US judge frees Calley, cites 'Gate precedent

COLUMBUS, Ga. (UPI) — A federal judge, citing a recent Supreme Court ruling dealing with former President Nixon and the Watergate tapes, today overturned the My Lai murder conviction of former Army Lt. William L. Calley. "We see that the Supreme Court, in deciding the 'Nixon' case, also decided the 'Calley' case," U.S. District Judge J. Robert Elliott said in a lengthy opinion. Elliott overturned Calley's conviction on the specific grounds of massive pretrial publicity, denial of Calley's rights to confront unfriendly witnesses and improperly drawn charges. But Elliott said the Supreme Court, in ruling on the Calley case, had, in effect, decided the My Lai affair. He said that the Supreme Court had held that Nixon had to turn over the Watergate tapes; but that a committee of the House of Representatives that investigated the My Lai case had refused to turn over its transcript to Calley's defense lawyers. At the Pentagon, an Army spokesman said Calley would not be released yet. "We have not yet received a copy of the opinion, reported to be quite lengthy," the spokesman said. "Upon receipt of the opinion, Army lawyers will study it in order to evaluate various legal alternatives."

Calley was sentenced to life imprisonment March 29, 1971, by a court-martial board but his sentence was reduced to 30 years by a military appeals board and then to 10 years by Army Secretary Howard H. Callaway. Elliott, however, ordered Calley "released forthwith from his present confinement in U.S. Disciplinary Barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kan."

The Army now has the option of asking Elliott for a stay of his order, or taking the case to the 5th Court of Appeals in New Orleans. Elliott earlier had set Calley free on bond after Calley exhausted his appeals before military tribunals and took his case to the civilian courts, but the appellate court later reversed Elliott's decision granting bond. The judge decided more than half of his 132-page decision to the public. He said that pretrial news coverage of the My Lai massacre had been permitted to run "unrestrained and uncontrolled" and that Calley had been portrayed in the press as a "murderer and a monster." This, he said, denied Calley his right to a free trial. The judge, in holding that the Nixon-Watergate case had decided the Calley matter, said the point at issue was the traditional separation of power doctrine under the Constitution. Calley's lawyers had asked the House Armed Forces subcommittee investigating My Lai for testimony that it had taken, but Committee Chairman P. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., refused, citing the principal of separation of powers.

Dixie GOP confirms secret fund

By BILL LAZARUS Times-News writer

WASHINGTON — Evidence indicates about $132,000 in undisclosed funds passed through Idaho Republican congressional candidate George Hansen's bank account, the ranking member of the House Administration Committee confirmed Tuesday. But Rep. William Dickinson, R-Ala., told the Times-News he does not know how much money may have accumulated in the bank account or whether more than one account existed. He also said he does not know if the evidence committee's is valid.

Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, and chairman of the administration committee, said Monday that Hansen apparently has held $132,000 in unreported campaign funds in six different banks. His statement came in the wake of an administration committee letter urging the US Attorney General to take quick action on the case before November elections.

Hansen denied Hays' statement, calling it a political "vendetta" by the Democrat who he said heads a committee for the election of Democrats to Congress. But Dickinson said, "It is my understanding from what the staff man said that indications are that that money ($132,000) had gone through a bank account. . . . There is an indication that some of this money went to his campaign."

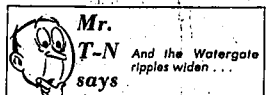

Under federal law congressional candidates not reporting campaign funds face up to a $1,000 fine and one year in prison. Dickinson emphasized that he does not know whether these "indications" are true. He said the committee heard the staff report and did the only thing it could do — turn the case over to the Justice Department for further investigation and possible prosecution. Hansen this morning questioned the significance of the administration committee's evidence. "You know what staff evidence is. That's allegations that people send in. . . . I think that the Justice Department can take care of the matter of investigating this and I'm not afraid of what they'll find," he said.

Monday ruling on tape usage

(c) New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — Judge John J. Sirica will rule Monday on whether transcripts of tape recordings may be used by jurors in the Watergate cover-up trial to supplement recorded voices heard on headphones. Sirica is presiding over the trial, which is the General Services Administration's effort in making physical arrangements for the trial, is for the entire courtroom — press and public included — to be equipped with headphones. They will listen to an estimated 18 hours of tape recordings at the trial scheduled to begin a week from today.

Living Center operator vows to stay in business

By GEORGE WILEY Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — The operator of the Magic Valley Living Center said today he intends to stay in business despite a denial of his shelter home license by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. Duff Brown, who along with his wife operates the facility, which houses about 30 mentally retarded or mentally handicapped persons, said he will continue to operate the facility south of Carry as a boarding house, despite the state denial of his shelter home license Tuesday. "I want to make it go as long as possible," Brown said. He said he had not yet received notification of his license denial from the state and that he had only one denial from the state. "It is very typical of the way the state is working," he added.

TF hearings on plant set

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Land Board voted Tuesday to hold public hearings in Twin Falls and Boise on Idaho Power Co.'s proposal to construct a huge coal-fired power plant near Bliss, Blaine or Mountain Home.

Idaho Power has proposed to purchase state lands in the Boise foothills. It would then exchange these lands for US Bureau of Land Management property at the sites where it proposes to build the power plant. Under law the BLM can trade its lands for other property, but generally cannot sell them for any decision.

According to Gordon Trombley, the land board's decision was made following a public hearing at which many persons questioned the desirability of selling state land to the power company. Following the testimony, the board decided to hold hearings "to gain input from anybody that might wish to talk about" the proposed coal-fired plant, he said. The date for the Twin Falls hearing will be announced.

"Careful consideration" exists on construction of all new applications for state land. Until a large backlog of such applications is processed, the land board will not be able to sell lands to Idaho Power. According to Trombley, the power company might have to wait up to a year before the pending applications are gone through.

At Tuesday's board meeting, no consideration was made of lifting the moratorium, Trombley said. The land board is composed of the state's highest elected officials, including the governor, attorney general, secretary of state, superintendent of public instruction and the state auditor.

In testimony before the commission, Marcia Pursley, Boise, coordinator for the Idaho Conservation League, said Idaho needs power plant siting legislation to insure a single agency will review all power plant proposals before action can be taken. At present, she said, control is fragmented and there is a "gap" at the state level. Michelle Markiewicz, speaking for the coalition for citizen control of Idaho resources, spoke out against what she called this "latest exploitation" by the power company. She urged research into the air pollution potential of a coal-fired power plant, and she requested that land exchange is made, according to IPI. Mary Mech, Boise, legislative chairman of the Idaho League of Women Voters, said the board should retain its moratorium on new applications for state lands and not grant Idaho Power preferential treatment.

Frosted soybeans

EXAMINING frost-damaged soybeans is Jerry Andrews, Indianapolis, Iowa, farmer, who said he wasn't sure yet of the extent of the loss to the frost. Midwestern farmers were hit this week by frost, which damaged the corn and soybean crops, plagued all year by excessively wet, hot and dry weather. Crop reductions are expected to increase the price of meats and other foods in the nation's markets. (UPI)

Idahoan hopes to spread N-plant danger warning

By DAVID HORSMAN Times-News writer

ARCO — A nuclear power safety expert has quit his job at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory (INEL) to be free to tell the American people about the potentially dangerous conditions in the nation's nuclear power plants.

In his letter of resignation last week to the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC), Carl J. Hovever charged that "in spite of the soothing reassurances that the AEC gives to the uninformed, misled public, unresolved questions about nuclear power safety are so grave that the United States should consider a complete halt to nuclear power plant construction while we see if these serious questions can somehow be resolved."

Hovever was an employee of Aerojet Nuclear Co., which is contracted by the AEC for work at the INEL, formerly called the National Reactor Testing Station.

He developed one of the AEC's basic nuclear power plant safety analysis methods.

"The (nuclear) reactors may or may not be safe," Hovever told the Times-News Tuesday. "I don't feel we have adequate basis to judge yet."

"We're building the reactors without all the information at hand that would be prudent," he added.

"Experimental verification" of the safety of nuclear power plants "is not complete," Hovever said.

He called for a complete halt by the AEC in granting licenses for private construction of nuclear power facilities. If that is not possible, the AEC should order derating (lowering of power output) at existing and planned nuclear plants, Hovever said. "If there is a serious accident, the consequences could be less if the power is lower," he added.

Informed of the opportunity for hearing, Brown said he would like to have such a hearing but did not know if he could afford the services of an attorney to represent him.

"I really don't have anything to say yet (concerning the hearing)," Brown said. "I think I need some good counsel."

The question of licensure for the facility arose after the state discovered in August that Brown's license had lapsed. Discovery of the lapse came in the wake of the arrest of Richard Huffman, 23, a resident of Magic Valley Living Center, on a charge of first degree murder in the stabbing death of a Twin Falls store clerk on Aug. 21.

Following the arrest of Huffman and charges by Twin Falls police detective chief Tim Qualls that the center was continuing to harbor "dangerous" persons, residents near the shelter home circulated a petition asking the county to shut down the facility as a hazard.

Supporters of the facility then countered with their own petition, arguing that the facility is performing a badly needed community service. Since the eruption of the controversy, Brown has consistently maintained that state payments of $4 per day for client care were insufficient to allow him to operate thoroughly up to standards set by the state.

Brown estimated he would need at least $8 per day in state aid per client to run the facility adequately.

Assistant attorney general Paul Smith, who will represent the state if a hearing on the license is held, said Brown can continue to operate his facility as a boarding house

Crooked cop ruse nabs New York gang

NEW YORK (UPI) — Police Officer Anthony Vitaliano, 27, spent most of Tuesday afternoon acting like a crooked cop and getting drunk on wine on duty.

His commander says he'll be promoted to sergeant very soon.

Vitaliano, an undercover policeman with the public morals division, used the corruption ruse to stall for time when the extortion gang he infiltrated found out who he was and took him for a ride to Brooklyn — at gunpoint.

The racketeers had taken a liking to him, according to Inspector Charles Peterson. So they took him for drinks to a house in Coney Island used as a hideout. Those who thought Vitaliano could still be trusted argued with those who stalled otherwise.

And while Vitaliano stalled for time, downing drink after drink, police had scoured the borough of Brooklyn trying to rescue him finally located his car outside the bar. They were waiting when the cop and his captors came staggering out, and safely rescued him.

Vitaliano's 3 1/2 hour ordeal began around 2 p.m. when he showed up in his car at a Lower East Side intersection in his assigned role as a "collection agent for the protection racket," which preyed on prostitutes, madams, massage parlors operators and small time gamblers, according to police.

However, the gang members caught a glimpse of his revolver, found papers in the car indicating Vitaliano was a policeman, pulled a gun and warned he "would have his head shot off," police said.

After denials didn't work, Vitaliano admitted he was a cop but said he was a "bad one." He told the racketeers that "this is the way he always made his money," according to Peterson.

They ordered him into the car and drove toward Brooklyn. Vitaliano's worried back-up team followed, but lost the car in traffic.

An all-out search was launched — a police helicopter spotted the car as it was headed for Coney Island, but then lost it.

Police cars were dispatched to various locations known to be hangouts for the gang, and one finally spotted Vitaliano's car outside the house.

At 5:30 p.m. the captors and their hostage staggered out. Four suspects, three men and a woman, surrendered to police without a struggle. Five other suspects were arrested at other locations, and the nine were variously charged with kidnaping, extortion and weapons violations.

Nothing Vitaliano's glassy-eyed condition, police took Vitaliano to Coney Island Hospital in the mistaken belief he had been drugged or was in shock.

Friday night, in a news conference at police headquarters, Peterson called Vitaliano "a very bright young policeman who is shortly to be made a sergeant."

Police keep watch over tense school

BOSTON (UPI) — Uniformed and plainclothes police patrolled the corridors of racially tense Hyde Park High School today as black and white students met together and separately in an attempt to put an end to violence during the 10th day of a court ordered plan to integrate the public schools.

Prior to the start of school at Hyde Park, police confiscated a home-made two-foot spear with a knife taped to the end from one youth and a fishing knife and a bottle of rum from another.

Classes were suspended temporarily for a while today as the black students met in the cafeteria and the whites met in the auditorium.

Following the meeting most of the white children left school, despite a personal plea by Police Commissioner Robert Curtis Taylor that they stay in class. His efforts were thwarted by several teachers who told the white students to go home. They were expected to return for a general meeting with students later today.

"It's easy to complain and not to do anything. That's what the meeting was all about," diGrazia said in obvious disgust.

As a result of the meeting, two student negotiation committees were set up. One committee was made up of all black children; the other was all white. Each had five boys and five girls.

The negotiation committee later met in the school library to discuss ways to end the fighting, alleviate fears and have the children get along with each other.

Ethiopian strike ends

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — A general strike by 100,000 Ethiopian workers called in defiance of an army ban collapsed today only hours after it started.

The failure of the walkout averted a showdown between the country's trade union movement and Ethiopia's new military rulers, diplomatic observers said.

The confrontation with its threat of widespread clashes between workers and soldiers was the most serious the country's military reformers have faced since they deposed Emperor Haile Selassie Sept. 12 and vowed to bring the country into the 20th Century with wide-ranging reforms.

The Confederation of Ethiopian Labor Unions (CELU) called for a work stoppage at 6 a.m. but at midmorning public transport, shops, banks and businesses were operating normally.

Admitting that the army had won the showdown, a labor official said the strike "was not as successful as we had hoped for."

Bill to assist doctor shortage

WASHINGTON — Many small Idaho towns will have more doctors available to them under a bill the US Senate passed Tuesday.

The bill strongly encourages medical and dental schools designate 25 per cent of their students for future service in small towns and city slums that have scarce medical care. Schools that do not participate would not receive federal funds.

An amendment sponsored by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, and passed would help to insure that Idaho will receive some of the rural-bound medics. The amendment would protect Idaho's interest in obtaining doctors for rural areas, even though the state has no medical school of its own.

Attempts by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to institute a doctor draft and federal licensing standards for doctors and dentists were repudiated Tuesday, 70 to 18, and instead the three-year, $2 billion health manpower bill passed, 81 to 7.

Its first year cost would be $207 million, as opposed to $428 million currently provided for health professions schools. Funding would increase to $704.7 million in 1976 and $766.7 million in 1977. The House has yet to act on the measure. The previous aid bill expired June 30.

The key vote was passage of a measure sponsored by Sen. J. Glenn Beall, R-Md., as a substitute for Kennedy's proposal.

It would provide federal aid to medical and dental schools that agree to allocate 25 per cent of their classroom spaces for students volunteering to serve in big city slums or rural areas short of medical care workers.

In return for their later civilian or federal service, the students would be entitled to government scholarships at the rate of one year of service for each year of aid.

Kennedy, losing liberal support for a doctor draft and federal licensing bill approved by the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee, tried to head off the Beall amendment by stripping his own bill. The move failed.

Kennedy proposed a delay until 1980 of requirements that the HEW secretary set national licensing standards for doctors and dentists and that all medical schools receiving federal aid require their students to work after graduation in doctor-short areas.

"The (Kennedy) substitute still had objectionable features," Beall told reporters later. "People didn't want to make a commitment to national licensure or a draft of doctors at this time, even if it wouldn't take effect until 1980."

The Senate-passed Health Manpower and Shortage Area Assistance Act provides for extension of federal aid for training of professionals in medicine, osteopathy, dentistry, optometry, podiatry, pharmacy and veterinary medicine and public health.

One provision of the Beall bill would require some medical schools during the first year of the act to increase their first-year enrollment by 10 per cent.

Plant head speaks in GF

GLENN'S FERRY — Douglas Ogden, supervisor of the New Magic West processing plant, was the guest speaker at the Monday noon chamber of commerce meeting.

He said the plant now employs 40 people from the King-Hill-Glenns Ferry and Hammett areas. The run will continue until about July of 1975, when they expect to add another line and begin employing about 100 people. The plant makes a potato flake for Campbell's Soup Co. and a "fresh pack" in 50 pound boxes used for gifts, most of which is shipped out of this area.

The chamber members discussed the car baling project. Between 60 and 70 cars have been baled on the Canyon Creek-Sailor Creek areas and at the dumpgrounds. The group discussed turning the project over to the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts to help their funds. A discussion was held relative to having a "Welcome Wagon" or some form of welcome for the newcomers. The meeting was held at the Trophy Club.

Senate flubbs inflation test

Congress is long on oratory and advice to the President on what he must do to combat inflation but its action in rejecting a postponement of federal civilian and military pay raises from October 1 to January 1, 1975 graphically demonstrated that it is particularly vulnerable to the pressure of well-organized voter groups.

The three-month postponement would have reduced federal spending by $700 million. But the Senate voted it down by a vote of 64-35.

$700 million is not an inconsiderable amount even in Washington where millions are thrown about like play money from a Monopoly game.

Senator Gale McGee, D-Wyo., called the postponement a "gimmick." Senator Barry Goldwater, on the other hand said that the vote proves that the Congress "is owned lock stock and barrel by the lobbies and does not have the guts to do what needs to be done."

The President of the National Federation of Federal Employees said, "The vote showed the essential justice of our unwillingness to bear the entire burden of Ford's fight against inflation." This was obviously a biased and untrue assessment of the proposed delay.

There is much truth in Goldwater's charge. Congress in the broad picture will be vehemently in favor of halting inflation, but when it comes down to any measure which would pinch their constituency, or any organization which supports them, they will not rally to the occasion.

A case was made against postponement because salaries of federal employees traditionally lag behind those in the private sector of the economy. That may have been true in the past, but we doubt that there is a noticeable discrepancy today.

Federal employees have become heavily unionized and have won great economic gains.

However, no class of jobs in the United States compares with federal employment for job security and liberal extras.

It is almost impossible to remove a federal employee from his job, if he is under civil service, no matter how low his level of efficiency may be.

And when it comes to sick leave, pensions, vacations and other benefits, an overly-benevolent government has granted them perquisites which are enjoyed by very, very few of the workers in private business.

If we are to beat inflation, it must start somewhere. The adage that a mile walk starts with one step is as true of beating inflation as it is of other endeavors.

$700 million saved may be a small step towards controlling inflation, but it is one step. A larger one would be drastic cuts in other federal spending.

President Ford will have a difficult time holding national expenditures in line this year, and almost no chance of a balanced budget in the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1975, if this is an indication of what we may expect from the Congress.

Bulldozing art

Christian Science Monitor

The mighty Kremlin, it seems, is afraid of art. Art, that is, which it does not dictate and control.

It is ludicrous to think that in this modern day of cultural freedom Soviet authorities should have sent out bulldozers and water trucks to break up an outdoor display of abstract painting. Worse still, several Western correspondents and Russian spectators were roughed up while uniformed police looked on. Two Soviet artists were arrested and their works were thrown into trucks and piled with mud.

Such uncivilized behavior further damages the Kremlin's image. It is but another indication of the repressive, often brutal nature of the Soviet regime — and of the dogmatism of a leadership that cannot tolerate artistic let alone political freedom.

Critics sight Henry

(C) Chicago Daily News WASHINGTON — "How long do you give Henry Kissinger?"

"That question, which used to be debated in the back alleys and corridors of Washington politics, moved into fashionable circles with such insistence recently that President Ford felt obliged to intervene last Wednesday."

"Henry's my boy, make no mistake about it," he said, in effect, in his speech to the U.N. General Assembly."

It may have pleased Kissinger. It didn't quash the question.

The long knives may be sheathed for a time. But the fact remains that Kissinger is no longer viewed as an invulnerable and indisputable fixture in Ford's future, despite the heroic aura he created in the Nixon period and the endorsement by the new President.

Kissinger himself once noted that the law of averages eventually overtakes anyone engaged in high-wire, high-stability diplomacy. He was then only a national security affairs assistant to the president. But events, a self-admitted ego of enormous proportions, and a personal dynamism drove him to even greater acrobatic routines.

Ford embraced Kissinger because of a series of published reports indicating that the chief foreign-policy adviser might be whittled down to human size.

There was a report he might have to yield up his White House portfolio as an assistant to the president.

The report gained some impetus from Kissinger's approval of the CIA's covert political operations in Chile during the ill-fated regime of the late President Salvador Allende. But the long knives were out long before that piece of intelligence became public.

The psychology of the criticism has been hard to dissect, but it has strong political overtones. Some critics feel he has been tainted merely by being a member of the Nixon administration.

Oddly enough, among those who think he ought to go soon are several of the President's former colleagues in the House. They fear that Kissinger, and they argue that Ford ought to get a whole new team and set his own course. They are not impressed by the fact that Kissinger enjoys widespread public approval at home and considerable confidence among world leaders.

Even in the State Department itself, Kissinger has his detractors. It is clearly not institutional-minded and continues to practice a highly personalized form of diplomacy. But his idiosyncrasies concern his long-term impact will be, and how he will work with a new president who is reasonably open and without guile.

Ford obviously feels dependent upon Kissinger, not only as a symbol of continuity of U.S. policy in the world but as a popular figure in the public mind, a man of esteem and acknowledged brilliance in explaining the aims and goals of this country abroad.

But he inspires an unease among students of U.S. foreign policy. The fact that he has become a creature of myth, much of it fashioned by himself, disturbs many. His work often seems tentative, a series of Potemkin villages to be dismantled when he departs.

He understands the measure of his personal power. When he blew his stack in Salzburg, Austria, last summer en route to the Middle East with President Nixon, he knew the Senate Foreign Relations Committee would trundle to his whims.

He is extremely savvy, with an acute sense of survival. If he goes, he'll likely leave under his own steam, at a time of his own choosing.

Monolithic Nixon system budges only slightly

WASHINGTON — How little both the substance and style of policymaking have changed at the White House is reflected by the fact that the same economist who wrote President Nixon's last economic speech expects to write President Ford's speech concluding his economic summit conference Sept. 28.

The speechwriter is economist Sidney Jones, a major backstage policymaker at the Nixon White House who remains highly influential in planning the Ford economic summit.

Although Nixon's July speech evoked a depressed on the economy, other government officials expect Jones to follow the same general script for Ford. Apart from perpetuating Nixonism, this shows that economic policy is still being made in the White House rather than by Secretary of the Treasury William Simon.

Such a pattern generally holds true for all government policymaking during President Ford's first six weeks in office. Despite his genuine desire to decentralize power away from the White House and back to cabinet-level departments, little has changed.

EVANS AND NOVAK

This can be partly explained by the lack of the usual transition period between presidents. Nevertheless, ultimate Ford advisers are deeply disappointed about the first six weeks at the Ford White House. What follows is a sampling of recent incidents which are similar to the pattern of the Nixon White House.

Item: The recent legislative message sent Congress by Ford was prepared entirely by the Domestic Council. When one White House aide bootlegged a copy to a cabinet member, angry Domestic Council staffers launched an investigation to discover the "leak."

Item: The Domestic Council staff has dominated the presidential decision-making about the government's new energy policy machinery. The Domestic Council paper on the subject, was treated as a top secret document not available to high government officials outside the White House.

Item: Rep. Albert Quie of Minnesota, a highly regarded Republican moderate, had argued unsuccessfully that President Nixon should not veto funding of anti-poverty community action programs. When he renewed the argument with the Ford White House, Quie encountered exactly the same resistance and exactly the same arguments in reply.

But there are differences which hopefully will be dominant eventually. Unable to make his point with the Domestic Council staff, Quie insisted on seeing the President himself. Quie got into the Oval Office, made his pitch to Ford and came away convinced there would be no veto.

The point is that Quie never would have gotten close enough to Nixon to contradict the staff. In contrast, close personal aides brought to the White House by Ford feel open access will be the essence of his presidency.

Whatever happens in the White House, however, the last six weeks cannot be washed away. At a time when Ford's closest advisers felt changes in both the policies and procedures of the administration were imperative, the new President was unable to budge more than slightly the monolithic Nixon system that he inherited.

US interests diverse

By WILLIAM V. SHANNON

(C) New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — If this were a book instead of a newspaper column, I would give it one of those fashionably long titles such as, "Some preliminary thoughts on America's world responsibilities upon being denounced as a neo-isolationist."

In two recent articles, I suggested that Cyprus is not an American responsibility and recalled earlier "crises" in Lebanon, Laos, and the Dominican Republic that, like Cyprus today, were exaggerated by press and the press inasmuch as no real American national interest was involved.

Everyone agrees in theory that the United States ought not to be the world's policeman. But in practice as each situation arises there inevitably goes up the cry for American leadership.

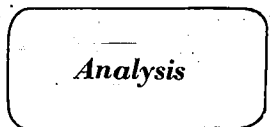

Americans are becoming weary of this unrelenting round of diverse responsibilities. Yet when one attempts to define this nation's interests anomalies and contradictions immediately show up.

Clearly, what happens in Canada and Mexico is of vital concern to us because they are our neighbors. Because of a shared heritage of culture, law, and free political institutions, we are deeply involved in the fate of Britain, the other democracies of Western Europe, and — by extension — Australia and New Zealand. It is also in America's national interest to help our ex-World War II enemies — West Germany and its industrial Ruhr and Japan, with its economic genius — to stay in the ranks of the free and friendly nations.

If we agree that North America, Western Europe and Japan form the heart of America's interests in the world and if, for reasons of space, we leave aside the complex question of America's relations with the so-called third world, we still have to take into account the city of Jerusalem and the state of Israel.

But nations, no more than individuals, can make all their decisions on coolly calculated appraisals of self-interest. Americans, like all Western people, feel some degree of guilt because we did not stop Hitler in time to prevent his holocaust of most of Europe's Jews. When World War II ended, this country did not open its doors quickly or widely to the surviving Jews and thereby provide an alternative to the Zionist answer.

History, too, imposes responsibilities. Neither Israel nor West Berlin could have survived this long without American military and economic aid. Each succeeding president since Truman in 1948 has strongly reaffirmed America's support.

Are these two vulnerable positions vital interests in the sense that the United States would fight for them? One can answer that with another question. Would the Russians have fought if we had tried to help the Hungarians or the Czechs during their unsuccessful struggles for freedom? The United States did not know the answer but decided not to take the risk of finding out. As long as the United States remains strong, the Russians are likely to be equally prudent. If the people of West Berlin or of Israel cry out to us, we cannot pretend to be deaf.

Only one mastermind for such complex mystery

(C) New York Times Service He is a big blond guy who looks like he might have played some football in college and he is sitting there in the office when I get back from being beaten up in The Case of the Dissonant Tango.

"They tell me you're an outmoded old private eye with a battered head and too much integrity," he says. "Get to the point."

He says his name is Ford and he is President of the United States. "Sure," says I, "and my name is Sam Spade and I'm the cracker of The Maltese Falcon Case."

"Hé believes me." "Actually," I tell him, "my name is Philip Marlowe and I'm the cracker of the Lady in the Lake Job." He believes that, too. I decide maybe he really is Ford.

Pretty soon I am tooling my heap up to San Clemente to solve the Nixon Health Mystery. A greasy old business suit and an affidavit face stops me at the gate. A heaver bulging in his hip makes him a Secret Service agent, so I say, "How's the boss feeling these days?"

"Who wants to know, shamus?" he asks. "Pretty soon out comes this Jasper who says his name is Bebe. "Don't tell anybody where this came from," he says, slipping me a sheet of medical charts which look almost as bad as the Dow Jones trend for the past six months."

RUSSEL BAKER

Back in L.A., I put the documents in a bus station locker when suddenly the phone rings. "This is Eddie Cox speaking, Spade or Marlowe or whoever you are," he said. "Don't believe those medical charts, understand?" "You mean the Big Guy is really in the pink, Eddie?" I asked.

"He's worse," says the voice. "Much, much worse. Get me?" The phone clicked dead. I drove home. He was on the bathroom floor. I realized he was as sick as a man can be. A note in his lapel buttonhole said,

"If you think this man is sick, you ought to see Nixon."

Somebody was playing rough. I drive to London and park outside the American Embassy. Three hours later Ambassador Walter Annenberg comes out.

"There is a sick man on my bathroom floor and I want to know who put him there," I tell Annenberg. Annenberg says it can't be Nixon. "I just talked to him on the phone. His voice was firm and he seemed completely normal to me. I am sitting in a New York restaurant trying to figure it out.

I am suddenly joined by a big man with rich eyes. "You don't know me, but the name is Abbanip. I'm just going to say it once so listen carefully. Annenberg doesn't know what he's talking about." He is gone.

I drive all night and wind up sitting in the heap outside the Washington home of Dr. Walter Teague. I grab him on the way to the infirmary. "How's President Nixon's health, sawbones?" I ask.

"We have never had a president in better health," says he.

"How is it if we've never had a president in better health he's too sick to say how he feels?" "Simple," says Teague. "It's not president any more."

I am sitting in the Oval Office telling Ford I have cracked the case. "This mystery is so complex," I tell him, "that it can never be solved. There is only one man alive who could have masterminded a mystery as impenetrable as this."

"Professor Moriarty?" asks Ford. "Richard Nixon," I tell him. "And he would have to be in good health to do it?" Ford asks. "That depends on how you define good health," I say. "He believes me."

New versions of light at end of Vietnam tunnel have little appeal

By DAVID K. SHIDLER
(C) New York Times Service
SAIGON, SOUTH VIETNAM — There is a new version of the light at the end of the tunnel in Vietnam.

The wishful thought used to be that the North Vietnamese, pounded by American firepower, would finally find the price too high and give up. Now there is a belief that the South Vietnamese government can defend itself militarily, "take off" economically and prove to be such a going concern that the north, frustrated, will abandon its aggressive designs.

Another new version comes from the left end of the political spectrum. No longer is it the expectation that with the withdrawal of American troops and planes, peace will come, but rather that further cuts in American aid — against which President Ford made a new appeal recently — will force President Nguyen Van Thieu into a political settlement with the communists that will end war.

Central to these theories is a decade-old assumption about the power of Washington to determine the outcome of the struggle by adding or subtracting assistance.

For this fiscal year the White House has sought $1.45 billion in military aid and $750 million in economic aid, compared with $1.23 billion and $490 million respectively last year. The administration maintains that the funds will prevent military deterioration and propel South Vietnam close to economic self-sufficiency in two or three years.

In contrast, the Senate and the House of Representatives have cut the military aid to $700 million and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has voted $420 million in economic aid. The cuts have been advocated by legislators who maintain that President Thieu, seeing American support flagging, will have no alternative but to follow the mandate for a political settlement set forth in the Paris cease-fire agreement.

SAIGON is full of officials and analysts — Vietnamese, Europeans and even some Americans — who are not entirely comfortable with the arguments of either the administration or Congress. They are convinced that Hanoi is determined to reunify Vietnam — if not politically, as the Paris agreement prescribes then militarily. They note that it has been proved conclusively by the United States Army, Marines, Air Force and Navy that the North Vietnamese cannot be dislodged from the south.

SAIGON, then, is left with only one realistic military goal: A continued stalemate in which the government clings to highways, population centers and rice lands. This makes the economy highly vulnerable to disruption but the communists, who can cut major roads, destroy bridges and sabotage factories erected with aid, need a steady flow of supplies.

In fact, the key Americans call South Vietnam's ability to take off economically, and the centerpiece of government economic plans, is precisely the weakest link in the military chain: The rural countryside, where, it is hoped, enough food and timber can be produced to form the basis of substantial export industries that, in turn, can generate employment and foreign exchanges.

The trouble is that the countryside is where the war is being fought. South Vietnam has not been able to export rice since 1964, the last year before the beginning of the American build-up that helped make much of the country unsafe for farming. Last year 6.6 million tons of rice were grown in government-help parts of South Vietnam and 300,000 tons had to be imported.

Analysis

Only the fledgling shrimp and fish industry remains relatively immune to military attack, and shore-based processing plants could still be targets if they become too lucrative.

Students of Hanoi policy believe that the North Vietnamese will do everything they can to prevent South Vietnam's economic development. For it is through the Communist scenario for victory runs something like this: the economy worsens, governmental corruption increases, soldiers and civil servants cannot feed their families and at last, perhaps with a military push, the revolution inundates the crumbling Saigon regime.

This description of Hanoi's strategy, widely accepted now, has led an American diplomat who dissents from the official line to postulate more North Vietnamese military action if American aid is increased and South Vietnam makes economic progress. Conversely, he thinks that less aid would fit Hanoi's prognosis of continuing decline thereby inducing deferment of an all-out offensive.

"If heavy injections of aid really do bring the country to the take-off point," he said, "this guarantees a military solution." — And Saigon cannot win militarily, he observed, adding that the only chance of preserving a non-communist government is through the political mechanism of the Paris agreement — democratic liberties and open general elections.

There are two basic views of the reasons for the lack of political progress since the Paris agreement.

One holds that President Thieu simply wants to retain the power he has carefully accrued and that he has no motive to invite the Vietcong to try to take it from him. He is said to have been angered by the Paris agreement's political aspects when they were presented to him.

The other view — it is generally held by American officials — is that the Communists are blocking a political settlement because they know they could not win a truly free election.

Furthermore, there is a fundamental fear in the government and the American embassy that, if the Vietcong were given the democratic freedom guaranteed by the Paris agreement, they would resort to terrorism. "Democratic freedoms?" an American official scoffed. "This is a pretext. You can't let thousands of armed people run around with mortars and machineguns."

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Thin blood clots slowly

By GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.
Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would like to know what you mean by the "so-called blood thinners." You said excessive use could cause bruises.

I have taken blood thinners for longer than I care to remember. I have never felt it was necessary to take that many or that they do that much good. Why do you call them "so-called" and do they have any other adverse effects? — S.M.M.

I used the term "so-called" because that is the popularly used word. The technical (and more accurate) term is "anticoagulants."

That is, the anticoagulants have the property of retarding the clotting of blood, although other than that they do not markedly change the consistency of the blood. Here is one effect:

If, having normal blood, you get a bump hard enough to break some tiny blood vessels, the blood will clot so rapidly that relatively little of it escapes. But if the blood has been "thinned" with anticoagulants, the blood does not clot so promptly; more of it seeps into the tissues, and presently there is enough to cause a visible bruise. The anticoagulants do not cause the bruises — but they permit them to develop.

Similarly a nick, say from shaving, or any small wound will bleed longer if you are being treated with anticoagulants.

These medications are extremely useful in some cases, chief among them being a heart attack caused by a blood clot; a stroke from a clot; or in acute phlebitis. The treatment combats the risk of another clot forming. The value is counterbalanced by the risk of more bleeding if some wound occurs, so the best protection is to have periodic "pro-time tests," meaning tests to see how long it takes the prothrombin in the blood to form a clot when a clot is needed. Are your "blood thinners" of the truly anticoagulant type or something else?

Dear Doctor: When a certain individual is identified as confirmed "positive" for opiates (44.0), would that mean that he was pretty well hooked? — J.H.S.

US oil supply crisis 'over'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sawhill spoke at a hearing by the House Subcommittee on Communications and Power. The committee has before it various bills to postpone the end of the mandatory oil product allocations that guided supplies during the emergencies of last winter.

"FEA's projections indicate that the supply picture today is remarkably different from that of last November," Sawhill said. "We now estimate that, provided we are able to import crude oil at current levels of 3.5 million barrels per day, the supply of most petroleum products will be adequate through the second quarter of 1975, and should continue to improve thereafter."

But he said that prediction is contingent not only on continued imports but on Americans turning their furnace thermostats to a bit cooler reading this winter.

Sawhill said the FEA projection is that: —Supplies of gasoline will increase by 20 per cent through June of 1975, leaving the country "in a favorable supply situation for next summer."

—Middledistillates, including home heating oil, are in adequate supply for winter, but inventories will get low in the East before winter is over.

—Heavier industrial oils should have no shortage through summer of 1975.

—Kerosene jet fuel and aviation gasoline should be in ample supply.

—But propane and the other liquefied gases "will remain in extremely short supplies."

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There are some "spot shortages" and many price problems, but the "supply crisis" in American petroleum is over, says Federal Energy Administrator John C. Sawhill.

Sawhill told a House subcommittee Tuesday: "We now face the most difficult and challenging phase of any 'temporary' exercise in regulation: the process of disengagement."

He said, the administration thinks the Emergency Petroleum Allocation act should run out on schedule next February, but it would accept a four-month or six-month extension just to smooth out the "disengagement."

"It seems to us an incapable fact, however, that the supply crisis with which the act was designed to deal is now over. The Arab embargo, thankfully, is behind us, and our volume of imports has returned to normal," he said.

"This is not to suggest that serious problems may not continue to exist — both for the petroleum industry and for the consumer if the products — for they clearly may," he said. "We still have spot shortages of certain products, for example ..."

Ford balks at releasing pardon data

(C) Washington Star-News WASHINGTON — President Ford has declined to provide additional background information about the controversial pardon of former President Richard M. Nixon to a Congressional panel investigating the decision.

Responding to a request for details of decisions, discussions and negotiations that led to the pardon, Ford referred the panel, the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Criminal Justice, to official statements on the subject by him and by his chief White House counsel, Philip Bucher.

The subcommittee opened public hearings on the pardon and related events Tuesday, including the appropriateness of disclosing the evidence of possible criminal wrongdoing by the former president.

In a letter to Chairman William L. Hungate, D-Mo., the President implied that the subcommittee know all it needs to know about the decision to grant Nixon total immunity from prosecution.

"The pardon power conferred upon the (President) by Article II, Section 2, of the Constitution needs no elaboration here," Ford wrote. "Nor do the legal decisions relation to pardons. The reasons for my exercise of that constitutional responsibility have already been explained."

Alaska line US oil weapon

(C) Chicago Daily News CHICAGO — The Ford administration says flatly that it gave military priority to the Alaska pipeline project as a counterweapon in the growing oil dispute with Arab nations.

"We're making this move to remove the threat of Arab oil blackmail," said a spokesman for the Federal Energy Administration (FEA).

"We are prepared to take extraordinary steps," Federal Energy Administrator John C. Sawhill Monday invoked the defense production act of 1950 to give contractors on the Alaska oil pipeline top priority in getting materials.

Sawhill explained that the move was aimed at overcoming materials shortages and delays in building the 800-mile pipeline.

But his staff said frankly that the pipeline was classed as a national defense project because of rapidly worsening relations with middle east oil-producing nations.

"The current world situation has become even more dire, with the Arabs rattling sabers again," said the FEA spokesman.

"If the Arabs are going to refer to oil as the 'oil weapon,' we ought to consider any weapons to counter that oil weapon as being in the interests of national defense."

Oil sought
CARACAS (UPI) — Venezuela is considering Cuba's request to buy more than 100,000 barrels of oil per day, indicating that diplomatic relations between the two countries may soon be restored, government sources said today.

Venezuela was the main source of Cuban oil imports until 1963 when the Caracas government broke relations with the regime of Premier Fidel Castro.

Military oil moves danger cited

SHEIKH, Ahmed Al-Yaman, Saudi Arabian minister of petroleum, said in a Chicago address that military intervention against any Arab oil producing nation would result in "worldwide depression and the end of worldwide civilization."

He said his comments were not aimed at President Ford, who spoke on the international oil situation in Detroit Monday. (UPI)

Consumer guard expires

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Legislation to create a consumer protection agency has been filibustered to death for this session of Congress.

US assailed

NEW YORK (UPI) — The President of Venezuela today lashed out at U.S. criticism of rising oil prices, charging that in times past, the developed countries paid "outrageously low prices for our raw materials" and then sold finished products at "ever-higher prices."

President Carlos Andres Perez, in a letter to President Ford that appeared as a full-page ad in today's edition of The New York Times, said that before oil prices began their upward climb about a year ago, "the raw materials produced by (undeveloped) countries were never in proportion to or in equilibrium with the prices of the manufactured goods which our countries require for their development."

In Venezuela, he said, petroleum prices declined steadily over a period of years, "but our country was obliged to purchase manufactured goods from the United States at ever-higher prices."

Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., who is expected to assume chairmanship of the Senate Government Operations Committee next year, said the agency would be the "first order of business — I am confident that next year will bring a new completion to the Senate and with it a new sense of purpose toward protecting the consumer."

Another chief supporter, Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., said the failure to break the filibuster "really represents a failure of our legislative process, since a small minority was able to utterly frustrate the will of the majority of the Senate and the Nation."

Ralph Nader's Public Citizens, Inc., which supported the bill, said: "The automotive industry, the Chamber of Commerce and other corporate interests and the White House have used their enormous resources to defeat by one vote legislation to give consumers a small voice in federal policy making."

Storm's victims battle over food

Relief aid unloaded

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (UPI) — Rescue workers appealed for stepped-up food shipments today to avert mass starvation in hurricane-stricken Honduras and said thousands of flood victims could die of hunger in 48 hours.

An international rescue effort poured tons of supplies into the country, but rescue workers reported widespread looting and said villagers isolated by the storm are fighting each other for the scarce food.

Col. Carlos Rene Pineda, a spokesman for the National Emergency Committee, said Honduras "desperately" needs more helicopters to save thousands of refugees still stranded by the flood.

"We don't know how many people are still isolated without food and water," he said. "But we believe there are many thousands, perhaps tens of thousands. If we don't reach them in 48 hours with food they are going to die of hunger."

The committee said between 7,000 and 8,000 persons died in Hurricane Fifi's floods last Thursday and another 300,000 to 350,000 were left homeless in the raging storm that wrecked about one-third of the nation's economy.

Col. Eduardo Andino, head of the civil defense committee, reported problems in getting food to some refugees. "We were trying to drop food from the air, but we can't because they are fighting for it on the ground," he said.

Andino complained that the United States sent "aircraft carriers loaded with helicopters" when a hurricane hit Honduras in 1954, but sent only six choppers this time.

"This country will be in a state of emergency for a minimum of five years," he said.

The newspaper El Cronista in Tegucigalpa said American helicopter pilots have spotted hundreds more bodies and around 80,000 persons isolated and starving around the cities of El Progreso, El Negrito, Morasan and Urraco in flood-hit northern Honduras.

A government source confirmed that "a lot of these areas haven't been able to report yet and we're still getting reports like that."

Mondale presses Demo choice bid

DULUTH, Minn. (UPI) — Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., has lost little time in making his move to dominate the political territory vacated by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Stepping up his bid for his party's presidential nomination Tuesday night, Mondale told a labor meeting in Duluth he and Kennedy "shared much of the same philosophy and held identical positions on many issues."

Mopping just short of declaring his candidacy for his party's nomination, Mondale admitted he was greatly encouraged by Kennedy's withdrawal from the race.

Recent developments "encourage me even more to believe that this is an idea that just might be possible," Mondale said of his presidential aspirations.

Mondale flew from Washington to address the Minnesota AFL-CIO meeting. He told newsmen he was "99 per cent on the way" to making a decision to seek the Democratic presidential nomination.

He declined to say who he considered the front runner in the field of Democratic contenders, but he said he felt he was "in an excellent position to pick up much of the Kennedy support in the party."

Meanwhile, he picked up the support of former vice president and two-time Democratic presidential nominee Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn.

In a Minneapolis news conference Tuesday night, Humphrey renewed his full support for Mondale. Humphrey said he would not be a candidate himself and would not accept a draft for the nomination.

Many of Mondale's home supporters at the labor convention and within the Democratic Farm Labor party were enthused by the turn of events and confidently predicted Mondale would get the nomination.

Mondale did not openly share that confidence. "I'm not kidding myself," he said. "It's going to be a long tough road and I'm going to need a lot of help. I will need your help — the same kind of help you have given so fully to Hubert Humphrey over the years."

At another point, Mondale told the labor delegates "I want to be very honest with you about this. The odds on this campaign are long. I think our chances are better than many believe. I believe it's worth doing, but I can't do it alone."

Auto sales slump in waning 'year'

DETROIT (UPI) — The 1974 model year is down to its final six days, but auto industry executives show little regret at its passing.

"We are not sorry to see the 1974 model year fade into history," said Richard C. Gerstenberg, chairman of General Motors Corp., in a speech Tuesday in suburban Bloomfield Hills.

The latest evidence that Gerstenberg echoed his fellow auto executives was announced a few hours after he spoke. Mid-September new car sales showed a slump of 17.3 per cent.

It was the next-to-last report for the 1974 model year. Three of the four major automakers reported new car sales fell from 1973 last Sept. 1-10 to 130,091 this year.

But industry sources said Ford Motor Co. would show a substantial boost over mid-September sales last year, possibly up 35 per cent to about 59,900 new cars.

This would reduce the overall industry drop from 17.3 per cent to about 8 per cent.

The reasons for the anticipated Ford boost, industry sources said, were availability of small, economical cars this year and inclusion of some 1975 models in the sales figures.

The "official" 1975 model year starts Oct. 1, but most car companies have allowed dealers to sell next year's models earlier to help them shake the sales doldrums that beset the industry most of this year.

American Motors, the smallest of the major automakers, reported a 30.2 per cent fall in year-to-year car sales—down from 12,425 cars to 8,678 this year, it said a United Auto Workers strike that started Sept. 16 contributed to the decline.

GM said it sold 94,610 new cars in mid-September, compared with 110,369 last year, a dip of 14.3 per cent while Chrysler said its sales fell from 34,397 last year to 26,805 this year, a 22 per cent slump.

The mid-September figures contrasted with the first 10 days of the month, which showed total sales of 142,172, the best year-to-year gain since 1971.

GM delays rotary engine appearance

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. has decided to delay the introduction of its revolutionary rotary engine, the long-awaited alternative to the piston engine that now powers all U.S. cars.

President Edward N. Cole announced the decision Tuesday — one week after another GM executive said the company would introduce the rotary engine next April in its sporty Monza 2 plus 2 model.

The change of plans, Cole said, was caused by the need for more emission control development and concern about future federal emission standards.

There was no indication when a GM car would join the Japanese-made Mazda as the only cars on the market equipped with the rotary engine.

A Mazda spokesman said the GM decision would not affect its own plans. The company expects to sell nearly 80,000 of the rotary powered cars this year.

GM paid $50 million for the right to manufacture and sell the rotary engine and will make the final $5 million installment payment in December.

The engine, called the Wankel engine by some, was first built in 1957 by a West German, Dr. Felix Wankel.

CINCINNATI (UPI) — A sobbing 4-year-old Allison Mechem, kidnapped as she rode a tricycle near her home, was found safe Tuesday in an empty motel room and reunited with her jubilant father, Charles Mechem Jr., board chairman of Taft Broadcasting Co.

The accused kidnaper, a Cincinnati man on parole for armed robberies, turned himself in several hours later and was charged with the abduction.

Blonde-haired, blue-eyed Allison was kidnapped some 24 hours earlier from in front of her suburban Mt. Lookout home Monday evening.

The amount of ransom for which the girl was held varied. Monday night police said an anonymous caller asked for $2,000. But on Tuesday other police sources said the amount had been $40,000. The Cincinnati Enquirer said $120,000 in ransom money was made available but was never picked up.

The girl was rescued after maids in a nearby motel heard her crying inside a locked room and used a passkey to enter. Police arrested Frank Joseph Weichman, 26, for the kidnapping and also held another man, who was not identified, for investigation. An unidentified woman also was being sought for questioning. Weichman and the unidentified man called authorities from a chill restaurant here Tuesday night and turned themselves in.

Despite an all night session of negotiations and ransom "drop off" maneuvers following the kidnapping, authorities credited the curiosity of housekeepers at the motel for the girl's freedom.

Dorothy Pinson said crying had been heard in Room 118 Tuesday morning, but the door was locked and a "Do not disturb" sign hung on the knob.

When crying again was heard near the 4:30 p.m. quitting time, Miss Pinson and another maid got a pass key and investigated.

"There was a little girl, all alone, sitting on the bed with her arms out, crying and watching television," said Miss Pinson. "There was nobody else around. She was almost hysterical from crying."

Police were called and the parents rushed to the motel where they were reunited with their little girl.

The 4-year-old girl was quickly driven home where her father carried her into the house in his arms.

"It's really hard to know what to say," a beaming Mechem said. "First of all, my daughter is safe and she's happy. A doctor examined her and she's well."

Yom Kippur observance

NEW YORK (UPI) — At sundown today, Jews throughout the world begin celebration of Yom Kippur — the most solemn Jewish event of the Jewish calendar.

The holiday, also known as the Day of Atonement, is a period of prayers, fasting and contemplation to repent for sins committed in the previous year.

Services, which begin with the chanting of the Kol Nidre, an ancient Hebrew prayer asking God's forgiveness for past misdeeds, will be celebrated in synagogues throughout the world.

Hopefuls campaign

By United Press International. Needs for more attention to vocational education, stronger laws to control mass gatherings and school accountability were the focus of Idaho political comments Tuesday.

Vern Ravenscroft, Republican candidate for lieutenant governor—while campaigning in Fayette said there is a need for stronger laws to control or prevent damage from mass gatherings.

He said a bill similar to one vetoed three years ago by the incumbent governor would have allowed local authorities to control or prevent gatherings of more than 1,000 persons.

He said police "didn't have the legal tools they needed to enforce the laws that are on the books, such as drug laws," for better crowd control during the Evel Knievel exhibition at the state level.

He said that could be accomplished with strong leadership and assistance from the state level.

Lt. Gov. Jack Murphy—campaigning in Idaho Falls—said he does not need the help of outsiders in his campaign for governor.

Murphy said he feels that governors coming from other states have ulterior motives in helping Idaho candidates.

He was referring to the support given Gov. Cecil Andrus by the governors of Georgia.

Twin Falls. Ezra Moore, a Republican candidate for public instruction superintendent, told a Marsing gathering of the need for more attention to vocational training in the state.

He said Idaho colleges and universities have more applicants for vocational education than they can accept.

The Democratic candidate for public instruction superintendent, Roy Truby—while campaigning in Malad City—said schools need help if they are to become more accountable.

He said that could be accomplished with strong leadership and assistance from the state level.

Lt. Gov. Jack Murphy—campaigning in Idaho Falls—said he does not need the help of outsiders in his campaign for governor.

Murphy said he feels that governors coming from other states have ulterior motives in helping Idaho candidates.

He was referring to the support given Gov. Cecil Andrus by the governors of Georgia.

New Mexico and Oregon. The state of Oregon has always had its eyes on the middle Snake River and minimum flows on the Snake, Murphy said.

The state of New Mexico has a very definite interest in the Snake when it comes to interbasin transfers of water.

In other campaigning Tuesday: Atty. Gen. Tony Park said in Boise the support enforcement and collection service of his office has recovered $599,692 for taxpayers since the first of the year.

Park said since its establishment the unit has collected more than $1.2 million due to the state.

Panel OK's legislation to assure tape custody

(C) New York Times Service. WASHINGTON — The Senate Government Operations Committee approved Tuesday three pieces of legislation designed to preserve government custody of Richard M. Nixon's tapes and papers.

The committee's 340-0 vote came as two other congressional panels dealt with the pardon of former president and the federal money he has sought as a private citizen.

A subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee began consideration of several proposals aimed at insuring full disclosure of all investigative evidence and events leading up to the pardon.

The subcommittee's chairman, Rep. William L. Hungate, D-MO., indicated that he planned to call top aides of President Ford perhaps including W. Buchen, his legal counsel, or John O. Marsh Jr., a counselor to the President — to testify next week about the circumstances surrounding the pardon.

Later in the day, the House Appropriations Committee refitted a step taken last week by one of its subcommittees and voted to cut by more than half the budget request for Nixon's transition to private citizen. The principal measure adopted by the government operations committee would nullify the formal agreement between the Ford administration and Nixon governing the handling of the former president's tapes and papers.

That agreement, signed early this month as arrangements were being completed for Nixon's pardon, gives Nixon control over access to the tapes, permits him to destroy any of them after Sept. 1, 1975, and provides that all the tapes will be destroyed upon Nixon's death or Sept. 1, 1984, whichever comes first.

The bill approved by the committee Tuesday would allow Nixon access to the tapes but would leave them under government control forever and would permit their destruction without further legislation.

The measure was sponsored by senators Gaylord Nelson, D-Wisc.; Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., and Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y.

The widespread disenchantment in Congress over the tapes agreement makes it likely that the bill or one similar to it will be passed before Congress adjourns for the year.

Nixon progress aired

(C) New York Times Service. LONG BEACH, CALIF. — Doctors at Memorial Hospital Medical Center here have begun giving former President Richard M. Nixon injections that by altering his normal blood-clotting mechanism will keep him on the brink of a bleeding state.

The aim of the anticoagulant or blood-thinning treatment — which is a common medical therapy for a wide variety of conditions — is to prevent formation of new blood clots in the phlebitis-damaged veins of Nixon's legs and to help existing blood clots heal.

Nixon's doctors hope that the anticoagulant therapy, combined with bed rest, leg elevation, elastic stockings and other measures, will alleviate the damage that has resulted from his repeated difficulties in days since his resignation.

Anticoagulation is generally considered standard medical therapy for phlebitis and is a complex treatment. Because the dosage of the drug varies from patient to patient, repeated blood tests usually are required to make certain that the dosage is sufficient to achieve a biological effect, yet not too large to pose the risk of unwanted, dangerous bleeding from anywhere in the body.

In a medical bulletin that Dr. John C. Langren, Nixon's personal physician, issued Tuesday afternoon, Long Beach specialist in internal medicine said:

"Anticoagulation therapy was begun after Mr. Nixon's arrival at the hospital Monday and so far he has responded well."

Langren also said: "Former President Nixon is in the process of having the series of special diagnostic studies to which I referred in my statement on Monday." Norman Nager, a hospital spokesman, said that Mrs. Nixon "went a good deal of time" with Nixon: The former president also talked by phone to his daughter, Mrs. Tricia Cox, Monday night.

Langren said, just after Nixon was admitted to the hospital, that all his statements would be specifically approved by Nixon and his family in accordance with medical ethics.

Anticoagulant drugs are administered orally or by injection. The bulletin did not specify what anticoagulant drugs Langren had prescribed for Nixon.

But let's not get into any lengthy lists. Instead let's focus on the totally new Buick. A Buick with a 97-cubic wheelbase that's reasonably priced, economical and fun to drive, and so reliable it can turn the heads of at least two generations. Maybe three.

THE NEW BUICK V-6. A six that we think even you V-8 fans will like.

It's time that we shook up your thinking. Just because if you're like a lot of people, you think of a six as something just to save money when it's simply no longer true because of Buick's new V-6. Something altogether different from a straight-six.

The "vee" design incorporates a shorter crankshaft. The piston stroke is shorter. The engine weighs less than Buick's straight-six. And the horsepower is greater.

All in all, Buick's V-6 shares many of the design concepts of Buick's V-8, but with generally greater fuel economy. One thing's for sure. This engine is going to change the way a lot of people look about six-cylinder engines.

SKYHAWK. Skyhawk is back, with V-6 power, a European steering car-like chassis, and so on. It joins other Apollo models as part of the Excitement Economy Car.

What better way to bring back the Skyhawk name than with a car that bears resemblance — one of America's most impressive mid-sized cars.

Free spirit. Just about everyone has it. Maybe not always a card-carrying, banner-waving sort of spirit. But the need, nevertheless, to express yourself in a car for a moment in time, at least, to be alone against the world.

The choice of an automobile is just such a moment. It involves some very personal and individual decisions. And it represents an opportunity for you to be a free spirit.

It is to that spirit that we dedicate our 1975 Buicks.

SKYHAWK. The smallest Buick in 60 years. And the sportiest ever, obviously.

To tell the truth, we at Buick just can't help chortling about the Skyhawk. Not just because it's something new and different. But because it's so good at being what it's supposed to be. A small and agile little car, rakishly good looking, that can be practical and make your heart beat faster both at the same time.

Naturally, Skyhawk offers standard features dedicated to quick, responsive movement. Buick's new V-6. Front and rear stabilizer bars. Power front disc brakes. GM Specification steel-rated radial-ply tires. A 4-speed manual transmission.

All the right gauges are there, too. Including a standard tachometer.

But let's not get into any lengthy lists. Instead let's focus on the totally new Buick. A Buick with a 97-cubic wheelbase that's reasonably priced, economical and fun to drive, and so reliable it can turn the heads of at least two generations. Maybe three.

BUICK 1975: TO THE FREE SPIRIT

sparty cloth-and-vinyl upholstery, a rally steering wheel, a great new 3.8 liter (231-cubic-inch) V-6 engine, center console, map pockets, and more. Listen, it's no accident that the Skyhawk S/R bears a startling resemblance to a European touring car. We wanted to show what could happen.

to an essentially practical car if essentially rilly things were done to it. But even with the rilly things we've done on it, Skyhawk S/R isn't any less rilly fun to drive.

And it's rilly reasonable in terms of price. It's just that it also happens to be fun to drive... most enjoyable to sit in... and more interestingly appointed than a practical, economical car is supposed to be.

CENTURY REGAL. One of America's most impressive mid-sized cars. Inside. Or under the hood.

You've already had the word on Buick's V-6. How peppery it is. How efficient.

It certainly won't hold its own in the Century if you insist on those two extra cylinders.) Standard equipment includes more than things like deep full-torm seats, carefully refined styling, GM Specification steel-belted radial-ply tires, power steering, Full-Fluo ventilation, a notchback front seat, and so on.

Also standard is a mid-picky kind of attitude toward sound-deadening. Riding smoothness. And toward the quantity and quality of Century's appointments.

That fussiness about things seen and unseen in the Century Regal is what distinguishes it as a Buick. And what makes it — we said it before, but it bears repeating — one of America's most impressive mid-sized cars.

ELECTRA PARK AVENUE. Anytime you can buy a Buick this spectacularly well, you need wonder off looking for something better.

The Electra Park Avenue is the most elegantly appointed Buick ever built. You get a hint from the special "buick" vinyl top that something special is going on here. But we'd have to say that the real story is on the inside (as it really should be in any luxury car worthy of the title).

In front, you have individual easy-chair seating for both driver and front passenger. And all the seating is covered with velour, loosely draped like on fine furniture, and very soft.

Overhead, more velour —

Electric Park Avenue 4-door Hardtop

Just as soft and just as rich looking. Even the extra-large console is covered with velour.

The center panel of the shaft variety. Not so unusual in a fine home, but special indeed in an automobile.

Then there are the little touches. Like the trim pieces by designed instrument panel. The power windows. The super-accurate quartz-crystal digital clock.

Big touches. Little touches. They all make the Electra Park Avenue a most remarkable automobile.

LA SABRE. It's the only Buick that's an American family car from a position of no ordinary.

That's the nice thing about dealing with Buick. You don't find a lot of corner-cutting creeping into the scene. So when you finally decide that the family car is going to be a LaSabre, the rewards are visible and immediate.

Saying, "There's most decidedly nothing down-hill about it. LaSabre is a richly designed, beautifully turned-out automobile. Well, look at it.

Performance. The 5.7 liter V-8 has High-Energy Ignition and several other refinements that help increase operating performance. (More on that a little later.)

So the conclusion is the kind that has given Buick its reputation for smoothness. And let's not forget standard GM Specification steel-belted radial-ply tires. Or forward-mounted steering linkage. And so on.

Interior. Thick, heavy cushioning — richly upholstered. An instrument panel that's both elegant and convenient. Thick carpeting. Quality appointments abound.

Some family car.

RIVIERA. It's hard to believe that anything this well-built and richly appointed can be so easy to drive. To really understand Riviera, you've got to take your eyes off the square headlamps, ignore all the luxury for a moment, and fix your attention directly on the following:

A standard 7.5 liter V-8 engine with High-Energy Ignition and a 100-hp. torque promoting refinement.

GM Specification steel-belted radial-ply tires. Front steering bar and four coil springs. Highly readable and informative instrumentation.

Then you have to drive Riviera. Only then can you appreciate the classic styling. The standard power windows. The standard notch-back seating. The standard tilt steering wheel. And all the other creature comforts Riviera indulges you with.

The point is that you appreciate Riviera for the very special kind of car it is. Luxurious. But a little snobbish. But more than prepared to hold its own in motion.

MAXIMUM MILEAGE SYSTEM. We've provided every 1975 Buick with certain standard equipment that has collectively come to be called the Buick Maximum Mileage System. Because it represents the most advanced engineering and technology Buick can offer for 1975. It includes three basic elements.

One, a catalytic converter. Two, High-Energy Ignition. Three, steel-belted radial-ply tires. Now we could wax technical here and end up confusing you, bewildering you, or both. So we choose not to. Suffice it to say that the System does much to give every Buick engine more efficiently. Spark plugs fire more dependably and last longer than in the 1974 Buicks. The engine is the best for operating economy and the tires offer lower rolling resistance.

The key to the Buick's Maximum Mileage System is really quite simple. It works.

Scientists search for legendary Bigfoot

Studies in Spain

SHOSHONE — A former Shoshone boy, Scott Stevenson, left recently for Orate, Guepuzcoa, Spain, where he will attend the college at San Lorenzo.

Stevenson is an art major and will be learning the Spanish language and studying history along with his art studies.

About 80 American college students enrolled for the foreign study program. Stevenson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Stevenson, Boise; is a 1972 graduate of Shoshone High School and went to Boise State University for two years.

He expects to return to the states in June or July next year, after completing the school term in Spain.

COUGAR, Wash. (UPI) — A group of scientists is on a serious search for the legendary man-beast "Bigfoot," also known in various parts of the world as "Sasquatch" or "Yeti."

The "latest" search was triggered by the finding of "apparently human hair" near huge, man-like footprints near St. Helens. Robert W. Morgan, director of the American Yeti Expedition, said from a search base camp Monday that the hair and giant footprints were found about a month ago by trackers in a dense forest. The trackers were on a trail when they rounded a hillside and came upon a small stream. As they started to cross the creek, they noticed a very fresh scuff mark on a moss-covered rock. That was where the hair strands were found. Morgan said the trackers spotted huge man-like footprints nearby. The prints went up the stream about 20 yards, then circled above the trackers before the trail disappeared. "That's exactly the movement a primate would make if it was wishing to observe while not being observed," Morgan suggested. "I'm not saying it was a Bigfoot, but it's unlikely that a hair-totaled human would be running around in that area. And if it was a human, why would he want to hide from two other humans?" Mary Joe Flores, a microbiologist from Portland, Ore., examined the hair and concluded it was human, probably from an ankle or leg. Morgan said. Morgan said analysis of the hair will continue, including comparison with hair he found two years ago on a fence near a spot where deer and cattle had been savagely killed and where large footprints also were discovered. "If it was a Bigfoot, then it opens up many new doors," said Morgan, who has led a group of scientists and trackers this summer in a search for the creature. "It's something we're very excited about." He said the hunt for a Bigfoot would continue in the southwestern Washington area "until the snow flies."

Rumsfeld new aide for Ford

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Donald Rumsfeld, a young Turk in his days as a GOP congressman 10 years ago, has replaced Alexander M. Haig as the top White House aide to President Ford. Rumsfeld, 42, returns to Washington from his current post as ambassador to NATO as soon as President Ford names a successor to him.

Haig headed Ford's team of transition advisers and previously served as a counselor to former President Richard Nixon, director of the Office of Living Council, head of the war on poverty and congressman from Illinois' 13th District.

Haig's departure means "it's a Ford White House now and it's not a Nixon White House,"

World record

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (UPI) — A 23-year-old Cal Poly student claimed a world record by swallowing 436 one-inch gold fish over the weekend to better the previous record of 300.

Dave Lavy, guinea the bright orange fish in less than two hours to claim first prize — a 55-gallon aquarium — presented by the fish store that sponsored the event. The contest attracted over 16 entrants. Second place finisher Duane English downed 400 fish before giving up.

Wilson claims inflation drop

LONDON (UPI) — The Conservative and Liberal parties — Tuesday — slammed Prime Minister Harold Wilson for claiming a "dramatic" drop in inflation in Britain. But Wilson said his claim is accurate.

"They say the inflation rate is running at 20 per cent. We say it has been running at 8.4 per cent in the past three months," Wilson said at his daily election campaign news conference.

"We believe we shall be able to get it to settle down at about 10 per cent by the end of 1975."

Conservative party Chairman — William Whitelaw — accused the Labor government of "some cunning manipulation of figures."

Liberal party leader Jeremy Thorpe said, "I must say the government is applying some plastic surgery to the true figures. This is the height of irresponsibility."

The three parties battled over the inflation crisis at the news conferences each in holding duty until the Oct. 10 general election.

Wilson ordered the election in a bid to win a new five-year mandate with a strong parliamentary majority to deal with inflation.

Thorpe, speaking by closed circuit television from his voting district in North Devonshire, told his party's news conference he expects another Labor party member of Parliament to defect "by midnight" tonight. He refused to identify him.

Wilson said at his news conference he knew nothing about this.

Two former Wilson government ministers have quit the Labor party recently to protest alleged trade union and left-wing domination of the party. They were Christopher Mayhew, a former minister — and former Disraeli minister — and former party minister — and former Disraeli minister — Lord Chalfont.

Wilson spent considerable time answering Conservative and Liberal party charges that Labor had faked the statistics on inflation.

Luncheon costs aides $15

NEW YORK (UPI) — Economists summoned to a government conference on inflation Monday got a room free for their meeting and were flown to New York on Air Force jets, but they paid $15 apiece for their lunch.

Arthur M. Okun, of the Brookings Institution, Washington, D.C., said he didn't get much for his $15 and suggested the economists propose a price stabilization board on lunches.

The 24 economists, charged by President Ford to come up with ideas on how to control inflation, met in the ornate Empire Room of the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, where singer Peggy Lee performs nightly for dinner guests at a minimum of $2.50 for a meal and a single cocktail.

Bernie Schindler, the hotel's convention manager, said the government wasn't charged the regular $1,000 fee for use of the room because the hotel, part of the Hilton chain, wants "to help our part to fight inflation."

"We're not even going to charge them for the five boxes of paper clips we sent down," he said.

Training session concludes today

TWIN FALLS — About 30 women are attending a three-day Inservice daycare center training session sponsored by the Idaho Migrant Council.

Daycare staff members from Twin Falls, Paul, Blackfoot and Aberdeen centers look part in the sessions held Monday, Tuesday and today at the Edwards School.

The sessions are scheduled to acquaint daycare workers with different components of organizing and operating a daycare center. The center operated by the Migrant Council has been in operation since mid-July and will close in early October, with operation for next year focusing around the same dates.

Staff members aiding in the sessions are Janice Santa Marie from the central office in Boise; Catherine Lyman, a curriculum specialist, and Jan Scott, a social service worker.

Discussion centered on the administrative area of a daycare center — how to operate a center, the budget, evaluating programs, and evaluating staff.

The educational program is also studied, as well as parent involvement, recruiting volunteers, health and nutrition.

Land, water use study planned in Bellevue

By BARTQUESNELL
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — A three-year multi-agency study of water and land development in the Bellevue triangle will probably begin this fall.

Data will be gathered on present and future land use south and east of Bellevue and will concentrate primarily on water use for irrigation and domestic uses.

The study was outlined last week by Steven Allred, chief planner for the Idaho Department of Water Resources. Allred told participants in a Soil Conservation Society of America meeting here his department was preparing to install a water metering gauge along Silver Creek as the first step in the study.

The gauge is intended to give an indication of water levels during high and low irrigation seasons in the Bellevue triangle.

The gauge is intended to give an indication of water levels during high and low irrigation seasons in the Bellevue triangle.

The gauge will help experts determine if sprinkler irrigation methods are depleting water levels in Silver Creek. Over 8,000 acres of triangle land were once irrigated by flooding water diverted from Big Wood River, according to soil conservationists Doug Bishop.

Flood irrigation water sinks deep beneath the surface and eventually percolates into Silver Creek and its tributaries.

Only half of the 8,000 acres, Bishop said, is now flood irrigated. One-fourth of the land is sprinkler irrigated, he said, and about one-fourth has been purchased for land development speculation.

Sprinkler irrigation has conserved much water and increased crop production two fold according to Blaine County extension agent, Jim Eakin. However, large amounts of water once used to flood, irrigate before sprinklers were installed is escaping down Big Wood River into Magic Reservoir.

Water levels in Silver Creek may decrease, according to Bishop. If a solution to replenishing excess water being conserved by sprinklers and now flowing down Big Wood River is not found, well tests will be conducted to evaluate water flow and to assure minimum well spacing to avoid interference in the water table system.

Snow course readings will be taken to measure total impact on the recharge system to Silver Creek and make possible stream flow forecasts.

In addition, a water quality sampling program is scheduled which will establish a base of data for development planning purposes.

Various agency heads agree water users south of Blaine County hold water rights which must be maintained and preserved. The Idaho Fish and Game Department thinks the Silver Creek fishery may begin to diminish if lower levels continue.

Blaine, Camas, Lincoln and Gooding counties will be involved in the study. The Wood River Resource Area, under the direction of Gordon (Whitey) Price, will coordinate the effort of the four counties.

According to Allred the three-year project may cost $300,000 to $400,000. Several Idaho agencies will be needed to supply information. The Idaho Fish and Game Department, Soil Conservation Service, Department of Water Resources, Bureau of Mines, University of Idaho Extension Services, the US Corps of Engineers as well as county agencies will be involved.

Other funding procedures are not yet outlined. Price said the four counties will have to share the cost of the program. The state will match county funds, Price said.

Work done by volunteers can be counted as in-kind payment and use as a county match for state funds, he said.

The plan can be used as a tool by the planning and zoning commission to answer questions of water resource related to development, according to an assistant research professor for the University of Idaho.

Charles E. Brockway, U of I Research and Extension center, Twin Falls, said the plan could be used to develop a computer model of the entire Big Wood River watershed to help in development decisions facing the county.

Data from the computer readout could help the commission with zoning restriction decisions and give an indication where land development might be limited. A water sampling program will establish that base for planning purposes.

Idaho game featured at Gem confab

TWIN FALLS — County officials from throughout Idaho are in Twin Falls today for the opening sessions of the annual meeting of the Idaho Association of Commissioners and Clerks.

Sessions will continue at the Holiday Inn through Friday morning when officials will elect and install new officers.

During the convention the group will be playing a game called "Idaho Tomorrow." This is a game devised by the University of Idaho Political Science Department to bring out information and public views on Idaho resources and potentials.

DeWayne Dancome of the university will conduct the game during the county officials' meeting by asking members of the association to assume the role of residents of a mythical county and to bring out problems and views on these problems and needs. Topics covered include such matters as growth, development, environmental, population and economic aspects.

Those playing the game also make suggestions for solutions to the problems and needs of their mythical county.

The Thursday agenda is an address by Stanley Smoot, Bountiful, Utah, who is president of the National Association of Counties.

Panel discussions today and Thursday are scheduled to air problems and situations concerning the association of administering government at the county level. Clerks and commissioners will discuss items ranging from weed control to election and taxation laws at the county level.

County officials of the Magic Valley area are serving as hosts for the three-day state meeting.

Jump victim identified

TWIN FALLS — Sheriff Paul Order said this morning Mr. and Mrs. Charles Walter Gilbert, Oakbrook Terrace, Ill., have identified a body found below Shoshone Falls Sunday as that of their son.

Mrs. Gilbert arrived in Twin Falls early today by plane and viewed the body at the mortuary accompanied by Sheriff Order and County Coroner Joyce Edwards.

She said it is that of their son Charles Walter Gilbert, 25, who has been living in Ft. Collins, Colo., and Lake Tahoe, Calif., the past several years. He was in Twin Falls for the Snake River canyon jump Sept. 8. Order said he either jumped or fell from Shoshone Falls to the river below.

Death is believed to have resulted from drowning.

The badly decomposed body was found by two Homedale youths Sunday after it surfaced just below the falls.

Efforts have been underway since Sunday to identify the body. Sheriff Order was able to locate the parents after finding a young man, who knew Gilbert had said he planned to jump from the top into the canyon.

Gilbert was traced to Ft. Collins where a former landlord and former girl friend assisted officers in locating the parents near Chicago.

USUALLY a quiet spot, the old railroad depot at Shoshone was teeming with activity today as the Junior Old Time Railroad employees prepared to leave following the annual convention in Sun Valley which concluded today. The 18 passenger car train pulled by a diesel engine took delegates back to their homes in Omaha, Salt Lake City, Portland, Seattle, Reno and Butte among other cities.

JEROME — Residents of Jerome will have an opportunity to hear reports and recommendations for renewal of the downtown area in a special meeting at 8 p.m. Thursday.

A report compiled during the summer by the University of Idaho deals with the city of Jerome and needs for restoring the downtown area and possibly providing additional parking space.

The meeting will be held in the courtroom of the Jerome County Courthouse with two university instructors, Ron Wells and Kig Eder, making the presentation. A printed report of the three-week study will be available at the time of the meeting.

Preliminary reports of the study also include a plan for a complete updating of the downtown shopping center with a mall concept including landscaping, remodeling of store fronts and many plantings.

No Injuries

HEYBURN — A school bus with 50 Heyburn students aboard was involved in a traffic accident early Tuesday morning, but there were no injuries reported.

Idaho State Police reported the collision between the bus, driven by Dan Hellewell, 26, Heyburn, and a pickup truck driven by Leonard R. H. Hatfield, occurred about 7:55 a.m. at the junction of US 30 and 18th Street in Heyburn.

Pickens was driving a truck owned by Mitchell Construction Co. of Pocatello when the accident occurred. Damage to the school bus was estimated at $900.

Cpl. Stimpson, ISP, said Pickens was cited for driving while under the influence.

Construction delayed

JEROME — The construction of the Jerome County Courthouse addition has been delayed by a labor strike and removal of excessive rock at the site.

Skip Goddard, coordinator of the project contracted to Nielsen and Co., Twin Falls, said today, "removal of lava rock beneath the surface of the ground" required 22 days of organization and removal.

Keith Sunberg, son of the addition's original architect C.A. Sunberg, Idaho Falls, designed the building, according to Goddard.

Pleads innocent

RUPERT — Lucille Ellison entered a plea of innocent to the charge of assault with intent to commit murder in a hearing today before Fifth District Judge Sherman J. Bellwood.

The 44-year-old Rupert woman is being charged with the attempted murder of her 70-year-old husband, Edgar Ellison, on Sunday.

Mrs. Ellison was arraigned this morning at 9 a.m., pleading innocent by reason of mental defect. The court ordered a psychiatric evaluation.

Represented by public defender Herman E. Bedke, Mrs. Ellison had been arraigned in magistrate court Monday. She waived her right to a preliminary hearing and was bound over to district court for today's arraignment.

Cameraman files suit against Ebel

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — NBC news television cameraman James P. Watt Jr., filed a $1.1 million civil damage suit Monday against Ebel Knievel, charging the motorcycle daredevil poked and shoved him during an argument before Knievel's attempt to rocket across the Snake River Canyon.

Watt filed suit against Knievel, and his sponsor and promoter — Synergistics Inc., and Top Rank Inc. — for $100,000 in general damages and $1 million in punitive damages over the incident at the Idaho jump site Sept. 4.

Watt was among photographers and cameramen who annoyed Knievel by urging him to stand up and pose smiling. Angry words led to a tussle in which Knievel pushed Watt's camera into his face and poked Watt with his famous $22,000 gold-and-diamond-crusted cane.

About 50 atomic reactors are operating under AEC licenses, he said. Several others are under construction, "but I don't know what the total number is," he said.

The AEC last week ordered 21 of the 50 operating plants to close down within the next 60 days to check for cracks in the pipes of their cooling systems. The plants produce commercial electric power and are owned by public or private utility firms.

Hoever described the danger of a malfunction in the cooling systems:

"If there was a loss of coolant accident," the emergency core cooling system should take over automatically. "If that works well, there would just be a clean-up needed. But if the emergency system fails, the nuclear fuel rods could heat up and burst or melt, releasing deadly radioactive gas."

The gas should be trapped inside the "containment" shell of the power plant. But if there are any leaks in the shell, some of the gas could escape into the atmosphere. The gases, then would be dispersed, harming no one, or held at ground level, where they could be fatal.

Hoever admitted that there were a lot of "ifs" in his description. He stressed, however, that all possible dangers should be eliminated.

The AEC is granting nuclear plant licenses without complete safety testing because the need for power growth has been given a high priority, according to Hoever.

"I think we have a philosophy of continued growth is creating problems," he said. "I think what our nation has adopted an irrational

Unapproved herbicide use stops some spud sales

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News writer

BOISE — An estimated 12,000 to 15,000 acres of Idaho potatoes sprayed with an unapproved herbicide cannot be marketed without federal approval, according to Wilson Kellogg, director of the Idaho Department of Agriculture.

But Kellogg believes the US Environmental Protection Agency will either grant a temporary tolerance of herbicide Sencor residue in spuds or will permanently register the chemical before the sprayed potatoes go bad.

He said that Sencor, a brand name for the chemical metribuzin, is not dangerous to humans. The chemical is registered for use on spuds in Canada and has EPA approval for use on soybeans in the United States.

He said the IDA now estimates that between 12,000 and 15,000 acres of potatoes in Idaho were sprayed with the unregistered herbicide. About 37,000 acres of spuds were planted in the state this year.

To insure the crop sprayed with metribuzin will not be lost, Kellogg said the IDA has requested the EPA temporarily to allow up to 0.1 per cent of one-part per million of the chemical in potatoes. Currently no amount of metribuzin residue is allowed.

But even if this request is not granted, the sprayed potatoes could be stored until the EPA grants registration, he said.

But Leland Davis, manager of field development at Chem-Agro, said the EPA normally takes a year to register a chemical once an application has been made. He said Chem-Agro will apply for registration soon.

William Fruedl, consumer safety officer for the EPA, said the agency expects to make a decision on the herbicide in early winter.

UP rail line 'real loser'

By BARTQUESNELL
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — The Union Pacific rail line between Ketchum and Richfield "is a real loser," a company spokesman said Monday.

Armond Taylor, UP traffic manager from Boise, said company officials from the Omaha head office had completed a detailed study of the 54.19 mile branch line.

"They wouldn't consider abandonment," Armond said. "If the line was not losing money," Taylor, along with three other company officials, talked with UP customers last week informing them UP may soon file an abandonment application of the Richfield - Ketchum line to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Taylor said only four customers now are using UP services on the line. Anderson Lumber Co. and A.C. Houston Lumber Co. of Ketchum use the service periodically.

Manhattan Resources of Salt Lake City since July is regularly hauling barite ore from Halley. Silver Creek Supply, Pico, ships grain in the fall and orders carloads of fertilizer in the spring, Taylor said.

Taylor said there are no other regular customers. The two lumber companies receive

"maybe two cars a year." The shipment of barite ore has been continued for only a few months.

Silver Creek Supply, owned by Bud Purdy, is the only regular user of the UP service.

"We wanted to call on the people and tell them the situation so there was no thought of uncertainty," Taylor said. "We want the people to have an opportunity to think over how it would affect their operation."

"Taylor said he did not know when papers for abandonment would be filed, but indicated Union Pacific suggested they would definitely go through with the filing.

"The study has already been made," he said. "I think that tells you your answer. The cost of continuing that operation is a loser."

Taylor said company officials in Omaha had figures to back up their abandonment plans and would present them during hearings required by law.

Although Taylor said he had never been involved in an abandonment procedure, he thought UP would take the track signals, ties and all other equipment on the line if the abandonment was granted. Steel is the important item which UP would need, he said.

Magistrate appointed

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Paul T. Smith, 33, an assistant attorney general in Twin Falls, has been named to the third magistrate position in Twin Falls County.

He was informed of his appointment Tuesday by Fifth Judicial District Court senior judge, Charles Scoggin, Gooding. He was one of four attorneys seeking the legal magistrate position in the county.

Smith came to Twin Falls in January 1973 as resident attorney general here, and has resided in the area since. He is a native of Washington, D.C., and a graduate of the law school of the California Western University in San Diego. He is a member of the bar in three states including Idaho, California and Indiana.

Smith is married to a former Indiana resident. He and his wife, Beth, have two children, ages 3 and 2 years.

Members of the Magistrate Commission, headed by Judge Scoggin and including 11 other members, selected Smith to fill the post. The commission includes the heads of county commissions in the Magic Valley counties plus the mayors of Twin Falls, Kimberly and Rupert.

Several other magistrate positions are expected to be filled this year to keep the lower court needs filled. Blaine and Minidoka County have retiring magistrates this year.

Smith said he will accept the new position here by Nov. 1, and prior to that if a new assistant attorney general is named for the Twin Falls position.

Plans are underway for additional space in the Twin Falls County judicial building by the addition of a second story.

Until that time, county commissioners plan to move the traffic court magistrate, Judge Reed P. Maughan, to the third floor of the main courthouse. Smith will share court space with the judicial building with Magistrate Daniel Meehl.

Expert quits job to publicize dangers

He would be dispersed, harming no one, or held at ground level, where they could be fatal.

Hoever admitted that there were a lot of "ifs" in his description. He stressed, however, that all possible dangers should be eliminated.

The AEC is granting nuclear plant licenses without complete safety testing because the need for power growth has been given a high priority, according to Hoever.

"I think we have a philosophy of continued growth is creating problems," he said. "I think what our nation has adopted an irrational energy policy. It's just growth for the sake of growth."

The policy should be changed, calling for "getting along with less energy than projected" for future, he said.

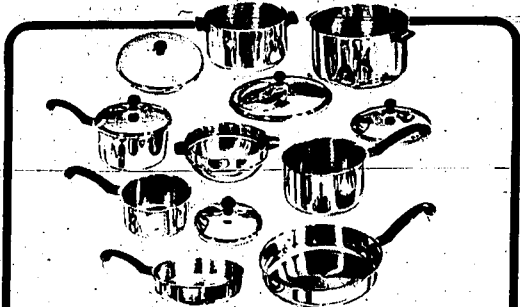

Hoever said he will move from Idaho Falls to Cambridge, Mass., where he will join the Union of Concerned Scientists, a group funded by "hundreds of thousands of people."

"I feel that I can bring some of the questions up better by working through public interest groups," he said.

Boston drops Yanks twice; Orioles win

NEW YORK (UPI) — Luis Tiant and Tom Seaver each pitched complete games Tuesday night when the Boston Red Sox swept a doubleheader from New York, 4-0 and 4-2, to drop the Yankees into second place in the American League Eastern division race.

The two losses, before an already paid crowd of 43,438, left the Yankees one-half game behind the Baltimore Orioles, who won their game with the Detroit Tigers.

A dozen or so fights, including three major ones, broke out during the second game and the umpires warned the crowd several times to stop throwing objects onto the field.

Cal tops K.C.; Ryan fans nine

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Rookie John Balaz drove in three runs in the first two innings with a homer and single Tuesday night, allowing Nolan Ryan and the California Angels to cruise to a 9-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Ryan, 31-15, yielded only five hits and struck out nine, running his major league-leading strikeout total to 352. It was Ryan's 25th complete game of the season.

OAKLAND (UPI) — Gene Tenace's third grand slam homer of the season lifted the Oakland A's to a 5-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins Tuesday night and reduced their AL West division-climbing magic number to four.

Oakland now leads the second place Texas Rangers by five games. The A's have seven games to play and the Rangers have nine.

Tenace, who now has a single season career high of 25 homers, tagged loser Joe Decker in the fourth inning. Bert Campaneris had led off the inning with a double. Claudell Washington beat out an infield hit and Sal Bando walked to load the bases and set the stage for Tenace.

Wood done for year

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wilbur Wood, a 20-game winner for the Chicago White Sox for the fourth consecutive year, has been excused from duty because of an injury and sent home for the rest of the season. The club announced Tuesday that the pudgy southpaw now holds a club record for the most consecutive seasons of 20 games or more.

The Sox excused him after he was re-examined by Dr. William Meltzer, an orthopedic surgeon.

Wood was hit last June by a ball from the bat of Oakland outfielder Jesus Alou last Saturday night. Meltzer said that x-rays showed no broken bones.

WFL Wheels file for bankruptcy

DETROIT (UPI) — The Detroit Wheels, saddled with the most serious financial problems in the World Football League, filed for bankruptcy in a federal court Tuesday.

In a petition filed under the U.S. Bankruptcy Act, the club listed debts exceeding $2.5 million.

The action came, as the Detroit team, which actually played its "home" games in Ypsilanti Mich., about 40 miles away, prepared to meet the New York Stars in New York.

U.S. District Court Judge Henry G. Hockett signed an order summoning representatives of the WFL to his court Oct. 3 for discussions on the move.

Detroit was plagued with the worst record in the league and lowest attendance—an overall 1-12 record and 56,320 spectators in five games at Ypsilanti.

Wheels President Louis Lee said it still was not certain what would happen to the team.

"What it means is we can't pay our bills," Lee said in New York. "I'm not sure what it means to the team because the league already has assumed our financial obligations."

The first word for Wheels employees came when club attorney Erwin Ziegelman telephoned the news to tell employees to lock the doors.

Employees said they were not paid 10 days ago and some said they were planning to refuse to work until they received their money.

Under the bankruptcy law, sale of the Wheels is blocked until after the Oct. 3 hearing.

Pirates knock Cards into second place

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Dave Parker's two-run, pinch-singled capped a four-run sixth inning rally Tuesday night and Willie Stargell added a three-run homer to enable the Pittsburgh Pirates to take first place away from St. Louis in the National League east with a 7-3 victory over the Cardinals.

The Pirates loaded the bases in the sixth when Rennie Stennett and Manny Sanguillen singled and St. Louis starter John Curtis hit Willie Stargell with a pitched ball. Richie's Zisk's groundout scored Stennett and Curtis then intentionally walked. Bob Robertson and also passed Richie Heberner to force in Sanguillen.

Mike Garman came on in relief and Parker, who has a .476 lifetime batting average against the Cardinals, greeted him with a two-run bloop single to left.

Boise State remains third in rankings

NEW YORK (UPI) — Louisiana Tech, last year's Division II national champion and now possessor of the longest winning streak in college football, edged by Western Kentucky into the top spot in the United Press International Board of Coaches' small college rankings.

The Bulldogs blasted Texas-Arlington 42-15, while the Hilltoppers were idle Saturday to wrest away the No. 1 ranking.

Additionally, Penn State was upset by Navy and Miami, Ohio, played a 7-7 tie with Purdue, snapping each team's 13-game winning streak.

Louisiana Tech currently rides the crest of a 14-game streak and has lost only once in its last 20 games.

The Bulldogs collected only nine first-place votes to Western Kentucky's 11, but Louisiana Tech surpassed the Hilltoppers in total points, 244-223.

Boise State again was third and Delaware advanced a notch to fourth. Tennessee State rebounded from its opening game defeat with a victory and climbed one spot in the rankings to fifth.

Ablene Christian was sixth and Troy State, which received a single first-place vote, was seventh.

Big Ten conference helps shift ratings

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Big Ten is alive and kicking. Just ask Oregon State, Colorado, Nebraska, UCLA or Stanford.

Ohio State flattened Oregon State to continue as No. 1 in the United Press International Board of Coaches' top 20, and four other conference members had a big hand in the new look of this week's ratings.

Michigan shut out Colorado, 31-0, to advance a notch to fourth in the latest ratings, while the Big Ten's Wisconsin dropped Nebraska from third to ninth and Iowa kicked UCLA out of the top 20 altogether.

Wisconsin, which surprised the Cornhuskers 21-20, was ranked 10th this week and Illinois, which defeated Stanford 41-7, was 19th.

clubs, ruffed a third club and played the king of hearts. We won't go into the merit of South playing the king of hearts earlier. That didn't matter. What did matter is that when East showed out on the first heart, South conceded a trump one.

He didn't have to. He should have played all the high trumps and led clubs. If West didn't ruff, South could throw him in with the last trump.

Whenever West gained the lead he would have to play spades. He could cash his queen then he would have to lead to dummy's jack of spades which would have become good. If he trumped the fourth club South would have a trump remaining to get back to his hand to cash his fifth club.

"Why didn't you double five diamonds?" roared North. "What's wrong with picking up 800 points above the line?"

"When you made that silly jump to four hearts it never occurred to me that you held an ace, king, jack and a useless queen. I thought you had some concept of correct bidding," replied South.

"The argument may still be going on for all we know. We see merit on both sides. Certainly North would have bid three, not four, hearts and certainly South should have doubted five diamonds, but, neither partner noticed that South should have made his doubled contract.

He started out by putting dummy's ace of spades on West's king. Then he finessed the queen of clubs successfully, cashed his ace of

DEAR ABBY: In your reply to "Scared," who was dating a young man who had been arrested for indecent exposure, you recommended that if the man claimed to have had therapy, she should ask to talk to his therapist. As a practicing therapist, I must take exception to that advice. If I were confronted with such a request, I would have to explain that to do so would be violating professional ethics.

I know of one psychiatrist who was successfully sued for divulging information under similar circumstances. This is as it should be, since the therapist is the agent of the patient, not of others.

"Scared" should obtain information about exhibitionism in general from a professional in the mental health field (not from her boyfriend's therapist, if he has one).

NEW YORK PSYCHIATRIST

More about exhibitionist

DEAR PSYCHIATRIST: I did not suggest that the young woman should attempt to get privileged information from her boyfriend's therapist without the boyfriend's consent.

It would seem that if the boyfriend had indeed had treatment and the girl was in no danger by continuing to go with him, he would be eager for her to talk to his therapist for reassurance.

If a patient asked you to talk to his girl friend, would you then refuse to see her?

DEAR ABBY: This is in reference to the family who, when relaxing outdoors at a barbecue, or just sitting and visiting, were always "joined" by a neighbor, who stayed until they went inside, even when they were entertaining guests.

You advised the writer to either suffer the intruder's presence, or tell her that you'd like a little privacy.

May I add another solution? Why not build a six-foot fence?

AL CENTENO, HOUSTON, TEXAS

DEAR AL: That's a pretty sneaky way to get a plug in for the fence business, but it's a good idea for those who can afford it. How about a moat stocked with crocodiles?

DEAR ABBY: I have had it! All summer long we ran a free hotel for my husband's relatives. His sister and her husband came for six weeks. His brother and his wife came for two weeks. (The brother used my car, so I had to take taxis the whole time!) Others took turns. We had company from June 1st until after Labor Day.

No one offered to give me a lift with the work, and my grocery bills were like, forget it. Nobody even picked up the tab when we ate out. (We are supposed to be "the poor relatives" compared to them.)

I've put up with this for three summers, and I'm sick of it. How can I keep this from happening next summer short of divorcing my husband? He's a soft touch.

HAD IT IN WISCONSIN.

DEAR HAD IT: They're your husband's relatives. HE should tell them what the ground rules shall be for future visits. If he refuses, then YOU tell them. And if you don't, you can expect a re-run of the last three summers and every summer henceforth. And if it happens, don't complain. You're both a couple of soft touches.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped self-addressed envelope, please. How to write letters? Send $1 to Abigol Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

Michigan woman calls for sugar boycott

ST. CLAIR SHORES, Mich. (UPI) — Beverly Ribaud's daughter turns 12 this week, but there will be no birthday cake.

A new sign above their suburban Detroit home proclaims: "We can't afford to be sweet anymore."

The Ribauds haven't turned bitter. Instead, they say they can no longer afford to buy sugar.

Mrs. Ribaud, 42, said she has watched the price of five pounds of sugar go up $1.30 since January.

To protest the skyrocketing price, she has started a 10-day boycott of sugar and is calling up her neighbors and everyone she sent Christmas cards to last year asking them to call five friends to support her cause.

"I just hate to see a housewife go into a supermarket and willingly pay almost $2 for a bag of sugar," she said. "She's being taken advantage of."

"Every night my husband comes home and sits down to eat and I complain about how much it costs me to make him a meal. He doesn't want to hear about it. He can't help me."

She said she feels it's going to take the federal government a long time to do anything about high prices and "I think none of the hipsters are going to help the ordinary housewife."

"We just have to do it ourselves."

As for her daughter Lisa's birthday on Wednesday, Mrs. Ribaud said they'll celebrate with watermelon, not cake.

Can't do it yourself? Then check the Want Ads for those who can.

Mercury 'shot' by Mariner

Army lists openings for radio

TWIN FALLS — SFC Jimmy Hughes, local Army representative, said today the Army has a number of openings for radio operators.

He said the electronic skill that may be required as a radio operator may prove helpful as the job market becomes increasingly oriented to telecommunications.

According to Sergeant Hughes, the responsibilities of an Army radio operator include setting up and maintaining equipment, operating generators and transmitting and receiving messages. He said the operator would decode Morse Code messages and, when required, apply anti-jamming devices to the communications network.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1974

GENERAL TENDENCIES Excellent day and p.m., to decide on your aims, the means of attaining them, and the friends with whom you can enjoy life. Be outgoing.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Good day to get together with as many pals as you can at social functions and have a good time. You can reach some fine-personal aim, thusly.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20) Others are pleased today by the way you handle your job, and they will give you the backing you need for some pet interest.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Meet with individuals who can give you greater understanding of how to develop more quickly, intelligently. See how to put ideas into action.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Rid yourself of tasks quickly. Use more up-to-date methods. Come to a better understanding with mate and avoid arguing about small things.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Listen to modern thinkers and get ideas for dealing more intelligently with others. Learn what all one who opposes you and give help.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get busy at duties and forget dashing out on impossible tangents. Build up vitality. Big things are coming up for you in the future.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) Get together with persons who mean a great deal to you for accomplishments. Put amusement ideas to work early in the day. Avoid one who is jealous.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Forget self now and be more concerned with the aims of associates; this helps you indirectly. Enter into partnerships and try to bring justice to them.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) More communication with good friends makes the future brighter for all of you. Show you are more than willing to cooperate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Become more modern thinking and get your work in a more streamlined manner. Improve your budget by accurate figuring. Have fun instead of rhapsody in p.m.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Planets are favorable for your personal and business aims. Get into the social affairs that really are appealing to you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Gain needed data from experts and don't confide it to others, but make good use of it quickly. Use your intuition. Don't let anyone monopolize you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be of the New Age products who will be coming up with all sorts of new ideas, and it would be wise to send your promising child to the finest modern schools. Then there can be tremendous success during this fascinating lifetime. You may not understand your youngster very well at first, but then you go along with modern trends, too.

BEEBLE BAILEY

WIZARD OF ID

OKAY, MESTRO... HIT IT FOR ME, KING'S ENTRANCE.

RICK O'SHAY

THIS SAFE WILL BE WAITIN', BATTERED, BUT OPEN!

THE BORN LOSER

HARK!

HUH?

REX MORGAN

CALL ME AT THE HOTEL AND LEAVE A MESSAGE. IF I'M NOT THERE...

I KNOW YOU'LL BE BUSY.

YOU'VE BEEN SO HELPFUL, REX.

IF THERE'S ANYTHING YOU NEED, CALL ME AT THE HOTEL AND LEAVE A MESSAGE. IF I'M NOT THERE...

What's What

L. M. Boyd

Women announcers on TV and radio in France are called "speakers." They're exceedingly popular, incidentally. Relatively far more girls hold down such chores over there. It's thought they talk with less effort and more clarity. French TV station managers claim they audition 10,000 women to get three speakers.

YOU KNOW THOSE life expectancy statistics? If deaths from cancer weren't counted, you could add two years to your predictable longevity. But if the deaths tied into overweight weren't considered, your life span could be reckoned seven years longer.

ANOTHER reason you see so few drunken dogs in Chicago is the law there prohibits the feeding of whiskey to canines.

APRIL AND WAR

Not all of this country's wars started in April, but lot did. So many as to be noteworthy. April 19, 1775, saw the battles of Lexington and Concord kick off the American Revolution. The War of 1812 got going when the British burned our national capitol on April 24 of that year. It was on April 14, 1861, when Fort Sumter was fired upon to begin the Civil War. The Spanish-American War opened up when the United States ordered Spain out of Cuba in April of 1898. And the U. S. Congress declared war against Germany on April 6, 1917, to put us into World War I. April is the cruelest month, said the poet. Maybe so.

HALF THE PEOPLE in this country will have moved from one residence to another within the next five years. That's the prediction of the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research.
