Andrus speaks at meet

TWIN FALLS — More than 250 volunteers began the 1975 United Way Fund drive in Twin Falls today following a kick-off luncheon this noon at the Holiday Inn.

Gov. Cecil Andrus was to address the luncheon, according to Tom Silvers, chairman.

This year's goal of $140,000 is the largest in the local group's history—and will provide support for 10 agencies, all of which function in Twin Falls, with the exception of the United Service Organization, which provides services to servicemen overseas.

Alex Sinclair heads the blue chips division and other campaign leaders include Hazel Wilder, commercial; Bob McElfresh, loaned executives; and Ross Frather, professional.

Open letter to TF citizens

To the Citizens of Twin Falls:

The 1975 United Way campaign is now in progress. All division heads have been selected and they have appointed their section chairmen and workers.

The 1975 goal of $140,000 can be fulfilled by the dedicated efforts of all workers in the campaign. With the same generous support the United Way has received in the past, from individuals employed in Twin Falls and from the business community, I am sure the campaign will be a success.

The ten community agencies participating in the United Way deserve all the help that we can give them. When you are contacted for your donation, please remember the good things these organizations are doing and give accordingly.

Mrs. Ford due additional therapy; medics hopeful

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Betty Ford was making what doctors described today as an "excellent" recovery from breast cancer surgery, although she still must undergo therapy as the result of the microscopic cancer traces found in the lymph nodes of the tissue that was removed.
Dr. William Lukash,

President Ford's personal physician, reported at 11:30 a.m. EDT that Mrs. Ford had "sleep soundly," her temperature had dropped to nearly normal and "her vital signs remain stable."
Doctors said they were "optimistic for a prolonged survival" despite the evidence of cancer traces in two of the 30 lymph nodes which were removed along with Mrs. Ford's right breast during surgery Saturday at the Navy Medical Center in Bethesda, Md.

But the laboratory results released Monday found no evidence that the cancer had spread to other parts of her body.

Boston classrooms continue filling

BOSTON (UPI) — Attendance at racially troubled Boston public schools reached its highest level Monday as the city started its third full week of classes under a controversial federal order to desegregate.
School officials said citywide attendance Monday was 77.6 percent. The previous high figure of 75.4 per cent was recorded Sept. 19.

Attendance dropped substantially after that, however, due to a serious racial confrontation at Hyde Park High School. Since that flareup, black and white students have been meeting to negotiate an end to racial hostilities.
Officials said 1,144 pupils were in classes at Hyde Park Monday, compared to only 921 Friday. About 1,800 are assigned to the school.

Mrs. Ford soon will undergo special diagnostic studies to determine the type of therapy she will receive. The alternatives included radiation therapy, hormonal therapy and anticancer drug treatment.
An spokesman said the studies were already underway and would not prolong Mrs. Ford's stay in the hospital. She is expected to be released this weekend or next Monday, although outpatient treatment will continue for six to eight weeks.

Headmaster William Reid said 396 students — 217 white, 164 black and 15 from other minorities — went to school Monday compared to 293 on Friday.
Despite the increased number of both whites and blacks at South Boston High, the attendance rate was 95 per cent. And white whites substantially outnumbered blacks for the first time, the white attendance rate only reached 18 per cent.

A citywide boycott has been called for Friday as part of what is billed as nationwide one-day busing protest.

Envoy says US misled

(C) Chicago Daily News
CHICAGO — The U.S. ambassador to Saudi Arabia says the American public is being dangerously misled into blaming the Arab countries for rising energy costs and inflation.
James E. Akins, a chemical physicist who is expert in political as well as scientific oil matters, addressed about 220 persons Monday at the first dinner of the newly formed Mid-American Chamber of Commerce in Chicago.
Akins said interviewers frequently ask him why the United States is "tolerating" a "handful of Arab sheiks" who are raising oil prices and thereby increasing the cost of living in consumer countries.
"Akins said it is actually non-Arab Iran, Venezuela and Nigeria who have pushed the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to raise oil prices.
The most productive and influential oil-producing country, Saudi Arabia, agrees with the U.S. position that oil prices should be reduced" to save Western Europe, the U.S. and Japan from a severe depression," Akins said.

Simon says no US grain curbs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Treasury Secretary William E. Simon told world bankers and finance ministers today the United States will not tighten its purse strings or curb exports of precious grain and other items to fight inflation at home. "I do not believe the world is in imminent danger of a drift into cumulative recession — though we must be alert to act quickly should the situation change unexpectedly," Simon told a meeting of governors of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank.

Ford Threatens Turk aid cut veto

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford said today he would veto any legislation cutting off all U.S. military aid to Turkey, claiming such a move "would destroy any hope" for American efforts to achieve settlement of the Cyprus dispute. He made the threat as the Senate prepared to vote on a resolution containing an amendment by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., halting American military help for Turkey, which used U.S. arms in the recent Cyprus war.

Benefits cited

AMSTERDAM (UPI) — Brig. Gen. Thomas P. Stafford, who will command the Apollo team in next year's lunar mission — a Soviet space craft, said a successful mission will lead to new ways to carry out docking and rescue missions. Stafford said the mission could also help work out differences in operation procedures, communications and control systems valuable once other nations begin launching manned spacecraft.

Campaign reform agreement set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate and House negotiators today reached agreement on all key issues in a sweeping campaign reform bill. Sen. Howard W. Cannon, D-Nev., said, "We've settled all the gut issues" and predicted routine approval of the package Thursday. The stalemate was broken when the Senate conferees dropped their demand for public financing of congressional elections in return for a strong, independent commission to supervise the Watergate-pawned reforms.

'Gate trial jury pick starts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Five associates of Richard M. Nixon went on trial in the Watergate cover-up scandal today with the knowledge that the star witness — the former president himself — might never appear. U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica began questioning some 200 prospective jurors at 7:30 a.m. MDT in the huge, cavernous courtroom on the sixth floor of the same federal courthouse where he tried the original Watergate burglars nearly two years ago — before the scandal washed through the highest levels of government and brought Nixon's resignation.

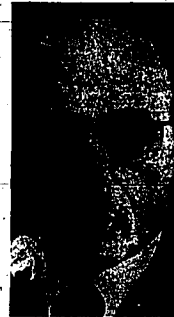

John D. Ehrlichman, Nixon's former No. 2 aide, was spat upon and jeered by youths as he entered the courthouse. But he and the other four defendants, who have all pleaded innocent, sat smiling and relaxed when they reached the courtroom. Ehrlichman reportedly had changed his defense to contend that Nixon planned the cover-up and his agents should not be punished for carrying out presidential orders. Nixon was subpoenaed by both the prosecution and defense but his doctors in California said it was doubtful he could appear at the trial. Nixon's health was a key issue in what form the trial would take and how long it would last.

Despite Ehrlichman's encounter, the trial drew fewer spectators than previous Watergate-related court proceedings. The demonstrators outside, about a dozen in all, identified themselves as Yippies and chanted slogans at each of the defendants.

The first of some 1,000 prospective jurors were asked questions by Sirica which eventually would weed them down to a panel of 12 to decide the fate of the two former White House aides, an attorney general, one of his assistants and an exaltor who would worked for Nixon's reelection campaign.

Sirica asked if any of the venireman would "feel most uncomfortable" by serving on a sequestered jury or would it create a "serious interference" in their lives. About 50 persons stood in response and the judge then questioned them more closely at the bench.

Ford will answer

(C) New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — President Ford promised Monday that he would appear personally before a House subcommittee within the next 10 days to answer a series of questions about his pardon of former president Richard M. Nixon. Ford made the promise in a letter to Rep. William L. Hungate, D-Mo., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on criminal justice.

Hungate had written the president 10 days ago, posing about 15 questions about the pardon of Ford's predecessor that had been raised in two measures called resolutions of inquiry.

Ford responded by sending transcripts of his Sept. 16 news conference and of an earlier briefing for reporters by his counsel, Philip W. Buchen, saying that the transcripts answered all the questions.

Hungate said he was "impressed by President Ford's desire to set the record straight personally."

The questions asked dealt with such matters as the legal advice Ford had received before he issued the pardon, any information Ford might have had about the state of Nixon's health and any negotiations that took place between Ford and Nixon or their associates.

Dominican guerrillas hold line on demands

SANTO DOMINGO (UPI) — Leftist guerrillas held up in the Venezuelan Consulate reiterated their original kidnap demands today in negotiations for the release of a U.S. woman diplomat and six other hostages.

Top government sources said this morning the leftists offered to free the seven hostages in exchange for the release of imprisoned guerrilla leader Filinto Matos Moquete and safe departure out of the country but later changed their mind.

The government, which has only offered safe passage from the Dominican Republic for the consulate raiders, has yet to make a decision on the latest demands, the sources said.

Earlier, a Latin American diplomat said the government had rejected the commandos' demands for a $1 million ransom and release of 37 political prisoners.

Roman Catholic Archbishop Hugo Eduardo Polanco Erika, acting as go-between, shuttled between the consulate and the presidential palace with kidnap demands and government responses.

In the first agreement between the two sides, the commandos and the government agreed Monday on the archbishop taking food and water into the building twice a day.

Anti-freeze shortage latest chilling news

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The current leading item on the list of shortages is antifreeze.

A survey of Twin Falls business firms normally stocking the seasonal product shows several have none at all, some have an adequate supply but what is available is going at about double last year's price.

Prices in Twin Falls are still lower than in some eastern states where freezing winter weather occurs but many dealers say additional price hikes are anticipated. Stores which cater largely to farm shoppers have the most frequently sold out their supplies and the large chain stores such as Sears seem to have the best supplies.

As one dealer said, much of the antifreeze being purchased goes to farm machines because modern automobiles now do not drain out the antifreeze from year to year, but retain it in the radiator through the summer months as well as winter. Chicago and Detroit Sars and Montgomery

Ward outlets report no antifreeze available, while Sears in Twin Falls has a normal supply and has had no big run on antifreeze sales.

Nearly all outlets report their supplies have been reduced considerably this fall over a year ago.

Unjon Carbide, makers of Prestone which leads the market, reports production 10 to 12 per cent below last year. Cause of the shortage is the high cost of ethylene glycol, a petroleum product necessary to the antifreeze production.

DuPont Co., makers of Zerex, plans to discontinue making antifreeze at the end of this year, because of the cost of the petroleum product.

Firestone Stores outlet in Twin Falls has no antifreeze available and has not been able to get any for the past few weeks. If and when there is some available it will sell for in excess of $5 per gallon. Last year, a firm representative said, the store sold 5,000 gallons and this year the allotment was 700 gallons, all of which has been sold. (Continued on p. 13)

Seedmen say aldrin-dieldrin ban detrimental

By CRICKET BIRD

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Environmental Protection Agency today "banned" further production of the pesticides aldrin and dieldrin, used locally in seed treatments.

The ban, issued despite two years of protest by farmers, chemical companies and agricultural interests, cites the cancer-causing potential of the pesticides as an unreasonable health risk for the American public.

Seed company officials here predicted the ban would have a detrimental effect on seed farmers and agricultural yield across the nation. The ban, announced by EPA Administrator

Russell E. Train, permits existing supplies of the pesticides to be depleted. Originally proposed on Aug. 2, the ban was later the subject of a hearing held at the request of the manufacturer, Shell Chemical Co.

An administrative law judge ruled after the hearing in favor of the proposed ban because, he said, the pesticides pose a "high risk of causing cancer in man."

Train said his review of the record had convinced him that continued production of the pesticides "would be likely to result in an unreasonable health risk" and would be an "imminent hazard" for the populous. According to Train, evidence presented at hearings shows the substances cause a significant increase in malignant tumors in test animals. Food and Drug Administration tests found dieldrin showing up in 83 per cent of all dairy products, 80 per cent of all garden fruits and 88 per cent of all meat, fish and poultry samples, Train said.

Also, tissue samples taken during surgery or autopsies in 1971 showed detectable levels of dieldrin in the fat tissues of 99.5 per cent of those sampled, EPA said. The agency also contended the pesticides are particularly hazardous for infants because of their consumption of dairy products prone to residual amounts of the chemicals.

Effective immediately, will stop Shell from producing about 10 million pounds of the two pesticides this fall for use during 1975, mostly on corn crops. About 10 per cent of the nation's corn is treated with aldrin-dieldrin. An employee of the Globe Seed and Feed Co. said today, "The people who's going to be hurt on this is the farmer... because there's no substitute for dieldrin on beans, peas or corn."

Joe Fix, assistant manager of Fanny Seed Co., said Chemical companies and farmers' agencies have been "battling" the ban for several years.

Dieldrin has been used in seed protection for at least 20 years, Fix said, and added, with the ban, the industry would have to make a "consolidated effort" to find a substitute. (Continued on p. 13)

Hospital election Nov. 5

TWIN FALLS — County commissioners with Magic Valley Memorial Hospital Board members Monday, set Nov. 5 as the date for a $4.97 million hospital and issue election. Commissioners said the unanimous action of the hospital board requested the election be held in conjunction with the November general election to save taxpayers the cost of a special vote.

The proposed general obligation bond issue would cover expansion and improvement of the hospital and needed equipment to put the expansion into full use.

In February voters turned down a $4.6 million dollar bond issue for expansion and improvement.

Mary Goe, public relations and information officer for the hospital, said architects are working with board members to trim down the February building plans because of inflated construction costs.

Were the same proposal as outlined in February to be carried out at this time the cost would be $5.5 million.

Tentative plans at this time call for trimming down administrative office space and reduction of the business area.

No cuts will be made in the essential clinical service area. An expanded out-patient area, critically needed for minor surgeries and treatment, will be included as well as additional bed space.

Tentatively, board members are talking of a building plan to provide for a long range addition of 90 beds, to be added in three stages of 30 beds. At this time the building would provide space, plumbing, heating and other installations at current level building costs.

Thirty beds would be added now with the remaining 60 to be brought in with limited additional construction when the need reaches another critical point, Mrs. Goe said.

C.T.A. Architects is working with the hospital board to finalize plans, taking into consideration the comments of citizens being received through questionnaires and direct comment to board members.

United Way worthwhile

The annual Twin Falls United Way campaign was launched today.
 Conducted on a community-wide basis by volunteer workers, the fund-raising effort — known for many years as the United Fund — provides money for the operation of 10 agencies serving the residents of Twin Falls in a wide assortment of ways.
 The objective this year is to secure $140,000 in funds and in pledges to finance operation of these organizations during 1975. Like the citizens of Twin Falls who will contribute, these organizations are feeling the impact of the inflation which is gripping the United States economy.
 But if these organizations are to continue their services to Twin Falls, their continued financial support is the first requirement, and all contributions — great and small — will be appreciated.
 The United Way campaign is one of the most worthwhile community endeavors of the year in Twin Falls. Please support it — and the service organizations it represents.

Second the idea

Every now and again, Congress takes some action most Americans approve.
Monday, the Senate passed by voice vote and sent to the White House a bill returning the United States to standard time from Oct. 27, 1974, until Feb. 23, 1975. The bill, which has passed the House of Representatives earlier, now goes to President Ford. His signature appears likely.
 Out here in the Magic Valley, where night comes early and stays long during the autumn, winter and early spring, this looks like a step in the right direction. Year-round daylight saving time ordered last winter as a fuel conservation measure — just doesn't work in some areas. This is one of them.
 While it appears that Idahoans will be relieved of those extra late winter dawns, the prospect of having to adjust to two clock changes within five months is almost too traumatic to even consider.
 It's probably hoping for too much, but we keep thinking some day Congress will accommodate a probable majority of the American people and put the country back on standard time for keeps.

Thought for today

A thought for the day: British writer Lytton Strachey said, "Perhaps of all the creations of man language is the most astonishing."

Berry's World

"We can stop worrying about keeping up with the Joneses — they've declared bankruptcy!"

WASHINGTON — Before the vote was taken, last week's Senate vote on a federal pay raise was widely described as President Ford's first big test in Capitol Hill.
 "The test of his 'balancing deficit,'" The Post called it a "resounding defeat."
 But Michigan's Sen. Robert Griffin had a different view. It wasn't a test of the President, he said. It was a test of the Senate, and the Senate flunked.

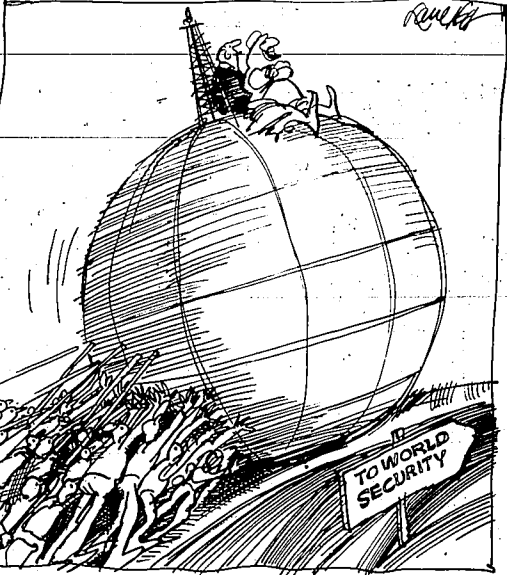

The issue involved a pay raise scheduled to go into effect today. Ford ordered the raise postponed to Jan. 1, but the Senate voted its resolution of disapproval by 64-35. The raise, expected to average 5.6 per cent, will go into effect as scheduled.
 Ford, had two reasons for asking the postponement. The first was practical: It would save $700 million. The second was symbolic: It would demonstrate the willingness of a government to put its own house in order, and strike a blow against the inflation for which government is so much to blame.
 The Senate was interested neither in form nor in substance. One hesitates to question motives. It is possible that all 64 senators who voted for the October raise were motivated solely by considerations of fairness and equity. But it may be observed that fairness and equity, may be perceived with greatest clarity six weeks before an election. The raise will cost 1.6 million civilian employees and 2.1 million members of the armed forces. Most of them have families, and most of them vote. So much for the million.
 Have federal employees been treated unfairly? No such charge can be sustained in terms of the rising cost of living. Over the past five years, the cost of living has gone up by 30 per cent. Federal salaries have gone up by 30.6 per cent. This new raise will make it 37.7 per cent since 1969.
 The minor bureaucrat who five years ago this month was earning $9,000 got a Christmas raise in 1969 to $9,540. A year later, with a 5.96 raise, he went to $10,109. In January 1972, with a 5.5 per cent raise, he went to $10,665. In January 1973, a raise of 5.14 per cent—moved him to $11,213. Nine months later, in October, 1973, a further raise of 4.77 per cent boosted his salary to $11,748. With the Oct. 1 raise, he will go to $12,394. The reader who is similarly situated can make his own comparisons.

 Salary figures tell only part of the story. The government, which is to pay the taxpayers, also provides 37 per cent of base pay in such benefits as retirement, paid vacation, health and hospitalization, sick leave, and the like. The federal employe has what amounts to absolute job security, and the government's retirement program surpasses anything in private industry.

JAMES KILPATRICK

Proponents of the October raise said it was justified on terms of "comparability" and they cited a government study to prove it. The study suggests that on the average, federal salaries are 7 per cent below comparable salaries in industry. The study is a farce. Roughly 75 per cent of the labor force, according to an analysis by the General Accounting Office, is excluded from the comparability study.
 Milton Friedman, the University of Chicago economist, speaks for many of his colleagues in saying that the government's deficit spending, is the chief cause of the inflation that plagues us.
 How is such spending to be curbed? Not by voting two-to-one to spend $700 million that reasonably could have been saved.

Economic catastrophe threat behind tough line

WASHINGTON — Behind President Ford's tough line in international relations, there is a reassessment by his top advisers that economic catastrophe in the Western world is threatened within the next four months.
 In public and even in some private meetings of administration officials, the President's economic policymakers still stick to the old refrain that the economy is sluggish and in danger merely of mild recession accompanied by inflation. But they now privately concede the possibility of much worse — a drastic business decline with depression-level unemployment — thanks largely to the traumatic impact on the West of rising oil prices.
 That's why Secretary of State Henry Kissinger abruptly shifted to a hard line against the oil-producing nations. That's also why Ford now wants some economic proposals put forth quickly instead of waiting for next year's budget. But that's also why a mood of futility, resignation and downright fear has spread from the business community into the upper reaches of the administration.
 Administration officials are now seeking a viable plan to back up strong words from the President and the secretary of state. But there is total pessimism. If the price of oil continues to rise, production nations will back down any time soon. And unless they do, neither rhetoric coming out of this past weekend's economic summit conference nor new programs by the President can prevent the catastrophe.

Everybody agrees that no protection from this menace, temporary or permanent, is possible without "lowering international oil prices." But the overtight shift to a hard line warning the oil-producing nations is no guaranty of relief.
 On the contrary, responsible administration officials are deeply pessimistic about breaking the world oil cartel. One knowledgeable policymaker believes the Arabs, particularly Kuwait and Algeria, will never relent until that unforeseeable day of a political settlement in the Mideast. Nor is there any real hope here that withholding U.S. food from the world market would have the slightest effect on oil. Withholding U.S. arms, though riskier, might be slightly more effective.
 About all these officials feel can be done is for the U.S. to make clear by word and deed that it is moving toward energy self-sufficiency and trying to act in concert with Western Europe and Japan. Since such steps are not imminent, there is simply no prospect of any quick price relief from the oil producers.
 In the meantime, the President seems to have abandoned his intention to await the 1975 session of Congress before proposing anything important. His economic summit conference is likely to be followed by a tax bill proposing investment incentives for industry and tax cuts for the poor. Significantly, such a tax package has long been pushed by Treasury Secretary William Simon, about to be put in overall charge of the economic program.

 But other economists, including some inside the administration, believe much more is needed to stave off disaster. They feel the President, Simon and chief economic adviser Alan Greenspan must shed their scruples about governmental interference with the free economy and move to rationing of credit and even tough wage-price restraints.
 Finally, there is overriding pessimism inside the administration about the effectiveness of the budget-cutting program, particularly in the wake of the ignominious Senate defeat of Ford's proposed delay in higher pay for civil servants.
 Few officials today hope for cuts deep enough to significantly free capital for private borrowing. The end product in high government circles is apprehension about the future which is foreign to this capital city. After seven weeks in office, President Ford seems to be coming up to the deepening economic crisis as Richard M. Nixon never did. Merely recognizing the crisis is a good beginning, but fear gnaws away in Washington today because nobody really knows what to do about it.

EVANS AND NOVAK

But realism has taken hold. Top administration officials now privately admit the possibility of the "worst case" that has been propounded by economists inside and outside the government: the skyrocketing escalation of energy costs will generate critical fuel failures in western Europe, which will spread to American banks and American businesses bringing a flash-free business decline with unemployment quickly exceeding 10 per cent.

Eliminate business tax

Dr. Pierre Rinfret of New York, economist and business consultant, is sure of himself and of the workability of his prescriptions for inflation.
 Dr. Rinfret makes a few underlying observations. One of them is that at the current level, our rate of investment formation in the world is the lowest rate of capital formation in the world. We are plowing 10 per cent of our gross national product back into our capital plant. By contrast, the Japanese are doing it with 22 per cent of theirs, and France is plowing back 17 to 20 per cent of its GNP. He points out that the United States has the lowest output per man hour of any industrial country in the world today. Many of our difficulties he traces to the sloth of hedonism and high expectations.
 What does he suggest? A ban on credit cards. A small income surtax, a reduction over the next three years of business taxes to 75 per cent.
 I regret Dr. Rinfret's temporizing on the matter of the business tax. It should be eliminated permanently.
 If Congress were to eliminate the business tax altogether, what would happen? It is typical that no one knows. Some experts maintain that the business tax is a wholly regressive tax, and that as a cost of doing business it is entirely new to the consumer, and that the business average consumer needs to spend a greater amount of his income than the average shareholder, the tax is regressive.
 Two researchers in the Census Bureau, however, disagree. They conclude after a complicated examination of the situation, that two-thirds of the tax is, in fact, shouldered by the shareholders, who are, for the most part, in the middle and upper income brackets, and one-third by the consumers.

As regards the argument over incidence, let us take the middle position between the experts and postulate that the corporation tax is now being paid one-half by shareholders, one-half by consumers. What would be the effect of eliminating such a tax?
 As it stands, corporate business is paying 22 per cent of its profits in federal tax. In theory, a company that earned $1.5 million a year (after taxes) would suddenly find itself about to earn over $2 million. The value of the stock would, assuming the price-earning ratio remained the same, rise in anticipation of the increased earnings. Let us, however, now assume applying the 50-50 Rule, that competition forces half the bonanza to be passed along to the consumer in reduced prices. That would leave, net to the shareholder, a 15 per cent (actually 16 per cent) increase in the value of his stock.
 This is not the stuff of which social nightmares are made in sane societies — a reduction (varying with the cost to the supplier of the incremental unit) in the price of all products and services provided by corporations, even in the knowledge that stock averages will increase by 15 per cent.
 It is amusing to extend the argument ad absurdum.

DIM VIEW

Times are tough all around town. — for whom?

WASHINGTON — I entered a shop and discovered what Alan Greenspan meant when he told a gathering of representatives of the poor, "If you really wanted to examine percentage-wise who was hurt most in their income (by inflation) it was Wall Street bankers."
 Greenspan, now chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, obviously is aware that the average broker can't go around dressed in a barrel. A broker not only must be sharp but must have sharp. His apparel must suggest affluence.
 Thus, I now feel a touch more sympathy for those who toil in Wall Street. Accosting a salesman in that exclusive men's store, I asked to be shown something in trench coats. My demeanor was a reflection, I hoped, of my lowly economic status. Surely, the clerk would talk me for a poverty-stricken stock broker.
 It seemed to work. There was compassion in the clerk's eye as he led me to a rack of elegant merchandise. "I think this is what you're looking for," he told me. "These trench coats are only $298." He smiled confidentially. "$295 UP, of course."

 Shamefaced, I slunk out of the shop. My play hadn't worked. Obviously, the salesman had mistaken me for a head waiter or a filing clerk.

ANDREW TULLY

at the Agriculture Department. Visions of enduring another winter wrapped in a trench coat from the Junior League's Bring and Buy Shop writhed in my head; That afternoon, I called on a stock peddler with whom I had done business before the price of pork chops and "toothpicks consumed my little hoard of capital. "So how are things going?" I inquired.

 "He groaned. "You can ask that after what Greenspan said the other day? Just don't walk past my office building today. You might get hurt when I come tumbling out of a tenth-floor window."
 "Is it really that bad?" I asked.
 "Bad? They couldn't be worse," he replied, taking a cigarette from his wrist with a carving knife. "Last week I was forced to move the family into a measly $125,000 house with only five bathrooms and an unheated swimming pool."
 "I suppose your wife is unhappy," I said.
 "I don't know how she feels," he said, "she's spending an extra month at our villa on the Riviera. Wait'll she hears we're going to have to cut our skiing vacation in Switzerland this winter to a mere six weeks."
 I tried to change the subject. "How do you like your new Mercedes Benz?"
 "All right, I suppose," he said. "But the sink in the bar has sprung a leak. Also, it looks like I'm going to have to sell either the Cadillac or the Chrysler Imperial. And Junior says his 74 sports car is obsolete."
 "How about that?" I said.
 "I was too depressing. I left him toying with a vital asset. Outside I ran into a neighbor who is under-deputy to the assistant secretary for office supplies at the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.
 "Congratulations," I told him. "I see the Senate would like to see President Ford give you a raise until Jan. 1."
 "They better had," he said. "Do you realize we Federal employes have had our pay raised only 30 per cent in the last four years?"
 "How about lunch," I said.
 "Don't have time," he said. "I'm going over and buy one of those new trench coats."
 "I see they start at $295," I said.
 "Yeah, but they can't be much at that price. My television repair man bought one of the $360 jobs. Said he wouldn't be caught dead in anything cheaper."

Jackson outlines plans to lower US oil costs

(C) Washington Star-News
 WASHINGTON — Secretary of Jackson, D. Wash., warned Monday that continued failure to lower international oil prices would spell disaster for the Western world.

He outlined a program of his own for doing so. The key element is the Jackson program, which he stressed should be bipartisan, is a three-pronged attack on the current domestic price structure for oil.

At the same time, Jackson called for a variety of conservation, research and emergency standby programs, including gasoline rationing in the event of a future oil embargo. Jackson's price proposals, he said, are designed to increase market pressure on the oil-producing countries, which so far have raised prices for reasons more political than economic.

Jackson called the first priority the reduction of the maximum price of oil produced in the United States from the present $10 or $11 a barrel to $7 or $8.

The higher price, Jackson said, is "totally unjustified" and produces "windfall profits" for the oil industry and little else. "The OPEC (organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) countries say that set their price at the American price," Jackson explained. "How can we say the Arabs should roll back their price when we do nothing about rolling back our own?"

The second price strategy on the Jackson program is to impose a freeze on the total amount the United States spends in any year for foreign oil.

He suggested 1974 outlays — estimated at $25 billion — as the import limit for future years. At the same time, in an effort to exert market forces against the imposed cartel price of the OPEC, the Jackson proposal includes instituting a secret-bid auction for future licenses to import oil.

Imposing secrecy on the auction would enable a major producer friendly to the United States to sell the oil below the OPEC rate without the other members of the cartel knowing about it, Jackson said.

The third price strategy in the Jackson program is the imposition of a windfall tax on oil company profits. This proposal has been under active discussion in Congress and in the Administration.

One pro view filed

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho's voter information pamphlet contains only a single pro argument on the "sunshine initiative" because that is all that was filed, Secretary of State Fete T. Cenarrusa reiterated today.

"This argument appears in the pamphlet as the sponsors of the sunshine initiative," Cenarrusa said. "No arguments in opposition to the sunshine initiative were filed with the secretary of state as provided by statute."

"This is the reason why the pamphlet does not contain opposing arguments regarding initiative petition number one," he said.

"Four-hundred thousand copies of the pamphlet have been published and delivered to the county clerks for distribution as required by law," he said. "The county clerks, rather than this office, mail to each registered voter a copy of the information pamphlet."

"It is unfortunate that both pro and con arguments are not in evidence in order to better inform the public," he said. "To fully inform voters, both sides should be aired."

Insurance-aspect checked

Editor, Times-News:
 As an avid pheasant hunter and a member of our community, I feel obligated to comment on Mr. Aldo Dallolio's letter in Monday, Sept. 23rd edition of the Times-News.

Obviously there is conflict between the Idaho Fish and Game Commission and the local farmer over oxygen injection on the American Falls Dam.

Unfortunately this brings the issue down to the hunter to help defray additional costs to irrigators because of the Idaho Fish and Game Commission requirements on the new American Falls Dam, to pay a $5 lease to hunt at least on Mr. Dallolio's land, and very probably that of many other Mini-Cassia area farmers.

To Mr. Aldo Dallolio and his colleagues I suggest they look into their insurance policies and see how practical this would be to their budget and idea.

Out of curiosity I called a local insurance agency and chatted to the owner about his situation. In my investigation I found by leasing this land to hunters the farmer increases his liability exposure, and generally policies do not cover this situation.

It is interesting to note they do cover transposers for injury, however, if a hunter is leasing a farmer's field to hunt he obviously is not trespassing.

I would advise the farmer to investigate this minor or major concept before leasing his property.

In conclusion, I am just a hunter in Idaho who strives to leave "Mr. Farmer's" land in the same shape I entered it. I always ask permission to hunt and I feel every true hunter does the same by giving the farmer the respect and courtesy they give us.

We are not the Idaho Fish and Game Commission and I feel area hunters should not be held responsible for its decisions. Wouldn't it be nice if we had an Idaho State Farmers and Hunters Commission to solve problems important to both the hunter and farmer?

Instead of hassling with each other over something like the American Falls Dam situation.

Outlook for year ahead dismal, experts agree

BY WILLIAM J. EATON

(C) Chicago Daily News
 Nearly every economic forecaster agrees: the outlook for the year ahead is dismal. More high prices, high interest rates, higher unemployment and a sluggish rate of growth, or, more likely, no growth.

The only faint ray of hope is this past week's move by major banks to lower the prime rate from 12 per cent to 11.75 per cent. That is the rate charged to the best customers — like vice president-designate Nelson A. Rockefeller at the bank his brother runs on Wall Street.

Analysis

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns promises no credit crunch, or shortage of funds to borrow. But Burns contends the price of money, or interest rates, is set by the demand for credit in the marketplace. A policy of moderate restraint, in Burns' word, will be continued for a considerable time despite the screams of the housing industry, organized labor and many business men.

President Ford, who must worry about recession as well as inflation, may produce a program for the post-election session of Congress in the closing months of the year. His behind-the-scenes adviser will be an old friend from Michigan, Paul McCracken.

The new administration's chief economic spokesman, however, is expected to be William Simon, secretary of the treasury, with another old Ford friend, L. William Seidman, as his deputy.

Ford's dilemma is simple: policies to curtail the soaring rate of inflation tend to slow production, which already has dropped off and shows no signs of advancing in the near future. The shocking increases in prices in July and August — running at an annual rate of more than 40 per cent a year — indicate that inflation may get worse before it gets better. Food prices, according to the U.S. department of agriculture, may rise 13 to 17 per cent this year. If anything, that department has been guilty of under-estimating inflation in the past.

Unemployment, now approaching 5.5 per cent of the labor force, is expected to hit 6 per cent, and perhaps rise to higher. The national average conceals much higher rates in inner-city neighborhoods, where government figures indicate joblessness is more than 10 per cent. One survey estimated that 33 per cent of urban black youngsters, from 16 to 19, are out of work.

Organized labor, reacting to rank-and-file pressure, is seeking fatter contract settlements of 10 per cent and up. A cost-of-living clause, tying future pay increases to the government's consumer price index, is increasingly popular with both sides at the bargaining table.

There is more talk about "indexing" the entire economy so rents, interest rates on savings, pensions and other forms of incomes beside wages would be tied to the price level through some form of escalator clause. Proponents argue that Social Security payments and retirement benefits for federal government workers already have cost-of-living protection and it should be extended to others.

On the anti-inflation front, there is widespread bipartisan backing in Congress for additional public service employment, which also has Ford's support in principle. The idea is to provide federal funds to states and cities so they may hire unemployed workers to help improve public services. Congress also seems likely to approve larger unemployment benefits if the jobless rate creeps upward, although this faces tougher opposition from corporations which must pay the bill.

One of the reasons for the economic gloom is that many of the nation's problems stem from uncontrollable events: the drought that limited food production this year, the world-wide shortage of raw materials, the oil embargo and price-fixing by the Arab countries, Iran and Venezuela.

For that reason, the realists in Washington do not expect even mini-miracles from the White House economic summit.

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Endometriosis no cancer kin

BY GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I found out three months ago that I have endometriosis. I still don't understand this disease. Can it be fatal? After surgery is there still a chance of cancer? — Mrs. C.R.

Dear Doctor: I am 30 and two years ago was in the hospital for back problems. It turned out to be endometriosis, and I was put on birth control pills. That has helped but there are still problems.

Am I correct that they give the pill for endometriosis to prevent ovulation? If this is true, wouldn't the "bandaid surgery" be a good idea, instead of the pill? — A.R.

Endometriosis is a curious ailment that can cause a good deal of abdominal distress, but it won't be fatal. (It has no relationship to cancer, either.)

Here's what happens. The endometrium is the lining of the uterus. This lining reacts to the rhythmic change in female hormone levels — hence the periods of menstrual bleeding.

In some way, not clear, some of the tissue of the endometrium manages to "emigrate" to other areas in the abdomen — but it still reacts to the hormonal tides, and bleeds at menstruation time.

Unfortunately some of this tissue may have "emigrated" to areas where the blood cannot readily escape. It is trapped, builds up pressures, becomes increasingly painful as time goes on.

Pregnancy is a temporary relief. Pregnancy puts an end to the time being, to menstrual periods, so that misplaced endometrium tissue remains quiescent.

"The pill" helps because it mimics pregnancy, hormonally speaking. Menstrual periods are less vigorous than normal. But for various reasons it is not likely to give total relief.

What will? Well, if all of the misplaced endometrial tissue can be removed surgically, that will do it. But that can be an undertaking — and it's far from easy to find all of that tissue.

So, alternatively, putting an end to menstrual periods can halt the misery. Menopause does it, but that may mean waiting 15 or 20 years so that's hardly an acceptable answer.

Hence in severe cases "surgical menopause," by removal of the ovaries or using radiation to make them inoperative, can be done.

The suggestion of "bandaid surgery," which is a nickname for one technique of tubal ligation or "tying the fallopian tubes," will not work. The tube-tying, you see, prevents an ovum or egg from the ovaries from uniting with a sperm cell to cause pregnancy. But it does not inactivate the ovaries, does not stop the rise and fall of hormone levels, and does not prevent menstruation. That's why it is not a solution to endometriosis.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been taking medication for nearly five years to get rid of excess water. In the last six months I have had kidney infections twice and asked the doctor if the medication would cause the infection. He said no. I don't know what to think and would appreciate your comment. — Mrs. F.H.E.

Accept your doctor's answer at face value, because these diuretic (anti-fluid) medications do not cause kidney infection. Kidney infections are not at all uncommon, and it is human nature to try to find some handy explanation, but in this case you are jumping to the wrong conclusion.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: If lung cancer has started to develop, will a routine chest X-ray reveal it? — E.P.

It may not reveal it in early stages.

Turks building defensive 'wall'

(C) Chicago Daily News

NICOSIA, Cyprus (UPI) — President Glafkos Clerides revealed this weekend that the Turkish occupation force is building a line of concrete fortifications along the entire width of the island.

The line, which stretches from the Bay of Morphou in the west to the city of Famagusta in the east, demarcates the entire northern part of the island which they hold.

"They started 15 days ago," Clerides said in an exclusive interview with the Chicago Daily News. "They are working feverishly."

"It may well be that they have in mind to reduce their army here and have a fortified line they can hold with fewer men and reinforce quickly from Turkey, if needed."

Clerides, acting president in the absence of Archbishop Makarios, said that on the side from Morphou to Nicosia the "wall" is a concrete wall that there are walls in some depth. "On the Famagusta side, there are a number of pillboxes," he said. "They are raising and pressing them up like bunkers in semicircles. It looks as though they are for the protection of tanks. They probably are concrete pillboxes and bunkers."

They are not, he said, making the fortifications on the exact edge of the 40 per cent of the island they now control along the "Attila Line."

Rather, the line runs slightly behind the outer limits of their territory.

"This does not mean they intend to give up the rest," the president said. "But it might mean the terrain there is better for protection."

The fortified line does not seem to mean to diplomats here that the Turks intend to wage a third offensive against the Greek Cypriots in the south, represented by President Clerides. They do not think there will be any further military activity at least until after the Greek and Turkish elections in November.

Rate case booted

DENVER (UPI) — The Colorado Supreme Court Monday ordered a district court to dismiss a challenge by the Colorado Municipal League (CML) to a $9.8 million rate hike by the Mountain Bell already approved by the state.

The decision upsets the Public Utilities Commission (PUC) which last year allowed the rate hike to go into effect without hearings. The court said the PUC's decision not to hold hearings was within the agency's authority.

In a separate decision, the high court also upheld the PUC's decision in 1972 that reduced the rate of return on an earlier Mountain Bell increase from 8.9 per cent to 8 1/2 per cent annually. The telephone company had argued that the PUC acted arbitrarily in reducing the rate.

The court's decision on the CML challenge overruled Denver District Judge James C. Flanigan who had refused last year to dismiss the complaint against the $9.8 million rate hike. The PUC sought dismissal, claiming that Flanigan did not have jurisdiction in the case.

"The Municipal League's effort to seek judicial intervention lacks... validity," the high court said. "In public utilities law, it is a basic concept that rate making is a legislative function and that in Colorado, that function has been delegated to the PUC. Consequently, the judiciary must refrain from any semblance of rate making."

The court said that the CML sought to have Flanigan call the $9.8 million rate hike unwarranted. The decision said, however, that the CML's proper avenue of appeal was to file a complaint with the PUC.

US newsmen 'roughed up'

SAIGON (UPI) — Two American newsmen were roughed up by Saigon police Monday while covering a demonstration by Buddhist nuns and women demanding the release of all political prisoners held by the regime of President Nguyen Van Thieu.

The demonstrators were allowed to carry on their protest until they were broken up by police. Two newsmen and a photographer were kicked and beaten. The newsmen were roughed up but there were no serious injuries.

The government has denied it is holding any political prisoners. The demonstrators dispersed at lunch time.

Dam hearing set

BOISE (UPI) — A public hearing will be conducted by the Army Engineers Oct. 17 on flow shutdown and project operations improvement at Lucky Peak Dam near Boise.

Scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m., the meeting will be held at the auditorium in the Idaho Highway and Law Enforcement Building, Col. Nelson P. Conover, Walla Walla, Wash., district engineer, said water resource related problems and possible solutions will be discussed at the meeting.

Routine patrols out in Missouri

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The police department is junking most of its routine patrols because a study showed that the time-honored practice of the policeman cruising his beat doesn't stop criminals or comfort citizens.

The department, which won a reputation under former Chief Clarence Kelley as one of the most progressive in the nation, plans to have a new, people-oriented patrol system operating by the first of next year.

Chief Joseph D. McNamara, who took over last year when Kelley became FBI director, said beat officers will be taken off-street patrols and given specific duties: patrolling high-crime areas, acting as decoys and getting out of their patrol cars to talk to merchants and citizens about their problems.

Instead of relying on officers' hunches about where crime is likely to occur, the department will use a computer to determine crime patterns and help direct where officers go.

The study was financed by a $55,000 Ford Foundation grant and started Oct. 1, 1972, under Kelley, continuing under McNamara until Sept. 30, 1973.

"The results are surprising," McNamara said. "The results repudiate a tradition of 150 years of police work: that is, the tradition that held the routine preventive patrol by the police was effective."

The study divided an area of the city into three parts: the first with no preventive patrol and officers only answering specific calls, the second with three times more preventive patrols than normal, and the third with normal patrols for comparison purposes.

Before and after the study, 1,200 households in the three areas were surveyed about their attitudes towards crime and the police. With that data and with crime statistics from the three areas, the study concluded:

- Burglaries, car thefts, robberies and vandalism — the kind of crimes thought to be deterred by preventive patrols — occurred just as often in the beefed-up patrol area as in the area with no patrols at all.
- Citizens and businessmen felt no safer about criminals if there were more police on patrol. Their satisfaction with police performance and attitudes about police services were not affected.
- Citizens did not report crime better in any one area, nor did police respond more effectively in any one area.

No traveling for month, Nixon doctor states

Nixon travels corridor

Nixon defendant in wiretap suit

(C) New York Times Service
 WASHINGTON—Former president Richard M. Nixon was named Monday as a defendant in a civil lawsuit brought by a former National Security Council official whose home telephone was tapped by the government between 1969 and 1971.

Morton H. Halperin, an aide to Henry A. Kissinger when the wiretap was initiated, charged Nixon with having participated in illegal electronic surveillance and with having helped to conceal from the justice department the record of the operation.

In a letter to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last July, Nixon took full responsibility for having authorized the wiretapping effort. Between May, 1969, and February, 1971, it involved 13 government officials and four newsmen.

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI)—Richard Nixon's doctor says the former President will be too sick to travel for at least a month, and perhaps three months, raising the possibility he may not testify at the Watergate cover-up trial.

Nixon should wait at least three weeks before giving a deposition or answering questions for use at the trial, Dr. John C. Langren said Monday.

"If he wants to do it, I can't stop him," Langren added. "That's his decision, not mine."

Nixon entered Long Beach Memorial Hospital eight days ago for treatment of phlebitis, a serious vein and circulatory disorder.

Langren told reporters Nixon shows "marked physical exhaustion," partly because of the strain of the presidency, but that his treatment is proceeding satisfactorily and Nixon might be released later this week.

He should then "follow a normal course of restricted convalescence," the physician said.

Asked how long that would be, he said, "I can't tell you."

"It's certainly going to be, in my estimation, at least a month, maybe longer—maybe three months. In all honesty, I don't know."

During his convalescence, he said, Nixon should "avoid protracted periods of sitting, of riding, of standing, of riding in a car, airplane, bus, you have it all."

The trial of six of Nixon's former highest-ranking aides on Watergate cover-up charges begins today in Washington, D.C., before U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica.

Nixon has been subpoenaed by both special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski and defendant John Ehrlichman.

Nixon plans to return to his estate at San Clemente, about 60 miles to the south, when he is released.

Langren said Nixon should be undisturbed there, and should not be required to give a written statement, for at least two or three weeks.

EPI photographer Robert Florida was admitted to Nixon's hospital floor Monday for a series of exclusive pictures of the former President.

He said Nixon appeared "very tired" as he was pushed in a wheelchair down a corridor for more tests.

Langren said Nixon had lost about five or six pounds since being hospitalized, but his heart and blood pressure are normal.

Asked the reason for Nixon's "marked physical exhaustion," Langren replied: "Twenty-seven years without a vacation. Five or one half years in the roughest job in the world. An illness that he has had at least since June, and the longest hospital stay he has ever had."

Asked about Nixon's spirits — he has been reported despondent and angry at moves cutting his privileges and funds — Langren said, "I think they're excellent."

As to whether his fall from power contributed to Nixon's illness, the doctor said "I don't think he would be human if he wasn't hurt. And I think he's a very human man. But that wasn't the principal reason."

Portuguese vote in '75 pledged

LISBON (UPI)—Portugal's new leftist strongman, winner of a power struggle that swept key conservatives from the government, said today he would honor promises for free elections next spring.

Premier Vasco Dos Santos Goncalves, a left-wing brigadier general who helped engineer last April's military coup, said the designation of President Antonio de Spínola Monday would not alter plans for the vote.

"It is a point of honor with us to comply with the armed forces program of free elections as promised," the 54-year-old premier told a news conference.

Goncalves said Portugal would also respect all foreign commitments, including ties with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and an accord providing military bases for the United States.

He emerged at the power in Portugal following Spínola's replacement by Gen. Francisco Costa Gomes, a political unknown hailed by Communists and Socialists.

Goncalves also announced plans to replace two of Spínola's key conservative supporters—Maj. Sanchez Osorio, the information minister, and Lt. Col. Mario Firmino Miguel, the defense minister, but failed to name their successors.

Spínola, in his resignation statement, expressed concern about the "climate of anarchy" in Portugal and predicted "crisis and chaos are inevitable."

He said he was stepping down after five months as president because of "the complete impossibility of building a true democracy in this climate."

Rightist sources said some army factions still support Spínola and the former president is far from finished politically despite his resignation.

Political analysts said Spínola is expected to head a conservative party in the coming elections and possibly run for president.

Senate chops arms aid given Turkey

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate, angered over the usual American aid to Turkey on Cyprus, has voted to cut off military aid to Turkey. A similar attempt to ban U.S. aid to oil exporting countries was rejected.

The amendment, by Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., would prohibit aid to any country using U.S. weapons in violation of laws governing their sale.

It was added to a resolution on foreign aid by a 57-20 vote Monday despite arguments by Democratic leader Mike Mansfield that "passage of the resolution will undermine the efforts of (Secretary of State Henry A.) Kissinger."

The secretary has been warned that the letter and the spirit of American law require an immediate settlement of military assistance to Turkey, which more than two months ago violated its bilateral arms agreement with the United States by allowing the settlement of military assistance to Turkey.

The House has already approved a ban on military aid to Turkey that would last until "substantial progress" is made toward settlement.

Earlier, the Senate killed, by a 45-37 vote, an amendment by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, to deny aid to oil-exporting

Solons say Fidel wants new US ties

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sens. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., and Galborne Pell, D-R.I., returned from Cuba saying they believe Fidel Castro wants to normalize diplomatic relations with the United States.

The two senators arrived in the nation's capitol Monday night after departing Havana by chartered seaplane for Homestead Air Force Base in Florida, where he boarded a jet to Andrews AFB outside Washington.

Javits refused to answer any questions but said he would discuss the trip at a news conference.

The Washington Post said the two senators briefed members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee immediately upon their return.

Sen. Gale W. McGee, D-Wyo., said the trip had revealed "no surprises" but "opened up the possibility of (further) talks, and loosened

Ford asks combined efforts

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Ford attacked inflation in general terms Monday, urging international cooperation in trade, monetary policy and other economic means.

Then he promised that Treasury Secretary William Simon would provide the specifics. Simon was to address today's session of the International Bankers and Money Managers leading the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

Ford gave the traditional address opening the meeting Monday.

"We want solutions which serve broad interests rather than narrow self-serving ones," the President said.

"We want more cooperation, not more isolation. We want to reduce protectionism. We want price stability, not inflation. We want growth, not stagnation. We want a better life for ourselves, and our children."

Summing up the world situation, the President said: "The problems that confront us are serious and complex—a worldwide inflation at a rate far in excess of what we can tolerate; unparalleled disruption in the supply of the world's major commodities; and severe hindrances to the growth and the progress of many nations, including, in particular, some of the poorest among us."

"We in America view these problems soberly and without rose-tinted glasses. But we believe that the same spirit of international cooperation which brought forth the Bretton Woods agreements a generation ago can resolve the difficulties we face today."

The Bretton Woods pact, reached at a conference in New Hampshire in 1944, included creation of the World Bank to help improve living standards in less-developed nations and the International Monetary Fund to help most of the countries in the non-Communist world trade with each other and settle accounts.

70 deserters yield

WASHINGTON (UPI)—One half of 1 per cent of the 11,000 Vietnam-era military deserters are eligible for conditional amnesty—about 70 men—have surrendered to the government in the first two weeks of the program.

Defense Department records show 70 deserters have taken advantage of President Ford's offer of limited amnesty, but about 20 per cent of the eligible deserters have inquired about the program.

The military has received 2,208 telephone or mail inquiries since the limited amnesty was announced, the Pentagon said.

House opens talks on internal reform

(C) New York Times Service
 ANKARA—Premier Ecevit abandoned today his attempt to form a new government, having exhausted all possibilities in his search for a coalition partner. Ecevit resigned.

Koruturk to relieve him of his duties.

Koruturk, a few hours after accepting Ecevit's resignation, named Justice Party leader Sileyman Demirel to form a new coalition government.

Ecevit, the leader of the Republican People's Party, which has 185 seats in the 450-seat National Assembly, resigned two weeks ago but was asked to form a new coalition.

Ecevit's coalition partner was the National Salvation Front, the ultra-religious group has 48 seats.

The present RPP-NSP coalition has collapsed because of "irreconcilable differences" between the partners.

Cambodians push ahead

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—Government troops killed 500 Communist in heavy fighting near besieged Kompong Chhnang Tuesday in a drive to "free" the 500-mile northwest of this capital, field reporters said.

Reporters said government losses were not immediately known, but they said the troops ran into strong Communist resistance near the village of Prey Phdeak.

(C) New York Times Service
 WASHINGTON—The House of Representatives began gingerly debating how to reorganize itself Monday with some of its more influential senior Democrats attacking a restructuring of committees proposed last March by a bipartisan House panel.

By a surprisingly large margin of 326 to 25, the House approved the ground rules for debating the congressional reorganization matter after Rep. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., and chairman of the bipartisan committee that drafted the original reorganization plan, warned that it would be "unthinkable" for the House not to face the issue.

Rumsfeld holds press meeting

(C) Chicago Daily News
WASHINGTON — After three hours and 58 minutes of on-the-job training as President Ford's chief White House assistant Donald Rumsfeld acted like a man who wished he were back in Brussels.

There he had only the North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries to deal with as U.S. ambassador. Back in Washington, he was going around in a revolving door, it appeared, each today.

No, he told the press in what he billed as a "get acquainted" session. He didn't see his role as either that of a traffic cop keeping persons out of the oval office or getting them in — as did H. R. Halderman for Richard Nixon.

But even all of the President's senior advisers would have access to the President, because Ford welcomed advice from all sides "by background and inclination . . . (he) wants to know what all the people sources of information," but there "must be an orderly process," said Rumsfeld.

The job "immediately ahead" is to "smooth the transition" during "this early period" is to "coordinate" White House activities, and generally get the flow of responsibilities organized.

New team named by GM

(C) New York Times Service
NEW YORK — The General Motors Corporation, the world's largest industrial company, Monday named a new and expanded management team to lead the automobile giant. It also announced a shift in domestic, international and non-automotive responsibilities.

Thomas A. Murphy, the 58-year-old vice chairman, was elected chairman and chief executive officer, succeeding Richard C. Gerstenberg who is retiring Nov. 30 at the age of 65 under the company's mandatory retirement policy. Elliott M. Estes, who had been executive vice president for operations, was elected president and chief operating officer. The 50-year-old Estes succeeds Edward N. Cole, effective Monday. Cole is also retiring at age 65.

But the big surprise announced at the company's news conference in its New York headquarters was the board's decision to elect two vice chairmen, Richard L. Terrell and Oscar A. Lundin, to succeed Murphy on Dec. 1. The new vice chairmen are both executive vice presidents, the 55-year-old Terrell being in charge of the car, truck, body and assembly divisions and the 53-year-old Lundin supervising the corporation's finances.

Murphy's accession to the chairmanship and Estes' to the presidency had been expected but Terrell had also been viewed as a strong contender for the presidency.

UN-S. Africa in 'review' asked

(C) New York Times Service
UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. — The general assembly Monday rejected the credentials of the South African delegation and called on the Security Council to "review the relationship" between the United Nations and South Africa.

But neither action had any immediate effect on South Africa's rights and privileges at the U.N., and its delegation was continuing to participate in the work of the General Assembly and its committees.

According to the U.N. charter, a country can be suspended or expelled from membership only through the recommendation of the Security Council, and it is generally assumed here that either Britain or the United States would veto such action.

The moves Monday were part of a continuing campaign led by African nations to expel, suspend or at the least "harass and humiliate" South Africa. Their reasons are the country's policies of racial segregation, refusal to give up South-West Africa despite a judgment by the International Court of Justice, and continued trade with Rhodesia despite sanctions voted by the United Nations.

The credentials of South Africa's delegation have been rejected every year since 1970. The assembly's vote on the issue Monday was 18 to 23, with 14 abstentions. (The United States and Britain were among those voting no.)

Then a separate resolution — that the matter of South Africa's future status in the United Nations be referred to the Security Council — was adopted by a vote of 125 to 1, with 9 abstentions. The U.S. and Britain were among those abstaining.

This was the first time that the Security Council was asked to review that relationship of South Africa and the United Nations.

The 45 sponsors of the resolution requesting the review cited as their reason "the constant violation by South Africa of the principles of the charter; and the universal declaration of human rights."

"The time has come," Foreign Minister Elizabeth Bagaya of Uganda said in Monday's debate, "for the issue of credentials of South Africa to be resolved by the Security Council."

Released

FRANK Weichman was freed Monday after police told the court he had "no involvement" in the kidnaping one week ago of 4-year-old Allison Mechem. It appears now Weichman was originally charged with the kidnaping because of a case of mistaken identity and that a man held in Florida, Clifford J. Kroger, becomes the prime suspect. (UPI)

The Louisiana capitol, built in 1931 at a cost of $5 million, is 34 stories high.

Panel schedules textbook review

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — A special citizens committee will meet tonight to review a new series of controversial school textbooks which triggered sometimes violent protests and shut down coal mines.

The meeting, called in efforts to resolve the month-long dispute, came in the wake of a warning by an antitextbook leader that coal miners will walk out again next week in support of the protest.

The Rev. Ezra H. Grayley Jr., who said a statewide rally was planned at the Capitol Sunday against the "obscene" books, predicted the miners would shut down mines next Monday and Tuesday.

"The miners are itching to come back out here and get them (the books) thrown out," Grayley said. "The miners are willing to come out. Their children are involved."

The 18-member committee was conducting a 30-day review of the texts which were removed from classes by school officials pending the study.

Protesters, however, were demanding the unconditional removal of the texts without benefit of a review. The books contain passages dealing with prostitution, drugs, bomb making and radical politics.

At one point, last month, schools were shut down, 10,000 miners walked off the job and there were two shootings and other acts of violence.

A legal opinion has been sought by the board whether the books can be discarded under the terms of the state master contract, providing such a decision is made.

FBI could lose wiretap authority

(C) Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — The FBI may lose its last remaining bit of authority to tap telephones without court permission — in cases dealing with suspected foreign spies or terrorist agents and their American collaborators.

Despite President Ford's assurances that there will be no illegal electronic surveillance by his administration, critics on Capitol Hill are demanding new restrictions on so-called national-security wiretaps, although the Supreme Court could beat Congress to the punch in a pending case.

Warrants signed by a judge would be required for every federal wiretap — with no exceptions — under legislation when up this week by two Senate subcommittees in joint hearings.

"Some of the most flagrant abuses here have been wiretaps authorized under the bulk of national security," said Sen. Gaylord Nelson (D-Wis.), the bill's author. "These wiretaps do not have the prior approval of a judicial warrant. For are these wiretaps subject to congressional oversight — either before or after their supplementation."

"Instead, the government alone decides whom to tap and for how long. The government alone decides whether the exercise of its powers conforms with constitutional limitations."

Nelson's bill, and a similar measure sponsored by Sen. Charles McNichols (R-Md.), are under consideration by the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on constitutional rights, headed by Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. (D-N.C.) and the subcommittee on criminal laws and procedures, chaired by Sen. John L. McClellan (D-Ark.). Under present law and a recent court decision, the FBI must obtain a warrant, based on probable cause, to tap telephones in its domestic criminal investigations. But in cases involving foreign powers and their agents, the Justice Department has argued that it has authority to act without prior court approval.

Approximately 100 such national security wiretaps are usually in operation at any one time, Nelson said.

In testimony prepared for the opening of the hearings today Nelson said the Supreme Court is likely to rule warrantless wiretapping unconstitutional in a case involving convicted Soviet spy Igor A. Ivanov.

Ivanov, under a 20-year sentence, has asked the high court to review his conviction based on the claim that the evidence against him was tainted by the fruits of a warrantless wiretap.

The Justice Department has decided not to oppose Ivanov's appeal, inviting the court to settle the issue. The court has not yet decided whether it will hear the case.

Senate okays DST repeal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate has passed a House-approved bill to repeal year-round daylight saving time — set up for last winter's energy shortage — and return the country to standard time during the "dark" months, November through February.

President Ford is expected to sign the measure, and the nation would set its clocks back an hour on Oct. 27, 1974. Daylight saving time would return Feb. 23, 1975.

Year-round daylight saving time resulted in a flood of complaints to Congress last winter from parents who said their children were endangered by having to go to school in the dark.

The congressional committees that studied year-round daylight saving time said it amounted to energy savings of less than 1 per cent from January through April.

Ranking Liberals holding a steady 18-20 per cent. Wilson ordered the election in a bid to win a strong parliamentary majority for the next five years to deal with Britain's inflation-fed economic crisis.

He is also seeking a clear mandate to nationalize large sections of industry still in private ownership.

The last election Feb. 28 resulted in a stalemate, with no party commanding an overall majority.

Since then Wilson has headed a minority Labor government, liable to frequent defeats when the Conservatives and Liberals joined forces to vote against it.

Conservative party leader and former prime minister Edward Heath, who has been widely criticized for a "low profile" and seemingly lackluster performance in the first week, appeared to have taken the offensive in the final stretch.

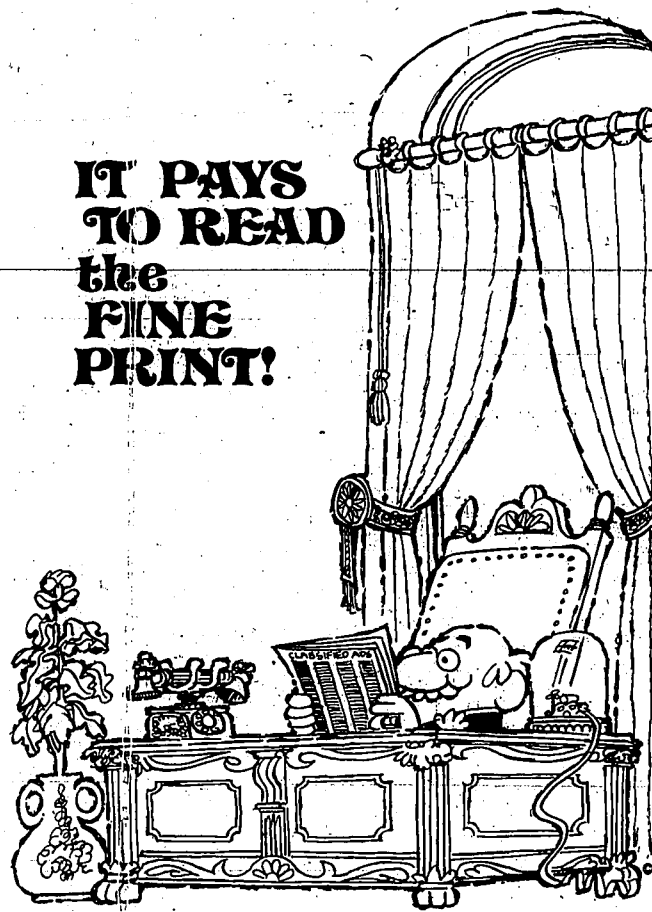

He appeared at his party's daily campaign news conference Monday and hit out hard at skyrocketing wage inflation under the Wilson government.

Candidate number sets record for Britain vote

LONDON (UPI) — Britain started its 10-day countdown to the national elections today with a record 2,192 candidates for parliament. Prime Minister Harold Wilson's incumbent Labor Party is favored to win.

Contending for the 635 seats in the new parliament Monday afternoon. The previous record was 2,100 in the election last Feb. 28.

The current list included a Labor and a Conservative candidate in each of the 623 voting districts in England, Wales and Scotland and about 618 Liberals.

Scottish Nationalists, Welsh Nationalists, members of the extreme right-wing National Front party, Communists and representatives of fringe groups like the Trotskyite International Socialist also filed.

One woman, Dr. Una Kroll, ran as candidate for equal rights for women.

There also were 43 candidates for the 12 Northern Ireland seats in the British parliament.

All opinion polls gave Labor an edge of at least 4 per cent — two of them a lead of 14 per cent — over the Conservatives, with the third

Market Review

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, which lengthens its trading day by one hour starting this session, opened in moderate trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which hit a 13-year high of 607.87 Monday, was off 0.47 at 607.40 shortly after the opening. Advances led declines, 172 to 104, among the 42 issues comprising the volume. Volume amounted to almost 330,000 shares.

The NYSE, which has suffered from lack of turnover this year, will close at 4 p.m. EDT instead of 3:30 p.m. EDT.

Margin calls within the past few days have forced many investors to sell in order to meet these calls. Also, some institutions have been adjusting their portfolios for the fourth quarter.

Wall Street, according to many analysts, now has become extremely concerned with the worldwide monetary-inflation crisis, which has become even more critical with sharp rises in oil prices.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I sure hope you can help me with, as everyone I've told this to just laughs at me. I know I read an article in the Orlando Sentinel Star stating that someone actually mated a dog with a cat, and the offspring was called a "DAT." (Half dog and half cat.) I read that it looked like a dog, but had fur instead of hair. I'm sure they even ran a picture of it. Now I could kick myself for not cutting out the article and keeping it as proof. I even went to the newspaper and asked for a back copy, but because I couldn't tell them the exact date, they couldn't help me.

That paper runs your column so maybe if you ask them they will try to find it.

PINKY II

'DAT' doubted

DEAR PINKY: If such a piece ever did appear in the Orlando Sentinel, it was either a spoof or a goof. A "DAT" DAT'S an impossibility!

DEAR ABBY: Grandma thinks she was "done wrong" by her son and daughter-in-law because they asked her to babysit for them while they took a course in landscaping, when they really took a series of dancing lessons. (I know Grandma wouldn't babysit if they told her the truth.) Well, tell her she's lucky. My daughter got to take her child for five months. She told us she was trying to get her life straightened out, and was working overtime to earn money to fix up her house so she and the baby could have a better place to live.

We knocked ourselves out looking after the boy. It cost us a bundle to fly up to get him, also for babysitters. (I work part-time, not to mention loss of income for clients I had to turn away.)

Now we find out that our daughter had taken up with a man who didn't want the child around. Three weeks after the baby went back with her, she phoned and asked if we wanted to adopt him because she was going to give him up and marry the man she'd been living with.

It's one thing to have kids who are liars. Some are bigger liars than others.

GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Yours not only flew the coop, she asked you to feather her love nest.

DEAR ABBY: You had a letter in your column from a handicapped person who resented seeing perfectly able-bodied drivers zip into parking spaces marked reserved for the Handicapped," then walk a few steps to the store or building.

The writer complained that he often hobbled on crutches a long way to his destination while some inconsiderate, selfish chad took the parking place reserved for the handicapped.

Abby, one need not be crippled to be handicapped. Many disabilities are not visible. A heart patient, or one with severely reduced lung power may be more seriously handicapped than someone on crutches.

You should have said, "Before calling people inconsiderate, selfish chads" for having grabbed your parking space, consider that many who appear to be able-bodied and healthy may be in the worse physical condition than you are."

ASTHMATIC'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Thank you for pointing out something that never occurred to me. You are far more insightful than I.

DEAR ABBY: I didn't know how to address letters to my daughter who lives with her boyfriend out of town, so I asked my psychiatrist who has a son who lives with his girl friend. He said he addresses his letters to Jane and John Doe. Now that's what I do.

Opening lead—10♣

By Oswald & James Jacoby

When we watched today's third bid in the Olympiad fund pairs, we saw very few contracts made. With no one vulnerable there was a tendency for East and West to go to three spades. South might pass or pass. In either case a careful play would see East going down one trick.

It wouldn't be a bad score. South would make three clubs by the side expedient of ruffing a diamond in dummy before losing control of the trump suit. With the 5-point part score bonus, three clubs bid and made would count 110. Three spades doubled down would only count 100.

The rather peculiar bidding in the box developed when North went into a long huddle before passing to his partner's three club bid. East, an alert player, realized that North would not take a push and bid three spades.

Now South bid what we consider a rather unethical four clubs. He had paid full attention to his partner's slow pass and apparently came to the conclusion that North held a trifle more in the way of club support, but had made up his mind not to bid; so South bid for his partner.

Incidentally there was nothing wrong with North's thinking. A player is entitled to think. His partner should not act upon that thought.

The bidding has been:

West North East South
 1♠ Pass 1♠
 2♠ Pass 2♠
 3♠ Pass 3♠

You, South, hold:

SUN VALLEY—(UPH)—The Idaho Hospital Association awarded its Star Garnet Award for outstanding service in the health field to Hep. Orval Hansen, R-Idaho, this year.

Hansen told the convention of health professionals the nation "can learn something from you."

"We can learn to strive to bind up wounds and encourage the healing process," he said.

"And we can learn that a nation and its leaders are no more immune from a wrong diagnosis than those in the health field," he said.

Harold P. Plummer, the author of "The Frontier of our Times," told the 900 members at the convention that the challenge of change lies in whether or not individuals choose to hope, dream, reach and teach.

He said if the people of today decide not to seek those ideals, then the world will "become a cosmic coffin in a celestial cemetery."

He said a pessimist is a person who is optimistic that things would be better in the world if everyone returned to doing things as they are done in the past.

"But we can't pull the plug and live in the past," said Plummer. "In the long run, nature has the last word. You don't impeach God."

Big Wood River tree removal under way

BY BART QUESNELL
Times-News writer

RETRICHUM—A program of timber removal and levee construction on Big Wood River has begun.

A technician with the Idaho Department of Water Administration, when questioned about fears of further channeling, said Monday "it won't happen this time."

Mike Steele, water resource technician, said Flood Control District No. 9, Blaine County, had requested a tree removal permit. Steele said the district has assured the department of water administration the intent is "only to remove trees and replace some leaves."

Steele said his department had issued a tree removal permit after inspecting the work to be done. A private contractor Monday was bulldozing down trees and log jams created during the spring runoff.

The permit is for 50 miles of river beginning south of the U.S. Forest Service boundary at North Fork and extending southward.

Steele said although the work "would be held to a minimum" there would be visible signs of the work along the river.

The department of water administration, Steele said, has issued permits only on tree removal work to be done although he said the flood control district has asked the US Corps of Engineers to replace and build up levees wiped out this year.

He said some work would have to be done to build up the levee at Henington School which was eroded this spring.

"Following state standards the crops will probably be granted the permit," Steele said. Many of the levees along the river, he said, would have held better "if they had, been maintained better." However he said the small levees imposed on the flood district here did not allow for adequate maintenance.

Steele said all permits had to go through the state administration office before work could commence. This summer he said Union Pacific began channeling the river at the steel bridge at Cold Springs without a permit.

He said his office contacted UP immediately for an explanation. He said UP officials told him it was an emergency. Steele said his office then did issue a permit for the protection of the railroad trestle crossing.

Steele said the gravel left in the middle of the river from that job would be moved back to the dikes and used as a base for more rip rap work by UP.

The water administration department can issue permits to individuals and to the flood control district to work in the river without going through the planning and zoning county office, Steele said.

Steele said every area where a permit is issued is checked by his department first. Local flood control director James Hogg confirmed Tuesday that the US Corps of Engineers will replace three levees this month that washed out during the spring runoff.

One levee broke at the Bellevue Bible Camp and two others broke near the Glendale Bridge. The corps completed a $25,000 levee and rip-rap job before the extremely high water hit the area.

Hogg said he thought the operation by the corps this month would be much more extensive. This is the first time the corps has had to come in to replace levees, according to Hogg.

The levees that broke this spring had been cared for, Hogg said, but high water during the run off made it impossible to prevent the levees from bursting. Several tons of large rocks were dumped last fall at the Bellevue Bible Camp levee to bolster it, Hogg said.

"The water just found a weak spot, I guess, and washed it out," Hogg said.

Hogg said the district has hired Keith Myers, local operator, for the immediate timber snagging operation. Myers is to clear a jam at Engle Creek and Lake Creek to protect the Highway next spring.

Water crept dangerously close to US 93 during the spring run off at those points. In addition, Hogg said the highway department is to dump large rocks in the water at Lake Creek to shore up several old dikes that are tied there now to protect the highway.

Hogg said he did know how long the entire levee and snagging operation would last.

Citizen help solicited

TWIN FALLS—William L. Chancey, chairman of the Twin Falls County Commission, said today citizen help is being solicited in updating the county's crowd control ordinance.

He said the commissioners will select about five or more residents of the county to meet with them as a special committee and review the existing ordinance. This committee will be asked to make recommendations for changes and means of strengthening it for better crowd control.

Such understanding as the Evel Krivelev canyon jump attempt and rock festivals have posed serious traffic and other problems in the county during the current year and commissioners hope to develop an ordinance to give law enforcement officers and county officials better control of such events, Chancey said.

Juvenile arrested

TWIN FALLS—A juvenile boy was arrested by Twin Falls city police and released to his father in connection with the theft of auto parts from the Willis Motor Co. parking lot.

City police, on routine patrol, found a number of parts lying beneath a vehicle on the parking lot. On investigating they frightened a young man from a nearby alley and gave chase, taking him into custody.

A later investigation at the lot revealed about $155 worth of parts including the carburetor, gas line and distributor cap had been removed from a 1967 Mustang on the lot.

Aide visits Kootenais

BONNERS FERRY, Idaho (UPI)—A special assistant to Interior Secretary Rogers Morton came to the small Northern Idaho community Monday to view first-hand the plight of the tiny Kootenai Indian tribe.

Roy Sampsel, representing the secretary in the Northwest, spent several hours visiting the site of the tribe's ramshackle community located on five acres just outside Bonners Ferry.

The community is located on the only acreage owned in common by the tribe and is home of a handful of Kootenai families as well as site of an historic mission.

Sampsel made the trip at the request of tribal leaders and after meeting earlier in the day in Spokane with the affiliated tribes of Northwest Indians.

With Sampsel in Spokane was Morris Thompson, Bureau of Indian Affairs Commissioner.

Bingham eyes new hospital

BLACKFOOT (UPI)—Bingham County voters Oct. 8 will go to the polls to vote on a $7.2 million bond issue for building a new hospital and remodeling the present hospital into a nursing home.

Bingham Memorial Hospital is 22 years old and officials feel that remodeling would cost as much as building a new facility. The old structure would provide additional nursing home space for Blackfoot.

County officials also pointed out that federal funds are not available for remodeling and the present structure does not meet many fire and building code standards. The new hospital would provide for 52 beds.

Man robbed

CALDWELL (UPI)—An elderly Caldwell man told police Monday night he was robbed of $400 to $500 by a man who struck him on the head.

Vandale Harris said he was walking on Kimball when the man hit him, pulled his coat over his head and told him to hand over his wallet.

Landmark destroyed

IDAHO CITY (UPI)—Fire destroyed an early-day landmark in Idaho City early today.

Now owned by Mrs. Buffy Lappin the structure—known as the Garrett House—was built in 1869 from brick made at Buena Vista Bar, a pioneer suburb of Idaho City. It was located on east hill near the Roman Catholic Church.

Although the house still was being used nobody was home at the time of the fire. Cause of the blaze was unknown.

The building may have been the first brick house built in Idaho.

Park speaks in MH

MOUNTAIN HOME, Idaho (UPI)—Atty. Gen. Tony Park says the state's new anti-shoplifting law is a way to deter the crime, not just punish the offender.

Park told the Mountain Home Chamber of Commerce Monday shopping has been costing Idaho merchants $15 million a year and individual and families $100 a year.

He said the new law, in addition to criminal charges, makes the convicted shoplifter liable to a civil penalty of $100 to $250 payable to the merchant in addition to the value of the items taken.

Youth 'eritten'

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (UPI)—Mike Johnson, 13, Burke, Idaho, was in critical condition today at a local hospital suffering from an accidental shotgun wound in the chest.

The Shoshone County sheriff's office said the boy was shot Saturday at Burke while he and another youth were examining a 12-gauge shotgun.

Artifacts found

POCATELLO (UPI)—Crews digging the foundation for a new city hall have found artifacts dating back to rooming houses that once operated in the area.

Eight to 10 feet below the present street levels crews Monday found a three-inch tall glass bottle from Mrs. Potter's Hygienic Supply Co. of Cincinnati, Ohio, and a number of old whisky bottles.

Pocatelto residents referred to the establishments as "rooming houses" while they were in operation around the police station and present city hall until 1943 when military officials from near-by installations decided the houses were a health hazard.

The houses went out of business when prostitution was declared illegal in Pocatelto in 1943.

GOP meet

MRS. ROBERT ULLMAN, president of the Twin Falls County Republican Women's Club, chairs with Bob Smith, candidate for the Senate, during Monday's luncheon meeting which coincided with the opening of the GOP headquarters in Twin Falls.

Candidates speak in TF

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—America should free its development of coal, gas and uranium resources to fight inflation and energy dependence, Republican senatorial candidate Bob Smith said Tuesday.

Speaking along with other statewide Republican candidates at the Twin Falls County Republican Women's annual membership luncheon, Smith said the United States has become "dangerously dependent upon other nations for oil." He said the county imports $80 million of oil daily, compared to the Idaho state's general fund budget of $190 million a year.

The membership luncheon coincided with the opening of Republican headquarters in Twin Falls County.

Smith maintained this "unacceptable drain" is a major contributor to a 15 per cent rate of inflation which in turn is causing credit crises. "The money's just not there anymore because of the inflation and because of our energy policies," he said. He said the coal, gas and uranium industry suffers threatened because of "A-lene with 25 per cent unemployment by December, he said.

Smith criticized Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, for his support of the Cost of Living Council, for inconsistent stands on loans to the Russians, and for support of the Consumer Protection Act.

Speaking on behalf of her husband who is running for Congress, Connie Hansen lashed out at Lewiston Morning Tribune reporter Jay Shellady and US House Administration Committee chairman Wayne Hays, D-Ohio. She said Shellady was "on the payroll of Democrats two years ago" and so is "well-versed" in hating Republican candidates. Hays' "primary purpose right now is to elect Democrats," she said, citing his unreported acceptance of campaign funds.

The House Administration Committee unanimously voted in August to refer its investigation of George Hansen's "apparent violations" of several campaign laws to the US Justice Department for more investigation and possible prosecution.

Gubernatorial candidate Jack Murphy attacked Gov. Cecil D. Andrus for expanding the state's budget from $115 million to $197 million since he took office and for increasing the number of state employees from 11,000 to 14,300. The lieutenant governor said Andrus had promised to reduce state agencies by 10 per cent.

Attorney General candidate Wayne Kidwell reiterated that many federal agencies "have gone too far" and that the attorney general's office should be used as a vehicle to challenge federal programs such as OSHA.

He also emphasized the importance of cracking down on narcotics activity in the state, maintaining the problem is bigger this year than it was last year and that it will grow even larger next year.

Annual endurance race slated Oct. 5

JACKPOT—Readying to ride again in the second annual Diamondfield Jack endurance race Oct. 5 from Kimberly to Jackpot is the Fugh family of Richfield.

Fugh's wife, Carol, will repeat with which commences the historic escape ride of Diamondfield Jackson Lee Davis.

Trial testimony states Davis, a cattle range detective accused of having murdered two sheepmen, rode from the Shoelose Ranch near Kimberly to the Bear's Nest spread, 10 miles south of what is now Jackpot, in something over five hours.

Astride what appeared to be an out-of-condition Arabian, a Los Angeles professional won the race last year in 3 hours and 10 minutes.

The Fughs participated in the 1972 Wasatch Mountains Endurance Ride, sponsored by the Utah Arabian Horse Club, which for 50 miles miles one day and rest, "just like people do on Sunday," the seventh day.

To let their horses get "air," meaning to permit them in horsemen's vernacular to gain "second wind" they will start slow in the race, several feet apart of 5 to 7 by 14 feet in size. He said construction could probably be completed yet this fall.

One boat ramp is already in use at the area but the two additional ramps are part of the overall development of the site as a fishing, picnic and boating site.

After a fourth member of the Fugh family, John, 17, brother to Kim, would be participating, too, except that he is on crutches after a knee operation. He was hurt in landing a horse out of a pickup truck.

To condition them for the long, fast run, the Fughs ride 10 to 12 miles five days each week, 25 had a time of 3 hours, 41 minutes.

The Diamondfield Jack runs nearly as steep. It goes over Deadline Ridge, a part of 7,500-foot-high Rock Creek Pass.

Robert L. Harney, Kimberly Road, Twin Falls, who is in charge of arrangements, expects 40 entries from Utah, Idaho, California, Nevada and Oregon.

Riders will assemble Oct. 4 at the Crockett Meadows Ranch on Rock Creek in Idaho, and entries will be accepted by Harney up to that time.

First place prize is $500. A barbecue will be served at 4 p.m. Oct. 4 at the ranch to put contestants in condition for a hard push the next day.

The Los Angeles man who won last year was Dave Wasden, who is expected back CAROL FUGH, Cocho, Kim Fugh and Hoyt Fugh, from left, get ready for the second annual Diamondfield Jack endurance ride Saturday. The race will cover 54 miles from Kimberly to Jackpot, recreating Diamondfield's famous ride when he was accused of killing sheepherders on Deadline Ridge in the 1860s. In last year's ride, Cocho, a Palomino, received the Best of Condition award.

Bill Walton begins life in pro ball with own style

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — No matter what else he did, Bill Walton always kept one eye peeled on that little canvas bag.

The mustard-colored one with the rip in it.

The words "Portland Trail Blazers" were stenciled on the bag and it was stuffed so tightly, it bulged like some overstuffed sausage at the seams.

Bill Walton carried the bag in his hand when he walked into Madison Square Garden for the first time in his life Monday morning. He held on to the bag while riding up on the elevator to the press lounge where he would answer questions about how it felt being a professional now and when it was time for lunch, Portland's $2-million rookie laid the bag down near the chair he was sitting in, carefully, almost tenderly.

"Here, lemme take it from you," offered Jimmie Wergeles of the New York Knicks' front office staff, trying to be helpful. "Is this the one with the money in it?"

"No, no," said Walton, speaking barely above a whisper, which is pretty much his normal tone. "It has my uniform in it. That's more important."

Anyone who doesn't know Bill Walton would never believe that. Anyone who does know him, would.

"He's a genuine human being," says Herman Sarkowsky, president of the Trail Blazers. "Not an ounce of con in him. That's refreshing in the business."

Walton signed a five-year contract with Portland calling for a total of $2 million or $400,000 a year and Sarkowsky feels he got a bargain. Portland finished last in the NBA a year ago. Now that they have Walton, there are those who feel the Trail Blazers will turn the whole thing around this season.

Harry Glickman, Portland's executive vice president and general manager, is a man with both feet on the ground. Naturally, he's delighted about the signing of Walton and new coach Lennie Wilkens, but he's not letting his heart run away with his head.

"It all depends what they mean when they say he's going to turn the whole thing around for us," says Glickman. "If they mean we're going to win the world championship, I don't believe that for a minute. Kareem couldn't do that with Milwaukee, could he? We believe we have an honest chance to be in the playoffs. Right now, that's our goal."

Walton has played in two exhibition games with Portland so far and looked good. He had 26 points and 28 rebounds in last Friday night's 92-91 win over the Los Angeles Lakers and, playing in only three quarters of Saturday night's game with Golden State, he collected 10 points and 12 rebounds in an 88-78 loss to the Warriors.

He'll be making his third appearance for his new ball club when the Trail Blazers meet the New York Knicks here tonight.

For Monday's news conference, the red-haired, 6-foot-11 Walton showed up with a silk blue head-band across his forehead, a plaid lumberman's shirt, light blue cotton slacks and heavy brown hiking boots.

He was peppered with questions, many wanting to know how he felt about playing the game for money now instead of for the pure fun of it as before.

"I haven't noticed it yet," he said, "so I haven't thought about it."

Then someone wanted to know if Walton felt the presence could convert Portland into a winning team.

"That's kind of a loaded question," he said. "I'm not expecting anything. We have a lotta fine talent, a fine coach, and we're gonna do our best. I think we'll be okay, representative."

To give you some kind of idea what kind of open-minded approach Bill Walton has toward life, maybe you should hear the story of how he visited the home of George Rickles, the Trail Blazers' business manager, last May after he signed with the club.

Following lunch, one of Rickles' sons, Norm, 23, volunteered to drive Walton around Portland and show him some of the sights. There were five cars in the driveway, but Walton said, "Hell, let's hitchhike."

Nobody passes up a 6-foot-11 hitch-hiker around Portland. The first motorist to give the two young men a lift was a bank president and after he let them off, they got another ride from a farmer, who took them home and showed them his farm which had a creek in the back.

There was a rope tied to a tree over the creek which was used by some of the local kids for "transportation."

Walton wanted to try swinging from the rope, fell into the creek and got his clothes all wet.

The farmer took him inside and put his clothes in a dryer while the Trail Blazers' rookie talked with him for more than two hours.

"Had a great time," he got Walton reported when he left back. "Now that's my idea of real enjoyment."

Ohio St. keeps strong hold on top ranking

NEW YORK (UPI) — While four of the top 10 teams in the nation were falling from the unbenched ranks, Ohio State solidified its hold on the No. 1 spot in the United Press International Board of Coaches' top 20 major college rankings.

Notre Dame, Texas, Arizona State and Wisconsin were toppled Saturday, giving the top 10 a new look.

Ohio State collected 27 of the 34 first-place votes cast after defeating Southern Methodist 28-7.

Alabama edged Michigan by two points for the second ranking, 251-291, as each moved up one spot in the ratings.

Alabama defeated Vanderbilt 23-10 Saturday and Michigan crushed Navy 52-0.

Texas A&M advanced to No. 4 after running its record to 3-0 with a 28-15 victory over Washington.

Nebraska 21, climbed from ninth to fifth with a 49-7 victory over Northwestern and Notre Dame dropped from second to sixth after losing to Purdue, 31-20.

Texas Tech, which upset Texas 26-13 to return to 2-0-1, was seventh and Florida gained the eighth spot with its third straight win.

Auburn, a 21-0 victor over Tennessee, made its first appearance of the season in the rankings in the ninth position.

Southern California regained a top 10 berth with its 16-7 triumph over Pittsburgh.

North Carolina State, 3-0, heads the second 10, followed by Miami (Fla.) and Penn State in a tie for 12th. Illinois, the third 3-0 Big Ten team in the top 20, was 14th and Arizona, also 3-0, 15th.

In a three-way tie for 16th were UCLA, Texas and Missouri, while Oklahoma State and Mississippi tied for 19th.

Denver still looks for strong defense

HOUSTON (UPI) — Coach Johnny Egan has not asked hand-to-hand combat to be legalized in the National Basketball Association—it just looked that way when he went looking for "strong arms" this spring.

As he is doing, Egan also withdrew his invitation for "guns" to join the continually rebuilding franchise entering its eighth season and still looking for a team to play .50 ball.

"This ballclub has always had a history of being able to put the ball in the basket," Egan said, "but it's been unable to stop anybody."

Ranking seventh in NBA offense last season, averaging 107.4 points per game, the Rockets nevertheless gave up 107.6 points. But the difference was amplified in a win-loss record of 32-50.

Hoping to remedy that for the opener Friday Oct. 18 at Milwaukee, the 36-year-old Egan started his third year at Houston's helm by drafting some defensive muscle.

"I would like to see a very unselfish ballclub. This is what I'm striving for, and I think if we can do that we will have a very exciting team," he said.

"We had an excellent draft. We got (64) Steve Hawes, a fellow coming back from Italy who played over there two seasons. He's a mature player.

"Our second round draft pick, Gus Bally of Texas-El Paso, is going to be an asset. He's a good defensive guard. He's 6-6, very versatile."

Helping the team more than acquisitions was the trade near the end of last season that sent smooth shooting forward Jack Marin to Buffalo.

"It was hard for Marin and Rudy Tomjanovich to both be in the game at the same time

Patriots are asked about cockiness

BOSTON (UPI) — Three weeks ago the media worried in pursuit of the New England Patriots would show up for the season.

Now they want to know if the same Patriots are in danger of becoming overconfident.

"Absolutely not," said coach Chuck Fairbanks in the aftermath of the Patriots' third straight win, a 20-14 Stunner over the Los Angeles Rams. "We're confident, not overconfident."

Second-year back Sam Cunningham added the Patriots have no chance of becoming overconfident.

"I've been abused for so long, we appreciate a chance to win. It's our chance to get after people. Now we're the ones who make something happen. Now we take the game to them."

John Plunkett, who has thrown six touchdown passes in the wins over Miami, the New York Giants and Los Angeles, was a trifle more cautious about the possibility of cockiness.

"Without question we have to be careful about it," said Plunkett, whose last winning season was with Stanford's 1970 Rose Bowl Champion team.

"We've got to take all games like they were the Rams or the Dolphins. The Patriots are all aware of the overconfidence problem because next week, for the first time in years, they will be installed as a heavy favorite over the visiting Baltimore Colts."

What's What

L. M. Boyd

In old England, a run-of-the-mill horse, kept for ordinary riding, was called a "roadster." And a big stallion, used in tournaments and war, was called a "high horse." Inasmuch as only a well-bred subject could afford a high horse, the riding of such came to be mocked as sort of snooty. So you can see how those phrases about getting off on or your high horse sprang forth, can't you?

QUESTION ARISES as to how many potential mass murderers exist nationwide. The like of Charles Whitman, who killed all those people in Austin with sniper fire from atop the University of Texas tower, or Charles Starkweather, who killed all those people on a cross-country rampage, or Richard Speck, who killed all those nurses. It has been suggested by some psychiatrists that as many as one maybe two per 1,000 citizens could commit such murder by the numbers. Are they telling us that as many as 400,000 of those deadly demons remain at large, each awaiting one exact set of circumstances to blow? Good night! Sleep well.

PERFUME
Young lady, do you daub perfume between each of your toes? If not, why not? It's a matter of record that Cleopatra did that.

WHAT A LOT of New York City residents don't realize is 15.1 per cent of their own is vacant land. No, not streets or parks. Just empty lots.

CONSIDER syllables that don't sound the same even though they're spelled similarly. Such as cough, plough and thorough. Now compare those to syllables that sound the same but are spelled differently. Such as true, do, brew, through, zoo and shoe. Confusing, aren't they? It was exactly this sort of thing that almost but not quite drove our Language man into Chemistry at an early age.

MAJOR HOOPLE

quota cost hit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A foreign agricultural expert said today that Canada's new beef export quota system for beef and cattle imports will cost U.S. livestock exporters $113 million during the next year.

The quota system, which begins Aug. 12 and will be in effect until Aug. 11, 1975, would allow U.S. exports of 27.8 million head of live animals and 17.9 million pounds of fresh and frozen dressed beef.

Anlauf suggested that in addition to the disparities in demand brought about by the new grading system, "the Canadian moves also are partly in response to the developing world beef glut, now a problem in all of the major meat producing areas."

He added that since the Canadian import quota system also affects Australia, New Zealand and other major exporters, it will tend to cause diversions of even more beef to the United States — the only major market where severe import restraints have not been implemented.

This means even more troubles for the American livestock industry since experts are already forecasting an oversupply of domestic beef as livestock producers reduce herd size to cut losses as feed costs soar and profit margins narrow.

Tranquil setting

Water system plan maintained

STILLNESS of early morning creates mirror at Williams Lake south of Salmon. The adjoining mountains are reflected as the area is bathed in sunshine. The lake is a popular summer home and rainbow trout recreation area.

SALMON — Directors of the Williams Lake Sewer and Water District have voted unanimously to go ahead with a water system at the lake as approved by property owners in an election in August.
 The directors decided to re-submit the sewer system proposal to property owners later.
 Board Chairman Tom Millin said that officials of the Farmers Home Administration had indicated they would look favorably upon financing bonds from the district for the water system even though the sewer system could not be part of the original package.
 He said, however, that no official word would be received from the FHA until after the 45-day period allowed by law for persons within the district to protest the August election had expired. The last day to protest is Monday.
 The district had sought authority to bond in the amount of $750,000 for both a water and sewer system.
 The water system was approved 45-9 but the sewer system failed, 31-21.

MV student joins program

BUHL — Ethan Bickelhaup, Buhl, is one of nine Idaho and Washington students participating in the third and final experimental year of the AAMI program at the University of Idaho.
 The program, in Washington, Alaska, Montana and Idaho, is a regionalized medical education program linking schools in the four states to the University of Washington School of Medicine in Seattle. The states other than Washington do not have medical colleges.
 Dr. Guy Anderson, coordinator of the program, said the regional method is to provide training for students of rural areas planning to become doctors. While attending the University of Idaho the student works with local doctors observing day-to-day work and visiting clinics. Bickelhaup has a bachelor of science degree from the College of Idaho and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Bickelhaup. He graduated from Buhl High School in 1970.

$200 awarded
