today in brief

Key NY bank reduces prime rate

NEW YORK (UPI) — First National City Bank, the second largest in the nation, Friday lowered its prime lending rate to 11 1/2 per cent from 11 3/4 per cent, indicating a slight easing in the tight monetary policy imposed to curb inflation. Earlier this week, several smaller banks moved to the 11 1/2 per cent level, but Citibank is the first major bank to cut its lending rate for business borrowers by one-quarter of a point below the prevailing 11 3/4 per cent mark.

Text supporter quits school post

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — Authorities today awaited the next move by bus-the-book protesters whose bitter crusade against so-called immoral school books forced the resignation of the Kanawha County School Board President Albert Anson Jr. Anson, a supporter of the controversial textbooks which have had this area in turmoil for six weeks, was succeeded by F. Douglas Stump, who has opposed some of the books and favored others.

Black attendance in Boston up

BOSTON (UPI) — Black attendance increased noticeably and all was peaceful in the schools and streets of previously troubled South Boston today under the guard of 450 tough, riot-trained state and metropolitan police. It was the 22nd day of a court ordered plan to integrate Boston's public schools. Eight buses of black children arrived without incident, but with the usual motorcycle police escort, at South Boston High School.

Tina Niarchos, 44, dies in Paris

PARIS (UPI) — Tina Niarchos, 44, blonde wife of Greek shipbuilder Stavros Niarchos and former wife of Aristotle Onassis, died in her Paris apartment Thursday of apparent natural causes, the family announced today. Her death, which shocked international society, marked the second time Niarchos had lost a wife, and both were sisters.

Henry keeps going despite shooting

DAMASCUS (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, unaffected by a shooting accident abroad his plane, discussed the future of Arab-Israeli peace negotiations with Syrian President Hafez Assad Friday in the second stage of his new Middle East tour.

Kissinger's talks with the Syrian President were expected to be the toughest of his seven-day visit to seven countries. Assad has been pressing for an early resumption of the Geneva peace conference, with Soviet participation. In Cairo, American officials said Kissinger was proposing separate American talks with the Arab countries directly involved. Following his meeting with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, both Kissinger and the Egyptians kept quiet on what they discussed. A high American official said Kissinger felt that to disclose details of his talks at this stage could jeopardize his visits to Jordan, Israel, Saudi Arabia, Algeria and Morocco.

Aid move rejected

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House today ignored President Ford's veto threat and rejected a compromise to continue military aid to Turkey until Dec. 15. The move means that Congress may not be able to take its pre-election recess.

After an hour of general debate, the House voted 187 to 171 against the compromise joint resolution formulated originally by Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield and already passed by the Senate.

Engineers hear AF Dam headaches

By DAVID HORSMAN
Times Staff writer
TWIN FALLS — The headaches connected with replacement of the American Falls Dam were reviewed by Ted Diehl, Jerome, Manager of the Northside Canal Co. in a meeting here Thursday.

Addressing the American Society of Agricultural Engineers at its annual conference, Diehl said, "I'm not so sure that, if we can't get some relief or help, that we'll ever get the dam built."

Cost estimates are increasing $1 to $2 million every month, he said. "I would say that our legal bill will run as great as the engineering bill," Diehl added, "It takes a battery of lawyers just to go to a meeting."

And, although Idaho Power Co. has offered to contribute $19.55 million to the replacement effort, the power firm said water users must take care of mitigation and environmental equipment. "The Oct. 1 harvest estimate for soybeans — another major feed grain for cattle — was 19 per cent below the 1973 record of 1.5 billion bushels. Altogether, the Oct. 1 estimate of total U.S. crop production was 7 per cent below last year's record, despite dramatic increases in wheat and rice, which the Agriculture Department said will be more than enough to satisfy foreign and domestic demands."

Paarlberg said 1974 was "a year when we needed a good crop because our reserves are depleted. The farmers went all out to produce a record crop. They overcame every problem except the weather."

He added: "On balance, one must say this is a disappointing report. Paarlberg said the further drop in corn and soybean crop estimates from September's scaled-down predictions means there will be less feed grains for livestock next year and in 1976, with retail prices also rising for the next two years."

He said it would be December before government economists could give a firm prediction how high supermarket prices would rise. Meanwhile, he refused to comment on Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz's forecast of an 8 per cent to 10 per cent rise in overall retail food prices through 1975. Paarlberg said only that meat price increases would be "moderate" rather than "massive." Meat prices began a steady, upward climb in late 1972 and leveled off only recently, as farmers unloaded beef cattle on the market to cut their losses and gutted it with beef in relation to demand. The Labor Department reported, Thursday that wholesale farm prices fell 2.9 per cent in

'Gate jury chosen; trial opens Monday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A 12-member jury was selected today to try five former President Richard M. Nixon's closest aides and associates for their part in covering up the Watergate scandal. The selection of nine women and three men for the historic trial was completed in two hours after U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica had spent 10 days narrowing down the original list of 625 prospective jurors. The jury was selected, lawyers for the prosecution and the five defendants immediately began exercising their six peremptory challenges in the selection of six alternates. The jury could begin hearing the case Monday. The jury consisted of eight blacks and four whites. Attorneys for some of the defendants had charged their clients could not get a fair trial in the District of Columbia; which along with Massachusetts were the only election districts to vote against Nixon's re-election in 1972.

Before swearing in the jury, Sirica solemnly asked one final question. "Before you take the oath as jurors in this case, is there any reason why you cannot sit as jurors, listen to the evidence... and then render a verdict based solely on the evidence presented in open court and the law explained by the court at the close of this case?" he asked.

Congress OK's reform measure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress has passed a far-reaching campaign reform bill and sent it to President Ford. The most revolutionary changes under the measure passed by a 364-24 vote in the House of Representatives Thursday would be in the financing of political campaigns for federal office, especially the 1976 presidential campaign.

Under current practices, candidates raise privately all the money they can and spend all they get. But the campaign reform bill would allow the Democratic and Republican presidential candidates to receive no more than $20 million each and spend no more to get elected — wiping out the traditional GOP advantage of bigger war chests.

Similarly, candidates seeking their party nomination in the primaries could spend no more than $15 million, and $2 million of that must be used solely for fund-raising.

Presidential candidates in the general election may also raise their $20 million from small contributions or taking the $20 million from the Treasury, which is expected to have a $76 million kitty by 1976, made up from the $1 checkoff on income tax returns. There can be no mix.

Up to $3 million in taxpayer funds would also be available for primary candidates. A contender would first have to raise $100,000 with $5,000 from each of 20 states.

Once the first $100,000 is raised, the government would match that and every donation of $250 or less. The federal fund would also provide $2 million to finance the GOP and Democratic national conventions, now primarily funded by advertisements in program books.

A second major change is intended to get the "fat cat" contributor out of the political scene.

Upright guy

BURLEY — Patrolman Gene Sterr is probably standing his embarrassment today. At Burley City Hall about 10 a.m. today, Sterr reached into his back trouser pocket. A .45 caliber automatic pistol he was carrying discharged. The slug passed through Sterr's buttocks and hit the floor.

Other officers present administered first aid until an ambulance arrived and took Sterr to Cassia Memorial Hospital for treatment. Sterr was off duty at the time.

Less corn, soybeans means higher meat prices

September, largely because of lower prices for livestock, grains and oilseeds; but experts said grain crop setbacks could make the decline short-lived.

The Agriculture Department's October estimates indicated a 1974 corn crop of 4.718 billion bushels and a soybean harvest of 1.262 billion bushels, declines previously predicted by private grain traders.

The corn crop estimate was 27 million bushels or 6 per cent below the September forecast. The department estimated soybeans would fall 53 million bushels or 4 per cent below the September target. Repeated early frost damage was blamed in both cases.

Brezhnev says Israel prolongs Mideast crisis, keeping lands

United Press International
Soviet Communist party leader
Leonid I. Brezhnev today renewed Soviet efforts to keep the lands seized in the 1967 war and said prolonging the present situation in the Middle East "means to sit on a powder keg which may explode at any minute."
Brezhnev said Israel had declared it would not withdraw to the 1967 borders and "the Arab states are rightfully indignant at such a state of things."

"Our wide and steady development, friendly relations with Syria, Egypt and Iran, with the leadership of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, is an important factor which operates in favor of elimination of the aftermath of the aggression, in favor of attainment of just peace."
Brezhnev, speaking in Kislingov, capital of the Soviet Republic of Moldavia, said he was convinced a "lasting and just peace" would come about in the Middle East through the framework of the Geneva
Middle-East conference.
But Brezhnev said to prolong the present situation "which is of benefit only to the Israeli occupiers, means to sit on a powder keg which may explode at any minute."
In Cairo, Secretary of State
Henry Kissinger narrowly escaped injury when a submachine gun fell from a rack in his plane and discharged two bullets that wounded a Secret Service agent. Kissinger was 20 feet away and the accident occurred as his plane was getting ready to take off from Cairo to Damascus.
Kissinger conferred twice

Senae gives nod
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Legislation
sponsored by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, approved by the Senate, includes a mandate to return rail passenger service to Idaho next year by Amtrak.
A conference report approved by the Senate
Thursday must be approved by the House before going to the President for signing.
Church, in Idaho at the time the legislation was approved, said the action "is one final step on the road to a return of rail passenger service to our state."
Church wrote the amendment which originally rescued passenger service through Boise linking Salt Lake City and Portland.

Hanson says water threats key issue

BURLEY — Democratic candidate for Congress Max Hanson in Burley for a political race, said inflation, threats to Idaho's water and honesty of elected candidates are the key issues in this year's campaign.
In complaining inflation
Hanson said "we need to cut out unnecessary spending."
However, he cautioned against tight money policies, saying
"tight money will create more unemployment, a recession and perhaps a depression."
Hanson called for a change in interest policies on loans.
He would guard against inflation and tight money at the same time by establishing two types of loans. One would be to other, old and energy sources.

If the loan would go for "non-inflationary" purposes. Loans that might result in more inflation would be charged higher interest.
Hanson said there is still a threat that Idaho's water might be diverted to other western states for the development of oil-shale.
Hanson said "the country could become energy self-sufficient without the development of oil-shale. He said we still have billions of barrels of oil that are untapped and huge reserves of coal."
In an obvious reference to his opponent, Republican George Hansen, he also exhibited a pique of his credit report.
Hanson called for a change in policy it was available for public inspection. Hanson said his tax returns since 1960 are available for review.

JEROME — The new Mini-Cassia Garden Club, Burley, was welcomed as a member of the Magic Valley District of Idaho State Garden Clubs at a district fall meeting Wednesday.

The meeting was at the Chinese Village, Jerome. A Chinese food luncheon was served.

Mrs. Ivan Mink, district director, conducted the meeting. Mrs. Maxine Nelson reported on the state convention in Twin Falls and announced that the 1975 convention will be in Lewiston. The conservation conclave usually conducted at Redfish Lake will meet in Burley in 1975.

The national world gardening project will go to Honduras this club year. Reports of past year programs were given by Twin Falls Garden Club, Jerome-Lain and Petal and Mini-Cassia Club.

The state project is a rose garden on Boise Mall or Capitol Gardens, named in honor of the late Gretchen Smith, Twin Falls.

Club members brought hobbies for a "show and tell." They ranged from framed miniatures of garden flowers to a Christmas tree made from tinned cans and decorated with candles and bottle caps, and a novelty Christmas tree base made of glued Christmas cards covered with tinsel.

The district spring meeting will be in Twin Falls in April 1975, when new officers will be elected.

Luncheon, pinochle scheduled

TWIN FALLS — Tentative plans for a luncheon-pinochle party will be held at the home of the Goodwill Club Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Ronald Scherupp.

The special day will be Nov. 13 and members are to invite guests.

Mrs. Ivan Waring led the Lord's Prayer and Eva Atkinson led the flag salute. Julie Nelson and Trudy Mattice were guests.

Roll call was answered with "Pet Indoor Flower." Eva Atkinson was birthday honoree.

Members were reminded to continue saving soup labels for the Lutheran School. They were also asked to save all used postage stamps for a worthwhile cause.

Members expressed their ideas to make the club more enjoyable.

Mrs. Parrel Nelson and Eva Atkinson gave the thought for the day. Mrs. Charles Mattice won the white elephant. Mrs. Nelson was in charge of the program and prizes went to Lucille Smith, Alberta Knight, Mrs. Mico, Trudy Mattice, Mrs. Scherupp and Nellie Orndorff.

The next meeting will be Oct. 23 at the home of Martha Wildman. Members are to come dressed to depict the name of a song.

Sunshine Initiative explained

TWIN FALLS — Beta Sigma Phi Omicron Chapter met Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Jerry Mason.

Speaker for the evening was JoAnne Foreman local coordinator for the Sunshine Initiative. The Sunshine Initiative, which requires a campaign and lobby disclosure, will be one of three ballot issues on the Nov. 5 election ballot.

Mrs. Foreman said, "The Initiative must receive a majority of the number of votes cast for governor to become law, and any person not voting on the Initiative will be counted as casting a no vote."

She urged everyone voting in the election should also take the time to vote on the Initiative.

"The Sunshine Initiative provides an excellent opportunity for Idaho voters to cast their vote on campaign reforms."

Members of the team were Leroy Lewis, Mike Sobotka and Mark Bright. Jerome and Paul Freeman, Shoshone, won the top individual spots in the contest.

There were 11 schools participating in all with 70 youths involved in the day's activities.

The three study sites for soil were set up on the Dale-Low property northeast of Shoshone where pits had been dug big enough for the boys to crawl into and make the profile study.

Included in the study were surface soil, sub-surface soil, interpretation of soil features, accelerated erosion, topography or lay of the land, land capability classification, application of land use, cropland management practices and rangeland and woodland management practices along with reclamation practice.

Other schools participating were Gooding, Carey, Wendell, Jerome, Castleford, Huhl, Piler, Twin Falls and Kimberly.

Fed involvement draws opinions

The need for more and less federal involvement in local government problems drew comments from Idaho political candidates on the campaign trails Thursday.

Democrat Max Hanson, campaigning in Boise, said more federal financing is needed to offset the spiraling cost of education.

The candidate for Second District congressman said educational costs have more than doubled the past decade while the state's share of federal financial support has remained relatively stable.

Democrat Ray Cox told a Kellogg audience "I would be foolish to weaken air pollution standards as advocated by his Republican opponent."

At the other end of the state, Sen. Frank Church D., Idaho, told a Gooding audience a long overdue tax reform would eliminate any need for the 5 per cent surtax requested by President Ford.

Church said many oil companies pay virtually no federal taxes because of "easy tax concessions." He said a 2 to 3 per cent tax bill would be paid by some companies whose count profits in the 10 billions but the average worker pays 20 percent more.

They will see the need to involve themselves to correct what they see as wrong," he said. "But apathy is a different thing."

Moore, Republican candidate for state public instruction superintendent, said quality education for all students in Idaho should be the highest priority in state government.

At a meeting of the Caldwell Education Association, Moore said the Idaho Constitution requires the Legislature to establish and maintain a general, uniform and thorough system of free public schools.

"This will require increased state funding of education at all levels, insuring that every classroom is staffed by a competent teacher dedicated to the improvement of the student's education program," he said.

In Blackfoot, Republican Vernon Ravescroft told the Bligh County Republicans of the nation's current concern with increased agricultural production that gives Idaho an excellent opportunity to save its water from exportation and its land from federal contamination.

Ravescroft, a candidate for lieutenant governor, said the problem of supplying domestic and foreign market needs and the balance of payments must be solved soon or the nation will be in real trouble.

Democrat John Evans, campaigning in Boise, said Americans must participate in the decision-making process of government at all levels.

Rep. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, said it seems strange that the power in Idaho and public have not made an issue of Frank Church not debating congressional candidate Bob Smith.

Symms said he felt the media and public should demand that Church make an issue of his support for openness in government by debating Smith.

In McCall, Democrat Roy Truly, campaigning for superintendent of public instruction, said that state office should be closer to the people.

The state attorney general said his office is developing expertise in handling anti-trust recovery cases.

Tony Park said the state has recovered nearly $200,000 from trust recovery suits that went to the state, local communities and special funds.

Prison employe faces charge

BOISE (UPI) — An ex-convict working as an accountant at Idaho State Penitentiary has been charged with embezzling more than $4,000 from a prisoner's trust fund.

Robert Laih, 31, Boise, waived preliminary hearing when he appeared before Fourth District Magistrate Alan Schwartzman. He was bound over to district court and released on his own recognizance.

Garland Dreywey, administrator of operations at the prison, said he turned Laih over to the Organized Crime Division of the attorney general's office Wednesday for prosecution.

He said Laih came to his home apparently over a six-month period beginning about July 1, 1973, and knew that the constant audits the penitentiary eventually would turn up his theft.

He said the audit is not yet complete but he suspects the amount taken will total about $4,500.

Prison officials said Laih was paid about $800 per month but still owed $17,000 to a bonding company as a result of his initial theft from a Twin Falls auto company.

Since Feb. 9, 1974, Laih has been employed as an accountant at the prison, Dreywey said.

The administrator said remorse prompted the confession from Laih.

Dreywey said Laih made no attempt to conceal what he had done — apparently over a six-month period beginning about July 1, 1973, and knew that the constant audits the penitentiary eventually would turn up his theft.

Nibbling a bullet no solution over long run

(c) New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — President Ford has defined the economic crisis of the nation and proposed a catalogue of remedies.

It is not certain whether the solutions he proposed are equal to the crisis he defined, and the fear here is that he didn't bite the bullet but nibbled it.

In these abnormal times, and especially a month before the mid-year Congressional elections, he put forward some popular and politically bold proposals but the whole thrust of his speech to the Congress was that the nation was in mortal danger, and he asked that we manfully pledge to each other, not "our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor," but our comfort, our support, and 5 per cent of our gas and oil.

It would be hard to over-emphasize the relief in Washington to find a President stalling, with the utmost sincerity, his belief about what had to be done in the interests of the republic. And for the first time in years, to see a Congress that accepts him at his word, without doubting his motives.

Still, his proposals, honest and sensible as they were, scarcely measure up to the spectacular menace and danger he put before the Congress.

Maybe it was wrong to define the question in military terms, but when he got down to his 10-point program of remedies, he was bold in his own framework as a conservative Republican leader, but scarcely bold in the framework of the world problem he now has to handle.

The inflation-recession problem is moving faster than he thought and the outlook now is that he is going to have to face seven per cent unemployment by mid-summer of 1975, the made concessions, which must seem to him as almost radical, in offering public jobs to the unemployed and other breaks to the poor, but again his estimate is probably far short of the need.

Even most liberal economists agree that we do not need more federal government controls, but we do need much tougher controls over pattern-setting unions and businesses. Apparently, the President is convinced that he should start with appeals to patriotism, and voluntary controls that bark but don't bite. At least he has made a beginning.

This is typical of Gerald Ford. He sees the world crisis and suggests laws to deal with it, but basically he believes that appealing to the American people for voluntary sacrifices at least must be tried before introducing compulsory legislation, and he may be right.

He is still in that transition period between being a partisan leader and a national leader, and the world economic crisis has come down on him before he has had time to figure out the differences.

In his address to the Congress, he has still not caught up with the radical national and world economic problem his advisers in the cabinet are putting before him.

That first you must go to the people — appeal to them, organize them, give them a chance — and only then, if they don't come through, pass laws to compel what the country needs.

Washington admires but doubts that this will meet the national crisis he defined in such dramatic terms, but it likes him and believes in his sincerity, and his caution. At least he nibbled the bullet and this is probably about as much as the country is now prepared to swallow.

Biting the BB

The nation is entering a serious recession. Its productivity and after-inflation personal incomes have fallen. At the same time, inflation and joblessness are rising. Whole sectors of the economy have suffered serious dislocations.

It is time for forceful action to come to terms with serious and potentially disastrous economic problems. We believe the Americans are prepared to "bite the bullet" to restore economic stability.

Instead, President Ford has asked the country to "bite the BB." Moreover, his program is a series of contradictions.

On the one hand he hopes to slow down inflation. On the other hand he would follow policies leading in the opposite direction — restoring full economic output.

The proposed income tax surcharge is a case in point.

On the one hand he hopes to reduce demand for goods and services by reducing the amount of money available for spending by consumers. To do this, he would add a five per cent tax on the income taxes of persons earning more than $15,000 and corporate incomes.

He is right. The surcharge does pull money out of circulation. But what then is to be done with that money? Ford says extra tax revenue generated will be just enough to pay for additional governmental spending in a new program designed to create jobs. He would authorize jobs for local governmental units when the jobless rate nationally goes above six per cent. But in doing so, the President has only brought to the marketplace the money he removed by the surcharge on higher incomes. The tax is cancelled out by the unemployment program.

Perhaps it is socially desirable to tax the wealthy to help the unemployed. Perhaps not. Desirable or not, the redistribution of income would not have the economic effect Ford intends.

There is a further fundamental difficulty in President Ford's economic goals. He is trying to bite the White Horse in two directions at once. He hopes to control inflation and he hopes to spur lagging economic production. We can see no way to do both.

Despite talk about holding prices down, it appears Ford has decided to boost economic production as his highest priority. Almost all of his proposals would tend to boost the economy. They also stimulate inflation.

For example, he proposed an increase in the investment tax credit to 10 per cent, up from its present seven per cent level. Without doubt such a move would make investment in plant and equipment more attractive to businesses. But to invest, firms must obtain credit, placing more demands on the severely limited amount of money available. Increasing demand for money would tend to increase interest rates and further squeeze the homebuying and homebuying businesses.

But Ford wants to help, not hurt, the construction industry. So he proposes to have the federal government guarantee $3 billion of additional mortgages. Surely that will stimulate the homebuilding trades.

But where will that $3 billion come from. Why, from federal borrowing from the same available pool of money. The $3 billion will be taken from the money supply and put back into the money supply.

The net effect, obviously, is to leave the money pool the same size as before.

Here are a few other obvious contradictions in Ford's program:

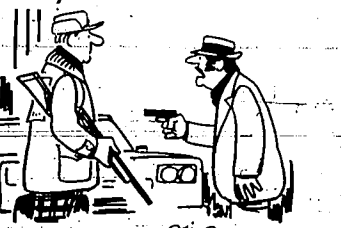

He would cut the size of the federal budget, attempting to set a spending target of $300 billion. But he talks of pumping additional billions into the economy by extending unemployment compensation benefits. Presumably some of those benefits would go to unemployed federal workers.

Eliminate governmental regulation in the area of natural gas prices — permitting the price to rise to stimulate exploration and production of the disappearing fuel. At the same time the government would assume the power to ration, fertilizer, fertilizer rationing, by the way, was seen as a way to increase agricultural production.

President Ford has proposed a confused economic package. Its only virtue is that it goes only a very short distance in so many directions.

The nation needs clearly defined economic goals and then strong action toward those goals. We have seen neither.

WASHINGTON — Poverty has never been so richly displayed as it is in this fall among campaigning politicians. This is why I didn't recognize Senator Survine on Pennsylvania Avenue the other day.

Instead of his usual Savile Row worsted, Liberty silk cravat, hand-tooled Venetian sandals and cashmere cummerbund, he was wearing a black workshirt open at the neck, shiny hand-me-down blue serge suit from the Salvation Army and burlap wrappings around the feet.

I was attracted by the large crowd of widows and orphans clustered around and when I saw it was Senator Survine I asked if he had taken a bath in the stock market.

"A press bouncing?"

"It's replaced the press conference. You call the reporters together and let them watch while you bounce a fat cat out of your office. Come along, I'll show you."

We went to the scene of the press bouncing and conferred with the fat cat, whose name was Burgess.

"He's one of the sweetest old fat cats you ever saw," Survine said. "Dial the telephone and he'll come up with a hundred thousand before the TV boys can capture your old time."

"Doesn't he resent being bounced around by you campaigners, now that you don't need his money any more?"

"Nonsense, my boy. It was his idea."

"It seemed so ordinary for Burgess, I said. What was the point of being a fat cat if he didn't establish due bills with politicians?"

"The fat cat is a has-been in this election," Survine explained. "The big man this year is the bounced cat. A man who lets you have him on his knees at a press-bouncing-going to have a lot of doors opening to him after the election."

Survine headed for a television interview at which he intended to disclose financial records showing that he was overdrawn at the bank and hadn't eaten for three days.

Congressional skepticism anticipated by Ford

(c) Chicago Daily News

WASHINGTON — President Ford's call for discipline and sacrifice to fight inflation has been met in Congress with the skepticism he anticipated.

Most of the legislators, fearful of the political consequences of the deadly mixture of rising prices and a recession, were stirred by the language and tone of his speech before a joint session of the House and Senate.

But many were neither impressed nor encouraged by the specific proposals he recommended, although they reflected their own uncertainty and confusion about how to deal with a stagnant economic situation.

In the matter of football each exhorting at halftime, the President called for a "massive mobilization" of all Americans as "inflation fighters and energy savers," and his earnest rhetoric brought the members to their feet in a patriotic display of togetherness. But when they had parsed Ford's proposed five per cent surtax on individual incomes over $7,500 for a single person and $15,000 for a family, they seemed more concerned about resistance from middle-income workers who comprise the bulk of their constituencies.

PETER LISAGOR

In the Grab-bag of measures recommended by the President, the surtax, coupled with a proposed increase in the investment tax credit from 7 to 10 per cent, supplied the main target for Democrats, who generally branded them as an unequal spreading of the anti-inflation burden.

Republicans voiced apprehensions that a tax increase on middle-income families would be a hard sell for them, especially in view of their already murky political prospects in next month's congressional elections.

Democrats were quick to point out that the five per cent surtax on corporate earnings would be offset by proposals now pending which would grant corporations capital gains benefits.

Members of both parties were critical of Ford's failure to propose mandatory measures to deal with energy consumption, agreeing that oil prices were a critical factor in the inflation push.

But the President apparently believes that Americans are prepared to exercise "voluntary restraint and self-discipline" in the campaign against inflation. In a passage directed at his television audience, he urged the people to "grow more, waste less... drive less, heat less."

He used a five per cent yardstick, declaring that if motorists drive five per cent fewer miles, 220,000 barrels of foreign oil could be saved each day. With car pools, bus-riding, biking and walking, he said that the goal of conserving one million barrels a day could be met.

The speech revived the debate here over the value of voluntarism in meeting national problems, with a majority of the legislators appearing to believe that only tough, mandatory requirements can achieve the desired reductions in gasoline consumption.

He left in dispute whether his proposals were tough enough and precise enough to cope with the racing fires of inflation. The politics of his speech also drew in contention, with almost everyone agreeing on his diagnosis of the gravity of the situation but with widespread disagreement on his prescription for dealing with it.

Try some bargaining

One is greatly moved by the Cuban Americans who are coming, and are heart sick at the prospect of it.

"They have much to learn from Yugoslav Americans, Polish Americans, and Czechoslovak Americans whose gestures are related to an annual parade, and who are not even conspicuous in the ranks of those who demand a policy of firmness towards the Soviet Union."

It is almost certain now that it is only a matter of time before relations between the United States and Cuba are "normalized." Normalized is here defined as we will desist from doing anything at all that is inconvenient to Cuba, and Cuba will continue to do exactly as Cuba desires with respect to us, and other countries in the hemisphere.

To be sure, she may promise to stop "exporting" her revolution.

It is true that the Communists are influenced by reality, and the stock of Cuban Communism is riding pretty low. In Latin America, after 45 years of Cuban Communism, sugar is rationed. It reminds one of the hard observation about what would happen if the Communists took over the Sahara Desert. Answer: Nothing — for 50 years. Then there would be a shortage of sand.

There is a shortage of everything in Cuba except bombs. Particularly there is a shortage of human freedom. The emigration from Cuba matches that from any country in the history of the century. And it is these men and women, who were promised by President Kennedy in Miami in 1962 that one day their country would be free again, who feel now the needle of the diplomatic pincette that will officially shatter their dreams.

But one does wonder, whether there is anyone in the Ford administration working on a quid pro quo "for instance."

There are thousands of Cubans who are now United States citizens, who would like to visit their relatives in Cuba. These are Americans by law. But in many cases, the Cuban government, has said that it does not recognize their foreign citizenship, that they are guilty of crimes against Cuba, and subject to arrest if they come to Cuba.

Here, surely, the United States, should be unbending. If we have relations with Cuba of a normal kind, we cannot expect that Cuba would entertain fresh revolutionary intrigues going over there with the dark purpose of introducing a little freedom into Cuba. But we should insist on de jure recognition of the fact of U.S. citizenship if granted to a former Cuban national.

WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY, JR.

2. The investments in Cuba of American individuals and American companies are substantially lost, written off. But a gesture is in order. Such a gesture might be devised from a special sugar price, calculated to return to these companies at least a part of the value of their confiscated investments.

3. There is no reason, at a moment when we are withholding "most favored nation" privileges from the Soviet Union because of its restrictions in migration, to fail to insist on symmetrical concessions by Castro, Cuba.

Whether we win our point or not, surely a dramatization of it at the bargaining table will on the one hand put pressure on Castro, and on the other, bring a sense of purpose, and relief, to the Cuban Americans whose interests we have so neglectfully watched over during our retreat from the Monroe Doctrine.

When he left the hospital, the surgeon advised a low-protein diet. I read that a high-protein diet is best. It confused me and I asked our family M.D. who used a moderate protein diet. What should I do? — L.G.F.

The esophageal varices are varicose veins at the lower end of the gullet, a result of the liver has a great deal to do with protein (nitrogen) metabolism, and when the liver is not functioning, this metabolism is disturbed, naturally. At the time of your husband's operation, his liver obviously was in very poor condition this coma resulted from acute failure of liver function, so treatment after such an operation calls for a low-protein diet. Which the surgeon ordered. As the patient recovers (as luckily your husband did) liver function improves, and more protein can be added to the diet since the liver can handle more of it. A high-protein diet is not recommended for cirrhosis; a moderate intake is. In general, an average diet with a vitamin supplement is tolerated. So you were properly advised by both doctors. The two-year interim, you see, makes a difference. Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there any kind of surgery for thick ankles? Mine are nine-inches and it's all bone but the rest of my legs are pretty good. I am so embarrassed and have had a terrible complex all my life. My sister-in-law keeps urging me to go to a good plastic surgeon, but I am embarrassed to go, feel he'd think I was crazy. I know when I look around I should be ashamed, and just be thankful I can walk. — Mrs. J.L.

in-law keeps begging you, and if you can afford the fee, let her pick out the "good plastic surgeon" and ask his opinion. At least it will settle the arguments. Dear Dr. Thosteson: My mother, who is 75, had a stroke eight months ago resulting in paralysis of the right arm and leg. She has regained partial use of the leg but none in the arm. I have heard that a blood thinner has produced good results. Could it be helpful in her case? Could it be harmful? — B.W.

Volunteers for inflation war

By NORMAN KEMPSTER
(c) Washington Star-News
WASHINGTON — President Ford has decided the war on inflation will be fought, by and large, by an all-volunteer army. Although his aides choose to stress the political unpopularity of the President's proposal for an election-year tax increase, there is little else that is either tough or compulsory in Ford's long-awaited economic program. In a 45-minute address to a joint session of Congress Tuesday, Ford appealed to the public's patriotism and self-restraint. In effect, he urged 213 million Americans to clean their dinner plates, eat a few more leftovers and drive their cars a little less. "If we all drive at least 5 percent fewer miles each week — almost unbelievably — 250,000 to 300,000 barrels of foreign oil per day," Ford said. "By the end of 1975, most of us can do much better than 1 percent by car-pooling, taking the bus, riding bikes or just plain walking."

public to "heat less," although he proposed no goals for reduction in the use of heating oil, natural gas and other fuels. Analysis But Ford did not suggest any sort of incentive to cause people to be more thrifty, nor did he propose any sort of penalty for the profligate. Federal Energy Administrator John C. Sawhill had urged Ford to put some teeth in his appeal by proposing a stiff increase in gasoline taxes and by restricting the distribution of heating oil enough to force a lower setting for home thermostats. But the President rejected the mandatory approach. He received one of the rounds of applause from his audience of senators and house members when he said, "I am not asking you for any increase in gas taxes."

Far more significant — if everyone were to participate — is the voluntary aspect of the program. This could conserve scarce supplies of food and fuel and could help to ease the pressure for price increases. But it would be strictly on the honor system. In addition to calling for a 5 percent cut in driving, Ford urged every family to reduce food waste by 5 percent, presumably by eating, some things that normally would be thrown out. Unless every able American pitches in, Congress and I cannot do the job." Ford said. The President said he would outline in a speech this week "how volunteer inflation fighters and energy savers can further mobilize their total efforts." The insights of the volunteer corps is a lapel button with the letters "W.I.N." — standing for "Whip Inflation Now" — one of which Ford wore while he delivered his speech. But as he left the rostrum, he took it off and gave it to House Doorkeeper "Fish Bait" Miller.

Format approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House said today both President Ford and reporters expressed "very good" reaction to the new format of follow-up questions after his 23-minute news conference Wednesday. The press seems very pleased with the ability to follow up on questions and reaction from both the President and news media was very good," said Assistant Press Secretary Larry Speakes. The reporters asked Ford a total of 27 questions in the White House Rose Garden conference and for the first time were allowed to follow up a question with another to get more complete answers. Eight reporters took advantage of the new format to ask a second question.

Extended furloughs proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With only 10 days left before 86 draft resisters must return to prison, the presidential Clemency Board said Thursday it has asked the Justice Department to extend their furloughs so each request for clemency can be considered individually. Chairman Charles Goodell told a news conference if the Justice Department refuses, he will try to hold an emergency meeting of the board next week. The 86 resisters were released from federal prison on 30-day furloughs Sept. 16, when President Ford announced his clemency and earned re-entry program. "We consider these our highest priority," Goodell said. He said the board did not decide any individual case during its two-day closed meeting earlier this week. Instead, he said, it was working out "the policy and process that will be applied to all cases." Goodell said this policy, designed to insure fairness, includes provisions for the strictest secrecy in an applicant's file, his right to be represented by a lawyer, access to his own file and an opportunity for an applicant to submit evidence of any mitigating factors.

Rockefeller denies connection with book

NEW YORK (UPI) — Vice President-designate Nelson A. Rockefeller today said he had nothing to do with an unfavorable book about Arthur Goldberg that came out during Goldberg's campaign to unseat him as governor of New York.

But one of Rockefeller's brothers, Laurence Rockefeller, said $50,000 to help finance the book, published in 1970, came from him.

Goldberg, former Supreme Court Justice, former U.N. ambassador and former secretary of Labor, called it a dirty campaign trick and demanded an apology from the Rockefeller.

The House Judiciary Committee, which must pass on Rockefeller's nomination as vice president, is investigating the matter of the book, "Arthur J. Goldberg: The Old and New," by Victor Lasky, the New York Times said.

In a statement, Rockefeller said, "I had heard of it at the time, but knew nothing about its preparation or financing. I really didn't pay any attention, because I never felt that such lies coming out during campaigns cut much ice one way or the other."

He said he learned only recently that his brother had invested about $50,000 in the company that published the book. Rockefeller said his brother never told him about it. "Had he only told me about it at the time, I would have been totally opposed to his participating in any form. As it was, in all the years since, he had never even mentioned the situation to me."

In a statement to the Times Goldberg said: "I am shocked beyond measure that Governor Rockefeller and his brother would participate in such a dirty campaign trick. They owe me, my family and the American people a profound apology for financing a scandalous and libelous book on one who has served his country well. The explanation of Governor Rockefeller simply does not wash."

In a related development, Rockefeller's press secretary Hugh Morrow confirmed today reports of another Rockefeller gift of more than $40,000 and a loan of $145,000 to Edward J. Logue, president of the New York State Urban Development Corp.

Previously, Rockefeller has revealed gifts to former or present aides including Morrow, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, Chairman of the New Jersey-New York Port Authority William Roman, and L. Jackson Morhous. Rockefeller said the FBI asked him during the summer about the Goldberg book, and "subsequently, the FBI informed me through counsel that my brother Laurence had invested in the book."

Rockefeller said his brother apparently had agreed to back the book as an investment, but ended up losing $52,000.

House Judiciary Committee chairman Peter W. Rodino has asked Rockefeller to provide records of all gifts made going back to 1959.

Rockefeller's New York office said the former governor would compile the material and deliver it to Rodino and the Senate Rules Committee next week.

Rodino requested an additional 10 years of Rockefeller's gift tax returns, covering the period that he served as governor, following disclosures that he had given $800,000 to close associates over the last five years.

A New York state law bars the acceptance of gifts over $25 by state employees. All the gifts, disclosed so far went to Rockefeller associates no longer on the state payroll.

The gifts disclosed so far were all listed on financial records Rockefeller gave the two committees.

Dangerous vials found on beach

TITUSVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — More than 75 glass vials containing a chemical with an explosive and the equivalent of nitro-glycerine washed up Thursday on an 18-mile stretch of Florida east coast beach.

Authorities warned persons as far south as Miami that exposure to the carbon disulfide contained in the vials can cause third degree burns or death.

A federal Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms office spokesman in Jacksonville, Fla., where 50 of the vials were destroyed, said the chemicals "have a very low ignition point" and will explode at the boiling point of water (212 degrees Fahrenheit).

The spokesman said the substance is clear in color in some instances, while others are smoky color. Officials said the color may vary depending on the substance's reaction to sunlight.

The David Crane of the Brevard County Health Department said the vials may have been dumped offshore during World War II and may have torn loose from the ocean floor during heavy turbulence and stormy weather during the past week. Although authorities still don't know what ship may have dumped the vials, or when, but the chemical was traced to Panhandle Lanes, Inc. The company folded years ago. Volusia County sheriff's deputy Gene Crawford said the chemicals are "in an unstable condition right now because they're very volatile and are stored in a cool, dry place."

"If someone finds one of the vials, he'll have a lot of power sitting in his hands," Crawford said.

"It's about one third the equivalent of nitro-glycerine. It's like acid," he said.

A St. John's County sheriff's department spokesman said he personally handled about 75 of the containers, 48 of which floated ashore in two boxes of 24 each. All others floated ashore individually, he said.

He said a child who finds the vials could easily open or break the glass container.

"If he smells it, he's got trouble," he said. "If he drinks it, he'll be dead."

The spokesman added that the chemical could cause third degree burns and possibly could burn the lungs if inhaled. The amount of official estimate of how many vials might be floating offshore or buried on the beaches.

Joan to appear in court Nov. 6

MCLEAN, Va. (UPI) — Mrs. Joan Kennedy must appear in traffic court Nov. 6 to answer charges that she was driving while probably be allowed to plead guilty to a reduced charge and take part in an experimental program for drinking drivers.

Mrs. Kennedy, wife of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., was charged after her car jumped the rear of another stopped at a red light not far from the family's home in this Washington suburb.

The car she hit in turn bumped a third automobile. There were no injuries and $1,000 damage was estimated by police at $1,400.

Assistant Commonwealth's attorney William Bechtold said after the court date was set Thursday, that conviction on the misdemeanor Wednesday, driving under the influence of alcohol carries a maximum penalty of 12 months in jail and a $1,000 fine along with loss of driver's license for six months to a year.

He said the Fairfax County Court Judge under usual procedure would not let Mrs. Kennedy if she would like to participate in an experimental, federally funded program called Fairfax Alcohol Safety Action Project.

A defendant who agrees to take part in such a program, which includes road counseling and driver education, may have charges reduced to reckless driving, Bechtold said.

Mrs. Kennedy could request a continuance if she enters a plea of innocent or ask for a trial the same day of her hearing before the traffic court judge.

One of the drivers involved in the accident Wednesday, Defense Department employee Edward McGrath, said he saw no "real evidence" Mrs. Kennedy was drinking.

Poll shows many favor Nixon push

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Louis Harris poll has found that a majority of Americans surveyed believe former President Richard Nixon should be asked about the Watergate cover-up even if he is too ill to travel to Washington for the trial of his former aides.

The survey also said a majority believes the cover-up trial should go ahead despite the pardon granted Nixon by President Ford.

Many said they thought Nixon's health was brought out as an issue in the pardon only to create sympathy for the former president, the survey said.

The findings were based on a poll of 1,544 adults across the nation taken between Sept. 23 and Sept. 27.

Those polled were asked: If Nixon is too sick to testify at the trial in Washington, should he instead be asked questions under oath at San Clemente?

Seventy-one per cent said he should, 23 per cent said he should not and 6 per cent were undecided.

Fifty-seven per cent said the Watergate cover-up trial of Nixon's former aides should go ahead despite the pardon granted to Nixon, while 34 per cent said the trial should be called off. Nine per cent were undecided.

Another question asked: Do you think justice would be served if the Watergate case were dropped? A total of 69 per cent said it would not be, 20 per cent said it would be and 11 per cent were undecided.

Forty-eight per cent of those polled said the issue of Nixon's health "was raised only to create sympathy for granting a pardon to the former president."

Energy program draws questions

Press secretary SHEILA Rabb Weldenfeld, a Washington television producer, has been chosen as Betty Ford's new press secretary. It was learned Thursday, Mrs. Weldenfeld is working on her local TV show "Take It From Here" which will replace Helen McCain Smith who was a holdover from Pat Nixon's staff. (UPI)

(The Washington Star-News) — Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., a contender for the Democratic presidential nomination; Thursday called on President Ford to explain why his new energy program will raise, rather than lower, domestic oil prices.

The request, contained in a letter released by Jackson in a news conference Thursday, charges that the price move would cost American consumers some $12 billion daily, or $4.4 billion on an annual basis.

"This impact would nearly equal, in total dollar terms, the impact of the 5 per cent tax surcharge which you proposed—however, the burden of these costs, unlike the surcharge, would fall heaviest on low and middle-income Americans," Jackson, chairman of the Senate Interior Committee, said.

The price increase proposal, contained in a fact sheet accompanying the President's economic message to Congress on Tuesday, apparently exempts from price controls domestic crude oil produced by secondary and tertiary recovery methods.

This means oil contained in fields already in production, but lower down in the ground and consequently more expensive to produce. This so-called "old oil" still is under price controls and sells for about $5.25 a barrel. The cost of "new oil," on which prices have been free to rise, now is around $11 a barrel.

Jackson's staff reported Thursday that key administration officials will be asked to discuss the proposed increase at a hearing next week of the senate permanent subcommittee on investigations.

Senate postpones debate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate has put off debate on Richard Nixon's transition expenses until after the November elections, and the Justice Department has asked if the former president wants the government to represent him in pending civil suits.

The Senate delayed action on an $8.4 million supplemental appropriations bill, which contains a sharply curtailed $200,000 request for Nixon's transition funds, Thursday because it feared debate on the bill might drag on past the scheduled congressional recess Friday.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said a dozen amendments to the appropriations measure are pending and that he doubted they could be cleaned up before the recess.

One of the amendments, proposed by Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., would reach a section dropped by the Senate Appropriations Committee, designed to end court-ordered school busing.

The Senate committee also proposed a $230,000 ceiling on total salaries of federal personnel employed to ease

Nixon's transition-to-private life.

Justice Department spokesman Robert J. Havel, said Assistant Attorney Henry Peterson has asked one of Nixon's lawyers if the ex-president wants the Justice Department to continue to represent him in civil suits.

The query was made in a letter written Sept. 24 to Nixon attorney Herbert J. Miller.

The letter to Miller sets out some cases in which Nixon has been named defendant in civil suits, Havel said. "It goes over the status of the cases and asks if he (Nixon) still wants us to continue to represent him."

Havel said that Nixon is currently named in five lawsuits as a co-defendant along with former FBI Director Patrick Gray and former Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst, and in a suit naming as defendants Nixon and the attorney general of the United States.

The plaintiffs in the various suits include antiwar actress Jane Fonda and the Socialist Workers Party.

The Justice Department normally defends "any officer, holder or former officer holder, with that determination made whether he was acting in his official duty," Havel said.

'Unusual recession,' Burns says

(C) New York Times Service
 WASHINGTON — The chairman of the Federal Reserve Board said Thursday for the first time that his agency regards the recent rate of growth of the nation's money supply as too low.
 Chairman Arthur F. Burns also said he felt the nation was in a recession, albeit a "most unusual" one.
 Burns pledged to the Congressional Joint Economic Committee that the Federal Reserve would "make every effort" to assure that the growth of the money supply would be "significantly" faster than the annual rate of 1.3 percent that has prevailed since June.
 He stressed that the recent rate was "not significant" as a measure of monetary policy because the federal reserve "does not have the techniques" to achieve a specific money growth target in a period as short as three or four months. The implication was that the target has been higher than 1.3 percent all along.
 Burns pledged that the basic target would be for a higher growth rate, and confirmed that federal reserve monetary policy already had "a somewhat less restrictive" character than that with continuing inflation, "the supply of money and credit will continue to expand, but only at a moderate rate."

 In response to a question, Burns said it was his judgment that the economy was in a "recession." But he added that it was a "most unusual" recession with "no precedent in history."
 President Ford denied at his news conference Wednesday that there was any recession. The official umpire of the National Bureau of Economic Research, has not yet given its verdict on this essentially semantic issue.
 Burns supported the President's economic program presented to Congress earlier this week and said that if Congress supports it, the plan would help to provide confidence, he said, carry there be "substantial progress in reducing long-term rates."
 Burns expressed reservations on several points of the program, however. Though he particularly liked the proposed reduction of government spending from $306 billion to $288 billion, he preferred a larger program of public service employment and said he had only "reluctantly" come to favor a general increase in the business investment tax credit. If it were administratively possible, he said, he would prefer a credit directed to those industries which most needed it.

 On other matters, Burns made these points:
 — After adjusting for inflation, corporate profits are "inadequate" and make a "depressing picture" despite record dollar earnings. He said that profits available for expansion of investment, or for dividend payments, have "declined significantly."
 — Any major deepening of the recession "must and will be resisted," but "we can realistically expect a sustained resurgence of economic activity until confidence in our nation's economy is restored."
 He called president Ford's program "a useful beginning toward a restoration of confidence."
 — The Federal Reserve has "encouraged" banks to lend to businesses, real estate, investment trusts, though "within the limits of banking performance."
 — He continued to "strongly oppose" a mandatory system of allocation but pledged to report on the effectiveness of the recent voluntary guidelines issued to banks on credit priorities.
 Burns also said "there is a fair chance that the worst is over" for savings and loan

CHAIRMAN ARTHUR BURNS ... pledges larger money supply associations and savings deposits because of high market interest rates.

Iran assails West

(C) New York Times Service
 UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — Iran charged Thursday mismanagement of the economy and overconsumption in the United States and Europe, not the rise in oil prices, had triggered the current inflationary crisis.
 Speaking in the General Assembly, Foreign Minister Abbas Ali Khatibari of Iran insisted that the higher oil prices had had little inflationary impact.
 "The higher costs for imported oil accounted for as little as 0.45 per cent of the rate of inflation in the United States and only 1.5 per cent of the rate in Western Europe," he said. By contrast, he insisted that in the same period prices generally had risen an average of 12 per cent in the United States and Western Europe.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The A.G. Trimble Co. of Pittsburgh, Thursday began making the "WIN" buttons standing for "whip inflation now" which President Ford has urged Americans to wear to demonstrate support for his new anti-inflation program. But the buttons will cost a buck each.

Inflation decline seen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford's chief economist says the country can look for the rate of inflation — now 12 per cent — to decline 2 or 3 percentage points by springtime.
 Alan Greenspan, chairman of Ford's Council of Economic Advisers, volunteered that figure when asked to supply a number for the President's Tuesday prediction of "a meaningful reduction" in the rate of inflation by early 1975.
 Meantime, much of the economic news pointed toward higher — not lower — prices.
 The Agriculture Department said the early fall corn yield is down 16 per cent below last year's — pointing to still higher meat prices in 1975 and 1976. The soybean crop was disappointing too.
 The Labor Department said wholesale prices, which recently had been rising at an annual rate of 35 per cent, had virtually leveled off in September. The rise reported Thursday was one-tenth of 1 per cent.
 On the political front, Ford's program "came under continued attack."
 Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., of the House Ways and Means Committee announced his opposition to Ford's proposed 5 per cent surtax on middle and upper-income taxpayers and on corporations.

 The surtax "would be a cruel burden imposed on working people that cannot have any significant impact in the fight to 'beat' inflation today," Mills said.
 He said a surtax was ineffective against inflation when President Lyndon B. Johnson used it in 1968-70.

 Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said Ford's program reminded him of the "inadequate" economic policies of the Nixon administration.
 Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said Ford's conservation program "falls far short" of what is needed. He called it a "surrender" to the oil producing countries.

Free US oil mart favored

(C) Washington Star-News
 WASHINGTON — President Ford advocates elimination of price controls of domestic oil production, the White House announced Thursday.
 The move would probably more than double the price of domestic crude, the announcement said.
 Press Secretary Ron Nessen read a statement in which Ford advocated a "free market price" for oil.
 Domestically produced oil is selling under price controls, for a little more than $5 a barrel, while world free market price is more than $11 a barrel.
 Nessen issued the President's position as what he called a "clarification" of Ford's statement at his news conference yesterday that he favored elimination of the oil-depletion allowance.
 "As long as the price of oil continues to be controlled, the President believes that the elimination of the percentage depletion on domestic oil production would be a mistake," Nessen said.
 President Ford feels that oil should be sold on a free market basis and he thinks that many oil producers will be glad to trade percentage depletion in order to achieve the important result of a free market for oil.
 "As for the foreign oil depletion allowance," Nessen said, "the President believes that that should be phased out immediately and fully."
 Nessen repeated Ford's position that he would accept elimination of the depletion allowance as part of the bill now before the House Ways and Means Committee because he supported the over-all bill "on balance."

HAILEY — The congregation of the newly organized Valley of Peace Lutheran church here plans to convert an office building into a chapel.

The plan is to convert the office building for the chapel and the house will be the parsonage, the pastor said.

A dedication service is planned for Oct. 27 when Rev. Emil G. Jaech, Portland, president of the Northwest district of the Lutheran church, will be guest speaker.

Church remodeling program nears end

TWIN FALLS — The operating board of the Seventh-day Adventist Church announces its $25,000 improvement program which began over three years ago is nearing completion. The program began with a better heating system which brought a more economic way of conserving fuel. New insurance regulations brought the need of a fence. For better acoustics the sanctuary was furnished with draperies for the windows, pads for the pews, and new rugs for the floor.

To better accommodate the worshippers in the parking of their cars the parking lot was blacktopped. Three metal doors yet to be installed and the decorating of three division rooms of the sanctuary remain to be done.

Plans are now being made for a new gymnasium which will be built as a part of the elementary school located on Falls Avenue West. The gym will have floor space of over 12,000 square feet.

Unorthodox minister dramatizes parable

LAKE LOTAWANA, Mo. (UPI) — The Rev. David Finestead has faith in God and his congregation.

The 36-year-old novice minister at the United Methodist Church in this small town east of Kansas City is attempting to dramatize Christ's "Parable of the Talents," but his methods are a little unorthodox.

The biblical parable deals with a master who, when planning to leave for a while, split his financial holdings among three servants according to their abilities.

Two servants doubled the master's money while he was away, but the third, afraid of losing the grant, buried his coins, called talents in the Bible. It earned him a stern scolding from the master.

"I think the parable relates to the ability of people to receive the grace of God," the soft-spoken minister said.

"God gives us his grace according to our ability to use it. My frustration was how to make the parable real to the congregation."

Finestead decided to go back to the parable, and, dipping into his personal savings, put $1,000 in the church collection basket in September.

The congregation was instructed to take whatever they wished, secretly, in $5, $10 and $20 bills, and return Nov. 24 for a "day of accounting."

"Maybe some of the people are just spending it," he said. "But I wouldn't have done it if I didn't have a good concept of people and confidence in them."

"There are always a few you can't count on. But if people are asked to reach for the highest, they'll come through. In a way, I bet $1,000 on my people. I'm not worried."

"Sure it was a shock," Finestead said of his act of faith in the congregation. "How often do you see $1,000 in a plate and a person can take out whatever he can use?"

"There were one or two people who were nervous about it, but that makes the parable real. There are always one or two who will bury their talents. But others are out using the money. Those who took it are responding."

The list of activities planned with Finestead's money resembles a basic course in inflation fighting. One man bought dog food in damaged containers and is reselling it.

Young girls are organizing bake sales and boys bought supplies for such activities as lawn mowing and guitar lessons.

The community will benefit from the experiment also with a chili supper put on by a couple who took a few bills from the plate.

And a local printer just took some cash but has dedicated all profits from wedding invitations back to the church.

"One thing that upset people was where the money came from," Finestead said. "Some had the feeling I dipped into church money just to demonstrate a parable. That's not so, I gave them my money."

Finestead, who doubts as the local police chaplain, said feedback about the project is just starting to come in.

But he said he is not worried about getting his money back and he expects a profit for the small church he took over in June.

Punishment for Soviet priests

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Cardinal Jozsef Sillpoy said today priests who celebrate mass in the Soviet Union are sent to Siberia or are put in insane asylums. The Ukrainian rite leader asked the World Synod of Bishops to make a protest.

The 82-year-old Cardinal said that despite such persecutions religious faith is not dead and asked the bishops at the Synod not to forget the plight of the Ukrainian church.

"What honest man does not feel a pervasion of horror when he learns about a priest who, having secretly celebrated mass, is today condemned to three or more years of forced labor in Siberia?" Sillpoy asked.

"Or even who for collecting signatures of the faithful to send to the government in Moscow to ask the right to celebrate the holy liturgy is put away in an insane asylum?" he added.

Sillpoy, who was imprisoned by Soviet authorities himself, said some priests, faithful and sisters die from such persecution.

"What do you think then, venerable fathers, one should do?" Sillpoy asked. "The Synod should, at least, protest with a strong voice. Should it not also perhaps aid with all its power and means all those who are suffering?"

Pope Paul VI, who made Sillpoy a cardinal and helped free him from prison, attended the session and heard the speech. In the 1971 Synod Sillpoy criticized the Pope's efforts of rapprochement with the Soviets saying, "for the sake of ecclesiastical diplomacy the Ukrainian Catholics are considered uncomfortable."

Sillpoy recalled that 1974 had been called "year of justice" and that Pope Paul had defied "all those who suffer persecution and justice in Biafra, Bangladesh, Chile, Palestine and others."

"But the Ukrainian people also suffer grave religious persecution," Sillpoy said.

DEAR ABBY: I was busted for possession of marijuana two weeks ago. I am a married woman, 19, and have a 14-month-old son.

Everyone has something he calls his own thing, and my own thing is relaxing with grass now and then. When the police came to my door, they deprived me of one of my civil rights by not letting me read the search warrant before they entered my home.

What can I do about this? So many people have been busted the same way. We are sick of the way the police push people around.

If I can't smoke grass in the privacy of my own home, then I guess I'll become an alcoholic.

BUSTED IN L.A.

Teen busted

DEAR BUSTED: Both possession and sale of marijuana are unlawful, and in narcotics cases, search warrants cannot be read at the door because while the officers are waiting outside, someone inside (an accomplice, possibly) can destroy the evidence. So the law enforcers must enter first, and then the warrant is available for reading.

The people, through the democratic process, write the laws, and the police only enforce them. However, your laws are made to protect you, not to punish you. A "dependency" on some kind of mind-altering drug, which should concern you at least as much as being deprived of your civil rights.

DEAR ABBY: You said in your column that there was nothing sadder than seeing children being raised by their children.

Well, I disagree with you. It's a lot sadder to see children being raised by old people in their late 30s and 40s. They have nothing in common.

I am 16, and have a child nearly a year old and there is nothing "sad" about the way my son is being raised. I think it's a break for a kid to have young parents so they can grow up together.

DEAR MOTHER: If you are sufficiently mature to raise a child at 16, you are exceptional. "Growing up" together is lovely theory, but unless the parents are mature (and maturity doesn't automatically come with years) they'd better do a lot of praying.

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to you, but here I am. Will you please let doctors, nurses, aides and all hospital personnel know that when someone who works with them is hospitalized that person deserves the same consideration about visiting hours as anyone else in that hospital?

I was hospitalized with a serious injury two months ago, and during my stay at the hospital, even though there was a big sign on my door which read: "POSITIVELY NO VISITORS: DOCTORS' ORDERS." I was pestered to death by co-workers who felt I needed a cheering up.

Nurses, doctors, aides, and people from the hospital office came to see me. Most of them stayed for only ten minutes, but multiply that by 60 every day and you'll have some idea of how chaotic I was.

I finally had to leave the hospital to get some rest. I love my co-workers, but they almost killed me with kindness. Please, Abby, put this in your column. I hope it goes up on hospital bulletin boards all over the country.

School aide tells program

VALLEY SCHOOLS — Marilee Teasley was the featured speaker at the Tuesday night meeting of the Valley SOS organization at the Valley High School.

Mrs. Teasley is a psychologist, certified by the state of Idaho, and is employed by the Valley, Kimberly, Murtaugh and Hansen school districts. She explained her job with the school systems and outlined how and why children learn to read. She said every child is an individual and can and should build up his own self-esteem. This can be accomplished through parents and teachers working together to understand and encourage each child, she said.

Third grade students of Mrs. Ruth Olson and Mrs. Annie Romer presented the playlet, "The Little Rabbit Who Wanted Red Wings."

Mrs. LeAnn Moncur, Valley SOS vice president, conducted the meeting. She led a discussion of possible fund raising projects for the year. It was decided that the group will sponsor an international smorgasbord and have food from six or seven countries represented on the menu.

The annual carnival will be postponed until next spring. One of the projects outlined by the newly formed SOS is to furnish resource people that could aid teachers in helping the children read and in various other ways at the school.

Mrs. Moncur said more resource people are needed, and those interested were asked to contact teachers to volunteer their help.

It was announced that Eden Elementary school is conducting a year long paper drive. The funds will be used for the school library. Persons wishing to contribute papers are asked to bring them to the school or call to have the paper picked up.

The next meeting will be at 8 p.m. Nov. 5.

Wilson hairbreadth winner in British election

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson's Labour party, promising to use tough socialist measures to deal with Britain's economic crisis, today won a new general election mandate, but only by a hairbreadth margin.

Political commentators said all indications were that the Labour party's overall majority in the new parliament would be by three to five seats out of the 635-member congress.

After three hours of sleep, Wilson flew back to London from the Liverpool suburb of Highton where he was re-elected. He has represented the district in parliament for more than 23 years.

Adviser said Wilson will rest during the weekend and start forming his new administration Monday.

"I would have liked to have seen better results," Wilson said as he stepped aboard his plane. "But I remain optimistic."

Asked whether he can carry out Labour's strongly left-leaning program with such a whisker-slim majority, Wilson said "We can do it. But it's going to be a hell of a job."

The former Conservative prime minister said he would not comment until results for all 635 parliamentary seats are announced later today.

With three-fourths of the results announced, Labour had captured 292 seats, Conservatives 184, Liberals 5, Scottish Nationalists 5 and Welsh Nationalists 3.

British Broadcasting Corp. and Independent Television News companies said Labour would get three to five seats more than the 311 needed for a parliamentary majority — far short of the crushing 40-120 margin predicted by opinion polls.

"In North Ireland's a wave of voting day bombings and shootings left one man dead, despite heavy security provided by police, multiple and 15,000 British troops stationed in the province.

Authorities said extremists fired a dozen shots at a police car carrying ballot boxes in Portlengone, 25 miles north of Belfast, but all the rounds missed and nobody was hurt.

The British campaign was dominated by economic issues such as soaring 20 per cent inflation, the threat of mass unemployment and the nation's outworn social membership in the European Common Market.

Labour ousted Heath's Conservatives in the last general election Feb. 29 but failed to win a majority of the parliament. Since then, Conservatives and Liberals have joined forces to turn back key Labour legislation.

Wilson called the election in a bid to turn his parliamentary minority into a majority strong enough to nationalize much of Britain's remaining private industry.

"The prime minister didn't seem bothered by the narrow margin."

"I expect to form my fourth administration tomorrow (Friday)," he said. "Whatever happens now, the Tories (Conservatives) cannot take that away from us."

Heath said a majority Labour government will be disastrous for the country if its intention is to carry out the nationalization program it has announced.

He dismissed suggestions he might resign as party leader after leading the Conservatives to three defeats in four elections.

"My own position is not affected," he said.

The voting turnout was lower than the 78.8 per cent in February. Indications were that about 70 per cent of the 41 million registered voters cast ballots.

'Humiliated' Wilbur admits all

(c) Chicago Daily News
WASHINGTON — A "humiliated" Rep. Wilbur D. Mills returned to Capitol Hill today after a belated confession that he has cut the face in a 2 a.m. struggle with a go-go dancer who then leaped into the famed Tidal Basin.

The Arkansas Democrat issued a three-page statement more than three days after his encounter with U.S. Park Police after they stopped his speeding 1974 Lincoln Continental in the wee hours Monday.

Police said Mills was intoxicated, bleeding from the nose and facial cuts and was driven to his nearby Virginia apartment after the dramatic rescue of a neighbor woman, and Annabell Battistella, from the artificial lake.

But as Mills told the story, it was just an unpleasant ending to a bon voyage party for the relative of an old family friend.

The Washington Star-News reported that Mills tried to use his Congressional power over the two park-police privates who refused to let him take Mrs. Battistella home in his car.

"I'm a Congressman and I'll have you detained," the 65-year-old chairman of the Senate House Ways and Means Committee was quoted as telling one of the policemen.

Police took the woman to St. Elizabeth's Hospital, where she was kept overnight.

Mrs. Battistella, who was described as a tall, "really elegant" blonde by a nightclub manager where she and Mills have been seen together recently, was released from the hospital after doctors concluded that she did not intend to take her life when she jumped into the relatively shallow water.

According to some sources, she has been working as a secretary for Mills on a private payroll — not on the Congressional staff or ways and means committee staff.

Mills' statement — an obvious effort to remedy some of the political damage that could be a serious threat to his reelection — put her in a different light.

Describing his move from the northwest side of Washington to the luxury apartment complex, he said:

"Our new neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Eduardo Battistella, offered us every assistance during the moving ordeal and since that time our families have grown to become close friends." (Eduardo Battistella was not at the Sunday farewell party for Gloria Sanchez, a personal problem and I have no comment.)

DETROIT (UPI) — President Ford Thursday said the Republican party is in danger of extinction and asked the voters to save it on Election Day.

"A catastrophic defeat as some forecasters are predicting for the Republican party could write the obituary of the GOP," Ford told 4,000 Republicans who each had $50 tickets to a fund-raising dinner in massive Cobo Hall, Cobo Hall.

"I plead with you to support a strong two-party system."

Although he indicated he did not really believe the GOP would be wiped out at the polls Nov. 5, Ford expressed a deep concern about the growing trend of political independents in the nation.

"I respect and admire independents, but as I look back over the history of this country, I find that the periods of greatest political stability, progress and movement have come when we have two strong political parties," Ford said in his first political appearance in his home state since assuming the presidency.

"If you have a multitude of political parties, you have chaos and you end up with that nation suffering with no progress. On the other hand if you have one political party, we have the evils of dictation and all that goes with it."

Ford went to Detroit to support the re-election bid of Republican Gov. William E. Milliken, who is locked in a close race with Democrat Sander M. Levin.

Milliken beat Levin by only 44,000 votes four years ago and was reported last Sunday to be only 5 percentage points ahead in a tight race.

Milliken candidly admitted he was "in a difficult battle" but told the partisan crowd that he intended to work "16 and 20 hours a day to carry the record of the Republican party to the people of Michigan."

Ford's appeal for the survival of the Republican party was ad libbed and not part of his prepared speech, which lightly touched on the problem of growing disenchantment with the traditional parties but did not contain the fervent appeal for help that he delivered.

Ford's concern appeared to reflect reports that despite the departure of Richard Nixon, Republican candidates are in dire jeopardy this year, especially in key states such as New York, California and Michigan.

In his speech, Ford also urged Congress to put off a "dangerous and misguided" bill in military aid to Turkey.

DETROIT — President Ford attacked Congress Thursday for attempting to cut off American military assistance to Turkey calling the attempt a "dangerous and misguided course of action, which, tragically and catastrophically, will damage Greece and undermine the North Atlantic Treaty Organization."

The President's remarks, made in his speech at a Republican fund-raising dinner here, were considered by many as his harshest criticism to date of Congressional action on the issue.

That criticism was expressed on the eve of a scheduled House action on a measure, passed by the Senate, to allow the President to delay the ban on military aid to Turkey until Dec. 15. He would be allowed to do this if it appeared that the delay would help negotiations for a peaceful settlement. As he spoke, dozens of demonstrators paraded outside Cobo Hall, carrying placards calling for the United States to cut aid to Turkey.

Image at home gone with wind

(c) New York Times Service
LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — The late-night incident involving Rep. Wilbur D. Mills has demolished his staid image among voters in the Second Congressional District and also his prospects for an easy reelection, politicians here agree.

Leading Democrats here predicted Mills, longtime chairman of the powerful ways and means committee, now would have trouble defeating Judy Petty, his Republican opponent. A few of them were saying he could not overcome the effect of the incident.

The United States Park Police reported that they stopped Mills' car early Monday near the Tidal Basin in Washington. They described Mills as intoxicated. A woman in the car with him jumped into the Tidal Basin, the police said, but she was rescued by a police officer.

Roger C. Mears Jr. of Little Rock, the Pulaski County Democratic chairman who is a close friend of Mills, thought the representative negligible, although that view seemed to be rare.

"I always thought of him as pretty much of a square," Mears said. "I thought it was a little out of character for him to be running around that time of night with a go-go dancer and a masseuse. If he was a swinger, I feel like I would have heard of it before now."

Other Democrats were not so confident. Mills has been saying that he was too busy in Washington to campaign and he has made only a few speeches in the district and spent almost no money. He does not even have a campaign office.

"The stuff about being too busy up there obviously won't go over very well after Sunday night," one gloomy supporter said.

Mrs. Petty is not referring to the incident in her campaigning. Everett Ham, her campaign director, said today. She had said only that "it's a personal problem and I have no comment."

A member of the Pulaski County Democratic committee thought the effect would be devastating to many middle-class voters.

"For years," he said, "we were told that this man was the pillar of propriety, that he never went on the cocktail circuit like the other congressman, that he stayed at his Massachusetts Avenue apartment where he and his wife Polly had worked for 30 years and lived on the tax laws."

STANLEY — A Washington woman safely pulled a car to the side of the road yesterday when her husband, who was driving, was apparently stricken with a heart attack.

William Wagner, 60, Seattle, Wash., died about 4 p.m. yesterday 7 miles west of Stanley on Highway 21 from an apparent heart attack as he was driving down the road. Wagner's wife, Evelyn, safely pulled the vehicle to the side of the road.

The car "wasn't even scratched," according to Custer County sheriff's officials.

Fisher received the Congressional Medal of Honor for bravery in rescuing a fellow fighter pilot in Vietnam under hazardous conditions. He retired from military service in July and lives in Kuna.

Maj. Nasymth was POW in North Vietnam for over six years. His airplane was shot down and he was taken prisoner in 1966. He was released in 1973.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House has approved a bill by Rep. Orval Hansen, R-Idaho, to establish a standing committee on small business to investigate problem areas for the businessmen.

Hansen said the factors, such as commodity and resource shortages, energy problems inflation and the influence of government regulations, have great impact on the small business sector, a sector that has the least flexibility to respond because of its limited size.

The body of Miss Haro was found Sept. 13 in a ditch between Ontario and Vale several days after she had disappeared from her home.

Flores surrendered to authorities Sept. 17.

He is from the Rupert area.

The sheriff's office said there was no indication what had happened to the couple, who were in their 70s, or their van.

Stanley Basin 'instant city'

SAWTOOTH CITY, Idaho (UPI) — With federal help, an "instant city" is being established in Stanley Basin. Sawtooth City is one of three cities provided for in the 740,000-acre Sawtooth National Recreation Area by legislation creating the area and subsequent private land regulations.

Stanley and the adjoining settlement of Lower Stanley are the other two cities.

Forest Service officials hired a Los Angeles planning firm to draw up plans for Sawtooth City. Officials will meet with residents Wednesday to negotiate agreement on the proposed land.

These plans call for 70 acres of residential property and 15 acres for commercial use. Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz will have to put the final stamp of approval on the plans.

At present, Sawtooth city has four families who live in Stanley Basin year-around and 26 others who are summertime residents.

Burt Sanders, a retired construction engineer who calls himself a "refugee from Los Angeles freeways" is chairman of the board of governors for the new city.

He said the primary concern of the Forest Service is that the designated cities in the national recreation area maintain a rustic character in keeping with the area.

"We want a very simple community run by the people who live here," Sanders said.

TWIN FALLS — The annual meeting of the Pacific Northwest Region of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers winds up today at the Blue Lakes Inn.

J. Phil Campbell, under-secretary of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, gave the keynote address at the opening session Thursday.

Today members heard a luncheon address by Carl W. Hall, president of ASAE and dean of the College of Engineering at Washington State University, Pullman, Wash.

Hall, speaking on the convention theme of "Planning for Today and Tomorrow," said agricultural engineers serve in an interesting capacity today, as "interface between energy and environment." This is the "new objective agricultural engineers have as they try to meet both energy and environmental needs," he said.

The agricultural engineers try to work the two opposing sides together, searching for solutions which meet both the demands of energy need and environmental conservation.

In addition, Hall said agricultural engineers are putting a new emphasis on resource productivity. "In the past there was more emphasis on labor productivity and in the future there will be more emphasis on resource productivity," Hall said.

Agricultural engineers are performing an increasingly important function as moderators between energy and environmental demands, while constantly researching methods to produce more food to feed the world.

Presiding at the luncheon meeting was Claude Pair, second vice chairman of the Pacific Northwest Region, ASAE.

Thursday evening, the annual awards were presented at a banquet, with featured speaker John and Matha Wolfe. The Wolfes recently returned from 14 months at Safabad research station in Andimesh, Iran.

John Wolfe showed slides of the area and research station. A professor of agricultural engineering at Oregon State University at Corvallis, Wolfe worked as a professional irrigation engineer, advising two men in irrigation design and implementation.

Mrs. Wolfe discussed the religion of Islam and the couple's activities during their stay there. The station is four hours from the Persian Gulf and the Mesopotamian plain, she said. She wore the traditional dress, the chador, donned by Iranian Moslem women.

During the two day convention, more than 40 topics were discussed by different research engineers from Montana, Nebraska, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and Utah. Agricultural engineers from Alberta and British Columbia were also on hand for the discussions.

The program was divided into several different divisions, representing the breadth of interest in the organization, including the structures and power divisions, the power and machinery division, the electric power and processing and food engineering division and the soil and water division.

The organization, chaired this year by Allan S. Humphreys, of Kimberly, boasts more than 7,000 members nationwide, divided into 10 regions such as the Pacific Northwest Region.

Filer firm gets award

TWIN FALLS — A Filer company was honored by members of the Pacific Northwest Region of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers in their annual awards banquet Thursday.

Acme Manufacturing Co. was presented the 1974 Industrial Achievement Award for its contribution to mechanization of agriculture in the U.S. and other countries.

The engineers also honored Dr. John H. Davis, the head of the Department of Agricultural Engineering at Oregon State University, as Agricultural Engineer of the Year.

Accepting the award was the company founder Wilfred "Bill" Herrett. Begun in 1947 as a name welding and blacksmith shop, Acme has grown to a family corporation which is a major producer of draper chain for conveyors on potato and sugarbeet harvesting equipment. Production of chain has progressed from a hand-operated shear and bending mechanism to a fully automated process.

Dr. Davis has served as an agricultural engineer with the U.S. Geological Survey service, at Michigan State University, at Purdue University, and at the University of Nebraska. He also served as a lecturer at the University of California at Davis and was in charge of Water Resources Research at Stanford Research Institute.

In presenting the award, ASAE chairman Allan Humphreys said, "Dr. Davis has made an outstanding contribution to the progress of the state of Oregon by redressing a portion of the activities of the Agricultural Engineering Department to meet new challenges."

Jerome census shows increase

JEROME — A preliminary report of a special census conducted in Jerome shows a population increase of 25 per cent over the 1970 census.

James Nancarrow, U.S. Census Bureau, said Wednesday that the preliminary census count came to 5,583, an increase of 1,370 over the 1970 census, which placed Jerome's population at 4,213.

Nancarrow said the official count will not be available until sometime in November.

Mayor Charles Hancock said Wednesday he was "delighted with the results. At $16.30 per head, this will be of great financial benefit to the city."

Marilyn Bragg, city clerk, explained that the city is entitled to $16.50 per capita in state funds for the increase. She noted that the census will cost the city about $2,433, but with the increase in population figures will soon have the money back.

Hancock said he expects the increase will also help to bring new businesses into town. He requested that anyone who had not been contacted by one of the enumerators to contact city hall.

Hancock said the Van Mor subdivision and the area west of Fillmore on the mile road north of town were not included in the county because they are outside the city limits.

"If these people had been counted in our census, it would have put our population figure well over the 6,000 mark," Hancock said.

Boise meet set

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho United Veterans Front Coalition will meet here Saturday to discuss unification of statewide veterans affairs.

Attending the session will be representatives and speakers from colleges throughout Idaho.

Purpose behind the organization is to unite veterans on college campuses to give them a bigger voice in college and legislative matters, coalition officials said.

Jerome crowd, candidates debate AF Dam problems

By CHARLOTTE BELL
Times-News writer

JEROME — An unshedded debate over American Falls dam replacement developed in a candidates meeting here Wednesday night.

Anna Louise Robison, D-Idaho, running for state representative in District 21, said she was concerned over progress being made in replacing the dam, but was unable to answer what she thought should be done on the state level.

The Jerome County Farm Bureau had invited all candidates in the Nov. 5 election to attend the special meeting.

Richard Strickland, D-Gooding, also seeking the state representative post, said he thought because of the delays and problems, the dam will be built by the Bureau of Reclamation.

The state Fish and Game Department should be shot. They are holding up the construction of the new dam by demanding aeration for the fish," Strickland said. He added the Bureau of Reclamation built the dam to last for 100 years.

"It's only lasted 50 years. We should make them replace it. After all you wouldn't buy a new car with a two-year warranty and have it fall apart the first year and not demand they replace it."

Strickland told the Times-News following the meeting that he advocated the closure of hunting and private lands between American Falls Dam and Boise.

"Why should we allow the hunters to hunt when the farmers can't have water? By closing the land, we can exert pressure on Joe Greenley, Fish and Game director to ease or remove the demands of this list man," Strickland said.

Each of the candidates in attendance spoke briefly on their positions in the campaign with most of them stating they were concerned over the present rate inflation, and citing federal and state spending as part of the problem.

A debate was held on the Sunshine Initiative which will be voted on in the general election. The initiative calls for a complete disclosure of lobbyist's activities and campaign contributions.

Speaking in favor of the initiative was State Sen. John Peavey, who helped formulate the bill. Peavey said the purpose of the act was to promote openness in government and avoid secrecy by those giving financial support to state election campaigns and those promoting or opposing legislation for compensation at the state level.

Monday holiday for some

TWIN FALLS — Columbus Day will be observed in Twin Falls Monday by many business offices but public schools and most stores will be open as usual.

With the exception of law enforcement officers, all city, county and state employees will have a holiday.

The U.S. Postoffice will also be closed and there will be no deliveries. Mail will be sorted and placed in boxes in the postoffice, however.

Most downtown stores as well as those in shopping centers are expected to be open on a full schedule. The Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce will also be open.

Major securities exchanges and some commodities markets will be open Monday. Those closing include the New York Cocoa Exchange, the New York Commodity Exchange and the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange.

Although Oct. 12, Saturday, is the traditional Columbus day, it has been moved to Monday to give more residents a three-day holiday.

4-H Horse Fair planned

The fair is being organized by Gooding County 4-H horse club leaders and will begin at 9 a.m. Monday at the Gooding County Fairgrounds.

The Kimberly meeting was one of three held this week in the county to kick off planning sessions which Richey has said he considers "mandatory" to the design of a comprehensive plan with the broad-based public support necessary to make the plan effective.

Wiseman also attended the Kimberly meeting, said according to an earlier survey done by Richey 75 per cent of the survey respondents had indicated they would personally support the grassroots planning effort.

"I was where they were at," Wiseman said. "This was the thing which concerned me. It doesn't seem that people are responding to this program."

Wiseman said he would favor a procedure whereby Richey design a comprehensive plan himself and then submit the plan for public approval through a series of public hearings.

"That's the only way it's going to get done," Wiseman said.

Richey, in advocating the public participation process he is now undertaking, also said he was disappointed in the turnout for the Kimberly meeting and earlier meetings held in Twin Falls and Buhl which attracted only 14 and 13 persons respectively.

However, Richey said he is hopeful that public participation will increase as the series of meetings, which are scheduled to run weekly through April, continue. He noted that the Kimberly meeting had conflicted with a volleyball game which drew a larger number of parents to the high school.

Richey had said earlier that for him to design a comprehensive plan without citizen participation would result in the plan being ignored by elected officials and left to "collect dust" on his officials' shelves.

He said he was still committed to the public participation process despite the low turnout.

"I think that the work we turn out will still be high quality," Richey said. "It doesn't take a lot of people. It takes just a few people for this style program."

Richey said he "had to agree" with Wiseman that the turnout was not that indicated by the earlier survey.

"I think we just had a bad night," he said.

Land use meet turnout disappointing to aide

By GEORGE WILEY

TWIN FALLS — County Commissioner William Wiseman expressed disappointment in the turnout at public land use planning sessions and called for different methods of arriving at a county comprehensive plan.

Wiseman's comments followed a meeting Thursday night at Kimberly City Hall where only seven persons turned out to hear David Richey, planner for the Twin Falls City-County Joint Planning Council, outline his citizens participation planning program.

The Kimberly meeting was one of three held this week in the county to kick off planning sessions which Richey has said he considers "mandatory" to the design of a comprehensive plan with the broad-based public support necessary to make the plan effective.

Kokanee experiments run too good or plain bad

Two experiments in planting kokanee in regional waters have brought a boatload of diametrically opposed results. Regional Fish biologist Bob Bell is trying everything he can to reduce a surplus of the species in Anderson Ranch dam and menshite in mid-range trips into the Salmon Falls Creek area in the hopes of getting a glimpse of one returned one in that small stream. Either way it's a problem. At Anderson Ranch Dam the department has gone to a program that would be genocide — but has no real possibility of wiping out the strain. Kokanee have been a good addition to the reservoir, providing a lot of fishing and harvest for Idaho anglers the past few years. The trouble is the fish have done better than the anglers. Stunting first was noted a couple of years ago and has progressed rapidly. Four years ago the average female coming out of the reservoir to spawn was 13 to 14 inches in length, weighed about a pound and was providing between 1,000 and 1,200 eggs. Now with the competition for food hitting all species in the reservoir, the females this year ran 10 to 11 inches, weighed about one-third of a pound and provided only 180 eggs on the average. To combat this, the department has increased the number of fish an angler could take if helped. But the stream turned practically red this fall when the spawning urge struck and the department allowed snagging and kept the limit at 25.

and spawned on a long gravel area about 12 miles into that state. The following year, the spawning run was down and this year not one has been seen in its tallored red spawning costume. Bell said this development is rather depressing. "We had kokanee turn up in creel censusing throughout the season. In fact, we saw some coming out of there when we had the snagging checking stations up this fall. But none has shown up in the streams." Bell said the department would continue planting the species to establish itself. "It (Salmon reservoir) is producing beautiful kokanee," he said. "They are about 13 inches long, weigh about a pound and are very healthy." In the meantime, he reports plantings of German Brown trout appear to have taken hold at least partially. Pretty concrete evidence of an eight and one-half pounder and another about six pounds being taken by anglers has been compiled. The walleye perch, just planted, are thought to be growing well, but currently are a mainstay in the diet of larger fish in the reservoir. The department plans a supplemental planting this spring if the fry are available.

Odds makers won't select freeway-series favorite

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Some sports writers are already calling the 1974 World Series the "Freeway Series" because it's a 300-mile drive from Oakland to Los Angeles down California's heartland along Interstate 5. But the Oakland A's took no time for a leisurely drive Thursday; they arrived here by jet for their Saturday appointment with the Los Angeles Dodgers in the first of California World Series ever.

Most oddsmakers hesitated to predict a winner, though some have installed Oakland as a razor-thin favorite on the strength of the team's three veteran starting pitchers — Vida Blue, Jim "Catfish" Hunter and Ken Holtzman. A's manager Alvin Dark said he will go with either Blue or Holtzman in game No. 1 of the Series at Dodger Stadium which begins at 4 p.m. EDT. Dodger skipper Walter Alton will open with Andy Messersmith, a 20-game winner, followed by 19-game winner Don Sutton on Sunday. But Alton said his plans for a starter in the third game in Oakland Tuesday were "up in the air."

Half of college football's top 10 face tests Saturday

By United Press International It may not show in the weekly listings by the oddsmakers, but several of the top 10 college football teams will have to tread most carefully this weekend. At least five of the top 10 clubs are expected to have more than their share of hard knocks Saturday, beginning with No. 1 ranked Ohio State which meets No. 11 Wisconsin at Columbus, Ohio, in its Big Ten Conference opener. The Buckeyes have been installed a 22-point favorite, which seems way out of line considering that Wisconsin has won three of its four games including impressive wins over fourth-ranked Nebraska, and Missouri. Woody Hayes, coach of the Buckeyes, certainly doesn't consider his club a three-touchdown favorite. He has worked his boys hard all week in an effort to get them ready for the Badgers, who are gunning for their first Big Ten title in 12 years. The Badgers, led by quarterback Greg Bohnell, tailback Bill Marek and fullback Ken Storch, have averaged 32 points per game. Ohio State, though, is practically unbeatable at home, which might account for the high point-spread. The Buckeyes have lost only three games at Columbus since 1967 and all three came during the 1971 season. Other clubs among the top 10 expected to have some rough going Saturday include No. 3 Michigan, which meets state rival Michigan State; No. 5

Florida, which visits Vanderbilt; No. 6 Auburn, which takes on Kentucky; and No. 7 Texas Tech, which faces Texas A&M. Michigan has been made a 21-point favorite over Michigan State, but this game is almost always close. Michigan blew out the Spartans 31-0 last year.

SUCCESSFUL HUNTER, Dr. Daniel Haymore of Twin Falls and brother Bruce Haymore display a 1,000-pound bull moose the doctor shot in the Island Park area.

Bull moose

Finding moose tougher than bagging it

"Actually I'd like to tell you it was hard, but it really wasn't."

That's how Dr. Daniel Haymore summed up his moose hunting trip into the Island Park area last weekend. He came home with a 1,000-pound bull and another rack to add to a collection of Idaho trophies he's putting in his new home.

"I guess what they say is right," he continued. "Getting the permit is the hardest. Once you spot the animal, you will get him."

Finding the animal was tough—Dr. Haymore and his brother Bruce Haymore made four trips into the area. They took one scouting weekend just prior to the opening.

With things legal, they went back for two weekends and came home without even track soup. Last weekend they spent considerable time looking around and walking the country to no avail.

"I was about to give up until the first snow," Dr. Haymore said.

"We were just about to head back to Twin Falls when we saw this one from the road."

Dr. Haymore jumped out of the four-wheel pickup and caught up to the moose about 50 feet off the road. "He was in some tall brush and the only thing I could really see was his shoulders."

He put one slug from his .308 magnum through the shoulders and the bull went down in a heap.

Although they were able to hack the pickup up next to the animal, the twosome had a lot of trouble getting it loaded.

Hunter to be free agent after series

CHICAGO (UPI) — Pitcher Jim "Catfish" Hunter plans to quit the Oakland A's immediately after the World Series because club-owner Charles O. Finley has not paid him $50,000 owed to him on his salary for the current year, a Chicago newspaper said Thursday night.

Chicago Sun-Times sportswriter Jerome Holtzman said he has learned that Hunter, ace of Oakland's mound staff, will become a free agent, eligible to sell his services to the highest bidder after the series.

The story said Hunter has informed the Major League Players Association and has received its complete support.

"Hunter has been paid only half his salary. He received $50,000 in regular bi-weekly installments, but Finley has refused payment of the remaining $50,000, which according to Hunter's contract, was to be given him in so-called deferred payments," the paper said.

The story said the deferred payments were to begin in mid-season and were to be applied to an annuity.

"Hunter began petitioning Finley for the money more than two months ago and has since had his attorney send Finley three letters, all of which have gone unanswered," it said.

The most recent letter was sent by registered mail a month ago, advising Finley that Hunter would become a free agent on Oct. 21, the story said.

"Hunter could have declared himself a free agent 10 days after the first missed payment," it said. "That he didn't do so was because he didn't want to diminish Oakland's chances of winning a pennant and World Series, and at the same time he wanted to protect his share of playoff and Series money."

Oriole owners seek offer on franchise

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Jerry Hoffberger says as long as the price is reasonable he'll sell the Baltimore Orioles even if the buyers move the American League team.

Hoffberger, board chairman of the Baltimore Orioles Baseball Club, Inc., said Thursday the team has been up for sale for some time, but there have been no takers.

"I have said before if I make up my mind that it is in the best interests of the stockholders—there are about 1,000—I would recommend selling the Orioles," Hoffberger said.

"I've been saying that for a year, but nobody has made an offer."

Asked if he would make a sale condition keeping the team in Baltimore, Hoffberger replied, "I don't see how any sale to a guy in Pascagoula or wherever could contain that condition."

"The Baltimore News American quoted Hoffberger Thursday as saying he was deciding the terms for the Orioles, who were eliminated from the American League Playoffs Wednesday by the Oakland A's.

"I don't understand," Hoffberger said wearily. "It's been the same thing I've been saying for a year. The world is in a turmoil. There's practically a recession and the headlines are about a baseball team."

"As a businessman and the chairman of the board of the Orioles baseball club," he went

Noll won't pick quarterback

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Pittsburgh Steelers coach Chuck Noll is getting tired of being asked who will start at quarterback Sunday when the team plays the Chiefs at Kansas City.

"I don't know what I'm going to do or when I'll make the decision. And I don't want to talk about it," he said Thursday.

Joe Gilliam started at quarterback and played nearly the entire 60 minutes in all the Steeler games this far, but Noll has repeatedly declined to say whether Gilliam or Terry Bradshaw, the team's No. 1 quarterback the past four seasons, would start against Kansas City.

All members of the Steeler squad, including No. 3 quarterback Terry Hanratty, worked out Thursday, and only Hanratty was regarded as questionable for the contest.

Hanratty pulled a calf muscle in Wednesday's practice.

on. "I'm constantly thinking about terms, but I have come to no firm figures."

The Orioles have drawn poorly for some time. This year the team drew 962,000 fans, 3,000 more than last year, but the total was due only to the Birds' torrid September drive to the American League East championship when home attendance averaged 17,000 a game.

Hoffberger, whose family-owned National Brewing Co. owns a controlling interest in the Orioles, said "it hurts the company (National Brewing) when the Orioles continue to sustain losses or only make modest profits."

"Maybe I'm just a lousy salesman," he said. "I've tried to draw the fans and I can't."

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Think very carefully if you want to solve that problem at home ideally. Avoid one tonight who is trying to horn in on your territory.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make appointments with those who can help you become more productive and efficient at your daily routines. Sociable p.m.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Show you are practical today and come out of that dream world you have been drifting into for some time and you get much done.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Improve appearance, then show more affection to loved ones. Group affair brings fine benefits, even if only on cultural level.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Find out your true position with associates and listen attentively to their ideas for greater success. Reach better understanding with one who opposes you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be willing to listen to what others have to say, particularly the elders, and will then have the know-how to build a fine structure to his or her life, giving attention to every detail of whatever is being worked out. A fine, orderly mind here and any profession requiring neatness, precision is excellent, especially in laboratories of all kinds, or in business of the highest order.

What's What

L. M. Boyd

It's the pseudo suicide, who doesn't really intend to jump, that's most likely to climb the cables of the Golden Gate Bridge and then just wait up there for a while in the wind. The actual suicide, who really means to self-destruct, is apt to turn suddenly without any forewarning and simply jump over the waist-high railing. This came to light during debate as to whether guards along the bridge could prevent such deaths. No way, said the San Francisco scholars who studied the records. It's said no place else in the western world is the site of more suicides.

Q. "WHAT'S the difference between a "wiener" and a frankfurter?"
A. Technically, a wiener is stuffed in a sheep casing, a frankfurter in a hog casing. Don't believe the makers all stick to that anymore, however.

MCKINLEY
 Am asked to name the first U. S. president who ever rode in a car. William McKinley, of course, was no pleasure jaunt. The vehicle was an electric ambulance. It carried McKinley off to the hospital after an assassin shot him in 1901 at Buffalo, N.Y.

MAYBE THIS is just confirmation of the obvious, don't know. But it's said the majority of us eat breakfast at 7 a.m., lunch at 12 noon, dinner at 6 p.m. On the dot. That's too punctual. You're to go along with old James I. Walker who said, "If you're there before it's over, you're on time."

THE HARD FACTS
 The men mayor outnumber the lady mayors in this country by 617 to one now. NOBODY KNOWS why the Norway rat is so called. It came out of Asia... YOU KNOW that honeys are sold by the pound, don't you? There are about 5,000 of same in a pound, incidentally... THAT WORD "personality" comes from the Latin "persona" meaning "mask"... TWO OUT OF THREE men will order a shrimp cocktail. Two out of three women, a fruit cocktail.

WOULD TAKE more than a million fireflies to produce the light of a 60-watt bulb.

TO GO ON "relief" during the Depression of the 1930s was a matter of great embarrassment to numerous citizens. But that attitude changed at just about the time the word was replaced by "welfare." I don't quite know why, exactly. "Relief" suggests a temporary envelope to escape misfortune. That's not so bad. But "welfare" seems to suggest a permanent package.

MAJOR HOOPLE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market rally which lifted the Dow Jones Industrial average more than 45 points in two sessions, got a further lift Friday when First National City Bank dropped its prime rate.

After momentary uncertainty, the Dow shot up more than 2 points as word hit the tickers that Citicorp had cut its prime rate, that charged top-rated business borrowers, another .1 point to 11 1/2 percent.

Easing of interest rates has been a factor in recent market strength.

Shortly after the opening the Dow was up 2 1/8 at 650.77, with advancing leaders declines, 544 to 527, among the 1,277 issues crossing the tape.

Trading was active.

Analysis still had mixed views on the question of whether the market has reached a bottom in the recent decline since August.

The advance so far this week has been broad, but some observers feel there are possible weaknesses in the industrial issues which could take averages lower in the near future.

Man ends 23 year role as fugitive from army

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI)—Crippled in his teens, James L. Ward hobbled from job to job through 50 states and 23 years, always looking back for the federal agent he knew would someday arrest him.

In San Antonio, Tex., several days ago, Ward went to San Fernando Cemetery to see his father's grave. Beside it was a tombstone with his own name on it.

"Ward knew it was time to end his days as a federal fugitive, a role he began by failing to register for the Korean War draft.

"I tell you it's something else," he said Wednesday. "It's the first time I've been able to step outside."

He had just surrendered to federal marshals who confirmed they were in longer interested in prosecuting him.

By his own account, Ward, 41, held 693 jobs during his days on the run and he had the payroll stubs to prove it.

He was in an Oklahoma City hospital when he turned 18 and faced Selective Service registration. But he had been injured in separate auto and motorcycle accidents in 1952.

"I was at Crippled Children's Hospital," he said. "I was supposed to register for the draft and my man went by the draft board and told them when I got out she'd would bring me to register."

His sister Dorothy drove him to the draft board office a few months later. He was in a wheelchair and the staff had to go downstairs to talk to him.

"They took one look at him, one look at his legs and told him he would never have to register again," she said. "That was the beginning of it—a misunderstanding."

Ward said he never reported for a physical.

"The people up there just say my legs," he said. "They knew all about it. I just didn't go. My card went."

Ward said he left and worked across the United States, mostly in Ohio.

"When I came back a year later my mother told me the FBI had a stack of warrants for my arrest, enough to put me away for 20 years, and I had better leave town."

"All I had was a bus ticket to St. Joe, Mo., and $5 in me," he said. "I was crippled and couldn't work. I've got my hips cut completely out and replaced with steel and grafts."

Agents followed him for years, checking with relatives to see if they had heard from him. He said he was afraid to call home and lost contact with relatives.

"I probably know half the people in the United States," he said. "I've worked in every town."

He said he went to Texas to see his father's grave and "couldn't believe my eyes."

"There were three tombstones, my father, Vinnie, my brother, Lewis, and the other one was me, James L. Ward. I don't know if there's a body in it or not. Maybe it's just a memorial."

Chess called special

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)— "To be good at anything," says Walter Browne, "you have to practice."

Browne, 25, United States chess champion, tries to put in six to eight hours a day refining the creative touches of the game.

"It's an art, a science," said him, "and it's a special." Browne, who lives in a small Berkeley penthouse, has a Berkeley mathematics, logic and above all creative ideas and beauty.

The trim, mustached Browne is one of the leading challengers to the world title now held by American Bobby Fischer, and is considered a drawing card at the tournaments he attends.

Browne said he remembers when he had to burn around Europe in his attempts to get invited to major tournaments. Now, tourney organizers send him air fare and first-class accommodations.

"You can express yourself in chess," said Browne. "Some players are introverts and some extroverts. It comes out in their games."

Browne said that he and world champ Fischer were friends who have similar backgrounds. Both dropped out of New York's Erasmus High at age 18 and both have a contempt for higher education.

"Teachers are stupid," said Browne. "School is for the masses, not for geniuses."

He said Fischer "puts all his energy into chess. No women; no time. He is studying all the time."

Browne's day begins with tennis and after lunch he studies chess strategems. After dinner he practices a little more and then usually watches some television before retiring.

He added "Now that the FBI has made a case, everyone at the Eagle Hills Golf Course is circling saying it wasn't their fault... I am tired of hearing 'maybe,' or the words 'we should study it.' # Study scheduled on lead poisoning in Kellogg

Hearing Tuesday

BOISE, UPI — After 14 hours of negotiations, the Bunker Hill Co. and the Department of Health and Welfare announced plans Thursday for a $250,000 study of long range effects of lead poisoning in Kellogg.

At the same time, they said an immediate survey will be started on a family by family basis in the smelter area to determine which children are failing to respond to treatment so they can be removed at least temporarily from their harmful environment.

In agreeing to cooperate on both long and short range approaches to the lead poisoning problem, the company and the state did so with full knowledge the federal government is ready to step in and act if they do not.

Besides efforts to cope with the lead problem, the officials and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency also have discussed plans for controlling emissions of sulfur dioxide in the area as well—treating this as a separate problem.

Dr. James A. Bax, director of health and welfare, said his office and Bunker Hill do not agree on some of the sulfur dioxide data and more information is being sought. He said he hoped to obtain it by Friday for presentation later at his board's October meeting in Boise.

Besides the family by family blood lead level survey in the smelter area, Bax said, other short term actions will include special in-plant laundering of clothing, changes of clothing by workers before they return home, graveling of dirt areas to keep dust down and purchase of homes within a half mile of the smelter where people are living.

He said Bunker Hill also will tighten its "baghouse," a vacuum-like means of filtering out particulate matter, and fencing the blast furnace.

For the long run, Bax said, it may be necessary to erect a new baghouse at the smelter.

Although the health and welfare teams making the family by family survey on blood levels will concentrate initially on homes within one mile of the smelter at Smelterville, state officials said they also will look into homes where known high blood levels have been reported.

Bax said that in the long-range study the state and the company hope to have some answers to some of the problems by next spring in hopes of preventing further lead poisoning in the area when the dust starts blowing next summer.

Partial results of studies by the Health and Welfare Department indicate children living in the area of the smelter have unusually high levels of lead in their blood.

"We were caught quite unaware by the problem," Bunker Hill President James Halley told the news conference.

He said about 2½ years ago the company asked the medical community to make a survey to determine if it might have such a problem and received a negative report afterward. However, he said that study was conducted in the spring—now determined to be the wrong time of year.

"We agree there is a grave situation," Halley said. "It is our intention today to cooperate with the state to solve the problem and keep the smelter in operation and we think that's possible."

Bunker Hill's participation in the long-range study will be primarily a financial one.

BOISE (UPI) — Rules and regulations which will guide the Department of Water Resources will be aired at a hearing where next Tuesday, it was announced today.

The hearing will be conducted by the State Water Resource Board.

Board members also will consider the Raft River geothermal area withdrawal, American Falls dam replacement, Lake Coeur d'Alene construction permit program, the Indian Hills project, federal-state water rights, Hells Canyon National Recreation Area legislation, Swan Falls-Guffey, status of the state water planning program, the Snake River plain pilot recharge project and several loan applications.

Gem fire dangers still high

By United Press International

Unusually dry weather conditions are keeping forest fire danger high and in some cases extreme throughout eastern Washington and northern Idaho, and the U.S. Forest Service says some closures to hunting and other activities may be forthcoming.

But Forest Service officials say a wait-and-see attitude is being taken at this time and the situation would have to get somewhat worse before any drastic action such as full closures would be taken.

The National Weather Service reports the usual early fall rain hasn't materialized in the region, which has been in the grip of a continuing dry spell since last spring.

Only .18 inches of rain fell through September, compared to a normal rainfall of about 3.0 inches. No moisture deficit has yet been reported for October.

General hunting season in northern Idaho got underway last weekend and with it a rash of small hunter-caused timber fires.

The Idaho Panhandle National Forest said 24 small fires, none bigger than an acre, were reported since Saturday, prompting forest officials to begin discussing full closures of some areas.

The Nezperce National Forest said there were eight man-caused fires since the weekend, all blamed on hunters. A restriction on all types of burning has been imposed now in the Nezperce.

A spokesman said if the small fires do not stop and the dry spell ease, some full closures will be made.

The spokesman said the Nezperce, like most other forests, are short of manpower now and a major fire could erupt.

Officials of the Colville National Forest in northwestern Washington, meanwhile, say they are depending on the good judgment and cooperation of hunters.

Officials of that forest had considered restricting use of campfires and requiring campers to get permits, but decided against that course of action earlier this week.

Fire danger in the Colville, as in the Okanogan and Wenatchee forests, is reported as high to very high at present.

Rumor denied

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. Cecil D. Andrus today denied a rumor he had disqualified one of three nominees for appointment to the Seventh Judicial District bench because of his color.

"A man's color has nothing to do with it," Andrus said. "Anyone that knows me knows that is and always has been the case."

One of the three nominees to fill the position vacated by the resignation of Judge Henry T. Martin, became of ill health, is Reginald Reeves, an Idaho Falls attorney who is black.

The other two nominees are Reynolds George of High and Jack Voshell of Idaho Falls.
