Saturday. Symms and Matsunaga both sit on the Senate Finance Committee, where the bill was directed after Symms presented it to the Senate last Tuesday.

"The reason I have sponsored this is that everywhere I go in Idaho, people are concerned about medical costs," Symms said. Physicians say the cost of malpractice insurance is a major factor in the cost of medical care, Symms said.

"The AMA strongly supports the bill, this has been strongly supported by people who are concerned about medical costs," Symms said.

Bill Small, a Washington, D.C. lobbyist for the American Medical Association said Friday the association did not support an earlier version of the bill that died in a House Conference Committee last year and said he was not aware Symms had reintroduced the measure this year.

"To tell you how excited we are about it, I knew nothing about it," Small said.

The association does not think the bill will reduce malpractice costs, Small said. "While Symms claims this will reduce the cost of malpractice insurance, our quickie analysis is it will not," said Small.

"It seems to give some impetus to join certain kinds of companies like the Cooperative of American Physicians," apparently, Small said.

The Cooperative of American Physicians, a California-based operator of physician-owned insurance companies, has promoted the bill through its corporate attorneys, Finley, Kumbie, Wagner, Heine, Underberg, Manley, & Casey, in Washington, D.C.

Mark Sheshness, an attorney for the firm, said Friday he drafted the bill and is now acting as a legislative representative, or lobbyist, for the bill. His client is the Cooperative of American Physicians, he said.

Symms said he did not know of any involvement of the Cooperative in the preparation of the bill. Background material concerning the bill was sent to the Times-News last week with the letter-head of the law-firm on the top of three pages and Symms' press release on the bill contained identical language to that found in the documents sent with the law firm's letterhead on them.

Carl Blomquist, the chief executive officer for the Cooperative of American Physicians and the Mutual Protection Trust of California told the bill contained identical language to that found in the documents sent with the law firm's letterhead on them. Hughes could not be contacted Thursday or Friday.

"Generally, the government ends up with more taxable income," Blomquist said.

Range arsons alleged

BLM investigates 'hopper connection'

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An investigation into allegations that farmers ignited range fires in Twin Falls County to rid them of grasshoppers probably will be completed within a week, according to a state Bureau of Land Management official.

BLM public information officer Chris Long of Boise said he had few other details about the investigation being conducted by state BLM criminal investigator Dan Hughes. Hughes could not be contacted Thursday or Friday.

Hughes began investigating this week the cause of two fires in the Castleford area that burned about 1,500 acres last week. In one case, someone in a spotter plane saw a person set a fire, said Clarence Baldwin, fire management officer with the Boise BLM district.

Hughes also is investigating the cause of four fires in the Magic Water area near Hagerman that burned about 5,000 acres last week.

In both areas, fire officials heard rumors that the blazes were started by people who wanted to rid the public range of grasshoppers readying to invade nearby farmland, Baldwin said.

No charges have been filed at this point.

No similar rumors or suspicious fires were reported in the Shoshone or Burley districts, but lands also located in the Magic Valley.

Carlos Mendiola, the Shoshone District fire management officer, said there had been six fires so far this year. Two of the fires were caused by lightning and the remainder were man-caused, though of an accidental or careless nature, not intentional, he added.

Floyd Bethke, the fire management officer of the Burley District, related the earlier case that two people had called him and asked if they could burn public land to kill grasshoppers.

Unauthorized burns on public land are prohibited and punishable under federal law.

The bureau, Baldwin added, routinely investigates the cause of fires. And, if investigators find someone at fault, the bureau has several alternatives to deal with the offender, including civil litigation to recover costs of fighting the fire.

Gooding hospital sale proceeds behind schedule

By Times-News writers

GOODING — Sale of the old state tuberculosis hospital in Gooding has fallen behind schedule, but Gooding officials are still confident that the sale will proceed.

The city is negotiating a sale of the building to Buckingham Security Ltd. of Pennsylvania for use as a private prison.

Buckingham did not meet a June deadline for committing financial backing to the project. But the city and Buckingham have extended the deadline "by mutual consent," says Gooding Mayor Gene Heller.

A deadline of July 10 has been arbitrarily set, but even that date is not firm, Heller says. "It's been very loosely arranged," he says.

Buckingham is negotiating with a California firm already represented in Idaho for a partnership needed to pull the financial package together, Heller says. Buckingham needs to raise $12 million for the project.

Part of the delay occurred when Buckingham was not eligible for industrial revenue bonds, Heller says. Prisons are not a legal use of the bonds, he says.

The project is under a state deadline of Aug. 10 to make a $100,000 payment on the land, says Jay Biladeau, a state bureau chief of lands. Buckingham made a $10,000 down payment on the vacant, 35-year-old hospital March 30 and signed a sale contract to pay the remaining $90,000 in August.

If payment is not made by then, the State Land Board will have to meet to decide what to do, Biladeau says.

"Under an emergency condition, the state could be persuaded to make an extension," Heller says.

The city has already overcome one obstacle to the project. The city received a $720,000 community block grant in April for improving water and sewer lines to the prison site and installing a million-gallon water tank. Buckingham has agreed to donate one acre at the proposed prison site to the water storage tank and provide as much as $75,000 for the project.

Even if Buckingham does not come up with the $12 million needed for the project, the hospital is still likely to be converted to a prison, Heller says. There are other companies interested in purchasing the building and surrounding 6.6 acres for use as a private prison, he says.

The city chose Buckingham to negotiate with because it was the first to propose converting the grounds to a prison, he says.

Officials at Buckingham could not be reached for comment last week.

REP. LAWRENCE KNIGGE
Weed control coordinator

Legislator resigns, accepts weed post

BOISE (AP) — State Rep. Lawrence Knigge, R-Piler, will resign his House seat from District 23 to become state weed control coordinator, a position created by the Legislature earlier this year.

Elmer Russell, chief of the Idaho Agriculture Department's Bureau of Feeds and Plants Services, confirmed on Friday that Knigge will take the job. Rep. Donna Scott, R-Twin Falls, said earlier that Knigge would resign to join the department.

A press conference was scheduled by the department for Tuesday to announce Knigge's appointment.

Five of 26 applicants were interviewed for the position, which pays $21,652 a year, Russell said. Knigge, a farmer, served five terms as a legislator and holds a degree in animal sciences from the University of Idaho College of Agriculture.

The position of state weed control coordinator was abolished in 1980 at the request of former state Agriculture Director Max Hanson. The Legislature reinstated the position this year at the request of farm groups.

Sale of water shares may finance city pool

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city of Twin Falls is investigating a new way to finance a city swimming pool: selling of the city water shares.

Mayor Emery Petersen says the idea came up in a June meeting of the City Council's budget committee, but that the city staff has not yet had a chance to study the plan.

"It could be a form of creative financing," Petersen says. "We might be able to finance the pool — and not tax the citizens — without losing the value of the water shares."

The plan would be to sell as many as possible of the approximately 2,700 shares the city owns. The money obtained from the sale would then be invested in bonds.

If the scheme works, interest from the bonds would bring more revenue into city accounts than the $23,500 the city earned this year leasing the water to area farmers, Petersen says. Shares are selling for about $425 now, says Doris Finney, secretary for the Twin Falls Canal Co. That would make the city's shares worth more than $1.1 million.

There should be a market for the shares, should the city decide to sell, says Maurice Klaas, president of the Public lands swap proposal raises questions

By KENNETH A. BROWN
Times-News writer

BOISE — Although the proposed land swap between the Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management has generated only limited interest in Idaho, it will have a number of significant impacts on the state. Hardest hit will be communities which will lose their Forest Service or Bureau of Land Management offices — many of them in the Magic Valley.

As testimony revealed at a public hearing in Boise Thursday, the plan could also cause problems for the livestock and mining industries. Even environmental groups question the purposes and effectiveness of the plan.

Although Thursday's hearing was the last for Idaho, the two agencies will be accepting written comments until July 8. The address for written comments is BLM/FSL Land Exchange, P.O. Box 21219, Washington, D.C. 20009.

The plan will have its greatest impacts in southern Idaho, but only will the Forest Service lands south of the Snake River be transferred to the Bureau of Land Management, a number of towns will lose both Forest Service and BLM offices.

Burley will lose 34 jobs when both its BLM district office and its Forest Service Ranger District office are eliminated. Shoshone will lose 28 jobs when its BLM district office is closed.

Twin Falls will lose both the headquarters for Sawtooth National Forest and the ranger district office.

While job losses in Twin Falls would be offset by the relocation and consolidation of Burley's and Shoshone's BLM offices, the city will lose access to a Forest Service office. Those having to do business with the headquarters office for such things as grazing or timber sales would have to drive to Challis — a four- to five-hour trip from Twin Falls — where the new headquarters will be located.

Towns like Burley, which will lose a substantial number of jobs in the swap, are particularly upset. Mayor Chuck Shaddock complained at Thursday's hearing that his town had not been given enough time to study the proposed swap or comment effectively on it. He also said they had not been given enough information. Shaddock said that Burley had only learned of the plan in early 1985. The BLM and Forest Service, by contrast, spent four years putting the plan together, according to Shaddock.

In the proposed land exchange 34 million acres would change hands, with the Forest Service gaining 2.3 million acres. Once fully implemented, the plan would save the state $27 million and $32 million a year, according to BLM and Forest Service figures.

While the proposal would eliminate 750 to 800 jobs, the two agencies claim it would improve public service by increasing professional strength at the ground level by 10 to 20 percent.

Lack of time was a common complaint among the diverse interests testifying at Thursday's hearing.

Alan Housarath, president of the Idaho Environmental Council, accused the two agencies of developing the plan "in veritable secrecy," a complaint that was also made by Robert Rowen, a former Forest Service employee.

Over a third of those who testified had not heard of Thursday's hearing until Wednesday or Thursday morning.

Housarath called it "odd" that the public had only 30 days to comment on the proposed nationwide land swap, while there was a 90-day comment period on the management plans for individual forests.

Originally, neither agency had planned to hold any public hearings or hear any public discussion of proposed boundaries in the swap. After heated opposition to the lack of debate in other Western states, a program of hearings was set up.

According to Tom Hovendon of the Idaho Cattlemen's Association, some cattlemen in the swap will be greatly affected by the swap. BLM grazing rights, Hovendon explained, are recognized as an economic asset by banks and lending institutions. Forest Service grazing rights, however, are not and his could affect the ability of some ranchers to get loans.

In effect, it could deprive some ranchers of their "property" without due process of law, Hovendon said.

Hovendon also questioned the ability of the swap to save money since the issue will ultimately be decided by Congress. "They can't even cut their own salaries or balance the budget," Hovendon said.

"If it doesn't save money and only

 Twin Falls Canal Co. board of directors.
 The city may not be free to sell many of its shares, however.
 When the city was developed, shares were assigned to individual properties within town, just as they were elsewhere on the tract. Later, the city began to function as trustee for the shares. City residents continued to receive water from the shares for drinking water and other purposes.
 When the city switched to wells and other sources for its water supply in the 60's, the city continued to hold the water shares and lease them. The city's right to lease was tested and upheld in the 1970's, says former city manager Jean Miller.

 However, how many shares the city would be free to sell is unclear. Petersen says a lawyer will be needed to determine that.
 The city has approached attorney John Rosholt to study the plan. However, Rosholt — who does legal work for the canal company — has declined, saying it would be a conflict of interest.

 Three bond elections to construct a new city pool have failed. Rather than try again, Petersen says he would like to look at alternate ways to finance the pool.
 For two years, the city has set aside $250,000 to use toward construction of a pool.
 This year's budget looks too tight to contribute that amount again to the $500,000 accumulated, Petersen says. Budget information for the next year will not be released for another week, city officials say.

Swap

 complicates things, why bother?" Hovendon asked.
 The plan also has some possible economic impacts on the mining industry, according to the geologist. The geological consultant who testified at the hearing, Harrison, who has worked with both the BLM and the Forest Service, said the Forest Service lacks the needed expertise to handle mineral claims.
 The BLM is designed to handle minerals. The Forest Service is designed to handle timber. The Forest Service is sadly understaffed in terms of minerals. It would be a tremendous mistake to transfer mineral rights to the Forest Service," Harrison said.

ferently, Forest Service people are not qualified to manage BLM lands or districts," Rowen said, adding that the same is probably true of the ability of BLM staff to manage forest areas.
 "It seems ludicrous to me to suggest that they are interchangeable," he added.
 Rowen also hit the agencies hard for not seeking more public involvement and allowing its own personnel to speak openly about the plan. Rowen added that the current exchange plans will greatly disrupt the agencies, lower employee morale and interfere with the two agencies' ability to serve the public.
 "I'm normally a positive person," said Rowen, "but try as I might, I couldn't come up with anything positive to say about this plan."

Under the current exchange plans, the Forest Service would gain control of the subsurface rights for the mineral and oil resources beneath its lands. Currently the BLM administers the subsurface rights on National Forest lands.
 After the proposed land swap, the Forest Service would gain control over 205 million acres of subsurface lands.

Alan Hausrath, with the Idaho Environmental Council, said his group would like to see an analysis of the environmental impact of the land swap. While most of the projected savings come from staff cuts and office closings, Hausrath said there is no indication there will be any reduction in the work load for the two agencies.
 Hausrath said that there are also important differences between Forest Service and BLM lands. While the National Forest system was set up to protect and manage timber resources and watersheds, the BLM was set up primarily as a land disposal agency. Part of this legacy is that Forest Service lands are "federally reserved," Hausrath explained, meaning that Congress must be involved in any action to remove them from the National Forest system. No such provision exists for BLM land.
 Hausrath said the current land-exchange plans do not say if Forest Service lands transferred to the BLM would lose their reserved status.
 Steven Grantham, with the Sierra Club, also expressed his group's concern over the land exchanges.
 "Current boundaries have been in existence for a number of years. Supposedly those boundaries were drawn with some attention to what should be National Forest land and what should be BLM," Grantham said.

Both Grantham and Hausrath said they support the exchange in principle, but not on the large scale currently planned. Boundary problems will be lost in multiple-use fields, or whether they will be spread out into other areas such as timber and mineral sales.

Jane Leeson of the Wilderness Society said that while Idaho loses 32 jobs in the swap, the plan does not lose the funding for renewable resources were cut.
 "We don't want to see the plan used as a tool to restructure the agencies," Leeson said.
 Leeson added that she is "alarmed at the speed" with which the proposal has been developed.
 For economies, Leeson said if the two agencies were really interested in attacking the federal deficit they would make sure the public received a fair return on its mineral, timber and grazing resources.
 Right now, Leeson said the public receives no royalties on mineral leases and loses $19 million each year through deficit timber sales.
 The only unqualified support the interchange proposal received was from the Southwest Idaho Chapter of American Foresters. A spokesman for the group said they support the proposal "in concept" and believe that efficiencies in management could result from the exchange.
 Those most critical of the plan seem to be the retired employees from the two agencies.
 Bert Rowen, a retired Forest Service employee who served with the agency for 35 years, questioned the interchange of personnel the land exchange will bring about.
 "Each agency manages land difchange plans will greatly disrupt the agencies, lower employee morale and interfere with the two agencies' ability to serve the public.

 "I'm normally a positive person," said Rowen, "but try as I might, I couldn't come up with anything positive to say about this plan."

Ex-youth club head slapped with charge

BOISE (AP) — The former operator of a Boise youth wrestling club faces charges of lewd conduct with two boys who were members of the club, Ada County sheriff's officials say.

Michael DeLong, 39, is charged with two counts of lewd conduct with a minor child in connection with incidents involving an 8-year-old boy and a 9-year-old boy, Sgt. Dick Kersting said.

DeLong, who started the Bronco Wrestling Club three years ago, was arrested May 22 in San Diego County, Calif., on an Idaho warrant, Kersting said. The warrant was issued April 18 in 4th District Court, he said.

Deputy Louanna Hemmer said DeLong refused to waive extradition to Idaho. The Sheriff's Department is seeking a governor's warrant to order his return to Idaho to face the charges, she said.

Kersting said DeLong is suspected of committing lewd acts with the boys "before and after practice, as well as on road trips."

He declined to say what lewd conduct is alleged to have occurred or where and when it allegedly took place. He said the acts had been going on "for some time."

DeLong was well respected, said Mike Young, wrestling coach at Boise State University.

"He had some awfully good friends here who thought highly of him," Young said.

He said DeLong worked as an assistant coach for him when Young coached the U.S. Schoolboy Championship team and traveled with the team several years ago.

Kersting said there is no evidence that the alleged lewd conduct was conducted or condoned by anyone connected with the Bronco Wrestling Club. "Information concerning these activities was brought to our attention by someone within the club," he said.

DeLong was released on his own recognizance after appearing in a San Diego court, a spokeswoman said.

Court affirms rape decision

BOISE (AP) — A Post Falls man who pleaded guilty to raping a 16-year-old Coeur d'Alene girl in 1978 has lost an appeal in which he claimed his plea was involuntary.

Albert Allen Brooks, 39, told the Idaho Court of Appeals he would not have entered that plea had he known it would require serving at least five years of a 15-year sentence.

Brooks, who originally pleaded innocent to four counts of rape and kidnapping and one count of attempted kidnapping, said he was led to believe he would be in prison for only two or three years if he changed his plea.

But in upholding a decision by 1st District Judge Gary Haman denying a request for post-conviction relief, the appellate court said sentencing recommendations in plea bargaining are not binding. The three-man panel said Brooks was properly informed about that and other aspects of his case when he pleaded.

"The test of manifest injustice must be viewed in light of the bedrock principle that a guilty plea is valid when entered knowingly, intelligently and voluntarily," the court said.

1 hurt in collision

PARMA (AP) — An Ontario, Ore., woman was injured Friday night when the pickup in which she was a passenger was struck by an Amtrak train northwest of Parma, the Canyon County Sheriff's Department reported.

Three other passengers in the pickup escaped injury, officers said. Officers said the accident occurred at 9:55 p.m. when the pickup stalled on the tracks at a railroad crossing two miles north and two-and-a-half miles west of Parma. It was struck by an eastbound train.

The injured woman, Patty Garcia, 22, was treated for multiple fractures at Holy Rosary Hospital in Ontario and transferred to St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise, a nursing supervisor said.

Man pleads guilty in girl's traffic death

IDAHO CITY (AP) — A Montour man has pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter in the traffic death of a Horseshoe Bend girl in August.

Louis H. Morgan Jr. entered the guilty plea Friday in the Boise County Courthouse in Idaho City before 44th District Judge Gerald Schroeder, Boise County Prosecutor Pat Riceci said.

Schroeder set Morgan's sentencing for Aug. 2.

Morgan was driving his pickup west around a curve on Idaho 52 when it crossed the center line, Riceci said. Morgan's truck and a car driven by Dana Nicole Gardner, 16, collided Aug. 19, Riceci said.

The girl was killed instantly, he said.

The accident occurred between Horseshoe Bend and Emmett, 1 1/2 miles east of the Gem County-Boise County line.

After the accident, Morgan's blood-alcohol level measured 0.20 percent, Riceci said. The legal limit at which a driver is considered intoxicated is 0.10 percent.

Morgan received a broken foot in the accident.

Ms. Gardner, a junior at Emmett High School, was returning from a babysitting job in Sweet, according to her parents, Larry and Georgia Gardner, Horseshoe Bend.

Morgan's plea was the result of sentence negotiations, Riceci said. The maximum penalty for involuntary manslaughter is seven years in prison and a $7,000 fine.

Riceci said he planned to recommend that Morgan serve seven years probation, 60 days in jail, and pay restitution of about $5,000 to Boise County and to the Gardner family.

Riceci said he also would recommend that Morgan participate in an inpatient alcohol treatment program, perform 250 hours of community service in Boise County and be ordered not to drive within eight hours of consuming alcohol.

In addition, he planned to ask that the incident appear on Morgan's record as a "judgment of conviction."

Morgan had been charged with driving under the influence of alcohol twice before the fatal accident, Riceci said.

Morgan received a withheld judgment on one misdemeanor DUI charge in the mid-1970s, Riceci said, and pleaded guilty to another in 1982.

Loveall plays for another day

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

DENVER — You wanna talk security?
Calvin Loveall will take the field in this afternoon's first-round United States Football League playoff game in Memphis, Tenn., with two years remaining on a three-year contract with a team that, at best, will go into hibernation for a year or two; at worst, it will go out of existence.

And although the published estimates vary, all agree that the Denver Gold — like all of the other teams in the USFL — is hemorrhaging money and that its prospects of being around when the league plans to go head-to-head with the NFL in the fall of 1986 are, well, guarded.

"There's nothing I can do about that," says Loveall, a 22-year-old cornerback from the University of Idaho who found himself a starter in his second USFL game. "I've just gotta believe that there is enough interest in professional football that I'll be playing somewhere with this team next year; if not in Denver, maybe someplace else."

At 5-foot-9, 174 pounds, Loveall has had to do a lot of believing in his football career. A walk-on wide receiver at Idaho from Kennewick, Wash., Loveall found himself in tough company during his freshman season, when the Vandals rode to the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs on the wheels of Brian Allen and Ron Whittenburg. Convinced to try defensive back, he broke his ankle midway through his junior season — the first year in which he started. He missed seven games that year, and was in danger of being supplanted when the 1984 season began.

Instead, Loveall became one of the most pleasant surprises for the Vandals last year with 70 tackles, two fumbles recovered and two interceptions. He also returned 13 punts for 76 yards.
Because of Idaho Coach Dennis

Erickson's connections — and Denver Coach Mouse Davis' ties with the Northwest — Loveall was a surprise fourth-round draft choice by the Gold, one of only four Big Sky Conference players taken by the USFL in last winter's draft and the only one to eventually sign.
"Idaho was about the best experience a defensive back could have in this league," says Loveall. "Not only did I get to play against some pretty good passing teams, but most of my time at Idaho I worked out against a pretty good quarterback (Ken Hultin, now of the Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian Football League) in practice."
Due to a combination of injuries to other players and to catching the attention of "the Gold defensive staff, Loveall found himself starting in his second game for the Gold. He subsequently started two other games, and has been playing frequently in a reserve role.

"The adjustment wasn't as much as I thought it would be," he says. "The offenses are a little more sophisticated and we play more defense, but the basics are pretty much the same. I felt a lot of pressure at first, but it's gotten less as I've gotten to play more."

The Houston Gambler's Mike Kelly, the No. 1-rated passer in the USFL's Western Division, is the toughest quarterback Loveall has worked against, he says.

Anxiety grows about NCAA death penalty

By DOUG TUCKER
The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Harsh penalties recently approved by college presidents to curb corruption in sports will stagger strong programs and possibly destroy weaker ones, several coaches said.

They also said that college presidents often were out of touch with athletic departments and didn't understand functions such as recruiting.

"There is no doubt that those new heavy-duty penalties will devastate any program they're applied to," said Houston football Coach Bill Yeoman. "But if the presidents got down in the trenches with their coaches and went into a few ghettos and living rooms and recruited, they would have a different experience."

No coach is arguing with the "death penalty" nickname attached to the stern measures written by the 44-member Presidents Commission of the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

"Any program that gets hit with all this is going to be devastated. It's as simple as that," said Oklahoma State basketball Coach Paul Hansen. "Some would recover. Some would recover sooner than others. But it would be a minimum of three or four years before you could even get your foundation built. Some may never recover."

"It will be like getting shot in the stomach twice at close range," said Kansas State football Coach Jim Dickey.

College presidents, meeting at a special NCAA "integrity convention" two weeks ago in New Orleans, approved the measures in an attempt to halt a recent rash of sports scandals involving recruiting, drug use and point shaving.

One of the new rules gives the NCAA Infractions Committee the power to suspend a sports program for as long as two seasons. If a school is cited twice for violations within five years, the last sports program penalized would be the one suspended.

That new measure is retroactive to Sept. 1, 1980, and more than a dozen schools are believed to be vulnerable. A school also can be prohibited from giving scholarships for one or two years if NCAA abuses are found.

"They say they don't want you to cheat, but in the same breath they say they want you to win," said Johnny Orr, a veteran of more than 20 years as a head basketball coach at the national level.

"I think almost every coach in the nation is in favor of what the presidents are trying to do. But I wish that every president would take a couple of recruiting trips with his coaches and see what really happens and what really goes on." Orr said.

Pagett takes some thunder at Burley

By FLYNN McROBERTS
Times-News writer

BURLEY — To the layman observing this weekend's Burley Boat Regatta, insanity would seem to be the sole reason these competitors hurl themselves at high speeds down the Snake River in what nearly amounts to an engine with a seat.

"Insanity," however, is a misnomer, according to the event's participants. The key word is control.

"To us, it's being able to take all of that horsepower and make it do what we want it to do. It's not crazy," said Bill Pagett of La Habra, Calif., after capturing Saturday's run of K-boats — the unlimited division of sprint craft here and arguably the most spectacular in this 12-class event.

Pagett, who has been off the boat-racing circuit for five years before this season, jumped ahead in Rolling Thunder on the first lap in the KRR race and held on to shove last year's champion, Jay Ellington of Orange, Calif., into a Boat Regatta, insanity would seem to be the sole reason these competitors hurl themselves at high speeds down the Snake River in what nearly amounts to an engine with a seat.

For Ellington and his brand new E.T. craft, the finals race around Crow Island near the Burley Municipal Golf Course was a matter of catch up after Pagett's quick start.

"I had to run hard on the back stretch... Bill got in and got out clean," he said. "From there it was his race."

Fifty entries from all over the West and hundreds of spectators converged on the Riverfront Park Marina here for this ninth annual boating extravaganza.

The best finishes this year for local racers came in the Ski Jet competition where Don Moyle of Burley matched his first-day finish

Johnson, Heil win big at state

By BRAD BRELAND

Horse show — C4

FILER — Four cowboys and cowgirls who had the best times entering the finals of the Idaho State High School Rodeo kept pace Saturday, beating out their opponents to earn trips to Rapid City, S.D., for the National High School Rodeo Finals.

Inkom's Leslie Lish was crowned the new Miss High School Rodeo Idaho in ceremonies before the final performance. Lish was one of the representatives from District 4.

Richfield's Mike Johnson rode Strawberry for a score of 66 to top the bareback riding event. Johnson edged out Meridian's Dale Jones for the top score. Jones had a 65 riding Lady Luck.

Castleford's Shelley Heil held on to first in the goat tying competition. Heil tied her goal in 8.079 seconds for a three-head total of 26.195. Arbon's Debby Filch, a Marsh Valley cowgirl, finished right behind Heil with the second best time of the evening with a 6.697. R'Nee Monroe of Twin Falls was in the hunt with a time of 10.236, the third best for the evening.

Lewiston's Kelsey Felton had a time of 13.559 in the calf roping event, almost a full second better than his closest competitor. Felton had a three-head total of 39.695. Jason Hansen of McCammon had a 14.514 while Gooding's Destry Brown had a three-head total of 58.658 after he tied his calf in 19.340. Darrick Cope of Nampa, the cowboy with the second best time going into the finals, had troubles with his calf and scored a disappointing 31.823.

McCammon's Michelle Broadie continued to dominate the barrel racing event. Broadie's time of 18.187 was the top time of the finals. Castleford's Gina Quigley was not far off the pace with a time of 18.274 while Minico's Kris Onisnoff was a close third clocking a 18.187. Lish, the newly crowned rodeo queen, came out right after she was crowned and had the fourth best score in the event.

In the steer wrestling competition, an event that was dominated by Alan Stutzman of Twin Falls, Caldwell's Tom Charters came up with the best time. Charters had a 6.488, but Stutzman wasn't far behind with an 8.929. Stutzman will still go to Rapid City as he had the best average with a three-head total of 26.195. Charters had a three-head total of 39.695.

Pocatello's Ed Morgan had the best ride Saturday in the saddle bronc event. His score of 64 was two points better than Boise's Rance Morgan. The top scorer in the event, Oakley's Steve Manning, was bucked off Tall Timber. Manning was one of two cowboys who failed to ride their broncs for eight seconds. Buhl's Jeff Stewart, the cowboy with the second best time going into the finals, scored a 56 in the event.

In the breakaway roping, Shoshone's Paul O'Malley won clocking a 3.523 for a three-head total of 14.492. Fourteen-year-old Kelli Edwards of Emmett had a quick time of 3.892 for the second best time of the evening. Heil, the leader going into the final night, failed to rope her cow in the event. Parma's Wendy Huston cowled a 5.570, good enough for the third best time of the evening.

The best time in the team roping competition came from a pair of McCammon cowboys. David Anderson and Steve Shelton had a 10.768 for the best time Saturday. Nampa's Brent McPadden and Clint Morrison, the leader's going into the event Saturday, will still go to Rapid City for the national finals. Their time of 15.642 gave them a three-head total of 41.505.

Gooding's Steve Birnie and Wendell's Jim Ruby had a three-head total of 58.087, a time which should sent them to the national finals.

Only four cowboys managed to handle the bulls in the bull riding event. St. Anthony's Greg Miller had the best score of 67. Mountain Home's Craig Lehto was second best with a 65.

Emmett's Jackie Horstall and Emmett's Kelli Edwards, the cowgirls with the top two scores in the pole bending, will both end up going to the finals. Edwards won the event with a time of 20.978, but Horstall had a better three-head time of 63.474. Edwards had a 55.525. Council's Shwanna Elsbury and Richfield's Tina Erwin had the third and fourth best times in the event.

All-around cowboy and cowgirl point totals were still being compiled at press time.

New-found NCAA morality finds very little sympathy here

TWIN FALLS — Well, isn't this something? College and university presidents have discovered that maybe — totally without a prior inkling on their part — there may have been abuses in collegiate sports.

And once again, the hallowed halls of academe have risen high enough for these sweet-scented public servants to see something outside the ivied walls of education.

In a rush they troop to a self-proclaimed emergency national convention. For the first time in history they make the voting stance of each university public. And they intone the "death penalty" for those who can't walk the straight and narrow two out of five years. (One in five keeps you alive.)

It's late. Someone less charitable might suggest that the "have-nots" suddenly have realized the "haves" have completely stolen a march on them. Not only have the "haves" been buying up the best talent available for years, but last year they also effected the coup de grace by binding all that free television money into themselves.

Greater skeptics might speculate on the condition of collegiate athletics as late as today had not the Oklahoma and Georgia enlists that other tower of immunity — the courts — to assure themselves of total monopoly of television exposure and money.

When a have-not loses a prospect to a have, it usually is explained away by saying "they bought him. We're not going to play that game."

But when the other guy scoops up the last free chips off the table, a lot of morality suddenly springs up.

A cynic might note that again the pawn in this eco-exposure struggle has been put in the middle.

Now it might be alright to say that each recruited athlete knows that under the table payments are verboten and those accepting it should be punished equally with the giver, i.e., loss of eligibility. After all, Adam and Eve paid a greater price for eating the apple than the serpent did. The snake already knew its moral condition.

But then to immediately rejoin that with statements like "we have athletes here who have no business being in college," makes a judgment that even those who's honest labor consists of part-time summer jobs as teenagers aren't qualified to make.

Our education department says this test proves whether a kid is salvageable or not. From a guy who can't change a washer in the kitchen sink doesn't strike a respondent chord here. Anyone who has had a child graduate from high school the last several years — make that since Selective Service went out of vogue — knows the spring malls bring swarms of "enroll at our school" mailings. The mass-distribution tenor of those mailouts suggests recipients weren't pinpointed through an exhaustive transcript search.

That 98 percent of the schools are actively pursuing warm bodies makes suspect any suggestion that some individuals — because they are athletes — should never darken a campus.

In the "good old days" when everyone went to college or to the Army, universities would over-subscribe their capacity by 7 to 12 percent and then try to flunk out as many as they could. They, of course, kept the original fees but protected schools by noting only the truly dedicated survived.

Now the shoe is on the other foot. The number of flunk-outs has diminished proportionately to the perceived lack of funding by the penurious public. One can't substantiate increases in the face of dwindling enrollment, can one?

Nonetheless, it remains strange here that despite four different scandals, untold hundreds of "buying" recruitments, grade-point fixing, etc., it wasn't until the television money left that morality actually ripened.

But don't pine for the big schools or the extremely talented athletes. They will survive nicely. Thank you. After all, the pros didn't have to wait beyond the first round to exonerate one of the indicted point-shavers earlier this month. Had he been an underclassman, another school would have offered him "a second chance" if he would transfer.

No, guys. What we're seeing here is the same old story. The marginal student, the marginal athlete even to the journeyman student-athlete will carry the onus of the new

AL: Tigers creep to within 2½ games of Jays

DETROIT (AP) — Walt Terrell would make the perfect driver for a getaway car. He has the patience to wait through almost any crisis and the faith to believe things will probably turn out all right.

Terrell pitched his first career win Saturday night as the Detroit Tigers beat the Toronto Blue Jays 8-0, but he was thoroughly unimpressed by the accomplishment.

"As long as I win, I don't care how many hits they get," Terrell said. "They can hit 12 balls to the wall — as long as they're caught. As long as I get 'em out and win, I'll take 'em."

Terrell, 33, was the beneficiary of home runs by Chet Lemon, Dave Bergman and Kirk Gibson, plus one of the finest defensive plays seen in Tiger Stadium this season.

"To me, it was a two-hit game," Terrell admitted. "The guys really made some plays behind me."

...One of the best came in the Toronto seventh. With runners at first and second and only one out, George Bell hit a screaming liner that third baseman Tom Brookens snagged with a diving, sliding catch.

"Brookens might have turned the game around with the catch on Bell's ball," Toronto Manager Bobby Cox said. "That might have been the game. But we were only behind 5-0 at that point. Maybe we would have come back."

Baseball

Brookens also went 3-for-3 at the plate.
"It was just a reaction play," Brookens said. "There's no time to think on a shot like that. You just have to be lucky and tonight I was." The victory moved the Tigers back to 2½ games behind the first-place Blue Jays in the American League East and averaged a 2-0 shutout from a night earlier.

Baltimore 16 Boston 4

BOSTON (AP) — Floyd Rayford had four hits, including a homer, and John Shelby and Lee Lacy had three apiece as the Baltimore Orioles rode an eight-run sixth inning to a 16-4 victory over the Boston Red Sox Saturday.

Rayford and Lacy drove in four runs each, while Eddie Murray had three. Shelby had a single and Cal Ripken had two RBIs in the big sixth with a pair of singles.

The Orioles bombed Boston starter Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 36, for nine hits and seven runs in four innings en route to a 16-run game, their biggest assault of the season. The 16 runs were the most scored against Boston since 1981.

Milwaukee 6 New York 0

NEW YORK (AP) — Moose Haas pitched 6½ hitless innings before finishing with the third one-hitter in the 17-year history of the franchise Saturday night as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the New York Yankees 6-0.

Don Mattingly's double was the Yankees' only hit. Haas had retired 13 batters in a row, including Ken Griffey on a pop to short to start the seventh, before Mattingly drilled a 1-1 pitch — only Haas' 61st pitch of the game — to the gap in right-center.

Until the seventh, Haas, 7-3, a 29-year-old right-hander, had allowed only one baserunner — a leadoff walk to Willie Randolph in the third inning. That was the Yankees' only other baserunner as Haas struck out four in ending New York's four-game winning streak. It was Haas' fifth complete of the season and his second shutout.

Meanwhile, the Brewers chased 46-year-old Phil Niekro, 7-7, in the fourth inning and handed him his fourth consecutive setback. The veteran knuckleballer has an earned run average of 10.60 in those four losses and his season ERA is 4.87.

California 7 Kansas City 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Urbano Lugo pitched a seven-hitter and Brian Downing and Gary Pettis cracked three hits each Saturday night to propel the California Angels to a 7-1 triumph over the Kansas City Royals.

Bud Black, 5-8, took the loss as the Angels, the leaders in the American League West, notched their eighth consecutive decision against a left-handed starter.

Oakland 7 Texas 6

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Bruce Bochte hit a three-run homer in the top of the seventh inning to lead the Oakland A's past the Texas Rangers 7-6 Saturday night.

Bill Krueger, 5-7, gained the victory in relief while Jay Howell pitched the last two innings for his 13th save. Dave Rozema, 3-5, took the loss, also in relief.

The A's overcame leads of 2-0 and 5-2 by the Rangers, capped by Bochte's third home run of the season. Dave Collins and Carney Lansford scored on Bochte's home run after both had reached base with singles.

Minnesota 1 Chicago 0

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Smithson allowed one hit over 8½ innings and Dave Engle homered Saturday night to lead the Minnesota Twins to a 1-0 victory over the slump-ridden Chicago White Sox.

Smithson had a no-hitter in the works until Ozzie Guillen lined a single to center with two outs in the seventh inning. Smithson, 6-7, who walked five and struck out seven, left the game with one out in the ninth after walking Carlton Fisk.

Ron Kittle greeted Eufemia with a single, sending Fisk to second. Pinch-hitter Jerry Hairston followed with a single to center, but Fisk fell down while trying to stop after rounding third base and was tagged out. Eufemia then retired Guillen on a fly ball for his first save in a combined three-hitter.

The triumph was the third straight for the Twins, who also managed only three hits, while the White Sox suffered their fourth straight defeat and eighth loss in the last nine games.

NL: San Francisco loses ninth in a row

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pitcher Bob Knepper says he still hasn't gotten the knack of determining if he's hit a home run when it leaves his bat.

"It's much easier to tell when I give one up," Knepper said Saturday after connecting for a two-run homer in the Houston Astros' 8-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Knepper not only homered, he had a two-run single and pitched a four-hitter, his first complete game of the season and his 10th straight victory on the road dating back to last year.

"I really like pitching here (at Candlestick) but I do enjoy hitting here."

That was apparent. Knepper, who had just one hit in 33 previous at-bats this season (.303), stroked a two-run single in the top of the fourth off Giants starter Altee Hammarck, 3-8, to pad Houston's lead to 4-0.

Then in the sixth inning with a runner on and two out, Knepper slammed the home run into the right field seats off reliever Frank Williams. It was the fifth career homer for Knepper, a lifetime .141 hitter.

"That was probably my best in a game," Knepper said. "I've hit some games with no home runs."

Knepper, 48, limited the Giants to three singles and Rob Deer's third home run, a solo shot in the fifth. He walked three and struck out six.

Houston scored its first run when Mark Ballew hit his fifth home run over the left field fence in the second inning and added another run in the third on Phil Garper's sacrifice fly.

It was the Giants' ninth straight loss, tying a San Francisco franchise record set last season. The Giants also lost their 11th straight game to Houston dating back to last year.

"We're just not thinking baseball," Giants Manager Jim Davenport said. "I'm not saying we're a great ballclub but we're a better ballclub than what we've been showing. We're just not going to win the way we're playing and pitching."

St. Louis 6 New York 0

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Joaquin Andujar became the first 13-game winner of the major leagues Saturday night by the St. Louis Cardinals blanked the New York Mets 6-0.

Andujar, who had lost his last two wins for his 13th, struck out three and walked one in raising his record to 13-3. It was his seventh complete game.

The victory pushed the Cardinals, who have won 11 of their last 14 games, into first place in the National League East, a half-game ahead of the Montreal Expos.

San Diego 3 Cincinnati 0

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Dave Dravecky scattered eight hits for his fourth consecutive victory Saturday night as the San Diego Padres downed the Cincinnati Reds 3-0.

Dravecky, 34, pitched his second shutout of the year, walking three and striking out four. He escaped several jams in ending the Reds' four-game winning streak.

Mario Soto, 8-7, lost his fourth straight decision. He did not allow hit in the first four innings and gave up four hits over five innings.

Los Angeles 3 Atlanta 2

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jerry Reuss and Tom Nideletter combined on a five-hitter Saturday as the Los Angeles Dodgers snapped Atlanta's five-game win streak with a 3-2 victory Saturday.

Reuss, 6-6, struck out one, walked one and allowed only one hit between the fourth and the ninth, retiring 15 of 16 batters as he took a 3-0 lead into the final inning.

But after he retired the first two batters, Dale Murphy singled, then Bob Horner hit his 11th homer for the two Braves runs. Nideletter then came in to retire Terry Harvey on a ground ball to first for his sixth save.

Greg Brock, R. J. Reynolds, and Steve Sax led the Dodgers' nine-hit attack against loser Rick Mahler, 11-7. The win was only the second in the last six games for the Dodgers.

Philadelphia 6 Montreal 2

MONTREAL (AP) — Gary Madcox had three hits and drove in three runs to back the fourth-pitching of Kevin Gross as the Philadelphia Phillies downed the Montreal Expos 6-2 Saturday.

Gross, 6-7, did not allow a hit until the fifth inning. He struck out five and walked only one en route to his first complete game of the season and also had an RBI single.

The Phillies struck quickly against Expos starter Mickey Mahler, 1-2.

Pittsburgh 6 Chicago 5

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Tony Pena belted his fifth home run of the season in the bottom of the 13th inning Saturday night as the Pittsburgh Pirates nipped the Chicago Cubs 6-5.

Pena hit the first pitch of the inning by rolling George Frazier, 3-2, deep into the left field seats, to break up the 4-hour, 34-minute marathon.

Rick Reuschle, 5-1, the sixth Pirate pitcher, worked a scoreless 15th inning for the victory.

The Pirates got their first two men on in the 10th and 11th innings but Cub ace reliever Lee Smith pitched out of both jams.

Favorites face struggle at Wimbledon

By BOB GREENE
The Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — They had added charm, grace and a touch of sunshine to the Wimbledon tennis championships. And when crowd favorites Gabriela Sabatini and Hu Na last Saturday, was it just coincidence that that was when the rain came?

The top names — Martina Navratilova, Ivan Lendl and Jimmy Connors — all struggled, but they had won.

Eva Hana Mandlikova, the No. 3 women's seed from Czechoslovakia, dropped the first set before eliminating Australia's Dianne Balestrari 6-2, 7-5.

But it was "Gaby," the long-legged, bronzed 15-year-old from Argentina who had dazzled the crowd at the staid All England Club. And it was Hu, the first native of China to play in the women's singles in this faded grass court tournament, who had battled her way through the qualifying before ousting Britain's Annabel Croft en route to the third round.

But it was there that the dream ended for Hu — the dream of matching John McEnroe's 1977 dash from the qualifying to the semifinals here. She lost to South Africa's Rene Yu 6-2, 4-6, 6-0.

Sabatini, the 15th seed making her first appearance at Wimbledon and reminding many of Brazil's Maria Bueno, a three-time Wimbledon champion, lost to France's Catherine Tanvier 6-7, 6-4, 6-1.

And it was about then that the bright sunshine that had broken through the heavy overcast, disappeared again, replaced by the showers that had plagued the tournament all week.

The action ended early again, when the rain returned in the evening — a replay of the entire first week.

Navratilova, the women's co-top seed with Chris Evert Lloyd, was taken to a first-set tiebreaker before ousting West Germany's Bettina Bunge 7-6, 6-3. The 32-year-old Connors, whose forte throughout his long career has been his aggressive style, looked his age in stopping Ramesh Krishnan of India 7-5, 6-7, 5-2, 6-2, and Lendl ousted American Mike Leach 6-3, 1-6, 6-2, 6-7, 6-4 in a match that began Friday and was interrupted three times by rain.

Other seeds to lose were No. 6 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany, No. 9 Bonnie Gadusek of the United States and No. 10 Kathy Jordan of the U.S. in the women's field.

Sixth-seeded Pat Cash of Australia was ousted, as were No. 9 Johan Kriek of the U.S. and No. 15 Tomas Smitk of Czechoslovakia in the men's division.

Turn Shriver of the U.S., seeded fifth among the women, was a winner Saturday, as were No. 4 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria, No. 7 Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, No. 8 Zina Garrison of the U.S., No. 14 Wendy Turnbull of Australia and No. 16 Kathy Rinaldi of the U.S.

Winners in the men's draw included fifth-seeded Anders Jarryd of Sweden and two Americans, No. 8 Kevin Curran and No. 16 Tim Mayotte.

Chris Lewis of New Zealand, a finalist here two years ago, lost his second-round match to South Africa's Christo Steyn, while Vitas Gerulaitis, a semifinalist in these famed grass courts in both 1977 and 1979, moved into the third round by beating fellow American John Sadri.

In the shortest match of the day, Ricardo Acuna of Chile upset the 20-year-old Cash, a semifinalist here last year, 7-6, 6-3, 3-6, 6-7, 6-4. The match had been halted by rain and darkness Friday night with Acuna leading 5-0 in the final set, and Saturday's action lasted only 77 minutes, 45 seconds.

Although he was not disturbed by the overnight delay, Acuna said: "Last night I played the match (tennis) over in my head. The last time I played him, although I lost, I had a lot of chances to break serve and I felt I had a game that could bother him."

Although Cash has been suffering from back trouble, he did not use the injury as an excuse for defeat.

"It's the worst pain I've had in my life, but it's not the end of the world," he said.

Connors, normally quick and aggressive, was sluggish in the second set and fell behind 3-1 against Krishnan. He broke back for 3-2, but the old fire was missing as the stylish Krishnan took all of the pace off his shots.

Krishnan jumped to a 2-0 lead and led 5-2 before the "old" Connors surfaced. Scrambling for every ball, scrapping for every point, Connors won the next five games to take the third set, then slipped through the fourth and became the first player to advance to the fourth round.

"I was always fighting an uphill battle today," Connors said. "I was eager when I went out there, but he played well and I struggled a little bit. I went to a tighter racket and won nine games to a row."

Mayotte, who always has done well in big tournaments but never had a title until taking the Lipton International at Delray Beach, Fla. in February, was down 2-1 in the fourth set when his third-round match with Australia's Paul McNamee was interrupted by rain.

Mayotte returned after the delay and ripped off the next 11 games to win 3-6, 4-6, 7-6, 6-2, 6-0.

"It was like two totally different matches on two totally different courts," McNamee said.

Larissa Savchenko of the Soviet Union surprised Jordan, downing the American 7-5, 3-6, 6-3.

The team roping will be held on a progressive format. Teams may enter three times, with four places paid.

Entry fee is $5.50 per competitor.

Hunzeker fires ace

Pros congregate

TWIN FALLS — Most of the golf professionals in southern Idaho and northern Nevada descend on Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course today to begin two days of meetings and competition.

A total of 30 professionals will compete in a two-man better-ball competition, beginning at 1:30 p.m. today. That will be followed by the summer meeting of the Northern Chapter, Rocky Mountain Section, PGA, Sunday evening.

Monday a total of 170 players will compete in the annual Larry Malone Memorial Pro-Am. The pro-am provides scholarship money for deserving Idaho junior golfers and the Alan Peckan Cancer Society.

The pro-am begins from a shotgun start at 9 a.m. Monday with a barbecue and awards presentation immediately following.

TF Mixed sign-ups

TWIN FALLS — Entry deadline for the annual Fourth of July Magic Valley Mixed Scramble at Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course will be noon Friday, according to host Professional Don Hamilton.

The amateur affair featuring four men and one woman per team, will be played Saturday and Sunday. A special events barbecue is slated following play Saturday at the course.

IDFS closes river

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Fish and Game Department has banned non-Indian summer chinook fishing on the Little Salmon River, the agency announced Friday.

The emergency closure is necessary to protect a scant summer spawning run, said Director Jerry Conley.

Summer chinook spawn up the Little Salmon River and Rapid River, near Big Lost and their numbers are so low that we want to give them every chance to reproduce," he said.

More Idaho success came as Pocatello's Gall Manwill topped the pack in the SK races, while two other Pocatello residents, Tony Harris and Steve Hill grabbed second and third places in C/D-Stock Hydro action, respectively.

In terms of payback, K-boat competitors are vying for $2,250 in prize money each day, while all other divisions have $2,500 to shoot for both days. In addition, the prized mink coat will be awarded after all races (first Sunday) to the participant who comes closest to the American Powerboat Association speed record in his class.

Harry Christensen of Anaheim, Calif., captured the mink last year in a Comp Jet run. Coupled with the coat is a traveling trophy in honor of Provo Utah's Bill Faulkner, somewhat of a patriarch of regional boat racing who died last year.

Burns takes Memphis lead

By LES SEAGO
The Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Veteran pro George Burns grabbed sole possession of the lead in the St. Jude Memphis Classic on Saturday, firing a 2-under-par 70 to take a two-stroke lead over David Ogryn and Andy Bean.

"It was really work out there today," Burns said after finishing 54 holes at the 7,282-yard Colonial Country Club with 10-under-par 206. Burns began the day tied with Ogryn and Bill Sander at 8-under. Richard Zokol and John Mahaffey were a stroke behind.

Playing with Burns and Ogryn, Sander picked up two birdies in the first nine, then dropped to 7-under with a double-bogey on 13 and a bogey on No. 16 where he hit his tee shot in the water.

Sander, who has won only $712 on the tour this year, is still in striking distance with a 7-under-par 209 after Saturday's 73.

Bean, who was three strokes back after 36 holes, hung up four birdies and a bogey on his way to a 69 to move into position for Sunday's final round.

"I've played about as well today as I can play," said Bean, another veteran who won this tournament in 1977. "I can go out and make a good score tomorrow, I can win." "I would consider 68 a good round. If the wind blows like it did today, a 69."

Burns, who is 37th on the money list this year with $103,499, said he could have done better Saturday.

"My putter kinda let me down on the back," he said. "But I made a couple of real long ones on the front so it evened out. But I really had a chance to put it away, but I missed a couple of real short ones coming in."

Burns said the greens were fast and the pin placements difficult. "I haven't won since 1980," he said. "It would be very nice."

Ogryn, who has won only $11,241 on the tour this year, was obviously tickled with his position after being summoned once again to the press room for a post-round interview. "This is three days in a row," he said. "I'm setting an all-time record for myself."

"It's George, Andy and I tomorrow. It's going to be an interesting day for me. I'm looking forward to it."

Ogryn, who is in his third year on the Professional Golfers' Association Tour, moved to 10-under-par Saturday before bogeying No. 3 and the seventh hole.

"I 3-putted for bogey on seven," he said. "As the day went on the greens got faster."

But Ogryn played steady par golf the rest of the day to finish with a 72 for the round.

King paces Hershey LPGA by 3

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Betsy King, who shared the first-day lead in the LPGA's $250,000 Lady Keystone Open, shot a three-under-par 69 and opened a three-stroke margin in Saturday's second round of the 54-hole tournament.

King's round on the West Course of the Hershey Country Club gave her a 38-hole total of 138, six under par.

Bunched in a five-way tie for second at 141 were the co-leader in the first round, Juli Inkster, along with Nancy Lopez, Sandra Spuzich, Sarah LeVeque and Cindy Mackey.

King caught fire in the middle of the back nine. She got birdies at holes 13, 15 and 16, and was coasting along with a big lead when she bogeyed No. 18.

After a poor tee shot which went left into the rough, King needed three shots to reach the 401-yard hole. She had to make a tricky, five-foot downhill put for bogey.

Spuzich had a hole-in-one on the 160-yard fifth hole to highlight her round of 2-under-par 70.

The ace came shortly after Barbara Pendergast got the first hole-in-one in the tourney's 11-year history. Pendergast used a 2-iron on the 100-yard eighth hole.

There were five players at 142 — former champ Pat Bradley, Jane Blalock, Kathy Whitworth, Patty Sheehan and Kathy Postlewait.

LeVeque had the day's best round, a 4-under-par 68 that included an eagle on the 485-yard seventh hole. LeVeque hit a pitching wedge from 103 yards and the ball took two bounces and rolled into the cup.

She later saved par at the 18th with a 20-foot putt. Inkster was two over par on the front side, but got birdies at 16 and 17 to salvage an even-par round after her opening 59.

Lopez lost a chance to be all alone in second place when she bogeyed the final hole and had to settle for a 2-under-par 70. She three-putted from 20 feet at the 16th hole and she knocked her approach shot into the bunker at 18.

Mackey's 3-under-par 69 was her best round of the season. She had been four under after successive birdies at holes 14 through 16, but she three-putted the par-3 17th hole.

Mackey made nice money at No. 18, where she had to get up and down out of the bunker to save par.

Bradley was making a run at the leaders when she took a double-bogey six on the final hole.

After hooking her tee shot, Bradley had to chip out from under the trees and then sliced an approach shot into the trap. She blasted out and missed a bogey putt from 10 feet.

Sheehan, Whitworth and Postlewait also bogeyed the 18th hole.

Miller's late FG propels Stallions past Houston

By HOYT HARWELL
The Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Danny Miller kicked five field goals, the last two minutes left in the game, as Birmingham defeated Houston 22-20 in a United States Football League first round playoff game Saturday.

Birmingham, the USFL Eastern Conference champion, jumped to a 10-0 lead in the first half and held the edge until Houston went up 17-16 in the third period on a 21-yard pass from Jim Kelly to Richard Johnson.

Kelly was playing for the first time since landing his knee on Miami.

Birmingham made it 19-17 on Miller's fourth field goal of the afternoon, a USFL playoff record 57-yarder, late in the third period, but Houston's Toni Frisick countered with a 46-yard field goal that put the Gambler ahead 20-19 in the final quarter.

The Stallions moved to midfield, and a Bob Parsons punt was blown dead on Houston's 1-yard line. The Gambler moved to their own 20-yard line, but were forced to punt and Birmingham took over at Houston's 47.

After four running plays picked up 30 yards, an incomplete Cliff Stoudt pass set the stage for Miller's winning kick, a 35-yarder. His five field goals tied a league record for most in one game.

Miller opened the first-half scoring with a 39-yard field goal. On the ensuing kickoff, Birmingham's Ted Walton knocked the ball away from Clarence Verdin and Dennis Woodberry recovered at the Houston 24-yard line. Four plays later, quarterback Bill Smith with an eight-yard touchdown pass.

Houston tied the game on a 23-yard pass from Kelly to Gerald McNeil and a 20-yard Frisick field goal.

Generals say Flutie won't play Monday

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Quarterback Doug Flutie will not play in New Jersey's opening-round United States Football League playoff game against the Baltimore Stars on Monday night, a Generals spokesman said Saturday.

Flutie has been sidelined since June 1 with a severe collarbone and Coach Walt Michaels on Saturday decided not to play the Helmsman Trophy winner, spokesman Gary Croke said.

"I'm very disappointed. It had been coming all week. I probably needed someone to tell me not to play," Flutie said in an interview with the New York Daily News.

Michaels, a former New York Jets coach, said an experience he had with Jets quarterback Richard Todd influenced his decision not to play Flutie.

Todd was sidelined with a broken collarbone one season and physicians told Michaels the quarterback was ready to return to the lineup. He did and injured the collarbone again.

"I don't want to play doctor," said Michaels. "But it's a decision that can only be made by the head coach." Flutie's move gives Ron Reeves the duties as starting quarterback for the Generals. He has started three games this season, winning one and losing two.

Pro football

Two more Miller field goals for 26 and 41 yards, made it 16-10 before Kelly and Johnson linked up to make it 17-16.

After Birmingham went up 22-20, the Gambler started a final drive at their own 10-yard line, but Frisick missed a 49-yard field goal attempt by one foot to the left on the game's final play.

New magazine centers on child abuse facts

BY LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "We all want to play ostrich and believe child molestation can never happen in our town," says the editor of Today's Family, a California publication of Child Safe, Inc. She is Lori Bassett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Bassett, Twin Falls, who says in studying case histories of child abduction she has found that many occur in small towns, including a 2-year-old boy who "simply disappeared" from his parents' dairy farm in Grangeville.

Researching ways of combatting the threats and abuses against American children and educating parents is the major purpose of Child Safe, Inc., which was organized last July by a Costa Mesa, Calif., successful businessman, Sal Talefioro. It offers a nationwide child registration and protection service, as well as education through its publication.

As a concerned grandfather, he was alarmed by the severity of the nationwide missing children problem and, after researching programs and agencies who work to combat the problem, decided to launch a program which stresses education for prevention of child molestation and abduction.

Bassett, who was in Twin Falls recently visiting her parents, brings a similar commitment to her job. A 1972 graduate of Twin Falls High School, Bassett says she's "always been involved with children," having been a 4-H leader and big sister. She has a background in publishing and formerly edited a magazine for teen-agers called "E-Q."

After joining the Child Safe editorial staff last summer, Bassett said it took her "about three months to get everything into perspective."

The staff worked nine months to produce the initial issue of Today's Family, which came out in May. Bassett, as editor, worked closely with all the writers for the well-researched articles in the slick paper, 64-page edition.

Bassett says the response to the first, special issue of Today's Family has been "incredible" and circulation for (future bi-monthly issues, scheduled to begin in September, is currently at 16,000. A bank in Ohio is purchasing copies for all its junior depositors, Bassett says.

The special edition is expected to be reprinted, and Bassett estimates final distribution will reach two million. The firm now has sales people and circulation in some 20 states, according to the former Twin Falls woman.

In addition to its emphasis on educating parents about how to teach their children to avoid abduction or sexual abuse, Bassett says Child Safe also provides a protection service for children in case they become lost or injured.

For $20 parents can register a child, with lowered costs for subsequent children. And by sending identification such as fingerprints, photograph and physical description, plus medical and dental record locations and parental information, they will receive 50 registered clothing labels with the child's individual identification number.

In the event the child is lost or injured and his identity is not known and if his clothing has this identification number, officials can call the Child Safe 800 number, 252-4433, in Costa Mesa for this vital information, which parents often cannot furnish in times of trauma.

"Children don't carry names or other types of identification," Bassett says.

Another aspect of the Child Safe program is the maintenance of complete identification files which are vital for tracing in case of a child's disappearance.

The editor doesn't believe the incidence of missing children has increased in recent years, but public awareness of the scope of the problem is growing. She credits President Reagan's signing of the Missing Children's Act, which allows the FBI to become involved, as a positive factor.

It is estimated that 50,000 children are criminally abducted every year, Bassett says, according to the Dee Scofield awareness pro-

Darwin Huller holds up one of the "hot houses" he uses to give his vegetable plants a jump on the growing season

Huller's 'hot houses' hasten growth

BY LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Darwin Huller may be a small man, but he is a giant-sized gardener.

The 80-year-old Twin Falls resident has been enthusiastic about his gardening for many years, but this year he hit upon a method to successfully combat the cold, southern Idaho spring nights and give Mother Nature a real boost.

The result is having vegetables ready to eat — and sell — long before most other home gardens. Huller and his wife had zucchini on their table by June 15, their Top Crop and Blue Lakes variety green string beans were ready by June 20 and carrots also were big enough to use by mid-June.

Elder

Huller gets the jump on the season with his own variation of the well-known practice of protecting plants with hot caps. Last winter the gardener made large, curved wooden frames, about seven by eight feet, over which he stretched heavy clear plastic, holding it in place with lathes.

He placed these light and easily handled frames, which he refers to as his "hot houses" on the ground to warm it prior to planting. And he kept them over the seed for about a month after planting, removing the frames on hot days to allow the tender young plants to get adequate air.

Under this "hot house" protection his cantaloupes grew despite the chilly nights, and now, transplanted to give them proper spacing, the plants are well on their way to producing early melons.

Although Huller always has had some kind of a garden, he has given it his full attention since 1970 when he retired from the Idaho Department of Highways where he worked for some years on survey crews.

"I've never worked harder in my life," he laughed, referring to retirement. The Hullers used to own a lot adjacent to their home on Heyburn Avenue West, which is covered with fruit trees.

But, spraying the fruit trees, mowing the huge lawn underneath, the orchard and caring for his good-sized garden got to be a bit too much.

"I figured I was making about 30 or 40 cents per hour from the produce we sold with all that mowing," Huller says.

So they sold the adjoining lot, and now he just concentrates on the garden, thereby upgrading the efficiency of his operation, which still could be viewed as mostly a labor of love.

"Now I probably make from 60 to 70 cents an hour," the energetic Huller laughed. He estimates he may clear $300 to $400 a season on sale of his fresh produce.

He's primarily an organic gardener with a large and well-tended compost pile. And, as all gardeners know, the trick is to keep ahead of the weeds.

With proper plan, every woman can marry, says author

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Any woman can catch the man of her choice, says author Margaret Kent.

But forget romance. The serious man-hunter needs to be prepared for a calculated, chase filled with hard work, temporary selfishness, cunning and even deceit.

It's not going to be cheap, either. If she uses Kent's methods, Kent teaches a course in her hometown of Key Biscayne, Fla., for $1,000. But she was in Twin Falls last week with her $95, 60-ly-yourself version of the course: a bright-yellow workbook called "How to Marry the Man of Your Choice."

"The price should be an indication that it's not something to read to go to sleep at night," she says. Finding a man is a serious business.

The book is actually a bargain if the buyer considers that Kent is available to give advice via long-distance phone lines, she says. And she is also willing to refund the money if the book doesn't produce results.

She gives me a woman four years of following her step-by-step advice. But any woman worth her wedding cake should be able to catch her husband far sooner, she says.

The key to the Margaret Kent method is playing Jekyll and Hyde with the chosen bridegroom's ego.

"All men are really little boys at heart," she says. They need to be coddled and soothed, but they also occasionally need a little nastiness to keep them in line, she says.

She gives me the time to begin, taking a cue from Wallis Simpson, she says. Upon meeting her future husband, Simpson said, "All my life, I've wanted to meet a king, and now I'm disappointed."

For a local political figure, "So why aren't you a member of a bigger state?" works. For a local dignitary, "I thought you would be taller," is effective.

"They won't forget you," Kent promises.

That's just the first serve.

At the initial shocker, the woman needs to start thinking about a compliment. Nothing beats a murmured, "When did you first realize you were unique?" delivered with a soulful gaze, Kent says.

A woman also needs to start her intended talking. She, of course, fawns over the answers, while filling away the information for future use. Last she has any problems thinking of questions, Kent supplies a list of 50 to get her started: "What's his ideal woman? What was he like as a little boy?"

If she's concerned about his desirability, she might even try: "Have you ever belonged to a cult? Do you believe in reincarnation?"

The questioning process takes about 50 hours. By then, his ego should be swelled, and the woman should have a complete mental dossier to start deflating it, Kent says. It wouldn't do for him to start thinking he's too good for her.

"If he is a capitalist, tell him he thinks too much like a socialist," she suggests. "If he is a doctor, tell him his personality is that of a waiter. If he is an athlete, tell him he is clumsy."

To be most effective the mental ping-pong needs to be combined with a cynosness on the female's part, planned with all the detail of a military invasion. Every moment, every word and every piece of clothing counts toward his final decision to marry, Kent says.

Tips include:

- Consider altering career plans. Selling medical supplies is among the best of jobs for the single woman, she says. IRS agents meet many men and are not easily forgotten. And any woman can become a waitress — preferably in the kind of mom and pop place where lonely men stop by for a doughnut late at night.
- Forget dress for success and high fashion. Men like casual, huggable clothes. She eschews high fashion, to the point of recommending against gathered sleeves or dropped waistlines that distort the lines of the body, printed fabrics and most jewelry.
- Conventional dates are another

Blind sisters reach academic success

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Two Minneapolis sisters who have been blind since birth are building distinguished academic records and say they just don't have time to pity themselves.

This spring, Lisa Larges graduated magna cum laude from St. Olaf College in Northfield, with majors in English, women's studies and religion. The 21-year-old has been admitted for graduate studies at San Francisco Theological Seminary, a Presbyterian school.

Allison Larges, 23, a 1983 graduate of Augsburg College in Minneapolis, is pursuing graduate studies in data base management in biomedical statistics at the University of Minnesota. She says she averages about a "B" and expects to get her master's next year. She also works part time for the State Services for the Blind.

These young women are the children of Eugene and Marilyn Larges, who have normal vision, although with corrective eyeglasses. The daughters have limited vision of large objects but are legally blind. Early in life, the girls saw medical experts who concluded they couldn't do anything about their sight.

At St. Olaf, a liberal arts college with a large number of honors students, Lisa enjoyed academic combat. Her dorm room book shelves were loaded with Brailled volumes of the Bible and a 35-volume Brailled dictionary.

She took class notes on a portable Braille, a compact recording machine that punches characters onto stiff paper, providing her notes for review. She also used a Braille typewriter and a regular typewriter outside the classroom.

To help her adjust to the campus as a freshman in 1981, her parents made a large, raised map of St. Olaf buildings.

Once she tumbled off a 3-foot-high walled terrace but landed in a snowpile. "I sat there and laughed for 10 minutes," she recalled.

While Lisa is comfortable with the orderly ways of the Greek classics, Allison finds fascination in the exacting sciences of mathematics and chemistry.

Their parents tell another side to their personalities.

While Lisa has been spirited in sticking up for her rights and opinions, Allison "is more of a social butterfly," says her father, who is a sales account executive with General Mills.

Olson a recognized mosquito expert

A former Buhl resident, Dr. Jim Olson, now professor of entomology at Texas A&M University, has become recognized as worldwide expert on mosquitoes.

The son of Ruth Olson, Buhl, and a former Twin Falls High School teacher, Olson will go to Geneva, Switzerland, the end of August to help develop an international workshop on Rickettsia mosquito control for the World Health Organization.

At Texas A&M, he heads a program trying to combat mosquitoes in rice-producing areas. The study team is composed of entomologists, ecologists, behaviorists and engineers from Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas and California.

He grew up in Buhl, graduating from Buhl High School in 1960 and from the University of Idaho with a B.S. degree. When he entered the Army after college, he was assigned to the chemical corps where he directed field research on virus-bearing mosquitoes. After his tour of Army duty, he earned his doctorate at the University of Illinois in 1971.

In addition, when he entered the Texas A&M College of Agriculture, Olson is director of the Mosquito

John Henry Lively, Twin Falls, was awarded the Pilgrim degree, the highest honor of the Loyal Order of Moose, recently during a ceremony in Moosehart, Ill., a community established and supported by the fraternity for needy children.

A member of Twin Falls Moose Lodge No. 612, Lively was honored for his "outstanding service and continued devotion to the humanitarian programs of the fraternity." He was one of 200 lodge members from the U.S., Canada and Great Britain to receive the award.

Terry R. Molyneux, a graduate of Twin Falls High School, and Brett M. Thackeray, Wendell High School member, received scholarships from Gonzaga University, Spokane. The Jesuit university was founded in 1887.

John Francis Forbes received a doctor of medicine degree June 8 at the University of Washington, Seattle. A Twin Falls High School graduate, he earned his B.S. degree from the College of Idaho. He will intern at Tripler Army Medical Center, Honolulu, Hawaii. His sister, Priscilla June Forbes, also a Twin Falls High School graduate, received a bachelor's degree in business administration May 19 from Boise State University. They are the son and daughter of John and Janice Forbes, Twin Falls.

Linda Gordon, Twin Falls, and Arlene Gerleman, Rupert, each have received an American Business Women's scholarship at Idaho State University. Gordon also received an ISU Bookstore scholarship from Kay K. Searle, Rupert. Dan Nutsch, Jerome, and Rene D. Peterson, Buhl.

Sheri Nimmo, 18, daughter of Carol Marshall, Twin Falls, is competing in the Idaho Miss TEEN pageant this weekend at the College of Idaho. Her hobbies include ballet, wind surfing, horseback riding and singing.

Jill Ballard, daughter of Ron and Pat Ballard, Kimberly, has been named an outstanding treasurer by the national Delta Delta Delta Sorority. Ballard, who serves as treasurer for the University of Idaho chapter, was nominated along with 125 other girls from across the nation.

Winners are selected according to income bracket of their chapters and Sorority. Ballard was named the top treasurer for chapters whose budgets exceed $150,000. A 1982 graduate of Kimberly High School, she is a senior accounting major at Moscow.

Ada Rivera, Glens Ferry High School senior, has been named a U.S. Achievement Academy national award winner in cheerleading. She was nominated by Norma Severson, school counselor.

Kathleen Brant, daughter of Gerald and Sue Brant, Jerome, has been named an Academic All-American by the National Secondary Education Council. She is the granddaughter of Maurice and Pearl Kias, Twin Falls, and John and Loretta Brant, Jerome.

Older man's will complicates marriage of younger woman

DEAR ABBY: I have this problem that has been on my mind for quite some time. I am married to a wonderful, hard-working man. We both work, but barely make ends meet between us. I am 46 and my husband is 55.

For the last six years I have been seeing a respectable, well-to-do, 74-year-old gentleman who has a living wife. He dearly loves me, and we get together for a few hours at his friend's apartment at least one afternoon a week.

I accept no money or gifts from him, but he told me that in his will he is leaving me his (home and all the furnishings).

I am now wondering how this will go over with his family if he should die before his wife? Wouldn't they be angry why he is being so good to me? His wife knows nothing about us, and this could be a terrible shock to her.

I don't want to ask him to leave me out of his will because I could sure use whatever he wants to leave me, but I don't want him to muddy his name or mine after he's gone. What should I do?

- WORRIED
DEAR WORRIED: You are worried with good reason. Please share your concern with a lawyer. A respectable, old gentleman, and ask him if he has considered the consequences of his generosity. Perhaps his lawyer can suggest some other way of remembering you. (You might also ask him.) You could also be worried for nothing.

DEAR ABBY: After 34 years of marriage, our parents divorced. Perhaps I should explain that my sister and I are both married with children of our own. The reason Mom and Dad divorced was because Dad fell for a younger woman (the old story — she came to work for him). Anyway, Mother felt publicly humiliated because he married this younger woman as soon as the divorce became final.

Now Mother has told my sister and me that our children should not be allowed to associate with Dad or his new wife, and if we associate with them we should never expect to be in her (Mom's) company again.

We love both our parents and want to be friendly with both of them. We don't condone Dad's action, but he was a good father to us and we don't want to be forced to choose between our parents.

Please advise.

- IN THE MIDDLE
DEAR IN: Your mother's bitterness is understandable, but she has your children's future in mind. You and your sister are free to socialize with whomever you choose, and if your mother excludes you from her company because of your choice, that's her right.

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to give other young mothers a good piece of advice. It's about glass baby bottles. My toddler was running down the sidewalk with one when he tripped; the bottle broke and stabbed him in the chest!

Fortunately, all he needed was four stitches, but the damage could have been much worse.

Glass baby bottles are fine for infants, but for older babies they're a no-no.

- DEBBIE IN ROYAL OAKS
DEAR DEBBIE: Thanks for caring enough about others to share your shattering experience.

DEAR ABBY: I would like your opinion of a problem that I sure has cropped up in my marriages. Do you think a husband should bring guests home without giving his wife some notice?

My husband does this all the time. It's usually a co-worker for dinner, or some business associate. If they've never been here before, my husband gives them a tour of the house. This really upsets me because some days I'm behind in my work and the place doesn't look all that great.

Yesterday I had an early morning dental appointment and I had to rush to go, and I didn't get around to making the beds, when in comes my husband with two strangers!

Abby, am I unreasonable to ask my husband to give me at least a half an hour's notice, or the option of saying, "Not today, please?"

- FRUSTRATED
DEAR FRUSTRATED: You are not unreasonable — your husband is inconsiderate. And unless you put your foot down firmly, where it will make a lasting impression, don't expect anything to change.

Child

gram, based on newspaper collectors over a five-year period, and another 100,000 are victims of parental kidnappings.

Some children who are stolen are sold for illegal adoptions, but more are sold to pornographic rings, she says.

In a comprehensive article in Today's Family, titled "Portrait of a Pedophile," the child molester emerges as most often a respected community leader, not a "dirty old man" as often portrayed in the news.

Pedophile is typically an adult male — often teachers, Scoutmasters, neighbors, clergy or coaches — whose sexual preference is confined to youngsters within a limited age range.

It is estimated that over 80 percent of molesters were themselves victimized as children, thus spawning what Dick Vance, a detective on the Montebello, Calif., Police Department and a recognized authority on child molestation, calls the "Dracula syndrome."

The Child Safe program also aims to do some educating in the court system where, too often, Bassett says, sex offenders "get 90 days or else with probation and are right back on the street."

"Until recently it was believed that child molesters could be cured, but now most experts say this is not true, so they should be removed from where children are," Bassett says. Also, children make poor witnesses in court, and even those old enough to articulate what has happened to them often are not believed, she adds.

These factors all contribute to shielding sex offenders who, until the recent growing public awareness of the scope of the problem, have thrived under a legal system which unwittingly protects them, Bassett says.

"No one believes a pillar of the community — which many of them are — would do such a thing. As one detective attiringly said of his client: 'He loves children and that's no crime,'" Bassett says.

"Communities need to get mad and say 'We won't put up with this any longer,'" she says.

"About 20 minutes a day, working in the cool of the morning, keeps it in good shape," Huller says of his well-tended rows.

In addition to ensuring the warmth of the ground for his seed and young plants, Huller goes a step further, warming the water with which he irrigates. He stores the ditch water in large barrels where the sun warms it, and even when he uses city water, employs the same natural means by letting the water remain in the street and out hoses until it loses its chill.

The efficient gardener hails from Missouri where he spent his first 42 years. He was born Jan. 22, 1905, on a farm near Unionville in Putnam County. He grew up there, married Thelma Bradshaw and raised cattle, sheep, hogs, corn, soybeans and other crops in the old, mixed farming tradition.

His brother, Floyd Huller, had come to Twin Falls earlier and was operating the Dept. Grill here. Their father came West next, and after visiting them, Huller was so pleased with the drier climate he (found in Magic Valley, he decided to move to Idaho, too.

MaTreVal announces summer camp plans

TWIN FALLS — Summer camp schedule for the MaTreVal Camp Fire Council is announced by Chris Pruett, council board member.

There will be two sessions at Camp Tawakani in the South Hills, from July 22-27 and July 29-Aug. 3. Boys and girls from grades two to nine are invited. Activities will include hiking, crafts, singing, camping, outdoor skills, dancing, ceremonies and exploring nature.

Cost for the week-long camp is $70 per person, and buses will leave from Twin Falls, Jerome, Hansen, Mountain Home and Boise.

Day camp at Rock Creek park, just west of Magic Valley Regional Medical Center is planned Aug. 12-17 at cost of $20 per person. This is for boys and girls from pre-kindergarten age to sixth grade.

Many crafts are planned as well as sports, games, singing, outdoor cooking and other outdoor activities. Cost is $20 per person.

The success of the camps depends on having enough adult volunteers, sponsors or friends, who will share their time and talents for a week, Pruett says. Training sessions are scheduled for each camp for volunteers and the council also is hiring counselors for Camp Tawakani. For more information contact the Twin Falls Camp Fire office, 733-6214.

Marketing

Hospitals, physicians examining methods of drawing business

By DOUG WRIGHT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "Marketing" — the new buzzword in the health profession nationwide — has reached the Magic Valley, causing area hospital clinics and physicians to take a hard look at what they can do to attract patients to their particular businesses.

In the medical profession, marketing involves making the health organization more visible, attractive, and accessible to the public.

The idea of marketing a health-care service was once considered boorish and improper among medical professionals, who thought that the quality and importance of their services were enough to keep patients coming.

But now, it is increasingly becoming the nationally favored way of keeping the health organization out of the red, and Magic Valley medical businesses are responding to the trend.

Several factors, both nationwide and locally, help explain the sudden rise of marketing programs in the medical profession.

First and foremost among these factors is the rapid decline in the number of people seeking health care in recent years. Nationally, hospital admissions have declined from 37.9 million patients in 1982 to an estimated 34 million in 1985, and a similar trend can be seen in Idaho and the Magic Valley.

"Hospital admissions have fallen significantly in Idaho and rural hospitals are suffering the worst," says Dick Schultz, the supervisor of the state health planning agency.

Fred Schloss, the administrator of the Cassia County Memorial Hospital, also sees the dropoff, noting that "There is a definite decline in the number of people entering hospitals in the area. Why the sudden decline in people seeking health care?"

"It has to do with the high costs of medical care driving people away, and the limits which third-party payers are placing on how much and for what services they will pay," says a Twin Falls physician who wished not to be named.

Insurance agencies and the government, with its new tighter rules on Medicare, are paying much less, leaving the consumer to foot the bill for much of the medical care he wishes to receive.

As a result, "Consumers are thinking twice before spending the money to take care of medical problems," says Dr. Harry Brumbach, a Twin Falls surgeon.

Another factor making marketing attractive to the health profession is the rising number of health care providers in the area, including both individual physicians and health organizations.

"The area is already adequately supplied with doctors right now and new ones are coming in because the competition in the big cities is so keen," says Brumbach.

Although most of the experts talked to did not feel that there was an oversupply of health care in the area, they did feel that the number of medical services and the resulting competition between them was increasing.

Thus, an increasing number of physicians, hospitals and clinics are turning to advanced marketing techniques to help them compete for the declining number of patients.

Rural health-care services, faced with lower admissions and red ink, are being forced to find new ways to market their services," says health planning supervisor Schultz.

As part of their marketing strategy, hospitals and clinics are turning to advertising on TV, radio and print. But the advertising is not of a cutthroat "We're better than you are" type, says Schultz. "It's more of a getting your name out, 'this is what we provide,' type, which focuses on quality and service."

Sue Summers, director of public relations at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center agrees. "We provide community awareness

Magic Valley Regional Medical Center's same day services allow patients with minor problems to be treated in one day of services available, to show our strengths and what we have to offer," she says.

In another attempt to market themselves and increase the number of people served, many health services are trying to get the community involved in the organization through community education.

"Health promotion and disease prevention activities, classes and other types of community education are especially popular right now," says Schultz.

Community outreach programs are another popular way to increase community awareness. "Our home health program, our same-day surgery program, the fact that we own our own ambulance service and that we have doctor's offices on the premise are all ways of marketing our hospital," says Schloß, of the Cassia hospital.

Although physicians are not as concerned about marketing, they also have tried a few things to increase the number of patients they serve, mostly geared towards increasing the convenience to the consumer.

Many physicians' groups in the area are also trying to market themselves and increase the number of people served, many health services are trying to get the community involved in the organization through community education.

Forest Service contracts let

TWIN FALLS — Three contracts have been awarded to Twin Falls and Bellevue contractors by the U.S. Forest Service to work in the Sawtooth National Forest.

Ray Castle Construction of Bellevue has signed a contract to maintain 141 miles of forest roads in the Fairfield and Ketchum Ranger Districts and the Sawtooth National Recreation Area (SNRA).

Foster Construction of Twin Falls will construct a basement fire exit and sewer hook-up at the Stanley Office of the SNRA.

C. L. Heilman Construction was awarded a contract to construct a single-lane, treated timber bridge on Hyndman Creek, nine miles east of Ketchum.

The three contracts totaled $82,000.

Moore Group to pay dividend

BOISE (AP) — Shareholders of Moore Financial Group, the bank holding company which operates Idaho First National Bank, will receive a $2,053,066 dividend.

Moore Financial on Thursday declared a regular cash dividend of 30 cents per share. It is payable July 19 to shareholders of record on July 9.

Gas rates to decrease slightly

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Starting this weekend, there will be a slight drop in residential natural gas rates in southern Idaho.

The Public Utilities Commission has granted Intermountain Gas Co. permission to cut its rates a bit to reflect a credit the utility is receiving from its wholesaler, Northwest Pipeline Co., Salt Lake City.

The PUC will send an average residential customer's yearly bill to go down $6.57.

But the lower rates may not last long. Intermountain has applied for a general rate increase that could boost residential rates by 8.9 percent.

Association elects Utah man

SUN VALLEY (AP) — Jerry O'Brien, publisher of The Salt Lake Tribune, has been named president-elect of the Utah-Idaho-Spokane Associated Press Association.

O'Brien, a former AP bureau chief, was elected Tuesday to succeed the current president, A. L. Alford Jr., publisher of the Lewiston (Idaho) Morning Tribune, who will serve until next spring.

The association is composed of 16 AP-member newspapers in the three states. The editors and publishers concluded their annual meeting here and elected to meet next June in Salt Lake City.

Deposit insurance reform needed soon

Reform is desperately needed of the system of deposit insurance that protects our accounts in the nation's banks and savings and loans.

It's coming — perhaps not this year, but it's on the way.

The days of the private insurance system are numbered. This system has been rocked by crises, first in Ohio, more recently in Maryland. Only six states still maintain private insurance systems.

A majority of the nation's 14,800 federal insured banks are on the problem list maintained by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC).

"Most banks on the list don't fail," says Alan Whitney, an FDIC spokesman. Still, they require close supervision until they correct the problems that put them on the list to start with.

Less than half of 1985 has gone, but already federal and state regulators have closed 35 banks. The total for all of 1984 was 79.

Sylvia Porter

Several proposals are under review by regulators, industry representatives and trade groups. The American Bankers Association, for instance, commissioned a study about reform of the deposit insurance system that is slated for release to the public within a few weeks.

Among the proposals that have attracted the most attention:

- Phasing out of private insurance; three bills that would accomplish this have been introduced in the House. Private insurance operates in Maryland, Ohio, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, Massachusetts and Georgia.

- Establish risk-related premiums so that well-managed institutions do not pay for the errors of poorly managed ones. Both the FDIC and FSILC favor this, but some bankers and S&Ls worry that assessing premiums this way will be difficult and unfair.

- Raise the amount of deposit insurance from the current $100,000 maximum. Proponents realize that a blanket increase won't cure any ills and argue, instead, for prorating premiums on coverage above $100,000 on a risk-related basis.

- Merge the FDIC and FSILC. "It's a terrible idea," William B. O'Connell, president of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, told my research associate, Ellen Hermanson. The notion implies the FSILC is in bad shape, he claims. "That's foolish," says he. "Both the FDIC and the FSILC are backed by the full faith and credit of the U.S. government."

- Bankers feel they've paid their premiums to be kept up the FDIC, contends Fitz Elmdorff, a spokesman for the American Bankers Association. "Why should that money be used to bail out the S&Ls?"

- Nevertheless, this idea has powerful champions — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker and FDIC Chairman William Isaac.

- Intervene more quickly when banks and S&Ls run into trouble and take any necessary action before an emergency develops.

- Some of these ideas require legislation to carry them out. Both the FDIC and the FSILC have sent packages of legislation to Congress to underscore their attitudes of urgency.

The FSILC proposals include increasing the insurance premiums and tightening the supervision over the kinds of investments S&Ls can make. In addition, the FSILC suggests the establishment of risk-related premiums.

The FDIC also wants risk-related premiums. Its package includes measures to boost its enforcement powers as well.

And, in a rule that takes effect in January, the FDIC will disclose the names of banks and bankers involved in enforcement actions. It recently invited comment about two new proposals to control (curb) risk-taking by banks.

The message to banks, S&Ls and others in our financial services is unmistakable: Move fast on your own to clean your houses and restore confidence in your institutions! If you don't, the regulatory agencies will take over and move for you. It's that clear.

Sylvia Porter writes on financial matters for Universal Press Syndicate.

President cites CSI management program

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho's Adult Farm Management program has received a commendation from President Ronald Reagan.

In his letter, the President said, "You are spearheading a process by which farmers and ranchers may develop new tools for coping in today's tough technological and economic climate."

He continued, "Farmers and ranchers are already dealing with these challenging issues. Those among them who are best informed, most skilled and confident will have the best opportunity for survival and success. And for some of them, that's where you come in."

"Yours is still a young enterprise and like all pioneers, you are accepting risks, but you are also in the forefront of training full-time adult farmers and ranchers in the modern techniques of business — helping them to become and stay competitive. I am happy to commend your efforts," the president concluded.

The program, which started in July 1983, was recommended for commendation by Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, he said. "I think five years down the road we will find some of the best farmers and ranchers in the country in Magic Valley, surviving difficult times, because of their new capabilities." He said the College of Southern Idaho should be commended for being the forefront of training agriculturists to do what they do best.

A pilot project in the nation, the Adult Farm Management program, instructed by Tom Lewis, provides the farm family with a computer during its first year in the program. During the second year, the students use their own computers for complete record keeping. And during the third year, the program emphasizes restructuring the operation around profitable enterprises as determined through the computer data.

Lewis will have approximately 45 farm families involved in the program this fall. It has been supported by the University of Idaho, Idaho Wheat Commission, and the State Department of Vocational Education.

Graduates from NU join Times-News staff

TWIN FALLS — Paula Eubanks and Robert Dorrell, two recent graduates of Northwestern University in Journalism, have joined the Times-News staff as a reporter and assistant news editor respectively.

Eubanks, who graduated in June from Northwestern's Medill School of Journalism with a M.S. degree will cover education and health issues. At Northwestern, she focused on legal, business and government reporting as well as newspaper management.

Eubanks, 24, holds a B.A. degree from Mills College, Oakland, Calif., where she studied social policy and public issues. She also attended Simmons College, Boston, and Harvard University's summer school and visited Ireland in 1983 as part of Trinity College's lecture series program.

A native of the Chicago area, she has worked in Washington, D.C., with the Robert F. Kennedy Memorial Foundation as a federal policy researcher in youth employment, education and social issues. She also has worked for the Student Press Service, Washington.

Dorrell, 22, received his B.S. degree from Medill this June, where he was news editor and graphics editor at the Daily Northwestern and coordinated the paper's layout and design efforts. He also worked as a cartoonist and contributed charts, drawings and designs to the paper.

Dorrell, who is from Prairie Village, Kan., a suburb of Kansas City, interned last year at the Hacon (Ga.) Telegraph and News, where he covered general assignment and worked on the news copy desk. At the Times-News, Dorrell will assist news editor Dale Stewart in production and design of the paper's news pages.

Both positions were announced this week by Times-News managing editor Stephen Hartgen.

Bank issues coin marking conference

BOISE — A commemorative silver medallion will be issued by First Security Bank of Idaho, N.A. to raise funds for the National Governor's Conference being held in Boise this August.

The coin is a one-ounce, pure silver medallion imprinted with the state seal of Idaho on one side and the logo of the National Governor's Conference on the other. The Sunshine Mining Co. in Kellogg will provide the silver for the medallions.

First Security and Sunshine Mining hope to sell at least 5,000 coins to raise $40,000 for the conference.

The mining company will also provide the silver for a 30-ounce silver bar to be presented to a gift to the governor, President Reagan, the guest speakers, Canadian province directors and other dignitaries attending the conference.

The price of the medallions is $20. They are available between now and Aug. 16 at any First Security banking office in Idaho.

Egg output rising

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egg production is increasing this spring, says the Agriculture Department.

In April, according to the latest estimates, the nation's laying flocks produced 5.67 billion eggs, up 1 percent from a year earlier. Laying hens as of May 1 totaled 273 million, down 1 percent from a year ago.

However, the hens' rate of lay on May 1 averaged 68.2 eggs per 100 birds, up from 67.8 eggs a year earlier, the report said.

Trade winds

Bryce King, a certified public accountant in Twin Falls, has joined the accounting firm of Cooper, Norman and Jirovec. King was formerly the finance director for the city of Twin Falls.

Glenn Reddick of Jerome was recently named to the President's Round Table of the American Breeders Service in recognition of his outstanding performance and leadership in the company. He is the district sales manager for ABS in Idaho and Eastern Oregon.

Dr. Spencer Williams, the director of Williams Chiropractic Clinic in Twin Falls, recently attended the annual convention of the Idaho Association of Chiropractic Physicians in Boise. The convention focused on the treatment of permanently impaired individuals.

Penny Brown, office manager, and Becky Romans, insurance clerk for Williams Chiropractic Clinic recently attended an insurance procedure seminar in Boise sponsored by Professional Management Administrators.

Doug Burks Sr. and Doug Burks Jr. of Burks Tractor Co. in Twin Falls were recently honored with the Master Dealer Distinction by the J.I. Case Co. Recognition was based on outstanding sales and obtaining a large market share in Idaho.

Samples can show shortages

KIMBERLY — Idaho potato growers can prevent yield-reducing phosphorus shortages by applying technique using petiole samples developed by Dale Westermann, a soil scientist affiliated with the University of Idaho.

Westermann has developed a technique which farmers can take petiole samples — from the stem portion of the fourth leaf down from the plant's growing tip — in July and apply phosphorus early enough to avoid damage to the root system.

In order to use the technique, the grower should take two petiole samples 10 to 14 days apart after July 1 and plot the two points on semi-logarithmic paper. The grower then draws a straight line between the two points and extends it to the position on the graph corresponding to the end of August.

If the graph indicates that the phosphorus level will fall below the minimum desired 1,000 parts per million level by the end of August, then the farmer can apply more fertilizer either through irrigation systems or by using foliar sprays.

Potato plants that are phosphorus-deficient are more susceptible to early death and verticillium wilt, which may reduce yields by 15 to 20 percent.

For more information on the technique, call Westermann at 425-5302.

Catfish gaining

WASHINGTON (AP) — Production of farm-raised catfish continues to run well above year-earlier levels, says the Agriculture Department. Prices also are up.

In May, the Crop Reporting Board said in a recent report, catfish production was 17.5 million pounds, up 38 percent from May 1984. The average price paid to growers was 77 cents per pound, up 4 cents from a year earlier. So far this year, catfish production totaled 83.1 million pounds of live weight, delivered to processors. That was up 20 percent from 68.7 million pounds in the first five months of 1984.

Marketing

Magic Valley have extended their regular hours and are now open in the evenings and on weekends, to make it more convenient for working people to see a doctor.

Many physicians and even hospitals are also emphasizing same-day service on minor surgeries and other treatment programs, so that people can return home that night rather than staying in a hospital bed. This saves people both time and money and improves the public image of the care provider.

Disagreement in the medical profession exists on what these marketing practices will have on the future cost of health care.

Schloss feels that marketing "will increase some costs, because the costs of advertising are substantial. Hospitals are absorbing those costs within their budgets now; but somewhere down the line, patients will have to pay for it."

Others believe that it won't have much of an effect on costs. "It won't add to health care costs, it'll just make health care more available," says the physician who wished not to be named.

"If the hospitals continue to market on quality instead of price, marketing won't have much effect," adds Schullz.

Still others believe that costs will decrease. Jim Evans, the director of personnel and public relations at St. Benedict's Hospital in Jerome, believes "It should keep costs down, because the increased competition will force businesses to be more efficient."

Regardless of its effect on health care costs and its effectiveness in increasing public use of health services, many experts believe that marketing is here to stay in the health profession and will probably intensify in the future.

Deceptive invoices sent out by New York gem dealership

Q: I just received some junk mail. One that really caught my eye was Christopher Gallery of Fine Gems, claiming I had credit with them. I do not recall doing business with them. Can you give me some information on this company?

A: We have been receiving many inquiries about this company. Our executive director has sent a statement saying that a deceptive, phony invoice has been mailed to thousands of Idaho residents from a New York City firm using the name of Christopher Gallery of Fine Gems.

According to Ken Thornberg, executive director of the BBB, "The company is sending out an invoice telling consumers they have a credit of $50 in the consumer's account and that if they send an additional $9, their account 'will be fully paid.' Twelve worthless gems are then to be mailed to the victim. As one can imagine, no one has ever heard of the firm and definitely does not have a credit with them."

The New York firm appears to be new and hopes to make a sizeable profit on each $9 remittance mailed to them. It is the most recent mail scam uncovered by the BBB.

Q: I have seen several advertisements offering sales catalogs for $10. They identify cars, vans, motorhomes, boats and other expensive items for sale from the U.S. Government. The ads claim that the items are seized by IRS, FBI and drug enforcement agencies and sold to the public for as low as $200. On the surface the ads sound like a good deal. But are their claims legitimate?

A: The $10 is for the "Government Surplus Directory" which is a 12-page booklet that states the types of products sold (jeeps, ships, and others) and indicates that the merchandise is sold through the General Services Administration (GSA) and the Department of Defense. "You may write to them [the GSA regional office] for an application to get your name on their mailing lists. After you are on their mailing lists they will inform you when property that you are interested in becomes available for sale."

The booklet also states that consumers can hear of other government surplus property through radio, TV announcements, announcements in trade journals, newspapers and notices placed in post offices.

The booklet also gives some information on acquiring government surplus through sealed bid, spot bids, public auctions, storage awards, and the like. This information comes from the Better Business Bureau of Chicago, Ill. Their files opened October, 1979.

One complaint alleging non-refund of merchandise was settled upon referral to the company.

It should be understood that Government Information Services is not associated with the United States government at the federal, state or local level.

Q: Recently I saw an ad in our local paper offering a weed trimmer for a pretty good sale price. When I went to the store and asked the clerk to show me the sale item he told me they were out of those and led me to a more expensive model. Isn't this "bait and switch"?

A: A "bait" offer is an alluring but insincere offer to sell a product or service which the advertiser does not intend to sell. Its purpose is to switch consumers from buying the advertised merchandise or service, in order to sell something else, usually at a higher price or on a basis more advantageous to the advertiser. The following is from our Code of Advertising and might help you recognize a bait and switch.

*A. No advertisement should be published unless it is a bona fide offer to sell the advertised merchandise or service.

*B. The advertising should not create a false impression about the product or service being offered in order to lay the foundation for a later "switch" to other, more expensive products or services, for product of a lesser quality at the same price.

*C. Subsequent full disclosure by the advertiser of all other facts about the advertised article does not preclude the existence of a bait scheme.

*D. An advertiser should not use permit the use of the following bait scheme practices: a) refusing to show or demonstrate the advertised merchandise or service; b) disparaging the advertised merchandise or service, its warranty, availability, services and parts, credit terms, etc.; c) selling the advertised merchandise or service as a reseller "unselling" the customer to make a switch to other merchandise or service; d) refusing to take orders for the advertised merchandise or service or to deliver it within a reasonable time; e) demonstrating or showing a defective sample of the advertised merchandise; or, f) having a sales compensation plan designed to penalize salespersons who sell the advertised merchandise or service.

*E. An advertiser should have on hand a sufficient quantity of advertised merchandise to meet reasonably anticipated demands, unless the advertisement discloses the number of items available. If items are available only at certain branches, their specific locations should be disclosed. The use of "rainchecks" is no justification for inadequate estimates of reasonably anticipated demand.

*F. Actual sales of the advertised merchandise or service may not preclude the existence of a bait scheme since this may be merely an attempt to create an aura of legitimacy. A key factor in determining the existence of "bait" is the number of times the merchandise or service was advertised compared to the number of actual sales of the merchandise or service. Irked Chavez drops speaking date

The Los Angeles Times
ANAHEIM, Calif. — Farm labor leader Cesar Chavez has canceled a speaking date at the League of United Latin American Citizens national convention here because of planned picketing by labor and several Latino groups angry that the league has accepted money from Adolph Coors Co. Chavez told organizers of the convention that he would not cross picket lines to address the convention Saturday. About 7,000 members are expected to attend the 56th annual league convention, which is scheduled to conclude today.

groups under which it will invest $350 million in the Latino community over the next five years. The investment is tied to the acquisition of Coors beer purchased by Latinos.

Coors has been boycotted by the AFL-CIO since 1977 because of alleged anti-union activities. Some Latino groups discontinued the boycott after the Coors agreement was announced.

The league was not among the Latino groups that signed the Coors agreement. Nativo Lopez, a league spokesman for several Orange County chapters, attacked it at that time as a "sham agreement."

On Wednesday, Manuel Marquez, convention chairman, said he is glad that the Coors company, which gave about $60,000 to help underwrite the convention, is among a list of 10 major contributors giving corporate gifts of $50,000 or more.

"This protest will hurt," he admitted. He added that the league did not want to block Coors' participation, however, because "that would have been discriminating, and that's against our stated goals. We opened the door to everybody. We can't just shut the door to Coors."

Donald Shook, Coors' spokesman in Denver, denied that Coors is using minority communities to help its public relations image.

Purchase of Foremost creates big dairy firm

The Los Angeles Times
LOS ANGELES — Knudsen Foods of Los Angeles Thursday completed its acquisition of Foremost Dairies for $50 million in cash and notes, creating one of the largest dairy companies in the West.

The merger more than doubles Knudsen's annual revenues, to $1.2 billion, and expands the growth-minded company into seven states, said Knudsen Co-chairman Dee R. Bangerter.

The merger also will result in the layoff of an estimated 400 of Foremost's 3,000 employees, and it enlarges the company's California operations from six to 10 plants. Knudsen is a wholly owned subsidiary of Anaheim, Calif.-based Winn Enterprises.

"We are well-positioned to expand our markets into states where neither Foremost nor Knudsen has any appreciable distribution at this time," Bangerter said. Foremost has plants and distribution centers in Texas, Arizona, Nevada, Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana and Hawaii.

Foremost, a 65-year-old, privately held San Francisco dairy, had annual sales of about $730 million in 1984. Knudsen's estimated revenues for fiscal 1985 are $545.2 million compared to $438.5 million for the year ended March 31, 1984, according to company spokesman Anthony Harris.

The company would not estimate 1985 earnings, but net income for 1984 was $1.3 million.

World tomato output drops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commercial output of tomatoes for processing in 11 of the leading countries is expected to drop 14 percent this year, according to a 4 million metric tons from 19.1 million tons in 1984, the Agriculture Department says.

Slightly larger 1985 crops are expected in Greece, Portugal, France and Turkey, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said Thursday. But smaller harvests are expected in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Italy, Spain and Taiwan. Production in Israel is expected to be unchanged from 1984.

The United States is the leading producer of processing tomatoes. But the contracted average for 1985 points to an output of about 6.4 million tons, down from 6.97 million tons last year. A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds.

People who make their living in the construction and sale of homes recognize the value of energy-saving Super Good Cents homes. When you get more comfort for lower energy costs, you've got a home that's a joy to live in—and easier to sell when you move.

Build-in economy A Super Good Cents Home is constructed with energy-saving features like double-pane windows and extra insulation in the walls, ceiling and floors. Taken together, these features can cut your heating costs by as much as two-thirds.

Super Good Cents works in any home. You can combine features to meet your needs. The size of your home doesn't matter. From a cozy vacation cottage to a rambling ranch, Super Good Cents keeps the fuel costs down while improving comfort.

How to tell if it's Super Good Cents Your utility representative inspects the home and verifies that it meets Super Good Cents standards. That lets you identify a Super Good Cents home in two ways. Outside, there's the Super Good Cents site sign. Inside, a certificate lists the home's Super Good Cents features and tells you the expected costs for heating.

It's up to you So if you are going to build or buy a new home, you might as well have the best. For more details, ask a Super Good Cents representative at your local electric utility.

U.S.-European dispute over farm policy heating up again

he's off for European visits

By DON KENDALL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The long-standing dispute between the European Community and the United States on farm policies has heated up recently.

And Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says there are skeletons in both closets.

As a result, the United States and the EC are picking themselves out of the lucrative international commodity market, Block said. Each is trying to take up the slack by subsidizing export.

"Both of us are using export subsidies," Block told reporters at the National Press Club. "They do that, and we do exactly the same thing. There isn't a nickel's worth of difference."

"They're priced out of the world market because their internal prices are too high, so they use subsidies to buy their market. Our internal prices are too high, so we're using subsidies to compete in the market," Block said.

He added: "We really ought to sit down and find a way to bring a halt to this whole thing."

The judge by Block coincided with a visit by Frans Andriessen, the EC's commissioner for agriculture and fisheries, who has been meeting with Block and other U.S. officials.

Block told reporters after another meeting with Andriessen that they had agreed "to intensify" bilateral efforts to work out some of the trade problems. Block plans a trip to Europe this week for meetings in West Germany and Austria.

"For years, Block and other U.S. officials have complained about the EC's practice of triggering more European farm production through artificially high price supports — and then subsidizing the surpluses through subsidized exports.

Recently, Block put into effect an export subsidy program using free surplus commodities as bonuses to help boost U.S. exports in selected markets. Algeria was singled out as the first target country, but so far it has not participated in the program.

Block said he could not predict when — or if — Algeria will avail itself of the U.S. export subsidy program.

"I'll guarantee this much," he said. "We'll do whatever it takes to other countries' best. Algeria, I think we'll know what's going to happen fairly soon."

Block said the tensions that have built up between the EC and the United States "have to be brought down by some agreement between the two of us." New multilateral talks such as the ones that led to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade were in the order, he said, but some kind of bilateral understanding is necessary in the interim.

Block said he has not proposed a formal new series of U.S.-EC meetings. "We haven't agreed to do that," he said. "I'm just saying that there's going to be more intensive contact than there has been the last year or so."

Looking at the U.S. problem, Block said he wants Congress to include in new farm legislation a provision for reduced crop price supports. The supports, which effectively set a floor price for the market, are too high and make U.S. commodities less competitive, he said.

"I, for the life of me, can't see how anyone can oppose being competitive," Block said. "If we aren't competitive, we're just going to shrink up."

Bare-neck chickens twin to beat heat

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — A "naked-necked chicken" that looks more like a vulture than a broiler may help a University of Georgia poultry geneticist develop a bird that can withstand summer heat waves.

"The naked-necks are not only missing the feathers on their neck, they also have 30 percent less feathers on the rest of their bodies," said Dr. Kenneth Washburn. "That allows them to handle the heat better."

That is of interest to the Georgia poultry industry, which lost 270,000 birds to a heat wave in the first week of June, according to the University of Georgia Cooperative Extension Service. The heat wave of 1980 cost the state more than 1 million birds, with losses of more than $10 million.

"Chickens do not have an evaporative cooling system," Washburn said recently. "Their feathers keep the heat in and they have to pant, lift their wings or rely on the natural convection of the skin to cool them off."

The naked-neck is a mutant variety that has been around for 50 years, said Washburn, who also is studying a totally naked chicken that tastes better than the naked-neck but looks even uglier and can't protect itself in the winter.

China to press exports

WASHINGTON (AP) — China continues to show signs of staying around for some time as a serious exporter of farm commodities, including some that compete with American farmers, according to an Agriculture Department trade report.

The latest indication was a brief item published by the department's Foreign Agricultural Service. It said China reportedly plans to build a new port for ocean vessels.

"It will have 100 berths, capable of handling 50 million tons of bulk and containerized cargo per year," the report said. "Plans are to have four berths, capable of handling over four million tons of cargo per year, operational by 1990."

The facility is planned for the port city of Dalian, one of 14 coastal cities in which China has offered special terms to lure foreign investment.
