WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two major grain companies agreed to President Ford's request to avoid a food "crisis" Saturday and canceled contracts with the Soviet Union for the sale of 3.4 million tons of corn and wheat.

"I think we've come out of this crisis in good shape," Ford told reporters accompanying him on a visit to his wife recuperating from breast surgery at Bethesda Naval Medical Center.

"I took the necessary action that was needed to protect the domestic situation and to protect us in our foreign situation."

The White House announced the cancellation by Continental Grain Co. and Cook Industries Inc., several hours after Ford met with company representatives and they met later with Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz and Treasury Secretary William E. Simon.

Butz earlier in the day indicated the administration was angry with the Soviet government for trying to buy up short U.S. grain supplies and might have imposed export controls had the businessmen not agreed to cancel the sale.

Asked whether Butz should be fired for mismanagement, Ford said, "We'll evaluate any problems we have domestically... I'm not going to pass judgment at this time."

But Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., announced his investigations subcommittee would hold hearings Monday to "focus on why the White House was not advised of these major sales until after Contineal and Cook had already signed the contracts."

The grain companies first said they would postpone the sale, thereby delaying a grain grain resulting from a disappointing U.S. harvest and threatening to push food prices even higher. But the White House said Saturday evening the contracts were canceled.

"The company representatives evidenced their full willingness to be responsive to these crucial domestic concerns," the White House statement said. "The two companies are now making arrangements for the cancellation of these contracts in accordance with the government's request."

It said the United States was discussing the situation with Soviet officials and that Simon plans to meet with "appropriate officials" during a trip to the Soviet Union next week.

"It is anticipated that this voluntary cooperative effort will enable the United States to avoid the imposition of general export controls," the White House said.

Ford invited grain exporters to Washington Monday "to help formulate a system of voluntary cooperation and reporting that will assure reasonable supplies to both domestic and foreign users."

Butz cancels TF visit
TWIN FALLS — Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz has canceled his scheduled visit to Twin Falls Monday.

Aides to the secretary told Twin Falls Republicans, who were sponsoring a reception and rally in his honor — that Butz had been requested to stay in Washington by the President to keep on top of developments in grain export deals.

Purchase price for reception tickets will be refunded, according to Laird Noh, county central committee chairman. Guests will be contacted.

Supreme Court in session Monday
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court begins its 1974-75 term Monday with capital punishment, wiretapping and the rights of women, students and aliens among the many issues up for consideration.

Bomb-carrying cyclist killed
DELFEST (UPI) — A motorcyclist smuggling a bomb into Northern Ireland blew himself to pieces on the highway south of the border town of Newry Saturday and a sniper attack on police forces in Londonderry killed a Pakistani woman militant.

The deaths raised to 1,082 the death toll in five years of violence among Northern Ireland's majority Protestants, minority Roman Catholics and security forces.

Round-the-world walk completed

Kunst, 35, a solo figure during much of the trek, was accompanied by a growing retinue of nose-checked followers who were braving a cold, windy fall day to be here when Kunst of Waseca became the first man to walk around the world.

THOUSANDS of white students boycotted classes in Boston Friday and joined their parents in a noisy, four-mile protest march on 16th day of court-ordered plan to integrate Boston's public schools by busing.

Busing protest

Mr. T-N says...
$1 million is still a lot of money for less than one minute of work.

Evel's pay wanes

TWIN FALLS — Evel Knievel's pay check for his Snake River Canyon Jump had dwindled to about $1 million — far short of what it was supposed to be.

Before the canyon jump and during the heavy publicity build-up, Knievel's promoters predicted the stunt would bring Knievel as much as $10 million. And they said up to two million people would buy $10 tickets to see the performance on closed-circuit television, producing a gross profit of up to $33 million.

As the jump date neared, promoters toned down the estimates to an audience of 1.5 to 1.8 million, grossing about $26 million.

But, as reported today by Newsday, a Long Island, N.Y., newspaper, things didn't come out as predicted.

According to Robert Arum, president of Top Rank Inc., Knievel's promotion firm, the closed circuit broadcast grossed $4 million, less than a quarter of even the conservative estimates. An audience of 450,000 people watched the broadcast, many with free tickets, Arum told Newsday.

Knievel's cut of the money will come to about $1 million, according to Arum's figures, Newsday reports. Originally, promoters publicized that Knievel was guaranteed at least $5 million and presented him with a check for that sum at a New York press conference.

Georgia governor urges import cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Acknowledging his presidential ambitions for 1976, Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter called Saturday for a mandatory 15 per cent cut in foreign oil imports and for immediate foreign subsidies to the nation's home mortgage institutions.

Ford due 'coyote war' solution

The announcement of the pending solution was made at a meeting in Washington Oct. 1 attended by Nat. Secretary of Interior Rogers C. B. Morton, Idaho Sen. James McClure, Wyoming Sen. Clif Hansen and representatives from other interested groups.

The committee's function is to recommend a solution which will "alleviate the coyote problems while at the same time assuring the integrity of the environment," Noh said.

Noh said he was "optimistic" that a solution would be found to the controversy, which has been raging for several years.

According to Noh, the sheepmen favor use of selective toxicants in predator control. The governmental policy up to this point has been prohibition of toxicants on public lands. But Noh said the committee members would be searching for a way in which the proper toxicants can be used in a safe and reasonable manner when and where they are used.

TF planner claims land use program may be 'sabotaged' by groups

BY GEORGE WILEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The first major land use planning effort in Twin Falls may be sabotaged before it gets effectively underway, according to professional planner David M. Richey, who charged Friday that pressures have been exerted on both the City Council and the County Commission to drop the Twin Falls City-County Joint Planning Council, for which Richey serves as planner, before it can develop a strong comprehensive land use plan.

Richey said the pressure was being exerted by special interest groups who fear a strong comprehensive plan will prevent them from carrying out their own plans for property development.

"The issue is a viable comprehensive plan or a document which collects dust," Richey said. "It's really an important issue, and I just don't know if the citizens will understand the gravity of the situation."

While the pressure against the Joint Council is coming from vested interest groups, Richey indicated, the conflict is being played out over the issue of citizen participation in the planning effort.

Beginning Monday, Richey will conduct an extensive service of citizens "planning forums" aimed at gathering public input into the comprehensive planning effort. Richey considers these planning sessions, for which he has the backing of Joint Council members, mandatory if the comprehensive plan for the county is to have any teeth. But vested interests, for the same reason, fear the public input, Richey said. Unless the public sessions are well attended, Richey warned, the effort to construct a strong comprehensive plan will fail and the Joint Council will not survive.

Indicative of the trouble the Joint Council is in, Richey said, is the fact that the City Council on Aug. 26 voted not to extend its half of the funding for the Joint Council into 1975.

Richey said that City Councilman Paul Ostyn, who recently resigned as the City representative on the Joint Planning Council, had been opposed to the citizen participation effort for months, arguing instead that Richey himself ought to draw up a comprehensive plan which could then be presented to the public through public hearings. Richey said he argued that this after-the-fact public input would not be effective in the design of a workable plan.

Councilman Ostyn, referring to a football game in Montana, could not be reached for comment.

City manager Jenn Milar confirmed Saturday that the City Council had decided not to fund the planning agency next year, even though the City had initiated the Joint planning effort in 1973. However, Milar said the move by the City Council was not an attempt to destroy Joint Council, but rather an attempt to get all funding for the agency under the County, where it logically belongs.

"I think there is a possibility that the City will continue to participate in the Joint Council, even financially," Milar said. "The 1975 budget has not been drawn up yet. In the budgeting process many times there are reversals."

Milar said the City Council's intention was to bring Joint Council funding under the county and county revenue sharing funds. He said this was a logical move for the city council to take since the comprehensive plan being developed is for the whole county and since city residents are included in population figures on which the county's revenue sharing funds are based.

Milar agreed that public participation in the planning process is "imperative." With the development of a three-year comprehensive plan, Milar said, the City would become eligible for up to $760,000 over a five-year period under the federal Community Development Act.

Milar said he knew of no special interest groups which had brought pressure on the city council to disrupt the development of a comprehensive plan.

County Commission chairman William Chaney said the county had not come under pressure to halt the planning process "at this time."

"There's been some comment to the effect that maybe we haven't got too far down the road yet, but I don't think that's true," Chaney said.

Commissioner William Wiseman said the county "as of yet" had not come under "a lot" of pressure to disband the Joint Council or get rid of Richey. "We'll stand up to the pressure when it comes," he added.

Chaney and Wiseman both said that no decision had been reached whether the county would continue to fund the Joint Council by itself.

"We're discussing it and we're thinking about it, but we haven't really got down to deciding it," Chaney said.

He said he was surprised by the City Council's decision not to continue funding in 1975. "They're the ones who sponsored it," he said.

Richey warned that if citizen participation failed to materialize, public officials would find it difficult to stand up for citizen participation efforts in the future.

Andrus asked to release data

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls Republican leader says Idaho Gov. Cecil D. Andrus should release his 1970 campaign fund records to clear up "basic questions about responsibility."

Laird Noh, chairman of the Twin Falls County Republican Central Committee, said there are "three basic questions which... could only be fully answered if Andrus opens the closed on 1970 campaign contributions."

A spokesman for Gov. Andrus said the governor has not released his 1970 campaign funding records if all other candidates for that race would follow suit.

Noh said the basic questions involve the state's conversion from Univac to IBM computers, the minimum bids set for state land in Sun Valley and the attempt by Andrus to change the State Horse Racing Commission.

Noh has suggested that contributions made during the 1970 campaign may have influenced the governor's decisions in these matters. Conversations with elected state officials and legislators have suggested the possibility, Noh said.

At a press conference in Twin Falls this past week, Andrus specifically denied receiving any campaign contributions from IBM, Johns Mansville executives or the Janus Corp., as suggest by Noh. Andrus acknowledged that the system still is not operating correctly, and questioned the rationale behind the changeover.

Noh also suggested contributions from the Janus Corp. or Johns Mansville executives may have been made prior to the motion by the governor to set minimum bids for state lands sold by the State and Board for development of Elkhorn at Sun Valley.

The bids were set at "ridiculously low levels," Noh charged and raised only after other land board members had questioned the figure.

A spokesman for Andrus pointed out that as chairman of the land board, the governor often is put in the position of presenting a proposal to the board, whether he favors it or not.

Noh also charged the governor may have received contributions from "parties interested in promoting questionable race track operations." For this reason, Noh said, Andrus at one point attempted to increase the commission from three to five members.

Noh said when these issues are coupled with others such as "possible conflicts of interest in operations of the state investment board and mismanagement of the Bureau of Narcotics, the fundamental issues of administrative competence or integrity are raised."

The spokesman pointed out the governor has provided full disclosure of his 1974 campaign fund, as well as monthly up-date reports during this campaign.

Canning not stopped by sugar price hike

BY CRICKET BIRD
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Home canning, preserving and baking, stricken by previous rises in the price of sugar, apparently haven't suffered a mortal wound.

In fact, many women are grilling their teeth, paying the high prices, and going on with canning and baking as usual. And others may be starting to can and preserve for the first time.

Sugar, which cost about $1.70 for a 10-pound bag at the beginning of the year, now has more than doubled in price. A 10-pound sack, at latest check, costs about $3.70.

Marion Swenson, of Swenson's markets, said his customers have "bought more sugar than they ever have before." He credits part of the business to people's desire to "protect themselves" by purchasing ahead and in large quantities. And he blames the media for "creating" the shortages and producing the fear that causes people to hoard.

But another part is due to the greater numbers of people canning, Swenson said. People are doing more canning this year, he said, commenting there was "no comparison" between last year's sales of canning jars and supplies and this year's market.

Most of the customers, Swenson said, feel the pinch but go ahead and buy. "They hesitate but then they go on cooking and baking like they always did," he said.

Swenson said he felt people may be doing more baking at home, not less. One product noticeably down in sales is ready-made cake mixes. People are baking at home to economize, he said.

"Total sugar sales, he repeated, are up. In fact, this year, "we've sold five times as much as we've ever sold before," Swenson said.

Several Twin Falls women talked about canning and other home preserving and said it was pretty much business as usual, but with an extra pinch in the pocketbook.

Ruth Day, with four children at home, said, "We're just trying a lot" about the high price of sugar. "You know, I debated this year." But in-store comparisons convinced her it was still cheaper to can at home.

With boys at home, Mrs. Day hasn't cut down any on cookie and cake bakings. "I can't honestly say I've cut down on cookies, and rolls," she said, but "I'm having to cut down other places to be able to bake."

The price of sugar has affected her routine, however. "I've just about given up on jam," Mrs. Day said. "I figured I'd just watch for sales."

So she's still buying sugar and doing some canning at home. But to pay the higher prices, also found with shortening and other key ingredients, she has to cut back in other areas.

"It's very frustrating to run a family right now," Mrs. Day said.

Donna Allred and Rosemary Euhanks both were among those lucky and smart enough to buy ahead. The sugar crisis hasn't quite caught up with them, yet.

"I was fortunate. I had a lot of sugar on hand," Mrs. Allred said. When word of the impending price crunch reached her, Mrs. Allred said she "hurried and bought me 600 pounds. The store felt I was foolish" at the time, she recalls.

But even with the stockpile, she didn't can as much fruit as usual. "I felt like I'd have to gut down. I think everybody must feel this way with this terrible price."

But she still made jam, as usual, and bakes almost every day for her five children. She has a peach tree so at least the fruit for the jam, didn't cost her anything.

"Eventually it'll hit me, whether it's right now or later," Mrs. Allred said.

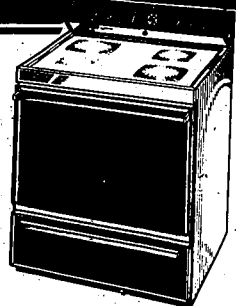

For Mrs. Euhanks, the sugar crunch has "just made it more expensive" to can and preserve, but "it hasn't stopped me from doing it."

"Even though it cost more, I know store goods will cost more, too," she said.

The higher prices have affected her habits somewhat, however. She bakes more peanut butter cookies now and less of the chocolate chip ones, because the peanut butter ones need less sugar. And she refuses to buy sugar-coated cereals and sugar-based substances like chocolate syrup.

But she still cans, preserves and bakes. "Canning is just a part of my life. You just groan a little more and continue on," she said.

Dairymen caught between Dutch and botts

DISNEY WORLD, Fla. — There once was a time, unlikely as this may seem, when I broadly owned a cow, or vice versa...

This was a real, live cow, with four legs, four faucets, and a brilliant look on her heavenly face. Her name was Tugboat Annie, and her game was kicking buckets.

Time tends to plaster over a checkered past. I had not thought of Annie for nearly 50 years. But the memory of those baldest years and that boasting bullhorn voice came back a week ago, when I went with several hundred milk producers who had come to Disney World to draw their troubles in Grade A homogenized Scotch. I had one Annie. The dairy farmers have 10 million Annies, more or less, and they all spell trouble.

Part of the problem — the least part, but the most painful part — is a problem of public image. Say "milk" in Washington, and the media boys begin to snort and roll their eyes. My brothers of the press see the milk producers as a gang of wheeler dealer salesmen with quarts of cream to give away. Even Peter Rodino, whose Newark constituents never have seen a cow, got a bucket of contemptuous cash.

Presumably, Rodino was on the cream list because his Judiciary Committee handles anti-trust bills. The milkmen know all about anti-trust bills. These proceedings might be bearable if the industry were grazing in high clover, but the industry is down to rough grass and dibbles...

Sen. Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin dug up some delict statistics. Twenty years ago Wisconsin had 127,000 dairy farmers. Today there are fewer than 50,000. Over the past 15 months, 3,700 dairy farmers have gone out of business in Wisconsin alone. In the nation as a whole, the number of milk producing farms is expected to drop from 400,000 today to 200,000 by 1980.

The reasons are economic. In the past couple of years, dairy men have witnessed a 100 per cent increase in fertilizer costs. The price of feed concentrates recently jumped 18 per cent in a single month. Between 1968 and 1972 net farm income went up by 21 percent; farm wages went up by 400 per cent.

These herdurs too might be bearable if domestic demand were soaring also. Alas, the milk producers are plagued by imported competition. Since the first of the year, 5 billion pounds of milk have come in from abroad. Most of this comes from Common Market countries that subsidize their milk producers.

U.S. producers benefit from their own subsidy. In the form of a support price of 80 per cent of parity, but they don't benefit much. The dairy men are hoping to see the rate go to 90 per cent, but they look at Secretary Butte and they see Tugboat Annie. When it comes to raising parity, the secretary is as cold as a cow bar on Christmas.

Whenever the dairy men look up from their buckets, they see that another doctor is skimming off some publicity by saying mean things about milk. A glass of cold milk is the most wholesome natural food in the world, but to some doctors milk spells cholesterol, obesity, and the galloping botts. Between the Dutch and the botts are the bankers, hiking their interest rates.

I got rid of my Tugboat Annie, but the professional producers are stuck with theirs. They can't even give their herds away. Here in the fantasy realm of Disney World, these are hard realities to dispel. Unlike Annie, they seem to heave to stay.

Electric rates under scrutiny

In a potentially historic action, the Idaho Public Utilities Commission has decided to consider changing Idaho Power rate structures to eliminate preferential rates now given to large power users...

The IPUC at the same time decided to grant Idaho Power a hefty rate increase to help the company keep up with inflation and to raise capital needed for expansion.

The IPUC deliberately separated the two issues by setting up separate hearings on the question of who should be charged how much for electricity. In the process it may have opened a Pandora's box.

Generally speaking, the Idaho Power Co. charges small customers more per unit of electricity than it charges large customers. The declining prices usually are justified on grounds that it costs less per unit to deliver large amounts of electricity than it does to deliver small amounts used by the typical residential customer.

However, the energy crisis has begun to bring the prevalent pricing policies of Idaho Power and many other utilities under fire. Critics argue that such pricing policies encourage people to use more electricity instead of conserving energy.

Moreover, the critics point out that the poor and the aged who tend to use less power than do the young and the wealthy, must pay the highest rates under the current pricing system.

They also argue that there has been a fundamental change in the cost of producing electricity that has not been reflected in the rate structure. They say the declining rates for larger users were developed at a time when it cost utilities less for each additional kilowatt produced...

Today, however, most of the best power generating sites have been used up. In Idaho's case, relatively cheap power from dams now must be supplemented by much more costly power from coal or nuclear fired plants. That means that each additional kilowatt of power produced today costs more, not less, than those produced earlier...

According to the critics, in order to reflect the additional costs of generating that extra power the rates should be higher, not lower, for big users.

A compromise position being adopted in some states is to move toward a flat charge. In Michigan, Detroit Edison was told to adopt such a flat-rate pricing system.

The Michigan Public Service Commission told the company this year that "Promotional rate structures are out of date. Society cannot be served by utility rate designs that act to increase the difficulties already being experienced. To promote ever-increasing usage and waste of electric energy, or any energy for that matter is self defeating."

But in order to take into account the cost of power hookups and billing charges that apply, whether or not any power is actually used by the customer, the Michigan commission provided for a flat monthly service charge to take care of "those costs associated directly with supplying service to the customer."

This approach deserves serious consideration. It faces the economic fact of life that there must be some basic service charge not based on the amount of electricity used, and also provides for fair distribution of costs among users.

As a political matter, it would tend to make large industrial giants such as the Atomic Energy Commission and PNC pay more, while charging the typical residential customer less, with so much at stake, the fireworks should be something to be held down the coming months.

It also should force everyone to look more closely at necessary use of scarce energy.

Deflating Evel

It appears that the only person caught up by deflation these days is Evel Knievel. In the beginning Knievel was supposed to make at least $10 million from his much hallyhooned attempt to soar over the Snake River canyon...

A fake check an "advance" of $6 million was paraded around the country by Knievel and his promoters as part of the buildup. Even after the jump fizzled, Knievel still claimed he was going to clear several million dollars.

Now a Long Island newspaper, Newsday, reports that Knievel will get only about $1 million. The total promotion brought in only about $4 million, about one-eighth of what was predicted at the outset.

It seems far fewer Americans were interested in Knievel's life and death than predicted, perhaps a healthy sign.

Most pleasant from the local viewpoint, the nosedive in revenue is the best guarantee that this community will be spared a repeat performance.

STOP THE PRESS... I HAVE SOMETHING TO TELL YOU...

SHOW ME SOMETHING I'D WANT TO SPEND A DOLLAR ON!

Detente will silence another critical voice

You have to hand it to Fidel Castro, he is a MACHO.

Through his people don't love him enough for him to risk a democratic election, those that love him love him greatly, even as Hitler was greatly loved, and for much the same reasons.

Here you have two headline-oriented senators, one of them a New England aristocrat with gentility dripping off his fingers and toes, traveling to Havana expecting to be treated as if he had just got off the ferry at Newport. And there is Jacob Javits, the East Side kid who is determined to show that plucky diplomacy can bring Cubans around just as he has, for what seems like several lifetimes, brought around Democrats and conservative Republicans...

Now when Fidel Castro gets cranky up, he has few peers. One thinks, of course, of Adolf Hitler.

Mussolini could do it, and Huey Long, and Gerald L. K. Smith, and when he really got going, Estrone Lumbum. It was the same Castro who exulted over the death of President Kennedy, whose representatives in the United Nations accused us of every manner of sadism in colonizing Puerto Rico, and so on. And the crowd loved it.

WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY, JR.

Less so Senator Javits, one gathers, though he continued to grin broadly. "I am disappointed," he told reporters. "And I disagree with him, naturally, and I expect to tell him that tonight."

The conversation between Senator Javits and Fidel Castro that night was not, so far as one knows, recorded. One thing is absolutely certain, and that is that Fidel Castro will not apologize. His complaint, but the way, was that we had intervened in Chile. Such a complaint would rank with a complaint by Hitler that the western powers had not lived scrupulously by the terms of the Versailles Treaty. Castro sent arms and ammunition and Marxist propaganda by the boatload to Allende.

The nations of Latin America declared a boycott of Castro over a decade ago precisely because he was interfering with their internal affairs. Interfering with their internal affairs not in such a way as to fortify their sovereignty, which has been the thrust of our efforts in Latin America ever since the Monroe Doctrine, but in such a way as to extend the satellization of his own island to the Soviet Union. Having failed, he publicly resents opposite exertions by the United States.

It is so awesomely typical. We have no particular reason for recognizing Castro's Cuba.

One reason I can think of is that it would be easier to find good cigars to smoke. But these can be got with a little ingenuity anyway, and if we recognize Cuba, you know what will follow. Detente. That means that we will have nobody left to criticize the United Nations except South Africa. We are not permitted, in the chamber devoted to idealistic internationalism, to mention such ugly subjects as Soviet torture, or East Berlin walls, or periodic tank promenades over the bodies of Czechoslovakian students, or the absence of any freedom ever invented in the whole of mainland China.

And, sure enough, Jake Javits began talking about all the accomplishments of the new Cuba. What I fear most about recognizing Cuba is the paralysis of the United States delegation to the United Nations.

As I say, there will be no country left to criticize. We will have to satisfy ourselves, and appease our honor, with risqué stories about what Jake Javits told Fidel Castro at dinner.

Senate serves notice

WASHINGTON — That perennial orphan of the political storms, foreign aid, has been given a stern cuffing around by a disenchanted Senate.

The Senate action has posed a challenge to President Ford's call for Congressional co-operation and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's vaunted talents for winning Congressional support for almost any diplomatic enterprise.

In fact, some Congressional sources believe Kissinger would be well advised to knock off his talks with foreign ministers at the United Nations and hustle back here for negotiations with bawky legislators.

Kissinger may yet get a chance to salvage it because the Senate sent the bill back to the foreign relations committee which means it will not likely be acted upon until after the November elections.

Before its move late Wednesday, the Senate asserted a policy role for itself in the Greek-Turkish dispute over Cyprus. In Chile and South Vietnam.

It voted to uphold an earlier decision to stop all military aid to Turkey, invoking a provision which requires U.S. equipment to be used only for self-defense or mutual defense efforts.

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., sponsor of the amendment halting aid to Turkey, said the Turks' invasion of Cyprus violated the provision. Eagleton, in the Senate debate on the measure, also took a swipe at Kissinger, who had conveyed his view that an aid cutoff would hamper his efforts to negotiate a Greek-Turkish settlement.

The Senate also banned military aid to Chile on the grounds, as stated by the amendment's sponsor, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., that the military junta in Santiago was repressive. It further passed a limit on fertilizer aid to South Vietnam.

Veterans on Capitol Hill believe the President and Kissinger will have to reverse the situation. Ford has hinted that he might veto the foreign-aid measure because of the cutoffs and limits.

Significantly, the Senate votes appeared to have nothing to do with a sudden outburst of frugality or concern for foreign spending. Rather, it reflected long-simmering policy differences among some of the liberal Democrats who have almost reflexively voted for foreign aid in the past.

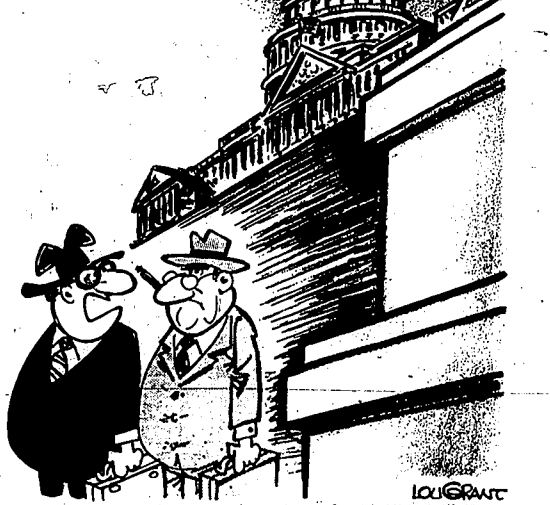

PETER LISAGOR

For example, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., was critical of the U.S. failure to negotiate a genuine peace in Vietnam or Cambodia. Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, led the fight to slash a $450 million chunk out of the total foreign aid bill, which has averaged about $2.5 billion annually in recent years. Kennedy has generally supported overseas programs, as has Eagleton.

The aid program may yet be salvaged. But the Senate clearly has put the Ford administration on notice that it intends to play a more assertive, not to say aggressive, part in the policies on which aid is based.

Vocabulary limit, energy attitude surprising

WASHINGTON — In his closing speech last week to the economic summit, President Ford told Americans to "... make up a list of 10 ways you can save energy and fight inflation. Little things that have become habits, but that don't really affect your health and happiness. Exchange your family's list with your neighbors — and send me a copy."

Dear Mr. President, Enclosed please find my list of ways we could save energy and fight inflation. As usual I made it, I went over to see my neighbor, Schlumberger, and asked him for his list. Schlumberger hadn't made up his yet.

"Schlumberger," I said, "the President has asked us how we can save energy and fight inflation. My wife and I notice you always leave the light on in your bathroom. Why couldn't you turn the light out when no one is there?"

Instead of Schlumberger accepting this he said something like "We'll keep our tank then he said a terrible word! bathroom lights on all night long if you want to."

ART BUCHWALD

I then went to Item No. 2. "I notice you always seem to drive to work alone. Is there any reason you can't car pool?" Well, Mr. Schlumberger started screaming and yelling and telling me to mind my own (that word again) business. I couldn't believe someone would be so selfish. I was tempted not to bring up Item No. 3, but I said, "It appears the fuel truck comes around to your house every two months. The oil man told my wife you could keep your thermostat at 74 degrees. Why couldn't you close off a few rooms in the winter and turn the dial down to 67 degrees?"

I want to tell you, Mr. President, Schlumberger said he would keep the (put the word here) thermostat at any (the word again) temperature he (word) pleased. And then he said why didn't I worry about my own (word) thermostat?"

I had a good time to just walk out but I still had a few more things on my list. "Schlumberger," I said, "that gaslight you have in front of your house — does it really do anything to affect your health or happiness?" I guess I touched a sore nerve because Schlumberger asked me to get out of his (with he had a larger vocabulary) house.

I know it comes as a shock to you, Mr. President, that there are such thick-skinned people in this country. I went to the next item on my list which was what Schlumberger was doing about inflation. I said, "My wife and I went over your garbage last night and we were shocked to see how good food your family wastes and..."

Mr. President, Schlumberger grabbed me and pushed me right out the front steps. I almost broke my arm.

Anyway, here's the list you asked for. Maybe you can do more with Schlumberger than I can. As you can see from my account, he's not much for jawboning. He's really a first-class (use any word you want).

Sincerely, Art Buchwald

Another view of Knievel's leap

(Editor's note: Morton Calm, travel writer for the Oakland, Calif., Tribune, has given the Times-News permission to reprint this column, written following Evel Knievel's jump in September. As the paper's travel columnist for 22 years, I have seen a lot of this. But as is obvious from the enclosed, I have a special place in my heart for Twin. Hope the magic has returned to the Magic Valley," Cathro wrote.)

It also introduced me to the world of people who work hard for a living. So last Sunday I thought of him turning over in his grave on that grassy knoll outside of town, sighing perhaps, and maybe checking a bit at the lunacy of it all. It had damned the town's twisting, churning river in the first decade of this century to irrigate the desert. He, a young immigrant fresh from Scotland, hacked a small farm out of the sagebrush and, together with other hardy pioneers, eventually transformed the raw land into the lush Magic Valley. They worked 18-hour days, and their sweat irrigated the land, too. The town and the Magic Valley never became a tourist mecca, although they were to be the gateway to one — Sun Valley, the West's first high ski resort. Last Sunday the town had more "tourists" in one day than it normally gets in months. It did become, however, a mecca of sorts for those who cherished the good life that comes from honest toil, clean living, and giving your fellow man a fair shake.

There were lean years when crops failed, and good years, too, when he won honors for producing a higher yield per acre than any other farmer in the state. He conned the earth into growing things for him. He and his family got up at 4 every morning, moving quietly about their chores so as not to wake their lazy houseguest. He came in from the fields at noon for dinner, then went back to work until supper time. A glance through the evening paper or a brief program on the radio, and he was back outside to free clogged irrigation canals or mend fences until dark. I tried to help him pitch hay one or two summer days last year, and a half-hour. A real city boy was I. Well, he worked hard all his life, and gradually built his original 90 acres into 240 before he died. He drove a battered Chevy, not a gold-plated Cadillac. He wore no diamond rings, but led the early morning sun, dancing on the dew of a leaf driving his particles. He saved enough, in the end, to send his son to college and to take a cruise to Hawaii on the Lurline (he was seaisick all the way) and to make a sentimental journey back to Scotland, where he bought a bigger headstone for his parents' graves. Last Sunday my backyard grass for "a moment" was redolent of new-mown hay from that summer on the farm so long ago. But it bothered me that his little town and my very first travel destination—a town heretofore unknown beyond its state border—suddenly was a name broadcast around the world as the setting for a weird stunt so completely out of character with it. And so for both of us, I resented the idea that pompous "pioneer" named Evel Knievel, by parachuting from an infernal machine as it fell into the Snake River Canyon, put Twin Falls, Idaho, on the map while conning $6 million out of the public. I knew better. In their own unsuspectacular way, the real, unpretentious pioneers like my uncle, Dave Cathro, who conned only the soil, long ago had put Twin Falls on the map—and in the heart—of America.

By MURRAY OLDERMAN TAHOE CITY (TNS) — It is 75 miles of precious shore line, reflected in the glimmers of one of the bluest lakes in the world. Precious in the fragility of its environment, encroached upon by modern technology and the wastes it deposits. Precious as a natural attraction in the highest, pine-studded center of the Sierra Nevada range, magnetizing hordes of humans. And so there has been in the last decade a clamor to preserve threatened Lake Tahoe, an issue which transects the interests of the two states, California and Nevada, which share its amenities, because there are national environmental implications. The Tahoe Basin, just like the Everglades of Florida or even the Grand Canyon of Arizona, is a rare commodity. Now on the south shore of the lake, lowlands of concrete and steel hotels rising above the feathered pines which sweep off the shore, and behind them are the visible Y-pronged scars of a ski area leaving an indelible tattoo on the mountain. It took Richard Heikka's wife one and a half hours on one summer, morning to get through Stateline, the Nevada border community which is a proliferation of high rise structures. "It's a miserable mess," states Heikka, "those six blocks of Stateline."

Heikka should be qualified to make that assessment. He's the executive officer of the Tahoe Regional Planning Agency (TRPA), a bi-state authority convened in 1970 to plot and guide and in some ways administer the future of the greater Lake Tahoe Basin. Already 45,000 automobiles a day stream down over Echo Summit from California and spill out of the Carson Valley in Nevada to inundate the southern end of the lake, where all the action is. "It's the aius that plague us," says Heikka. "It takes 170 square feet of asphalt just for that auto to park and 350 more feet to get it out. These automobiles use the environment of Tahoe." Heikka is full of bureaucratic facts and figures. The Tahoe Basin, which now caters to 150,000 population, "both transient and permanent, can achieve a population level of 300,000 without destroying the quality of life. The basin has 50,000 full-time year-round residents in the major communities of South Lake Tahoe, Tahoe City and Incline Village. They will nest on only 15 percent of the basin "which is urbanized." The TRPA has already put a tight line on expanding out into the 85 percent which is wilderness. Tahoe topographically is a delicate jutting of erosive rock almost right out of the water and when the surface is oxidized, the surface powder silt runs down into the lake and threatens to strangle it. Because other pollutants were building a dangerous amount of silt, sewage is now piped out over the surrounding ranges away from the lake. "The battle to save the quality of the lake is a standard of life," says Chapman. "We're worth, a longtime journalist who has lived on the north shore for 12 years. "The sewage problem is solved. Erosion and siltation is what they face. Also occasional air pollution. "The danger is that Tahoe" will be urbanized to a point where it won't be a pleasant place to live. Lake Tahoe is beyond saving. My solution: unpave the roads. The thought isn't entirely facetious. The most recent clash of environmentalists versus developers involves the proposed construction of two more high-rise casino hotels on the Nevada side in the Stateline area. One would involve 500 rooms, the other 900. They received the approval of the TRPA because of a ridiculous method of dual majority vote — the agency has a five-man California board and a five-man Nevada board and both must agree to stop any development. So although the vote vote against the hotels was 7-3 (California's five men unanimously against), for the Nevada board the vote was 5-0. The state of California promptly instituted legal action to stop construction. Heikka, who strenuously opposed the hotels, is now in the strange position of being a defendant against California's suit. He points out the two hotels plus the anticipated enlargement of the basin will add 7,000 permanent employees to the basin. "Where the hell you gonna put 'em?" he asks. "I wouldn't be surprised if the United States Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas step in with a restraining order."

Meanwhile Nevada gaming people push hard for further development of their lucrative industry in their concentrated corner of the lake, to allegations they have hindlers on. "They can tell you what percent of their money the people will leave when you get them through the doors," says Heikka, "but not how to get them through the doors." The existing communities do have a sense of rapprochement with their beautiful niche of the South Lake Tahoe, a sleepy village a dozen years ago now bustling with growth, has removed billboards and put "utilities underground to clean up the Coney Island look. Heikka says that the basin is working on elegant future designs for its waterfront, with the planning aid of the TRPA. The concern with environmentalists is not the "development problem." Prizes have been driven up because of the limited land so that the Tahoe basin is becoming a commodity of tens and millions. Mr. Average Guy brings in his tent on weekends because it's the only way he can afford to come there; tourists get to be rich to afford a permanent installation. And what land remains can fall prey to the unscrupulous developer. "The connotation 'developer' is only slightly more acceptable socially than embezzler," says R.T. Nahas, "and then only providing the embezzler fails to carry off his nefarious schemes in style." Nahas is uniquely a developer, whose gracious Rocky Ridge condominium project overlooks a promontory north of the City, and he is concerned that his conferees show responsibility. "The man making the final decisions that materially affect our living environment, for good or ill, he continues, "comes equipped only with money and the desire to develop the land."

The direction of the development in the Tahoe basin is what the current concern is all about. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Cross becomes victory symbol
Editor, Times News: My I please try to clarify a point? David Hoppe, in his recent letter to the Times News, indicated a question as to how the cross became a religious symbol. Hoppe said in his letter "The cross was the people's way of putting Jesus to death." He asked how an object used to put a person to death could become such a religious object. To the Christian, the cross is a victory symbol. Had Jesus not been put to death on the cross, our chances of getting to heaven would have been nil. To a Christian, the cross symbolizes the reopening of the gates of heaven after Adam, and Eve sinned. So the next time you see a cross, remember that it Jesus had not died for our sins, we would all get what we deserve. However, since Jesus did die for our sins, we do have a chance to get to heaven... all we have to do is accept Christ. See what I mean by the cross being a victory symbol to a Christian? I say, keep the cross up at Shoshone Falls. KELLY KILGAS Twin Falls

Some campers' acts give all bad name
(The following letter was sent to the district ranger, Bitterroot National Forest, Missoula, Mont., by Editor, Times-News: Dear Sir: Recently, I spent a most enjoyable ten days of hunting in the Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness Area. My partner and I were in a camp reserved by the Ken Wolfhangers near Gardiner Lookout at the opening of the early elk season Sept. 14. It is difficult for me to describe our pleasure at having had the privilege of spending time in this beautiful, pristine wilderness, and our pleasure was enhanced by having had 100 percent success on our hunt. Only one thing marred our stay in the wilderness. During the opening day of hunting, we happened on several members of a hunting party of eight men who told us they were camped at the big camp at the head of Bad Luck Canyon. These men told us they were from Twin Falls, Idaho, and that they had brought their own stock into the wilderness. They also said that they were the only party camped at Bad Luck Camp. They told me that they had killed a six-point bull and two spikes on opening morning. We were somewhat surprised to note on two encounters with members of this group on opening day that they very casually deposited their beverage cans and other litter on the forest floor wherever they happened to be. We took this, however, as just a typical example of bad manners and ignored it at the time. This group stayed in the wilderness apparently until Tuesday, Sept. 17. They were the only party we saw during our entire stay, so we have no reason to doubt their statement that they were the only party at Bad Luck. Because both my partner and I had filled our elk tags with trophy bulls by Thursday my wife took the four-mile trail walk over to the camp at Bad Luck on Friday, Sept. 20. We had never seen the camp and spring there before. We reached the camp about noon that day intending to have a trail lunch before returning to our Gardiner L.O. camp. We were appalled at the sight that greeted us. The camp was deserted and left behind was an unrecognizable assortment of filth. All types of camp paraphernalia including plastic, gas cans, beverage cans and food were strewn about. Several rotten elk hides were on the ground in camp, an open invitation to the blow flies that now infested everything. A very cursory effort at covering some of the garbage had been made and ravens had torn egg cartons, cans and perishable garbage out from under perhaps in inch of soil. Horses had been allowed to graze every blade of grass down and to bed of the spring. Words really cannot describe the unspeakable devastation left in the wake of the camp's previous inhabitants. Unfortunately, we had failed to get the names of the individuals from this party and of course, do not know if there is any way they can be called to account. We would very much like to see people, who show no respect for the creation or for the rights of their fellow men, barred from wilderness areas. If you can suggest actions that we might personally take to see this realized, we would be happy to hear from you. Thank you. DONN L. PARK Kennewick, Wash.

Ford aides know solons

In fact, some Capitol Hill friends of the President have advised him privately that he would do well to seek a greater diversity of backgrounds. These include former Rep. Melvin R. Quie, R-Minn., long a close adviser to Ford, particularly on educational matters; John W.

Blynes, a Wisconsin House member who retired in 1973 after becoming an influential Republican member of the Ways and Means Committee; and former Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton, who once served in the House and show Ford asked to help structure his administration and search for talent as part of the President's four-man transition team. When Ford gets around to reuniting the Cabinet, probably early next year, these men are among those regarded as likely candidates. Just how the President will use his growing reservoir of congressionally oriented talent when the 94th Congress convenes next year is uncertain. Ford lacks Republican majorities in either the House or the Senate, and observers are predicting Republican erosion at the polls this November. The only question left is just how large those losses will be.

Soviet Jew emigration deal in trouble

(c) New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — Negotiations for a compromise that could allow at least 60,000 Soviet Jews and others to emigrate yearly in return for American trade concessions have run into serious, last-minute problems that may block the agreement.

Highly reliable administration and Senate informants said the prospective compromise appears to have broken down after a decision by the White House last week to put aside a prior understanding to give written assurances to Congress that it believed the 60,000 figure, and other details, would be carried out by the Russians.

This surprising development has led to charges and counter charges by the chief Senate negotiators of the compromise and the administration about who was at fault for the apparent breakdown in the talks.

Until the latest developments, a compromise accord seemed almost complete.

The chief negotiators, Secretary of State Kissinger of the administration, and Senators Henry M. Jackson, Jacob K. Javits and Abraham A. Ribicoff for the Congress, were working on the legislative language to implement the trade benefits for the Russians and to set up a system for monitoring the expected emigration.

Now, there is gloom in Washington over prospects for the deal, although the negotiators hope to meet again Monday.

Moreover, the fate of the Omnibus Trade Reform Act seems in jeopardy. The act has been held up in committee pending resolution of the compromise.

The Soviet Union, throughout discussions in Washington of the last several months, was a silent but significant participant.

Moscow never made any public commitment, but gave assurances to Kissinger that in return for the trade benefits—non-discriminatory tariffs, known as most-favored nation treatment, and continuation of government-picked export-import bank credits—it would end harassment of would-be emigrants.

FIRST LADY Betty Ford, who is regaining normal use of her right arm just one week after undergoing breast cancer surgery, proves that she's recovering fast by tossing a football to President Ford in Bethesda Naval Hospital Friday. (UPI)

Quick recovery

Mrs. Ford said 'excellent'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Betty Ford marked the end of a week of hospitalization for removal of a cancerous breast Saturday by walking around in her suite at will and eating a hearty breakfast of eggs, bacon and toast.

Doctors told President Ford his wife would probably be released about Wednesday. Encouraged by the prognosis, the President played his first round of golf in two weeks, at Burning Tree golf course only a few miles from the hospital.

The daily medical bulletin issued by the White House reported that the First Lady continued to make "excellent progress" after last Saturday's operation to remove her right breast.

Mrs. Ford's surgeon, Dr. William Foote, said his patient spent "an excellent, restful night" at Bethesda Naval Medical Center in suburban Maryland.

Mrs. Ford is moving about her hospital suite at will and has "a good appetite," the bulletin said.

She dined Friday evening on broiled chicken, vegetables, fruit cocktail and tea and had a poached egg, bacon, toast, juice and tea for breakfast Saturday.

Water projects studied

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Army Corps of Engineers is reevaluating the need for about 600 projects in light of new laws which emphasize environmental concerns over navigation and irrigation requirements.

Corps spokesmen said Saturday that most of the projects being studied have been on the drawing board for years but have not been funded by Congress since at least 1966.

Under current law, the Corps can reevaluate any project which has not been funded in eight years. At least 600 of the corp's 900 projects fall into this category, Alex Shwailko, chief corps legislative liaison officer, said.

Shwailko agreed that most of these projects have been put on the back shelf anyway and given a low priority by the Corps and Congress.

Next year, there may be more projects eligible for reevaluation. Projects that have not been funded for seven years this year will be on the list next year unless they are funded, Shwailko said.

Corps projects have often been a target of congressional critics as a prime source for "pork barrel" spending that serves the needs of legislators to appease constituents back home more than the legitimate demands of curing for the nation's waterways and water supplies.

The Corps said that up to $5 billion in public funds would be saved if the projects are scrapped.

Deadlock may kill strip mining bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal legislation to control strip mining of coal considered by many as the most important environmental bill of the 93rd Congress—may be in jeopardy.

A joint House-Senate committee named to work out compromise legislation is deadlocked and has postponed another meeting until Tuesday—a delay that could kill the bill.

Chances were slim that final congressional approval could come before the month-long session recess. Environmentalists fear its fate in lame-duck session after the November elections.

An attempt by Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., conference chairman, to finish action failed last week during a rare night meeting when the senators and congressmen, who have agreed on all other aspects of the legislation, deadlocked on provisions protecting rights of surface owners.

"It would be a crying shame to lose the bill because of this," Udall said Friday, adding that the rest of the compromise was "a hell of a good strip mining bill."

He blamed Republican House conferees for stalling the compromise by siding with Democrats demanding surface owner rights.

"They don't want a bill," he added.

The controversial session dealing with rights of surface owners would affect billions of tons of untapped coal reserves in vast areas of the West. It specifically involves land where the federal government holds minerals rights, but individual ranchers own the surface under homestead laws.

The federal government has already leased much of its mineral rights to coal and power companies.

A Senate-passed bill outlaw strip mining on such land entirely was quickly dropped by the conferees, who then found they could not agree on a House version which would allow surface mining if the coal operator first obtained the written consent of the surface owner.

House members held firm on their demand for written consent of the surface owner, but Sen. Floyd Haskell, D-Colo., leading the Senate opposition, claimed it would allow "windfall" profiteering by ranchers. Various proposals to limit windfalls were considered without result.

"I would be a crying shame to lose the bill because of this," Udall said Friday, adding that the rest of the compromise was "a hell of a good strip mining bill."

"They don't want a bill," he added.

Ford program to require 'sacrifices' by Americans

(C) 1974 New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — President Ford will present to a Joint session of Congress on Tuesday an economic program that will require "sacrifices from the American people," the White House press secretary, Ron Nessen, reported Friday.

But the President will not propose an increase in the gasoline excise tax and he remains "firmly opposed" to gasoline rationing, Nessen said.

Briefing reporters following a meeting between Ford and the Republican leaders of Congress, Nessen quoted the President as saying that the program would reflect "the hard choices we and the American people have to make as we bite the bullet on curbing inflation."

But despite intense questioning, Nessen declined to give any specifics about the policy recommendations Ford will announce. In fact, Nessen said, all decisions made by the President so far are tentative.

However, he did indicate that the sacrifices required of the American people would not necessarily be voluntary. Some of the measures the President will call for will be mandatory, Nessen said.

Meanwhile, President Ford sent a special message to Congress Friday asking for the elimination or postponement of $3.4 billion of previously approved Congressional appropriations, including $500 million for defense programs.

The administration, which last month called for the deferral of other programs totaling $12.8 billion, had previously disclosed its intention to cut or defer the $3.4 billion. But under a new law passed last year the President requires Congressional concurrence for what used to be called impoundments.

William E. Simon, the secretary of the treasury, said at Friday's White House meeting, according to Nessen, that "the new economic program will require, and encourage Americans to save more, reduce waste and produce more."

The over-all goal of the program, Simon was reported as saying, is "full employment with price stability."

Although he would give no details, Nessen did indicate some of the things the president's program would contain. He mentioned conservation of fuel as one.

However, there was no sign Friday that Ford's advisers had agreed on any measures to conserve oil and other fuels. A proposal by Hugh Scott, the senate Republican leader, to tax automobile engine capacity or horsepower, for example, has reportedly not found favor in the White House.

Nixon leaves hospital

Nixon rests at home

(c) New York Times Service
SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. — Former President Richard M. Nixon began Saturday a new phase of his convalescence from pleuritis in his left leg and a blood clot in his right lung as he spent the first full day at home here after nearly a two-week stay at the Memorial Hospital "Medical Center of Long Beach."

The new phase, in which Nixon will gradually begin to increase his physical activity until it returns to normal, is expected to be a major factor in determining when the former president will be medically fit to testify in the Watergate cover-up trial in Washington.

While Nixon adjusts to a new schedule at home, his doctor will rely on a blood test to regulate the dose of coumadin, an oral anticoagulant drug. At Casa Pacifica, a blood sample will be taken once a week, less frequently than was the case in the Long Beach hospital, and the tests done at nearby Pendleton Naval Hospital. By thinning "Nixon's" blood—the drug hopefully will minimize the chance that another potentially dangerous blood clot will lodge in his lung.

When Nixon left the hospital Friday, Dr. John C. Lungren, his physician, said the former president would need coumadin "for a number of months."

Murder charge probed

United Press International Police Saturday were investigating murder charges against a Long Beach teenager, accused of killing a man she said raped her. Another California woman has already been convicted in a similar case.

Diminutive Deborah Kantaeng, 19, was being held on suspicion of murder for allegedly firing a fatal shotgun blast at point blank range into the neck of her alleged abductor.

But police said there were "numerous inconsistencies" between the stories told by Miss Kantaeng and Carl S. Tice, an alleged partner in the rape. Officers would not elaborate.

In the Northern California seaside community of Monterey, a Superior Court jury of seven women and five men found Inez Garcia guilty of second degree murder Friday for firing six bullets into a man she said held her while she was raped by his partner.

"I did it and I'm glad I did it," she screamed at one point during her emotional trial, attended by many feminists who supported her in a women's rights cause.

Detectives said a murder complaint against Miss Kantaeng would be sought from the Long Beach district attorney Monday.

Tice, 21, who fled unharmed but later surrendered to authorities, is also being held on suspicion of murder, in addition to rape.

Miss Kantaeng was allegedly abducted by Tice and Danny C. Allen, 21, as she left her job at a Curves shopping center and was driven to a park in Santa Ana.

Pedestrians pass earthquake-damaged bank in Lima

Peru buildings ordered closed

LIMA (UPI) — Peruvian authorities, fearing public buildings may collapse on crowds in a series of new earth tremors, Saturday closed all theaters, stadiums, night clubs, and race tracks in the Lima area.

The toll of Thursday's (twinnite) earthquake, the strongest felt in Lima in 25 years, stood at 68 deaths, 2,264 persons injured, and 13,500 houses destroyed or damaged, according to civil defense officials.

A spokesman for the National Geophysical Institute told UPI that the powerful earthquake that rocked coastal Peru set off a chain of earth tremors which may last two or three months.

Some of the tremors will be strong enough to shake buildings, but the Lima area will probably escape without further injuries or deaths, the spokesman said.

With many areas un-surveyed, officials estimated damages from Thursday's quake at more than $25 million, and that amount is expected to rise. In Callao, the port city near Lima, the damage came to about $6 million, and the national agricultural university suffered damages reaching $3 million.

Authorities issued an urgent call for tents to shelter 6,000 persons still homeless. An emergency loan system was set up by the housing ministry.

More than 60 earth tremors shook Lima strongly enough to be felt by the people in the two days immediately after the earthquake. Seismologists, whose sensitive machines registered more than 250 tremors after the quake, said the wave of slight tremors was normal, following an earthquake of 6.8 on the Richter scale of 10.

Residents of Lima, recalling the aftermath of the 1966 and 1970 earthquakes, said there were not as many tremors then as now.

Places of public entertainment will be allowed to reopen after they produce a certificate of inspection from a licensed engineer.

Authorities said that a search of crumbled buildings in the poorer sections of Lima and Callao might turn up more bodies, but they did not anticipate a spectacular increase in the number of deaths as after the 1970 earthquake.

Henry given $50,000 by Rocky

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Henry A. Kissinger accepted a $50,000 gift from vice-presidential nominee Nelson Rockefeller in 1969 in appreciation for his services as a foreign affairs adviser to the New York Governor, State Department officials said Saturday.

Department spokesman Paul Hare said that the gift was made after Kissinger had left Rockefeller's employ, but before he had become a special national security adviser to former President Nixon.

Hare's statement was in response to reports in the Washington Post, which said the Senate Rules Committee had asked Rockefeller to explain the gift to Kissinger.

The Post also reported that Rockefeller gave $100,000 to former New York state official L. Judson Morehouse. Rockefeller once commuted a sentence for Morehouse.

Hare said that "in early 1969, after Dr. Kissinger left Governor Rockefeller's employ, and before he joined the White House, Governor Rockefeller told Dr. Kissinger he wanted to make a $50,000 gift to him because of their association for almost 15 years."

"Before accepting it, Dr. Kissinger discussed this with the then-President and his counsel, Dr. Kissinger put the $50,000 into trusts for his two children and filed gift tax returns covering these gifts to the children," Hare said.

"He understood that Governor Rockefeller filed a gift tax return on the gift to him," Hare said.

Morehouse had been

Republican Chairman in New York State and a long-time Rockefeller supporter. He was sentenced to prison in 1962 on bribery and other charges in connection with a scandal in the New York Liquor Authority.

Bombs rip English pubs; 5 killed

GUILDFORD, England (UPI) — Two bombs suspected of being planted by the Irish Republican Army bombs ripped through crowded pubs frequented by soldiers, killing and injuring scores of Saturday night drinkers.

Army bomb squads moved in. Police commandeered private cars to help ambulances rush the wounded to at least three hospitals.

Police refused to speculate on the motives for the bombings. Except for the lack of warning, the bombs appeared to follow the pattern of more than 100 bombs.

Unearthed human bones inspected

Mass grave stumps officials

VINA, Calif. (UPI) — A mass grave containing 17 human skeletons was carefully inspected Saturday both by archaeologists and law enforcement officials.

Nobody was certain whether the bones belonged to Indians, Chinese, white pioneers of the wild west or more recent citizens who were homicide victims.

However, sheriff's deputies ruled out the possibility that grave was connected to the case of Juan Corona, the convicted mass murderer whose 25 victims were buried in 1971 an hour's drive away.

Jess Mendenhall, whose mechanical scraper uncovered the new site while leveling land for alfalfa planting, said he was not surprised when his blade pushed up several skulls. When complete rib cages chipped up, he called authorities.

Tehama County Under Sheriff Marvin Essex said the bones were old and brittle, and guessed that they were 50 to 100 years old. No remnants of artifacts, clothing, buttons or bullets were found, although Essex said careful soil sifting might turn up clues later.

Both Indians and Chinese customarily were buried in sitting positions, and the skeletons were prone. Nevertheless, Mrs. Eva Apperson, a local historian, speculated that the bones might be Chinese.

In the late 1800s, the community of Vina, 100 miles north of Sacramento, included 10,000 Chinese who came to California to build the railroads and hunt for gold. Now Vina has a population of 100.

Around Vina many people believe that unscrupulous early ranchers hired coolies for daily wage of 10 cents, and shot them on pay day.

Although the Chinese usually returned their bodies to China for final burial, there were Chinese graves in the area. Mrs. Apperson said it was common for floods to wash up skeletons from lowlands of the Sacramento River a half mile from the Vina site. Then the practice was to rebury them in common graves, she said.

The Vina area was originally inhabited by the peccolite Tehama Indians. It also was crossed by a couple of trails heavily used by white immigrants from the east.

Boss wills housekeeper estate worth $18 million

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (UPI) — Employees of the New Haven Foundry knew Mrs. Lucille Rahmeyer occupied a special place in the boss' heart. How special a place was disclosed when his will was read.

It gave Mrs. Rahmeyer assets valued at $18 million. "I was loyal to him," Mrs. Rahmeyer said Wednesday. "He realized it and appreciated it."

Her boss, Sumner D. Lamkin, died Sunday at age 72.

He was president and sole owner of the foundry, which employed 750 persons and has been a major supplier of automotive castings since 1926.

Lamkin named Mrs. Rahmeyer as his chief beneficiary and left $75,000 in other bequests — including $15,000 for the care of his German shepherd dogs.

A nephew and two nieces were not named in the will, but an attorney representing the three said they will contest the will.

Lamkin explained that he wanted to express appreciation for Mrs. Rahmeyer, who lives with her husband Lawrence next to the Lamkin home in a Mount Clemens suburb.

"I am extremely grateful for the loving care which Lucille Rahmeyer has given to my wife, my mother and myself," the will read. "I make this declaration so there will be no doubt or question about my intent to benefit Lucille Rahmeyer to the exclusion of others."

Mrs. Rahmeyer, a registered nurse, first cared for Lamkin, mother during a terminal illness 20 years ago. After Mrs. Lamkin died, Mrs. Rahmeyer nursed Lamkin's wife, who died in 1967.

Then, Lamkin's attorney said, Mrs. Rahmeyer continued to serve as a housekeeper and confidential secretary to the industrialist. She also had acted as director of the foundry for several years.

"For some time, she has been the only person authorized to sign checks," said attorney Alfred W. Afs.

The will also stipulated that Mrs. Rahmeyer become president of the foundry, which manufactures cylinder heads and manifolds for Chrysler Corp. and American Motors Corp.

The exact worth of Lamkin's estate is not likely to become known until after another provision in the will is completed — the sale of Lamkin's stock in the foundry and a trucking subsidiary.

"That $18 million is only an estimate," Afs said. "But it's not a bad one."

Woman denies she's dead

PHILOMATH, Ore. (UPI) — The State of Oregon declared Mrs. Edith Smith dead, but she insists she's the "liveliest old ghost the state ever saw."

The state Department of Revenue sent her a letter asking whether her tavern would be operated by her estate since she was "dead."

Mrs. Smith said Wednesday that she wrote back asking whether her death was accidental and could she collect double indemnity, whether she was removed from the tax rolls and whether she had a tax refund coming.

A red-faced state official said it was all the fault of the computer. "There are an awful lot of Smiths, you know," he said.

Payette woman to speak in TF

Divorce advice provided

LONDON (UPI) — British men got advice today on how to shed their wives legally.

It came from Sir Neville Faulks, a divorce court judge here, who complained Thursday about what he called current "idiotic" divorce legislation.

"Fill your wife with gin, give her a complacent lodger and file your petition next day," said Faulks.

Or, "All you have to do is say that you find it intolerable to live with her because she wears pink panties — or nothing at all."

Faulks made the remarks in a case involving a man who said his wife was committing adultery with his brother. The brother's wife also complained about the adultery.

Faulks initially refused the divorce because neither complainant testified life was "intolerable" with the partner.

"You must say that not only has your partner committed adultery but that you find it intolerable to live with the other," Faulks said.

But he changed his mind when the complainants returned to court and testified according to the law and he granted the divorces.

Faulks said the case gave him a chance "to say something which has been on my mind for a long time."

TF county nominal tax increase expected

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Tax levies for the various state, county and municipal taxing units in Twin Falls County have been set for 1974 showing taxpayers may expect a nominal tax increase in December.

Harold Lancaster, county clerk who sets the levies based on the dollar amounts as submitted by each agency, said there will be some increase in just about every tax bill because of higher costs being faced by the school districts, cities and towns, and highway districts in operating their tax units.

While some areas will begin paying on new bond issues this year, most of the increases will be covering higher labor and material costs.

The levies include a county level of $2.26 which is down from the $2.33 last year per $100 of assessed valuation. City levies include Twin Falls at $5.70 compared to $5.43 last year, a slight decrease and Murtaugh with a $5.51 this year compared to only $3.51 a year ago.

Lancaster said even though some levies are lower than a year ago, the tax revenue will be higher because of the increased assessed valuation in the county and the increase in the assessed valuation ratio for computing taxes.

This is up this year from 16.25 per cent to 16.50 per cent and is required by law to increase annually toward an eventual uniform and state-wide 20 per cent ratio. This means the property owner will be billed for his taxes on the basis of 16.5 per cent of the true cash value.

An owner of a home valued at $10,000 would have an assessed valuation of $1,650. If he lived in Twin Falls city and therefore the Twin Falls school and highway districts would pay a total tax bill of $14.52 per $100 of assessed valuation or $239.25 compared to $211.05 on the identical property a year ago.

Lancaster said the valuation of the county this year is $66.61 billion compared to $63.23 billion last year. This valuation includes new business and industrial additions to the county such as K mart is based on last year's assessment figures on real-property-in-general since new rolls not yet complete. Adding the junior college levies, which is up this year from 74 to 81 cents per $100 assessed valuation and the general school levy of .38 compared to .44 last year, all county residents will be a countywide levy of $3.47 per $100 combined with their individual city, highway district and other separate agencies.

Lancaster said this means a person residing in the city of Twin Falls and therefore in the Twin Falls highway and school districts would pay $14.47 per each $100 of assessed valuation compared to $14.28 last year. That same individual living near but outside of the city limits of Twin Falls would pay $8.82.

The total tax bill for the individual residing in Buhl would be $14.47 compared to $14.85 last year of which the city levy is $5.59 compared to $5.96 a year ago.

Near but outside of Buhl the bill would be $8.42. In Filer the bill would total $13.90 compared to $13.53 a year ago of which $5.40 is city taxes.

Outside of Filer the resident pays $8.42. Kimberly's total bill is $10.48 compared to $10.35 last year with the city levy being $2.17 and the outside of Kimberly tax being $8.30.

Hansen residents pay a total of $12.89 compared to $11.94 last year.

Total city tax is $2.64 compared to $3.60 a year ago. Outside residents pay $9.34.

Castletford residents this year have a total bill of $11.20 compared to $11.72 a year ago of which $2.68 is city tax and those outside of Castletford would pay $8.51.

In Murtaugh the total tax, increased by the cost of installing a complete sewer system for the city, is $14.46 compared to $11.91 a year ago. Of this $5.51 is city tax with those outside of the city paying $8.95.

Bond issues in Twin Falls and Hansen have increased school levies in those areas and contributed to the total increases. Twin Falls School District will levy $4.33 compared to $3.48 a year ago. Hansen will levy $4.37 compared to $3.37 again due largely to bond issues.

Other school district levies this year and last include Joint No. 416, (Class C district) $1.43 and $1.41; Joint District 151, $4.83 and $4.62; No. 412, $3.38 and $3.64; District No. 413, $3.64 and $3.59; District 414, $3.82 and $3.67; No. 417, $3.51 and $3.53; District 418, $4.15 and $3.43; Joint No. 233, $4.29 and $2.74, and Joint No. 234, $4.24 and $4.30.

The Twin Falls Highway District reduced its tax levy from $1.02 to $1 with reductions in maintenance, special bridge and matching funds. Other highway districts include Buhl, $1.03 compared to $1 last year; Filer, $4 cents compared to 97 cents and Murtaugh, the same at $1.

Two new taxing units were added in the county this year. The new Filer Recreation District levy was set at the maximum 30 cents while the Buhl Cemetery District is 19 cents.

Lancaster said the school levies this year reflect a special equalization levy which is required by the state to bring all school districts to an average revenue from the local tax basis.

Twin Falls schools are to receive $51,763 more this year, requiring about 1.5 cents more per $100 assessed valuation in Twin Falls.

Other districts' levies have been expanded with Cassia County Joint District 151 to receive $104.92; Hagerman Joint District 233, $329; Bliss, $15.69; Buhl, $12,166.400; Filer, $11, $12,789; Kimberly, $14, $6,750; Hansen, $4.5, $4,381; Three Creek elementary, $16, $109; Castletford, $17, $5,650 and Murtaugh, $18, $4,387.

Nixon's vault halted

(C) New York Times Service
LAGUNA NIGUELI, Calif. - The construction of a $100,000 government vault here to make former President Richard M. Nixon's tapes and papers readily available to him has been halted because of mounting congressional opposition.

An outer concrete fire shield around the area set aside for the vault is nearly completed, but work on the vault has been held up by a lack of congressional authorization, according to Richard Vawter of the General Services Administration.

The storage facility, where 30,000 cubic feet of space had been set aside for Nixon's White House files and tape recordings, is in a newly acquired Federal document center one-third the size of the Pentagon. It is 11 miles across the rolling Laguna Hills from the Nixon ocean front estate at San Clemente.

The vault could not be opened except with two keys, one in the possession of Nixon and the other held by the GSA. Nixon, as owner of the materials with acknowledged sole rights to them, could - by withholding his key - challenge government access to the vault, but the government could not restrict his use of the materials.

Officials of GSA indicated they were preparing to cancel plans for the vault and adjacent office facilities for Nixon's use because of the congressional fund-slashing and growing uncertainty whether the records would be shipped here from Washington under an agreement that accompanied President Ford's pardon of Nixon Sept. 8.

The House voted over-whelmingly Wednesday to slash three-fourths of the Ford administration's $850,000 request to pay for Nixon's transition from president to private citizen in reducing the amount to $253,000. The House eliminated the $110,000 sought for the vault and $50,000 for its anti-theft and clock protection by armed guards.

Under a Senate proposal, Nixon would be prohibited from destroying the tapes and documents after Sept. 1, 1979, as agreed to at the time of his presidential pardon. The government would retain full custody indefinitely, with Nixon's access to the tapes and papers subject to new GSA regulations.

There is strong sentiment in Congress for holding the materials in Washington until the Watergate special prosecutor, Leon Jaworski, and the courts, have completed their inquiries into events during Nixon's five and one-half years as president.

The space set aside for the tape-preparation vault, together with an adjoining area for Nixon's use in drawing on them with the help of a specially assigned GSA employee to write his memoirs, is on the eleven-acre main floor of the new Laguna Niguel document center.

Of the seven-story building's 1,077,000 square feet, half of which already has been assigned to various government agencies, 190,000 square feet have been taken over by the national archives, the center's first tenant. The archives section is being fitted into compartments with steel-reinforced fire walls.

A spokesman for GSA said that since work on the Nixon vault had not yet started, the space could easily be converted to more conventional document storage.

A freeze on the shipment of any Nixon tapes or records to the new center has been ordered by the Ford administration until the controversy over their control is resolved.

The most sensitive of the materials, including Watergate and other controversies recorded on tape in the White House by Nixon over a three-year period, have been segregated from the main body of his files and are in custody of the Secret Service in the executive office building.

The controversy over the files has thrown into doubt plans of the Richard M. Nixon Foundation, headed by a group of his wealthy backers, to build a $8 million Nixon library and museum.

Deaf mute chases trousers

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — When his women guests ran off with-deaf-mute, Burt Schwartzman's trousers, they overlooked the fact that he could run and write.

So Sheila McEneaney and Patricia Van Pelt are in the Dade County jail today, charged with robbery.

Police said the two women were in Schwartzman's room at the Fountainhead motel when he went into the bathroom. The two women seized his trousers and fled, officers said.

Schwartzman, 35, sans trousers, chased the pair and caught them in the motel parking lot, where they beat him with their platform shoes. The women escaped, police said.

Schwartzman, still sans trousers, then flagged down a passing police car on busy Collins Avenue and scrambled into describing his plight. Police tracked down the women and arrested them.

Fun night planned for Oct. 28

TWIN FALLS — A benefit fun night sponsored by Vishnu Camp 2970 Royal Neighbors of America is planned for Oct. 28 at 7:30 p.m. at the L.o.o.f. Temple.

Plans were made at a special meeting Friday, called by orce, Mrs. Ted Samples. The audit was read and accepted by members and past orce. Lieutenant Kevan now goes to Kadena AB, Okinawa, for flying duty with a unit of the Pacific Air Force.

KATHY Winters and Tim Gallivan try hard to get their points across to each other in this scene from "Battle of the Sexes," one of the Antique Festival Theater's fall presentations which begin in Meridian Monday.

The other play is an historical drama about the highly controversial assassination of Idaho's Gov. Steuneger at the turn of the century and is called "Harry Orchard."

The play encompasses the early mining-labor unrest and the fight to establish labor unions in the state. It has been designed not only to give students a better picture of Idaho history but to involve them in the judicial system.

A feature is the famous courtroom scenes between lawyers Clarence Darrow and William Borah which allows 12 students from each school to sit on the jury and judge the case for themselves.

Gerald McDonough, the AFT's resident playwright, has done exhaustive research on the case through historical records and microfilmed testimony from the trial at the Idaho State Historical Library.

The play is a multi-media production, including slides of actual pictures from the period and filmed sequences of events. Heading the cast is veteran actress Blissy Bidwell, Lee Stetson, from Hawaii; Tim Gallivan and Patrick Hurley; Soft Lake City; Kathy Winters, Minnesota, and Michael Leberer, Wyoming.

The tour is sponsored partly by the Bicentennial Commission. Each school visited in Oregon and Idaho will have a choice of two out of six workshops which will be conducted the same day as the play.

The company will be in the school for the entire day and also offer informal lectures as part of the package.

Gas hike could finish camping

NEW YORK (UPI) — A proposed 10-cent a gallon tax increase on gasoline could price the camping family right out of the vacation market.

There were signs this summer, at the present level of fuel costs, that the recreational vehicle (RV) owner was hardpressed financially on an extended outing.

To the trained observer of camping activities, there was much less vehicular traffic to state and franchised campgrounds. The friendly blinking of headlights between passing RVs became less noticeable as economy-conscious Americans deferred to the "start haul" in an effort to save on fuel costs.

"We weren't hit too hard because our camp is off an interstate highway," said an Amarillo, Texas, franchise owner. "But the little fellow in the boondocks can't make ends meet. He just isn't getting the customers."

"In years past, I could look at my register cards and see license plates from coast to coast. More often than not these days the people are from surrounding states out for just a couple of days instead of a few weeks."

Our recent trip cross country covered 6,819 miles and consumed 904.9 gallons of gas. The 25-foot motor home averaged 7.9 miles a gallon. The average cost was 54.3 cents a gallon and we shelled out $487.35.

A similar journey two years ago was made at a cost of $32.27.

One cost-saving tip, learned early in the trip, was that popular brands of gas were the most expensive. However, if the RV driver is willing to venture a few miles off the super highways to explore nearby towns, he'll most often find that he can save a few pennies per gallon.

Keeping a daily log on gas expenditures, we discovered the 50.9 cents paid in Ridgewood, N.J., would be the cheapest for the next 600 or so miles. The price was 55.9 in Kyrletown, Pa., and 59.9 near Columbus, Ohio.

A flashing sign in New Castle, Ind., proclaimed regular gas for 49.9, but the next fillup at Altamont, Ill., found the price soaring to 57.9. Several Cuba, Mo., and Tulsa, Okla., stations were also good for the pocketbook at 50.9 for off-brand fuels.

It was 58.9 in Grosmont, Texas, and 49.9 in Amarillo, New Mexico prices, hovered at the lower level, while Casa Grande, Ariz., figures climbed like the temperature and we paid 57.9.

California, from San Diego up to Los Angeles, was in the 52.9 range, but then came the big ripoff, on the California-Nevada border, when the gauge read 67.9. We just took on enough to reach Las Vegas, where the cost dipped about 15 cents a gallon.

The gambling capital seemed to be a vast parking lot for all the motor homes we missed seeing on the road. The Stardust Hotel campground, one of several areas catering to the fun crowd, charged $4 a night and permitted use of its swimming facilities.

We hit two other high-priced gasoline pumps en route home, a station near Zion National Park, Utah, where the cost was 59.9, and one in North Platte, Neb., at the same price.

Colorado, especially the Denver-Boulder, Colo., area, offered low 49.9 rates. One pump, in Loveland, Colo., was our favorite. It was a vintage 1930's crank-turn job that used to spew gasoline at "six gals. for a dollar" and now featured an economy-favored 46.9.

The midwest reflected our overall average of 54.3 cents a gallon.

400 migrants stranded by frost

(C) Chicago Daily News

MUSCATINE, Iowa — They huddled together in unheated wooden cabins, awakening Thursday morning after enduring their third night of numbing 'cold down' into the middle.

There are about 400 of them, migrant farm workers, the last and most desperate of the more than 2,000 field hands who came during the summer months to harvest the tomato crop in the five-county Iowa-Illinois area along the Mississippi River near Muscatine.

Now, after an early killing frost devastated the crops, these remnants of that migrant army are trapped, destitute and hungry.

Many are disease-ridden, infested with parasites. Few have winter clothes or warm blankets. And their food is running out.

Most are Mexican-Americans without funds to return to their Texas homes. The crop failure meant many of them earned only about $3 for a dawn-to-dark day of work.

They endured their mounting misery in what was termed "A human disaster area" by Juan Cadena, director of the Muscatine Migrant Council and a former migrant worker.

The plight of the 400 is "the worst problem we've ever faced here," Cadena said, after the council pleaded urgently this week for blankets, food, winter clothing and money to help the band of trapped migrants.

The response has been good, according to Sister Irene Nunoz, a Spanish-speaking Catholic nun who works at the center.

"But we haven't anywhere near what we need to help these people right now and try to get them on the road to home," she said.

Among the migrants who gathered outside the ramshackle brick building where the council is headquartered, was Genaro Medrano, 30, of Donna, Tex.

He has barely been able to buy food for his wife and 4-year-old son during the disastrous harvest. His best day of picking brought him only $12.

"It has been bad for my wife and my child," he said. "We are cold and hungry here. The grower says he cannot help us get home. It has been a bad year for him too."

Medrano arrived from Texas in August after borrowing $115 from a harvest crew chief. He paid back that $115 and now has nothing left to show for three months labor.

Filer man released on bond

TWIN FALLS — Larry Wilson, 38, Filer, was released on $500 bond on a felony charge of resisting arrest by means of violence after being arraigned in magistrate court.

Judge Daniel Meehl said the man is also charged with being drunk in public, a misdemeanor, and was released on his own recognizance on the second count. He was arrested early this week on six counts including disorderly conduct and assault and battery.

All charges except the two were eliminated prior to the signing of formal complaints.

Wilson allegedly engaged in a fight with Filer city police officer Mike Burgess as the latter attempted to arrest him. County officers went to the assistance of the Filer police officer. Wilson was jailed and later hospitalized briefly for injuries suffered in the altercation and arrest.

He requested preliminary hearing on the felony charge and pleaded innocent to the misdemeanor.

Solar, N sources to supply energy

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (UPI)—The director of the federal Office of Energy Research and Development predicted Tuesday solar and nuclear energy sources will supply the majority of the nation's electrical needs by the year 2000.

Dr. Alvin Weinberg addressed the delegates to the National Topical Meeting on Nuclear Process, held at the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory.

The two day meeting, bringing together scientists and other officials and experts in the field of energy research and development, concluded today.

"My hunch is that by 2000 we shall have to depend on all our energy resources, but, in the very long run, it is at least possible that our primary sources for generation of electricity will be nuclear and solar," said Weinberg.

Weinberg said because of his theory, he was advocating extensive research into just

US Supreme Court opens 1974-75 term

(C) Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — A Watergate-weary Supreme Court opens its 1974-1975 term next week still heavily under the constitutional imprint of former President Richard M. Nixon who fashioned the high court in his own legal image.

Many of the most controversial cases on the Supreme Court docket this year involve policies of the former president such as his claim that he could impound congressionally appropriated funds, that he could wrap in "national security" cases without court warrants and that police should not be

Niger children suffer malnutrition

(C) New York Times Service

Niamey, Niger — An extensive international relief effort has substantially ended the famine in Niger, one of the countries most tragically afflicted by last year's catastrophic drought that spanned the African continent immediately below the Sahara.

This year's rainy season, now drawing to an end, gives hope for a good harvest. But for years to come, even with continuing good harvests, Niger will need help in feeding her population of about 4.2 million and in overcoming the long-term effects of the drought.

Many people are presumed to have died of starvation or illnesses fatal only because of the hunger-weakened state of the victims. Mortality was highest among young children, who will also suffer most from the long-term effects of malnutrition. But in a region where even the number of the living is a far-from-precise statistic, it is impossible to know how many died.

Both President Seyni Kountche and the public health minister, Moussa Sala, said in interviews that they could not estimate the number of dead. They said that the international rescue effort averted the worst. Certainly the gloomiest predictions of last year, forecasting mortal danger to millions in the sub-Saharan region, proved excessive.

But even fewer might have died or suffered grievously if relief had arrived faster and more nations had helped.

Woman wins blue pencil

TWIN FALLS — Flo Harper won the blue pencil when the Twin Falls Toastmistress Club held Friday.

Other speakers were Delrene Bramon and Juanita Pickett. Doris Jensen was Toastmistress. John Scott, of TV station KMYT, spoke on microphone techniques.

Eleanor Burkhardt won the red pencil for the best table topics which were by Juanita Cox.

Marguerite Hartley gave the graduation lesson. General evaluator was Marge Kramer and individual evaluators were Virginia Bittenburg and Charlotte Jones. Shirley McFrell was grammarian.

how much it would cost the United States to use solar energy for the bulk of its electrical needs.

Weinberg also outlined for the delegates the goals of "Project Independence," the federal project to establish a national energy policy and master plan for development of a complete energy system.

Weinberg said the project would include data on the nation's future demands for energy, future supply sources, future government intervention and international energy pacts.

Speaking on the nation's plans for an energy policy, he noted four points which he felt were essential:

1. A more intelligent use of energy and reduction of the annual rate of growth of energy consumption from the present 4.2 per cent a year to 2 per cent annually.
2. An increase in the production of domestic oil and gas without unnecessary infringements on the nation's environment.
3. The conduct of industrial processes in a more efficient manner.
4. A shift from energy sources which are in short supply—such as oil and natural gas—to sources which are in abundance.

Weinberg told the delegates the goal of "Project Independence" is to insure that the United States will not have to contend with oil embargoes by foreign countries such as occurred in 1973.

He said the blueprint for the project will be submitted to President Gerald Ford by Nov. 1. The blueprint will outline various plans and options for creation of a national energy plan.

Public Offered 1937 U.S. Gov't Art Prints

Imagine, if you ran, finding several thousand original art prints of the world's greatest paintings that were lost for more than 35 years! It actually happened... and this is the story of the discovery of the lost treasure.

Eleanor Roosevelt

Back in 1937, immediately following the depression years, Eleanor Roosevelt and a select group of a dozen nationally prominent people formed a voluntary national committee for art appreciation to create an art program that would give the public a well-merited moral lift. It was the committee's decision to select the world's most famous paintings from the 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, and 20th centuries — the paintings of Manet, Van Gogh, Renoir, Picasso, Gauguin, Matisse, etc. and to reproduce them in full color as perfectly as humanly possible and make them available to the public at a price within the reach of all.

Abandoned in 1937

For some unknown reason, after a quantity of these beautiful reproductions were made, the entire project was abandoned and this collection of perfect reproductions was stored in a Brooklyn warehouse, where they remained undisturbed.

Through a series of rare coincidences, the lost collection was "rediscovered" and leading photographers and art critics agreed that the subject matter and quality of detail and color reproduction was 100% creditably accurate. Over $500,000.00 was spent to make finely engraved glass printing plates. It would be impossible to reproduce prints such as these under existing methods, and for that reason these prints are literally "one-of-a-kind" items. Once they have been sold, there will be no more available. A truly excellent art investment that makes a fabulous gift.

Available to Public

These authentic original 1937 art prints have been appraised by the American Appraisers' Assoc. at $7.00 each print. Now, these art prints are available to the public at $19.95 for a collection of 20 prints — 50¢ each — plus shipping.

Money order to: U.S. Surplus, Dept. E30, P.O. Box 505, Turlock, Calif. 95354. Fully GUARANTEED. Certificate of authenticity given with each set. MasterCard and BankAmericard OK (Use card number).

Chicago firemen furious over order to move

By MIKE ROYKO
 (Chicago Daily News)
CHICAGO — The fireman is 33 years old, he has 10 years on the job, a wife, three kids, and he is now waiting for the other shoe to drop.

He is one of the almost 400 Chicago firemen who have been ordered to move back into the city from the suburbs or else be fired.

"Like the others, he is pretty damned mad at channel 5, the NBC station that touched off the trouble with a finky episode of the firemen.

"Where in the hell do these bastards live?" he said, talking about the people at the TV station.

Well, the news director at channel 5 — his department prepared the story — lives in Glenview.

"That figures," the fireman said. "He doesn't want us to live in any suburb, but he lives in that none of us could afford if we wanted to."

In fairness, I told him, the NBC vice president and station manager lives in the city — in one of those expensive apartments in the John Hancock Center.

"Sure," the fireman said. "I'd love living in the city, too. If I could afford to live in a big house on Michigan Avenue. But I'd like that $200,000 find for a house I can afford in a nice neighborhood. Believe me, I tried."

The fireman had lived in the Chicago neighborhood he grew up in until about a year ago. He loved the neighborhood. I lived there all my life. But then it started going bad, with people getting shot in the alley while my wife was alone and I was at work. Remember when I go to work at 8 a.m., I'm not going to be home again until 8 a.m. the next day. Every third night, my wife has to be home all night without me. It's not the same as for a guy who has a 9-to-5 job.

"The schools started getting bad. It wasn't safe for my kids to play outside. I had to move."

"I wanted to stay in the city, so I looked for a house I could afford."

"That's when I run into red-lining. I'd go to the savings and loans and they wouldn't touch anything near a neighborhood we could afford. And the stuff they said they'd go with me now, they'd want 20 per cent down. Sure, I moonlight, but there's no way I could afford to come up with that kind of money."

"So I went where I could get a mortgage. I could live with, and it was in the suburbs."

"I lived in that neighborhood all my life. I had everything I ever wanted in my house. It was a live-bedroom frame. In the suburbs it would have been worth $30,000, maybe $45,000."

"I don't know what I'm going to do now. If I sell my house and move back to the city, I'm going to be back in the savings and loans and they're going to be giving me the red-lining routine."

Red-lining is the phrase used to describe the practice of Chicago lending institutions in refusing to grant loans for neighborhoods they have decided are risky. The institutions, however, never refuse to accept the savings of the people who live in these neighborhoods.

The fireman went on: "Sure, I'd be happy to live in Edgemoor or Sauganash or any of those other solid neighborhoods. But I just don't have that kind of money. These are $50,000, $70,000 homes — up there, I don't make that kind of money, even with my moonlighting."

"What gets me is that some of this would have happened if it wasn't for that TV program. The department knew there were guys living out of town, but they knew why: so they looked the other way. For a cheap story, they mess up so many people. You'd think we were crooks or something."

"I'd like to have that guy's wife, the one who lives in Hancock, sit down and tell my wife why this was an important story. I'd like her to explain to my wife just how society is any better off if she was to be scared when she hears shooting in the alley at 2 a.m. and I'm on the other side of town putting out a fire."

"I'll tell you this, if they go through with this, they're going to have some trouble. The guys in the department are mad as hell."

They're going through with it. A battalion chief, 31 years old, was hit with a two-month suspension Thursday, with no pay. The punishment was handed out even though he sold his house in Arlington Heights and moved back into Chicago.

One of the things the firemen find ironic about the situation is that the TV reporter who did the story used to be a fireman himself. Until he somehow "umbled into his present job. And where did he live in his fireman days? In a suburb, his old buddies recall. Oh, what kinship.

Channel 5 gave city hall the excuse it has been looking for to lean on the firemen. The mayor wants them in the city because he wants city workers living where they can be best used for political purposes.

And where did he live in his fireman days? In a suburb, his old buddies recall. Oh, what kinship.

This is the fourth time the meeting has been set and then postponed since the original meeting date of May 7.
Company officials, in keeping with previous delays, have not said why the meeting date isn't set and kept.

Weiser good site

WEISER, Idaho (UPI) — The head of operations for the Idaho Department of Water Resources pinpoints Weiser as the most likely area for geothermal development in Idaho.
A Kenneth Dunn said Friday a recent report of his department and the U.S. Geological Survey revealed hot water temperatures deep in underground reservoirs near Weiser may be 270 degrees centigrade — 454 degrees Fahrenheit.
The minimum temperature needed to develop geothermal resources with current technology is 160 degrees centigrade.
Dunn said the information from the study will help the department evaluate development of the resource by industry or as a power plant site or in some other way.

Health problems aired

BOISE (UPI) — The accessibility of health care is the prime medical problem faced by Americans in rural areas, says Jane Curtis, a family nurse practitioner from Council Bluffs.
Mrs. Curtis said the problem centers on the poor distribution of physicians in rural areas. She said last year 99 new physicians were licensed to practice in Idaho, but "few entered rural Idaho except to hunt, fish or ski."
Mrs. Curtis made her remarks before the House subcommittee on family farms and rural development. She told the committee health care problems in rural Idaho are fairly representative of those found in rural America.

Disappointing

MOUNTAIN HOME, Idaho (UPI) — Residents here paid for a special census because they thought their town had grown by about 25 percent — enough to qualify for increased federal revenue sharing funds.
But Mayor Vern Everett said the new headcount has come up short.
The 1970 census showed a gain of 6,451 and Everett said local residents estimated the city had grown up to 10,000.
"The preliminary was not as much as we expected," he said. "It's a very disappointment to me. I feel we have more than the preliminary estimate."
Mountain Home is one of several towns in Idaho that has contracted with the U.S. Bureau of the Census for a special headcount in hopes of increasing the amount received from revenue sharing funds that are allocated on a per capita basis.

Witness leaves in Burley case

BURLEY — A key witness in the "Hotel" case has disappeared, forcing the county to drop two of four felony charges leveled at the hotel proprietor.
Gordon Nielson, Cassia County prosecuting attorney, said the witness, one of the women at the Lee Hotel, "just disappeared under the carpet," the day before a hearing was set.
Kay Summers, owner of the Lee, had been charged with four felony counts, but two had to be dismissed when the witness disappeared.
Nielson said the woman, Kay Clark, about 25 in the case, had agreed to testify in the case. In a conversation the day before the hearing Ms. Clark had indicated she would testify, Nielson said.
But she didn't show up for the hearing. An all-points bulletin alert is out for the woman in the western states. Nielson said, but so far investigators have had no luck in locating her.
When asked if the woman might have been threatened, or frightened, out of testifying, Nielson indicated it might be a possibility.
Nielson said the woman could have been kept under custody as a material witness, but indicated usually persuasion and cooperation are preferred to force in dealing with witnesses.
Nielson also mentioned he had applied to attend a seminar, sponsored by the National Association of Attorneys on organized crime. The prosecutor said it was time local law enforcement officials became involved in combatting organized crime.

Check horses

Horses for the annual Diamondfield Jack endurance race Saturday are examined by Dr. Bruce Branscomb, Elko veterinarian prior to the start of the race south of Hansen, as Byram Meredit, Nampa rider, watches.

Young Oregon woman wins Diamondfield Jack race

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer
JACKPOT — A young, Powell Butte, Ore., woman riding a seven-eighths Arabian horse, won the Diamondfield Endurance Ride Saturday.
Hanne Hollander, mother of two small children, finished the 50-mile course in 5 hours and 2 minutes. Total time — 16 minutes longer than the winner's time last year.
There were 12 professional riders, including Mrs. Hollander, and 12 amateurs entered in the event.
Riders braved a cold wind, but the sun cheered their way.
Second place went to Deldire Lindsey, Ketchikan, also winning on an Arabian, just seconds behind first place Mrs. Hollander.
Byram Meredit, Nampa, C. started third place, also on a part-Arabian horse.
The amateur winner, riding the highest placing Appaloosa horse, was John Wilfong, Emmet. First place junior rider was Kim Pugh of Richfield. The 14-year-old rider also took the junior riding award last year.
Riders began the course at the Crockett Ranch south of Rock Creek at about 8:30 a.m. and finished about 1:30 p.m. at Jackpot.
The second amateur event re-enacted the front gunneler's famous ride, which became a key issue in the murder trial involving Diamondfield Jack.
The gunslinger, hired by cattle barons in 1855 to "righten" the sheepherders back to their own territory, was widely believed to have murdered two shepherds.
"Since he had been seen in Nevada both in the early morning and early in the afternoon on the supposed day of the murder, he would have had to make the ride to the shepherd's camp in about 5 hours."

Pilot program set for Idaho's gifted children

TWIN FALLS — A pilot program for identification of gifted children will begin in Idaho schools in January, more than 400 teachers and parents were told here Saturday morning.
Dr. David Jackson, Los Angeles, who is executive director of the National-State Leadership Training Institute for the Gifted and Talented, addressed the final session of the state convention of the Idaho Council on Exceptional Children.
The largest crowd in history of the council attended the two-day meet which opened Friday at the Blue Lakes Inn.
Dr. Jackson gave an encouraging report on efforts to provide challenging programs for the gifted child and said, "We soon will be seeing results of the planning sessions held on the regional level to implement these programs for the gifted in the public school."
It has not yet been decided which town in Idaho will be selected to begin the pilot program.
So far, he said, the Idaho State Department of Education, assumed the state presidency of the council at the final business meeting Saturday morning. He succeeds Dr. Earl Owens, Northwest Nazarene College, Nampa.
Dr. Gerald Spadolato, director of special education at Idaho State University, was named president-elect. Sally Munsey, Nampa, is secretary and Pam Jones, Idaho State school for the Deaf and Blind Gooding, was elected treasurer.
Friday afternoon the Idaho Speech and Hearing association met in conjunction with the speaker-elect, Sally Munsey. Idaho State University, is president-elect of that group.
The association approved a bill for licensing of speech and hearing pathologists which will be presented to the state legislature.
The Magic Valley chapter of the CEC, headed by Ruth Johnston, Twin Falls, hosted the state council convention.

Coyote 'war' peace nears

"Unfortunately," Noh added, "many of the members on this council are people who have opposed adequate protection for livestock in the Past."
However, "It is our understanding," Noh said, "that the committee was directed by secretary Morton to find a satisfactory solution to this problem."
The recommendations are being formulated with speed, Noh said, because government officials realize "time is very critical. We are entering the winter months when predation becomes serious. Time is of the essence."
The problem has also become critical because of record high losses due to predators. "The last 12-month period, as far as the Interior Department can determine, has brought the most severe losses... from coyote predation" since records have been kept, Noh said.
The severity of loss has brought the traditional antagonists — shepherds and cattlemen — together. Noh commented approximately two months ago, "The National Cattlemen's Association formed a Predatory Animal Committee to study the problem," he said.
"What's new and different is the determination of the cattlemen to see that a solution comes about. The days of the sheep and cattle war are over. They're forrequare with us on this one," Noh said.

'Cowboy economics' philosophy outated

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News writer
SUN VALLEY — Greater emphasis on investment, a curb on consumption, national land-use planning and more international cooperation are short-run mandates of energy economists.
According to the US Chamber of Commerce's chief economist, Dr. Carl Madden, the long-run resource limitations may necessitate a complete restructuring of America's economic system.
Many economists, he said, are beginning to speculate that the nation will have to turn away from its "cowboy economics" philosophy that "more is better."
Madden was one of about 33 economists and bankers attending the US Chamber of Commerce Banking, Monetary and Fiscal Policy Committee meeting held in Sun Valley Thursday and Friday.
The Washington, D.C., economist was optimistic about the future of the economy. But, he warned, irresponsible fiscal policy by oil nations and lack of international cooperation could bring crises.
"If the oil producing and exporting nations (OPEC) fail to cooperate with the rest of the world and do so self-consciously and consistently, the outlook becomes extremely bleak," he said.
This year, he said, the OPEC countries will receive $83 billion in oil revenues, up $65 billion from last year. "After all they could conceivably spend they will have $40 billion for investment."
So far, he said, the oil sheiks have been putting the monies in short-term investments ranging from three months to a year. This puts tremendous strain on the world banking system which is facing enormous demand for long-term loans, need oil and need the funds to buy it with.
Without Arab loans to poorer nations this burden will fall to the strained economies of the United States, western Europe and Japan.
"If the oil states do not share this burden and if they do not make long-term investments, Madden predicted world-wide recession. The necessity of recycling petro-dollars will necessitate new and strong world monetary institutions, he said.
Through investments Madden said the Arab states will gain an "unprecedented enhancement" of power. He predicted that major US corporations will be owned by Arabs but said this should not change American lives greatly except "they will be richer and we will be poorer."
If wisely invested, incomes of the oil states present a great opportunity to the world since these funds, the bulk of which probably would have gone toward more consumption, can be used for development Madden maintained. He compared the income to a giant world tax.
Madden also predicted a major national effort to conserve use of oil. Just to keep oil imports during the next few years at present levels, he said, Americans will have to decrease their rising demand for energy by about half, he said.

IF citizens want roads, low taxes

TWIN FALLS — Improving roads, keeping down taxes, and controlling air and water pollution should be top priority goals for local government, a county-wide citizens survey shows.
Taxes, increasing crime and inadequate roads are thought to be the greatest problems, according to the study released Friday.
The survey, initiated by the Twin Falls City-County Joint Planning Council and sponsored by the city council, is a first step in gaining public input for developing a comprehensive plan for the county, according to city-county planner Don Richey. It was based on 2,116 residences throughout the county with 2,395 responses.
Richey believes that the survey shows that "people are in favor of land-use controls by a margin of nine to one," despite much vocal opposition from "people doing their own politicking."
Six hundred and nineteen persons listed road improvement as the top priority area for governmental action, while 530 thought keeping taxes low should have first priority. Rural areas, however, reversed these priorities with a few more people calling for low taxes than road improvement.
Land-use controls ranked third in the Twin Falls city, but in rural areas fourth in front. Air and water pollution controls ranked third in the city but fourth for governmental action, fourth in Twin Falls City and seventh among rural households.
Ranked fifth through tenth as priorities were the following: more citizen involvement in local planning and land-use control; more citizen involvement in general governmental activity; education resources; more police protection; sewer system development and developing coordination among governments.
Parks, recreational programs and public welfare ranked at the bottom of the 20 "goals" for activity listed in the survey.
The 10 most serious problems the county faces were listed in the following order: increasing taxes; inadequate roads; increasing crime; inadequate land-use controls; lack of bicycle trails; inadequate sidewalks; water pollution; lack of employment opportunities; and rapid population growth.
Included in the survey were numerous questions calling for positions on controversial issues.
The most serious problems the county faces were listed in the following order: increasing taxes; inadequate roads; increasing crime; inadequate land-use controls; lack of bicycle trails; inadequate sidewalks; water pollution; lack of employment opportunities; and rapid population growth.
Included in the survey were numerous questions calling for positions on controversial issues.
Nearly 1,400 persons favored satellite shopping centers compared to 976 for grouped development in the downtown business district and 179 persons preferring new businesses in strips along major streets.
A strong majority of those responding to the survey favored placing responsibility for payment of sewers, roads, streets and sidewalks in new urban developments on developers instead of through government or individual home owners.
Also, 1,681 persons favored high utility and street standards for developments even though they may result in fewer low-cost dwellings being placed on the market. Four hundred and twenty persons favored the standards should be minimal to encourage such development.
Confining urban developments by requiring they cannot take place until public sewers are extended or roads are favored by 1,694 persons, while 542 persons called for confining such development to areas where the sewers presently exist. Only 224 persons believed urban developments should be permitted anywhere regardless of the availability of public sewers.
Slightly more than 1,000 people believed urban development should be selectively allowed on agricultural lands while slightly less than 1,000 believed that such development should be restricted to city, county, hundred and ninety-three persons called for no restrictions.
About two-thirds of those responding believed that local government should take action to alleviate new housing shortages presenting a problem to middle income and low income groups.
"Most people opposed improving highways and major community streets with landscaped medians and tree lined edges with 1,133 opposing and 908 favoring."
Traffic congestion and noise exhausts from automobiles were listed as the major reasons commercial zoning depreciates the value of nearby residential properties.
People split on whether they would consider allowing a power plant designed and landscaped shopping center in their neighborhood with 1,090 yes and 1,027 no responses. In rural areas 369 people responded positively with 338 opposing sucresponses. In rural areas 369

Evel's pay dwindling

Like other portions of the event, the check wasn't as it seemed. In fact, it was not a guarantee. "It was part of the sell" Arum told Newday.
Out of his share of $1 million, Knievel still has to pay his jump site expenses. Estimates on the cost of the rented Lear jets the daredevil zipped around in, the Lear site preparations, the Skydeck, and other expenses, range between $500,000 and $750,000 Newday reports.
And sources report the Internal Revenue Service has momentarily impounded Knievel's pay, until it can get what it wants for taxes.
But even with the disappointing financial news, Knievel is not facing ruin: Geegaws-like rocket-shaped rafts, Evel Knievel sweat shirts, and daredevil dolls are expected to be big sellers this Christmas.
Aaron Cushman, of Marvin Glass & Associates, which handles about 15 licensed products for Knievel, estimated sales of the Evel goods will reach $100 million this Christmas.
Marvin Glass will profit from the sales $2.5 million and $10 million. Cushman figured a rough estimate. He said Knievel's share will definitely be more than $1 million but refused to make a more precise estimate. Other sources say Knievel could earn up to $2.5 million on the deal.
Promoters didn't earn the money they predicted, either. At one time, estimates showed them earning up to $6 million. In reality, when costs such as $400,000 for promotion and $150,000 for telephone line hooking charges are deducted along with Knievel's share, the promoters stand to share about $700,000, nowhere near what they expected.
Newday quotes Arum as crediting a poor economy as the reason for resistance to the jump as part of the reason for poor attendance. In addition only about six foreign countries of the 40-5 expected bought the rights to the broadcast. And the expectation that ABC's Wide World of Sports would buy the jump footage may have deterred other buyers from buying the rights.
As early as mid-June, ABC producers acknowledged off the record that they were planning to use the footage on Wide World of Sports, although only days before the film was shown on TV. Arum was still denying this the footage would be sold in the near future to ABC.
According to Newday, an audience of 13 million people watched the show, which received a high Nielsen rating of 19.4.
And live attendance at the jump site, once plans were made to televise the event, were various sources between about 8,000 and 15,000, a fairly large portion of that crowd was spectators who had managed to slip in for free.
It didn't work out the way promoters predicted, during the early days of cross-country jet tours, and breezy press conferences.
"We had a profit, but it didn't make us the millionaires we hoped to become," Arum told Newday.
And though he isn't exactly hurting, the jump didn't give Evel Knievel the kind of millionaire he hoped to become, either.

Also, he said, the United States will have to invest a giant effort to develop new sources of energy from off-shore oil, coal, nuclear power, and more esoteric sources such as solar and wind power.
Whereas traditionally 10 percent of the gross national product has gone to investment, this effort will necessitate that 12.5 per cent of it be invested in the future. This, too, will mean reduced consumption, he said.
He said the drive to produce energy has created more regional tensions than expected on the coasts there is opposition to off-shore oil drilling; in the Southeast opposition to exporting natural gas; in the west criticism of water expropriation and strip mining coal.
This tension has brought the need for national land-use planning to resolve questions of common land-use goals, he said.
"In the long run," Madden said many economists are "speculating that resources limitations and demand for more access to scarce resources by other peoples will force the United States to turn away from a system striving for ever-expanding production."

Shop offering

LARGE DOLL, one of many items offered off-sale on a consignment basis in the Hand-made Shoppe, 461 Fourth Ave. E., is displayed by business owner Gloria Adams.

Gift shop opens

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls has a new gift shop selling hand-crafted items made by local people.

The shop, a consignment business, is located in a small garage behind a house at 461 Fourth Ave. E., well out of the town's commercial district.

According to Gloria Adams, the shop's manager, the business serves people who make handicrafts in the Magic Valley as well as buyers. She said there is not enough outlet for local hand-made goods.

"At the 'Hand-made Shoppe' a 15 per cent commission is charged and all goods sold are made by local people," Mrs. Adams said. And the goods are priced by the makers. "They know what they've put into it and I don't," she said.

Gifts range from 25 cents up in price. Dolls, alphorns, paintings, put holders, miniature table sets, hats and trinkets adorn the shop.

President picked

BOISE — UPI — Members of the Idaho Public Utilities Commission Friday elected Robert Langsdren to serve as president. He replaces Harry L. Nock who retired from the commission and presidency Sept. 30.

Savings insurance hike agreed

(C) 1974 Washington Star-News
WASHINGTON — House and Senate conferees have agreed on compromise legislation that would increase from $30,000 to $40,000 the federal insurance on savings accounts at federally-insured banks, savings and loans institutions and credit unions.

The figure is about midway between the $25,000 limit appointment.

proved by the Senate and the $50,000 favored by the House.

In addition, the conferees extended regulation Q, under which thrift institutions are allowed by regulatory agencies to pay higher interest on deposits than commercial banks can.

A number of other compromises on legislation affecting financial institutions were also reached as conferees acted on an omnibus series of amendments.

They extended for two years the moratorium on the controversial issue of conversion of mutual savings and loan associations to stock ownership. However, they allowed the Federal Home-Loan Bank Board to supervise the conversion of 1 per cent, or about 45, of the nation's savings and loan organizations as test cases.

A moratorium on conversion of mutual savings banks was simply extended until June 30, 1976. The conferees eliminated a provision, sponsored largely by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., that would have placed a $285 billion limit on all federal expenditures in fiscal 1975.

— Elimination of a requirement that federal banking regulatory agencies not adopt any law in contradiction of state laws.

— Approval of full federal insurance of up to $100,000 for public agency funds deposited in thrift institutions as well as commercial banks.

Negotiations resumed

SANTO DOMINGO (UPI) — The Dominican government apparently backed down Saturday on its boycott of negotiations and set up a direct radio link with the guerrillas holding kidnaped American diplomat Barbara Hutchinson and six other persons hostage for more than a week.

An army captain from a counterinsurgency detachment aiding police walked up to the guerrilla-occupied Venezuelan consulate and delivered a walk-talkie after shouting an exchange with terrorist leader Radhames Mendez Vargas.

The kidnapers, holding the consulate for the eighth day with seven hostages, have withdrawn their demand for a $1 million ransom and said that their original request for freedom of 37 political prisoners can be negotiated to a lower number.

In an improvised press conference Friday night, police chief Gen. Rafael Guillermo Guzman said authorities would not negotiate with the kidnapers. It was the first time the government broke its official silence on the case.

"The only possible solution is that the terrorists surrender, release their hostages safe and sound, and submit themselves to justice," Guzman said.

HELPING other people is the life story of Jeannette McIntier, Gooding. Here she works on "therapy balls" made from discarded party hose with a crocheted covering. They help rebuild weakened muscles of the hands and arms by squeezing exercises. She is one of about 50 volunteers assisting in Health and Welfare Department programs.

Volunteer at work

Volunteers provide valuable service in MV

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Volunteers, many of them benefactors of the welfare program, are providing some services money could not buy, say officials of the Health and Welfare agency in Twin Falls.

Donna Suhr, head of the volunteer services department, with HAW here, said her work is the most rewarding in the entire department because she deals with "nice people who devote their time to help others."

Object of the volunteer program is two-fold. It not only provides a needed free service and assistance to needy or handicapped persons in the community but it helps many welfare recipients work their way back to a useful productive position in the community.

Many, says Mrs. Suhr, are at a low ebb not only financially but in morale and spirit due to health, financial and other problems which bring them to the position of seeking help from the Health and Welfare Department.

Many of these serve as volunteers helping others and learn theirs are not the worst problems after all, she explained.

Others are simply persons in the community with enough compassion for their fellow citizens to want to assist those in need.

An example is Justine Edgar, an attractive young college coed, who came to Twin Falls this summer from New Zealand. She wanted to volunteer her time and talent to help others so she telephoned the Health and Welfare Department and made the offer. About an hour later she was in Mrs. Suhr's office discussing things that needed doing.

She started by assisting as a receptionist, telephone girl and clerk typist in the office and grew to a volunteer with the counseling staff. In this capacity she spent most of her time listening to the problems of other young people up to 18 years of age.

Many of those she talked with were on probation and having family difficulties. Her conversations frequently brought out many things the older counselors failed to reveal, Mrs. Suhr said, and her reports of the interviews were of great help to the counselors.

She also assisted at the Child Development Center and through the summer donating two to three full days per week.

"It does me more good than it does those I am here to help," she said.

Justine came to the United States last November, spent four months "doing what I wanted to do and seeing what I wanted to see."

She plans to return to New Zealand next "summer" which will be February, and continue her education. She hopes to become a social worker after her graduation.

Two young Jerome mothers are making a valuable voluntary contribution, said Mrs. Suhr. Karen Rue and Barbara Blamires have been sharing the responsibility of providing transportation for children from the Jerome area to the Child Development Center.

It all began when their own children were receiving evaluation at the center and they found other children in Jerome needed the professional services of the center but their parents were unable to bring them to Twin Falls.

About twice a week the women donate their time and vehicles to pick up Jerome area children so they may participate in the Child Development Center programs.

A young Twin Falls businessman, Richard Stivers, is using his knowledge of a foreign language to help two Harrison school students.

While in the military service, Stivers learned the Vietnamese language through a special school in Texas and 11 months in Vietnam.

Each Tuesday night he meets with two Vietnamese children, ages 8 and 11, and helps tutor them.

Because of their language difficulties, Stivers said, they do not have the understanding of the youngsters who grew up speaking English.

"While they can read well they do not always understand the word combinations they are reading," Stivers said.

His work with the children is to develop their reading skills through use of the two languages and to assist with their social studies.

Stivers, associated with his

TAXI service at no cost is the contribution two Jerome women make to the Health and Welfare Department volunteer services program. Karen Rue, at left, and Barbara Blamires, in the vehicle, pick up two of their small passengers. They bring children from Jerome to the Child Development Center one or two days per week.

Problems discussed

JUST talking with someone close to your own age can be a help. Justine Edgar, who worked this summer as a volunteer in the Health and Welfare Department office counseling program "communicates" with a young lady with a problem.

Private tutoring

RICHARD STIVERS listens to Donna Suhr's suggestions for how to spend a free evening. Stivers, a young Twin Falls businessman, donates Tuesday evenings to tutoring two Vietnamese children to help improve their reading and understanding of classroom procedure.

"HISTORIAN" Amy Jones has organized and established a clipping service for the Health and Welfare Department office in Twin Falls. Donna Suhr, director of volunteer services, at right, talks about the valuable contribution with Mrs. Jones.

Clipping service

"What difference does it make," she said, "to have to live somewhere so Gooding is just as good as Brooklyn and the people here are so nice to me."

She and her small dog, currently wearing a sand on front paw, live in a small apartment in the Gooding Hotel, and she receives a small amount of help from the welfare department each month.

Mrs. McIntier has a long history of work in veterans' service. Helping people with problems has been her lifetime work. She makes "therapy balls" from old party hose enclosed in knitted covers. These can be used by stroke victims or injured persons for squeezing exercises to rebuild muscles.

With about 50 persons now working as volunteers under her direction on a voluntary basis, Mrs. Suhr says many services are being provided senior citizens, underprivileged children and handicapped persons, which would not otherwise be possible.

There are many more jobs which could be filled were more volunteers available, she says.

A Lovelier You

PLAY THE SLIMMING GAME

By Mary Sue Miller

When your weight is near normal, spot exercise is all that's needed to pare heavy spots. The process can be fun, not dull or tiring, if you make a game of it. Here's how:

Pick Up Sticks. Scatter 20 matchsticks on the floor in a semi-circle, about 1 inch apart. Pick up the sticks by squatting in profile to them—turn your left side, reach with your left hand, pick a stick and rise. Repeat to the right and alternating sides, continue until you have retrieved all sticks.

Row Your Boat. Sit erect on the floor, your feet together, and pressed to the baseboard. Now pretend you are rowing a boat. Grasp the oars in either hand, bend forward and touch your fists to your toes. Sweeping the oars through the water, lean back and touch your fists to your chest. Continue for 3 minutes, working for a good pull in the abdomen and a roll along the hips.

Pillow Fight. Stand erect and hold a small, firm pillow between the palms of your hands at forehead level. So as to set up tension in the arm and chest muscles, repeatedly press pillow.

From these games comes a taut, fit look. Better get with it.

Review

By RUTH BARKER
Twin Falls Public Library
TWIN FALLS — Every guest room ought to have a copy of "The Bedside Book of Bastards" by Dorothy M. Janson.

These short horror tales will keep visiting insomniacs entertained throughout the night. Illustrated with excellent pen and ink drawings, the book is filled with the chilling escapes of villains, murderers, plotters and other assorted rascals.

It is in fact a fascinating gallery of perfectly awful people including "Pargists," Fredeguade and other emancipated females. "In their day they were the equals of any male," the author points out. "Given half a chance women can be as hard as anybody."

If you loved shuddering through fairytales about ogres, goblins, and terrifying creatures of mythological tangle, I recommend you read this book: It's for all but the really faint hearted.

TF Al-Anon program 'ray of hope' for many individuals

Peculiar situation

By MARILYN ELLIOTT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "A ray of hope" in a life that so often seems hopeless.

That is how one member describes Al-Anon, an organization for men and women whose mates have a drinking problem.

"When living with an alcoholic you're not allowed to be a real person, you cover up for them, you lie for them, Al-Anon, you learn that you're a real person and are entitled to your own thoughts and ideas," says one woman who has been through it all.

Al-Anon is trying to come to life again after it faded due to non-participation last year. This year's first meeting will be at 8 p.m. in the dining room of the Twin Falls United Presbyterian Church.

"Al-Anon is not designed to solve problems, cure the alcoholic, or put back together a faltering marriage, one of the organizers said.

"It's a ray of hope for them," she says. By coming together with other men and women who are going through similar problems, or who have gone through them and lived to look back on them, the individual overwhelmed with his own problems is given some moral support.

Often when a person first comes, he or she will "spill it all out" and tell the group his story — "get it off his chest." The group can then share experiences and advice.

"Many of them get mixed up and think they're all alone with this problem and that there is no hope for them. A lot of them think it's the alcoholic's fault and a lot of times it isn't. They think their mate doesn't care about them or he wouldn't drink."

Sometimes it's hard to come to that first Al-Anon meeting. The alcoholic mate may not like it. Some people may sneak out of the house to attend meetings. Some have to face angry words — or worse.

Some are embarrassed to attend because that means admitting openly that their mate has a drinking problem.

But soon the program changes all that.

One of the basic premises of Al-Anon is that the alcoholic husband or wife does not reflect on his mate. The mate is an individual in his own right — not to be judged by the actions of the alcoholic.

"You get such a guilt feeling that everyone is talking about you," one member says. "It takes a lot to learn it's not you."

"We teach them that it's not them that starts or stops an alcoholic," an organizer said. "It is up to the alcoholic to rehabilitate himself, and up to the alcoholic's mate to maintain his or her own life."

Al-Anon encourages members to join organizations that they have been to join.

do things they like to do — "and to stop lying."

"We try to teach the families that whatever the drinking partner is doing — if you have plans, go ahead and do them. Don't focus your life around the drinking mate."

Even if the alcoholic mate is cured and remains "dry," the problems don't always cease. Many mates of individuals who haven't had a drink in years continue attending Al-Anon meetings.

One of the problems is that the once dependent alcoholic mate is suddenly no longer dependent upon his spouse. Often the ex-alcoholic becomes very involved in Alcoholics Anonymous, creating jealousy in his mate.

And, for someone who has expected his or her spouse to go through a sudden personality transformation when sober, there often comes the shocking realization that the spouse is not that wonderful person they expected to find.

The mates of ex-alcoholics provide an added dimension to Al-Anon meetings, for they have lived through the hell and survived.

Al-Anon meets every week. Members are told to take each day at a time. They are told to rid themselves of self-pity, stop trying to cure their mate and do something for themselves.

Anonymity is important to members. That is why no names were used in this article.

Extra funds

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Junior Club has donated money to purchase a range and freezer for the Senior Citizens center.

A check for enough money to cover the purchase has been presented to Marvin Glascock, College of Southern Idaho, by the club. The donation was made possible by the overwhelming community support at the Junior Club art auction last March, according to club officers. The range and freezer will facilitate food preparation at the center.

The auction's goal, purchase of a 12 passenger maxi-van for senior citizen transportation was reached and surpassed. The van has been in use all summer.

What do you do now?

A — Pass or bid seven diamonds your partner has bid one nortrup. What do you do now?

Answer Monday

By Oswald & James Jacoby

The ABL experts who analyzed the Olympiad game hands believe in the "Treat them rough and tell them nothing" school of bidding. They suggest that South open one nortrup and North raise to three. Then they go on: "A club lead by West will allow South to make 12 tricks by leading towards dummy's club honors a second time. The heart king lead will hold South to 11 if by some chance North becomes declarer, a heart lead will hold North to 10 tricks and a very bad score."

We agree with the match-point analysis, but did watch one South player make 12 tricks after a king of hearts opening.

He ducked that first lead. This left West with a tough problem about what to do at trick two. He finally led a low club. Dummy's queen held the trick and South was ready to go after the rest.

He started by cashing two high diamonds to make sure that suit would break. Then he led out his ace and king of spades and the jack dropped. After this pleasant development, there was an automatic squeeze against West. South cashed dummy's two high spades and discarded his last club. Then he ran off the rest of the diamonds. On the last diamond lead West had to guard his queen of hearts to hang on to the ace of clubs. So the king of clubs was discarded and the last two tricks scored with hearts.

DEAR ABBY: I am an older widower, financially comfortable and, perhaps unwisely, am deeply in love with a 44-year-old widow.

Recently she has been going haphazardly with a man she met by mail. It's "hap" for him because he never calls or writes to let her know in advance that he's coming. It's hazard for her because he has never given her an address or telephone number where he can be reached although she has asked repeatedly. Nor has he given her a single clue through which he could be traced or identified. He claims he lives in a certain city, but says he travels a lot and his address and phone number wouldn't help any.

He claims he owns a home worth from $90,000 to $100,000, but wants to sell it and buy a home with her, since he thinks she has $50,000. I'm afraid he's only after her money.

I'd like your answer soon, no matter how you see it. I will let her read it.
J. IN LAUDERDALE

Widower's strategy

DEAR J.: I see either a woman so naive that she shouldn't be out alone after dark, or one who is so blinded by infatuation that she can't read the handwriting on the wall.

I also see an older, financially comfortable widower who thinks he could win this lady were it not for the slippery salesman. The widower's strategy is to eliminate his competition by exposing him for the fraud he is, thus capturing the fair damsel.

I wish you luck, but don't get your hopes up. Love abhors logic.

DEAR ABBY: A man wrote in complaining that before a party, his wife will call her lady friends to ask whether they are wearing pants or a dress.

He said he'd never heard of a MAN doing this. He's right. I've never heard of a man calling up another man to ask him if he was wearing pants or a dress, have you?

LAURIE

DEAR LAURIE: Yes. But then people tell me things they'd never tell anyone else.

DEAR ABBY: How do you feel about forcing a man to retire when he reaches a certain age?
CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: I like the way a gentleman from Morganton, N.C., put it. He said: "I'm against mandatory retirement. It ought to be left to the individuals. It is a shame to assume that all fools are old fools. I've found there are more young fools than old fools. Nature has a way of getting rid of old fools." (Thank you, Senator Sam Ervin.)

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Laaky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

The bride, escorted by her father, wore a gown of antique ivory polyester knit in a princess style. The high neckline was accented with a lace yoke insert matching her finger-tip-length veil. The skirt of the floor-length gown was appliqued with lace flowers, sequins and pearls. The dress was designed and made by the bride's mother.

Following a honeymoon trip to Salt Lake City and points of interest, the couple resides in the Wendell area. Out-of-town guests attended from Shoshone, Wendell, Burley and Twin Falls.

Her veil was held by a pillbox decorated with sequins and pearls. She carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums and orange roses on a white Bible, a gift to the couple from their grandparents. She carried a handkerchief that belonged to her maternal great-grandmother. She wore a brooch that belonged to her paternal great-grandmother. Kathryn Hiltentack, sister of the bride, was matron of honor.

Notre Dame batters past Michigan State

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Senior workhorse Wayne Ballback ran for two touchdowns and freshman kicker Dave Reese clipped in two field goals Saturday to give sixth-ranked Notre Dame a 19-14 victory over tired up Michigan State.

Just two missed field goal attempts by Spartan kicker Hans Nielsen, a freshman from Denmark, cost Michigan State the game.

Notre Dame, stung with its first loss in 13 outings against Purdue last week, was stingy on defense for the first three quarters. Still, the Michigan State offense, the Spartans were held scoreless until the very end of the third quarter.

Ballback, a hulking 225-pound senior fullback, set a Notre Dame record with 36 carries which covered 127 yards. He scored on a one-yard plunge in the first quarter and a five-yard power sweep in the second quarter.

Reese kicked field goals of 31 and 22 yards, while Nielsen was wide on attempts from 44 and 25 yards out.

Michigan State scored on a 26-yard pass from quarterback Charles Buggett to split end Mike Jones with 1:29 left in the third quarter and an eight-yard run by tailback Rich Bates with 3:49 left in the game.

Ohio State smothers WSU 42-7

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Archie Griffin, Ohio State's twisting, turning tailback, ran for 196 yards Saturday as the No. 1 Buckeyes demolished Washington State University 42-7 in an intercollegiate game before 50,000 fans.

Griffin, called by coach Woody Hayes the best running back he's ever coached, wrapped up 667 yards in the first half alone, and broke the Cougar's spirit with a flinging 75-yard scoring romp in the second period.

It was his longest scamper from scrimmage this season. Griffin carried the ball 22 times before retiring to the bench in the third quarter.

It was strictly no contest in a game transplanted from the Cougars' home fair in Eastern Washington to attract more fans to watch the nation's top-ranked team.

OSU made it a romp, scoring the first five times it had the ball and racking up a 35-0 margin before the Cougars got on the board.

'Bama rallies past Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Speedy halfback Willie Shelly scored two touchdowns Saturday to bring second-ranked Alabama from behind in the second half for a 35-21 victory over Mississippi of the Southeastern Conference victory over Mississippi.

getting the score from eight yards out.

Alabama's other touchdowns came on a three-yard run by James Taylor in the opening quarter and a one-yard plunge by quarterback Richard Todd in the final period.

Ole Miss trailed 14-7 at the half after senior quarterback Kenny Lyons scored on a nine-yard run in the opening period.

But the Rebels got two quick touchdowns early in the third quarter to go in front 21-14. Lyons squeaked one yard for the first score after Mike Pittman had recovered a fumble by substitute Alabama quarterback Jack O'Rear at the Tide 15.

Three minutes later, defensive end Gary Turner intercepted a pitchout by Todd and ran 42 yards down the right sideline to give the Rebels the lead.

However, Shelly rallied the Tide with his 58-yard run the next time Alabama got the ball and Watson put the unbeaten Crimson Tide ahead 28-21 with his eight-yard run with 37 seconds left in the third period.

Shelly, a 172-pound junior, scored on a three-yard run in the second period and tied the game 21-21 in the third quarter with a 58-yard sprint. The Crimson Tide took the lead minutes later, driving 54 yards with sophomore Rick Watson return in the first period.

It was the 57th touchdown of Davis' collegiate career and increased his point total to 222, both USC school records.

The Trojans spotted Iowa a 26-yard field goal by Nick Quartaro in the opening minutes of the first period. On the following kickoff, Davis fumbled the ball, recovered it, and raced 89 yards down the sideline for his touchdown.

Southern California increased its lead to 14-3 in the first period as Iowa quarterback Rob Fick was intercepted by Doug Hogan. The Trojans then marched 48 yards with quarterback Pat Haden scoring on a rollout from the 11.

Iowa put on its best drive of the game early in the second period when the Hawkeys moved from their own one to the USC 19. But Jim Jensen fumbled and Phillips picked the ball off in the air, racing 83 yards to score.

In the third period, Iowa drove to the Trojan one where, on fourth down, Rod Wellington also fumbled and Phillips again picked it off in the air. This time he raced 93 yards for the score.

Fumble returns help USC win

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Senior defensive back Charles Phillips picked up two fumbles and returned them 82 and 88 yards for touchdowns Saturday to highlight a 41-3 University of Southern California romp over Iowa.

Phillips' 181 yards on intercepted fumble runs set a collegiate record. The old NCAA mark of 162 yards on three returns was set in 1956 by Bill Brodsky of Florida against Miami.

Until Phillips dazzled the crowd of 52,025 with his runs, on fumble recoveries in the air, the game's high point was

Michigan overhauls Stanford

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Michigan quarterback Donnis Franklin ran for two touchdowns and guided a 76-yard final scoring drive to lead the third-ranked Wolverines to a 27-16 win Saturday over stubborn but witness Stanford.

The Cardinals led 9-0 at the half but Franklin, voted the game's outstanding player, ran smooth option plays to the weak side for Michigan's fourth straight season victory without a loss.

Stanford's record fell to 6-3-1. Franklin, a 6-1, 180-pound senior, hit receivers with three key passes — two of them to end Jim Smith for 20 yards — to put the game out of reach in its final minutes.

The Wolverines were ineffectual in the first period, scored on a drive from 40 yards in the second, and then answered in the third quarter with two touchdown drives, capped by Franklin's keeper plays from 12 and five yards out.

Stanford, led by quarterback Jerry Waldvogel, sent ahead 60 in the first quarter on field goals by Mike Langford, who also kicked the Cards' final score in the half from 42 yards out.

Waldvogel brought Stanford back in the fourth quarter on a 76-yard drive climaxed by an eight yard aerial to fullback Scott Landfall.

In the battle of quarterbacks, Waldvogel hit 21 of 40 passes for 229 yards, while Franklin completed six of 13 passes for 85 yards, but Franklin had the edge on the ground, averaging 5.5 yards per carry for a 76-yard total.

Nebraska shatters Minnesota

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — With quarterback Dave Humm at the throttle and in full health, fifth-ranked Nebraska took command from the opening kickoff Saturday and breezed to a 54-0 victory over the Minnesota Gophers.

The Cornhuskers took a 6-0 lead in the first period after marching 85 yards in 16 plays with the opening kickoff.

The six points came on a six-yard pass from Humm to fullback Tony Davis. With that pass, Humm wrote himself into the Nebraska record books as the all-time leader in touchdowns thrown with 21, one more than the old record holder, Jerry Tagge.

The Huskers scored three touchdowns in the second quarter, two in the third, and two in the fourth and never allowed the gophers a decent scoring chance.

The Nebraska defense held Minnesota without a first down through the first 30 minutes. The gophers wound up with only three.

games end should, have counted, but the Soviets said time had already run out.

The tie gave the Soviets an unbeatable 3-1 lead in the series. The visitors needed to win today and Sunday just to draw even.

Today's game was much more subdued than Thursday's 5-2 Soviet win which ended with both sides brawling. Only three penalties were meted out today.

A fumble recovery by Mike Fultz on the Minnesota 30 set up the second Nebraska touchdown drive, capped when Dave Gillespie went over from the two. The third Nebraska score came on a 48-yard run by freshman Monte Anthony and the fourth on a 15-yard run around end by Humm.

Anthony scored again on a three-yard smash, and Jim Burrow returned a punt 67 yards to make the count 41-0 midway through the third period.

Monzon decks Mundine in 7th to retain middleweight title

Texas grinds past Washington 35-21

AUSTIN, TEX. (UPI) — Freshman fullback Earl Campbell hounded for 125 yards and one touchdown Saturday to lead a potent Texas rushing attack over pass-minded Washington 35-21.

The Longhorns, who fought to contain the Huskies' passing game throughout the first half, controlled the ball for 11 minutes of the third period while Campbell rolled up 80 yards and Texas pushed the game out of reach.

Five different Texas players figured in the scoring.

Quarterback Marty Akin, all-America fullback Roosevelt Leaks, and freshman Jimmy Walker all accounted for Longhorn scores in the first half.

Akin gained 48 of the 70 yards the Longhorns marched for their first score, making the final 10 on an option play. Leaks, recovering from knee surgery, played behind Campbell and scored from the one. Walker raced three yards for another Texas score.

Washington kept it close in the first half on two touchdowns passed from Chris Rowland to tight end Robin Earl from 40 and 22 yards out.

Grady Wyatt capped a 62-yard, third period drive for Texas, then Campbell bulldozed through the Washington defense for 44 yards of a 62-yard Longhorn drive, punching the final one yard on his third try from that distance.

Ron Olson kept the Huskies' hopes alive in the third period, picking off a pass from Akin at the Texas 30, and racing down the sideline for a score.

BLIENOS AIRES (UPI) — Carlos Monzon of Argentina knocked out Tony Mundine of Australia in the seventh round Saturday night to retain the World Boxing Association middleweight crown.

The knockout in the easy life defense, Monzon's 70th, came after 1:30 of the round at the end of a series of blows to the head that numbed the challenger.

Monzon said after the fight that he followed the instructions of his manager, Amilca Brusa, to "fight slowly and wait for the right moment."

He said when that moment arrived "he (Mundine) fell by himself."

Monzon then said he would like to fight Rodrigo Valdes of Colombia, the World Boxing Council middleweight champion, if a fight could be arranged "before the end of the year."

Monzon has been talking of retirement during recent months.

Mundine, 21, opened the fight aggressively, with Monzon backpedaling. This was in contrast with the young challenger's previously leaked plans to stay away from the 22-year-old champion at the beginning and hope to wear him down.

Both fighters began slugging in the second round and Mundine connected with a series of stomach and face shots that buckled and propped Mundine at the end of the third round.

Monzon, pacing himself, continued to look for openings by the angry challenger and battered Mundine with several combinations at the end of the sixth round.

Twice saved by timely bells, Mundine finally fell after a flurry from the champion.

Mundine had the champion against the ropes several times during the fight but his blows did not seem to bother Monzon.

The champion had confidently predicted a knockout victory, and smiled cockily before the fight began.

BYU falls at buzzer 34-33

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (UPI) — Colorado State quarterback Mark Driscoll passed for four touchdowns, including a 15-yarder to flanker Willie Miller on the last play of the game, to give CSU a 34-33 tie with Western Athletic Conference for Brigham Young University Saturday.

The point after touchdown attempt by Clark Kemble was so close that it took referees 15 minutes to rule it a good one. Kemble also led field goals from 34 and 59 yards, the last a school record, and kicked three points after in the game.

DOUBLE STRETCH is applied to Texas A and M quarterback David Walker by Kansas' Les Barnes who clings to a flail and skirt and one ankle. Kansas upset the fourth-ranked Aggies 28-10. (UPI telephoto)

Kansas knocks Texas A-M from unbeaten list in 28-10 upset

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — Sophomore quarterback Scott McMichael, who hit 12 of 14 passes, flipped scoring strikes of 61 and nine yards in the second half Saturday, propelling Kansas to a 28-10 upset victory over fourth-ranked and previously unbeaten Texas A&M.

McMichael, the Big Eight's passing and total offense leader, brought the Jayhawks from behind with a 61-yard pass to Emmett Edwards with 49 seconds left in the third quarter. That wiped out a 10-7 A&M lead.

Edwards, who had to wait for the pass, caught the ball on the A&M 30, sidestepped defensive halfback James Daniels and scampered into the end zone untouched.

Midway through the fourth period, A&M quarterback

David Walker made a poor pitechout on the slippery artificial turf and Kansas end Dean Zook recovered at the Cadets' 44.

Robert Miller, the fullback who is the Big Eight's leading rusher, started the clinching drive with a 19-yard run to the A&M 25. From the nine, McMichael found Miller all alone in a flat and the 20-pounder stalked the last two yards for the score with 8:29 to go.

Bufs outlast Falcons 28-27

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (UPI) — Quarterback David Williams ran off tackle for first quarter touchdowns of 44 and 23 yards and helped Billy Waddy run for two scores and 170 yards Saturday as Colorado held on for a 28-27 win over Air Force.

Air Force placekicker David Lawson, who broke his own school record with a 60-yard field goal in the first quarter, missed a 50-yard attempt in the closing seconds which would have given Air Force a win.

The Falcons also scored on a 16-yard pass from Ken Faught to Bob Burr in the second quarter and in pair of 10-yard Ken Wood runs in the second half. Air Force picked up a safety with 4:11 to play when Colorado punter Stan Koleski ran out of the end zone instead of trying to kick into the stiff wind.

The game marked the end of the Colorado-Air Force series, as Air Force officials, who have won only 4 of the 16 meetings between the two schools, cancelled the final two contests Saturday.

Colorado took a 21-3 first quarter lead as Williams ran 44 yards to cap the Bufs' game opening drive and after Lawson made his record setting boot, Waddy broke loose for a 67 yard touchdown run.

A-State struggles past Wyoming 16-10

LARAMIE, Wyo. (UPI) — Arizona State quarterback Dennis Sproul threw a 61-yard touchdown pass to wingback Morris Owens and dived in one yard out and Specialist Dan Kush kicked a 50-yard field goal to give the Sun Devils a 16-10 Western Athletic Conference win over Wyoming.

Wyoming, plagued by fumbles, got its touchdown on a one-yard run by fullback Bobbie Wright in the first period. Quarterback Rick Castello kicked a 43-yard field goal for the only other Cowboy points.

Arizona State, in only its second win at Laramie, was favored by the stubborn defense but took advantage of Wyoming mistakes and recovered six of the Cowboys' 10 fumbles. ASU also intercepted one Castello pass. ASU lost two of four fumbles.

The Sun Devils' first score in the opening period on Sproul's one-yard run capped a seven-play drive that went 45 yards. Kush's attempted point-after was wide to the right.

Kush came back in the second period, however, with a 19-yard field goal. Wyoming forced the kick with 6:46 left before the half by holding on after a turnover on Cowboy flanker Andy Dixon's fumble. Sproul hit Morris in the third quarter for the final ASU score.

Montana stops Weber 24-13

BOZEMAN, Mont. (UPI) — Montana State halfback Steve Kracher ran for three touchdowns and 119 yards to lead the Bobcats to a 24-13 Big Sky Conference win Saturday over Northern Arizona.

Kracher scored on runs of 39, 15 and 12 yards, all in the first half, as MSU scored 21 points in the second quarter to stay ahead for good.

Bobcat quarterback Mike Dunbar, back from missing last week's game with a shoulder injury, threw two touchdown passes — one of 24 yards to Hoesco Schmidt, and a second from 10 yards out to split end Brian Flieg.

MSU amassed 400 yards in total offense, including 353 yards on the ground.

The Lumberjacks made a second half bid to get back into the game, trailing 34-7 in the third quarter, but NAU quarterback Charles Helms got them only 14 points on a pair of touchdown passes.

The win upped Montana State's record to 3-2. NAU is now 2-3. Both teams are 1-1 in Big Sky play.

Bobcats rip North Arizona

MISSOULA, Mont. (UPI) — The Montana Grizzlies jumped to a 24-0 lead in the third quarter and then held off Weber State for a 24-13 win Saturday in the Big Sky Conference opener for both teams.

Montana quarterback Rick Svenningsen scored his first of two touchdowns, running in from three yards out in the opening minutes, and Bob Smith raced 10 yards as the Grizzlies led 14-0 at the end of the first quarter.

Svenningsen then scored on a 12-yard scamper in the third quarter, and Bruce Carlson — who had kicked all three extra points — booted a 31-yard field goal to make it 24-0 for Montana.

Florida's passing beats LSU 24-14

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Freshman Tony Green scored one touchdown and split a pass Saturday to lead Florida to a 24-14 victory over Louisiana State University.

Florida's first touchdown came on a 58-yard run by Green in the second quarter, after a drive in four plays with 6:03 left in the first quarter.

The game then turned into a defensive battle with neither team scoring until the Gators' David Posey hit a 22-yard field goal with 3:10 left in the third quarter.

Florida quarterback Jimmy "Hot Rod" McNeill hit a 25-yard touchdown pass with 16 seconds left in the third quarter and followed with another 62-yard completion to McNeill in the fourth period to wrap up the Gators' scoring.

Broussard scored LSU's first touchdown on a 21-yard run with 8:08 left in the game, cutting the Florida lead to 17-7, after a drive covering 43 yards in 10 plays. LSU scored again on a 10-yard pass from backup quarterback Carl Osis Trimble with less than a minute to play after Florida had the game wrapped up.

The best LSU could manage in the first half was a drive to the Florida two where Oregon and Green led the charge on Tiger quarterback Billy Broussard to enable the Gators to take over on downs.

Rusty Jackson tried a 40-yard field goal with 14 seconds left in the half, which sailed wide in the 25-mile an hour wind gusts that raked Florida Field.

The victory was the fourth for the undefeated Gators, who are aiming for a share of the Southeastern Conference crown for the first time since they became charter members of the SEC 41 years ago.

Just suppose it were your job...

How would you provide electric power for our area's needs?

It's been well established that increasing amounts of electric power will be required for our area. It's because of growth. New people and new businesses are moving in. It's because of increased electric use by present customers — new families, new babies, new homes. It's because of conversions from other forms of energy to electricity, conversion which conforms to national goals. Knowing more electricity must be provided, how would you get it?

Would you build hydro plants?

Over the years Idaho Power Company has built an efficient network of hydroelectric power plants, but no new large hydro sites presently are available to us.

Would you build nuclear plants?

Were we to initiate plans for a nuclear power plant today, it would be twelve years or more before it would be working to provide for our electric needs. We can't wait that long. If time were not a factor, cost would be, as your electric costs would be substantially higher.

Would you go geothermal?

The technology is not developed to build the huge plants for today's electric needs utilizing geothermal, solar or other exotic energy sources.

Would you build coal plants?

Obviously, coal is the answer to our energy needs for the years immediately ahead. Coal is the nation's most abundant fossil fuel. Eastern utilities are being encouraged by the Federal Energy office to convert from gas and oil to coal by utilizing the same type of desirable low sulfur coal that is available to us from neighboring states.

Idaho Power Company has always been able to provide the electricity you need. With your help and understanding, we'll keep it that way.

Dark expects Athletics to come out swinging Sunday

OAKLAND (UPI) — Oakland A's Manager Alvin Dark said Saturday that he expected his club to break loose at the plate and even the American League playoff series at 1-1 Sunday.

"They got nine hits today and they look like they're starting to hit," Dark said after the A's dropped their playoff opener 6-3 to the Baltimore Orioles.

Dark said his team "will better than in a month" and his club's batting "hasn't broken loose for a long time."

Dark said he was not depressed by the first loss.

"The second game is more important. It can turn the momentum around, and our boys are all pepped up."

Dark admitted a loss in the second meeting could spell disaster. "The odds would really be against us if we lose tomorrow."

But, he said, his team has come through in tight situations in the past. "These boys have been through a lot of pressure series."

And the manager said he expected a good effort from pinner Ken Holtzman in a second-game duel with Steve McNally. "Kenny is ready."

Dark said he expected Holtzman to pitch "hard right from the start."

Asked whether he would be tense, the thunder said, "I don't get nervous. I'm all right once I start warming up."

Reggie Jackson, who went hitless in four tries in the opener, said he pulled a leg muscle during warmups. He explained that it did not affect his slugging but "it's not a nice thing to talk about—it's kind of depressing."

Jackson, too, was optimistic despite the loss. "It's not over," he said. "They've got to beat us two more games."

Dependable Jim "Catfish" Hunter, who took the pitching loss after giving up six runs in a 4-2-3 inning, said he had a tough time placing the ball where he wanted it.

"I didn't have my control," Hunter said. "When I did, my control, I've had it. I'm a control pitcher."

He said the honors by outfielder Paul Blair and Brooks Robinson were tagged on first balls, while the one by second baseballer Bob Grieh came out as slider:

Murtaugh says Sutton was too much for his Pirates

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — "It was too much Sutton," signed Danny Murtaugh after his Pittsburgh Pirates dropped a 3-0 decision to Los Angeles on Saturday by Don Sutton in Saturday's opener of the National League playoffs.

"He pitched a masterful ball game. Anytime you keep your club to getting only one player to second base in a game, you've done a heck of a job. He just completely shut the door on us," Murtaugh added.

Only one Pirate baserunner reached second base and that was in the second inning with the aid of an error by Dodger third baseman Ron Coy.

But Murtaugh, relaxed in his office in a wooden rocking chair, was content.

"We've been battling back all year and we'll be there tomorrow."

"No one had it tougher Saturday than Pirate right-fielder Richie Zisk, a .313 regular season hitter who struck out three times and popped out once.

"It was very frustrating, but you've got to give him credit," Zisk said of Sutton. "He pitched as well as anyone against us."

Murtaugh described it as the second-best effort by a pitcher all year against the Pirates, topped only by a three-hitter by the New York Mets' Jon Matlack late in the season.

"It makes things a little tougher, that's all," said Zisk about the opening setback. "If we lose tomorrow, then it's time to worry."

In spite of his futile efforts, Zisk was looking forward to seeing Sutton again in Las Angeles.

"This was his best effort against us," Zisk said. "Remember, in his other three starts, we hit him pretty good."

In fact, Sutton, now riding a 10-game winning streak, was only 1-2 for the season against the Pirates before Saturday.

"I was just too high today,"

Alston made first clubhouse speech of year before game

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Walt Alston isn't big on making speeches.

"He's not really the Knute Rockne type, even if one of his big ball games does happen to fall on a football Saturday."

Actually he hasn't stood up in the center of the clubhouse and exhorted his young Los Angeles Dodgers all year.

He did feel he had a few words he wanted to say to them before Saturday's 3-0 opening playoff win here against the Pittsburgh Pirates, who had beaten the Dodgers six in a row without a loss at Three Rivers Stadium this year.

"I just wanna take a little of your time," Alston began in that soft, casual, almost fatherly way of his.

"You're a great ball club and I'm proud of you. You've won over a hundred games this year, and I know the kind of ball club you are and the ability you have, but a lotta people are saying we haven't won a ball game in this park this year."

Alston paused a second, the same way some of the football coaches do, then continued.

"So you're just gonna have to go in there and show 'em you can."

Maybe you won't believe this, but a half dozen Dodger players, the younger ones, jumped up from their seats, and two or three of them hollered:

"Let's go get 'em!"

Alston, managing the Dodgers since 1954 and enjoying it more now than he ever has before, knows when to turn on the psychology.

He does that casually, too. This summer, for example, Don Sutton, the ace of his pitching staff, was going through a rough time. Sutton had gone through a stretch of 14 games without a single victory.

Alston walked by him in the clubhouse, then stopped, turned and said to him:

"Don't lose confidence in yourself."

Sutton, who rarely gets down, immediately answered in me, I won't lose confidence in myself."

It was this same Sutton who stopped the Pirates on four hits in Saturday's playoff opener.

"The '29-year-old Dodger righthander answered all questions put to him, popping his bubble gum occasionally and said:

"It doesn't sound very humble, but I'll never lose confidence in myself."

The way he closed the door on the Pirates Saturday, he can afford to talk that way.

"It was as good a ball game as I've ever seen him pitch," said the most neutral observer in the park, Nick Colosi, who umpired behind the plate.

Weaver would rather win first game

OAKLAND (UPI) — "If I win my drubbers, I'd rather have the first game," Earl Weaver, eye twinkling, said Saturday after his Baltimore Orioles defeated Oakland, 6-3, in the first game of the American League playoffs.

"But we still have to go out and win two more before we get into the big one (World Series). That's what we've got to do. But winning here today, especially against Oakland's (Jim) Hunter really helps."

The Orioles, with home run power supplied by Paul Blair, Bobby Grich and Brooks Robinson—all off Hunter—assured themselves of at least a split in the two-game set here before the best-of-five series concludes in Baltimore.

"Hunter has always pitched well against us," Weaver continued. "In fact, he was 7-0 against us over the last two years. But we were fortunate he had some control problems."

Before he was hit in the fifth, Hunter was tagged for all six runs and eight of the 10 Baltimore hits.

Robinson, who drilled a line shot inside the left field pole to start a four-run fifth-inning rally, said he didn't notice any great difference in Hunter's performance.

"He never varies that much," Robinson said. "Maybe he didn't always get the ball where he wanted to, but I don't think he was any different than he usually is."

If anything, the perennial Golden Glove third baseman complained about the playing conditions.

"The area around third base is like a sand pile," he said. "It was brutal out there. You can't get a good jump."

Grieh, who along with Blair scored twice and drove in two runs, was especially pleased with his homer which capped the fifth-inning rally.

"It gave us a good cushion," he said of the blow. "Another reason I was happy was that it kind of made up for what I did in the playoffs last year."

Blancas' record 64 ties Sahara lead

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Somero Blancas tied the Sahara-Nevada Country Club course record with a 64 Sunday to gain a first-place tie with Dave Hill and Al Gelsberger with a 54-hole total of 204 after three rounds in the $13,000 Sahara Invitational golf tournament.

Blancas, playing in the same threesome with Hill, had eight birdies and one bogey for his round of 65, while the pencil-thin Gelsberger came in with a 66.

Johnny Miller, bidding for his ninth tournament victory of the year, fell out of contention with a 72 for a 215 total.

"I played real well," said Blancas, a 36-year-old, 10-year tour veteran from Houston, "I drove the ball extremely well today and, of course, when you drive it well, everything falls into place.

"I think the ball carried farther today, but I don't know why."

Blancas' round was marred only by a bogey on the par-three, 228-yard 14th hole when he missed the green by hitting his tee shot to the left. He canned a 40-foot putt for a birdie two on the 16th.

Hill, who was reluctant to meet with reporters after his round, attributed his play here to his putting.

"I've putted better the last two days than I have all year," he explained.

Australian Bob Stanton also had a record-equalling 64 Saturday and was two shots behind the leaders at 206.

There was a five-way tie at 205 among Chi Chi Rodriguez, J.C. Snead, Lou Graham, Jerry Heard, and Charles Coody.

The 64s by Blancas and Stanton were the fourth and fifth such rounds over the par-71, 6,800-yard Sahara-Nevada course. Dave Eichelberger, who had one of the 64s here last year enroute to a second place finish, started the day with a one-stroke lead with Coody but slipped to a 73 for a 208 total.

Defending champion John Mahaffey was five shots back after the third round with a second-round 70.

Oklahoma buries Wake Forest

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI) — Quarterback Steve Davis filled touchdown passes of seven and 32 yards Saturday to pace Oklahoma to a 63-0 routing of Wake Forest.

"The Sooners ground out 531 yards rushing and added 109 yards in the air in brushing aside the lighter and younger Beavers. The Oklahoma defense limited the visitors to 77 yards rushing and 79 yards on the ground.

Halfback Joe Washington tempered 15 yards on 10 carries, including an electrifying 65-yard touchdown gamble, before retiring in the first half.

Halfback Grant BURGEL opened the scoring with an 87-yard sweep to climax a 60-yard game-opening drive of seven plays.

Third-string quarterback Dean Blevins guided an allreserve squad on a five-play, 65-yard drive to open the second half, capped by a 42-yard scoring pass to split end Billy Brooks.

Blevins, a freshman, dove across from the one-yard line for a touchdown in the fourth quarter. The campaign of 22 yards was set up by a pass interception by safety Jerry Reese, also a third-stringer.

Reserve fullback Clyde Russell romped 70 yards midway through the final period for a TD, freshman halfback Elvis Peacock scored on a 55-yard charge in the second quarter and backup halfback Bob Berg plunged across from the oneyard line just before halftime.

John Carroll tackled on the extra point after each touchdown.

Coach Barry Switzer substituted liberally in the second half, observing as many Sooners players as possible before next week's encounter with Texas in the Cotton Bowl.

A total of 87 OU players saw action Saturday.

Washington's yardage gave him a career total of 2,162.165 to make him the fourth best rusher in Sooners history.

Russell joined Washington in the 100 yard club by rushing 110 yards in six carries. Peacock contributed 67 yards on four runs.

Comstock generals Vandals past ISU 28-9

POCATELLO — The Idaho Vandals stung Idaho State with a touchdown on its first play, then snuffed out a rally bid with two fourth quarter scores to post a 28-9 victory Saturday night.

It marked the first win ever for the Vandals in the "Midwest" and gave Idaho its first victory in four outings. Idaho State absorbed its second loss in three tries.

The game was only seconds old when Dave Comstock, Idaho quarterback playing in his home town, fired a bomb to Colle Mack who sprinted in easily for a 74-yard scoring play. The Vandals added another touchdown on their third possession but then ISU, getting a field goal from Steve Bellar, steeled and through the middle quarters played Idaho all too evenly.

The Bengals got back into the game with a strong 99-yard drive in the third quarter and appeared from the enthusiasm generating on the ISU side a race to the wire might be in store.

But Comstock, remembering a 347 drubbing on the field two years ago on regional TV, then guided the Vandals 90 yards for a clinching touchdown. On its next possession, Idaho won't for its final score as the second unit, under Dennis Ballock, went 49 yards in nine plays to establish the final score with 3:41 left.

Idaho's opening bomb came after Mack had run the kickoff to the Vandals 26.

The teams then exchanged punts with Idaho uncoiling a 74-yard march. The big play was a 21 yard reverse run by Mack, which took the Vandals off a 40 and nine hook and put the ball on the 15-yard line.

Two plays later Mack Fredrick drove up the middle to score from the 12. Steve Tanner booted all four conversions.

Idaho State then steadied and replied with a drive from its own eight-yard field goal to get ISU on the board.

Idaho made one more highlight in the half moving from its own 49 to the Idaho State seven. But Tanner's field goal attempt was wide to the right.

Idaho State worked a second-half opening bomb to the Idaho 49 but a penalty killed any more penetration and, after two first downs, Idaho had to punt.

From its own 30 Idaho State moved to the Idaho 30 pit on fourth and two Vandal Mike Silva intercepted a pass and ran it out to the 40-yard line.

A 15-yard roughing penalty gave Idaho a first down there and the Vandals quickly moved to the Bengals 11. Marshall Brantley and Fredrick got most of those yards. But with second and seven at the 11, Comstock tried a pass which was picked off by ISU's Wade Hill at the one-foot line.

From that tenuous position, ISU started marching. Tony Ashton went in. A two point try failed, leaving the score at 14-9.

From them on Comstock moved centerstage. He worked the option well, keeping for times for 25 yards and getting 29 from Brantley on pitches. But ISU started stiffening after a first down at the four and it wasn't until fourth and less than one that Comstock sneaked home.

Three plays later Idaho State had to put and Ballock and his unit brought the Vandals right back. Monte Nash and Ron Dean did the running and Kirk Dennis caught two passes to put the ball on the 16. Ballock kept on an option and rolled in from there.

Boise State rips Reno 36-10

BOISE (UPI) — Boise State's Jim McMillan rifed four touchdowns before leaving midway in the third quarter to lead his teammates to a 36-10 win over the University of Nevada-Reno Saturday night.

Reserve quarterback Lee McMillan led the Broncos' attack by adding one more touchdown before the final run.

The victory gave nationally third-ranked BSU its fourth consecutive win of the year. The Nevada Wolf Pack is 3-2 for the season.

McMillan hit 14 of 23 attempts for a total of 317 yards before Coach Tony Knap replaced him with Huey. He plked up another 11 yards running.

Boise scored first with 10:27 left in the first quarter on an 80-yard strike from McMillan to halfback John Smith. The Broncos' offense stuttered until midway in the second quarter, but there light defense kept Reno from any serious scoring threats throughout the game.

Wolf Pack quarterback Jack Fisher scored an off-tackle keeper play late in the third quarter and fullback Sam Valena scored on an end sweep with 1:02 left in the game. Charlie Lee picked up the other three points with a field goal early in the same period.

Boise's promising sophomore wide receiver Terry Hull and full back Chester Grey both suffered injuries and are expected to be out of action for the season.

Texas Tech nips Oklahoma St.

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — Sophomore quarterback Tommy Duniven led the seventh-ranked Texas Tech Red Raiders to two quick second quarter touchdowns to beat 19th-ranked Oklahoma State 14-13 Saturday night.

Duniven threw 16 yards to Tanker Larry Williams for one and fullback Larry Isaac dashed the final yard of another scoring drive as the Raiders came from behind.

The Cowboys scored first on a 40-yard gallop by quarterback Charlie Weatherly and added a two-point play by fullback Skip Taylor to bring Oklahoma State within a point with nine 9:23 left in the third quarter.

The final quarter turned into a defensive battle as each team struggled to get an offensive drive going.

With 10 seconds remaining Oklahoma State's Abby Daigle tried a 68-yard field goal but the ball fell short and Texas Tech took over with three seconds left.

The victory left Texas Tech with a 3-0 record for the season and dropped Oklahoma State to 2-2 for the year.

The win was also the ninth straight home victory for the Raiders and their 13th win in a row. Texas Tech was tied in the second game of the season by New Mexico.

Isaac finished as the leading rusher for Texas Tech, netting 59 yards on 24 carries.

Oklahoma State fullback George Palmer was the game's top ballcarrier netting 144 yards on 16 tries.

Duniven hit five of 12 passes for 53 yards and the go ahead touchdown and had only one interception. Oklahoma State failed to complete a pass in 10 attempts.

Oklahoma State finished with 289 yards total offense — all on the ground — while Texas Tech netted 192 yards, 53 on passing and 139 on the ground.

UCLA running game beats Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Seventh-ranked UCLA, shut down the air attack on its opening game with two TDs from Carl Zaby and another from Russel Charles for a 27-14 win over Utah Saturday night.

The Ute defense keyed on UCLA's junior quarterback John Serra, limiting him to just six completions in the game. But late in the first quarter Seclara discovered the Utes were vulnerable to the sweep and turned his running backs loose for 277 yards.

Zaby's scoring runs came on sweeps around left end from 10 and three yards out. Charles, the game's leading rusher, sprinted in from the seven to give UCLA a 17-0 lead early in the third quarter.

The Bruins' other points came on field goals of 41 and 32 yards by Brett White. He also kicked three extra points.

Utah's first score came on what appeared to be a turnover in the air. Three a 18-yard pass to end Dick Graham. He was hit immediately, and Rossel popped in the air, and Roosevelt Hutchins caught it on a dead run and went 23 more yards for the score.

Hutchins also scored the only other tid, that on a 61 yard run with 3:39 to go in the game.

UCLA's first half scores were both set up on a pair of long drives.

After the Utah defense held the Bruins without a first down until the final two minutes of the first quarter, halfback Russel Charles broke off right tackle for 42 yards. His scamper put the Bruins on the Ute 33 and Zaby carried over from the 10 just into the second quarter.

Midway through the quarter, Wendell Tyler swept left end for 43 yards, to the Utah 10. A penalty and the Utah defense kept the Bruins from crossing the goal line and White kicked a 32-yard field goal.

Utah mounted three drives in the first half but failed to get inside the UCLA 20.

The first time Utah had the ball they moved to the Bruins' 24 where a penalty killed them. A fumble ended a second drive at the 38 and Kent Pearce picked off a pass at the Bruin 30.

White tried a 41-yard field goal with seven seconds left in the half but was wide and when Utah took over it looked like they scored on the next play when fullback Steve Mareski broke through the line and raced 52 yards before being run down.

UCLA is now 2-1-1 while the Utes dropped their third game of the season.

Minico thumps Nampa for second straight loop win

RUPERT — The Minico Spartans posted their second straight conference win Friday night, dropping the Nampa Bulldogs 19-7 on a pair of second-half touchdowns.

The Spartans couldn't count on the victory until the final minutes when Dan Nichols scored on a seven-yard run. But a couple of misfirings on deep penetrations kept the Spartans within reach.

Minico fumbled away a chance at the two-yard line on a fumble, recovered short of a first down, ended another at the five, Nampa's defense put up a goal line stand to thwart another at the four.

The Spartans struck early, returning the opening kickoff to midfield and then shaking Ray Pena loose for 31 yards. Four plays later, Pena went from the seven and Randy Gillette converted.

Minico then drove to the 20 and the four only to come up empty but after the last one Nampa replied with a 10-play drive that ate up 96 yards. Jeff Cotterell threw to Andy Vasquez for the final 12 yards and Dave Sentitzen's boot tied it.

Minico took the lead for keeps early in the third when Steve Christ recovered a fumble at the Nampa 36. Kyle Uscola's 16-yard rollout run was the big play and also got the touchdown.

Nampa had a fleeting chance to go ahead late in the game when it went into a spread formation but a pass that had a touchdown written on it didn't connect. Minico then adjusted to the spread and took possession with three minutes left.

Mike Albert's 25-yard sprint took the Spartans deep and set up the final seven-yard burst for Doug Nichols.

From all angles

By Larry Hovey

The problems arising at the municipal golf course the past few weeks really aren't new. In fact, the only thing really different is that some catalyst has extended it beyond its norm.

The one basic truth about golf is a continuing war, if that is the name, between professionals and amateurs. It is always there. It is at every course. Replacement of Clyde Thomsen at Twin Falls municipal would not change it.

Each group holds to a credo. The amateurs basically state "without us there would be no golf." The pros state "without us, golf would be an integral socially and competitively."

Each group is correct. But what the two sides have trouble realizing, particularly in moments of irritation, is that it boils down to an interdependency. Each faction carries the seeds of destruction for the other.

Everyone, especially amateurs, will challenge that last statement.

The best example is the handicap system, which, despite disclaimers from all sides, is an unsolvable problem.

The pros set up the first handicap card system which had the added "teeth" of arbitrarily slicing strokes off handicaps whose owners showed up often on net division prize lists.

The new IGA computer system is a good system on paper. It has no similar teeth. Neither has every considered perfect. But, those amateurs dictatorially cut by the pros soon dropped off the "tour." Currently, Idaho has about 20 sandbaggers with no checks or balances in the system for correction.

The amateur-professional thing is based on live-hate, to a degree.

The nature of the situation doesn't help it. Under PGA rules, any course hiring a class A PGA member must pay $250 per month. The contract also gives all merchandising concession to the pro.

In Twin Falls' case, Clyde Thomsen also handles the restaurant concession a lease basis. It's optional.

In return, the pro picks up the greens fees paid by the golfers and turns them into the city.

This puts the professional in the position of serving two masters. Consider if you were in the process of wrapping up a $300 golf set deal and 10 people come in to register to play.

Immediately, the business would seem that the city hire someone else to administer greens fees tickets.

Nope!

That's where the "love" thing comes in. The amateurs want the pro to know them, talk to them, serve them and get them on the course. When they come off, they want to tell a pro how they hit it so good or so bad, not your Aunt Maude who is doing really nothing more than making change.

Anyone working with the public realizes it isn't a bed of roses.

Consider a pro trying to make a living selling golf equipment and four guys walk in wearing Penny shirts and pants and some U. S. Keds golf shoes. They're carrying some clubs from a discount store and using balls that they either picked up at a drugstore or got from a friend's firm, whose name is emblazoned thereon. Their cooler is filled with beer from a supermarket.

Then they want to tell you about each shot they made from No. 1 tee to last putt on 18.

It's like you being a bartender and me coming in with a bottle of tooth and a can of mix and asking for a glass of ice.

At the same time, however, it is realized by all sides that it is a public course.

So you serve two masters and try to walk the line. Few can do that. It takes great effort on both sides.

Steelhead season curtailed

SALMON — The smallest run of steelhead ever counted over the Snake River dams has brought a closure on fishing in the Snake and several tributaries in Idaho, Washington and Oregon.

Through Sept. 29 only about 6,700 steelhead had been counted over Little Goose Dam on the Snake, only 30 per cent of normal.

Jack Cook, spokesman for the Salmon Chamber of Commerce in fishery matters, says the small run may be the result of the hot temperature of the water in the Columbia and Snake rivers which is slowing the run.

As of Sept. 24, 132,000 steelhead had been counted over Bonneville Dam on the lower Columbia.

"I don't think all the steelhead lost, but are held up in pools until the water cools off," he said.

"This has happened in the past and once we get rains and cooler water the run will move fast. It may be wishful thinking but if past history is correct this is the situation this fall."

Last fall, steelhead fishing did not improve until November when colder temperatures arrived.

Cook noted the first steelhead reported caught in the Salmon area was a 10-pounder taken from the Salmon River North Fork Tuesday.

Across the goal line

DRIVING Hal Kelo of Valley punches past two Shoshone Indians and into the end zone during Little Five Conference play Friday night. Shoshone nipped the Vikings 20-14 on a score in the last six seconds.

Shoshone scores in final six seconds to edge Valley 20-14

EDEN — Junior tailback Bryan Klinghorn scored with six seconds left Friday night to lift the Shoshone Indians past Valley's Vikings, 20-14 in a bitterly contested Little Five Conference battle.

Klinghorn's score, which was loudly protested by Valley aficionados, came at the end of a drive that was helped by two big breaks. Looking at about a fourth and 16, Shoshone punter Mike Heath got a bouncing pass from center at about his own 20. The over-eager Vikings missed a chance to smear him, one Viking sailing completely over his head.

Heath then squirmed loosed to the sideline and got the first down with a couple of inches to spare. Minutes later, Valley intercepted but was hit with a pass interference call to set Shoshone up on the 16-yard line.

The Indians used all their timeouts in getting to the two, stopping the clock for the last time with about 12 seconds left. Klinghorn then cut back off a sweep and was hit near the goal line.

Valley fans said he didn't get the ball into the end zone but, after a conference, the officials went with the field judge who said the ball had broken the plane of the goal line.

Valley worked a couple of big plays in the second half to erase a 14-0 deficit Shoshone built before intermission. All the Viking scoring came in a two-minute span.

It started on a 73-yard scoring bomb from Hal Kelo to Darvin Bruning. A Shoshone defender just missed slapping it away around the 50 and Bruning had clear sailing from there.

Two plays later, Viking Lynn Standlee pounced on a Shoshone fumble at the 13-yard line and Kelo carried three straight times from there for the score.

Shoshone had taken the lead two minutes into the second period on a 34-yard counter romp by Mark Anderson. Rob Haddock converted for two points.

Two plays after the kickoff, Steve Kelly covered a Valley fumble at the Viking 21, and Haddock capitalized on that break with a seven-yard scoring burst.

Shoshone had a chance to tack it away early in the third period when Lee Williams blocked a punt at the Valley 19-yard line, but the Vikings intercepted a pass to block that bid.

McCalley leads CSI to victory

WALLA WALLA — Steve McCalley's record-setting run led College of Southern Idaho to team victory in the Whitman College cross-country invitational Saturday.

McCalley turned the hip five-mile course in 24:30 against 25:26 for the old standard. Monte Brothwell was third at 24:50 while John Hunter was 10th. Craig Pace 17th, Tim Severa 21st and Barry McDaniel 24th.

CSI scored 51 points followed by Lewis and Clark of Portland 54, Whitworth 62, Willamette 64, Whitman 122, NNC 130, Eastern Oregon 205.

CSI will hold its invitational with NNC, Hicks and Eastern Club at 11:30 a.m. Saturday on the campus course.

Wendell rolls past Kimberly

KIMBERLY — Tracy Scott romped for three touchdowns and Rob Blotterly scored on a long punt return Friday night to send Wendell past Kimberly, 42-8.

Scott was joined in the scoring by Pat Higgenbotham who had a touchdown and two-point conversion and Dan Richards.

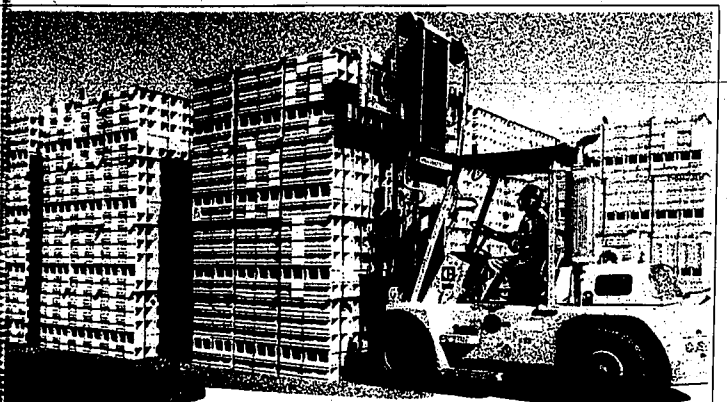

Bitterly's punt return covered 70 yards.

The victory, coupled with Shoshone's victory over Valley, gave Wendell sole possession of the Little Five Conference lead with a 29-point record.

Second ace

PAUL Elledge scored the second hole-in-one of his career Saturday at the municipal course.

George Williams and Jim Bowden watched as Elledge converted his tee shot on the 10th hole, a 165-yard second hole with a six iron.

WANTED: IDAHO JOBS FOR IDAHOANS

From your own selfish point of view, you should be buying and using Idaho-made products. Unless you like the idea of your money going somewhere else. But remember, once that money leaves Idaho, it's gone for good. Money that will provide employment for someone in some other area of the country, not here.

Do we have a selfish viewpoint? Sure. And here's why.

Last year Amcor provided jobs for 250

Amcor employees, plus jobs for another 445 Idahoans who worked because we manufactured our products here. And sold them here.

With 73.9 cents of every one of our sales dollars staying in Idaho, we put over $2,612,724 into the state's economy. Dollars that turned over nearly three times, after we were through with them. Reason enough for you to use our Prestress, concrete block, pipe and related products in your home and industry.

Mtn. Home ends Buhl's unbeaten boast

MOUNTAIN HOME — The Mountain Home Tigers converted a fumble into a touchdown and maintained their jinx over the previously undefeated Buhl Indians 7-6.

The defeat knocked Buhl out of a share of the South Central Idaho Conference lead, leaving it to the sole possession of Jerome, Buhl, Gooding and Wood River now are all tied with a loop loss each. It was the fourth straight Tiger win in the series.

Mountain Home's key break came following a first quarter of punt exchanges. The Tigers kicked Buhl into a hole on the eight-yard line and Buhl fumbled the ball away two plays later.

The Idaho defense, playing what Coach Jim Jund described as its best of the season, then knocked Mountain Home for three yards in losses in three plays but Nick Schiz then flipped a scoring strike to Kalc Berriehna, who also converted.

Time ran out on Buhl at the seven-yard line to end the first half and Mountain Home made its best offensive effort of the night to open the second half, moving to Buhl's 25 before being stopped.

From there Buhl marched downfield and scored on a 12-yard key by Cacy Schneckpeper. A high snap from center on the tying conversion try gave Mountain Home enough time to block the kick.

In the fourth period Buhl moved to the 30 and was stopped. Mountain Home kicked back to the Indians 15, and from there Schneckpeper used short passes to move to the Tiger 20. A penalty on third and two forced Buhl to the air and Mountain Home intercepted to snuff out the threat.

Buhl's attack was hurt when speedster Chris Bell sprained an ankle in the first period and didn't return. Buhl senior fullback Hoh Nejezchiba underwent knee surgery Thursday and is out for the season.

Declo drops Hansen

HANSEN — The Declo Hornets protected a 6-head for a long time, then outscored Hansen's Huskies in a big fourth quarter for a 26-12 decision Friday night.

The Hornets, stopped on an early drive, took the lead in the first period on a four-yard pass from Gordon Webb to Dan Kidd. That was set up on a 30-yard screen to Hugh Lister.

It stayed like that until early in the fourth period when Rex scooped up a Hansen fumble and romped 49 yards to score. Hansen replied on a 44-yard dash from Ray Denny to Mark Stanger but Declo came right back with a drive that ended in a touchdown pass from Webb to Max Darrington.

The free touchdowns evaded out seconds later when Cliff Borsh picked up a Declo fumble and raced 53 yards to the Huskies.

Pilots bow to W. R.

HAILLEY — The Wood River Wolverines crammed all their scoring into the second and fourth quarters in defeating the Glenn Ferry Pilots 27-16 Friday afternoon.

Glenn Ferry got its first score on a freak play, one Pilot fumbling the ball away at about the five-yard line and Kevin King scooping it up and going maybe a foot into the end zone. Tom Witcher converted.

Witcher got the second Pilot score on 17-yard sweep and King tacked on the two-point conversion.

Wood River's scoring wasn't made available.

CRASHING Rod Cox of Jerome gets to the football just after it leaves the foot of Filer punter Ron Bean during play Friday. The ball stayed in the end zone where Norm Cochrane fell on it for a Jerome touchdown enroute to a 14-6 win.

Blocking the punt

FILER — A blocked punt, a good march and a goal line stand hoisted the Jerome Tigers to a 14-6 decision over the Filer Wildcats Friday afternoon.

A brisk breeze swept the Filer field all afternoon and played a big part in field position. All three touchdowns came with the wind at the offense's back.

Jerome's heavy defensive unit controlled things most of the time and was particularly effective in turning back Filer's first scoring bid in the third quarter. In that one the Wildcats got a first and goal for the five — and a fourth down at the one-foot line — but Jerome stopped it.

The effect of the wind was immediate as the game opened in punt exchanging and Filer, kicking into the wind, lost ground each time. A needless sportsmanlike penalty on a kicking situation — during the time Filer was punting out to the 40 — set the ball back to the Wildcat 10. On the next kick attempt, Rod Cox broke through to block the punt and Norm Cochrane fell on it in the end zone for the first Jerome touchdown.

Byron Lyon 43 yard run in second quarter gave Jerome another scoring chance but Filer, playing well defensively, turned that back.

Jerome posted the winning points in the third period when Lyon broke a 22-yard run to get Jerome deep into Filer country and minutes later he plunged across from the one. Lyons also added the two-point.

Filer rebounded immediately and drove to the first down at the five when Jerome came up with its goal line stand.

Midway through the final period, a bad snap from center sailed well over the Jerome punter's head and Filer took over at the one-foot line. Three plays later, Bruce Lincoln belted in from the three as Jerome appeared headed for another stand.

That ended scoring although Jerome was at the Filer 12 at game's end.

O'Leary wins

The O'Leary Cubs dropped East Minico 20-4 Thursday to remain undefeated.

Coach Glenn Sheen's Cubs got touchdowns — from Jim Murray, Bryan Irish and Brian Tjarks, the latter on a pass, from Doug Pfeiffer.

It was O'Leary's fourth straight decision.

Carry rips Rockland

ROCKLAND — The Caray Panthers shook off an early 6-0 deficit Friday to swarm past the Rockland Bulldogs 28-6.

Rockland used a 60-yard bomb to post the early advantage and Carry didn't catch until the second period when Jerry Ivie scored on an 11-yard keeper. Ray Barne added the two-point. Minutes later Ivie hooked up with Jim Barton on a four-yard scoring pass and the same combination got the extra points for a 16-6 halftime advantage.

The flea-flicker got Caray's third touchdown, Ivie hitting Barton with a six-yard pass followed by a lateral to Barne. That one covered 60 yards.

Howard Royal's one-yard plunge ended scoring in the final period although Carry died on the three-inch line at game's end.

Hornets top Pirates

OAKLEY — Dave Rodriguez romped 83 yards with the leading kickoff Friday afternoon to point the Oakley Hornets past the Hagerman Pirates 30-8.

Oakley couldn't shake away from the Pirates until late in the half as Hagerman threatened from that opening kickoff slammer to tie the count with a 12-play scoring drive.

Turner capped it from the four and Brown threw to Adams for the two-point. That nullified Oakley's two-point conversion pass from Randy Sharp to Terry Poulton. John Reed's nine-yard drive for minutes from the end of the halftime sent Oakley ahead to stay. The Hornets padded the count after a blocked punt in the third quarter. They covered the 36 yards in five plays, Reed getting in from the one.

Early in the fourth period Oakley went 55 yards in six plays, the payoff coming on Kelly Craton's four-yard burst. Sharp threw to Critchfield and Poulton for two conversion.

Tiger runners win

HAILLEY — The Jerome Tigers posted their first win over Blackfoot when they won the Wood River cross country meet set.

The regular monthly meeting of the Twin Falls Fish and Wildlife Conservation Corporation will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Idaho Power office center.

Blackfoot's Draper, was the individual champion, followed by Mark Tappen of Buhl.

Jerome again won the Jayvee title while the Intermountain Indian schools won the girls division. Individual leader Sue Shny placed Wood River to second.

Cattle rustling jumps in New Mexico

'Superstalk' laden with ears

Corn stalk draws viewers

HARRISBURG, Ill. (UPI) — Most any afternoon in this Southern Illinois town, you can find people hanging around Victor Humm's yard looking at one humdinger of a corn stalk.

It has 21 shoots, about half of which have developed into ears. Most corn plants sprout only one or two shoots.

Humm says the 8-foot plant apparently started from corn kernels his wife shook out of a pair of trousers into the yard shrubbery.

"We noticed it coming up about the middle of June," he says. "We started to cut it down, but my wife said, no — let it grow."

Since then, the plant has grown into quite a conversation piece among the townspeople and agriculture specialists in Saline County.

Robert Edgar, the county agriculture extension adviser, said, "I've seen some plants with five or six of these shoots, but I've never seen one where they had this many. It's rare."

Walter O. Scott, a crop production agronomist at the University of Illinois at Urbana, said the plant has a natural advantage over its brethren planted in rows because it has no competition for light, moisture or nutrients.

But still, he said, "I must confess I haven't heard of one with that many ears."

Humm says he hand-pollinated the plant, from two sweet corn plants, but hasn't done anything else to it.

"I haven't cultivated it, fertilized it or watered it," he said. "I've mostly just looked at it. And a lot of people are stopping by to see it."

Edgar says he plans to show pictures of the plant at a meeting of the 13-county agricultural specialists this week, and he's going to sow some of the plant's seeds on a test plot.

But he isn't expecting anything revolutionary unless "the good man upstairs does an awfully lot."

As for Humm, he says he doesn't know what significance the plant has, "but we're sure had a lot of fun out of it."

Cattle rustling has increased nearly fourfold in New Mexico in recent years, and an official of the New Mexico Livestock Board says part of the reason is higher beef prices.

Fred Owensby, assistant director of the board, said there were at least 200 head of cattle rustled last year. "We have investigated many more cases than that," he said, "but couldn't find any clues and don't know if the animals were actually stolen."

"Over the last two or three years, our known theft cases have increased by 150-200 per cent," Owensby said. "I think part of this is due to the increased price of beef, and certainly here in this part of the country, the animals are susceptible to being stolen."

He said his agency has not found any organized effort behind the increase in cattle rustling and said it was generally the work of one or two individuals.

"Most of the thefts have been butchered out in the field — one or two or three animals at a time," he said. "This is the biggest problem we have and the most difficult to solve."

"They go out on the road and shoot one. Sometimes they clean it there and sometimes they load it and carry it off. Sometimes they are in a hurry and will cut off a hindquarter and leave the rest of the animal."

However, a Clavis man, Dale Owens, 58, was recently injured on a charge of larceny of livestock "in connection" with what Livestock Board Inspector Dale Cooper of Monument called the biggest cattle theft in the state in 15 or 20 years.

Cooper said during the past two years, at least 200 cattle, valued at more than $7,000, had been stolen in the Clavis area. He said the cattle were taken to Amarillo, Texas, by truck and sold.

"Cattle rustling is a statewide problem, Owensby said, with "Most of our problems in the metropolitan areas." He listed Albuquerque and Alamosa as particular spots.

"We've been unable to hire extra people to fight this thing because of our budget," Owensby said. "We have been doing night patrols and asking ranchers to help at least by providing information."

He also said his agency receives help from state and local police, mounted patrols and the State Game and Fish Department.

Owensby said New Mexico was fortunate in one respect in that it has effective branding laws. He said states with such laws have lower theft rates than states without the laws.

However, he said, "we're certainly experiencing more theft in recent years even with controls than we've ever had before."

What to build when a pole barn would be too expensive.

Our Cuckler all-steel buildings come in six sizes — up to 70 feet wide, and as long as you want to go. Inside, there's extra headroom, because the right open-web steel framing used in a Cuckler does away with low-hanging chords. The steel walls are vertical — not slanted, not curved. So the floor space is 100% usable, and you can put doors, windows, and shelves anywhere. And, yes — because of pre-engineering and mass production — a Cuckler often does cost less than a pole barn.

What's What

L. M. Boyd

Throughout those age brackets—from 14 to 64—there are higher percentages of single men than single women. Our Love and War man again points this out for the benefit of those unattached ladies who complain about a shortage of eligible gentlemen. It is the single men who should do the complaining, he says. If they are to equalize their chances in finding matrimonial mates, clearly they must also look for females under age 14 and over age 64.

IF YOU SPEND exactly eight hours 30 minutes each week going to and from your job, sir, you're average.

THE MEN of science haven't quite pinned down why chain smokers have far more family fights than non-smokers, but they're working on it.

BIRD
Q. "What's the difference between a partridge, a ruffed grouse, a bobwhite and a quail?"
A. Geography. What's a partridge in England is a ruffed grouse in New York, a bobwhite in the South, and a quail in the Mid West.

ARGUMENT continues over how Burbank, Calif., got its name. Thought we settled that, the No. 1 was not so called in honor of Luther Burbank, the plant genius. He operated in Northern California's Santa Rosa. The Los Angeles enclave called Burbank was named for a New Hampshire dentist, David Burbank. He owned a lot of land thereabouts 100 years ago.

MOST RECENT SURVEYS indicate every third woman tints her hair.

FISH
Am asked to name the fighting fish ounce for ounce. In the salt water, I imagine that would be the bonefish. In the fresh water, it would be that riverascal known as the steelhead. Realize said overgrown rainbow trout goes to the ocean. But it's in the coastal streams when it's caught, mostly.

A PACKAGER of convenience foods says his firm won't even bother to put out pre-prepared grub unless it can cut household kitchen time by at least a quarter. Average convenience food dinner for a couple plus two offspring requires 32 minutes to fix. Same meal put together from scratch takes 119 minutes. Or so a federally sponsored study shows.

A LARGE mid-western department store chain not too far back found out that a certain line of fancy handkerchiefs sold a whole lot faster when priced at $1.77 than when priced at $1.69. Why remains a mystery. But executives with that outfit insist some price increases spark sales.

Bahamas offer cruise 'color'

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Bahamas islands provide a glimpse of a slower and more peaceful culture which eludes most Americans in their bustling daily rounds.

Nassau, capital and principal city of this independent island chain, as the last island stop on the Times-News Caribbean cruise scheduled for Jan. 24, 1975. It provided the most atmosphere and Old World charm of any of the three stops on our previous tour last month.

Back on the Caribbean islands naturally has its own distinctive flavor, but perhaps because it was the last stop and I knew the "dream" cruise was ending, or because the bus driver was more perceptive, it seems easier to recreate mental images of that charming place.

The Bahamas stop is the last of the seven-day cruise which leaves Twin Falls Jan. 24. Earlier in the week tour members will visit San Juan, Puerto Rico, and St. Thomas in the US Virgin Islands.

Ken Beebe, Twin Falls manager of Harmon Travel who is arranging the tour, reports openings in the Times-News cruise are filling fast. More than half the number of persons who can be accommodated already have signed for the trip and anyone interested should contact him this week.

Participants will stay overnight Jan. 24 in the Holiday Inn in Miami and have a sightseeing tour of that city Saturday morning before embarking on the SS Mardi Gras that afternoon, Jan. 25.

One thing which makes the Bahamas stop memorable is the market place activity with dozens of women sitting on the sidewalks, and even along the dock itself, weaving baskets of all description.

The youngsters seem to serve as sales representatives for the family wares and they would put some US dollars in someone in their order to make a sale.

If one even hesitates about showing her walking pace to give an order, she is harassed, shopping bags or straw hats she is immediately approached by determined young salesmen. Some of them insist on English for their mothers, and it's a good place to practice the age-old art of bargaining. You can always bring them down from the original price asked.

With so many tourist items anywhere in the US being made in Japan, and I also suspect much of what's available on some of the other Caribbean islands, these straw products have to be authentically handmade for one can watch the women work.

Nassau, on the northeast coast of New Providence Island, also was once a haven for buccaneers, but now has next to no crime, our limousine driver told us. In fact, the structure originally intended for the island jail never was used and has now been turned over to the local Boy Scouts.

No guns are allowed on the island and tourists will have them confiscated if they attempt to bring them ashore, the said. Our fellow tourists in the car were amazed to learn that stiff fines of several hundred dollars are assessed anyone heard using vile language.

"No one ever would rob a bank here," the driver commented, "where would he go?"

He took us to Fort Charlotte on the western entrance to the harbor. It was named for the wife of George III back in 1787. We also got to see the government headquarters where the late Duke of Windsor presided as governor of the islands over his abdication as king in 1936.

Education, including college or vocational training, is free in the Bahamas, the driver said, and he drew forth exclamations from his passengers with his description of medical services — 30 cents for a visit to the hospital or dentist, he said.

"Two women in the back seat of the car were grumbling that he did not show us the "rich" homes," and whether the driver heard them or not I don't know, but later, after we had inspected the water tower — the island's highest point — and were on route back to the waterfront market, he told us "I could have shown you the well-to-do residential sections but I wanted you to see how the average Bahamian lives."

The Bahamas, which begin about 60 miles east of Palm Beach, Fla., and contain some 700 islands, have become extremely popular for resort seekers because of their proximity to Florida.

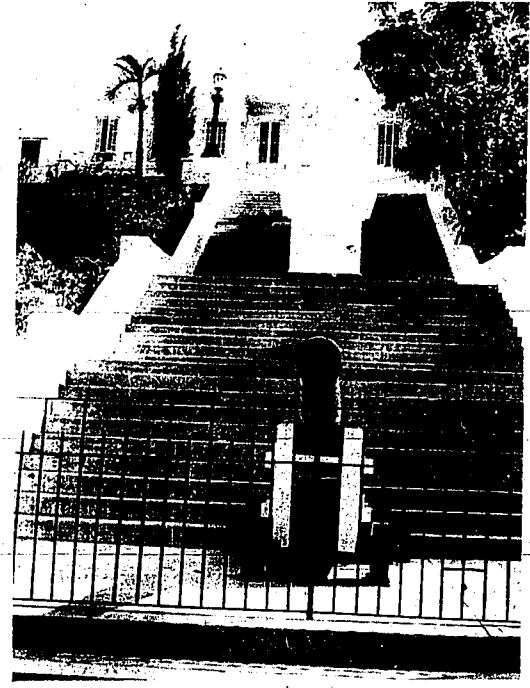

They claim the distinction of being the first discovery made by Columbus in the New World when he landed on San Salvador in 1492. The islands, only about two dozen of which are inhabited, were long ruled by Britain, with the Spanish capturing them briefly in 1781. But the Treaty of Versailles returned them to England the next year, and only last year, July 1962 — 1961 — the islands became an independent nation, but British customs remain, such as driving on the left side of the street which is slightly different to neophyte travelers.

Another reason visitors remember the quaint charm of Nassau is the horse-drawn strollers, straight out of "Oklahoma," which provide a slower, but more romantic mode of transportation around the city.

There are shops of all kinds both inside and open air, enough to make any woman want to return to the market place with more time to spend. We found a delightful small courtyard, complete with spraying fountain and large pool, just off one of the streets.

And a final memory reminiscent of a Dickens novel — as we docked in Nassau Mardi Gras passengers tossed coins into the water and native children, mostly in their hardy suits, dove expertly to retrieve them.

The Duke presided here

MONTE CARLO
"170.1"

MAZDA RX-4
"170"

Like the Mazda of today.

Smaller cars are here to stay. But that doesn't mean you have to give up the comfort of a larger car.

Consider the Mazda RX-4. The two-door hardtop gives you about as much headroom and legroom as a Monte Carlo. Yet it's 41 inches shorter. And the RX-4 doesn't just give you the comfort of a larger car. It also gives you the performance of one.

Mazda's rotary engine delivers power and smoothness on a par with many larger engines. With the fuel economy and efficiency you'd expect from a small car. All in all, the difference between the Mazda RX-4 and most large cars is the difference between room for comfort. And room for improvement.

Mazda's rotary engine is about 2/3 the size of a typical six-cylinder engine.

Help shape Idaho's future

These are the rules for a modified version of the Idaho Tomorrow Game designed for play at home or the classroom by imaginative adults and teenagers.

The point of the game is to let every player help mold Idaho's future in the direction he desires.

This game is unlike any other game you have played. For one thing, any of these rules can be changed at any time by a vote of three-fourths of the players. If you can get enough support from your fellow players you can change the game into anything from "Christians and Lions" to "Mafia."

THE PLAYERS: To begin there are four players-but this number can be enlarged. You need at least four. The starting four are a Farmer, a Businessman, a Retired Person and a School Teacher. When a player chooses his role, say that of a farmer, he must begin to think like a farmer. His goals must be those of a farmer. The same thing applies to the other roles.

RESOURCES: Each player has certain resources at his disposal. Each has twenty dollars and each has 15 votes. He can use these either to support a particular goal or to oppose it. In addition each player has his most important resource, his ability to persuade others to help.

Also each player has the right to change his mind. Once he has used dollars or votes to support or oppose a particular cause, he can withdraw support and get his money and votes back. This is helpful in negotiations, particularly in a game where you can't count on anything. And as we shall see later, there is the ultimate weapon, shudder, the "Black Ball."

GOALS: To start with — until somebody tinkers with the rules — there are five possible goals for Idaho's future. Some of these are supportive of other goals, and some are in opposition to the others.

The five goals are: 1) clean environment, 2) population growth, 3) maximum income, 4) stop population growth and 5) increase food production. You can always add or subtract goals if you can get a three-fourths vote of the players.

Valley Comment: Idaho's future

Question: Should energy development or preservation of the environment be stressed in planning Idaho's future?

Ronda Robertson, Twin Falls: "As far as the power plant is concerned, I think they know what they are doing. The people who are complaining now about it are the first ones who are going to be complaining when we don't have enough electricity.

"In general they should compromise (between energy and the environment) if they can."

Tom Baird, Twin Falls: "I think preservation of the environment. The environment in Idaho is a big resource and it's one of the few places left that there is this amount of environment... it's just a resource we have to protect."

Ted Nasmann, Twin Falls: "I'm afraid we're going to have to have more productivity. I'd rather stress the environment and keep more people out of Idaho. Just the way the population is increasing in the state — we're going to have to meet the needs of those other people. I think we're foolish to think we'll be able to do with what we have now."

Kathy Noh, Kimberly: "I think we've got to find a workable balance. It's not an either-or proposition. We can have a clean environment and a productive economy without serious conflicts by planning and utilizing available technology."

Randy Hall, Shoshone: "P r e s e r v e the environment, definitely.

"If we don't — if it keeps going on like it is, keeps getting industrialized — it might ruin the United States. As today's government stands we don't have much choice as to what happens really."

John Vasafitis, Twin Falls: "Both. Both of them are important and our consideration should be given to each. We should have more atomic power instead of building more dams. They're doing so well without any accidents. They're safe. I don't know about the expense — maybe they're too expensive."

Mills Newberry, South Windsor, Conn.: "We're fairly familiar with northern Idaho. Certainly up in that section there should be great effort to preserve that beauty."

"The space you have out here and the lack of population is startling but a relief."

Mrs. Ross G. Ward, Twin Falls: "I wonder if we couldn't have a little of both. I think we need to save our environment — fine. But I do think that Idaho... needs... to... expand manufacturing — something to keep our young people in the state. I've educated three kids through college and they've all left Idaho."

Geraniums wait out winter in cellar

By GEORGE ABRAHAM
WINTER CARE OF GERANIUMS: Thousands of gardeners keep their geraniums over from year to year. No reason why you can't start geraniums, if they are free of disease.

One serious disease we've had many questions about is bacterial blight of geraniums. Actually, this is just about the most serious disease affecting geraniums in porch boxes or beds. Plants with this disease should not be used again for next year's show.

Here's what bacterial blight looks like: First, leaves infected show small, water-soaked spots on the underside which become sunken and brown. Later the leaf will wilt and die.

The bacteria spreads throughout the water-conducting system, causing death from a stem rot phase. In this phase, the stems are black in color. If you take cuttings from infected plants it's unlikely that the cuttings will rot, instead of root.

Symptoms resemble those of another disease called "rythium black leg."

Green Thumb

If your geranium plants are nice and green and show no sign of disease, you can take cuttings from them and root new plants.

If you root them in clay or plastic pots, better treat them with household bleach first, using a 10 per cent solution, which is one part bleach to nine parts water. Dip your knife into this solution.

Also treat your flats and all tools with this bleach for 10 to 30 minutes.

Always grow cuttings in a sterilized rooting medium such as perlite, vermiculite or washed sand. Discard unhealthy plants with leafspots, abnormal leaves, dieback or any leaf yellowing.

Commercial growers take cuttings by breaking or snapping them off, or by cutting with a blade sterilized by dipping in 70 per cent alcohol and exposing to a flame between stock plants.

The flats use no liquid cutting dips. Also, do not crowd your cuttings together. They need good air circulation. Cuttings can be three or four inches tall, and if you want to use a rooting hormone powder, this may be helpful.

GREAT HOMEMADE HORSE RADISH: A reader writes: "To prevent stinging eyes, nose and throat, I wear glasses and clip a Terry towel cross my face under them. Use your blender."

"Peel the roots, rinse, cut into small cubes, put one cup chopped root, one-half cup elder vinegar in blender. Cover, run on high until horseradish is creamy.

Press through sieve, put horseradish in covered container, repeat operation strained juice and fresh cubes, adding vinegar as needed, until all is blended. Do not use more vinegar than necessary.

Mix the mixture, spoon into small plastic or glass containers, cover and freeze immediately. Horseradish will keep in a freezer indefinitely."

POINSETTIA CARE: If you want your poinsettia to flower for Christmas keep in mind that "flowers" begin to form when days are a definite length, or when the nights reach a definite length.

In other words, the poinsettia is a short-day, or long-night plant. The plant needs complete darkness between 5 p.m. and 8 a.m. daily from October 1 to about early December.

If the plant is exposed to any kind of light (street, flash, or even a bedroom light) during the dark hours, flowering will be delayed. Best way to provide the darkness is to cover the plant with a black plastic sheet, or put in a dark closet, or cover the plant with an opaque box.

Best night temperature during this treatment is around 60 to 62 degrees F. with day temperatures 10 to 14 degrees warmer. If your plant is tall now, I'd cut it back at least half or you'll have a giant for Christmas.

Start new plants by taking the tip cuttings (3 or 4 inches long) and rooting them in a pot of washed sand, perlite or vermiculite.

STORING GREEN TOMATOES: Some gardeners keep their green tomatoes so they are usable right up to Christmas.

Here's one trick for keeping tomatoes a long time after frost by using a weak solution of household bleach, one teaspoon bleach to one quart of water.

First, wash the green fruit with the bleach solution, then dry with paper towels. The tomatoes are then packed in fresh newspapers, in bushel baskets, and stored in a cool part of the cellar.

Many gardeners like to pull up their tomato vines before frost and hang them upside down in a garage where the green tomatoes gradually turn red. A better trick is to pick the green tomatoes and place them on a wire tray in a cool cellar.

Place a piece of paper over the tray, then put the green fruit on the paper. Do not store tomatoes in a bright, sunny window.

If you pick green tomatoes, best temperatures to store them is about 55 degrees. At this temperature color development will take place slowly and fruit will keep longest.

Keep ripe tomatoes in one container, fruit developing red color in another, and those that are green in a third container.

Ripe tomatoes can be kept in a refrigerator at about 40 degrees for two or three weeks. Store them one layer thick. Sort out the fruit every two or four days, and discard the bad ones.

Handle them carefully, and they'll last longer with the stems off.

Only martyrs can iron kids' Primo beer t-shirts

By ERMA BOMBECK
 I saw an ad in the paper the other day that intrigued me. It said simply, "WANTED: Christian woman to do ironing."
 Is there any other kind who iron?

for hours.
 She ironed sheets, dish towels, socks, belt buckles, underwear, the tongs in tennis shoes, the binding on blankets and even zippers.
 I never saw such a martyr. One day I couldn't believe friends hired a woman to iron after the birth of her fourth child. She still retains her and the kid is 35 years old now.

Some hold theories that the aversion to ironing is genetic. This would seem to be the case as both my sister and I iron only during the months when oysters are in season — off the coast of Thailand.

Our phone conversations run something like this:
 "Joe needs a shirt."
 "You going to iron one?"
 "No, make one."
 "When are you going to iron?" During the next space launch, providing the month starts an "R" in it.
 "I'll take you something world. When you are as behind in your ironing as I am, you'd settle for a woman who worshipped avoidance during a full moon!"

At Wit's End

If someone had told me before I got married that I would stand like a statue for six hours every week in front of a board with three pounds of steam and heat in my right hand and push it back and forth over a PRIMO beer sweatshirt, I would have called off the wedding.
 I once lived next door to a Christian woman who ironed. Every Monday she would put up her ironing board and wheed out one of those baskets of legs and iron each piece as it came. I could have watched her her husband's shirt out of the basket and after painstakingly ironing both sides of the collar and cuffs, she ironed the front and started to iron the back.

 "Are you crazy?" I shouted, ripping the shirt off the board. "Now you've gone too far."
 "What are you talking about?" she asked.
 "Ironing the back of a man's shirt. Are you bucking for canonization?"
 It is just not woman's natural inclination to take to ironing. One of my

Gardening tips

QUESTION BOX

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: W. S. of Twin Falls: "We raised some nice tomatoes and winter squash this year, but do not know how to store them. Last year our onions did not keep well, and we wonder what can be done to keep them longer during the winter."

One reason why onions do not keep well — they are harvested before they get a chance to mature. Onions are mature when the tops fall over.

After pulling them from the soil, they should be left in the sun for 7 to 10 days for drying and curing.

After cutting tops off (leave one inch of stem on the bulb) and place on a slatted crate or in coarse mesh bags, and store at around 40 degrees for a couple of weeks. Some people put a fan on them to hasten drying.

Green Thumb

This year many growers tell us their "hamburg" onions have brown insides, and part of the onion is "slippery." Bacterial soft rot is a common cause of slipperiness, and right now there's not much you can do about it.

Next year delay harvest until the tops are completely died down. Also, apply several sprays of Maneb during the latter half of the growing season.

Winter squash and pumpkins should be picked before a heavy frost. The secret of long storage with these vegetables is to cut the stem from the vine, since squash or pumpkins without a stem will not store well.

They should be harvested after they have developed the right color for the variety, and a hard rind. Storage should be in a dry place at room temperature.

C.G. of Shoshone: "Please tell us how to store herbs. We raised a lot of them this year."

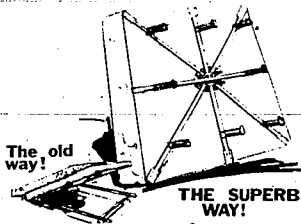

Dried herbs can be tied in bunches by their stems and placed in brown paper bags to separate the varieties. After five or six weeks of storing, they will be crisp dry and ready for processing.

Simply remove the leaves by rolling the bags in your hands and lightly squeezing them. When all the leaves have fallen to the bottom of the bag, remove by taking a few little bits of stems and foreign matter as you can.

Store the cleaned leaves in air-tight containers. The woody stems left over can be saved to be tied into bundles to be used later as fragrant kindling in the fireplace.

Indoor drying of herbs can be done in an attic, or garage, away from direct sunlight.

Special displays mark National 4-H Club week

Places poster

BUILDERS CLUB president Scott Fehrenbacher places special 4-H Club poster in the window of a local business to remind Twin Falls residents that this is National 4-H Club week.

TWIN FALLS — Over 1100 Twin Falls residents will be marking National 4-H Week beginning Monday. About 900 youngsters between the ages of 9 and 19 in Twin Falls County belong to 4-H clubs under the direction of some 200 club leaders. This week they are out to let the people know what 4-H is all about.

Builders Club, composed of the older 4-H club members, started the celebration early by winning top prize for its Idaho pride display at the seventh annual 4-H Community Pride Conference last weekend in Blackfoot.

The display described the three community projects the Builders Clubs in the county carried out during the past year — sending about 65 children from low-income families to a camp they operated on their own near Ketchum; manning three day camps for about 125 youngsters in Marlaugh, Buhl and Twin Falls, and holding a special banquet for 4-H club leaders in November.

What is 4-H?

Builders Club members describe it enthusiastically as a place to meet people, to get involved in the community, to help people and to have fun. Scott Fehrenbacher, Twin Falls Builders Club president, said that "people don't know much about 4-H" and that "National 4-H Week is a good time to let them know.

For one thing, "4-H is moving out of rural areas and rapidly getting into urban areas," he said.

"High school kids don't even think 4-H for them," member Carolyn Jessor said. "We're trying to let the whole community know what we're about."

To let the community "know what they're about," 4-H Club members are displaying posters throughout the county, and appearing on radio and television talk shows during the coming week.

What they are trying to say is that 4-H is more than county fair displays, livestock and clothing, according to Vicky Tverdy, 4-H program assistant for the Twin Falls County Extension Office.

"We get high off of helping people," explains Builders Club member LuAnn Howard, Buhl.

Ford's pardon of Nixon merciful?

BY REV. LESTER KINSOLVING

WASHINGTON — God was cited four times and his conscience mentioned three on the Sunday morning that President Ford announced his explosively controversial decision to pardon Richard Nixon.

Earlier that morning, the President had attended the 8 a.m. service of Holy Communion (no sermon) at the "Church of the Presidents," St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, just across the park from the White House.

At 11:05 a.m. Ford delivered what is now known in many quarters as "The Sunday Pencil" — the immunity in-advance extended to his predecessor in St. Clemente.

Ford's Episcopal rector, the Reverend William Dolls of Immanuel-On-The-Hill in Alexandria, Virginia was as surprised as almost everyone else in the nation — excepting the person who may well be the new President's number one moral guide.

Phillip Buchen, Ford's life-long friend and now White House Counselor who has been elevated to Cabinet rank, spent Labor Day weekend in top secret legal investigations to determine, at his client's request, any possible precedence for presidential pardon prior to indictment.

In Grand Rapids, Dr. Duncan Littlefield, Buchen's pastor at the Fountain Street (non-denominational) church was quoted by the New York Post in describing Ford as:

"One of the most influential members — one of the leaders in the church's philosophical search for worldwide humanism... he could sit down with any Ph.D. and deal with him on his own level on morality, politics, religion and social concerns."

Other parishioners of this church agree with his impressive assessment of Buchen's philosophical and theological proficiencies.

But Buchen, Buchen, despite these credentials, lamented: "I wish were a better student of the ethics for morality of mercy" when he was asked during a press conference about the morality of Ford's pardoning of Nixon.

Inside Religion

"I don't think an act of mercy can ever be untimely," replied Buchen, when asked about the fact that Ford — only ten days earlier — told the press conference that just such a pardon would be "unwise and untimely." (Earlier, when Ford was a nominee for Vice-President, he told the Senate when asked about such a Nixon pardon: "I don't think the public would stand for it.")

Hence I asked Buchen: "Was the President NOT merciful ten days ago when he said this was untimely? Was the President lacking in mercy when he told the committee that the American people wouldn't stand for it? What caused him to be so suddenly merciful?"

Buchen: "I wish you could come up here and explain the theory of mercy. You can probably do a much better job than I can." He added that he didn't believe that Ford knew he could pardon-in-advance until after his first presidential press conference.

Had this "wish" of Mr. Buchen's been more than apparently rhetorical (as part of the old technique of turning a question back on the questioner), there might well have ensued a discussion of such considerations as:

— Jesus' parable of the servant who was forgiven a great debt — who promptly had thrown into debtor's prison a neighbor who owed him a far smaller amount (St. Matthew, Chapter 18) — plus "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy" — these in the light of repeated and rigid Nixon refusals to consider amnesty regarding the Vietnamese war.

— The Hebrew ideal of justice, which motivated a young woman in Nazareth to rejoin: "He hath put down the mighty from their seat and hath exalted the humble and meek" — this in the light of co-conspirator Nixon on his St. Clemente estate with $850,000 from the treasury during 1975 propped by Ford) — this while Watergate burglars and others are in or scheduled for prison.

— Has Mr. Nixon yet illustrated the almost universal religious virtue of repentance and acknowledgment of guilt? Understood by President Ford did not claim to be extending mercy to a sick man. For only days previously Nixon's son-in-law David Eisenhower brightly announced to the press that his father-in-law is "a great natural resource" who should be "in the Senate."

Children need guidance in seeking gender status

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am worried about my son. He is 3. He takes my undergarments (only the silky ones) and puts them on or just carries them around.

I am unsure of how to treat this problem and am also wondering if this means he has a tendency toward becoming a transvestite. — Mrs S. P.A.

May or may not presage a problem. Youngsters will cross — dress at a young age, but this usually disappears by the age of 5 or soon after that point.

Psychologists might tell you that some of these children are "seeking their gender status." Babies aren't born with an automatic knowledge of where they fit into society, you know.

But what to do about it? He's only 3, and I would suggest first try to keep such clothing out of his reach. Prevent temptation. He may — indeed, catch the hint — and understand that such things aren't for boys.

A mother's attitude can have a subtle effect. Some mothers think it is "cute" which amounts to both sanction and encouragement. So be sure you don't do that. At the same time, make it a point to emphasize his masculinity. ("You're getting to be a big boy now," or praise for other things he does.)

Don't be too permissive in your control over him. If he gets into things he shouldn't (including your "silkyies") tell him they are not for him to play with.

Your husband can play a quiet, but important role, too, by emphasizing masculinity. It should be natural, though.

If your son's present trend continues, however, get help from a child guidance counselor or a child psychiatrist. Transvestism can lead to transsexualism in which a child denies his gender. (That does not mean homosexuality, however.)

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Parents who have experienced the shock of SIDS (sudden infant death syndrome) can write to the following address and find a chapter in their area to help them:

National Foundation for Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, 1501 Broadway, New York, N.Y. — B.M., an R.N.

Losing an infant that way is a cruel experience — parents commonly are tortured with the idea that they must have been in some way responsible. Comments by friends and relatives too often unintentionally add to the misery.

Contact with this foundation and others who can provide the facts can relieve such parents of this misery.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I've been reading about dog combinations recently in order to fully utilize, digest and assimilate food. I mean, like protein-acid combinations. This doesn't seem to me a very natural way to eat, and a lot of trouble to stop and think which food combination you are eating. I would think nature would take care of that when it filters out waste from the nutrition part of food. — M.C.

Larger dogs capture popularity

Question: We own two Irish Setters. Setters have always been "our breed" of dogs.

When we started with them there were very few. No there seem to be more and more and we are curious to know if it's just our impression or are they becoming more popular? Do you have any figures on this or know where we can get this information?

Answer: Big dogs are the "in" breeds this year. The American Kennel Club's 1973 registrations show a steady rise in the Irish Setters' popularity; in 1967 the Irish Setter was 26th in the popularity polls with 3,412 registrations. By 1968 it was in 14th place at 12,667 dogs registered. Today, the breed is in third place with 54,211.

The poodle is still America's favorite, as it has been since 1960. There are 193,400 poodle registrations. The German Shepherd is holding its own in second with 90,807. The beagle and dachshund were both dropped a notch (to 4th and 5th places) by the Irish Setter.

There's a trend emerging. In the last ten years larger dogs have replaced smaller ones in four out of five cases. The Irish Setter, St. Bernard, Labrador Retriever are now on the top 10 list, while the Chihuahua, Pekingese, Pomeranian, Beagle, Dachshund 5. Dachshund, Chihuahua 6. Miniature Schnauzer, Pekingese 7. St. Bernard, Collie 8. Doberman Pinscher, Cocker Spaniel 9. Labrador Retriever, Pomeranian 10. Cocker Spaniel, Boston Terrier and Boston Terrier have been dropped. The lonely, only small dog to gain the list is the Miniature Schnauzer. The "only" big dog to drop is the Collie — with a fall from ninth to eleventh.

For the second straight year, overall registration figures were lower. Considering the price of dog food for a St. Bernard may be that's understandable. At any rate, here's how they stand now:

1. Poodle, Poodle
2. German Shepherd, German Shepherd
3. Irish Setter, Beagle

Your thinking is entirely sound; it is a mistake to attach such importance to goofy theories that we must — or must not — eat certain combinations of food to absorb them. Nature does take care of that.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 13 and started my periods three months ago. Would it be harmful if I started using tampons? My mother thinks I am not old enough. — E.B.

No reason why you should not. If you are old enough to have periods you are old enough for this type of protection. Small sizes are available. Tampons are helpful particularly if you are a swimmer or in athletics.

Question: Is there any way to register a dog if you can't get the "papers" from the people who sold it? We bought a lovely little Basenji from a private home at a very fair price.

The owners assured us they'd send the papers in a week or so. It is now a year later. The dog is ready to breed, these people have moved to another state and we can't get them. We can't answer our letters. Is there anything we can do to register her ourselves?

Answer: I doubt it with all my might. I'm afraid you're caught in a very old, rusty and uncomfortable trap. It won't help this time, but for future reference and other buyers — please, please follow the AKC's (American Kennel Club's) suggestions.

The buyer of a dog supposed to be registered with AKC is entitled to receive a properly completed registration form. If the seller doesn't have the form, the buyer should get full identification of the puppy's date of birth, registered names of the dog's sire, dam, and name of the breeder. The statement should be signed by the seller.

If the seller can't provide one or the other, DON'T buy the dog. And don't ever give money for papers that are due to arrive in a week or so. Invest in confederate paper instead — the value of paper is rising.

To if there's anything you may be able to salvage on this dog, I'd write to the American Kennel Club, Dept. Y, 51 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10010.

Rules for cover game

But as in the real world, these goals require the state to pursue a certain path or combination of paths before the goal can be reached. For example, in order to reach the goal of clean environment, you must do either one of two things: you can limit energy supply or you can clean up power plants. Either would suffice. The choice is up to the players.

And as in the real world, each of these steps has a certain cost. Each requires both money and votes to be taken. Each step costs the same: both 25 dollars and 30 votes. Since no player has so much, he must ally himself with other players.

Here is a list of the goals and the paths available to reach them: (See chart on this page.)

1. CLEAN AIR: You can do one of two things to reach this goal: a) limit energy supply or b) clean power plants. (Either step you choose costs the standard 25 dollars and 30 votes.)

2. POPULATION GROWTH: You must do two things here: a) provide energy growth because people follow factories which follow energy, and b) clean up the power plants, because people move to places with non-polluted environments.

3. INCREASE INCOME: This is easy. In this game you must only provide for energy growth.

4. LIMIT POPULATION GROWTH: This is just the opposite of population growth, so you can do one of two things: a) limit energy supply or b) let the air get dirty.

5. INCREASE FOOD PRODUCTION: This requires two things: a) energy growth to provide power for new irrigation and b) clean power plants, because overly polluted skies can reduce crop yields.

The Black Ball

Now for the ultimate weapon: in rare cases, when a player feels so strongly against something happening, he may attempt to use the "black ball." This is such a dangerous weapon that no single player is entrusted to its use. So two players jointly must decide to use the black ball at the same time before it can be used. Each player may use a black ball only once, and it cannot be taken back once used.

A black ball prevents any single goal from being achieved. Like the Hydrogen Bomb, this is best used as a threat.

How to Play

The game lasts for only one hour. Each player takes turns. On his turn, the player may put money and/or votes toward his goals, which uses up the turn. Alternately, a player may call for an election to change game rules, or use the black ball. Players who use the black ball immediately are jailed, forfeiting their next two turns as punishment. Bargaining may take place at any time as the game progresses.

How to Win

At the outset of the game each player writes down on a piece of paper what his goals will be. At the end of the game each player gets three points for each goal he manages to achieve, and one point is deducted for each goal he fails to achieve.

The point is to shape the state the way it should be from your point of view. To achieve this, the player tries to achieve his goals through voting, purchases, convincing, education, cajoling, threats and use of the black ball. As in the real world, much of the play takes place in secret, where deals are hatched among players who share goals, or where players try to talk, bribe or educate other players from using, shudder, the black ball.

If played well, everyone can be a winner. On the other hand, everybody can lose if the players go berserk. It's up to you.

NAIROBI An inspired young East African anthropologist, Richard Leakey, is building a monument in Nairobi to prehistoric man.

It is also a memorial to the young man's famous father, the late Dr. Louis Leakey, whose discoveries suggest East Africa was the cradle of humanity.

Richard Leakey, 30, is director of the National Museums of Kenya. He is enshrining the name and work of his father in the $720,000 Louis Leakey Memorial Institute for African Prehistory, soon to take shape in Nairobi as an international center for anthropological study and research.

The institute will be a final graveyard of prehistoric man. It is to be the repository of a huge, unique and ever-growing collection of fossils and artifacts illustrating the emergence of man millions of years ago from his ancestors, the southern apes, up the long and still not properly understood ladder of evolution.

Dr. Louis Leakey died in London in 1972, his work on East African prehistory unfinished. His discoveries, with his wife, Dr. Mary Leakey, at Olduvai Gorge, Tanzania, shook the scientific world in the 1950s and 1960s. Among them was the find of the earliest remains of the first maker of stone tools.

Olduvai Gorge is a 25-mile-long canyon, where the Leakeys discovered a layer upon layer of ancient lake shores containing evidence of human occupation, including the "continuous evolution of stone tools" from crude pebble tools to the more sophisticated implements of final stone-age man.

Scientists poured into East Africa, new sites were opened up and fascinating new discoveries were made. Louis Leakey's big nucleus collection of priceless fossils and artifacts was housed in the Kenya National Museum. The collection grew rapidly as new specimens came in.

Louis Leakey set up a Center for Prehistory and Paleontology in 1962 at the museum to meet the fossil crisis. As more scientists came to Kenya to examine material, as new expeditions were organized, the modest facilities of the center were extended and the crisis of paleontological plenty hit the museum.

One vast and increasing source of prehistoric material of enormous value to science is the annual expedition, headed by Richard Leakey himself, to remote Lake Rudolph in Kenya, where important new evidence of man's origins is being discovered in new fossil sites.

After discussions with leading scientists in America, Britain, France, Germany, Spain, Holland, Canada and South Africa, Richard Leakey committed himself to build the Louis Leakey Institute for Prehistory. He has the full support of the Kenya Government.

Monument built for prehistoric man

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — When Allen Delay buys a hand-saw at the hardware store he doesn't buy it because he wants to build a house. He plays it.

"I buy it for tone, too," said the 59-year-old photographer, who first heard a carpenter play the tool in Topeka, Kan., when he was a boy. "The saw carried him through the depression, a seven-serve sergeant band that toured Alaska in World War II, and most recently a two-night stand with the Oregon Symphony Orchestra playing the Khachaturian Piano Concerto, a 19th-century Russian folk ballad.

When he was 16, Delay said he found a saw hanging in the maintenance room of a Portland bank, and remembering the enchanting tunes played by "the Topeka carpenter, began to experiment during lunch hours. He asked to take the saw home on weekends and was soon playing along with the radio.

A demonstration to the Milwaukee Grange one night as a 17-year-old soon brought more offers to hear his saw. "I played for assemblies, garden clubs," for Job's Daughters," Delay said. "I'd play for a drink or dinner, and in those days that was really ok."

Game spurs talk of Idaho's future

By MARILYN ELLIOTT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — About 20 county commissioners' wives suddenly became realtors, ranchers, storekeepers and divorcees one afternoon last week.

And they candidly told one "bigwig" from Washington D.C., what they thought about his proposal for construction of a dam nearby.

It was all part of a game called "Idaho Futures" developed by University of Idaho political science professor Sydney Duncombe, that is designed to get Idaho residents thinking about the questions facing their state.

Adopting the name, personality and position assigned, participants build a "public hearing" into a free-wheeling discussion.

"Sandra Williams, a local realtor," said the dam would be good for her business. "It's going to be wonderful. We'll have all kinds of people from out of state coming in for the year-round recreation," she said.

"Susan Sinclair, wife of the local newspaper editor," asked the government aide "what is this dam going to do to our environment?"

"We have to leave some of the land or all we're going to have is concrete," complained "Barbara Christensen, a local rancher's" wife.

The "state legislator" of the group, "Grace Donohue, said she would "have to take this under deep consideration," playing her politician's role well.

The group remained largely undecided at the end of the hearing, with only five actually favoring the dam and six opposing it. "We'd have to study and get more facts," they all said.

That's the kind of response that Duncombe would like to see participants carry home when they once again become themselves.

"The thing we're trying to get is discussion," Duncombe said. "We need discussion of the competing alternatives for Idaho."

Duncombe hopes to develop "a more systematic fashion" for distributing the game statewide in order to reach more people.

Related story, page 7

"The people of Idaho should discuss these things," he said. The game "brings out a lot of pros and cons" about issues confronting Idaho's future.

The "things" that Idahoans should discuss include a growth and industrial development, recreational development, agri-business development and preservation of Idaho's rustic, small town existence — several of which are in opposition to each other.

To stimulate these discussions, Duncombe has developed the role-playing game, "Idaho Futures."

First, he designed a mythical county bearing a great physical resemblance to the state of Idaho. Granite County lies in a mountainous area cut through by the White Water River and a small, irrigated river plain.

About 15,000 people live in the county, spread between three towns of varying size.

Duncombe developed over 40 descriptions of individuals living in the county, hitting nearly every lifestyle adopted by Idahoans.

Then he created about four situations facing those residents — construction of a dam, 400 condominiums, a meat packing plant and a vegetable processing plant.

Now he is taking Granite County with him around the state, transforming local residents into Granite County citizens and throwing them into one or all of the situations.

While local residents listened in stunned silence, a woman gave an impassioned argument for construction of the 400 condominium units while acting as lawyer for the construction firm during a recent game, Duncombe said.

She admitted afterward she had even surprised herself because just a few weeks early she had played a large part in the defeat of a similar proposal in her hometown.

"Players" tend to respond pretty much in role," Duncombe said. And by putting themselves in the position of someone they might normally oppose, a whole new look at the problem seems to be impossible.

Duncombe defines his role as that of "Facilitator." He generally styles himself as the moderator for the public hearing and tries to keep the discussion lively and far-reaching.

The commissioners wives were the 28th group in the state to play the game, Duncombe estimates that over 600 people have been involved in the discussion since mid-

April. The women were attending a state conference in Twin Falls with their husbands.

Generally, he has found that "chamber of commerce and service club" type organizations are pro-development, while planning groups or groups composed mainly of women favor "keeping Idaho the way it is."

One woman last week received nods of agreement when she said "We lose our identity as Idaho if we do this. If we go in for metropolitan we will lose our simple way of life."

That is what Duncombe is trying to get the people in Idaho to think about. Right now they are faced with similar situations.

Are clean air and free-flowing streams more important than increased power and increased production?

Should Idaho promote tourism or should it save its beautiful countryside for unharried use by local residents?

Should farm developments take precedence over other interests in the state?

All of these questions and more crop up during the "public hearings" conducted during the playing of the "Idaho Futures" game.

Duncombe said he wasn't seeking answers with the game, just discussions about the questions.

He would like to get the game operating in schools throughout the state. The more people it touches, the more people he has thinking.

"Even after the game is over they're talking," he said.

Q: Do my eyes deceive me or do those photographs of Grace Kelly really show her turning into a chubby? — M.O.C., Chevy Chase, Md.

A: Depends what month the pictures were taken. Princess Grace goes on her own private diet for three months every year. What she does is total drinking about mid-August and she has not had another sip until her birthday on November 12. So she's plumpish in August, and thin in late November.

A: Yes. Trish Van Devere is pretty and talented but not considered all that easy either. She is a strong, independent-minded girl who has led protest marches, taught school and helped found the Free Southern Theater. She co-stars with Scott in her sixth film, "The Savage Is Loose," and admits to occasional marital scraps. Her sense of humor and other attributes seem to help her very happily handle the unpredictable actor.

Q: What caused Billie Jean King to capture people's imagination so? She's just another woman tennis player. — P.R., Dallas, Tex.

A: Billie Jean has a high star-personality factor on the court. She's one of the first women to behave openly and naturally the way male players do. She isn't concerned about femininity nor afraid to blow up or show joy. Spouting out for women's rights and beating Bobby Riggs also helped her strong image. But, it's Billie Jean's humanness that counts most. For instance, when she beat Evonne Goolagong at Forest Hills, Billie Jean acted in a manner unheard of — waving and the court, holding her head, saying "Wow!" and admitting openly she had believed she might not win.

Q: Is writer Henry Miller dead? You know, "Tropic of Cancer," etc. — T.Y., Billings, Mont.

A: The Grand Old Dirty Old Man of U.S. literature lives in California, is 83, and though blind in one eye and deaf in the other, is as sexy as ever. Recently he declared: "Men in general aren't worth the crap they're standing in. I adore women as a whole even though I consider them a separate breed, a separate species. If the women as a whole were run by women it would be a much better place. My five daughters and his marriage don't diminish my hunger or adoration for women."

Thank You . . . Magic Valley

in first nine months of 1974

In the first 9 months of 1974, First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Twin Falls created a growth in assets of $5,054,377.66 and raised reserves to another all-time high of $6,885,761.01.

Obviously there's a reason why so many Magic Valley people place their savings at First Federal. Those who have lived through changing times know what a comfortable feeling it is to have money deposited where they can count on the earnings as sure as the sun rises . . . Where there is no risk, no speculation, no worry. At 5 1/4% on Savings Deposit Passbook accounts and up to 7 1/2% on Savings Deposit Certificates, First Federal paid $3,103,063.14 to savers in the first 9 months of 1974. Once again, the largest ever paid by any local savings institution in Magic Valley.
