Rupert woman faces murder try charge

RUPERT — A 44-year-old Rupert woman is in Minidoka County Jail charged with the attempted murder of her 70-year-old husband, Edgar Ellason.

Lucille Ellason was arraigned in magistrate court Monday before Judge Leroy Blacker on charges of assault with intent to commit murder. She requested the services of a public defender and is being held in lieu of $15,000 bond.

Hospital officials in Rupert say Ellason, who was listed in poor condition Monday, is "improving" today. He suffered gunshot wounds in the abdomen and was hospitalized about 2 p.m. Sunday.

Mutual need

CHICAGO (UPI) — Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., thinks the U.S. should tell the Arab oil producing nations they need us as much as we need them.

Percy said that because those nations are "profoundly concerned about the threat of international communism," they must rely on the U.S. for protection from those forces.

He said the Ford administration should try to concert the interests of the Western oil-dependent nations.

Senate panel OK's tape guard bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Government Operations Committee unanimously approved a bill today to prevent former President Richard M. Nixon from taking possession or destroying the Watergate tape recordings.

The bill would nullify an agreement reached between Nixon and the Ford administration at the same time that the former president was pardoned of all crimes he may have committed in office.

Israel still warplanes pound guerrillas

ISRAEL said its warplanes streaked into Lebanon today and attacked Arab guerrillas bases on the commemoration of the Jewish calendar's first anniversary of last year's Yom Kippur war.

The command said the planes struck at "terrorist objectives" in the area, a favored target of Israeli attacks. It said all planes returned safely to base.

Cuban ties

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr., R-Va., would like to see the United States lift restrictions on trade with Cuba — on two conditions.

Byrd said Monday those conditions are Cuban compensation to U.S. citizens for confiscated properties and allowing American reporters free access to the island. He said he doesn't think the Castro government is likely to be replaced soon, so little can be gained by a continuing boycott.

House OK's compromise defense bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — By a vote of 283 to 59, the House has approved a compromise $82.5 billion Defense appropriation measure. It was $4.4 billion less than the administration requested with major cuts coming in weapons procurement and research.

Before it was passed and sent to the Senate Monday, the bill was criticized because it allegedly included undisclosed funds for secret Central Intelligence Agency operations in other nations.

Ethiopian unions call general strike

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — Ethiopia's 100,000-member trade union confederation today called a general strike demanding the release of three labor leaders arrested on Monday.

The strike, set for Wednesday, set up a possible confrontation with the ruling military Provisional Council which has banned all strikes and other work stoppages since it de-throned Emperor Haile Selassie in a bloodless coup Sept. 12.

The Armed Forces Committee, which engineered the ouster, has come under increasing fire from students.

CSI enrollment holding steady

TWIN FALLS — Preliminary enrollment figures for the College of Southern Idaho indicate total vocational and academic enrollment is about the same as last year.

Dr. Donald Keith, registrar, said total full-time equivalents as of Sept. 16 are 1,160 academic and 421 vocational, for a total of 1,581. Last year's figures were 1,269 academic FTE and 352 vocational FTE for a total of 1,621.

Keith said figures were not entirely comparable because of a new way of counting FTEs.

Enrolled in academic programs are 1,517 students; 924 full-time and 593 part-time. And in vocational programs 662 students, 376 full-time and 286 part-time.

A total of 314 students are enrolled in continuing education programs.

Hearing proceeds

HOLDING financial statement, Nelson Rockefeller appears before Senate Rules Committee Monday on first day of confirmation hearings on his nomination as vice president of the United States. (UPI)

Rocky says accepting pardon guilt admission

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice Presidential nominee Nelson A. Rockefeller said today that former President Richard M. Nixon's acceptance of a pardon from President Ford was "an admission of guilt" in the Watergate scandal.

Rockefeller was asked during the second day of his confirmation hearings before the Senate Rules Committee whether Nixon "should be held accountable" for any unlawful acts he may have committed in the Watergate cover-up scandal.

"The President accepted the pardon which in my opinion was tantamount to an admission of guilt," the former New York governor said.

Chairman Howard Cannon, D-Nev., asked Rockefeller if he thought "people should be held accountable for their unlawful acts," making it clear he was referring to the former president.

"I think we should separate president from the president. No one wanted to see the president put in jail," Rockefeller replied.

"The pardon by the President I thought showed compassion...and in the long run would help to heal the wounds of the country," Rockefeller said.

Rockefeller, under sharp questioning by Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., earlier said his financial interests in big business might influence his actions as vice president, but only if he abused the power of office. He said his 35-year record showed that he had never abused the power of public office.

Rockefeller, whose holdings include stock in some oil firms, also told Byrd he did not believe that a number of big oil companies "convinced" last year's shortage. But he said they should be taxed now for their excess profits if they do not put the money into production of new supplies.

"Will you really be able to separate the interests of big business from the national interests?" Byrd asked.

"Yes sir," Rockefeller replied.

"Well, can't you at least agree that tremendous 'colossal' influence is there from your family's wealth?" Byrd continued.

"We can agree if you add one word, senator, 'potential' — 'potential' influence," Rockefeller said, adding that it would be an abuse of power and a violation of the law.

Byrd said he disagreed with Rockefeller's statement Monday that his family's economic power was a myth.

"You may view it as a myth, but I don't view it as a myth, nor do I view it as an evil," Byrd said. "Even if your family holdings are only 2 or 3 per cent in any one company, when holdings are spread across so many companies it cannot help (but) influence the economy of the country."

Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott meanwhile criticized his colleagues for focusing too much on Rockefeller's wealth.

"There seems to be obsession with how much money he has — with money and power," Scott said. "He has a great deal of competence, what does money have to do with it?"

"The nominee is clean and there's no scandal."

He also chided the House for deciding not to act on the Rockefeller nomination until after the November election. "They're trying to keep Rockefeller off the stump," he said.

Responding to Byrd on the subject of oil firms, Rockefeller said the nation would have been faced with "total disaster" had a dozen major oil companies producing around the world.

Body tentatively identified

TWIN FALLS — Sheriff Paul Corder said today he believes a body found below Shoshone Falls Sunday is that of Charles Gilbert Jr., about 26, formerly of Fort Collins, Colo.

He said efforts to identify the man have run into a number of blind alleys, including a report that a Charles Gilbert Jr. is alive and well in Illinois. Corder said he has made calls throughout the country to attempt to locate persons. Gilbert was reportedly associated with while in Twin Falls for the Evict Kneel canyon jump.

(Related story, p. 15)

He said he talked to a man in Breckenridge, Colo., Tuesday who said the description fits closely that of Gilbert, including a cast on his right arm and an unusual ring the man was wearing.

Officers said apparently Gilbert jumped from the falls sometime Friday before the Kneel jump on Sept. 8 and was probably killed when he hit the water. He said the body is badly decomposed and it may be necessary to bury the victim here if the family is not located within a day or two.

Corder said he is working through the University of Colorado and a former landlord in an effort to establish the whereabouts of Gilbert's parents and to obtain positive identification.

George raps political 'vendetta'

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News writer

WASHINGTON — Republican congressional candidate George Hansen apparently has had $132,000 in unreported campaign funds in six different banks, according to Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio and chairman of the House Administration Committee.

Hansen denied the charge this morning, calling it a political "vendetta" by Hays.

Under federal law candidates not reporting campaign funds face up to $1,000 fine and a year in prison.

Citing several "apparent violations" of federal election law, the House Administration Committee turned over its investigation of Hansen's campaign to the US attorney general for possible prosecution in August.

Monday, seven Democrats and six Republicans attending a closed session of the committee unanimously urged the attorney general to take immediate action on the charges against Hansen. Rep. Orval Hansen, R-Idaho, abstained from voting on the issue.

"It's better to try to clear this up now than to let it ride," Hays said. If Hansen is elected, Hays said, the case could "drag" for months, "while the House Administration Committee and the Congress consider challenges to the election."

Meanwhile, Idaho's second district would stay unrepresented, as happened when the Congress considered the seating of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D-Hartem, he added.

In addition to receiving corporate checks, Hays said that Hansen apparently had kept about $132,000 in unreported campaign funds in six different banks.

He said Hansen had earlier refused a public hearing on the charges. Also, Hays said Hansen had asked to meet with him personally to discuss the charges. Hays said he agreed to such a meeting, but that Hansen did not show up.

He said the attorney general has several courses of possible action including "an injunction to have this bank account business stopped," making Hansen report the apparently unreported $132,000 in campaign contributions, or "he could proceed with a criminal case."

Arabs angered by Ford speech

By United Press International

The Arab press reacted angrily today to attacks on Arab oil price policies by President Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, and Arab League sources in Cairo called the statements "a serious move reflecting American intentions toward the Arab region."

One Beirut newspaper said the statements were "tantamount to a declaration of war." The Iraqi News Agency, in a dispatch from Cairo, quoted members of the 18-nation Arab group as saying:

"President Ford's statements represent a serious move reflecting American intentions toward the Arab region. Arab use of their oil, and always has been, a natural right which they can use to serve their own interests and causes. Nobody can influence them as far as this right is concerned."

The sources said Arab foreign ministers presently in New York to attend the U.N. General Assembly session would meet Wednesday to study the Ford and Kissinger statements.

Ford and Kissinger, in speeches Monday in Detroit and New York, said the continued high oil prices risked a world depression and the breakdown of world order and safety that could lead to war.

In Vienna, Abdurrahman Khene, secretary general of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, scoffed at Ford's threats and said, "We are the last people to blame for what is happening in the world."

The group's 12 member nations, which produce 85 per cent of world petroleum exports, increased the price of crude oil 400 per cent the past year and voted for another 3.5 per cent increase to $9.74 a barrel next month.

Some Arab newspapers representing factions generally hostile to American policy in the Middle East gave extreme interpretations to the American warnings.

"America warns the Arabs, threatens nuclear war over petroleum," the pro-Syrian newspaper

Al Sharq said in a headline. The pro-Baghdad newspaper Beirut said: "Ford threatens to seize Arab oil by force of arms."

Columnist Abu Jundeh of the Beirut newspaper An Nahar, regarded as a political moderate, said America appeared to be trying to pose as a maverick hero defending the world against the "Arab villains."

The (American) campaign has become tantamount to a declaration of war," he said. "The entire war appears to be aimed at suppressing the Palestine cause which the United Nations, where the U.S. is in a very difficult position."

The columnist said the Arabs appeared to have no alternative but to resort to a hostile attitude toward the United States, but said this was not practical because the Saudi Arabian and Egyptian governments would not go along with it.

"The American threat to stop food supplies prompts most Arab capitals to think 10 times before starting a confrontation with the United States," he said. "The only hope for the Arabs is that their policy of cooperation with the United States will lead to a solution of the Middle East crisis."

On the official level, Arab officials remained reticent and appeared to be waiting to see what might develop from the American statements.

Abdul Rahman Saleh Aliqi, Finance and Oil Minister of Kuwait, which strongly opposes any reduction in oil prices, said if Ford's statements were aimed at reducing energy consumption: "we are all for it. But if his words mean cuts in oil imports, this will result in harmful consequences for production and contraction of the oil industry."

"In Cairo, Selim Rizkallah, Egyptian Oil Ministry undersecretary, said the statements of Ford and Kissinger "will remain under study for the time being."

"The study will have to be held jointly with the other Arab countries," Rizkallah said. "We will consider no official opinion right now."

Buhl sets bond total

By LORAYNE G. SMITH
Times-News writer

BUIL — Buhl school trustees Monday night set the amount of the Oct. 29 bond vote at $1,725 million.

Tentative date for the bond issue was announced earlier but the board had been unable to determine the amount pending further conferences with the architect, Ed Peterson, of GTA Architectural firm, Twin Falls.

Peterson told trustees Monday night he had done some preliminary study of the old F. H. Buhl school, currently used as the junior high school, and feels the wings on each side of the original 1906 structure can be retained, with some remodeling.

He suggested using this space for vocational education, including industrial arts and vocational agriculture shops and additional classrooms.

The major portion of the bond issue, if approved by voters, will be used to construct a new junior high school, with some remodeling planned for the present high school building.

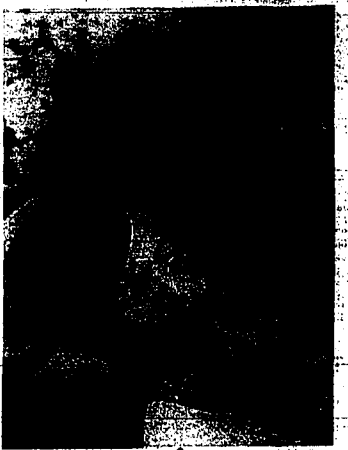

Peterson said there will be considerable savings by keeping the wings of the old junior high building and it will give twice the square footage for vocational education as called for in the original plans when the vocational area was to be included in the new building.

He estimates it will cost about $193,000 to remodel the wings of the F. H. Buhl School. Peterson said details of the remodeling are being worked out by the architectural firm.

Ford sets crime drive

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford said today that as part of an intensified fight against rising violent crimes and the habitual criminal he was establishing a program to work with states to keep track of professional criminals.

"There is far too much of it. It can no longer be ignored. It can no longer be rationalized away."

Honduras begs US for more aid in Fifi's wake

SAN PEDRO SULA, Honduras (UPI) — Honduras begged the United States today for flamethrowers to cremate the mangled bodies of Hurricane Fifi victims and massive aid to save the lives of hundreds of thousands of refugees.

Starving dogs for at the mangled bodies of victims and vultures clawed at the carrion flesh. Gangs of looters and swarms of snakes preyed on hapless survivors.

Rescue workers kept on recovering bodies buried in mud and debris five days after Fifi howled through the 90-mile-long, 45-mile-wide Sula Valley in northern Honduras.

At hard-hit Choloma, 12 miles from San Pedro Sula, rescuers used gas masks to guard against stench and disease while digging corpses out of the mud.

"I've received requests from the government for flame throwers to cremate the bodies found out in the open," U.S. Ambassador Phillip Sanchez said.

He said American helicopters are plucking survivors from rooftops and taking them to higher ground. "Now we're going to help distribute food and water, medicine and clothing," he said.

The government put the death toll at between 7,000 and 8,000, but the Honduran ambassador in Mexico City said, "Ten thousand deaths would be a conservative estimate."

Girl sits in wrecked home

"Without food or water, isolated by floodwaters and still awaiting rescue."

In the capital of Tegucigalpa, Deputy Health Minister Rigoberto Alvarado said the government has ordered all bodies burned.

Troops were told to "kill all animals eating flesh, including domestic animals, mostly dogs."

"We are sure we're going to have problems with poisonous snakes as well," Alvarado said.

"We are waiting for them."

Looting was reported in several communities. San Pedro Sula Mayor Henry Holst said, "The soldiers are spreading this and we are trying to organize a civilian guard."

Treasury Secretary Manuel Acosta Badilla estimated the storm caused $1.8 billion in damages. Floods destroyed banana, sugar, rice and corn crops.

In Tegucigalpa, Jacobo Caladain, Honduras press coordinator, said he was "shocked" and flood refugees "worried sick" by the lack of aid reaching the disaster area.

"This country is morally bankrupt," he said.

A U.S. spokesman in Tegucigalpa said America is sending a new helicopter to aid four already conducting rescue operations and an extra cargo plane to help four American transports flying in supplies and taking out refugees.

Ten planes from the San Pedro Sula Airport, coordination center for the relief operation, families could be seen sitting on rooftops and waiting for planes for food to be helicopters flying overhead.

One relief worker said at least 14 cases of snake bite have been reported. Alvarado said poisonous snakes have caused "a number of deaths."

Maj. Martin Ballin of San Bernardino, Calif., a member of the U.S. military group in Honduras, said American choppers have rescued 493 persons from roofs and dropped 42,275 pounds of food to survivors refusing evacuation.

"A lot of these people will wait on their roofs until the water goes down," Ballin said.

"This is their homeland. They don't leave because of fear of not finding their way back or because they think someone might mess around with their possessions."

In one incident, a group of hungry refugees attacked a United Brands Co. helicopter distributing food Monday. The pilot had to fire his gun into the air to make the mob back off.

Students battle in Boston school

BOSTON (UPI) — Several fights between black and white students were reported in racially troubled Hyde Park High School today as violence marred the ninth day of a court ordered plan to integrate Boston's public schools.

Uniformed police were called into the school, which reopened Monday after being closed for one day last week because of violent clashes.

At least 50 arrests were reported, one involving a youth with a knife.

Robert Flannery, a 16-year-old student at Hyde Park, was injured in a fight with two black students, according to the City Hall Information Center.

Several hundred whites boycotted classes and joined parents in an anti-busing demonstration—on historic Bunker Hill in the Charlestown section.

One policeman, William Lynch, was bitten by a youthful demonstrator in Charlestown. He was treated at City Hospital.

At least six persons were arrested in Charlestown, according to Deputy Police Supt. Joseph Jordan.

Police Commissioner Robert McGowan also was on hand in Charlestown as police were determined not to permit the demonstration to spill over into other parts of the city. Police repeatedly dispersed small raving gangs.

The demonstration in Charlestown was peaceful. Some youths threw firecrackers in an attempt to start a riot.

Some white parents in the Charlestown and West Roxbury sections sent their children to church instead of school for protest of the "mourning" to reject the court-ordered busing.

Magruder's duty to lie

NEW YORK (UPI) — In an unrelaxed White House tape, former President Richard M. Nixon says "Job" Stuart Magruder was "supposed to lie like hell" to a Watergate grand jury. CBS News reported Monday.

According to CBS correspondent Fred Graham, in taped conversations between Nixon and former White House aide, former President Richard M. Nixon says "Job" Stuart Magruder was "supposed to lie like hell" to a Watergate grand jury. CBS News reported Monday.

When Nixon suggested it would be "Dean's word against the President's," Haldeman, according to Graham, told Nixon that Dean may have made notes or even taped the conversation himself, and suggested that Nixon say he was seeking information.

Haldeman then mentioned Magruder, deputy head of the Committee for the Re-election of the President, who was testifying before the Watergate grand jury.

"Magruder is supposed to lie like hell," Graham said Nixon said on the tape.

"Yeah, but I'm not sure he is now," Haldeman was quoted as replying.

CLIFF ARQUETTE ... seizure fatal

Arquette, hick sage, dies at 68

BURBANK, Calif. (UPI) — Cliff Arquette, who played television's Charley Weaver, the lanky pants sage of "Mt. Ida," died of a heart attack Monday at age 68.

Arquette had been admitted to St. Joseph's Hospital, Saturday night, complaining of chest pains, suffered an almost fatal heart attack on April 24, 1972. He recovered well enough to return to "The Hollywood Squares" game show, where he was a regular, although he was partially paralyzed on his left side.

Arquette came from a vaudeville family, and early in his career, while still a relatively young man, made a reputation for playing pillboxed old men.

For the last 20 years of his life he was identified with Charley Weaver, a character he originated for a local Los Angeles television show, "Dave and Charley," and made into a national television sensation.

Charley was a familiar figure to millions, in his battered, too-small hat perched precariously on his head, his suspenders holding up baggy trousers and his eyes twinkling mischievously behind wire-rimmed spectacles.

His specialty was recounting tales of "Mt. Ida," the Ohio hamlet he invented, along with a cast of townfolk. The town served as a backdrop for his homespun philosophy and humor, especially when he would read a letter "I got today from Momma."

Thefts told

Question...

Is there any difference between a Memorial Service and a Funeral Service?

Answer...

Not too long ago the terms were interchangeable.

With the advent of Memorial Societies the term "Memorial Service" has come to have a different meaning.

A funeral service is still a religious ceremony in a church or mortuary with the body present and followed subsequently by burial or cremation.

A memorial service is defined by the Association of Memorial Societies as the occasion for a religious observance or philosophical meditation. This service is held after the body has been cremated and is usually held some place other than the church or mortuary.

JAN VANLEEUVEN potter

Holland potter sets TF lecture

TWIN FALLS — One of Holland's foremost young potters, Jan VanLeeuwen, is working at the College of Southern Idaho until Thursday.

VanLeeuwen, currently the resident potter at the Royal Blue Ceramics Factory in Holland, is visiting the United States until the middle of November.

He will be working at the ceramics lab in CSI's art collage daily. The public is invited to visit the lab to ask questions and watch VanLeeuwen work.

Thursday at 8 p.m., he will present a public lecture in room 115 of the Shields Academic Building. There is no charge.

The Boise Art Gallery will have an exhibit of VanLeeuwen's latest work on display in October.

He recently spent five weeks in Poland at a national symposium on ceramics with 30 other potters from all over the world. They discussed ceramics as it related to architectural forms such as playgrounds, fountains and walls.

Kidnaper demands only $2,000

CINCINNATI (UPI) — A kidnaper abducted blonde, blue-eyed Allison Mechem, 4, daughter of the chairman of the board of Tait Broadcasting Inc. Monday and then demanded only $2,000 ransom.

The low amount of the ransom demand worried police about the mental condition of the kidnaper.

Allison, the daughter of Tait Broadcasting Inc. Board Chairman Charles S. Mechem Jr., was abducted from the front yard of her suburban N.Y. Lookout home late Monday afternoon while riding a tricycle.

A few hours later the $2,000 ransom was demanded of Mechem from an anonymous telephone caller.

Police imposed a news blackout on the case. But an executive of the local Tait television station said police told him that "only $2,000 had been demanded for the safe return" of the girl.

"I know that seems low and there is some concern over its being such a small amount," said Bob Gilmartin, news director of WKRC-TV.

Gilmartin said police apparently were concerned about the "potential mental instability" of a kidnapper asking only $2,000.

There were several unusual actions near the Mechem house late Monday night, and although police declined to explain them, they apparently were part of a ransom payment plan.

A plainclothes policeman broke a tail light on a car — apparently as the sign of a "drop off" vehicle — and a suitcase and a bulky blanket were placed in the car.

The car was driven away and was later returned. Also during the evening, Mechem was seen several blocks from his house at a telephone booth.

Although she has fished for some time this is the first fish Kim ever has caught by herself.

A cousin helped her by setting it when it got near the boat.

Explaining her technique, Kim said, "You put it in the water, push the button, then a fish grabs your line and you roll it in."

Gem unit issues 'teachers alert'

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Education Association issued a "teacher alert" Monday because of what the association considers the poor economic outlook for the coming year.

The association said inflation and unemployment were being the association issuing the alert to its 7,250 members.

Wayne York, IEA executive secretary, said because of inflation and the shrinking pupil enrollments, Idaho teachers were urged to "stay put — not taking another job or leaving the state until a new contract is signed, sealed and delivered."

"Then IEA members were cautioned to go all out in the New Sections to send friends of education to the legislature and to gear up for hard-core negotiations for the 1975-76 school year," York said.

He pointed out that government economists last spring still hoped that the economy would improve during the second half of this year but over the summer this prediction did not materialize.

York said the 1975 outlook is "treacherous" and predicted it will take a minimum of two years to unwind the problems of inflation from the economy.

Fishing technique

BOISE (UPI) — A four-year-old Boise girl has caught a four-pound rainbow trout by herself.

Little Kim Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Miller, was fishing from her grandfather's boat over the weekend at Magic Reservoir near Fairfield when she caught the large fish.

Cleanup nets $382 for 'Y'

TWIN FALLS — YMCA volunteers collected 2,550 pounds of aluminum beverage cans from Evel Knudsen's canyon jump site.

That's a lot of cans: 12,750 in fact.

With the $382 profits turned by selling the cans to the Reynolds Aluminum recycling plant, the YMCA paid for new exercise and tumbling mats. About $150 remaining when the mats were paid off went to the swimming pool fund.

YMCA director Charles Upton combed the jump site grounds with volunteers for several days before the jump and for clean-up crew.

"We could easily have gotten 1,000 pounds more if we had had more manpower," Upton said. But he added he was well satisfied with the results.

YMCA volunteers will be out collecting aluminum again on Johnny Horizon Day, early in May, to raise more money for Y activities.

Karate trophy winners listed

JEROME — The First Idaho Kokondo Invitational Karate Tournament, sponsored by the Jerome County Karate Club, was held Saturday at the Jerome High School gym.

The rules for scoring the tournament matches were that the contestants fought a one minute round. The contestant who scored the highest number of points, clear hits, in the round was the winner.

If no points were scored in the round the judges voted to determine a winner. If a vote couldn't determine a winner an extra 10 to 30-second round was called at the head judges' discretion.

The first point scored in this extra round determined the winner. There was no or very light body contact. Any physical injury automatically disqualified the contestant who inflicted the injury.

Trophy winners in the men's black-belt division were grand champion, John Kennedy age 21, 5 ft. 4 in., 120 lbs., of the Tae Kwon Do school from the Mountain Home Air Force Base.

Second place winner was Del Low, 21, 6 ft. 1 in., 185 lbs., from Shoshone of the Tae Kwon Do school.

Third place went to Gregory Knapp, 23, 5 ft. 8 1/2 in., 145 lbs., of the Go Ju Kai school of Retchum.

In the men's brown belt division, first place went to Don Taylor, 21, 5 ft. 8 in., 165 lbs., of the Tae Kwon Do school from Pocatello. In the junior yellow belt division first place went to Hart Coy, 15, 5 ft., 2 in., 105 lbs., Shotokan school from the Mountain Home Air Force Base.

Third place went to George Collier, 16, 5 ft. 7 in., 117 lbs., Tai Chi school from Hansen.

In the ladies division Julie Montgomery, 17, 5 ft. 4 in., 130 lbs., of the Kel Shin Kan school from Ontario, Ore., won the first place in green belt by forfeiture because no one else of her rank entered.

In the ladies yellow belt division first place went to Linda Hahn, 22, 5 ft. 2 in., 105 lbs., Go Ju Kai school from Sun Valley. Second place went to Claudia Graham, 14, 5 ft. 6 in., 145 lbs., Go Ju Kai school from Sun Valley. Third place went to Barbara Howell, 22, 5 ft. 3 in., 155 lbs., Tae Kwon Do school from Pocatello.

The pee wee brown belt first place winner was Eric Lewis, 12, 5 ft. 4 in., 110 lbs., Kokondo school from Jerome. He won the trophy by forfeiture since no other pee wee brown belts entered the tournament.

Oil, scorpions and camels

There is a story told about the Middle East. A scorpion hitches a ride across the Nile on a camel's back. Half way across the camel is pleased to note that he is safe from the scorpion's sting. The scorpion's poison, he says, would cause both camel and rider to sink into the water.

A short distance later the scorpion stings the camel. "Why?" asks the dying camel. The crowning scorpion answers, "This is the Middle East."

There is something of the camel and the scorpion in the latest exchanges between the United States and the oil-rich Arab countries.

On Monday President Ford, in a remarkably strong speech, told an international energy conference that excessively high oil prices could distort the world economic structure, and hinted that the situation could lead to war. Throughout history, nations have gone to war over natural advantages such as water or food. Nations, he said, are "forced to choose between conflict and cooperation."

That speech was timed to coincide with one delivered to the United Nations General Assembly the same day by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. Kissinger warned that international economic collapse is nearing. Kissinger tried to broaden the U.S. support for an appeal to the Arabs to roll back oil prices by noting that the economic crisis will cause most suffering among the poorer nations.

The two U.S. policy statements, taken together, are forceful. A president suggests war may be required, and a secretary of state seeks allies and support for the U.S. position.

The import was not lost on the Arabs. Today's Arab newspapers were filled with denunciations of the U.S. "threats." One publication declared the U.S. already had "declared war." Stubborn Arab leaders said they would not be swayed by U.S. threats, and insisted on further oil price increases after the first of the year.

This may be one of the most perilous moments in the world's history. The major industrialized nations — those which also have the world's military might — are delivering a message to the Arabs. The message is that the Arab states can not be permitted to send the world economy into a tailspin. That would be suicidal for the oil-using as well as the oil-producing nations.

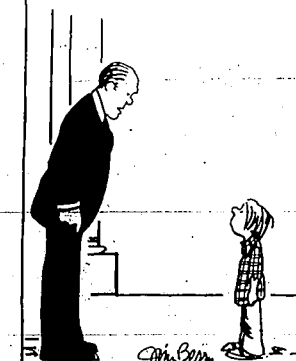

The Arab reply, like the scorpion's, can not be assumed to be in the Arabs' best interests.

Ford spokesmen

Christian Science Monitor
In view of the protest resignation by the highly regarded J.F. Ford as presidential press secretary, Mr. Ford does not have an easy task in recruiting a replacement to help restore his administration's initially high credibility. But it would be better to make a full effort at it than to rush to fill the position with a Nixon holdover such as Jerry Freidheim, who has been prominently mentioned as under consideration for the job.

Without reference to Mr. Freidheim as an individual — whom many reporters have found personally congenial — he became a symbol of the previous administration's lack of candor when serving as Pentagon spokesman on such topics as American bombing of the Bach Mai hospital in Hanoi. Mr. Ford needs a spokesman who can start with a clean slate.

Berry's World

"I'm afraid someone else will have to grant you a pardon for playing hooky from school and ripping your shirt!"

HOT SPRINGS, Va. — Eighty top executives of North American steel companies met here last week to talk about Rhodestian chrome. The steel men see the issue in wholly practical terms. Chrome is an indispensable element in making stainless steel. So long as Rhodestian chrome remains available, meeting domestic needs can be met. Without the Rhodestian chrome, the supply of stainless steel will move swiftly from critical to desperate.

By way of background: In 1966, the United States undertook to impose economic sanctions on Rhodestia. The idea was to bring the breakaway government in Salisbury to its knees. The United States honored the sanctions. No other important nation did. In 1971, Virginia's Sen. Harry F. Byrd took the lead in restoring some sanity to a frantic condition. Congress approved the "Byrd Amendment," which had the effect of permitting the renewed importation of Rhodestian chrome. Meanwhile, the price of chrome ore from the Soviet Union had been soaring. The Japanese were profiting from the export of stainless steel sheet made from Rhodestian ferrochrome imported in covert defiance of the sanctions. The American ferrochrome industry was languishing.

Early 1972, when the Byrd Amendment opened the closed doors, several things had happened. With Japanese engineering and Italian equipment, the Rhodestians had built the finest ferrochrome processing plant in the world, nearly atop the conventional lines of chrome ore. They were shipping ferrochrome throughout the world.

The United States swiftly became a customer. In 1972, the U.S. imported 153,000 tons of ferrochrome; at least 105,000 tons came from Rhodestia.

Where are we now? The Senate, incomprehensibly, voted last December to repeal the Byrd Amendment. In July, the House Foreign Affairs Committee voted 25-9 to approve the repealer. House sponsors admit they do not now have the votes in sight to win passage on the floor. Without some vigorous arm-twisting from President Ford, they cannot get the votes. Temporarily, the bill languishes. Ford, who voted in favor of the Byrd Amendment when he was a Michigan congressman three years ago, has given lip service, but no more, to the repeal measure. That's the matter stands.

What does all this mean to consumers? The new catalytic converters to control automobile emissions demand stainless steel. Once these converters become standard equipment, domestic requirements for ferrochrome will increase from 470,000 to 525,000 tons annually. If the Byrd Amendment is repealed, our domestic production capacity will drop from 240,000 to 200,000 tons. Somehow, at exorbitant price, 25,000 tons of ferrochrome or its sheet equivalent will have to be imported. And this is the irony: It will be Rhodestian chrome. American consumers will pay an extra $40 million a year, and the Soviets and the Japanese will laugh all the way to the bank.

There are other ironies, of course. Repeal of the Byrd Amendment would make the anti-Communist United States more dependent for a strategic material upon Communist Russia. It would place the United States, which cried out in principle against an Arab embargo on oil, in favor of a U.S. embargo on Rhodestian chrome.

By killing the Senate bill, the House could strike a blow for chrome, consumers and common sense. It's a blow worth striking.

Telling truth before Congressmen hazardous

WASHINGTON — There is some question as to whether State Department and CIA officials told the truth when they testified in front of congressional committees concerning U.S. involvement in the overthrow of the Allende regime in Chile.

There is even some talk of perjury charges being brought against high U.S. government officials.

This could play havoc with congressional hearings, particularly where our foreign policy is concerned. If they can't lie, many State Department and CIA types say they may refuse to appear on Capitol Hill.

This is what could happen. "Secretary Sangfried, do you swear to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth so help you God?"

"I didn't understand the question."
"We are going to ask certain questions regarding our foreign policy and we want to know if you intend to respond with honest answers."

"Himmm, can I consult with counsel?"
"Yes, you can."
"What was the question again, senator?"
"Do you swear to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth so help you God?"
"Is that a multiple-choice question?"

Five minutes later.
"All right, Secretary Sangfried, I will pose the question again. Do you swear to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth so help you God?"

"Dr. Kissinger says I can't swear to that unless you go into executive session."
"We are in executive session, Mr. Secretary."
"Then could you clarify something for me? If you ask me a question, do you expect me to give a truthful answer to it, even if it compromises the administration and the State Department and the CIA and gets somebody into trouble for making a stupid mistake?"
"That is correct."
"Dr. Kissinger was afraid of that. I'll have to consult with him again."

"Mr. Secretary, we really do have to get on with these hearings, and in order to do so we have to swear you in as a witness under oath."
"Why can't I lie?"
"Because it is essential that Congress be kept informed as to what this country is doing abroad."

"In Russia I could lie."
"We're not in Russia, Mr. Secretary. The Constitution specifically gives the Senate the right to advise and consent on foreign policy."
"In order to do that we must have information from your department. You can see that, can't you?"

"But if you know what we're doing and you don't agree with it, you'll have to do something about it. How can we have a strong foreign policy if you keep asking the State Department to tell you the truth?"

"Mr. Secretary, I must warn you that if you refuse to tell us the truth we shall have to hold you in contempt of Congress."
"But I took the oath seriously. Dr. Kissinger could get angry with me. The way I see it, if I'm convicted for lying, I can always get a pardon from the President. But who would give a pardon to anyone who told the truth to Congress?"

"Because it is essential that Congress be kept

San Clemente influence

WASHINGTON — Several days before President Ford granted Richard Nixon a full pardon, Nixon told Gen. Alexander M. Haig, White House chief of staff, by telephone that the country would be "better off if something happened to me — that would end all the controversy," according to a Nixon trend and former aide.

As a result, this source said, General Haig informed President Ford that an immediate pardon was necessary "to avoid a national tragedy." If Ford waited for Nixon to submit to due process, Haig said, "it might be too late to save" the former President.

Asked if Haig's interpretation of Nixon's remark was that Nixon was contemplating suicide, another former White House staff member said crisply: "Of course. What else?" He added, "but that's not the kind of thing that General Ford could ever discuss publicly."

At his press conference a few days ago, Ford told reporters that state of Nixon's health had not been a central consideration in his decision to grant a pardon, and added, "I couldn't be oblivious, however, to news accounts that I had concerning the President's health." Later in the conference, Ford said a staff member had reported to him on how Nixon looked, "and he reported to me his observation." However, the President did not reveal what the aide had said.

At any rate, Ford obviously was convinced of the need for speedy action, despite the fact Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski had not even asked a grand jury to indict the former President. A politically prudent man who was always a club regular as a member of the House, Ford acted not out of character in failing to consult with Congressional leaders in advance of granting the pardon.

The reason for the decision to forego this common courtesy, of course, had to be that Ford felt he could not risk any delay. The President knows Congress as he knows the back of his hand, and he must have been convinced that the situation was so serious he could not invite complications.

Had he consulted with Congressional leaders, there might have been a leak to the media. A controversy might have developed, with demands from Capitol Hill that Ford hold the pardon until he had explained to the public all his reasons for granting it. Ford read the Congressional mood right, as the torrent of criticism from the Hill has shown.

Haig and other aides apparently pressed Ford hard on the possibility that Nixon might take his own life if not granted an immediate pardon. Haig in particular took a gloomy view of Nixon's mental health, which reportedly was marked by periods of deep depression and occasions when Nixon was unable to keep track of a conversation. In effect, Haig told Ford that since the President would pardon Nixon eventually, the action should be taken promptly lest Nixon do himself physical harm.

So Ford's decision, while finally his and his alone, indisputably was enormously influenced by the situation at San Clemente.

"WHAT IF WE GAVE AN AMNESTY AND NOBODY CARE?"

Pros, cons on civilian rural area doctor draft

By Congressional Quarterly
WASHINGTON — A Senate committee has proposed what critics call a civilian doctor draft as the solution to physician shortages in rural and inner-city areas.

The controversial proposal would require all medical students who do not receive federal scholarships or loans — to sign agreements promising to practice in these medically underserved areas for at least two years after graduation.

The legislation, approved Sept. 4 by the Labor and Public Welfare Committee, would compose the service requirement indirectly by cutting off basic federal aid to medical schools whose students did not agree to serve if called. Students who reneged on the agreement could not hold a license to practice medicine.

Disenting committee members hope to modify the bill, which is opposed by key medical groups, on the Senate floor. The House version of related legislation is not expected to include the service requirements.

Should medical school graduates be required to practice in areas with doctor shortages?

Although he admits the bill is controversial, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., one of its sponsors, argues that the federal government must force action because medical schools and the medical profession have failed to correct geographical maldistribution of doctors on their own.

"All too often they have conveniently shirked their responsibility to deal with these problems by suggesting it was someone else's job," Kennedy says. "And now it has become someone else's job."

Documenting the problem the committee majority pointed to statistics showing that doctors are heavily concentrated in the northeastern and western states, in urban areas and, within urban areas, in the suburbs. Fewer physicians are available in the north central and southern states, in rural areas and in inner cities.

Private efforts will not end this maldistribution, the committee argued, because the problem is "rapidly getting worse," not better. "With the pressure and incentives from the public sector," it concluded, "history teaches us that it is reasonable to expect that the private sector will continue to place its interests first."

The committee denied that the proposal was a compulsory doctor draft because medical schools would be free to forego federal aid and accept students who did not wish to serve. At the same time, the committee insisted it was perfectly legal to condition hefty federal support for medical schools on requirements that they solve problems which limit access to doctors for many American taxpayers.

The federal government could require the same service from all students, the committee added, because they all benefited from the federal aid needed to keep medical schools alive. Compelling service only from students who needed federal loans or scholarships would amount to "volunteerism for the wealthy and disguised compulsion for everyone else," the committee concluded.

Con: Unnecessary Compulsion
"We cannot believe that a Congress which has helped end the military draft... will support a civilian draft for the health professions," wrote three Republican senators — J. Glenn Beall Jr. (Md.), Peter H. Dominick (Colo.), and Robert T. Stafford (Ohio) — in dissenting from the committee proposal.

"This radical approach should be taken, if at all," they contended, "only if it can be demonstrated that the geographical maldistribution problem is susceptible to no other solution and the resort to compulsion is the only alternative."

And for now, they insisted, reliance on students volunteering to practice in shortage areas in exchange for scholarships was a workable alternative. The Republicans pointed out that two students applied for every one of these scholarships now available.

The 30,000 Americans who could not get into medical school this fall and the 3,000 who left the United States to study in foreign medical schools were another untapped resource, they added.

Standby power sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Ford administration will ask Congress for new standby authority to require Americans to cut down on use of energy, a senior State Department official says.

Thomas O. Enders, assistant secretary of state for economic affairs, said the request would include standby powers to allocate oil supplies, further control speed limits, regulate settings of furnace thermostats, impose emergency taxation to reduce energy demand and, if necessary, to ration gasoline at the pump.

He told reporters Monday the request for "a broad set of standby authority" would be made to Congress late this year or early next.

Enders was the senior U.S. official at a meeting in Brussels last week in which 12 major energy-consuming countries tentatively agreed to cooperate in the event of a new energy crisis. He said the legislative proposals will follow up that agreement.

Should an energy crisis occur, he said, the agreement, known as the International Energy Program, would call for the 12 countries to strictly control their oil consumption by taxation, rationing or any other necessary measures and to share their oil reserves and production.

In event of selective embargos, such as last winter's Arab oil producers' ban on oil imports to the United States and Holland, the 12 nation group would share oil with the affected countries.

"This plan is an expression of the intention of the consuming countries to consider their destiny and security together, an expression of their solidarity," Enders said.

"Major conservation programs will convince the producers more than anything else of the need for them to keep their prices under control," Enders said.

The legislative request would be for a package of authority, some of which already exists in pieces. There is already a U.S. program for allocating oil supplies. Congress has legislated a nationwide 55 mile-an-hour speed limit to save gasoline.

New chief?

PRESIDENT Ford will wind up the transition period at the White House by naming Donald Rumsfeld to head the presidential staff, informed sources indicate. Rumsfeld's appointment, probably this week, to succeed White House Chief of Staff Alexander M. Haig, would mean that jobs of the key White House jobs will have passed from former President Nixon's men to Ford's. (UPI)

Henry begins talks

NEW YORK (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger went into talks with the top diplomats of Greece and Turkey today in a new effort to move the Cyprus crisis toward a peaceful solution.

Kissinger scheduled morning conferences with Greek Foreign Minister George Mavros, who previously turned down an invitation to Washington, and Turkish Foreign Minister Turgut Gunes. U.S. officials said the secretary of state is seeking Mavros' views on the potentially explosive conflict and would offer an American blueprint for solving the Greek-Turkish confrontation over the island.

The officials said the secretary talks with Gunes later in the morning are also aimed at getting Turkey's views on the crisis rather than offering a U.S. plan for settling the conflict.

Kissinger, in a major address to the 23rd session of the U.N. General Assembly, said Monday the United States would play "an even more active role than in the past" to find a solution.

"We will do all we can, but it is those most directly concerned whose effort is the most crucial," he told the assembly.

"Third parties should not be asked to produce miraculous outcomes not anchored in reality."

Kissinger appeared fully prepared to disregard previous slights by the new Greek government, leaving his Waldorf Towers headquarters to call on Mavros at the Plaza

Kennedy decision opens field

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward Kennedy's decision to withdraw from presidential politics opens the floodgates to what may be only a trickle of announced Democratic candidates.

Kennedy's announcement Monday came at the right time for the half dozen other Democratic hopefuls who could do little to advance their candidacies until he made his move. But the end of September two years before the 1976 election is the wrong time for anyone to leap with a formal declaration of candidacy into the vacuum left by Kennedy's departure as the natural frontrunner.

There will be a lot of heavy politicking in the next six months, but the launching of any open campaign would be a surprise.

Presidential campaigns do not begin when the candidate stands up at a news conference and declares his intentions. Months, even years, of preparation go into properly mounted campaigns.

Among the vital items of underground work already in motion for 1976 is the advance solicitation of political support and financial aid — activities that have been difficult for everyone else while the obvious front-runner kept his intentions secret.

AS a result of Kennedy's decision, Democratic hopefuls and their agents now are free to start seeking firm support around the country. Political influentials and contributors will begin looking seriously at the field of hitherto also-rans now that the odds-on favorite is out of play.

That does not mean the Democratic sweepstakes won't begin a good deal earlier than the traditional announcement season 11 or 12 months before the election. The one characteristic shared by most of the potential candidates on the Democratic list below Kennedy is lack of national name recognition.

The exception is Gov. George Wallace of Alabama, but even he might have a reason to get started as early as mid-1975. Wallace knows that the biggest obstacle to his candidacy in the Democratic Party is his reputation as a segregationist. Trying to soften that image, while at the same time not giving his original supporters the idea that he is a turncoat, may take many months of careful movement.

The best known of the Democrats now considered to be possible 1976 nominees is Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash. Jackson has been up front in congressional affairs and Democratic party politics for some years, but 1972 was his first outing as a presidential candidate.

Jackson did not do well against the juggernaut built by Sen. George McGovern two years ago, but he "has" some assets left from that effort. He would seem to be the Democrat most likely at this point to attract the support of organized labor and pre-1972 party regulars, but he also is most likely to become the one man Democratic reformers will try to stop.

Between his supporters, who will want to get the Jackson show on the road, and his opponents, who will try to stop it before it gets rolling, the Washington senator may find himself as the earliest of the front-runners, with all of the hazards of exposure that position entails.

The other first-line potentials also have problems of timing. Bob Sikes, Walter Mondale of Minnesota and Lloyd Bentsen of Texas have recognition problems, and if Jackson occupies the front-runner position they will have to pursue the spotlight without seeming to demand it. But by next summer, if they are going to make serious runs for the nomination in 1976, they will both have to be known well enough among rank and file Democrats so that mention of their names does not provoke the crushing question: "Who?"

Battle begins

LONDON (UPI) — The British general election campaign is a bare 24 hours old, but party leaders have already started tossing around charges of "lying," "smeared" and "unpatriotic behavior."

"A venomous note has been injected into the campaign," said the London Evening Standard as the battle swung into high gear. An opinion poll in today's London Daily Mail gave Prime Minister Harold Wilson's governing Labor party a 14.6 per cent edge over Edward Heath's Conservatives — biggest in any poll yet.

It gave Labor 46.6 per cent, the Conservatives 32 per cent and the third-ranking Liberals 18.2 per cent.

Britons vote Oct. 10 in a parliamentary general election ordered by Wilson in a bid to win a strong majority to deal with Britain's economic crisis and to push through more nationalization of industry and other socialist measures.

In the last general election Feb. 28 no party won an overall majority. Since then, Wilson has headed a minority Labor government liable to parliamentary defeat whenever the Conservatives and Liberals joined to vote against it.

Campus haven for rattlesnakes

OROVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — Students registering at the new Butte College in a rural area north of here have been told not to panic if they are bitten by a rattlesnake.

The 5,000-student campus opened for the first time Monday. During construction workers found 44 rattlesnakes.

"The bite of the western diamondback rattlesnake, native to Northern California, is rarely fatal," said campus nurse Joanne Cowdrey in an announcement.

"Don't panic. Seek medical help as quickly as possible," she said, adding that snake-bite serum was available at nearby hospitals.

Exchange in 2nd round

NICOSIA (UPI) — Greek and Turkish Cypriots arranged their second round of prisoner of war exchanges today after a night of demonstrations by Greek Cypriots protesting the plight of Greeks stranded behind Turkish lines in the north.

Some 4,000 demonstrators marched through Nicosia Monday and delivered a petition to President Glafkos Clerides demanding that food and medicine be sent immediately to 9,000 Greek Cypriots in the northern third of Cyprus.

Turkish troops seized the northern sector after their invasion July 20.

The POW release, the second in two days, was scheduled to take place in front of the bullet-riddled Ledra Palace Hotel that sits on the "Green Line" dividing the Greek and Turkish sectors of Nicosia.

The first group of 300 Greek and 438 Turkish Cypriot prisoners were exchanged Monday, brought to the capital by buses from opposite sides of the island.

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Immunization plan queried

By GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: There seems to be some controversy over immunization of breast-fed babies, particularly the polio vaccine. I understand that the baby is immune for as long as he is nursed, and that the vaccine is ineffective while the baby is still being nursed.

In my case, the doctor gives the vaccine routinely beginning at three months. As I am nursing, I am quite concerned as to whether this or any vaccine should be given until the baby is weaned. — C.N.

Polio vaccine is usually given at from two to three months, breast (fed or not, and ) see no reason for you to worry. Just follow your doctor's immunization schedule.

It is true that breast-fed babies have fewer infections in early life, being given some degree of immunity by the mother's antibodies, but that does not mean total, absolute immunity from any disease, nor does it mean the baby cannot start developing his own antibodies (as from vaccination).

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can you offer any information on gritting my teeth at night? In the morning my jaws ache and wondered if you knew of anything that would stop it. I am 19. — Miss J.N.

The explanation usually is nervous tension. A hot drink and a hot bath before bedtime may help a lot, possibly a mild sedative.

Bobby got a two-wheeler, a box kite and a trust fund for his birthday.

After all, what's a nine year old going to do with a trust fund? You can't play with it, eat it, or take it to school. Bobby knows all that, but he also knows that a trust fund will help him later in life. Maybe even to college. It'll make sure the money will be ready when Bobby is... and even to a nine year old, that's more important than a box kite.

Bobby's father understands that trust funds aren't just for the super rich. So he talked to his hometown friend at the B & T and began a modest trust program.

A living trust can do a lot of things for a lot of people. It can be a tax shelter, provide expert management of business or property, fund a pension plan, protect real estate, provide for retirement or act as beneficiary of your life insurance. And you don't need to be a rich uncle, or even have one, to enjoy the security of a trust. Our independent bankers professionally and locally manage trusts that range in size from a thousand to a million dollars. All you need is a desire to protect your financial security. And a little help from a hometown friend.

Frost deals Midwestern crops cold blow

Nixon, daughter Julie arrive at hospital

By United Press International
Spring floods, a summer drought and now, a frost on the first day of autumn, all have taken their toll of the nation's crops.

Farmers, who had hoped a late frost would allow them to salvage some of their drought-damaged corn and soybean crops, had their hopes dashed Monday as frost and freezing temperatures ravaged farmlands.

Floods and rain had delayed spring planting and a blistering drought wiped out billions of dollars in crops and delayed others.

"We'd been hoping for a late frost this year to salvage corn and bean crops that were just getting to the final stages of growth, but the cold weather set in and now even that hope is pretty much lost," said Ray Seivage, a northwestern Illinois farmer.

The crop-killing frost whited the countryside and freezing temperatures nipped a broad belt of the midlands from Iowa and Minnesota to Ohio as autumn officially arrived at 5:51 a.m. EDT Monday.

"Our crops have been struck a severe blow," a state agricultural spokesman in Wisconsin said.

In central Illinois, the frost ended the grueling season after only 151 days compared to the average growing season of 189 days, an agriculture specialist said the frost would further stunt crop growth.

One unofficial reporting site in northern Illinois, reported that the necessary had dropped as low as 23 degrees and each of six northern Illinois counties polled in a state Department of Agriculture survey reported crop damage.

Assistant Illinois Agriculture Director Noel Gunkel said crop yields would be reduced by any hard frosts that hit corn and soybean crops.

The frost reached deep into southern Illinois, but crops there were expected to escape serious harm.

A heavy coat of frost brought the tomato growing season to an end in Indiana and caused undetermined damage to late-planted corn and soybeans there. Temperatures that state dropped as low as 27 degrees and remained below freezing for as much as three hours.

Karpatkin said there is no way of estimating how many might be excused, for example, under a 1969 Supreme Court ruling that draft boards could not declare draftees "delinquent" for alleged failure to obey regulations and then raise their status to I-A.

"How many guys went to Canada before the delinquency decision not knowing they could fight it?" Karpatkin asked.

Other cases which Karpatkin said might affect men now in Canada's physical examinations were inadequate. Many local boards ignored claims for deferment based on physical defects, he said, until federal courts began to find that such treatment made induction orders illegal.

Cold weather continued in the midlands today and the cold surge was extending eastward, triggering frost or freeze warnings from West Virginia to Maine.

Amnesty not required for many war resisters

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A civil rights lawyer said today that thousands of war resisters could end their exile now without any amnesty on the strength of court decisions rendered after the men left the United States.

But in most cases they have not been informed of the possibilities open to them, according to Marvin J. Karpatkin of New York, general counsel of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Karpatkin said he has written Attorney General William B. French III, urging a review of the files of "so-called evaders" to weed out the ones who are saved by rulings of the Supreme Court and courts of appeal.

But Deputy Assistant Attorney General Kevin Maroney, who has been handling amnesty matters in the Justice Department, told UPI when asked about this that "we don't contemplate individual review of such cases" unless the men return and submit to legal jurisdiction.

The White House estimated that 15,500 draft evaders are eligible for President Ford's amnesty program. They must get in touch with the U.S. at legal jurisdiction.

Idaho among states in food stamp suits

(c) New York Times Service
NEW YORK — Legal services groups started federal suits today against 17 states, and the Department of Agriculture, charging violations of congressional orders to enroll poor people in the food stamp program.

They contended that 13.5 million persons were taking part in the program out of 27 million they held eligible.

Donald F. Pollack, director of the Food, Research and Action Center, here, a key sponsor of the suits, said congressional studies said that the figure might be as high as 31 million to 50 million.

The suits were filed against New York, Colorado, Idaho, Indiana, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Nevada, New Hampshire, North Carolina, Ohio, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas, Virginia, Washington and West Virginia.

A complaint filed in Buffalo demanded that New York state carry out "an effective outreach plan," asserting that 1,109,764 persons received food stamps in the state last May and 2,288,238 were eligible.

An amendment in January, 1971, to the Food Stamp Act required states to inform the poor and "insure their participation in the program. Jay C. Lipner, staff attorney for the center, said the 17 states sued did not spend anything in the fiscal year 1973 under the congressional mandate.

The Buffalo suit said New York spent only $1,492,701 in federal funds for outreach efforts in the first nine months of the fiscal year 1974 that ended June 30, which, with state-matching funds, indicated a program of $2,289,451.

In the 22 months since the state outreach plan took effect on July 1, 1972, the suit asserted that enrollment in the state declined by 350,407 persons while eligibility standards "increased by almost 27 per cent."

The food stamp program was authorized in 1964 "to alleviate hunger and malnutrition." Eligible households may buy stamps worth more than they pay because of a federal bonus.

Welfare recipients are automatically eligible. Other persons may qualify if they have incomes that, for a family of four, do not exceed $500 a month.

Nixon enters hospital for phlebitis treatment

(c) New York Times Service
LONG BEACH, Calif. — A physically fatigued Richard M. Nixon was admitted to Memorial Hospital Medical Center here today, 45 days after his resignation as president, for extensive tests and treatment of a flare-up of a chronic phlebitis condition in his left leg.

Nixon arrived at the community hospital for a projected one-week stay by automobile from his estate in San Clemente, about 50 miles south. He was accompanied by a smiling Mrs. Nixon and their daughter Julie Nixon Eisenhower, Julie, who was not smiling, was expected to return east later today.

Nixon walked several yards from the car into a truck-loading dock in the basement of the hospital at about 1:40 p.m.

Witnesses said Nixon walked stiffly but without evidence of a limp.

When a reporter, Mary McFender of the Long Beach Independent Press Telegraph asked Nixon how he felt, Nixon replied:

"Good morning, good afternoon." He was said to have given a slight bow before continuing to walk unsupported with Mrs. Nixon and Mrs. Eisenhower on either side to a service elevator that took him to his room on the hospital's sixth floor.

Nixon was described by his physician, Dr. John C. Langren, as physically fatigued.

At a news conference, Ronald Ziegler, former White House press secretary and now a staff aide to Nixon, said that for the past week Langren had insisted that Nixon enter the hospital.

Langren said at the conference that there were two purposes for Nixon's hospitalization.

The first was to begin treating Nixon's phlebitis with blood-thinning, or anti-coagulant drugs.

The second purpose, Langren said, was "to conduct extensive studies in an attempt to identify the primary causative agent or agents of this original non-traumatic (not caused by an injury) phlebitis."

Phlebitis can be caused by a number of conditions, one of which is a hidden cancer.

Langren said he would issue daily written bulletins that would strictly adhere to the confidentiality of the patient-doctor relationship.

Ziegler described Nixon as having been "under strain and stress" during the 45-day post resignation period, during which time Nixon accepted a pardon from President Ford for any crimes he may have committed while president and a subpoena from the federal court.

Nixon suffered his first attack of phlebitis 10 years ago while on a foreign trip. It flared up again during his trip as president to the Middle East and lingered through his visit to Russia last June. The attacks left Nixon with a post-phlebitic, or swollen but non-painful, leg.

Langren said Nixon had experienced "three episodes of reactivation" since the Middle East attack.

Though worrisome during his foreign trips, Nixon's phlebitis did not become a major issue until after his resignation Aug. 9.

'There it is' — US billion pile

Mary Brooks shows off gold

(c) New York Times Service
FT. KNOX, Ky. — The Treasury Department opened the United States Bullion Depository to visitors Monday for the first, and possibly last, $22 billion worth of the stuff that dreams are made of.

Mrs. Mary Brooks, director of the United States Mint, supervised the opening of a series of doors and vaults leading into the nation's gold sanctuary and said triumphantly on peering inside:

"There it is."

Even a professional pauper could not fail to be impressed. Stacked from floor to ceiling in one vault eight feet high, six feet wide and 12 feet deep were 39,212 bars glistening in the half-light.

The effect of standing in the presence of about $1,775,688,776.85 worth of gold was truly awesome.

A chorus of "ahs" and "ahs" came from the 10 Congressmen who had stopped by to see whether, indeed, the gold was still there. In recent years there have been repeated rumors that some of the precious metal was missing.

Viewing the pile of 27.5-pound bars, only part of the enormous hoard, Rep. John H. Roussetto, the California Republican and John Birch Society member who had raised an eyebrow over the stories of missing gold, kept his eyes over the treasure and said, "I think it's there."

Sen. Walter D. Huddleston, D-Ky., and the other Congressmen who were craning their heads for a better look, agreed.

Mrs. Brooks, who was herself a bit goggle-eyed looking over her responsibility, said, "We've never done this before and we'll probably never do it again." She said no nongovernmental persons had ever been allowed inside the sanctuary before.

At the request of Congress the General Accounting Office — the watchdog arm of Congress — is going to weigh all 367,500 bars to see if they add up to the 147.4 million fine troy ounces the Treasury says they do. The audit will take weeks.

The depository is a massive, but deceptively unimpressive appearing building situated off Route 59 about 30 miles south west of Louisville.

Civilian guards, with sub-machine guns, proved the well-timed, geyser around the gray granite building, which is surrounded by a high steel fence.

Today the regular guards were augmented by dozens of soldiers from Ft. Knox, who checked passes and the list of names of the Congressmen, several dozen Treasury officials and about 90 newsmen, including 12 who had flown here from Switzerland.

Armed guards inside the 12-by-105-foot, two-story building swept the visitors with metal detection devices, then shepherded them into the center of the structure.

Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to marry a man I'll call Bob. I love him very much. I also love my little two-year-old daughter, Diane. Diane adores Bob and calls him "Daddy." That's my problem. Bob gets very upset when Diane calls him "Daddy," and has asked her not to call him that. He's the only Daddy Diane has ever known. Her real daddy left me when I was four months pregnant.

Abby, Bob can't give me any good reason for not wanting my daughter to call him Daddy. Except for this, he's not mean to her and it bothers me.

Bob is 24 and I am 17, but don't let me age fool you. I'm one of those kids who grew up with an alcoholic father and no mother, so I grew up fast.

I desperately need the advice my mother can't give me. She died when I was six. Thank you. DIANE'S MAMA

Upset fiancé

DEAR MAMA: Bob's reluctance to be called "Daddy" could signal his unwillingness to accept Diane. If he plans to marry you, surely he should regard your daughter as his own. If he doesn't, she'll be disappointed. Perhaps he suspects that you've coaxed Diane in this "Daddy" business to pressure him into an early marriage. (Did you?)

In any case, he's edgy about something and is taking it out on the child. Go slowly.

DEAR ABBY: Hurray for Mr. X who walked out on a dinner party because he didn't want to compete with a blaring TV set. How often I have wished for that much nerve. If one is invited to a "TV party," fine—that gives him an opportunity to send regrets.

Here's how I handled that situation with some success: I continued to converse with my host and hostess, but I kept lowering my voice until they could hardly hear what I was saying. They finally got the idea and turned off the set. PAT W., BROWNWOOD, TEX.

DEAR PAT: Great idea. Next time, try just moving your lips. That might send them to an ear doctor.

DEAR ABBY: Would you please tell me the proper way to congratulate a bride and groom following the wedding? The bride is my granddaughter.

And what do you say to the groom's parents in the receiving line? GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Wish the bride much joy and happiness. (Never congratulate a bride. That would be like commending her on having snared a man.)

Congratulate the groom, however, and wish him a happy marriage.

Congratulate the groom's parents, and express your pleasure in welcoming a new "son" into your family.

CONFIDENTIAL TO RED IN ANGLETON, TEX.: Tell her the truth. She'll never believe it.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Leaky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Opening lead—J♣

By Oswald & James Jacoby

The old adage, "There are none so blind as they who will not see" certainly applies in bridge.

East came to us with a long story about how his partner let South make an overtrick of three notrump. He described his partner's crime as follows:

"South won the spade lead in his hand and led a heart to dummy's queen. Then he proceeded to rattle off five club diamonds while my partner was fobbing enough to chuck three diamonds.

"Next South cashed the high spades, threw my partner in with a diamond, and eventually made his tenth trick with the king of hearts."

"We didn't bother to ask

East if he had contributed anything to the debate, because he had already heard from West. It seems East had discarded two hearts and a diamond while the clubs were parading.

East's first discard should have been a spade and his second discard another spade. That would have told West that he could throw spades with complete safety. As it was poor West had been afraid that South held four hearts and that he, West, just had to hang on to all his cards in the hand.

Chavez links growers, agency, labor in plot

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A "mammoth conspiracy" by the U.S. Immigration Service, crop growers and the Teamsters is threatening the survival of the United Farm Workers Union, says Cesar Chavez.

Chavez, head of the AFL-CIO union, said the threat is from "Mexican water" illegally imported to California fields to take the place of striking farm workers.

"The Teamsters in agriculture — I'm not talking about truck driving — is a company union. They were brought there by the growers to break our union," Chavez charged in an interview (Washington Worker 11/14 Audio).

He said workers are recruited in Mexico, illegally cross the U.S.-Mexican border and go to work under Teamster contracts with fruit and vegetable growers, while the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service stands by.

"There is a mammoth conspiracy with the Immigration Service and the growers and the Teamsters to break the (farm workers) union, no question about that," Chavez said.

As a result, Chavez said, the Farm Workers Union loses bargaining power and the members are denied improvements in their low standard of living.

"The corruption and the deception and the getting together with the Immigration Service is so entrenched and has been going on for so many years that it is going to take a full scale investigation to the level of Watergate to get down to the whole rotten business of why those illegals are being brought in," he said.

"We have to go further. You see the growers and the Teamsters are paying professional recruiters to go into Mexico to get the people and bring them across. The growers is up to his neck in it."

Chavez said he took farm workers out on strike at Gallo Wines in California and within a week "Gallo had 250 illegals who had never been here before."

"There is a law that prohibits the importation of illegals, period, not for strike breaking, but for any purpose. But the Immigration Service is just not doing its job," he said.

European excess meat staying on

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The European meat surplus, which has compounded problems for farmers in many other parts of the world, including the United States and Australia, is not likely to disappear soon, an Agriculture Department expert says.

"The oversupply could remain into 1975 and 1976," warned Donald M. Phillips of the department's Economic Research Service in a report published Monday.

Europe's beef glut began building up in late 1973 as production sharply from an earlier production because retail prices did not move down in proportion to the increasing volume coming from the continent's farms. As a result, stocks began piling up under the complicated common market farm support program. Common Market governments, watching the surplus tide mount, tried to fight it by a variety of steps including controls and outright embargoes on imports, giveaway welfare programs and cut-rate export schemes including export subsidies and the recent sale of 50,000 tons of European beef to Russia at 38 cents a pound.

Despite those actions, surplus stocks in the Common Market have risen to an estimated 192,000 tons already, and experts predict that if the situation continues the stock would reach 250,000 tons by the end of the year.

What would be a virtual physical impossibility because European storage facilities won't hold that much beef, Phillips report said.

Europe's problems has affected livestock producers in other parts of the world by closing normal trade channels.

Australia and South America, for example, normally sell sizable amounts of their beef to Europe. With the European market shrunken or closed, Phillips said, pressure on the American market will grow as exporters try to find outlets to replace their traditional customers.

Already, Phillips notes, Argentine exports of cooked beef to the United States have shown a sharp increase, up 54 per cent in the first six months of 1974.

Australian sales to the United States were down earlier this year, but are expected to turn up late in the year.

These developments come at a time when growing U.S. production has depressed prices for range cattle producers.

Phillips' report said European beef and veal consumption this year is not likely to rise much above 1973 levels unless officials unexpectedly decide to allow sharp price cuts or provide consumer subsidies.

As a result, the report said, the still-growing European cattle herd can be expected to furnish heavy surpluses into 1975 and probably 1976 as well.

Fertilizer pool small

(C) New York Times Service

ROME — A small office here presided over by an Austrian agronomist is the headquarters for a search for fertilizer, which is scarce and expensive now, for developing countries.

"The problem," said Robert W. Steiner, coordinator of the search in behalf of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, "is to find fertilizer wherever it can be produced and to come up with the cash to get hold of supplies for the developing countries that need it most."

The office has been in operation since July, when the needs of the developing countries became an emergency problem for the F.A.O.

The attempt to establish an international fertilizer pool for developing countries has resulted in contributions of about $15 million from aid donors, which, according to Steiner's estimate of the need, is barely a start.

With this cash, and with contracts with producers from Houston to Rotterdam, enough fertilizer has been procured to meet five African countries' requirements for planting in the next few months.

However, requests from other developing countries for early delivery of 160,000 tons have been received by Steiner's office, and he is estimating that in the coming crop year the 28 poorest countries will have a deficiency of 900,000 tons that the pool must try to overcome.

"The fertilizer situation is so tight that it is a spot market now, where contracts are closed in 24 hours, with payment in cash, instead of orders placed months in advance with credit to the buyer," Steiner explained.

According to the food agency's calculations on the 92 developing countries, 8.2 million tons of fertilizer nutrients were imported this year at a cost of $1.6 billion.

With normal increases to meet expanding demand for food among rising populations, those countries would have to import 4.6 million tons next year; since prices have sharply increased, the cost would be $5 billion.

Steiner expects the increased prices, even allowing for international aid and government subsidies, to reduce fertilizer use since farmers will not be able to regain the costs in higher prices for their products. Furthermore, the reduction in fertilizer consumption will particularly endanger food supplies, since export crops such as cotton are more profitable.

Steiner, who spent six years in Africa in a joint program with the African Development Bank to promote the use of fertilizer, said that the only solution seemed to be to provide it through an international effort at costs that farmers find economic. That means a subsidy fund.

In view of the pressing needs of India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, and of a score of the poorest Latin American countries, this fund would be expected to require over $1 billion for minimal supplies.

Some countries have advised Steiner's office that they have offered to buy fertilizer but have not even received bills. Other such as Ethiopia are unable to provide fertilizer for crops now growing.

Social scientists' fears in green revolution fail

(C) New York Times Service

LOS BANOS, Philippines — Studies in half a dozen Asian countries show that the introduction of revolutionary high-yielding rice varieties is not making the rich richer and the poor poorer, as many social scientists had predicted it would.

The predictions had been that high-yield wheat and rice would favor mechanization of farms, drive a few of the land, concentrate land holdings and generally heighten social and economic inequalities in the countryside.

However, studies summarized this month at the International Rice Research here show that the green revolution, which has spread the new varieties throughout much of Asia since 1968, has exerted little pressure toward enlarging or mechanizing farms.

The survey, conducted in 1971-72 by 30 social scientists from research centers and universities in Pakistan, India, Thailand, Malaysia, Indonesia and the Philippines, covered 2,400 farms in more than 30 villages in those countries.

According to Randolph Barker and Teresa Anden of the institute's Department of Agricultural Economics, the survey found that the size of farms and the form of tenure had not changed dramatically since the introduction of the modern varieties.

Furthermore, although more machinery, fertilizers and pesticides were used as output and income grew, over half the farms adopting the new technology used more hired labor from within the village, 40 per cent used more family labor and 30 per cent hired extra labor from outside the village.

"The villages where labor-saving technology had been most widely adopted since the introduction of modern varieties also reported the largest number of farmers with increased employment of family and hired labor," the summary asserted. "Thus, any savings in labor appear to have been more than offset by labor requirements due to the new technology."

Recent estimates are that the new varieties of rice are planted on 40 million to 50 million acres in Asian nations outside China — about 20 per cent of the region's rice land. New wheat varieties have spread even further, to an estimated 30 per cent of the region's wheat acreage.

"Whether this adoption of the new varieties in less than a decade constitutes success is vigorously disputed. The agricultural technologists who developed the new varieties stress that the rapid spread of the new grain types shows that Asian farmers are eager to adopt higher-yielding grains.

Many other observers say that adoption or proper cultivation of the new varieties has been hindered by ancient social inequalities, which are proving difficult to overcome.

What would be a virtual physical impossibility because European storage facilities won't hold that much beef, Phillips report said.

Europe's problems has affected livestock producers in other parts of the world by closing normal trade channels.

Australia and South America, for example, normally sell sizable amounts of their beef to Europe. With the European market shrunken or closed, Phillips said, pressure on the American market will grow as exporters try to find outlets to replace their traditional customers.

Fertilizers limited

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — Fertilizer supplies are limited this year and what is available is at a high price, according to Dr. Charles Welch, soil chemist for the Texas Agriculture Extension Service.

"Special formulations of fertilizer are almost nonexistent," Welch said. "Producers often must buy a complete fertilizer (one with nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium) regardless of whether they need all three nutrients."

"And the percentage of active ingredients also is being reduced in many instances so that it takes a larger volume of fertilizer to provide the necessary nutrients. This means increased transportation and handling costs."

U.S. fertilizer production was up six per cent during the year ending June 30, but the amount sold was up between 15 and 20 per cent. This means inventories are low at the retail level as well as at the manufacturing point.

The wasteland that became a park.

The forest cycle is regular and predictable — one generation of trees follows the next in orderly succession.

Sometimes even barren wasteland can be coaxied into bloom — simply by knowing when and where to help Mother Nature a helping hand.

Take the Voyageurs National Park, being formed in Minnesota, for example.

Today, it's a surpassingly beautiful region. Ancient rock outcroppings, exposed to the bright Minnesota sun, dozens of clear, blue lakes — something like 80,000 of the 220,000 acres in the park are water. The remainder is rich green forest.

To the casual urban visitor, Voyageurs National Park seems an untouched, virgin land, far removed from the influences of man.

And that's dead wrong.

Over two-thirds of the Kabetogama Peninsula, the heartland of the park, was an industrial tree farm until a couple of years ago — owned and managed for timber production and public recreation by Boise Cascade Corporation. There's little, if any, virgin forest. Virtually all of the land has been harvested once. Most of it twice. Some of it is third growth, large enough now for commercial use.

Twenty-five years ago the company saw the scenic and historical value of the property and offered to trade it for state-owned land elsewhere. But public opinion killed the offer, labeling the peninsula a "worthless rockpile."

Boise Cascade's foresters thought otherwise, and by patient application of forest programs, brought the land back to useful life, all the while keeping it open for camping, winter sports, hunting and fishing by the public.

Today, Voyageurs is becoming a National Park. But it leaves a couple of important lessons for a resource-short world.

The first is that because trees are renewable, forests can make a comeback, particularly if there's reasonable profit incentive for industry to help nature along.

The second is that tree farms dedicated primarily to timber production can enhance the land for the benefit of both the present generation and those to come.

For more information, write George C. Cheek, Executive Vice President, American Forest Institute, P.O. Box 38, Riverdale, Maryland 20840.

Joanne Carner takes lesson from Arnie

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Joanne Carner, within reach of being the first $100,000 winner in a season on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, believes Arnold Palmer has given her the tips to help her reach that goal.

Mrs. Carner, once the scourge of women's amateur golf as Joanne Gunderson of Kirkland, Wash., is having her greatest year on the LPGA tour. She has won $79,019.04 in 24 events this year.

No one has yet reached the $100,000 mark in a single season on the women's tour because until now the purses make the goal almost unrealistic. Now the LPGA has $1 million annually in prize money.

"I teed up with Arnold (Palmer) for a charity exhibition match in Seattle last week," she said, "I outdrew him on the first hole, eagled it and went one-up. Then he turned it on and it was lights out for me. No contest."

"Arnold is a great man. There were 6,000 or 7,000 golf fans out there and he tried to talk with all of them during the round. He even took almost correct a flaw in my swing. I have been getting too relaxed now and then and I fall back like an old habit — dropping my hands too low at the address. Consequently, when I swing with my hands in a low starting position I've been pushing the ball badly. It's been frustrating and it happened in the match with Arnie.

"He took me aside afterward and told me to hold my hands higher at address and it has worked. My swing is more aggressive and I am more alert. Arnie also suggested that I change the loft of my woods and we've done that. Now, we'll see what happens this week."

Coming up this week is the $55,000 third annual Portland Golf Classic over the Columbia River.

If the gallery should hear Joanne yelling "stick'em up," it won't be a holdup, but just a reminder of the Palmer tip to put her hands up higher at address if she wants to collect more at the pay window.

The competition, following a pro-am on Thursday, is over 54 holes beginning Friday. Mary Wolfe, a local rookie on the tour who knows the layout, believes low scoring will prevail over the 6,300 yard course, which will have a par for the women.

At least eight of the top 10 money winners on the tour, including two-time defending champion Kathy Whitworth, are entered. Besides Mrs. Carner and Miss Whitworth, other top money winners entered include Jane Blalock, Sandra Haynie, Jo Ann Prentice, Carol Mann, Sandra Palmer and Carole Jo Skala.

UCLA coach doesn't panic after losses

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Still winless after his first two games as UCLA's football coach, Dick Vermell refuses to panic.

"I'm not going to do a thing different in our preparations this week," Vermell told the Southern California Football Writers Monday.

"I have confidence in what we're going and the way that you can do as a football coach is to show a lack of confidence in your planning. That way the players lose confidence in their coach."

After a 17-17 tie at Tennessee and a 21-10 upset defeat at Iowa, UCLA faces unbeaten Michigan State (2-0) in its home opener at the Coliseum Saturday night.

The Bruins were three-touchdown favorites against Iowa, which hadn't won a game since 1972.

"I take part of the responsibility for the loss with the squad," Vermell continued. "But I want them to share some of the responsibility, too."

"We went back there (to Iowa City) and got our butts kicked. We were just outplayed."

"But I still think we're going the right thing in preparing for our conference games. We'll schedule. What if it all comes down to is that I think we'll be ready to play with the best of them in the Pac-8. I still believe we're going to be a good football team."

The UCLA coach, an assistant on Chuck Knox's staff with the Los Angeles Rams last season, said Michigan State should be favored against his team.

"Michigan State may be the best defensive team we play all year," he noted. "We're not going to play anybody that hits as intensely as they do. We may play the best game we play all season and not win because they're going to knock our tails off."

"But it's much easier to get a team ready to play when they look at a team like Michigan State on film."

Vermell was asked to comment on the fact that UCLA, University of Southern California and Stanford—the so-called big three in the Pac-8 this season—were still without a win among them.

"This is not being critical of the Pac-8," he replied. "But there are a lot of conferences that have been down and are working like mad to get back up. They're working extremely hard in their recruiting."

"These people are making extreme efforts to build better football programs and we have to make sure we're keeping in touch in the Pac-8."

Named pro player of the week by the writers was Los Angeles Rams' defensive tackle Larry Brooks. Also honored were UCLA linebacker Dalton Kirkwood, university division player of the week, and Cal-Salis Los Angeles running back Warren Payne, college division.

Philadelphia upsets Dallas Cowboys 13-10

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Philadelphia Eagles, inspired by a 96-yard touchdown run with a fumble by the 100-yard runner, upset the Dallas Cowboys 13-10 in a nationally televised National Football League game Monday night on a 45-yard field goal by Tom Dempsey with 25 seconds left to play.

Safety Randy Logan intercepted a sideline pass by Roger Staubach at the Dallas 29 yard line with 1:49 to play to set Dempsey up for his second field goal of the game.

Dempsey kicked a 34-yarder to put the Eagles in the lead 10-7 with 1:56 to play. But Dallas' Mac Perovich tied it, 10-10, on a 26-yard field goal with 8:34 left. Perovich was short and wide on a 48-yard field goal attempt with two seconds left in the game, after Staubach moved the Cowboys from their 18 to the Eagle 30 on two passes to wide receiver Drew Pearson, who caught 10 passes for a total of 161 yards.

Roman Gabriel, held to just six completions for 96 yards by Dallas defense that sacked him three times, was unable to get the Eagles moving and they were in danger of falling behind. Two touchdowns when Dallas marched to the Eagles three late in the third quarter.

Pittsburgh blanks Cardinals 1-0

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Richie Hebner singled home pinch-runner Miguel Dilone in the top of the 10th inning Monday night to break up a pitching duel between Tom McGlothen and Jim Hooker and give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 1-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The win moved the Pirates within 1-2 game of the division-leading Cardinals in the National League East.

Loa Brock stole his 115th base of the season to the Billy Hamilton's pre-1900 single-season record set in 1891. The Pirates had gotten just six hits off McGlothen until the 10th, when Paul Popovich pinch hit for Hooker and blooped a single that fell into short left field. Dilone went in to run for Popovich, went to second on a sacrifice and scored on Hebner's single to right.

Hooker gave up eight hits in nine innings with Dave Giusti taking over in the 10th, and raised his record to 14-11.

Eagle loses possession

The Cowboys missed two scoring opportunities in the first half when Perovich had a 48-yard field goal attempt blocked by Joe Jones with six seconds remaining and missed with a 27-yard attempt.

Robert Newhouse, pressed into service when Calvin Hill aggravated an injured toe in the first period, led the Dallas rushing attack of 168 yards by rushing 22 times for 97 yards.

The pass interception by Logan, which gave the Eagles the shot at the winning field goal, came on the third play after the Eagles had blown an earlier chance to win the game. Gabriel moved them to the Dallas 18 but Tom Sullivan fumbled and Dave Edwards recovered for Dallas with 3:13 to play.

Cleveland splits pair with Brewers

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Two-run homers by Charlie Spikes and Leron Lee powered the Cleveland Indians to a 7-4 victory and a doubleheader split with the Milwaukee Brewers Monday.

Tom Johnson's two-out, two-run double triggered a four-run ninth inning to give the Brewers a 6-2 victory in the opener.

The second game triumph moved the Indians back into fourth place in the American League East, a half game ahead of the Brewers.

Spikes' 22nd homer gave Cleveland a 2-0 lead in the first inning of the second game but the Brewers, aided by a pair of errors, chased him to tie the score at 3-3 in the fourth and Lee's fifth homer of the year following a single by Rico Carty in the sixth.

Milwaukee starter and leader Kevin Kobel, Fred Beene, who took over for Kern in the second inning, held the Indians to one hit in five innings to pick up his fourth victory against four losses.

Soviet Union scores late goals to tie Canada in hockey series

VANCOUVER (UPI) — The Soviet Union scored two goals with only four minutes remaining Monday night to tie the Team Canada 7-5 despite a Bobby Hull three-goal hat-trick in the opening period.

The tie evened the eight-game series at 1-3 going into the second half of the series, which will be played in Moscow early next month, in the 1972 series, Canada trailed 1-2-1 leaving here but won three of four games in the Soviet Union to take the series with a 3-1 record.

Hull's three-goal hat-trick in the first period put Canada ahead 5-2 after the first 20 minutes of play. Gordie Howe and Frank Mahovlich scored the other Team Canada goals in the first period.

Valery Vasiljev put the Soviet Union ahead 1-0 with his second goal of the series, scoring on a low drive from the point which went under Team Canada goaltender Gerry Cheevers at 3:44.

Gordie Howe, the 46-year-old veteran from the Houston Aeros, tied it up less than a minute later when he took a pass from Ralph Backstrom to the Soviet zone and fired it home over Russian goaltender Vladislav Tretjak's left shoulder.

Boris Mikhailov put the Soviets back on top, 2-1, at 5:59 when he took a pass out from the right of the Canadian nets from Vladimir Petrov and jammed it past Cheevers from just outside the crease. Johnny McKenzie was in the penalty

Erickson gains playoff victory

JACKPOT — Bob Erickson struck a blow for veteran golfers Monday when he defeated Greg Pitzer of Savannah, Ga., on the first sudden-death hole to win the $20,000 Cactus Pate Open.

Erickson, a 29-year-old from San Antonio, Tex., picked up right where he left off in the gathering darkness of Saturday when he came from behind to fashion the tie.

Both men were lone off the first tee but Erickson dimmed the Georgian's hopes when he hit a six-iron to within two feet of the cup. He then knocked it in the hole for a three.

Pitzer, who is saving his money to make a run toward the top, also was on in two but too far away to hope for a miraculously putt.

Erickson, who once led the U.S. open midway through his second round, came away with $2,000 for his four-day effort.

Darkness prevented the twosome from setting the issue again night and they went Sunday morning.

Asked what he thought it would take to win the tournament, Chenaweth immediately answered "a kid."

Pitzer came within a tremendous approach shot by Erickson of making Chenaweth look good. Although he didn't lead the tournament until late Sunday, Pitzer, who is headed for the PGA school this fall, fired a sharp 66 and finished the regulation tournament as the leader.

Erickson, playing in the last group and immediately behind Pitzer, lofted a nine-iron to within two feet of the 18th hole and then drilled the birdie that carried him the tie.

Los Angeles tops Braves to hike lead

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Don Sutton recorded his eighth straight victory as Mike Marshall made his 100th relief appearance of the season Monday night in a 4-3 Los Angeles victory over Atlanta that pushed the Dodgers' lead in the National League West to five games with only eight to play.

Sutton, now 18-9, took a two-hit shutout and 4-0 lead into the eighth inning, but the Braves chased him with a four-run rally that included a two-run homer by Rowland Office. With one man on base, Marshall came on and pitched his 21st save of the year.

Sutton, who drove in two runs with a pair of hits, won his 12th game in 13 decisions since July 25.

By winning their fourth game in five starts, the Dodgers picked up a half game on the idle second-place Cincinnati Reds, who also have eight games left. The triumph reduced the Dodgers' magic number to four.

Visitor to African country describes scene for fight

NEW YORK (UPI) — "MPR Servir, Se S'ei? Nem!" The slogan everywhere in Zaire. It is the supreme law of the land. It is the slogan that is the slogan of the Movement for Popular Revolution. Serve yourself? No.

The 22 million people of Zaire live, exist under that law. He they exist one can't observe, and listen. As a friend to the people of Zaire, a Central African country previously known as the Belgian Congo, Mobutu offers from the world's greatest gift, a fight between the recognized world champion, George Foreman, and the "people's champion," Muhammad Ali. The wrapping on the present fell apart eight days before we got to the ring. Of a handful of journalists sent to Kinshasa, and only a few were quartered at Mobutu's palatial villas on the banks of the river. The rest had to sleep in tents under the stars of the night.

Impressions from a visitors notebook. Mobutu, this was his chance to prove to the white man world that his emerging nation rich in natural mineral resources, could do everything, the white world did—and better. Impressions from a visitors notebook. Mobutu, this was his chance to prove to the white man world that his emerging nation rich in natural mineral resources, could do everything, the white world did—and better.

Foreman, cool and composed, concludes by saying, "I'll win the fight whenever, in the first, second, third, fourth, 15th maybe, but I'll win it." He is asked if he minds being kept in seclusion, with Zaire guards keeping him in his villa. He smiles. "The people around me are so nice, so sweet. It offsets any ill feeling of being guarded. You don't have to be very close, too. The people care so much for you."

Foreman had admitted, "I must be the most boring man in the world." Now it's Ali's time. The Zairians were polite and quiet for Foreman's remarks but now Muhammad Ali is leading them in a chant. Hysteria at first, then louder, until finally they are following his gestures, laughing, chanting with him, "Ali, boom ya, a! All boom ya a," which is "Ali! All boom ya a."

The writer thinks back to the movies of the '30's, the jungle movies, where hordes of black, bones through noses, spears and shields in hand, stomped in tribal dance.

The writer leaves to return to his own villa. A black man in uniform studies him quizzically, then points to his chest. In sign language, he is seeking the press badge. The writer offers him an "Ali" and points to Muhammad's villa. The man in uniform breaks into a wide smile and shakes hands.

blacks are there, constantly being out of the camp cleaned before them. They punch carefully, slowly, left perfectly, but when the tape has been punched they cannot make it run through the transmitters. They smile. They try again. The same errors are made. They smile. An in-charge of home, the Beggar exchanges in French, Lingala and English. Tomorrow, is the standard reply. Finally, under pressure, the answer is soon. The writers turn in futile desperation and try to place telephone calls to their home offices. The numbers are dutifully placed and the operators promise to call back.

The morning after, in the press room of the Memling Hotel, reporters are still steaming over the events that began at five in the afternoon the day before. Thousands of letters have been filed via telex. Stories that have gotten out, all but a very few, have been cleared instead by telephone on calls which were delayed by any number of hours from one to five.

But there is a greater worry. In the telex room, operators have been kept by night-ranked Zairians leaning over their shoulders to delete certain paragraphs. It is censorship, of course, but not government ordered censorship. It is censorship by MPR Servir. Nothing should be done to the detriment of the state, or to Mobutu.

Protests are met with a faint smile, and the promise the proper procedure will be followed when someone in charge? The roundabout then begins. See this person, see that one. Fill out this form. Sign it here. Tomorrow an answer. What is the hurry? What is the urgency?

The driver has been a gentleman along the highway, through the blindest of stunts, no jing, skimming along well-paved roads, past trucks and buses jammed with Zairians en route to work in new factories, or to construction sites along the barren roadways.

Foreman said, "I love America, and I love the people here, we have a lot in common." The translation comes out: "America is OK, but I love the people here."

Foreman had admitted, "I must be the most boring man in the world." Now it's Ali's time. The Zairians were polite and quiet for Foreman's remarks but now Muhammad Ali is leading them in a chant. Hysteria at first, then louder, until finally they are following his gestures, laughing, chanting with him, "Ali, boom ya, a! All boom ya a," which is "Ali! All boom ya a."

At the airport, a white civil engineer waiting for the bi-weekly Pan-Am flight to New York, slouches against a wall. Mobutu invited all the heads of African states to be his guests at the fight," he says. "They all declined with proper thanks. They don't want to be part of his show. My firm was offered 200 tickets but I only wanted to go. The resident whites in Kinshasa will stay home the night of the fight, or get out of the city."

At the ticket counter, the Zairian checking passports flashed a brilliant smile. In front of the Memling Hotel, a child with pipe-thin, twisted legs leans against the wall. The glazed eyes have no hint of light. He mumbles in what could be Lingala or French or an international language of despair. His misshapen hand is extended. No one pays him heed. No one tells him to move on. He is equally invisible to the whites who scurry through to the lobby.

Dollar duel exists for Celts, Chaney

BOSTON (UPI) — The dollar duel between the Boston Celtics and guard Don Chaney is official. General Manager Red Auerbach announced Monday that Chaney had been suspended for failing to report to training camp, while the veteran guard's attorney countered that his client is no longer under contract to Boston.

"Mr. Chaney is not in violation of any contract; he has no contract," said New York attorney Larry Fleisher, who represents the NBA Players' Association. "His contract expired last season."

"Don is in violation of his contract by not reporting to training camp," said Auerbach in a prepared statement. "We have no choice but to place him on suspension."

Fleisher maintains Chaney can't be suspended because the contingencies of the option "do not require him to play for the Celtics this season. At very worst, it doesn't allow him to play for another team this year."

"I think Red understands completely Don's position and from what took place Monday, I now understand Red's position," said the attorney.

The NCAA alleged that Pondexter and another former Long Beach player, guard Glenn McDonald, led proxies take their college entrance exams for them. State hearing officer Helen Gallagher countered Sunday that the evidence presented did not back up the charge against Pondexter. She recommended that the school dismiss the charge.

Mrs. Gallagher made a similar ruling in McDonald's case two months ago. The charges were made against the players when the NCAA, placed Long Beach basketball and football teams on three-year probation for alleged recruiting violations.

Nebraska year may not be lost

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said Monday he still thinks the Cornhuskers "can have a great year, but it all depends on how we react" to Saturday's 21-20 loss to Wisconsin.

He told the weekly Extra Point Club luncheon, "We've got to get ourselves and the players off the floor" and do as good a job as possible preparing for the Northwestern game here this week.

"As a team we had some lousy goals, and one of them was to get unbeaten," Osborne said.

In looking ahead, one thing that gives the coaching staff confidence Nebraska will bounce back "is the type of players we have," he added.

In reviewing the Wisconsin disaster, Osborne emphasized he was "not ashamed of the players...as we were one last year...because all gave their best."

"We expect our players to hit and to give an all out effort and they did," he said. "It's not often that we will play as well as we did Saturday and lose."

Osborne noted Nebraska contained Wisconsin's running game well but admitted the pass defense was not as impressive. Even so, he said, the defensive secondary played well and some of its mistakes stemmed from being "overaggressive."

He said Nebraska coaches were concerned before the season about injuries to key players, such as quarterback Dave Hamm, who saw only brief action against Wisconsin after suffering a painful hip pointer.

Falcons will revamp backfield for Saints

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Atlanta Falcons, desperately seeking new punch for their sputtering offense, are expected to revamp their backfield for next Sunday's game at New Orleans.

Reading between the lines at Coach Norm Van Brocklin's Monday news conference, it appears that Sullivan will replace Bob Lee at quarterback; that rookie Haskett

Stanback will be at running back; and that Art Malone will move back to his fullback post, ousting Eddie Tye who played there the past two games.

Celtics depend on two rookies

BOSTON (UPI) — Imagine the Boston Celtics having to depend on two rookies as they defend their NBA National Basketball Association title.

The Celtics, known for giving rookies a year of bench experience, may be forced into using their first two draft choices because veteran guards Don Chaney and Paul Westphal remain unsigned.

Malone is a fullback who has been playing out of position because of Hampton's absence. Van Brocklin defended his use of Malone at fullback the entire game Sunday on the inexperience of the other halfbacks available.

Selmon brothers change position

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI) — Oklahoma's two Selmon brothers will start at unfamiliar positions this Saturday in hopes of making the Sooners defense as rugged as it was when there were three Selmons full.

The Selmons, at this time," Switzer said. Glenn Comeaux started at noseguard in the Sooners opening game victory over Baylor, a cliff-hanger until Oklahoma put it away 28-11 in the last quarter.

Switzer said Richard Murray, a 6-1, 250-pound freshman from Greenville, Tex., was a "great prospect" at tackle.

Switzer said he planned no other position changes for the Utah State game. "Utah State is a team that has a fine tradition in its own right," Switzer said.

"We've got to start playing Stanback more," Van Brocklin said Monday. "We've got those two young kids (Stanback and Vince Kendrick) and we've got to get them in there."

Switzer said "He's fast, and he's quick, but he's a little stiff," Switzer said. "It's not turning loose yet, and that's just inexperience."

St. Louis rookie has good chance for honors

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — Before the baseball season began, Edjo McBride, the talk of the spring training camps, thought he would like to hit 300, be in contention for the pennant and win Rookie of the Year honors in his first year in the big leagues.

runner or pinchrunner specialist would be fine "if that's all he wants to do just run—but how many times in this game can you just run? I want to do more than just run."

So far, it looks as if he may be three for three. McBride, the heir apparent to the St. Louis Cardinal spark plug throne now ably occupied by Lou Brock, played in 40 games at the end of the 1973 season and hit .302.

McBride also teamed up with Brock to set a major league stolen base mark. To go along with Brock's single-season mark, McBride's steals gave the pair the most thefts for two runners on the same team—capturing the record established by Manny Wilks and Willie Davis for the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1962.

Switzer said he hoped it would provide the kind of challenge that would stand the Sooners, undefeated last year, in good stead for the rest of the campaign.

McBride was used to hitting in the leadoff spot in minors because of his ability to get on base. But he realized that the first name in the Cardinal batting order is likely to be Lou Brock for at least a few more years and McBride doesn't mind.

You really can't call Me Bride a young version of Brock—not because the 25-year-old rookie can't have the potential to become as good as the game's best base-stealer ever but because, even at age 25, Brock doesn't seem to be getting any older.

Even if the two do come to terms, rookie guards Glenn McDonald and Kevin Staum are assured of filling two vacancies on the team left by the loss of forward Steve Kuberski to expansion and the wounding of veteran guard Art Williams.

"We could potentially end up with five new faces on our 12-man roster," said Coach Heinsohn. "I don't know if the second-year cornerman, Phil Hankinson most likely will not be ready at the start of the season because of recent knee surgery."

"Dave Sorenson (fourth year pro), Byron Jones and fifth round choice Benny Clyde all have looked impressive in camp. But Steve Downing is last year's top choice who is in danger of losing his job as well as looked good."

The players assured of jobs would include Captain John Havlicek, center, and forwards Don Nelson and Paul Silas and guard Jo White.

Miller Barber hikes earnings WASHINGTON (UPI) — Miller Barber's victory in the $150,000 Ohio Kings event, the weekend, and the $30,000 winner's check, failed to push him into the top 10 money winners on the PGA tour, but it brought his season total to $22,141 and inched him closer to the $1 million mark for his career.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1974

GENERAL TENDENCIES Don't make changes or see molehills as mountains in a.m. Later you can get into the swim of events and can achieve much that is modern and up-to-date. Enjoy amusements with friends in p.m.
ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Follow every law that applies to you, especially during the a.m. Join good friends later in the day. Handle credit matters wisely.
TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Relocate new interests to afternoon since the a.m. may be unfavorable for such. Do marketing early. Plan civic matters in a.m. also.
GEMINI (May 21 to Jun 21) Meet obligations early in the day, then discuss mutual plans for the future, with associates and bigwigs. Be progressive.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Find out just what your true position is with regular associates, and then handle your share of work conscientiously.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 23) Tackle work in a.m. instead of grumbling about it so you can reap the benefits thereof. Improve health. Have fun tonight.
VIRGO (Aug. 24 to Sept. 22) Do the work connected with creative talents. Forget recreation which could be disappointing and concentrate on work. Make this a banner day.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Avoid arguments at home and maintain harmony, enjoy amusements. Reconcile with some outsider since it could improve your financial status. Sociable p.m.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't take any risks early, then the p.m. can prove to be happy, constructive. Watch wallet while shopping. Keep alert.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You feel lack during the early part of the day, but later you get a brainstorm, or friends help you increase income.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Daytime not good for the social, but the p.m. is excellent. Go to the beauty or barber shop so you are at your best in evening.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Daytime better in a.m. hours. During the p.m. you can delight others so you become most popular and unforgettable. Make a fine impression.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) In a.m. others are touchy, so do not criticize. An aim difficult to gain in a.m. becomes especially easy to achieve after lunch.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) If your child is born today... he or she can solve difficult problems and be ahead of others even from early childhood, so give a fine college education and permit to study various philosophies of life. Then there can even be fame in this chart as well as much success from the financial standpoint. More than average care must be given to the health and diet, since the mind here is very active.
The Stars impel, they do not compel. What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Sleep researchers contend it takes about seven minutes for the average citizen to doze off each night... TO KEEP his bartenders honest, an Ohio saloonkeeper named James Ritty invented the cash register. I'm told WATERVILLE, Me., is the place where it's a violation to blow your nose in public... DO YOU REALIZE, the women in this country lose $8 million hairpins a day?... AN-AUTHORITY, who should know-estimates that there are about 5,000 illegal dogfight matches nationwide every weekend.

ALREADY told you about the Spaghetti Museum in Italy. Failed to mention, though, there's also a Bread Museum in Ulm-Danau, West Germany.

DOCTORS Approximately 8,900 graduates of foreign medical schools were tested in this country a couple of years ago as to their basic medical savvy. Seven out of 10 failed said test. Those results made the national health authorities a mite nervous. Understandable. They figure as many as 164,000 foreign medical graduates will be working as physicians hereabouts 16 years from now.

Q. "WHERE did Chevrolet get the moniker 'Monza' for its new little car?" A. "That's the name of an ancient Italian castle near Milan. A race track was built there in 1922."

TIES Writes Chet Swiell: "Men have been knotting ties around their necks ever since the Croats defeated the Turks during the 17th century wars. One of the victorious Croat regiments was feted in Paris. The Frenchmen copied the soldiers' colorful flowing scarves, and in honor of the Croats, called this neckwear the cravat. There are 16 ways to tie the cravat. One is so complicated, the cravat must be cut off at the end of the day, a boon to neckwear manufacturers."

DID I TELL you about the windpipe of a crane? It's coiled into a trumpet behind the breastbone. Stretched it's full length, that windpipe is as long as the entire bird. Makes quite a musical instrument, coiled that way.

CLIENT QUOTES an edition of the Britannica as reporting that ancient Romans by law required all professional women of the night either to bleach their hair or wear blonde wigs.

QUICK, NAME the only animal with a movable upper jaw. The alligator, the alligator.
