Cheerleader hopeful Lisa Van Holland became flustered during her cheering routine but kept smiling and went on to be selected for the College of Southern Idaho cheerleading squad Wednesday at the CSI gymnasium. Eleven girls were judged in categories such as enthusiasm, weight, height of jumps and, of course, smiles. Six girls were selected for the squad.

Hospital rejoices
Beds issue was minor compared to overall plan

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The decision to approve Magic Valley Memorial Hospital's renovation program was greeted Wednesday with pleasure and relief by hospital staff.

"Several doctors walked in today with huge smiles on their faces and said 'Congratulations,'" said Steve Fisher, MVMH assistant administrator, Wednesday.

On Tuesday night, Idaho Department of Health and Welfare Director Cecil Andrus signed a letter informing the hospital of the state's approval of the program.

Earlier that day, MVMH officials submitted an addendum to the program to the state.

Fisher called the issue of beds a "minor concern" compared with the overall scope of the plan to add a new wing and renovate existing facilities. He said the $28-million project will proceed as scheduled with no additional costs.

Tentative plans call for groundbreaking sometime this winter or spring, with construction to take an estimated three years.

The Idaho Health Systems Agency had approved the plan, which added 45 beds to the hospital, saying it created a surplus of area beds that could increase health costs. MVMH officials maintained the beds would be needed by the year 2000 and would save future patients money by building them now rather than in 15 years.

However, Klein sided with HSA on the bed issue, saying that although renovation was needed, "I felt there were too many beds."

In his letter, Klein stated: "The population projections by the State Health Planning and Development Agency estimates a bed need of approximately 202 beds in the (Twin Falls) area by the year 1995."

The addition of 45 beds to the hospital's present 145, plus 37 beds at the Twin Falls Clinic, would have resulted in 227 beds in this area, Klein noted.

Two of Klein's staff visited the hospital last week and found "the functional capability of the hospital and the quality of patient care were compared considerably by existing conditions," Klein's letter stated.

"The on-site inspection revealed an overall state of disrepair with medical equipment and supplies cluttered in the halls, inadequate heating and cooling and ventilation capabilities," as well as significant fire and life safety code violations.

The addendum submitted Tuesday called for eliminating 20 beds on the fifth floor, and leaving that floor vacant pending future needs. It also eliminated five beds on the third floor. Otherwise, the architectural plans will remain unchanged. MVMH officials estimated the amended plan will save $315,000 in construction costs.

Questions had been raised whether Klein could legally accept an amended proposal rather than either approve or disapprove the original proposal. HSA Executive Administrator Mary Ann Saunders said the action was "technically against" general regulations, but HSA spokesman Gary Richardson said HSA staffers checked with regional and national Health and Human Services offices to ensure an amended proposal could be approved.

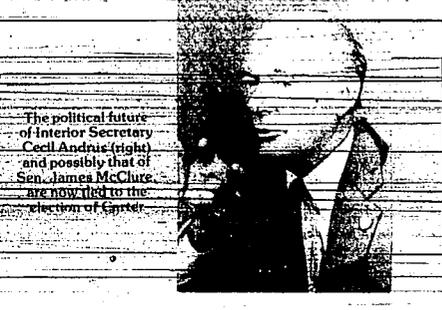

If the plan had not been approved, MVMH officials would have had to argue and fight under new Certificate of Need regulations that took effect Wednesday.

No vote until after election
Synfuel nomination blocked

By DAVID MORRISSEY
 Times-News writer

WASHINGTON — The Senate adjourned Wednesday without confirming President Carter's nominees to the Synthetic Fuels Corporation board.

That leaves the political future of Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus, a former Idaho governor, and possibly the political future of Sen. James McClure, a Republican Senator from Idaho, tied to the election chances of President Carter.

The political future of Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus (right) and possibly that of Sen. James McClure, are tied to the election of Carter.

Andrus was one of six persons nominated by the president to serve on the new corporation's board of directors. It confirmed by the Senate, Andrus would serve a four-year term on that board.

Several sources told the Times-News Wednesday that Andrus will have little difficulty gaining Senate confirmation to his post, if Carter wins a second term.

"But it's a whole new ballgame," one said, if Carter is defeated by Republican Ronald Reagan.

In the past, Reagan has been critical of the Synthetic Fuels Corporation, saying it would inject the federal government into energy areas that could be best settled by private industry.

Reagan also has criticized Andrus, charging the Idaho Democrat tilts toward environmental interests at the expense of legitimate developmental concerns.

Senate Democrats said Wednesday that in the event of a Republican victory, they might still try to force confirmation of Carter's nominees in a "lame-duck" session, held after the election but before Reagan takes office.

Wednesday's failure to confirm the nominees is a political setback, on just shy of what it cost to make the moon. If, in 1981, Congress is satisfied with the corporation's track record the first seven years, another $68 billion will be devoted to the same task.

Carter's hopes that his six-member board would be confirmed by the Senate this week were quickly dashed by Republican senators.

"The White House is quite simply trying to force the Senate to approve all six positions before the election, even when Carter might lose that election," Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore, a leader in opposition to the Carter nominations, told the Times-News. "We're not going to stand for it. We're not going to have this shoved down our throats."

Hatfield said the Republicans had offered Carter a compromise, under which the president could appoint the director of the new corporation, and the three members of the board who would have the shortest terms of office. (Board members will have staggered terms of one, two, three, four, five or six years.)

One of those three members would have to be a Republican, Hatfield said.

The three members with the longer terms would be appointed and confirmed after the election.

For a variety of reasons, that compromise failed to gain Senate approval. Hatfield said it was not possible a lame-duck Congress will consider the nominees.

Hatfield wouldn't say how he would vote on Andrus' confirmation, if such a vote occurs. But he did say he enjoys a "relatively friendly relationship" with the Interior Secretary.

If Andrus does come before the Senate for confirmation, the final vote could have had to be a close one. Politics, it could also be important in McClure's career.

McClure told the Times-News Wednesday he was aware of rumors that Andrus might use the Syn-Fuels post as a political "stepping stone" to run against him in 1984, when Andrus' term on the board would end.

"I can't shut that out of my mind," McClure said. "I don't want to get involved in mortal terror of it either."

McClure said, however, his vote on Andrus wouldn't be based on partisan politics. "It all depends on the balance of the board. You don't just look at one person and say you will vote for or against him. If there is a balance between environment and development interests then I will vote for him."

Bill flown to campaigning Carter
12 hours late, fed funded

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter signed an emergency spending bill Wednesday that allows the government to continue operations until after the Nov. 4 elections.

The measure was approved by Congress earlier Wednesday and flown to Carter, who was campaigning in Michigan.

The Senate was expected to finish work Wednesday or Thursday. The House was to remain in session until Thursday so it can vote on whether to expel Rep. Michael Myers, D-Pa., who was convicted in the Abscam bribery scandal.

When Congress returns to work Nov. 12, a number of members will be lame ducks, but they nevertheless will be asked to vote on important legislation.

The temporary government spending bill is good only until Dec. 15. It was delayed because of a fight over the crucial spending legislation.

But it was not approved until 12 hours after the midnight deadline, when fiscal 1980 ended and money for government operations came to a halt.

That posed a problem because the Justice Department ruled earlier this year that federal employees cannot work in an agency which runs out of money for longer than one day unless life or property is at stake.

While this was not the first time Congress failed to approve government funds by the deadline, it is the first time the entire government's operations were threatened in light of the attorney general's April 25 ruling.

Congress got into the situation by failing to approve regular spending bills for fiscal 1981 earlier this session. So it had to draw up an emergency measure to keep government functioning and the abortion issue was tacked on.

By late Tuesday, members of a House-Senate conference committee had agreed to continue current abortion guidelines that allow victims of rape and incest, and women whose lives are at stake, to receive federal money for abortions.

In addition, each state would be allowed to set its own rules for abortion funding. The Senate considered that a major compromise, since those state rules may be much more restrictive than federal law.

House conferees, who wanted to eliminate assistance for rape and incest victims altogether, agreed to the compromise but only if women report the crime within 48 hours compared to the current 90-day requirement.

With that provision, the House approved the legislation 282-100 an hour after midnight Wednesday and sent it to the Senate for final approval.

But the Senate would not accept the 48-hour provision, opting for 72 hours instead, and sent the measure back to the House, which, having adjourned for the night, approved the bill Wednesday and sent it to Carter.

Workers didn't worry too much about mixup

WASHINGTON (UPI) — When the new fiscal year began Wednesday, many government agencies were off-kilter, left without money, but regions of federal workers showed up at their jobs anyway, confident the mix-up crisis would pass.

It did.

The 1981 was 12 hours under way before the House gave final congressional approval to an emergency measure keeping money for basic government operations flowing.

Christopher Meyer, a federal copywriter-attorney, said the government should have been closed for the day.

"That would have put a little pressure on those boxes (members of Congress)," he said.

"It's a classic," said a senior labor relations specialist. "Only in America on the president's birthday could Carter come out and tell federal employees, 'Here, some good news and some bad news.'"

"The good news is you're getting a 9.1 percent pay raise. The bad news is you're on furlough. Indefinitely without pay."

Switch
Symms resigns Ag committee so Hansen can have seniority

States News Service

WASHINGTON — Idaho's congressman played musical chairs Wednesday to give one a seniority jump on incoming congressmen.

Rep. Steve Symms stepped down from his seat on the House Agriculture Committee making room for Rep. George Hansen to fill the slot.

The whole deal was announced as a fait accompli Wednesday morning by the House Republican leadership.

The full House then went on to ratify Hansen's appointment.

The switch, in effect, is a well-executed plan to get Hansen a higher ranking position on the committee than if he had waited until next year to make the move.

Hansen, who served on the committee between 1964 and 1968 and then went on to serve as deputy undersecretary of Agriculture, said he has been looking for the Agriculture slot ever since Symms announced his decision to leave. Hansen was seated to run against Sen. Frank Church.

The fact that the move came one day before the House is scheduled to recess and hit the campaign trail is more than just coincidence, according to Symms' sources.

At this point in the congressional session, the Agriculture committee has no new bills before it. Hansen said that nothing is being given up by Symms by stepping down since his position there, through the final recess, carries no legislative power.

There are political pluses also.

Both Symms and Hansen are already describing the move as a vivid example of their concern for an interest close to the state. In that position is sure to wash well with Idaho voters.

A Symms aide said that the move will put them in a better position to campaign on their ability to give the state one two punch "in Congress on farm issues. Since Symms is aiming for a Senate Agriculture Committee slot it elected.

At this point, it appears Hansen will give up his seat on the committee, moving to 10th ranking Republican when Congress convenes next January. Five Republican committee members are retiring.

Hansen could move up even more slots if any Republicans ahead of him fall to reelection.

Symms ranked as fourth minority member on the full committee, and top ranking minority member on the Domestic Marketing, Consumer Relations and Nutrition Subcommittee before he stepped down.

To take the position, Hansen is giving up his seat on the House Veterans Affairs Committee. He will remain on the House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee.

Report tells feds East best to bury nuclear waste in WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal consultant recommends that the search for suitable granite formations for a permanent high-level waste dump focus on the Eastern and Great Lakes states, the Energy Department said Wednesday.

Ben McCarty, spokesman for the agency's nuclear programs, said the consultant report simply permits the Energy Department to begin gathering information on the granite formations and seeking cooperation from host states.

"It's not to the point where we're going into any states for field exploration or anything," he said.

"It's a preliminary step," Dames & Moore Consulting Co. of Cincinnati lists the target states as Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia.

"This listing should only be construed as a general illustration of the types of crystalline-intrusive rock areas that are present within the United States," it said. "These areas may or may not be suitable for repository siting, and, therefore, should only be considered as a starting-point for the future evaluation of areas."

Granite is one of several rock types the agency wants to evaluate as a possible medium for the nation's first permanent nuclear waste repository.

It is already examining the suitability of salt domes in Mississippi, Louisiana and East Texas; bedded salt in the Texas Panhandle, east New Mexico and East Utah; tuff or volcanic ash at the Nevada Test Site, and basalt at the federal Hanford, Wash., reservation. In addition, it expects to evaluate shale and clay formations as host rock for the repository.

The Energy Department is following President Carter's new comprehensive national nuclear waste management plan, which requires it to nominate four or five potential sites in various types of rock by December 1985. The range of choices would then be whittled down to the best.

Under the cautious Carter plan, the first permanent waste repository would not be selected, built and licensed before the end of the century.

Despite a Senate-passed bill that would accelerate the timetable and two rival House measures, no atomic waste law is expected to emerge this year.

States mentioned in the report on candidate granite formations to be evaluated were notified by the Energy Department a few days ago.

Puerto Rico doesn't want the refugees

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — Puerto Rico's Environmental Quality Board Wednesday issued a cease-and-desist order against Washington's plan to transfer up to 5,000 Cuban and Haitian refugees to the island.

The move came after Gov. Carlos Romero Barcelo, locked in a bitter battle for re-election, filed a federal suit seeking an injunction against President Carter's plan, which has been greeted by waves of protest in Puerto Rico.

The order said the Navy Seabees, who are erecting tents on the runway of the abandoned Fort Allen base on the south of the island for the refugees, have failed to obtain proper permits from the board, Puerto Rico's pollution control agency.

Romero is closely identified with Carter, whose primary campaign in Puerto Rico Romero organized and won for Carter with little outside help.

Romero's suit charges Carter is dumping refugees on Puerto Rico so he can win his own reelection.

The suit, filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court in San Juan, demands an environmental impact statement be filed before the refugee transfer can take place.

Romero initially defended the refugee transfer as a humanitarian move.

Puerto Rican labor unions and residents near a planned refugee camp also have filed two other federal suits against the transfer.

More than 20 unions and professional organizations also created an ad-hoc committee Wednesday to fight the refugee transfer.

The plan has sparked protest marches and anti-establishment Popular Democratic Party candidate Rafael Hernandez Colon has charged that it is a sign the federal government is making Puerto Rico "America's garbage dump."

Hernandez, Romero's main opponent in the Nov. 4 race, has sent a telegram to the White House saying the transfer "certainly will assure my election and the defeat of Gov. Romero."

The State Department task force on Cuban and Haitian refugees has not yet announced when or how many have-to-settle refugees will come to Puerto Rico from three camps being phased out in the states.

But spokesmen for the U.S. Navy, preparing Fort Allen in southern Puerto Rico as a new processing center, said they had been told to prepare for 2,000 refugees by Oct. 8 and by 3,000 more before the end of the month.

Critics of the refugee transfer say Puerto Rico, a 100-mile by 35-mile island with 3.3 million residents and a 17.7 percent unemployment rate, can't afford new residents. Puerto Ricans are U.S. citizens but cannot vote for president and pay no federal income tax.

Parents sue for 'wrongful life' of child

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The Pennsylvania Supreme Court was asked Wednesday to allow a couple to sue two doctors in connection with the "wrongful life" of their third daughter, who was born with an inherited crippling disease despite a vasectomy on her father and an abortion on her mother.

Frank and Dorothy Speck of Homestead, Pa., sought permission to sue for damages stemming from the birth of their youngest daughter, Francine, now 5.

The Specks have two older girls, Valerie, 17, and Lee Ann, 13, both of whom suffer from neurofibromatosis, a crippling and often disfiguring disease of the fibrous structures of the nerves.

Afraid that additional children might also have the disease, which Valerie and Lee Ann inherited from him, Speck decided to have a vasectomy. When his wife discovered she was pregnant, she had an abortion, the suit said.

The suit said the vasectomy was performed by Dr. Richard A. Feingold and the abortion by Dr. Henry I. Schwartz.

The suit said that although Schwartz assured Mrs. Speck the abortion procedure was successful, Francine was born prematurely via caesarean section.

Francine's condition is so severe she spends weekdays at the Home for Crippled Children, going home only on weekends, the suit said.

When the Specks' suit was filed in Allegheny County Common Pleas Court, Judge Silvester Silvester dismissed their claims for money damages on the basis that life under any circumstances was better than no life at all.

Feingold's lawyer, David Trushel, told the high court he "could not conceive of how it can be wrong to create a life."

The high court took the case under advisement and was expected to render a decision early next year.

House votes FmHA loans to poor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House voted Wednesday to require that 25 percent of farm ownership and operating loans by the Farmers Home Administration be made to low income persons.

The requirement was included in legislation setting loan ceilings for various Farmers Home Administration loan programs.

The legislation, which passed by voice vote and went to the Senate, sets these ceilings:

• $1.615 billion for real estate loans, including $1.5 billion for farm ownership loans.

• $1.2 billion for farm operating loans.

• $1 billion for water and sewer facility loans.

• $500 million for community facility loans.

• $1.5 billion for business and industrial loans.

At least 25 percent of the farm ownership and operating loans must go to limited resource low income persons.

The legislation also increases the size of community-eligible for community facility loans from 10,000 to 20,000 population.

Boost in Medicare deductible announced

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The deductible for Medicare hospital insurance will increase more than 13 percent next year keep up with rising hospital costs, the Department of Health and Human Services announced Wednesday.

The department said the deductible for the 26.1 million people covered by hospital insurance under the Medicare program will increase from $180 to $204 Jan. 1.

From the 61st day through the 90th day of hospitalization, the patient's share will increase from $45 to $51 a day. For stays beyond 90 days, Medicare patients' cost will go up from $90 to $102 a day.

The department noted that the rise in Medicare deductible also increases the amount of co-insurance Medicare beneficiaries must pay if they remain in the hospital for more than 60 days during 1981.

The deductible is roughly equivalent to the average cost of one day in the hospital.

Carter signs chemical, nuclear dump cleanup

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (UPI) — President Carter, mixing politics with work in New York, Wednesday signed into law measures to clean up a major nuclear waste dump and relocate families from the Love Canal chemical dump.

Carter, joined by Gov. Hugh Carey, signed a $20 million agreement authorizing the permanent relocation of 1,000 families from the $20 million chemical dump neighborhood of Niagara Falls.

He also signed the West Valley Demonstration Project Act authorizing the cleanup of the West Valley Nuclear Services Center in Cattaraugus County.

The Love Canal agreement releases a $7.5 million federal grant, a $7.5 million federal loan and $5 million in state funds to purchase the homes of families wishing to leave the canal area and to rehabilitate the neighborhood.

Carter declared the Love Canal a federal emergency area last May, and called for temporary relocation and medical and environmental studies to determine the health threat posed by the landfill.

Transportation Commissioner William Hennessy said it's a good agreement. It's very clean and provides us with the money and flexibility to purchase houses without a lot of red tape.

The West Valley measure allocates $200 million for the solidification of high-level liquid nuclear wastes currently stored in underground steel tanks at the closed plant. The wastes are residues from the reprocessing of spent nuclear fuel.

Defense rests in 2nd Abscam trial

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lawyers for John Stowe, Rep. John Jenrette's co-defendant in the Abscam trial, Wednesday rested their case, calling Stowe to testify on his role in an alleged $50,000 payoff for the congressman.

Murray Janus, lawyer for the former Myrtle Beach, S.C., and Richmond, Va., businessman, said a "tactical decision" had been made not to put Stowe on the witness stand.

Jenrette, a South Carolina Democrat, and Stowe are on trial for conspiring to accept $100,000 in exchange for introducing a private immigration bill for a fictitious Arab sheik.

Jenrette testified earlier in this week that Stowe gave him $10,000 on Dec. 6 as a loan, and he had no intention of introducing special legislation for the fictitious foreigner.

In a taped telephone conversation played at the trial, Stowe told an FBI informant that Jenrette "gave him a $10,000 cut of the money and Jenrette, Janus said Stowe would have testified that he got only $10,000, but now, Janus said, "Stowe has put all his eggs in one basket."

Outside the courtroom, a reporter asked Jenrette what his relationship was with Stowe now.

"As far as it can be from now on," Jenrette replied.

As the trial of the two men entered its fifth week, defense lawyers for both Stowe and Jenrette officially rested their case.

The government was expected to call half dozen witnesses to rebut the defense case.

Justice sues RCA for fake import claims

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The Justice Department sued RCA for $2 million Wednesday, charging the electronics giant with importing television sets containing foreign-made parts and falsely declaring the parts had been made in the United States.

U.S. Attorney Virginia Dill McCarty said the suit was filed in Indianapolis, where RCA has a major television manufacturing plant, on the last day before the statute of limitations expired in the case.

She said suit was brought at the request of the U.S. Customs Department, which uncovered the alleged wrongdoing in a suit of RCA import documents for the years 1970-74.

The civil suit alleges negligence and gross negligence in filling out customs documents. It seeks $2,294,642 in damages or the statutory figure of four times the amount of duty which Customs believes was owed and avoided by RCA.

Mrs. McCarty said the Customs Department states that it was deprived of $964,059 in tariff duty, and believes it also should have been paid another $607,101, for a total of $1,571,160.

U.S. manufacturers often make parts domestically and ship them abroad to be assembled. They may claim exemption from customs duty when the parts are reimported as part of a finished product such as a television set. They may not claim exemption on any parts made abroad. "What we're alleging is they falsified their documents and showed parts made in the U.S. which were not," Mrs. McCarty said.

He did a number, didn't he?

Rep. James Weaver, D-Ore., is a pretty slick politician.

Singhandedly Monday he succeeded in torpedoing House action on the Northwest Power Bill, putting off any possible action now until the lame-duck session after the election.

The bill has widespread support, including that of Rep. Steve Symms. It has won praise as an effective solution to meeting a projected electrical power shortage in the region.

But Weaver, and a couple of his Oregon colleagues, have condemned the bill because they say it guarantees a dependence on nuclear power.

Now everyone is entitled to his opinion; but Weaver looked pretty stupid in a television interview following Monday's successful stall.

He told the reporter that he would rather have a substitute bill he wrote replace the version now up for a vote.

But he asserted, his colleagues in the House haven't had time to read it before voting and thus he mounted a one-man filibuster.

The reporter persisted. Isn't this bill, the reporter asked, the same version Weaver authored three years ago? And if so, how could Weaver claim no one has had time to read it?

At that point the Oregon Democrat stammered, hemmed and hawed and then finally recanted. His bluff had been called.

Weaver deliberately crippled action on the bill because he doesn't like it. Then he tried to look good by stretching the truth.

As we said at the top, Mr. Weaver is pretty slick.

Isn't that Washington's real problem?

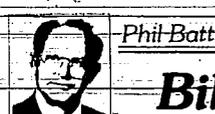

Klein acted in time for MVMH

Although it was an 11th hour decision, we are grateful Milton Klein, director of the Department of Health and Welfare, has allowed the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital expansion and renovation project to continue. Klein late Tuesday night approved an alternative construction concept that will reduce the total number of new beds to be provided, but will keep the rest of the project intact.

But Klein cut it close. His decision came down just 40 minutes before midnight. Had the decision gone beyond Sept. 30, another set of rules would have prevailed over MVMH's project — requiring resubmission of the entire plan.

But that's water under the bridge.

Klein chose the alternative that makes the most sense. Now, let's get on with the project.

Bilingual education?

WILDER — I'm proud of the giant strides this country has made in reducing racial discrimination over the last 20 years.

By a combination of increasing private and public awareness, blatant bigotry has waned considerably.

There are still considerations to be made concerning the provision of equal opportunities. One of the costliest and most controversial subjects concerning equal opportunity these days is that of bilingual education.

A theory exists, which is easily proven, that school kids who are not functional in the English language cannot learn as well as their English-speaking schoolmates when all instruction is given in our primary language.

A Chinese student in San Francisco brought this situation to a head by protesting suing the school district for providing educational opportunities only in English. The court, however, did not prescribe an exclusive remedy. In part, the court said, "Teaching English to the students of Chinese ancestry who do not speak the language is one choice. Giving instruction to this group in Chinese is another. There may be others."

The federal government, which never cares a hoot about costs, has mandated that equal instruction be provided in a student's operating language, whether it be Swahili or Spanish. Few exceptions are allowed, and the paperwork involved in equalizing for a hardship exemption is no more palatable than total compliance. All students must be evaluated, and if they are found wanting a special program must be initiated. Once a student is assigned to a bilingual program he may not be removed for two years.

The final objections to this method are obvious. The necessary teaching personnel, textbooks and other essentials to education are beyond reasonable availability at all. A much more economical method would be to require a child to become functional in English, even if it meant a temporary delay in his scholastic accomplishments.

But the advantages to a single language education go beyond economics. For better or worse, this country has used English as its official language from the time the Bloody British threw in the towel and we became a country. Nearly all the media is geared to English, and job opportunities are scarce, indeed, for those who cannot speak or write it. Practically all cultural and sports performances are geared to English. Ninety-nine percent of reading materials are available only in that language.

To encourage a student to retain a non-English language as his primary source of communication in the United States is to consign him to a permanent disadvantage. It is no equal opportunity. It is an assignment of an unnecessary handicap.

The federal government is again using its time-worn club of withholding federal funds unless full compliance is reached. Of course, every school district has been co-opted into relying on federal funds for part of its existence.

Certainly a child with inferior English capabilities should be provided with interpretive help and an intensive effort to help him become capable of learning in our mother tongue. But to provide instruction in another language in both a waste of money and a disfavor to the student.

Phil E. Batt is Idaho's lieutenant governor.

Comment on diabetes story

Editor, Times-News: Our family has just finished reading the article in Sunday's paper entitled "Shadow of the Needle" and are very upset with the contents of the article and the fear and dread which it may generate in newly-found diabetics and people who might some day be faced with this condition. Our son has diabetes. He also suffered the symptoms as described in the paper — thirst, weight loss, etc., which were not recognized by the family members since we had had no contact with diabetes in the family. He was nine years old in January, 1967. It was confirmed by Dr. Wright that in his condition, he was hospitalized and brought under control. Thanks to Dr. Wright we were instructed on how to live with the condition and he has lived an active, normal and full life. He is now 23 years old, is married and his wife is expecting a child. Dale has his shots and then forgets the condition until reminded by an on-coming insulin reaction. He follows his diet, but he is not as close as he should be at all times, but he can pretty well tell if he has over-stepped. He about gave us all gray hair when he first announced that he was going backpacking. He left for a week. We instructed his friend on how to give the shots if he needed, sent a couple of extra bottles of insulin in case his should get broken and they had a grand and glorious trip. He has never been treated as if he was sick. He has a condition which can be controlled, something we are all very thankful for, and we are not faced with the prospect of an intense, heartbreaking situation where death is just around the corner. There are many, many things that happen to people which are worse than diabetes, things that cannot be controlled and things that cripple and maim the child for which there is no control, cure or relief from pain and misery. Okay, it does change your lifestyle a little bit, however, it has never kept our family from enjoying life, we go camping, hunting, fishing. We just thank God it was not the death sentence which the article in the paper makes it appear to be. I'm not passing judgment, but from the sounds of the eration would be given to Cuba until the President of the United States certified to the Senate that Cuba was not exporting revolutionaries to Africa and the Latin American countries. Once again, Senator Church voiced strong opposition to that amendment. Finally, Senator Byrd tabled the bill because of the strong debate which was occurring in the Committee.

Much has been made in this campaign regarding the seniority of Senator Church and his power in the United States Senate. However, when that power is used contrary to the beliefs and wishes of the Senator's constituency, then that power becomes a negative influence. Idaho is a state populated by good, hard-working patriotic citizens. I cannot believe that the citizens of this State wish to be represented by a United States Senator who consistently uses his influence to obtain legislation favorable to Cuba, while Cuba is exporting revolutionaries throughout the world, or supports the loss of United States jurisdiction over the Panama Canal. I believe it is time for a change. LEONARD EMERSON, Twin Falls

I must answer your letter and let you know that things haven't changed much since they crucified you. The blind are still leading the blind. Many are still searching the scriptures and waiting. It's possible some never understood you when you tried to tell them, that God was a Spirit of Righteousness, that dwelt inside of good people, for the divorce rate is getting higher and higher. A new heaven would surely be a God-send to many; but as you said, the two of them have to go together. Love, Bill

Use of power is contrary

Editor, Times-News: It appears that the seniority of Senator Frank Church is being used in a manner which is contrary to the interests of the citizens of the State of Idaho. Recently, a bill was submitted to Committee, prior to being reported out to the floor of the Senate, which would have given favorable consideration to a bill on territorial limitations recognized by the United States. Senator Helms attached an amendment to that bill to the effect that no favorable considerations would be granted to Cuba until Soviet military forces were removed from Cuba. Senator Church was instrumental in defeating that amendment to the bill. Senator Helms then moved to amend the bill to that no favorable consid-

Hansen, Church back Carter on India uranium sale

WASHINGTON — Both of Idaho's senators and Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, backed the president on the critical issue of whether to block Carter's sale of uranium to India.

Carter won the Senate vote by the narrow margin — 48 to 45 — after losing in the House earlier in the week by a 340-1 margin.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, led Carter's side of debate in the Senate.

Church's action seemed an apparent contradiction of his strong views against proliferation of nuclear weapons. "Give the man credit for having made a hard call," said a Church aide. "He recognized that this is a close call. If we don't provide the uranium, it will run India much closer to the uranium it had been blocked by a unanimous ruling of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission when Carter authorized the sale in June, giving Congress 60 days to block the sale by joint action. Following the sizeable rebuff in the House last week, the Carter Administration lobbied the Senate heavily, with president calling individual senators from Air Force One as he campaigned in the West.

As part of a 1986 cooperative agreement, the U.S. agreed to supply heavy water to India for peaceful purposes. But in 1974, India succeeded in producing weapons grade plutonium and detonated a nuclear explosive.

As chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee — among which he was part of a seven-man minority which favored the uranium sale — Church was a vital cog in the administration's strategy.

"Unlike opponents of this export," Church told the Senate, "we do not believe that a decision as important as this one is for overall United States-Indian relations should hang on a single string, the alleged credibility of a stringent U.S. nonproliferation policy." Here he posed the question that set no Nelson for the Congress to rise up and veto the president's decision. It weakens his hand in dealing with the entire situation that confronts us in Southwest Asia. And for no convincing purpose.

The vote in the Senate cross-cut partisan and ideological lines. Washington state's senators supported the sale; and Oregon's senators split their votes. Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., opposed the sale; Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., favored it within the Oregon and Idaho delegations. Washington delegations were more along ideological lines.

Washington state's congressmen voted 5 to 2 to back the president. Considering the lopsided 3-to-1 vote against the president in the House, the Washington state delegation's 5 to 2 vote for the administration was remarkable.

In its 5 to 2 split, the Washington delegation's more liberal line members voted in favor of the sale, while its two more liberal and independent-minded members voted against. D-Wash. president. Opposing the sale were Rep. Don Bonker, D-Wash., and Sen. Mike Leary, D-Wash. Backing the sale were Rep. Tom Foley, D-Wash., Rep. Mike McCormack, D-Wash., Rep. Al Swift, D-Wash., Rep. Joel Pritchard, R-Wash., and Rep. Norm Dicks, D-Wash.

Bonker's vote against the president was somewhat surprising. As a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, he has been a staunch supporter of Carter's foreign policy.

In the House, Oregon's more liberal congressmen — Rep. Jim Weaver, D-Ore., and Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore. — voted to block the sale, while more conservative Rep. Bob Duncan, D-Ore., voted in favor of the president's position. Rep. Al Ullman, campaigning in Oregon, did not vote.

Not charity, necessity, McNamara says

Aid to poor nations urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — World Bank President Robert McNamara said Tuesday 800 million persons already living in absolute poverty face even further "appalling deprivation" if the international community slows its development efforts.

President Carter echoed the same theme in his address to the 35th annual joint meeting of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund.

But Tanzania's Finance Minister Amiri H. Jamal bluntly accused both the World Bank and the IMF of not changing with the times and not doing enough for poor nations.

In his last speech to a joint IMF-World Bank session before he retires next June, McNamara called on industrial and oil-producing nations, international organizations and the poor countries themselves to increase their anti-poverty efforts.

Carter told the gathering of finance ministers and other officials from 141 countries, "Peace cannot be assured if hundreds of millions of people are offered no hope of escape from poverty and economic instability."

Jamal, the chairman of the joint session, issued a scathing note in his introductory address, castigating the 1944 Bretton Woods, N.H., charter which created both institutions now needs revision.

Jamal accused the IMF of being "right" in insisting on anti-inflation steps by developing countries which receive its aid, and of "demanding 'incredibly short' periods for repayment."

Carter told the meeting despite have worsened in the past 18 months with their economic growth expected to slow from an average annual 3.1 percent in the 1960s and 2.7 percent in the 1970s to only 1.8 percent in the next five years.

The outlook is particularly grim for 1.1 billion persons who live in the world's 32 poorest countries, he said, with incomes of less than $20 a year.

For 141 million persons living in the low-income countries of sub-Saharan Africa, he said, economic growth is currently projected to be negative for the next five years — minus 0.3 percent per year.

Developing countries, McNamara said, will have to adjust their economies, either by slowing their growth and standards of living further or by increasing their production and their exports.

In the second course, he said, will require greater amounts of private capital and international aid. He said the World Bank, which had planned to increase its aid from $12 billion this year to $20 billion in 1985, now must increase its lending even more.

For wealthy nations, McNamara said, adjusting to higher world oil prices may mean a slower growth in living standards.

"But for the 800 million absolute poor," he said, "such a downward adjustment is a very different matter. For them, downward does not mean inconvenience, but appalling deprivation. They have little margin for austerity. They live at the very edge of survival already."

China joins World Bank to 'learn'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — China, calling itself a "developing country" that wants to learn from other nations made its first public appearance Wednesday as an active member of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund.

Wang Bingqian, China's minister of finance, told the joint annual meeting of the two world organizations his country has made much economic progress, but "ours is still a developing country."

It was the first time the People's Republic of China had attended the joint annual meeting. Both organizations last spring recognized Peking as entitled to seats that had been held by Nationalist China and Taiwan since the end of World War II.

Wang told representatives of 141 other countries attending the meetings that China's economy is making progress. He cited gains in agriculture, light and heavy industry, the quality of goods and wages.

"The output of consumer goods has grown visibly; the market is plentiful and flourishing," he said through a translator.

"However," he said, "there are still a host of problems to be ironed out."

China is not well-off. Its per capita GNP is quite low. Substantial agriculture is still more or less the case. The country's infrastructure is inadequate.

"In industry, production technology and management techniques are still rather backward. We lack trained scientists and managers, and our educational system is still relatively backward."

China is a nation of a billion people. Its membership increases by 45 percent the number of people in the developing world. The World Bank seeks to aid

U.S. ally condemns our Israeli policies

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Pakistani President Zia ul-Haq condemned the United States Wednesday for a policy of "hostile confrontation" with the Arab world and said Washington bore "a heavy responsibility" for Israel's aggressiveness.

Addressing the U.N. General Assembly, Zia said the crisis created by the lack of a solution to the Palestinian problem could "explode at any moment" into "a disaster the magnitude of which has not been seen before."

He said the United States claimed vital economic and strategic interests in the Middle East and North Africa. "Yet it pursues a policy which brings it into hostile confrontation with the Arab world, and extends open-ended support to Israel, which encourages that country to pursue aggressive policies in defiance of world opinion," Zia said.

"The United States bears a heavy responsibility in this respect, since reliance on the might of its superpower enables Israel to flout the verdict of the international community, and to usurp the legitimate rights of the people of Palestine."

Zia said it was time for further action by the world community and they must demand the complete withdrawal of Israeli forces from occupied Arab land, "full national rights to the Palestinian Arabs and the dismantling of Israeli settlements in the occupied lands."

"Let there be no illusion that wounds inflicted on the Palestinians can be healed by the passage of time. Now is the time to act, before it is too late," he said.

Until the Palestinians' demands "are met in full, the prospect of a genuine and lasting peace in the Middle East will elude us, and the world will continue to be haunted by the spectre of a wider conflict in which the interests of those who protect Israel will suffer most," Zia said.

Poles threaten strike

Unions give party 48 hours to live up to deal

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Polish union leaders told the government's top labor negotiator Wednesday they will go ahead with a series of threatened strikes unless the regime gives assurances within 48 hours that it will live up to the terms of the historic Gdansk accord.

Deputy Prime Minister Mieczyslaw Jagielski flew to the Baltic port of Gdansk, where he negotiated the accord setting up the only free labor unions in a Communist state, to ask the union leaders to cancel plans for a series of one-hour strikes Friday.

But union leader Lech Walesa said after the meeting that the strikes would take place unless the government demonstrated a clear commitment to the Gdansk accord before then.

Specifically, Walesa said the unions were demanding that the government pay promised wage increases, end interference in the labor movement and agree to publish "unbiased" information about the new unions in the official media.

In a further show of strength, the unions also are threatening to call a general strike Oct. 20 unless their demands are met.

Jagielski's trip to Gdansk came just as the Warsaw district court registered staff members of the state airline LOT — as the nation's first legally established trade union.

The government attempts to head off the strikes followed a call from Deputy Prime Minister Kazimierz Barcikowski, who went on television Tuesday night to appeal for the strikes to be called off and accuse the unions of jeopardizing the economy.

The strikes Friday were scheduled to start at noon and last an hour at selected plants in all parts of the country.

"Our union treats with seriousness the domestic economic situation and we often have stated the union wants to get out of the crisis," Walesa said in a statement. "But the condition for this is full implementation of the agreement that we have reached."

Jagielski and Walesa signed a historic agreement in Gdansk August ending strikes in the Baltic port area and allowing the formation of free unions and the right to strike, an unprecedented move in a Communist country.

Walesa accuses Barcikowski of contributing to a propaganda campaign against the new unions.

"There have been attempts to conduct negotiations with the old (Communist Party) unions, bypassing the new ones that are the real representatives of the workers," he said.

The brewing confrontation also came amid political uncertainty. The Communist Party's 143-man Central Committee will meet on Saturday to discuss possible leadership changes and new political and economic directions.

U.S. bishops support 'rhythm' birth control

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The leader of the U.S. Roman Catholic Bishops Conference said Wednesday American bishops fully support the church's ban on artificial birth control and are seeking ways to improve compliance with it.

Archbishop John Quinn of San Francisco, Calif., issued the statement to reporters to clarify "misinterpretations" of his speech Monday before the interlocking World Synod of Bishops at the Vatican.

"Neither I nor the American Bishops Conference reject or challenge the doctrine of the Catholic church on contraception," said Quinn, president of the U.S. conference. "Neither I nor the American Bishops Conference are calling for a change in the doctrine of the Catholic church on contraception."

Confusion about the stand of American bishops on the question of birth control arose after Quinn told the meeting of 216 prelates from around the world that methods of teaching of the church's ban on artificial contraceptives needed to be modernized and improved.

Some reports of Quinn's speech suggested he had called for a complete re-examination of the ban, promulgated by the Vatican 12 years ago in the late Pope Paul VI's encyclical "Humanae Vitae" (Of Human Life).

"The intent of my speech was to suggest possible ways of making the church's teaching on contraception better understood and more widely accepted," said the 61-year-old Quinn. "Because of confusing reports about the substance and intent of my speech to the Synod of Bishops Monday I find it necessary to make some clarifications."

In his speech, Quinn estimated that 80 percent of American Roman Catholic women were defying the Vatican ban by using artificial contraceptives.

He also said about 29 percent of American Catholic priests were not convinced by Vatican arguments that artificial contraception was "intrinsically immoral."

The subject of birth control has been a major issue at the synod, whose theme is modern family life.

MAE WEST

Mae West reported improving

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Mae West, voluptuous screen siren of the 1930s, has improved to stable condition. It was announced Wednesday at Good Samaritan hospital where she's recovering from two strokes and a serious fall.

Miss West was admitted to Good Samaritan Aug. 15 after suffering a cerebral stroke in a fall at her home. She suffered a second paralytic stroke while at the hospital.

Hospital — spokeswoman Betty Shepley — said Miss West's condition has stabilized and she will be transferred out of the intensive care unit today if her condition remains stable.

The Brooklyn-born actress who became a movie sex symbol opposite such stars as Cary Grant and W. C. Fields, fell out of bed in her Hollywood apartment last August.

Stanley Kuzgrov, a long-time friend, said her first stroke left her tongue paralyzed.

"She couldn't speak or swallow," Kuzgrov said. "She began talking gibberish — which frightened —" F. Novak, her companion for the past 20 years, who took her to the hospital Aug. 11.

"Mae was able to walk all right, watch TV and was being fed through tubes. She was showing signs of improvement until about 10 days ago when she suffered a slight second stroke which left her right side paralyzed and she was put into intensive care."

"Her condition was deteriorating until today. Now she's in better shape than she was a couple of days ago. There are signs of restoration of movement in her right side."

Miss West's age has long been a matter of debate in the film colony. She claims to be 88, but Dr. Jules Stein, founder of the MGM studio business conglomerate, says when he met Miss West when he was 18 and she was 26. He played violin for her act in Chicago and unsuccessfully tried to date her.

Stein says he is 84 today, which would make Mae West 92 years old.

Miss West made her first movie, "Night After Night," in 1931. She became famous for her sultry dialogue, including her invitation to Cary Grant to "come up and see me sometime" in the movie of the same name.

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Woodie, the canine heroine, is not an actress like her famous canine companions, but Wednesday she was whirled through television studios as "Dog of the Year" — and honored for courage worthy of Lassie.

The 6-year-old collie-shepherd mix jumped off a cliff last year at a park in Cleveland and saved a man's life by pulling him from a stream — nearly losing her own life in the process.

The deed has won her fame and acclaim.

The Quaker Oats and Ken-L Ration Companies named Woodie "Dog of the Year" and awarded her a gold medal and a gold-plated collar and leash.

The dog's mistress, Anne Knitter, 28, of Cleveland, got a $1,000 savings bond.

Good samaritan finds cash

CHAMPION, Mich. (UPI) — Peter Lappi doesn't understand what all the fuss is about.

It was only "natural," he said Wednesday, to turn over the little leather pouch he found on the ground outside a country store near Champion in the western Upper Peninsula.

Inside the pouch was $7,200 in cash — $4,700 in $100 bills and $2,500 in $50 bills — collected over five years by a woman who is putting her two children through college.

Lappi gave it to the clerk inside Koski Korbers. The clerk called her boss, Bill Koski. He put the pouch in a safe overnight, waiting for the owner to call. That was Monday night. Nobody called.

Tuesday morning, Koski called the state police post at Ishpeming. His call came less than five minutes after the distraught woman called the post to report the missing cash.

The woman and her money were reunited, and Lappi's hero to her, the store owner and the state police.

"It was a natural reaction" to turn the money over, Lappi said. But he conceded he has "a certain feeling of satisfaction" that he did the right thing.

Not all his friends agree.

"Well, it's running 50-50 between those who would have kept it and those who would have returned it," he said.

"A lot of his friends said he was nuts," said Lappi's mother. "They said they'd be checking out the girls in California."

Carl Hayden: newsman of the West

Carl Hayden, who worked for the Salt Lake Tribune for 35 years, has home near Hagerman

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

JACKPOT, NEV. — Cuba Dictator Fidel Castro is responsible for keeping Carl Hayden from a Pulitzer prize.

The veteran Idaho newsman was nominated for his coverage of the earthquake near Yellowstone Park in 1959, but he was edged out of the claim to fame by a picture showing an execution in Cuba. The fact that the picture had to be smuggled out of Cuba was obviously a determining factor in the decision, he believes, and Hayden, with characteristic dry humor, said he has often contemplated "going to Cuba" to enlighten Castro on his unwanted influence.

Hayden spent 17 consecutive days and nights in a West Yellowstone cabin while covering the natural disaster, reaching the site while the earth was still shaking and his temporary home kept "buckling."

He had both the first personal account of the disaster sent worldwide and the first ground pictures of the quake, which included part of the Madison River canyon and was one of the major natural disasters in the Western U.S.

Covering the quake with distinction was probably the highlight of his newspaper career which has been as colorful as it is long.

He recalls with a glint in his eye the time he created years ago with a story about Ezra Pound, the Hailey-born poet whose career has been tainted with charges of disloyalty to the United States and mental illness.

At the time Pound was being confined in this country, Hayden's story was given big play in the Spokane paper's Sunday magazine after his editors at the Salt Lake Tribune, where he worked for 35 years, "were afraid to touch it."

While running a risk of losing his job for sending the article to another publication, Hayden was vindicated by the results. Fellow poet Ernest Hemingway, upon reading it, felt called upon to make the statement that, "This was a good year to release poets."

Hayden believes it was more than a coincidence that Pound was subsequently released and sent back to Italy.

After heading the Tribune's bureau in Idaho Falls for many years, he spent his last years in the fourth estate traveling throughout the Intermountain West as a roving feature writer.

"For years I was in a different motel 365 nights a year, and maybe drove 500 miles a day," Hayden said, as part of getting special interest stories in six Western states, with occasional jaunts into Canada and Mexico.

"Then came the day when the Tribune said, 'We want you to come in and cover the Wasatch from the Archibutee pulling in all their correspondents.'"

But a job with office hours at a desk was not for the hardy newsman so he took early retirement.

"I figured now I'd have time to do all the reading I had always wanted to," he said, so he "refused" at an old log cabin hidden in the "wildwood" canyon along the Malad River near Hagerman.

"I voted myself the mayor of Malad," Hayden quipped.

He had purchased the site earlier from the late Archie Teaster, well known artist, who lived in Hagerman for many years and was a close personal friend of Hayden's.

More than a year Hayden had discovered "how quickly you catch up on that backlog of reading" and when offered a part-time job at Jackpot he accepted with alacrity.

Now at 71 he feels a new sense of accomplishment for "having put Jackpot on the map" (literally) as the result of his work publicizing this casino community.

Hayden's family history, equally colorful as his own career, perhaps provided the impetus for the zest and skill with which he has recorded news events for nearly 50 years.

Born in Sattla, Sweden, Jan. 16, 1909, he crossed the stormy Atlantic as a small boy.

"All I can remember is that the boat would rock and the passengers all leaned over the side," he said.

Hayden's father, whose surname was in legend, had made several trips between America and Sweden, finally settling in Omaha after a second marriage in Utah following the death of Carl's mother.

Hayden recalls his father was employed as a coachman for an elite Omaha family. The job included wearing a "stovepipe" hat, striped pants and "claw hammer" coat, complete with a handlebar mustache.

But the immigrant soon discovered that having a foreign name as well as speech was a handicap to getting on his adopted country, so he changed his name.

"He chose Hayden because that was the name of the largest department store in Omaha then," he explained.

Hayden likes to tell that he was "kicked out of both high school and college."

"I was removed unceremoniously from high school in Omaha because of a tuition bill controversy," Hayden said. His parting-of-the-ways-with-the-old University—of—Idaho—southern branch (now Idaho State University) at Pocatello was over the fact he was living in a family dwelling off campus and every out-of-town student then was supposed to live on campus.

"They told me I was no longer eligible as a student," Hayden laughed.

Prior to his short-lived higher education, Hayden's family had moved West, first settling in Rock Springs, Wyo., where his father was naturalized. Hayden said that town's reputation as a tough mining town—already—was well established at that time.

"The tempo there hasn't changed a bit," he said.

The elder Hayden later worked for the railroad as a construction crew foreman bringing the family to Pocatello, His dad also purchased a dryland wheat farm which a brother still operates in southeastern Idaho.

But farming didn't appeal to Hayden. "All I liked about it was mealtime!" so Hayden got his first job as a trainee for the old Pocatello Tribune for $2 a week in 1929.

For this paltry wage he was "proof reader and general flunky" and remembers "getting into a hell"

HEARTLINE: I am a veteran. I have appealed a ruling concerning my benefits from the Veterans Administration. I have been waiting a long time for my hearing. I know there is a backlog of cases, but is there any hope of the VA speeding things up a bit? — W.R.

A cooperative effort to speed service to clients who appeal Veterans Administration decisions on claims is underway between the VA and the veterans service organizations which often represent appellants.

By increasing its hearing docket and reducing written transcription services, the Board of Veterans Appeals has cut in half its response time to claimants seeking formal hearings despite a three-fold caseload jump since 1975.

According to board Chairman

Heartline

Sidney J. Shuman, some 1,900 appellants will have hearings this year before VA's highest review body. Shuman said 82 percent of the appellants will be represented by the benefits expert from a service organization.

The new policy of providing written transcriptions only when requested has reduced the board's administrative burden by 40 percent. Hearing examiners and veterans service officers have agreed in some cases to use tape recordings of the proceedings for their review.

Because of the uncertainty in determining the numbers of appeals that will require hearings, Shuman could not predict how the speed-up will affect future response time. But he said, six months ago the board had a backlog of 500 cases for transcription that has been eliminated. He said the average time between hearing and decision is 54 days.

If a veteran disagrees with a VA field office decision regarding his claim for benefits, the agency provides him with every assistance within its means in obtaining new evidence favorable to the veteran, and in carrying forward his appeal.

The veteran is given a statement of the case with a resume of the pertinent evidence dealing with the claim and a summary of applicable laws and regulations surrounding the case, and the specific reasons for VA's decision. In Fiscal Year 1979, 64,000 claimants were not satisfied with this ruling and after review, about half of them appealed their cases to the board.

Reporting directly to the Administrator of Veterans Affairs, the board, having had no prior contact with VA's regular benefits procedures, is set up to conduct independent investigations of cases it receives.

Last year the board allowed 13 percent of the cases heard, denied 73 percent, and remanded 14 percent to VA regional offices.

California firm is Rolls Royce of pipe organs

By CHARLES HILLINGER
Los Angeles Times

SAN FRANCISCO — In the 102 years of the firm's existence it has manufactured only 85 individual pipe organs.

It is the oldest factory of its kind west of Ohio, the third oldest in America.

Felix F. Schoensteln & Sons is known as the Rolls-Royce of pipe organs.

"My grandfather Felix sailed from Germany in 1882 to install orchestras in San Francisco manufactured by his father's firm in Villigen in the Black Forest," explains Lawrence Schoensteln, 64, fourth generation organ builder.

In 1977 Felix F. Schoensteln with a capital investment of $500 opened his organ company in the city by the Golden Gate. The first Felix F. Schoensteln organ was custom made by St. Mary's Catholic Church in Stockton, Calif.

"Every organ since has been custom made," notes Lawrence Schoensteln, who as the firm's chief organ builder signs each creation on the nameplate that goes with it. There is only one person in an organ company that holds the prestigious title of organ builder.

organ company in its picturesque three-story, salmon-colored factory at 3101 20th St. Three new organs currently are under construction. It takes the company's 12 employees a year to complete one of the musical instruments.

The average price today for a Felix F. Schoensteln organ is $80,000 with the most expensive sold presently for $200,000.

In addition to manufacturing new organs, the firm restores, tunes and services more than 100 organs with some having been maintained by the company continuously for nearly a century.

The firm tunes and services many famous Bay Area organs including the $1 million organ in the San Francisco Civic Auditorium and the organ at the Palace of the Legion of Honor.

The company has been involved in 160 major rebuilding jobs in its history and has installed more than 500 organs on the West Coast and in Hawaii for East Coast and overseas organ builders.

Two years ago on its 100th anniversary the Schoensteln family sold the firm to Jack Bethards, now 38, who had been business manager of the San Francisco Opera and executive director of the Oakland Symphony Orchestra.

"I knew the family wanted out of the business end of the operation for years," explains Bethards, a lifelong and nationally-acclaimed pipe organ authority. "I had my eye on the company for 16 years, hoping the Schoenstelns would sell and the buyer would be me."

"Our uncle Erwin was running the company in 1977. He was 89 then and decided to take life easy and retire. That's when we decided to let Jack Bethards buy the firm," notes Lawrence Schoensteln, Erwin's brother, and shop superintendent.

Lawrence and I got tired of the paper work and wanted to devote full time to organ building.

A fifth generation Schoensteln, Terrence, Lawrence's son, also is involved in the construction end of the business.

Lawrence and Bertram's father, Louis Schoensteln, 85, is the author of a recently published 702-page book "Memoirs of a San Francisco Organ Builder" ($15 Cue publications, San Francisco).

It is an easy-to-read, non-technical book filled with San Francisco stories of the last 102 years and containing a wealth of accounts of the life and times of the organ builder.

Four of Felix F. Schoensteln's sons, Otis, Erwin, Leo and Louis, were active members of the firm for many years. Louis and Erwin despite their age still maintain an active interest in the company.

Organs are fabricated from thousands of hand-crafted parts.

The company manufactures pipe organs in much the same manner as in the early days, employing tools such as knocking-up cups, toe reamers, cut-up knives, scorers and proportional dividers to create pipes, wind chests, bellows, consoles, and cases.

It is painstaking, precision work. Larger organs require as many as 4,000 to 5,000 individual pipes.

Booklet contains much useful information about Medicare

"Medicare at a Glance" is a simple and free booklet that contains a wealth of information on Medicare. As the type on its front cover notes, "You may be eligible for many of Medicare's benefits and you should know what the Medicare laws provide for you."
The cover goes on to explain that "Medicare at a Glance" gives the facts about eligibility and payments under the program — what it does and does not pay for patients in hospitals, in nursing facilities and at home. The booklet opens up to three panels. The first panel tells you all about Medicare hospital insurance and the types of services you are entitled to when hospitalized. For the hospital, in-patient, those services include semi-private accommodations, meals, regular nursing services, drugs, supplies, laboratory and x-ray services, appliances and equipment usually furnished. The booklet goes on to detail time limits, what you must pay, what Medicare pays, eligibility and services not covered under Medicare. If you read on, you will find information on the "lifetime reserve" on post-hospital care centers certified by Medicare, on post-hospital home health care performed by aides and technicians — and — on — psychiatric services. That brings us to the panel on Medicare Medical Insurance. Here we get the story on out-patient services, including services of physicians and surgeons, artificial eyes and limbs, x-ray therapy, physical therapy, speech therapy, diagnostic lab and x-ray services, certain ambulance fees, medical supplies and drugs administered by doctors or nurses that cannot be self-administered. The booklet winds up with a discussion of home health services, including the number of visits that will be paid for and other limitations and costs.

Maintenance Central lets oldsters remain at home

BY LOU COTTIN
 © Newspaper Enterprise Association

Elderly residents of Detroit are receiving vital aid that combines housing repair with social services from an organization called Maintenance Central for Seniors.

Maintenance Central was started in 1976 by Harriette Hunter, a local historic preservationist who found many of the homes she wanted to preserve were owned by older people. She was joined in the project by Linda McBeedy, a social worker familiar with federal programs for seniors. The pair convinced the Detroit-

Wayne County Agency on Aging that a home-repair service would help seniors stay in their own homes.

Under Title III of the Older Americans Act, they received a grant of $49,500. They raised the required 15 percent matching funds, and Maintenance Central started fixing homes.

The repair program works simply enough. On request, a crew of home-repair specialists is sent out to replace a broken window, fix rotting stairs or make any number of other repairs.

While on the spot, the crew also checks for such impairments as a leaking roof, crumbling plaster or unsafe handrails. If the client agrees, the team repairs those problems, too.

Hand cranked phones still ring in Idaho

EDGEWATER, Idaho (UPI) — History cranks on in northern Idaho's Hoodoo Valley — to the tune of four short rings and one long.

Members of the Hoodoo Valley Telephone Co. have not gathered formally for more than a decade. Nevertheless, the lines are open and four families still use old hand-cranked phones to communicate with one another.

It's not easy keeping such an operation going in this modern world. "People steal the phone insulators off the poles because they're antiques," says LaVelle Gornick, secretary of the telephone cooperative for more than 25 years. "We had to get the sheriff to get them to stop."

And the three dry-cell batteries each phone needs to operate are becoming difficult to obtain, she says. The phone lines also are in poor shape, mostly because as membership in the cooperative has declined, fewer people have had to do more work to keep the system operating.

At its peak more than 20 years ago, the cooperative served 27 families in the Idaho Panhandle valley, about three dozen miles northeast of Spokane, Wash.

But it was in the late 1950s that modern technology doomed the venture, Mrs. Gornick says. A major telephone company updated its equipment and would not allow the Hoodoo cooperative to hook in, she says.

"They cut us off," says Mrs. Gornick about General Telephone Co. "We even went into some legal hassle over that." The cooperative prepared to file a lawsuit against GTE after the exclusion — but finally decided it wasn't worth it.

Another time, she says, GTE crews tore down some of the cooperative lines, thinking they belonged to the larger company. However, GTE made amends by replacing the destroyed portion with a new underground line.

The cooperative first was organized with nine members in 1915. The central switchboard was at the general store at Clingstone. The total initial capital expenditure was $413.06.

Each member owned his own phone and was responsible for its repair. Members also were expected to maintain lines running across their property.

Privacy was a main concern of the original cooperators. Article XI of the cooperative's "yellowed" dog-eared charter says: "It shall be deemed very impolite to listen in on the line while other parties are talking." Members guilty of this were and are subject to disconnection.

A general meeting of all members was held annually.

of a fight" with the backshop over how to spell the word strictly.

Eventually he quit and worked as a stringer for the Idaho State Journal where he and Ernie Sittler "put out the whole paper." He worked at the Tribune by day and the Journal, which later purchased the other paper, at night, getting up to the impressive salary of $18 per week.

This sum, he stressed, "was for seven days a week with no vacation."

Then came the Depression and there were no jobs at all. For a year and a half, Hayden said he didn't earn any money.

Then the owner of a string of weeklies at McCammon, Lava Hot Springs and Grace, who was going to serve in the state Legislature, wanted to "borrow" young Hayden.

So the young man was suddenly thrust into the entire spectrum of newspaper production which included learning to operate a linotype without aid of any trained assistance. He wrote all his stories directly onto the large typesetting machine.

The publisher, Hugh Whitney, became ill and died within a short time so Hayden stayed on with the weeklies.

About that time Idaho legalized the sale of liquor so the enterprising editor made up a fact sheet, sent it to advertising agencies throughout the country — offering liquor ads for a reduced rate if they would run them in all three of his weeklies.

"My depression was soon over," Hayden laughed. His advertising became so profitable he was able to found a fourth paper at Downey where he ran a column appropriately called "Volleys From America."

Like all survivors of the colorful heyday of the now vanished individually owned weeklies, Hayden has his share of hilarious stories.

As in all printshops, his had a handy supply of big boxes containing old engraving plates which helped fill space at deadline. One day, writing about an LDS missionary, he reached into the box — and without examining it carefully, slipped an engraving onto the press.

The picture of a large man smoking a big cigar appeared over the name of the missionary. Hayden declined to say what local leader this bigger was.

"Today, you'd be used 500 times for things we got away with then," he said.

Hayden tried to purchase the finishing weeks from the publisher's widow, but she declined to sell.

So when a representative from the Salt Lake Tribune came by seeking a correspondent for the Idaho Falls area — Hayden's free-wheeling days on the weeklies changed into becoming a stringer for the Utah metropolitan paper.

Over his years of roving reporting throughout the West, Hayden has covered all types of big and small events. He claims credit for coining the name "Singing bridge" for the Shoshone street structure over Rock Creek in Twin Falls.

He was waiting for the arrival of the late Lyndon Johnson on a campaign swing into Twin Falls at the edge of the bridge and mentioned "in his report that LBJ crossed over a 'singing bridge.'"

Although he describes his home in the Malad range as surrounded by "scorpions, vicious gnats, snakes, wasps, hornets and skunks," he boasts of having the only Joshua tree in Idaho. He brought the tree from Laurel, Nev.

Hayden tries to get to his restored cabin "with its sitting nettles 15-foot high" as often as he can, which many times, because of the press of his Jackpot employment, is impossible.

But the longtime newspaperman he would rather be too busy than not have enough to do at his rural "estate" nestled under a 500-foot cliff.

He feels satisfied knowing he is still accomplishing and has formulated what he terms "Hayden's law: The more you do the more there is to do."

The satisfaction comes not from the money but from knowing that his adopted community of Jackpot is now reaching self-sufficiency, partially through the efforts of a veteran who has "covered the news" for half a century.

What's what

When women retire, they retain their smarts longer than men

Retired women generally seem to retain their lively intelligence longer than do retired men. Or so contend three New York researchers who followed the lives of 54 men and women through their middle life, their eighties. Maybe so, don't know. To say, sure, you've got to start out smart, naturally. And these researchers didn't explain how they picked the swift folk from the not-so-swift at the outset. I have found that numerous researchers, like numerous sports announcers, are handicapped by the sad fact that offenders they're not as bright as those they interview.

In Hartcombe, England, stands a gravestone on which it's writ: "On the 22nd of June, Jonathan Fiddle went out of tune."

Remember, you can't legally take a hummingbird to Hawaii!

BEAVERS

Q. Do beavers eat fish?
A. Never. Only tender shoots, bark, vegetation.

Q. If a pro golfer fails to earn $8,000 a year, he's dropped from the Professional Golfers Association Tour. How can he regain the right to compete again, if at all?
A. By enrolling in the pro golf school and completing its requirements all over again.

Eating of three regular meals a day only dates back about 100 years, surprisingly. Breakfast at dawn, dinner at dusk, that was the pattern for centuries. Lunch was what everybody could grab sometime during the day. In fact, Dr. Samuel Johnson in 1755 defined lunch as the amount of food a person could hold in one hand. Doses started about 150 years ago to divide the workday into two sections, early morning to noon, early afternoon until dusk. Eventually, that made routine of the bigger midday meal.

JAPANESE BOWS

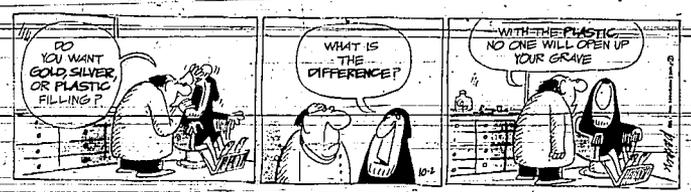

The manner in which a Japanese bows depends on whom the bowing is to, and why. Clerks in Tokyo stores learn the proper bows from videotaped lessons. Bow 1: To a fellow worker. Bow 2: To a customer. Bow 3: To signal goodbye. Different body angle, different intent.

In France, a letter incited by jealousy to kill generally gets a lighter sentence than murders motivated otherwise. This crime of passion exhibits implicitly its own extenuating circumstance, the French believe. The killer must have loved deeply.

Oil issues nudge Dow 7 points higher

NEW YORK (UPI) — Oil issues Wednesday helped the stock market score its second straight large gain despite a boost in interest rates. Trading was active.

The New Jones industrial average went down throughout the day, gained 7.00 points to 839.42. It rallied 10.40 points Tuesday after a three-day slump which trimmed the Dow Jones index by more than 40 points.

The New York Stock Exchange index rose 0.93 to 73.37 and the price of an average share increased 49 cents. Advances topped declines 669 to 635.

among the 1,883 issues traded at 4 p.m. EDT.

Big Board volume came to about 46,720,000 shares compared to the 40,250,000 shares traded Tuesday.

Analysis said oil issues rose on the strength of a report that Iraq may block the crucial Hormuz Strait through which 40 percent of the world's oil passes. Stocks of companies dependent on foreign supplies had earlier recently amid fears the Iran-Iraq war could lead to an oil cutoff.

Bargain hunters were active throughout the day because the market had taken such a beating in the past week that prices were attractive.

However, concern over soaring interest rates disturbed some investors, leading to some fluctuations.

Most of the nation's major banks boosted the prime rate they charge their most reliable corporate customers to 13 1/2 percent from 13 percent Wednesday, and another jump to 14 percent was expected in the near future.

In other news, the government reported new factory orders rose 0.9 percent in August, offsetting some encouragement to investors that the current economic recovery would be gradual enough to avert inflation.

Construction spending also fell in August, down 0.2 percent from a seasonally adjusted $21.9 billion annual rate.

Composite volume of NYSE-listed issues on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. totaled 52,108,148 shares compared with 43,246,520 traded Tuesday.

Congress deregulates railroads

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress Wednesday sent President Carter his No. 1 remaining legislative priority of the year, a bill to deregulate the railroad industry.

Passage of the bill during a post-midnight session completed Carter's effort to deregulate the transportation industry. Airline deregulation legislation was passed last year, and trucking deregulation earlier this year.

The bill would allow railroads to raise rates without federal approval within certain zones of reasonableness, and would remove many other regulatory barriers including the current ban on contract rates with single shippers.

The legislation also includes $1.3 billion in grants and loan guarantees for railroads, much of it aimed for the federally planned Northeast-Midwest railroad, Conrail, and other troubled lines in the East and Midwest.

Funds to protect eastern reefs affected by the shutdown of the Rock Island Railroad and the shutdown of the Western lines of the Milwaukee Road also were included.

Chairman of the Joint American industry ever to be regulated by the federal government, can do almost nothing without the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission, including rates or lower rates, abandon lines or begin new ones.

The bill — a compromise between differing House and Senate versions passed the Senate 61-43 shortly after it had passed the House by voice vote.

It had passed several weeks ago that the bill might die because of opposition from several interests including electric utilities which must rely on railroads to haul coal. But Carter took a personal hand in reviving it, calling the bill his No. 1 legislative priority for the year.

The major provisions of the bill: "Rail rates can be raised 6 percent per year plus the inflation rate for three years, then 4 percent plus inflation thereafter. These rates can be challenged before the ICC unless they provide less revenue than 100 percent of actual cost of the product, with that percentage rising to 180 percent by October 1984.

"Railroads for the first time will be allowed to make long-term contracts with shippers.

"General rate increases will be ended by 1984 unless it is determined by then that this provision is not feasible.

"Some $700 million in new funds is authorized for the purchase of low-interest railroad redeemable preference shares, with $200 million of that set aside to reduce Conrail's work force.

"Employee protection funds are included for the shutdown of the Rock Island Railroad ($13 million) and the Milwaukee Road shutdown in the West ($8 million). Some $15 million will be provided to help Milwaukee Lines in the West for use in later years.

House passes bill freeing U.S. spying

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republicans have demanded a government investigation into allegations that public funds are being diverted to President Carter's re-election campaign.

All 11 Republican members of the Senate Appropriations Committee signed a letter to Comptroller General Elmer Staats, asking for an investigation and audit of spending by the White House and federal agencies.

Recent press reports concerning travel and other expenditures by the White House office and various executive branch agencies indicate that appropriated funds are being spent to advance the political candidacy of the incumbent president," the letter said.

One of the signers, assistant Senate GOP leader Ted Stevens of Alaska, made the charge stronger in a statement accompanying the letter.

"It is outrageous that the administration is abusing the office of the presidency by using public funds in a political campaign," Stevens said.

Stevens told reporters the administration made a "political decision" in allocating a Congress-mandated cut in travel funds so that the Defense Department, not the civilian agencies, had to bear the brunt of the rollback.

He said the federal subsidy for the campaigns plus the amount of money used by the administration for travel, which he indicated was political, is going to make 1980 "the most expensive campaign for taxpayers in history."

"Nobody knows where the Cabinet members and the undersecretaries are — you can't find any of them," Stevens complained. "They're all out on the campaign trail. It's much worse than ever before."

The Republicans suggested the General Accounting Office look into whether allocation of costs by the White House for Carter and Vice President Walter Mondale limits spending of appropriated funds for official use and whether the White House is following its own procedures.

"Are funds appropriate to the White House being used for travel and related expenditures which are of a political nature?" the Republicans asked.

Takeoff

Republic Airlines' purchase of Hughes Aircraft officially got off the ground Wednesday. Republic purchased Hughes Aircraft last month. Station Manager Paul Shoaf said many changes remain to be completed and it will be several days before the Hughes "takeoff" is removed from the aircraft. Major changes, such as repainting the familiar yellow aircraft to the Republic colors, will take several months, he said.

MVMH raises several fees

TWIN FALLS — Increases in charges for a variety of services and items at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital went into effect Wednesday.

Increases include:
• Emergency room fees, which went from $15 to $18.
• Nursery room charges, which increased from $48 to $53.78 a day.
• Operating room fees, which went from $146 to $168.15 an hour.
• Chest X-rays, which went from $32.20 to $35.40.

Additionally, items in the central supply department increased an average of 12 percent, according to hospital controller Scott Richardson.

There will be no increases in laboratory fees, Richardson said.

On Dec. 1, room rates also will increase:
• Ward rooms will increase by 15.7 percent, from $39 to $45.15 a day.
• Semi-private rooms will increase by 16.1 percent, from $59 to $68.15 a day.
• Private rooms will increase by 16.6 percent, from $109 to $127 a day.

While the hospital's expansion plan projected future yearly rate increases to be 9.5 percent, Richardson said a larger increase was needed this year to provide a financial base for the hospital's renovation and expansion project. Richardson also said increases were needed to meet increased salaries under the hospital's new wage and salary program, which also went into effect Wednesday.

The new program raises experience adjustments to the base pay rate and increases the differential for night shift work from 50 to 75 cents.

With these changes, Richardson reported the fiscal 1981 budget projects revenues exceeding expenses by $533,000.

Salaries and benefits are projected to be $7,094,000, up $655,000 from a projected $6,439,000 in the 1980 fiscal year, ending Tuesday. Departmental supply expenses will increase from a projected $2,220,000 in fiscal 1980 to $2,412,000 in 1981.

Bad debts are also expected to increase, from a projected $332,000 in 1980 to $317,000 in 1981.

CSI classes offer help for refugees

Federal funding makes program possible

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho has received $106,000 in federal funds to teach, train and help find jobs for Indo-Chinese refugees who have resettled in the Magic Valley.

Since 1975, private sponsors have brought about 180 mostly Laotian to the area from refugee camps in the Far East.

The CSI program will be an arm of the Idaho Refugee Center, established by the state in July. The center plans to reach the more than 700 Indo-Chinese refugees in the state through adult education programs in six communities.

The Magic Valley has the second largest number of refugees of those areas, and CSI will teach classes and provide help at Buhl, Twin Falls and Rupert.

Marvin Glasscock, CSI director of adult education, said he received final word Wednesday. The CSI unit will receive $106,000 for seven months.

Carole Wells of Castleford, who has taught and helped refugees in the Buhl area since 1975, said, "There is a real need for comprehensive English training, first on a survival level. The next greatest needs are orientation to American culture and 'how to go shopping, understand the pricing system, and prepare food,' she said.

Refugees have arrived in the area "all the way from three weeks ago to five years and in between," she said.

The Idaho Refugee Center is headquartered at Boise State University's Adult-Basic Education Center and has up to $500,000 in funds from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

"There is no cost to the state," Helen Huff, center director, said. "The federal government fell the refugees should not be a burden to the local people."

Other units of the center will be in Pocatello, Idaho Falls, Coeur d'Alene and Lewiston.

Mrs. Huff said she hopes Congress, which has yet to appropriate funds for 1981, will soon make funding available to continue the project beyond seven months. Idaho's funds were carried over from the 1980 fiscal year.

Despite lack of special funding before now, these programs and a number of volunteers have already been serving, on a limited basis, the refugees who have settled in their areas.

The federal funds will allow them to receive professional instruction in English as a second language, home economics and related skills and driver's education. Glasscock said the state funds will also relieve CSI, which has been paying two instructors, Wells and Mrs. Gene Ridder and Rupert.

The CSI unit also will employ a coordinator, two part-time home economics instructors, secretarial help and a driver's education instructor.

Mrs. Huff said it "hasn't been a struggle immediately" for local agencies to provide the necessary services from "strained budgets."

"That's why we're so delighted to have a center. It will relieve areas like CSI," she said. "Volunteers and sponsors have been able to help but 'when it comes to really teaching English, helping them get into jobs, identifying jobs, giving them support with problems in language and employment, it's a tall order. I don't think sponsors can be expected to do all that.'"

Sponsors are religious groups, service organizations, family or individual volunteers who volunteer to resettle refugees by securing them housing and help with clothing, food, jobs and friendship.

As of Aug. 31, Huff said, sponsors had brought 722 Indo-Chinese refugees to Idaho since 1975.

The Idaho State Voluntary Agency, which is separate from the Idaho Refugee Center, was established in July to conduct resettlement for sponsors.

Since July, 26 refugees have been guaranteed placement and 10 have actually arrived here, Huff said.

Idaho is one of three states to "actually get involved directly in resettlement," she said. "The two other states are Iowa and Michigan."

Property tax revenues short $45,000

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city of Twin Falls will receive about $45,000 less in property tax revenues than budgeted, according to county Assessor Bill Clark.

The shortfall could mean more reductions in the level of services provided by the city.

Mayor Hank Woodall said no decision has been made by the council regarding further cuts, but said the issue will come up when the council meets Monday.

Clark said his estimates are tentative and will not be final until the Idaho Tax Commissioner certifies Twin Falls County tax levies. But he said he believes his estimate is accurate.

The shortfall results because the city will not receive a full 4 percent increase over its frozen property tax revenues of $2.2 million. The 1980-81 budget marks the third year the city has operated with that amount of property tax revenues. As a result, the new budget calls for the elimination of 18 full-time employee positions and a reduction in the level of city services.

percent increase for taxing districts having below 1 percent of the assessed market value of property within those districts.

Clark said the combined tax levy of all taxing districts within the city came to about .975 percent of the total market value of more than $400 million. That means the city will only get a 2.5 percent increase because the total levy can not exceed the 1 percent limit.

City officials last summer included the full additional 4 percent increase in the 1980-81 budget, or roughly $59,000. Among the programs earmarked for the additional funds was the recreation department. A preliminary budget report had called for the elimination of one of the two full-time positions within that department. But council members moved to use some of the additional revenue to retain both positions.

The City Council did not know whether the city would receive the full increase when the budget was approved last month. But the entire $59,000 had to be included in the budget in order for the city to receive all or part of the funds under state law, Woodall said.

Most destruction of signs appears aimed at Church

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Most of the campaign signs put up in the Magic Valley area by Sen. Frank Church's campaign staff have been destroyed by vandals.

Moreover, the vandalism appears to be the work of an organized group, campaign officials say. Church campaign officials say they do not know the vandals' identities.

Local law enforcement agencies are investigating the reports but no arrests have been made. Under Idaho law, anyone convicted of defacing campaign signs would be subject to a maximum six-month jail term or $300 fine, or both.

Roughly 80, 30-inch by 48-inch signs placed within Twin Falls, Jerome, Gooding, Minidoka and Cassia counties have been destroyed since July, campaign officials said.

Osborn said. On the average, from two to three signs have been destroyed each night, with some signs vandalized at the same location as many as five times, he said.

"I don't know who's doing it but it appears to be an orchestrated, organized effort to undermine the campaign," he said. "I'm making an organized effort to appear to be occurring at a higher rate than in previous campaigns."

Twin Falls Republicans say the fact that most of the vandalism appears aimed at the Church campaign could produce a backlash against Symms, who opposes Church in the November U.S. Senate election.

"The fact that it's happening certainly will not help (Symms)," Kathy Noh, a campaign staffer for Symms, said. "It probably hurts Symms more than it hurts Church. If people think they're doing Symms a favor, they're not," she said.

Church's Twin Falls campaign coordinator Paula Edmonds Hoffield said local staffers are now spending an average of two hours a day replacing signs.

"Last Saturday was incredible. We spent practically the whole day replacing signs," she said.

Osborn said each of the signs is valued at about $10. While the damage has been expensive, Osborn said he is more concerned that the vandalism may be aimed at intimidating residents who allow the Church signs on their property.

"They're working to the extent that they are driving some people from making a public statement of support for Frank Church," he said.

He said more than 12 residents who had allowed the campaign signs on their property had asked the signs not be replaced because they feared their own property might be vandalized.

Hardly even starts Campaign shortlived

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls Democrat this week had one of the shortest campaigns on record.

Richard E. Harrison, 42, of 2000 E. Canyon, announced his candidacy in November.

But in a College of Southern Idaho business student and construction worker was selected by the party to fill the vacancy left by David Morrison, who resigned within a few days, saying his business left him too little time to campaign.

Wednesday, however, County Commissioner Morrison resigned his seat to become Harrison's opponent.

Harrison said he had been in the area for at least 22 years of his life.

After the election, he had withdrawn his candidacy, she said.

Osborn said she was sure if Harrison had been able to appear at the campaign, he would have been elected.

Public hearing will gather opinions on HUD request

TWIN FALLS — A public hearing to solicit public opinion on how the city should spend $1.5 million it is requesting will be held next week.

Community Development Director Lamar Orton said the hearing is the first of two required by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. The city is asking for the HUD funds for a three-year community development project.

The hearing will be held Monday at 7:30 p.m. at City Hall.

Following the hearing, Orton said he will put together a proposed project. That proposal will be the subject of the second hearing to be held in early November. City officials will then submit a preliminary application to HUD.

Orton said the city did not go as far as expected because of inflation, he said.

If the city receives the requested funds, Orton said some of the money would probably go towards South Park, as well as toward housing improvements. Orton said the funds may also be used for a local economic development project.

Bilyeu says opponent ducks campaign issues

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, isn't discussing issues of importance in his re-election campaign, his Democratic opponent charged Wednesday.

In a Twin Falls press conference, Diane Bilyeu said Hansen was more concerned with "stunts" — and "grandstanding plays" than he was with issues affecting Idahoans.

Bilyeu said she would focus on a new Idaho issue each week for the remaining five weeks of the campaign. She would tell voters her stand on each issue. Her challenge, Hansen, to explain whether he had "achieved any results" for Idahoans in that area.

To draw attention to these issues, Bilyeu said she was also appointing Twin Falls attorney Lloyd Walker as her "issues coordinator."

Walker said the major concern of most southern Idahoans was agriculture and its related problems. Not only has Hansen never written an agriculture bill that has become law, he's never gotten an agricultural bill out of committee, Walker said.

Bilyeu said that, if elected, she would:

- Oppose agricultural embargoes, including the present grain embargo. "I question if food should ever be used as a weapon," she said.
- Oppose legislation banning potato futures trading. That legislation has in the past been written and introduced by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, she said.
- Oppose the Sagebrush Rebellion. Increased state involvement in federal land policy decision-making is needed, she said. But transferring federal lands to private ownership would eventually result in hunters and sportsmen being denied access to those lands.

"Keeping hunters off of lands where they're not able to hunt would have the same result as gun control," Bilyeu said, "and I oppose gun control."

Emergency spending gets bad reviews

BOISE—(UPI)—The state Corrections Board's votes Tuesday on curtailing emergency spending and requesting a huge budget hike next year got unfavorable reviews Wednesday from Gov. John Evans and House Speaker Ralph Olmstead.

Evans said he was surprised when he read Wednesday morning that the three-man board Tuesday had ordered the Corrections Department to immediately hire 55 more guards and start work on another guard tower at Idaho State Penitentiary.

And when told that some officials thought the board's request for an approximate 70 percent budget boost for fiscal year 1982 was unrealistic, Evans said, "That was somewhat my assessment as well."

The governor was in Custer County Tuesday for one of his twice-monthly

"Capital for a Day" excursions and did not learn of the board's action until Wednesday morning in Boise.

Some officials said there may have been a communication gap between the board and the Governor's Prison Review Committee, which met with the board Tuesday morning before the board voted on budget matters in the afternoon.

The committee, which the governor's office apparently thought was to make budget recommendations to the board, agreed to several improvements, but made no formal budget recommendations.

The department, in fact, got more than it asked for, with the board authorizing a request for seven instead of four additional counselors for the prison.

Olmstead, R-Twin Falls, said he doubted the Legislature would heed the board's request, although he said, "I can see where they can demonstrate some need."

"It will have to be studied very closely. Funds are very limited."

Olmstead said the request for permanent funding for the 55 guards and the authorization of two new guard towers in fiscal year 1982 was likely to fall on deaf ears in the Legislature. "They might get half that," he said.

He had deep reservations about the emergency spending order, under which the department will rob funds from certain areas of its current budget to pay for the security work.

"If you're shifting your money into a different situation and depending on getting a supplemental appropriation, you're sticking your neck out pretty far," the speaker said.

Buhl school needs administrator

BUHL—The 80-student Popplewell Elementary School needs a part-time administrator, the Buhl School Board was told Tuesday night.

Pratt said approved accreditation requires large elementary schools, like Popplewell, to have a second administrator besides the principal.

That was the only standard "where there appears to be quite a discrepancy," he said. Pratt said he was "hinting" to the board he would probably ask for a combination administrator and counselor or curriculum director for the 1981-82 school year.

The person would not be vice principal but would be in charge when the principal was away.

In other business, the school board agreed to let the College of Southern Idaho use Buhl High School for continuing education courses.

High school Principal Dale Thornberry said CSID's continuing education director Ed Austin wanted permission to proceed with plans to teach classes at Buhl.

Thornberry said classes were four or five non-credit planned this fall and perhaps eight to 10, including credit classes, next semester.

The cost to the school district would be lights, use of buildings and a small amount of Thornberry's time for coordination.

Deadline passes for surcharge exemptions

TWIN FALLS—City officials say they plan to stop accepting applications for exemptions from the 4 percent month-sewer-system users surcharge.

City Councilman Chris Talkington said the deadline to file the applications expired Tuesday.

"We don't expect to be totally inflated, but I do say we should attempt to hold them at the end of the month," he said.

A committee made up of Talkington and two other council members has been reviewing applications since last month. Talkington said the entire council will have a public hearing on any applications filed after Tuesday.

The council last summer enacted the surcharge to pay the city's estimated $750,000 share of the sewer plant modification project. The surcharge will be in effect for 18 months.

The council decided to provide waivers for residents unable to pay the surcharge. General property tax revenues will be used to make up for the surcharge funds lost by providing the waivers.

So far, about 150 applications have been received, Talkington said. He said the committee has processed about one-third of those.

returned it had disappeared.

Police said the accident occurred at the Twin Falls city golf course Monday. Employees told police someone took a golf cart from the club house area and drove it across the course abandoning it after burning up the motor. The incident occurred over the weekend and was reported to police Tuesday.

Disposal system efficient

BURLEY—A new water disposal system under construction in Burley will save the city $80,000 a year in maintenance and personnel costs, according to Bob Martin, water department director.

"I know the existing proposal would be expensive if implemented," said Martin, "so I went to the City Council and the mayor, and we got the proposal changed."

The new sewage treatment lagoon, due for completion in May 1981, will update Burley's present facilities. It includes a complex screening and aeration process.

Although the capital outlay of both proposals was nearly the same, Martin's plan will be cheaper to operate.

Funding for the system is provided by federal funds amounting to 83 percent of the total cost with the city providing 6.8 percent and the state 10.2 percent.

Mother emerges to explain her side

BOISE (UPI) — Genl Gilmore emerged from hiding Tuesday to explain her side in the fight for custody of her 8-year-old daughter.

Mrs. Gilmore's former husband, Michael Clary, filed a second-degree kidnapping charge against her last month, and police have been hunting the woman and her child.

Mrs. Gilmore surfaced temporarily for an interview in a vacant lot with a KBCI-TV news team. She said she was afraid of her former husband and would return only if he was put in jail.

Clary was granted custody of the child in the couple's 1975 divorce.

The woman said she took her daughter into hiding because she was afraid her ex-husband's ties with the Divine Light Mission were adversely affecting the girl.

Alysa Clary maintained he had no serious relationship with the religious group.

In the interview with KBCI's Bob Loy, Mrs. Gilmore said she would give up hiding "if I have complete control and custody of Alysa and that Clary is in jail... that's the only way."

She yelled that the kidnapping charge against her "is an insult to my integrity."

"They can't do that to me...they can't make it stick. That's just a technique they're using. I doubt if there's even a kidnapping charge against me. I bet it's a rumor that Clary started."

"No judge in the country would issue a kidnapping charge against a mother. That's crazy."

"They're trying to break up a family and destroy a marriage, and they're letting Clary do it. That's what they're doing. That makes me mad."

Randy Gilmore, the woman's current husband, was cited for contempt and jailed for nearly two weeks last month when he did not tell Magistrate Judge Karen Vehlou the whereabouts of his wife and the child. He said he didn't know.

An Idaho Statesman reporter was jailed for more than seven hours Sept. 19 for refusing to reveal the location of an interview she had with Mrs. Gilmore and give the identities of people who helped arranged the talk.

Loy said Tuesday night he would not tell where he met Mrs. Gilmore for the interview, and said he had avoided asking her questions about where she had been or who had helped hide her.

Man petitions court to bar state's November election

BOISE (UPI) — Contending any balloting in Idaho would be unconstitutional under the present form of government, a Coeur d'Alene man Wednesday petitioned Idaho U.S. District Court to halt the state's general election in November.

Charles H. Miller asks U.S. District Judge Marion Callister to issue an injunction barring state election officials from conducting the November 4 balloting.

His petition says all judges and prosecuting attorneys in the state are illegally joined together as attorney members of the integrated bar association, which he calls "part of the judicial branch of Idaho government" and a "state-approved monopoly" in violation of the U.S. Constitution.

Because the incumbent judges and prosecuting attorneys in the state allegedly have been involved in "corrupt practices" and denied the supreme law of the land, Miller contends, "the election process must be stopped to prevent a continuation of the alien form of government in Idaho, not a constitutional republic as required by... the United States Constitution."

While Miller's petition is brief, the allegations raised are identical to those presented in a $130 million lawsuit filed by his brother, James Miller, also of Coeur d'Alene.

Kidnap victim's life returns to normal

HAYDEN (UPI) — Little Jodi Aldridge returned to her parents' home Wednesday, 21 days after the 4-year-old was kidnapped, beaten and left for dead in a ditch near this north Idaho community.

Little Jodi is known about her abductor, a young, bearded man with tattoos who snatched her from her nap at the Hayden Learning Center, kept her for four days and then disappeared in an old green pickup truck after discarding her along a highway.

The tiny blonde child appeared healthy in her first public appearance Wednesday despite a skull fracture suffered during her ordeal.

She hugged her dolls and played and giggled with friends just like it never happened.

"We have not come to any definite conclusions, but we think probably in all likelihood the best way would be to four days in which they searched for their daughter and her kidnapper. The memory is much more vivid and recent for them. They need more time to shake the fear that is becoming a vague, faded haze to their little girl.

It was quite by chance that Jodi was found alive. Two area teen-agers driving north of the community Sept. 15 ran into car troubles.

When they stopped to check the car, they spotted the child lying unconscious in a ditch. Besides the skull fracture, Jodi was in shock and was suffering from dehydration.

Had that car not cooked out at that exact spot, the feeling is Jodi would have died of exposure.

All that's behind the little girl now.

And the her parents are thankful to have their child back.

The teen-agers who found Jodi turned down a $25,000 reward the Aldridges had offered. The family did not have the money but was prepared to borrow it if necessary.

But the Aldridge's financial problems are not over.

The family must absorb the costs of Jodi's hospitalization and care after her discovery.

They thought that was covered by insurance. But their financial problems were compounded recently when they were told their insurance policy at the center does not cover Jodi because she is not a regularly-enrolled student.

Friends are trying to raise money to pay for Jodi's care.

The feeling is the family has suffered enough.

IEA president says group may request sales tax increase

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Education Association President LaMar Hagar says the teacher's group probably will ask the Legislature next year to raise the state sales tax.

"We have not come to any definite conclusions, but we think probably in all likelihood the best way would be to go for a sales tax increase of some type," Hagar said.

A straight sales tax boost is one alternative, but the IEA also might recommend that some sales tax exemptions be abolished, said Hagar, who's an teacher from his job as American government teacher and athletic director at Blackfoot High School.

Hagar said the political climate doesn't favor a tax increase, but said the state's poor financial condition indicates a tax boost is necessary.

"Cities and counties are in a rather bad situation," he said. "If they (the Legislature) can't fund government at the present time for this year, I don't know how they could possibly fund government next year."

State agencies have been ordered to cut spending 3 percent in the current budget year so the state can avoid a general fund budget deficit.

Census questions may affect reapportionment decisions

COEUR D'ALENE (UPI) — Question about the 1980 census has Attorney General David Leroy already concerned about the legal problem he may face early next year with legislative redistricting and reapportionment.

"We may have legal responsibility to redistribute and reapportion without the final census figures with which to work," Leroy said Tuesday during a stop in Coeur d'Alene.

Leroy said the process may be further complicated by a recent federal court ruling that said counting techniques used in the Detroit area resulted in an under count.

"The ruling was broad enough to cast doubt" on Idaho's census, and the attorney general's office already has had "questions of concern" about it from cities across the state, Leroy said.

He said even if the final census figures are in by the time the 1981 Legislature begins redefining legislative districts, the job must be done "very carefully" because it is too politically and therefore, legally sensitive.

Another sensitive job looming over the attorney general's office in the coming year is spelling out what authority each branch of government has in deciding how taxes will be spent, Leroy said.

The slumping economy and high unemployment have produced a shortfall in the state's expected reve-nie, making the issue especially critical, he said.

Leroy said it will be his job "to work with the Legislature to inspect the statutes and offer a constitutional amendment if required to spell out the budget authority of the branches of government."

Already his office has issued two "constitutionally significant" opinions in the area of the budget, he said.

In one, his office said the Legislature, not the governor, had the authority to create appropriations and transfer funds. The other said the Idaho Board of Examiners, not the governor alone, had the authority to roll back appropriations.

Both opinions stemmed from Gov. John Evans' recent attempt to act alone in making a 3.85 percent across-the-board cut in appropriations to all Idaho agencies. The Board of Examiners later supported his decision.

"As a result of this opinion, for the first time in recent years, a good deal of attention had been focused on the relative powers under the constitution of the governor's office, the Legislature, the courts and the Board of Examiners," Leroy said.

The attorney general said he was Coeur d'Alene to be present for a change in his field office there and to speak at a luncheon for First District congressional candidate Larry Craig.

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — World Boxing Council officials, apparently split on whether to sanction a rematch between Roberto Duran and Sugar Ray Leonard, will poll newsmen for their opinion, spokesman for the body said Wednesday.

WBC President Jose Sulaiman of Mexico and Vice President Jack Davis will conduct the survey at the Larry Holmes-Muhammad Ali heavyweight championship bout in Las Vegas, New York, tonight.

Twelve of the 18 members of the WBC executive committee must approve a Duran-Leonard rematch, but a WBC spokesman indicated there was discord within the council.

"Some members of the committee are not in agreement that this event should be held," a WBC spokesman said, but he declined to give further details.

"It is the wish of Sulaiman and Davis to know if the international press really thinks like the WBC that the Montreal fight was one of the greatest bouts in recent times," the spokesman said.

Duran, the feisty Panamanian nicknamed "Hands of Stone" because of his "jolting punches," stripped Leonard, an American boxing hero since the 1976 Olympics, of the welterweight title in Montreal last June 20.

Carlos Eleta, Duran's manager, said recently if the WBC approved a rematch it will be promoted by Don King in either New Orleans, Houston or Las Vegas.

Duran, who became a welterweight when constant weight problems forced him to give up the lightweight title he held since 1975, has been training for a Leonard rematch for about three weeks in Grossinger, N.Y.

Managers

Boston fires Zimmer

BOSTON (UPI) — Don Zimmer, wanting to be remembered only as "the man" in the people of New England, was fired Wednesday as manager of the Boston Red Sox after 4½ seasons, unable to deliver that coveted championship to a victory starved and demanding public and front office.

General Manager Haywood Sullivan announced the decision, which came as no surprise, at a 2 p.m. Fenway Park news conference. Dugout coach Johnny Pesky will take over the team for the remainder of the season and Sullivan said he hoped to have a new manager named in three weeks. Sullivan said he had 12 names but had not contacted anyone.

In an unusual move, Zimmer attended the session and fielded questions. He traded jokes on many answers, but was asked how he would like to be remembered. Zimmer became serious.

"I just want the people of New England to think you're a good man. Thank you very much," he said, then hastily left on the verge of tears.

It was the first time Zimmer, 49, who proudly states he has never drawn a paycheck outside of baseball, has ever been fired. He will receive his $35,000 contract next year no matter what job he takes. He has been offered an unspecified post in the Boston organization but said he doubts he'll take it.

"I'll have a uniform on next season, somewhere. But I haven't talked to a soul about a job in the last six weeks," he said.

"I've heard a lot of noise and the fans want a championship. It's tough to win 99 games and get beat by a cheap home run by Bucky Dent. But the fans want a title and they deserve it," Zimmer said.

"You do the best with the 25 you have. There were times when we may be needed a player and didn't get one. But I'm not going to get into heavy more than that," Zimmer said.

Zimmer said he had been treated fairly by the press, although he said he had been warned about coming to Boston because of the close media attention. He had often said that managing the Red Sox was a long-deferred dream come true.

"There are certain baseball people, good baseball people, who would back off coming here. In San Diego, we had 4,000 people a night and one sports writer. When you put on a uniform, you knew you were beat. That's what you call no pressure. And I liked it here better," he said.

Astros give Virdon 3-year pact

HOUSTON (UPI) — Bill Virdon of the Houston Astros, the senior manager in the National League, has been rehired for the next three seasons, owner John McMillen said Wednesday night.

The club also announced coaches Mel Wright, Don Leppert and Deacon Jones had been rehired to one-year contracts.

The contract taking Virdon, 49, through the 1983 season was the first multi-year pact offered him in his five years as the team's manager.

"I'm pleased and delighted. I had a part in putting this team together and I want to see it through," Virdon said.

McMillen said he made the offer after watching the team, which he purchased early in the 1979 season, rise to the top of the West Division. With five games remaining, the Astros held a two-game lead over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"The best way to get Bill a one-year contract and he accepted. This year we decided to go for the basics of three years," McMillen said.

"Obviously I think he's the best manager in baseball. Virdon said he needed only "5 or 10 minutes" to look over and sign the agreement.

Texas still mulls Corrales' fate

ARLINGTON, Texas (UPI) — The board of directors of the Texas Rangers met for four hours Wednesday without reaching a decision on the future of manager Pat Corrales and executive vice president Eddie Robinson.

"We just ran out of time," said chairman of the board Eddie Chiles. "We hope to reconvene within 10 days and reach a decision."

The Rangers, who had been a potential challenger for the American League West title, entered the final week of the season 10 games below .500 in fourth place.

Chiles, who bought the Rangers from former owner Brad Corbett shortly after the season began, had hoped to be able to announce a decision on the fate of Corrales and Robinson Wednesday.

But after the six-member board met through the afternoon and into the evening, he said that no vote was ever taken.

Chiles said, however, that it would be unfair to conclude from the lack of decision that the board was simply waiting until the end of the season to dismiss Corrales.

"The board wants to look at every alternative," Chiles said. "Each board member speaks his peace and it takes a while to do that. This is a different structure than what there was here before (Corbett). This group wants to investigate everything."

Yanks power to within 2 wins of flag

By United Press International

The Bronx Bombers are back, as if they ever left.

Oscar Gamble and Rick Cerone each belted three-run homers. Aurelio Rodriguez added a two-run blast and Bobby Brown and Reggie Jackson each hit solo homers Wednesday night in a 15-hit barrage that powered the New York Yankees to an 18-7 rout of the Cleveland Indians.

The victory reduced the Yankees' magic number to two for clinching their fourth Eastern Division title in four years. The Yankees, who now lead the Baltimore Orioles by 2 1/2 games, need to win only two of their last four games to clinch even if the Orioles win their remaining three games.

The victory also marked the 14th time the Yankees have won at least 100 games in a season and made manager Dick Howser the fourth first-year skipper in major-league history to win 100 games.

Jackson, who finished with four RBI, singled home a run in the first inning and the Yankees added five in the second on Gamble's 13th career homer and Rodriguez' third of the year. Len Barker, 39, took the loss.

An error by Cleveland second baseman Dave Rosello opened the door for six unearned runs in the third, highlighted by Brown's 14th homer, an RBI single by Gamble and a two-run double by Jackson.

The Indians scored twice in the fourth and New York starter Tommy John left with two out in the fifth after John's arrival capped the three-run inning with a double to left. John was suffering from back spasms. Gaylord Perry relieved and picked up his 10th victory against 13 losses, evening his Yankee mark at 4-4.

Cerone's 14th homer came off reliever Mike Stanton in the fifth and an RBI single by Willie Randolph and a double play gave the Yankees two runs in the sixth. Jackson hit his 39th homer of the season in the ninth to cap New York's scoring.

In other games, Baltimore defeated Boston 12-8, Oakland beat Chicago 11-5, Detroit defeated Toronto 11-7, and Kansas City topped Seattle 4-1. The double-header between Minnesota and Texas was postponed because of wet grounds.

George Brett collected three hits, including his career-high 24th home run of the year, to raise his average four points to .391. Brett was also intentionally walked in the first inning and doubled twice to raise his number of plate appearances to 502, officially qualifying him for the American League batting title. In his last 10 at-bats, Brett has collected two singles, two doubles, three homers and knocked in nine runs.

Singleton drove in four runs with four hits and Terry Crowley, Eddie Murray and Rich Dauer clouted home runs to help the Orioles split the debut of Red Sox interim manager Johnny

Pesky. The Red Sox fired Don Zimmer earlier in the day. The Orioles reached starter Dennis Eckerley, 12-14, for three runs in the first on Singleton's RBI single and Murray's two-run homer, his 22nd of the season. Tony Armas collected three hits, scored twice and had one RBI to lift the A's to their rout of the White Sox. Armas' run-scoring single capped a three-run third inning and knocked out starter Ross Baumgarten. 2-12. Ricky Henderson recorded his league-record 63th steal of the season. Mark Fidrych pitched five innings to notch his second victory of the season and Tom Brookens keyed a 16-hit attack for the Tigers, handling Toronto's seventh consecutive loss. The Tigers have won five straight. Milwaukee played at California in a late game.

Fall — it's a backpacker's dream

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — Passt. Fall is the time visit a high mountain lake that few fall anyone.

One meets a different breed of backpacker in October. Most are having such a good time they don't care to publicize their good fortune. Some have downright hostile to the idea of exposing their retreat in a newspaper article.

But the secret is out. Forest Service employees don't roll up the meadows after college students leave for fall chases. And hunters usually avoid strenuous climbs to lakes that yield little chance of big game.

Imagination may play a part, but fall hikers insist the fish fight harder and the air is more alive in their favorite season.

Nights — some better — but sweeter and a jacket don't add much to the typical backpacker's gear. And rewards include a golden hue on meadow flora, a warming sun that's seldom hot according to hiker's tales, and the area's most impressive peaks.

"People don't know what they're missing. It's so fresh, active and alive," exclaimed LeRoy Lokken, Boise. Lokken and his two sons were fishing Saturday at Norton Lakes in the Smoky Mountains northwest of Ketchum.

Nighttime temperatures in the basin stayed above freezing. Rocky Mountain peaks were visible on the ridges shortly before sunset.

Sunday morning was cool and cloudy, but sunny skies reeled before noon.

Several lakes basins in the Ketchum-Stanley area provide short hikes and quick exits for fall weekend adventurers, according to hiker's tales, and the chum Forest Service District recreation manager.

Baker Lake is about a mile from the Baker Creek access road. Norton Lakes and several unnamed bodies of water are two to four miles from the same road.

A backpacker enjoys the hidden beauty of Big Lost Lake, reachable only by foot, near Norton Lake in the Smokey Mountains.

Prarie, Miner and Mill lakes pose two- to six-mile treks in the same vicinity. A tiny lake called "Mite" also can be found about a mile off the last switchback south of Galena Summit.

Dozens of lakes surrounded by gorgeous scenery are available in the Boulder and White Cloud mountains. But the entrances are farther from main roads, and the hikes are longer than many people care to tackle on a leisurely weekend trip.

Harper cautioned prospective hikers that storms can move in quickly in the fall, and the resulting showers are "definitely different from a summer rain storm."

"Snow is the rule for fall showers above 8,000 feet," he said, although sunny weather in recent days has been "some of the best weather we've had all summer."

Hikers should wear brightly colored clothing after the Oct. 15 start of big game rifle seasons, he said. Backpackers who prefer to avoid guns might consider the more exposed trails near Redfish or Pettit lakes in the Sawtooth Wilderness.

Bookstore operators in the Ketchum area say they are continually amazed at the demand for mountain hiking guidebooks well after the summer season. "Hiking Around Sun Valley" by area resident Clarice Blechnann, and "Trails of the Sawtooths and White Cloud Mountains" by Margaret Fuller are the most popular editions, said Judy Hammond, employee at The Bookstore in Ketchum.

Another recent release titled "So Eastern Idaho Hiking Trails (and Troutling Retreats)," by Ron Mitchell, includes hikes from a wider region. Pictures in the 108-page paperback are mediocre, but the book offers topographic map segments for each of its 50 trails.

Bow hunt considered successful

JEROME — The bow hunters had a successful season for deer in Unit 54, according to Carl Nellis, research biologist.

This is the first year that the Rock Creek check station has been run each weekend during the archery season in the South Hills. Information obtained at the station will be helpful in future management of the Unit 54 deer herd.

Results for the season at Rock Creek showed 844 hunters hunted 1,401 days, spent 8,565 hours and saw 7,939 deer. This works out to an average of 2.86 days per hunter and 30 deer seen per hour. These archers shot 822 arrows and bagged 22 deer for an average of 47.36 shots per deer harvested. Each archer spent about 2.86 days hunting which involved an average of 6.13 hours per hunt.

Silhouette shooters fire Sunday

JEROME — The Snake River Handgun Silhouette Shooters will continue to hold matches throughout the year because of added interest by local shooters.

Duck hunt starts Saturday

By STU MURRELL
Special to the Times-News

JEROME — Duck season opens Saturday at one-half hour before sunrise with a daily bag limit of seven ducks. Hunters in Region 4 can expect the usual complement of ducks with some migrant pintails adding to the locally produced birds. The typical situation in this area is a fairing out with the regular good duck hunting beginning around mid-November when migrant mallards move in from Canada.

There are some changes in the Nature Conservancy Area on Silver Creek for 1980. The previous closure by the Fish and Game Commission has been removed, and an agreement to allow limited hunting has been worked out by a citizens' committee.

The Wildlife Advisory Committee on the Silver Creek Nature Conservancy property is made up of local sportsmen, landowners and officials from the Conservancy. Tim Crawford, chairman, stated hunters will be allowed to launch their float boats at Stalker Creek Bridge and hunt on the navigable portion of Silver Creek to the Klipatree Bridge. They will be able to retrieve ducks and the adjacent land if they leave their guns in the boat. Hunting days will be Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday.

The Committee has also arranged for several of the local landowners in upper Silver Creek to open their property for hunting during these same three days per week. However, Crawford has indicated there are very few ducks on upper Silver Creek at present and requests hunters wait until November since the landowners are involved in the fall harvest. All of these areas will have the necessary informational signs around their bound-aries.

The Fish and Game Commission has continued the closure on Hagerman Wildlife Management area in 1980 to reduce the crippling loss and lead shot buildup on the refuge. Plans call for Fish and Game personnel to attempt hauling the ducks periodically from the refuge during the latter part of the season. Hopefully, this will cause a better distribution in adjacent open areas and improve the duck hunting.

Goose season does not start until Oct. 11 in most of southern Idaho and Oct. 25 in Blaine County south and east of U.S. Highway 93. Cassia, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Minidoka and Twin Falls counties. Goose hunting will extend until Dec. 21 and hunting should be excellent this year. Southern Idaho production was good, and the Canada goose population in the state has been on a steady increase the past few years.

Duck and goose hunters are reminded they must have a federal duck stamp if they are 16 years of age or older, use shotguns not capable of holding more than three shells, and the daily bag limit of ducks must not include more than two canvasbacks or redheads. The duck stamps are available at your local post office.

Stocking change made

By BARBARA PHELPS
Special to the Times-News

Salmon, steelhead or trout? Which should our government hatcheries raise for Idaho waters?

Dave Bruhn, manager at the National Fish Hatchery in Hagerman, says the federal government has decided stocking "anadromous" fish (sea-running fish such as salmon and steelhead) should be the greatest concern. Rainbow trout are resident fish, and according to the government, should be a state responsibility.

The example the government likes to give is migratory waterfowl cross state lines and thus are governed by federal laws. Rainbow trout do not migrate and should not be subject to either federal laws or federal stocking programs.

The rainbow trout program was established when the National Fish Hatchery was first built in 1833. It was to accomplish two types of stocking:

1. To supply trout to Indian reservation waters, specifically Duck Valley Reservation which straddles the Idaho-Nevada state line. Sheep Creek and Mountain View reservoirs, located on the reservation, were stocked with 250,000 steelhead rainbows each April.
2. To supply trout to federal waters within BLM and Forest Service Land — Magic Reservoir, Little Camas Reservoir and the South Fork of the Boise River above Anderson Ranch Dam (as well as Soldier Creek and Willow Creek) were annually supplied. If there were an excess of rainbows, Niagara Springs and the Maled River both state-managed waters — were also stocked.

Starting Oct. 1 (fiscal year 1981), the above program will be reduced by 25 percent. This reduction will not affect either Magic nor Little Camas Reservoir. The bulk of the reduction will be fall on the waters above Anderson Ranch Dam.

Each succeeding year will see a further reduction of 25 percent. By 1985, the rainbow trout program will be entirely eliminated.

Reduction is not the correct word to use regarding the phase-out program at Duck Valley Reservation. "As of today," Bruhn added, "the stocking at the reservation will be completely finished."

Because of severe winter kill, fishing at these reservoirs is good only as long as the waters are stocked annually. (Sheep Creek has a few carry-over fish but Mountain View does not.)

"Neither the Indians nor the sportsmen are happy about the federal decision," Bruhn said. "With some pressure put on government representatives, the administration of reservation stocking might be reversed. That's why I stated, 'As of today...'"

Russ Slayner has a form letter at his tackle shop on Main Street, giving a brief message of the decision. He invites all concerned fishermen to pick up the letter and mail their opinions to their Congressmen.

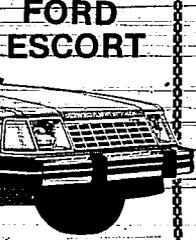

Hagerman hatchery must receive rainbow eggs by early October if they are to plant an eight-inch trout the following April. The hatchery, according to Bruhn, is currently filled to capacity with steelhead fingerlings and "There is no room for rainbow."

"If we are told to get back into the Duck Valley program," Bruhn said, "it would be at the expense of the steelhead program. We don't have the room for both."

In spite of the change, nine-inch rainbows will continue to be released in the three streams within the Fort Hall Reservation.

Two conference titles ride outcome of Friday's games

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News sports writer

MAGIC VALLEY — The last half of Magic Valley's football season starts Friday with the probability that two conference races could end in all practical purposes and a third will be brought into sharper focus.

Hansen travels to Murtaugh while Buhl goes to Mountain Home in games that should decide titles in the Magic Valley and South Central Idaho conferences, respectively. Meanwhile, Kimberly takes one of two Magic Valley undefeated records to Declo for a major test in the Canyon Conference. The other unbeaten mark is protected almost by owner Castleford in Idaho this week.

The roles were reversed a year ago almost to the day — when Declo brought a 6-0 record to Kimberly and he chipped off on a pass in the final couple of minutes that netted a 30-7 Bulldog upset.

That game ended badly with the final cast of players making caustic comments to each other. It wasn't pretty.

With Valley knocking off defending champion Gooding last week, the Canyon Conference now has Valley, Kimberly and Declo knotted at the top of the standings. Valley will be at Filer trying to protect its share of the lead while the loser drops a game off the top of the Declo.

The South Central Idaho Conference has Buhl, now 4-1, traveling to Mountain Home with the winner being the odds-on favorite to claim the title. A Buhl win would give the Indians a one-game lead with Wood River to play. Mountain Home still faces Jerome.

This rematch also has a carryover from last year when Mountain Home came from behind in the closing minutes to pull to within a point and then saw the victory go a glimmering when a two-point rollout missed by Innes got to the end zone.

For the past two seasons, Hansen, which had one of the bigger lines, figured to be in the thick of the Magic Valley Conference pennant race. It didn't get it done this time around. It was much beef to graduation in the contention.

But Coach Barry Espil and his Huskies have fashioned a showdown against defending champion Murtaugh usually in the proximity of the lower part of a hard fought game. But with the title at stake, this one should be breath.

There's no doubt in the mind of Espil the game is a crucial one. But, he hopes it isn't the only one.

"It definitely is the pivotal game in the race for us," Espil says. "But we've got a couple of tough games after that, against Oakley and Hagerman. Oakley probably is out of it because of that upset loss at Mackay but in the last two years we've nipped them with scores late in the game. And anyone who thinks Hagerman isn't going to play us tough is full of baloney. No matter what has happened before, they always play us right down to the wire. They play us orange, black and blue."

Exactly how to beat Murtaugh. "First, you have to stop their running game and they've got two good running backs. Second, you have to shut down quarterback Roy Nebecker and let him know the passing game is going. Then (third), if we can put some points on the board, it should be a heckuva game."

"We feel they'll have to put the ball in the air and beat us with the big play, which is exactly what they've done to us the past couple of years."

Look for some aerial antics by the opposing quarterbacks, Roy Nebecker of Murtaugh and Cooper Urte of Hansen. Also, tailback Chet Crossman for Murtaugh and George Connors of Hansen has 150-yard plus rushing nights last time out.

Although Castleford will not be playing, the Wolves have a definite interest in one of the games. North Gem travels to Richfield for the second meeting of the season — but the only one that counts in the Snake River eight-man Conference.

Gem won the opening 160-using turnovers as springboards to both scores. A Richfield win would present the lead to Castleford and give Richfield the chance to get back into their strength. If North Gem could knock off the Wolves in two more weeks.

In other action, Minico draws the division assignment of trying to halt the Grizzlies at the opening game. North Gem travels to Richfield for the second meeting of the season — but the only one that counts in the Snake River eight-man Conference.

Each inventor brought a pair of rims to a high school gym in New York for a summer trial, where college players tried to plunge the rims with their strength. The top three rims were selected for the preseason games.

All three models work on the principle of snapping away from the board under excessive force and then snapping back when released.

Axelson also said companies were working on producing a shatterproof backboard that would replace the current safety glass.

One inventor called Axelson to report he had a perfect, plastic, unbreakable backboard.

"Is it transparent?" Axelson asked the man.

"Oh, does it have to be?" the inventor responded.

"It could be that no one likes any of them," Axelson said. "Maybe come February a guy will come along with a backboard that couldn't be broken with a Caterpillar tractor. Then we'll say — 'That's our board.'"

During the current NBA season, backboards will only be prevented from further destruction by passage of the "Dawkins Amendment." The new rule fines a player who shatters a backboard $100, ejects him from the game in which he does the deed and suspends him from his team's next game.

Minico had for post-season competition. Burley, now 1-4, returns home to entertain the Blackfoot Broncos, who turned in a stout defensive showing against Buhl last week. Coach John Billeze believes his Bobcats need a victory and could snuff them out a respectable season record by winning this one.

Wood River will entertain the Salmon Savages in a 5-p.m. start while Jerome takes the long trip to Caldwell, which currently rides atop the Cross State Conference standings.

The Canyon Conference also finds Glenns Ferry at Wendell where one of the two will pick up their first loop win of the season. Valley is at Filer in the other loop contest.

Raft River makes the long haul to Mackay where the Miners have proved tough. The home field helped Mackay post an overtime decision over Oakley last week.

Oakley takes the sting of that loss which left them with scant chance at the Magic Valley title, to Hagerman where the Pirates are trying to re-establish the winning ways they had the first two weeks of the season.

In eight-man play, Carey travels to Rockland where the Bulldogs are looking for their first win while Camas County, which posted its first victory last week, will be at Dubois where the Mushers are given a good chance of making it two in a row.

Murtaugh quarterback) just kept giving me the ball and telling me to turn to the left side.

The left side of the line has done a super job blocking in those last two games," he smiled. "They kept opening up holes big enough to drive a truck through. I just wish I could run in the open field. That's probably my biggest weakness. If I can improve that part of my game, I think I can play small college football."

After graduation — this spring Crossman hopes to travel to the eastern part of the state and play football with the Rocky Vikings.

"That's my goal. To be able to play football there and try to do good there and grow and develop under a good small college program, maybe I can transfer to a major university, but that would be taking a big step from playing A-4 football in Murtaugh," he said.

Despite the pain, the whirlpool baths and two days of missed practices this week, Crossman said he'll be ready for Friday night's clash with the fourth ranked Huskies.

"It's the biggest game of the year for us," he said. "The team has been getting lapped all week long. If we want to win our conference and go to the state playoffs this year, it all starts right here and now. If we lose, it's a long and painful trip to the top."

MURTAUGH — Murtaugh's leading ground gainer Chet Crossman spent Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon sitting in a whirlpool bath while his teammates were practicing football.

The 6-4, 175 pound Red Devil senior is suffering from a deformed vertebrae in his back that was aggravated in last week's win over the Hagerman Pirates in which he rushed for 153 yards and scored one touchdown. He was born with the pain and he'll spend the rest of his life with it, he said.

However, Crossman, who is this week's Times-News athlete of the week, loves to play with pain and he's looking forward to playing the biggest game of his life Friday night against the Huskies at Murtaugh.

"I've learned to live with a lot of pain and so it just gives me an extra incentive to play football harder and better when I'm in it," he said while sitting in his daily whirlpool.

"As far as I can remember, he's always played in pain," said Murtaugh Coach Jim Anderson after practice. "But it doesn't seem to bother him. I can see him walking down the halls at school limping and holding his back, but when football practice starts, he's hitting and running like a precisioned dock."

Crossman is also suffering from a bruised hip.

As pain in his back and hip worsens, his game performances seem to get better.

Two weeks ago in a win against the Oakley Hornets, he rushed for 220 yards, lifting his total yards gained over 500 in his first three games.

"That game was probably the highlight of my career," he said. "I was respecting to run the ball that much but Roy Nebecker,

Collapsible rim tests aimed at NBA safety

NEW YORK (UPI) — Philadelphia 76ers' center Darrell Dawkins, whose backboard shattered a pair of innocent glass backboards last season, has sparked a technological race aimed at keeping the court clear of flying glass this year.

The NBA is testing three prototype rims that are designed to collapse under stress of more than 250 pounds, which about what it takes to shatter a glass backboard.

All three models are being tested during the preseason, and the best of the group will be used for one year in the Continental Basketball Association, the NBA's minor league circuit.

Joe Axelson, director of operations for the NBA, said the league decided to search for a better rim because the two incidents last year delayed games for more than four and also posed a serious safety threat.

"We request each team to have a complete backup support ready, but in both cases, the games were held up for more than 1 1/2 hours," Axelson said. "The first time it happened, people said it was cute. But the second time, people were saying 'Enough already.'"

"Also, when they were sweeping the floor in Kansas City the second time, they discovered a piece of glass had sunk five-eighths of an inch into the floor. If that piece of glass had hit somebody in the neck, you can imagine what would have happened."

So the call went out.

Inventors were coming out of the woodwork — saying they could stop this," Axelson said. "We looked at 10 rims and about 100 sketches."

Each inventor brought a pair of rims to a high school gym in New York for a summer trial, where college players tried to plunge the rims with their strength. The top three rims were selected for the preseason games.

All three models work on the principle of snapping away from the board under excessive force and then snapping back when released.

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—Bill Walton, the 7-foot, 300-pound center of the San Diego Clippers, has flown to Las Vegas to have an acupuncture probe the throbbing pain in his left foot, which is hurting again and threatening to end his career.

Dr. Ernie Vandeweghe, a friend of Walton's and a member of the medical team attempting to keep the big redheaded in action, said he was having a lot of pain, and he's a doctor there he knew at UCLA. This fellow used to help him with his knees, and when he hurt his back up in Oregon playing for UCLA he seemed to get some relief from the treatment.

Walton resumed his foot Friday in San Diego's second preseason game and will be out for the remaining four exhibition games and perhaps longer. His Los Angeles friend, Dr. Tony Daly, and Clippers president Irv Levin's men's calls about Walton's status.

Vandeweghe said Walton seeks only pain relief from the unidentified Nevada acupuncture specialist. A conference call among medical specialists familiar with Walton's three lateral ankle bone fractures is set for later this week.

Walton first fractured the tiny bone in February, 1978, after joining San Diego. He missed that entire season and tried a comeback last year. He refractured the bone in preseason in February—he returned for 14 limited appearances, then retired with a budding third fracture.

Walton reportedly has a contract guaranteeing him $700,000 for each of the next four seasons, with incentives to push a healthy playing game. Walton's take to date is $2 million a year. Since he is heavily insured, Clippers management must eventually decide whether to collect on the expensive insurance policy or gamble on Walton's recovery in an attempted comeback and forfeit the policy.

Borg-McEnroe set million-dollar battle
CLEVELAND, Ohio (UPI)—Christmas will come early this year for tennis fans who can't get enough of that Bjorn Borg-John McEnroe rivalry.

A best of five-set match has been arranged for that date in Sun City, Bophuthatswana, Africa, Dec. 6, with NBC televising the active live in the United States.

The sponsoring organization said the prize money will be in excess of $1-million.

NEW YORK (UPI)—Left-hander Rick Honeycutt of the Seattle Mariners, ejected from Tuesday night's game between the Mariners and Kansas City Royals for intentionally damaging the ball by rubbing it with a foreign substance, was suspended for 10 days Wednesday by American League president Lee MacPhail.

On Wednesday, Honeycutt, who entered the game with a 10-17 record, was visited at the mound by umpire Bill Kunkel, who discovered a thumb tack protruding through tape on Honeycutt's right hand.

The Mariners' starting pitcher was immediately ejected as was Seattle manager Maury Wills moments later for arguing.

Cavaliers obtain Duck Williams
RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI)—The Cleveland Cavaliers said Wednesday they have acquired guard Donald "Duck" Williams from the Utah Jazz for "future considerations."

The 24-year-old Williams, a 6-2, 180-pounder from Notre-Dame, averaged 6.6 points per game for Utah in 77 games last season.

The Cavaliers also announced the signing of free agent guard Robert Smith, formerly with the New Jersey Nets.

Cheifs waive two starters
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI)—The wireless Kansas City Chiefs waived two starters Wednesday, light end Tony Samuels and tackle Franky Smith.

Samuels, a fourth round draft choice from Bethune Cookman in 1977, had caught eight passes for 10 yards and two touchdowns this season. He last played in 1979 when he caught 14 passes for 147 yards in his first season as a starter.

Smith was an eighth round pick by Denver in 1976 who had failed in two previous tries with the Broncos before making the Chiefs as a free agent. This season, he started twice in his four-game stay with the Chiefs but became a reserve this season after the return of veteran tackle Charlie Getty from the injured reserve list.

Ram fans sue over poor seats
SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI)—Jack Kooden, Santa Ana, Calif., who has been a Rams season ticket holder for 24 years, filed a $100,000 suit against the football team in Superior Court Tuesday for giving him unequal seating.

Kooden said he always had seats 45 rows above the 40-yard line at the Los Angeles Coliseum. The Rams moved to Anaheim Stadium last year.

"Now, I'm 90 years up and five yards into the end zone," he said. "He said the team had moved in 1977 to give him just as good a view of the playing field when the team moved."

He alleged "breach of contract, misrepresentation and bad faith." Kooden said he spent $1,155 for his seven season seats and had "been subjected to an obstructed view at the stadium."

"Things just aren't the same," he said. "The Rams say they can't do anything about it. When you build up enthusiasm for a team you expect it to be reciprocal."

Landreux wins hitting award
NEW-YORK (UPI)—Minnesota Twins outfielder Ken Landreux will have $31,000 going to the charity of his choice for posting the longest consecutive game hitting streak this season.

Landreux batted safely in 31 straight games during 1980, the longest American League hitting streak since Dom DiMaggio's 34 consecutive game skinn for the 1949 Boston Red Sox.

For his achievement, Landreux won possession of the Aqua Velva Cup for a year and the charity of his choice will receive $1,000 for each game of his hitting streak.

George Brett of the Kansas City Royals came closest to passing Landreux, but his streak was stopped at 30.

Pete Rose of the Philadelphia Phillies won the cup last year.

Boxer remains unconscious
LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Welsh boxer Johnny Owen remained unconscious and on life supports systems Wednesday 13 days after he was knocked out in a championship bout, a spokeswoman for California Hospital said.

Owen fought World Boxing Council bantamweight champion Lupo Pintor, who was carried from the ring at the Olympic Auditorium after the 11th round Sept. 19.

He has remained in that condition "with no appreciable change," the spokeswoman said.

Owen said he has not been taken off of life support systems in the intensive care unit of the hospital. He twice underwent brain surgery.

Yanks would host playoff game
NEW YORK (UPI)—The New York Yankees would have the right to host the first game of the American League playoffs if they win the regular season of the American League East in a tie.

The AL announced that the game would be played at Yankee Stadium on Monday, Oct. 6, starting at 3:00 p.m. EDT.

Minoza to play in fifth decade
CHICAGO (UPI)—The Chicago White Sox announced Wednesday they will activate 57-year-old Minoza Minoza for their weekend series against the California Angels. The Sox' 1980 season finale.

Minoza batted eight times as a designated hitter in 1978 with one hit. He has been a White Sox coach since 1976.

Minoza, born in Cuba, came up to the major leagues in 1949 with the Cleveland Indians. He joined the White Sox in 1951, went back to Cleveland in 1958, and returned to Chicago in 1960.

Dear Abby

A rose by any other color...

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A reader wrote in to say that a co-worker had planned to carry a bunch of black roses. She asked, "Is this proper? And don't black roses symbolize death?"

You replied, "Black roses? You're putting me on!"

Abby, just because you've never seen black roses doesn't mean that there aren't any.

The Tidings, a Catholic publication recently carried an article titled, "A Black Rose." The author, a priest, the Rev. George Schoener, also was a botanist who gained a national reputation for having developed numerous new strains of roses, of which the black rose was one.

The Salem, Ore., Journal conferred the title of "El Padre de las Rosas" on Father Schoener in 1936.

Thought you should know, Adios.

DEAR CARLOS: CARLOS G. And all along I thought with Gertrude Stein that a rose was a rose.

Unfortunately, I limited my recollection to the classic red rose, and none of whom had ever heard of a black rose. I should have called Gerry Frank, my friend in Salem. He knows all there is to know about Oregon roses.

You snickers for Abby with a long-stemmed American beauty — thorns and all.

DEAR ABBY: We invited a family of six to spend Labor Day weekend at our summer place. The children ranged from 7 to 17 years old. (We have no children.)

The children helped themselves to whatever they found in the fridge at all hours of the day and night. The first day they ate nearly everything we had planned to serve for the entire weekend.

On Sunday we invited some neighbors in for Sunday buffet. The visiting children got into line first, loaded their plates up as fast as they could, and came back for seconds before some of the adults even had a first helping. Their parents either didn't see or didn't care what was going on.

After these weekend guests left, I could have kicked myself for not having found some way to control the situation.

Needless to say, this family will never be invited back. How would you have handled it?

DEAR MAD: MAD AT MYSELF. I hope you will mention this in your column. It may help parents who are trying to help their teen-agers at a time when they really need their parents' help but refuse to admit it.

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe I've actually joined the "I'd-be-writing-to-Deer-Abby" club, but here I am.

You recently wrote, in praise of the tape recorder: "If we could hear ourselves as others hear us, many of the world's ills could be cured. So if you're living with a whiny child, a screaming (or nagging) mate, or someone who says 'Ya know' a lot, get it taped!"

Abby, how right you are! When our son was 16, he came home from a party drunk. I taped the teary, maudlin, incoherent monologue he recited in my presence that night and played it back for him (privately, of course) the next afternoon. He was ashamed and appalled. Had he not heard it himself, he never would have believed how he sounded.

Today he is a healthy, well-adjusted, 24-year-old man who takes an occasional drink — but never to excess.

I hope you'll mention this in your column. It may help parents who are trying to help their teen-agers at a time when they really need their parents' help but refuse to admit it.

Sign me a LOVING DAD (Do you wish you had more friends? Get Abby's booklet, "How To Be Popular, You're Never Too Young Or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped, (35-cent) envelope to: Abby, Popularity, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Dr. Lamb

Blood pressure outlined

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Association

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have essential hypertension. I'm 65 years old and weigh 200 pounds. I'm 5 feet 11. I've been told that my condition is in a nature. Recent blood pressure readings have been from 202 over 110 to 150 over 64. I take Apresoline and Hydrochlorothiazide. Also Motrin for my arthritis and 1 pop vitamin E, three aspirins and a zinc tablet each day.

What bothers me is the wide spread between my systolic and diastolic readings. Presently the spread is 100 points or more. Would you also comment on my medication.

DEAR READER — The upper reading, the systolic pressure, is the highest level in your arteries. The lowest reading, the diastolic level, is the lowest level of pressure in your arteries.

The highest pressure is reached at the peak of the ejection of blood from the heart into your arteries occurring while the heart is contracting.

One reason for the systolic pressure to be high is because the heart is pumping out a lot of blood each time it contracts. You can see this in the healthy young athlete who is working vigorously.

A second reason for a raise in the systolic pressure is the loss of elasticity of the aorta, the large artery that comes directly from your heart.

In a young person this large artery is very elastic and as blood is squirted out from the heart into the arteries it merely stretches. That keeps the pressure from going too high.

As people get older the artery hardens and loses its elasticity. The more this occurs the more likely it is that the systolic blood pressure will rise. This can occur even though the low reading (diastolic) might be normal. There are other reasons for a high systolic pressure and a normal or a low diastolic pressure. These are usually related to a defect in the valve at the outlet of the heart.

In view of your history and the two pressure readings you've included in your letter, I would think that you probably have some loss of elasticity of your aorta which would be normal in your age group.

The labile nature of your blood pressure may be associated with increased pumping action of your heart. It's a little difficult to judge since you're already on medicine.

It's true that you have a tendency to have an overactive heart part of the time, you might do well on propranolol (Inderal). Many times doctors have to try different combinations of medicines to find out what works best for each individual patient.

I'm sending you the Health Letter No. 15-9, Your Vital Blood Pressure. It will explain in greater detail the three main factors which influence your blood pressure and how they're influenced by different medicines.

Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, 370 Box 1851, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10109.

You can influence your blood pressure a great deal by your life style. If you have any excess fat, and I suspect you do at your body weight, you'd be wise to get rid of it. Other aspects of your life style that influence your blood pressure are also discussed in the Health Letter I'm sending you.

Women get less than male aides

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than 60 percent of congressional employees are women, but they are paid less than their male counterparts and are given few of the top jobs, the Capitol Hill Women's Political Caucus said Tuesday.

"Congress should set an example, not make itself an exception in such an important area as civil rights," said a staffer. Dorn, caucus chairwoman.

The caucus released a survey showing that among Senate staffs, women earn 67 percent of the average male salary. In the House, women's salaries average 74 percent of men's salaries.

Of the staff positions with highest pay and greatest influence on policy-making, 12 percent are women in the Senate, and 37 percent are women in the House, the report said.

Ms. Dorn noted that Congress has exempted itself from the Equal Rights Act, Equal Pay Act, Equal Opportunity Act and other employee protection laws.

"Despite the fact that Congress has passed numerous civil rights laws, which apply to the private sector, such protections do not exist for congressional employees," she said.

The caucus surveyed employment statistics of 49 Senate and House employees, over 60 percent of whom are women.

Only about 15 percent of the female congressional staffers are in policy-making jobs, while nearly half of the male employees hold such positions, the report said.

The makeup of a congressional staff can have a significant impact on the type of legislation a member of Congress will support and work for," Dorn said. "We believe that key staff positions which aid Congress in determining national policy demand a greater representation of women."

The caucus urged Congress to establish a Fair Employment Relations Board that could decide disputes and oversee such matters as pay and advancement.

Ms. Dorn said many women staffers fear that if they speak up about their inferior pay or job status they might be fired.

The House has adopted a voluntary fair employment program, but less than one-fourth of the members have agreed to comply. The Senate has no such plan.

The report said the average salary for women in the House is $15,859, while the average for men is $21,763.

Educator named

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. Secretary of Education Shirley Hults has named Lutheran educator H. E. Jensen to the senior position of Assistant Secretary for Nonpublic Education in the new Department of Education.

Jensen, secretary of elementary and secondary schools for the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, will be responsible for assuring maximum participation of nonpublic school children in those government programs for which they are eligible to participate.

PBS starts old houses series

Thursday, October 2, 1980 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho C-3

THURS. & FRI., OCT. 2nd-3rd

By LES HAUSNER
© Chicago Sun-Times

It's akin to watching a production of "Eugene O'Neill" or reading "The Ugly Duckling."

On Oct. 2 PBS will begin a 33-week series on rehabilitating old houses. The stars of the show are two old homes in the Boston area, each of which undergoes a metamorphosis from a deserted, vandal-ravaged near-wreck to a beautiful showplace residence.

For 13 weeks the home handyperson will receive instructions in home rehabilitation and be entertained in the process—as a 120-year-old Victorian house in Boston gets a thorough overhaul.

Then for 20 weeks the scene shifts to a hilltop in neighboring Newton, Mass., where a summer home (more like a mansion) built in 1887 for surgeon Dr. Jacob Bigelow is being turned into five luxury condominiums.

The series, titled "This Old House," is produced by Boston Public Television Station WGBH, and heavily financed by Montgomery Ward & Co. If you check the credits for such well-received public television shows as Julia Child's cooking show and "Victory Garden," you'll discover they also are produced by Russell Morash, mastermind of "This Old House."

The 13-week segment on renovating the Boston house was aired there last year, and according to Morash, drew some of the highest ratings in his station's history.

The Victorian house, in rundown condition, was purchased for $17,000.

Restoring it cost $52,000 (some material was donated) and it sold at our fund-raising auction for $55,000.

"The two nurses who bought it got an excellent deal. The house was appraised at $75,000," Morash said. "We weren't looking to make money. We just wanted to show what can be done with an old house," he said.

There won't be any bargain prices when the rehabbed Bigelow property is put on the market. The house, listed in the National Register of Historic Places, and its surrounding five acres of land were purchased by the Newton Historical Society for a mere $10,000.

Rehabilitation will run in excess of $600,000 and the largest condominium, which will have six fireplaces, will sell for about half that amount.

Bob Vila, a builder and architect who plays host for the series, acts out the role of the novice, asking the workman how such-and-such a chore is done this or that way.

The series begins with its most colorful characters, a local appraiser who walks through the house declaring everything "a disaster" and a termite inspector who can't find any but turns up countless other kinds of bugs.

Then the fun begins on the big stuff: replacing part of the foundation, ripping off old roofing and siding, replacing damaged wall sections, installing a modern heating system. Kitchens and baths. Some of the floors have to be taken up and relaid because they were laid parallel with the joists instead of across.

On-the-tube training will be provided in painting, wallpapering and plastering.

Vila reveals many secrets of rehabbing: how to find the proper materials and good workmen, what can be restored and what modern improvements—thermopane windows and whirlpool baths, for example—should be added.

"We're keeping the exterior much as it was, and it's expensive. Replacing the old shingle siding is costing us $30,000 for the shingles alone," Vila said.

The renovation also includes reverting the Bigelow House grounds to their landscaping design of 90 years ago. This means cutting some trees and brush to restore the huge lawn and making room for special varieties of trees that were planted there by man.

If the Bigelow House hadn't been abandoned as it was in 1973, rehabilitation today would be a simpler task.

"Vandals came in stripped a lot of things—especially molding, fireplace tile and all of the stairway banisters and balusters. We may never be able to duplicate the balusters exactly because we have no photographs of the originals," Vila said.

Vila has a ready answer for any critics who comment that an awful amount of money is going into restoring an old house:

"If you put in gold you'll get it back."

Therapist has seen suicidal 5-year-olds

EAST PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) When group therapy is mentioned, you may envision a neurotic collection of adults who meet on a regular basis and discuss their hang-ups.

For Dr. Anne Benham, the term means twice-a-week sessions with 2- and 3-year-olds and their mothers. Since May, Dr. Benham, 33, has been treating several sets of mothers and children in group therapy sessions at Bradley Hospital, a psychiatric center affiliated with Brown University.

"The parents are having trouble negotiating with their children, they're deadlocked in struggle," Dr. Benham said in her office, where dolls and hand puppets share shelf space with books.

She said parent-child conflicts can be sparked by a death in the family, an alcoholic parent or a combination of events.

Her main goal is to solve each conflict early, so it doesn't worsen as the child gets older.

Dr. Benham says the idea toddlers can't suffer from psychological or emotional problems is a myth.

"In general, people believe children can't have problems, that they'll grow out of them—just because they're young," Dr. Benham said. "At this age, a child's repertoire is small."

"I've seen suicidal 5-year-olds, but no younger than that. My belief is, a very serious problem early on gets compounded later."

She believes her therapy method is unique.

Down the narrow corridor from her office, a small playroom is reserved for the group. During two-hour sessions, a teacher directs activities while therapists meet individually with parents and children.

One woman was referred to Dr. Benham's therapy group after her 2-year-old daughter came home from the hospital. Circumstances of the child's injury are unclear, but she may have been abused by her father.

"Guilt and anger surfaced when the child returned home."

"The mother became totally depressed," Dr. Benham said. "The child withdrew from everybody. She began to have tantrums and head-banging sessions."

Finally, the mother came to the therapy group.

"One of the most difficult issues to deal with is anger—both the child's and parent's anger," Dr. Benham said. "She said they're not sure answers to problems a child and parent experience."

"One of the advantages of the group approach is parents can use each other for support and find common problems," she said.

Group sessions also help the therapists.

"We may suggest something that works with a child," she said. "We might also find that our suggestion doesn't work."

"Our focus is to treat the parent and child. We say, this is your child, let us help. We essentially say you can solve the problem, you can handle it," Dr. Benham said.

Her program is aimed at parent-child couples, experiencing severe problems of communication, not a parent with usual day-to-day conflict with his or her child.

"For one thing, we certainly don't want to treat people," she said. "We're not trying to invent problems that aren't there."

Unsolved issues each decade harm women

By CAROL FELSENTHAL
American Library Association

Maggie Scarf — whom psychiatrist Thomas Szasz called "a great popularizer of medical subjects in the best sense of the word" — has written a book on women and depression that, in terms of scope, insight and intelligence, is truly impressive. "Unfinished Business" (Doubleday, $81 pages, $15.95) — packed with case studies (Scarf conducted all interviews) and analyses of research findings — is divided into six sections. Each covers a decade of a woman's life, from the teens to the sixties. Each is built around detailed case studies that illustrate the pressure points of the teens, the 20s, 30s and so on.

One theme runs throughout: The woman who fails to resolve problems raised in one stage before moving on to the next carries around emotional "excess baggage" that can weigh her down for years to come. She is a likely candidate for depression — an affliction which strikes upward of 40 million Americans (one in five) — two-thirds of them women. If the women who offered Scarf such intimate looks at their lives are representative, unresolved problems almost always originate in adolescence. Depressed women are usually women who failed to separate — to detach themselves from their parents.

Most of Scarf's interviewees were approaching or well into middle age, but still mired in the "unfinished business" of growing up. They invariably described themselves as feeling "unnecessary," "like nothing," "like a ghost."

Until the inner separation has been accomplished, the author explains, there's a sense of not yet having become "me, myself." One is nobody because one isn't anybody yet.

The case studies which often read like fiction, are taken from taped transcripts. Debra, 19, when interviewed, had felt rejected from an early age. Adopted at 3 weeks, she thought of herself as "a defective purchase," a "bad buy."

"I am not the daughter my mother wanted." She described herself as "litter" — drifting newspaper — something that's floating around, underfoot, being kicked aside.

She was 14 when she accidentally cut her leg, wrapped it tightly to stop the bleeding, and went to sleep. The next morning it was grossly swollen. She kept the real cause from her mother so she could stay home from school.

She continued cutting off her circulation until doctors, bewildered, diagnosed her as having a fatal disease, called lupus erythematosus.

As their fatally ill child, she was managing to extract from her parents, nurturing tenderness and care. Months later, another doctor diagnosed her as having a brain aneurysm, an aneurysm and scheduled her for brain surgery.

Finally she wrote a letter of confession to her parents and took an overdose of sleeping pills. She had just turned 15. That was not to be her last unsuccessful suicide attempt.

Scarf focuses as much on the physiological as the psychological aspects of depression. Researchers now say depression is a total bodily disorder, involving virtually every one of the organ systems.

For example, a depressed person's body contains a higher concentration of salt, an important ingredient in conducting nerve impulses. The result is an imbalance of electrical charges within the nervous system.

One of Scarf's interviewees had sunk into a deep depression soon after the birth of her daughter. The cause, the author postulates, was partly physiological.

During pregnancy, women secrete high levels of — progesterone — a hormone that is believed to produce an inner state of tranquility. There is a sharp decline after delivery, creating a biologically induced state akin to withdrawal, explaining, perhaps, why new mothers run a four to five times greater risk of mental illness in the first three months after delivery.

In the early years of this century, Sigmund Freud asked, in a semi-joking tone, "What does a woman want?" He admitted that, for him, the question remained an unanswerable riddle.

Maggie Scarf, my painstakingly showing how what is lacking in a woman's life can lead to depression, comes as close as anyone has yet to answering that question.

Many Caesarean births unnecessary

By B. D. COLEMAN
Newsday

WASHINGTON — The tripling of the nation's cesarean birthrate in the last decade has been produced in part by adherence to outmoded medical theories, a federally convened group of experts concluded Wednesday.

The frequency of cesarean deliveries has risen from 5.5 percent of all births in the United States in 1970 to 15.2 percent in 1978.

Members of the Consensus Development Panel on Cesarean Births found that 25 percent to 30 percent of the increase in the rate of such surgical deliveries may be attributed to cesareans performed routinely on women who had an earlier baby delivered by cesarean.

What is sure to be its most controversial finding, the panel concluded that some of those repeat cesareans may be unnecessary. "The practice of routine repeat cesarean birth is open to question. . . . Data from national and international sources suggest that labor and vaginal delivery after a previous low-segment cesarean birth is of low risk to mother and fetus in properly selected cases." The group stressed that unless a woman's first surgical birth was a so-called low-segment cesarean — a small, horizontal cut across the lower portion of the uterus — and unless she delivers in a hospital fully staffed and equipped to perform an emergency cesarean within six to 15 minutes, she should not be allowed to attempt a vaginal birth.

The panel, brought together by the National Institute of Health, believes that "this trend of rising cesarean birthrates may be stopped and perhaps reversed, while continuing to make improvements in the maternal and fetal outcomes which are the twin goals of clinical obstetrics today."

While the report said the group could not fully explain the rapid rise in cesareans over the decade, it said the four categories that account for the largest portion are repeat cesareans, births in which labor is prolonged or delivery becomes impossible, breech births, and deliveries in which there is fetal distress.

The group also concluded that term breech births occur in many cases, be delivered vaginally rather than by cesarean, as is now usually done.

The panel said it was unable to find evidence to support the widely held theory that fear of malpractice suits has caused many physicians to perform cesareans in marginal cases, believing they might later be found guilty of negligence for not having attempted the operation. But one member of the group, Dr. Robert B. Hilly, a practicing obstetrician from Dayton, Ohio, said in an interview that he believes "at least a third of the increase is due to fear of malpractice."

More concern sought for maternity ward grief

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Grief in the hospital nursery or maternity ward won't go away and that's why two sociologists from Clemson University in South Carolina are stepping up an unusual crusade that may last them a lifetime.

"Our crusade won't end," Dr. Larry G. Peppers said. "Until hospitals, doctors and other health care professionals learn to give more tender and loving support to mothers and fathers who have lost babies involuntarily—be it during or shortly after giving birth."

The grief in maternity wards and nurseries strikes about 250,000 times a year, research by Peppers and his associate, Dr. Donald J. Knapp, showed. And seldom does the mother or the father get the kind of grief support needed to help them through the heartbreaking time, they claim.

"The mothers tell us and we believe it," Peppers said. "They tell us it is a hurt that never goes away. Some mothers even pine over the fact that they don't have a picture of the baby who's been born dead."

"That is why we suggest all hospitals make certain to photograph the babies who don't make it and keep the pictures in the files."

How often does grief strike in the hospital nursery and maternity ward? "Nearly one out of three women who conceive children lose their babies to perinatal death in the United States each year," Peppers said.

"And while most of the time surrounding death and dying is being lifted in American society, little attention is paid to the tragedy of dying babies and the parents who have experienced this painful loss."

Peppers and Knapp, both associate professors of sociology at the university in Clemson, said they got on this unusual trail five years ago.

"We were doing research on death and dying and my wife told about losing a baby 16 years earlier—during her first marriage," Peppers said.

"She became very emotional and cried. Deep sobs. Grieving. 'I thought this sad life event must get little or no grief support at the time the tragedy strikes. If she still feels that way this many years later, there is a problem.'"

The two sociologists investigated, starting by talking with other mothers who had lost babies before, during or shortly after a birth.

Frequently the recounting of the tragedies—in a distant or recent year—were punctuated by sobs.

Mothers told of being placed in rooms across from the nursery of a spiggleling, healthy, crying babies. Every sound or sight of a baby set them to sobbing.

The grief of asking to be moved from the maternity suite. They said they were told something like this: "It's hospital policy to help you get over it."

Others told of being stunned when a doctor or hospital administrator instructed them to call a funeral director and make the arrangements at once.

"I received hundreds of lengthy letters from women throughout the world describing their own experiences with infant death and volunteering to participate in our research," Peppers and Knapp said.

"All of course, welcomed their participation. Many of these women completed questionnaires and others were interviewed."

"From these interviews and questionnaires and letters we have developed a broad picture of the problems faced by grieving mothers."

"Motherhood and Mourning" aims at parents but it also targets the health care establishment—including doctors and hospital administrators.

It also calls for more sensitivity on the part of funeral directors.

Peppers and Knapp hope their practical guide for all professionals, counselors, psychologists, psychiatrists, nurses, doctors and social workers will lead to more gentle treatment of parents who need grief therapy at a time they expected great joy.

The sociologists are taking their crusade to the lecture circuit and to specialized audiences by writing in journals ranging from one for funeral directors to those for psychiatrists and medical schools.

In a report in the "Journal of Medical Education" they advise pediatricians and obstetricians to follow these tips, among others:

1. The bad news should be given to the family in the best possible physical surroundings, such as a room specifically for that purpose, or in a quiet corner of the mother's hospital room. It should not be given on the ward, in the corridor, in the lobby of the hospital, or any place where the parents cannot express emotion without embarrassment.

2. Both parents should be together at the time. In the case of a stillbirth, the father may be the first to know, but he should be with the mother when she is told.

3. The actual wording of the announcement of death should be factual, compassionate, and free of jargon and clichés. It should come from the primary physician.

4. A kindly gesture such as putting an arm around the father, holding the hands of both parents, or even shedding tears may seem embarrassing to the physician. But such responses are frequently remembered later as outstanding acts of moral support.

Peppers said mothers hate to be told, "Now you have an angel in heaven."

"I don't want an angel in heaven," many have told him. "I wanted that baby."

Mothers who have lost one of a set of twins hate to be told: "You have one to keep, isn't that nice."

"If I came into the hospital with two and one came home with one, people wouldn't make me feel good about it," one mother of twins, only one of whom survived, told Peppers.

"So why do they want to make me feel good about losing a baby? I wanted that baby, too."

Other mothers who lost one of a set of twins echoed the complaint.

The grieving mothers also cringe when they receive "get well" cards while still in the hospital. It is not a get well situation when you have lost a baby. It is a grief-stricken time of "see you later," the mothers told the sociologists.

"A sympathy card or a note expressing the fact that you grieve with those experiencing the loss is more the correct response from friends," Peppers said.

In a report in a Journal for funeral directors, Knapp and Peppers recount some experiences of mothers and fathers and then advised:

"What you as a funeral director would like or prefer has no bearing on the matter... what is important are the desires and needs of the parents."

Excerpts from some of the case histories in the report for funeral directors:

Julie: "They tried to keep me from going to the baby's funeral but I told them I was going. I had to crawl out of the window. I remember the funeral was at 2 o'clock and although I was still pretty weak, I got dressed, went down the fire escape, took a cab, and attended my daughter's funeral."

"My doctor was furious and so was my husband but I'll be damned if I were going to keep me from it. She was my daughter and I wanted to see her laid to rest."

Betty: "The big question was how to handle the arrangements. City burial or family plot? Which was to mourn for to mourn? We consulted our rabbi, doctor and close family and under their sound advice proceeded to do the very thing which for us was very wrong. "We chose a city burial and did not mourn. Only weeks afterwards did I sense something was amiss. I was too upset, too depressed. My depression was out of proportion."

"I finally realized what was wrong. I discussed it with my husband at length, and with my baby exhumed and reburied in the family plot."

"Only then was I able to come to terms with myself and her death."

Chris: "The administrator of the hospital told one of the doctors that delivered me that we had to bury the babies and should make funeral arrangements."

"My husband in all his grief had to go through it alone. He went to the funeral home and then to the cemetery and watched them put those little caskets in the ground."

"He told me later that it was something he will never forget. He doesn't think anything will ever hurt him as badly as that did."

Preppie look has returned to campuses

By JON GOODMAN
Chicago Sun-Times

The preppie look is back on high school and college campuses this year. It's a classic reunion of loafers and button-down blouses with simple, natural hairstyles and makeup. They're back together again and looking better than ever.

You'll step right to the head of the class if you prepare for the fall look by conditioning your skin and hair to repair the ravages of summer.

A deep mask is an excellent refresher. It helps to fight the oiliness that skin might be prone to during the steamy summer months by removing embedded dirt and dead skin.

Consider good skin care a regular, daily assignment, and try the Vidal Sassoon skin care line: the Balanced Complexion Bar, the Skin Balancing Rinses, and the Multi-action Moisture Cream.

Many daffodil varieties

By RICHARD DELANO
© Chicago Sun-Times

"As yellow as a daffodil" could be a byword. Yet this is not completely accurate. Daffodils include spectacular two- and even three-colored flowers, shaded with white, pink, orange and red. Pinks and reds are difficult colors in daffodils that are rather washed out unless planted in the shade.

So many beautiful daffodil varieties are available that a recent registry published in England listed more than 9,000. The sheer numbers of narcissus or daffodil varieties available can prove bewildering to the new gardener. A simple approach is to become familiar with the basic classes and divisions. New varieties come and go, but the categories don't change.

Here is an outline of the major classes currently available:

- Trumpet daffodils, the most popular group, include the golden trumpet, which is usually white, and yellow petals, while "Peeping Tom" is uniformly deep yellow with long trumpet. Both are small miniature types.

- In northern areas such as Chicago, they should be planted in protected locations such as near the foundation of a house.
- Jonquilla hybrids are very fragrant. And their round, rush-like foliage usually produces several flowers on one stem. "Trevithian" is pale buttercup yellow.
- Tazetta types, formerly known as "Poetaz" daffodils, include many doubles and produce clusters of flowers on one stem. Though attractive anywhere, their small sizes make them particularly suitable for rock gardens. Color range is large. "Early Spondon" is white with orange cup, and "Geranium" and "Scarlet Gem" are white with startlingly beautiful orange-scarlet cups.
- Poeticus daffodils also are finely from the George Park Seed Co. of Greenwood, S.C. Mail order is the easiest way to obtain these novel blooms. Now almost all major mail-order companies offer superb collections of pink daffodils.

- Double daffodils are almost like yellow roses. There may be only a single flower to a stem, but the flower itself is double, having two or more rows of petals, sometimes in contrasting colors. "Texas" is yellow with an orange center, and "Mary Copeland" has petals of creamy white and a center of interspersed lemon yellow and red-orange.
- Trianthus hybrids have sprays of up to six flowers on a stem. These daffodils are usually white, and available in both small-cupped and long-cupped varieties. Petals are usually reflexed, or bent backward.
- "Thalia" is pure white, while "Silver Glines" has a touch of pale primrose in the cup.

- Cyclamineus hybrids are daffodils with drooping cups and the reflexed petals similar to the cyclamen flower. "February Gold" has a golden yellow trumpet and yellow petals, while "Peeping Tom" is uniformly deep yellow with long trumpet. Both are small miniature types.
- In northern areas such as Chicago, they should be planted in protected locations such as near the foundation of a house.
- Jonquilla hybrids are very fragrant. And their round, rush-like foliage usually produces several flowers on one stem. "Trevithian" is pale buttercup yellow.
- Tazetta types, formerly known as "Poetaz" daffodils, include many doubles and produce clusters of flowers on one stem. Though attractive anywhere, their small sizes make them particularly suitable for rock gardens. Color range is large. "Early Spondon" is white with orange cup, and "Geranium" and "Scarlet Gem" are white with startlingly beautiful orange-scarlet cups.
- Poeticus daffodils also are finely scented, and have white petals with shallow, saucer-like yellow cups delicately edged with orange or red ("Aurora").

Daffodils should be planted now to bloom the following spring. They need well-drained soil and a spot where they will receive some sun. Lack of some sun is one reason for reduced bloom.

Plants often look most effective when used as edging for borders, or in natural-seeming random clumps. They are quite spectacular in large masses of 12 to 25 or one variety or color. Smaller clumps (no less than three bulbs) of other colors and varieties will add drama to the landscape. For the most fun, I prefer to plant more varieties but less of a variety.

Before planting, soil should be broken up and loosened to a depth of 4 to 10 inches—spade depth. If drainage is poor or soil is heavy, add Canadian sphagnum peat moss. Bone meal or other fertilizer high in phosphorus, calcium and magnesium is also decidedly worthwhile and should be mixed with the loosened soil. Remember, once planted, daffodils stay in place about five years.

Bulbs should be set firmly, pointed end up. Large bulbs should be set 6 to 8 inches below soil level, and spaced 6 inches apart. Smaller bulbs may be set 4 to 6 inches deep and 4 inches apart. Cover with soil and water thoroughly. In Holland, where the bulbs are produced, they receive 70 inches of rainfall a year. Chicago, on the other hand, receives 30 inches. Your bulbs will respond tremendously to an extra fall watering you give them.

Continue watering until the first freeze. In the North, a mulch is desirable after planting.

In spring, as soon as the first shoots appear, fertilize the bulbs again with a high nitrogen and potassium fertilizer—and God's programming will do the rest.

Hopes for record

BRUNSWICK, Ohio (UPI)—A 29-year-old mother of three quietly rolled out of Brunswick City Hall in quest of a world record.

Cindy Green slipped into a new pair of white roller skates to begin her hoped-for goal—more than eight months on skates. City officials witnessed her start Tuesday.

Mrs. Green figures the record is eight months because someone skated for eight months and earned a spot in the Guinness Book of World Records.

In the meantime, she said, "I'll be going through my daily routine but with my skates on."

Her routine includes housekeeping, raising her three daughters, ages 8, 4 and 3, and doing shopping. She even plans to continue driving, although the wheels of her skates make doing so a bit awkward.

MVRS accredited

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Rehabilitation Services has been accredited for another three years.

Jeffrey Crumrine, executive director of the services, recently received a letter from the Commission on Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities, based in Tucson, Ariz.

That letter said, "Your facility has successfully met high standards of performance and has been accredited for a period of three years from this date for its programs of vocational development, sheltered employment and work activity.

"This important achievement on your part is further indication of your dedication and commitment to improve the quality of the lives of handicapped and disabled individuals."

The commission is the largest independent agency in the United States that accredits vocationally oriented programs.

Parents, utilize tax laws to help costs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Many parents could reduce the heavy burden of financing college education for their children if they put the tax laws to work for them.

This advice comes from Frederick L. Simmons, a prominent Los Angeles tax attorney and from William O. Brennan, the nationally-known Valley Forge, Pa., tax shelter expert.

Because congress steadfastly has refused to grant substantial income tax deductions for tuition fees, college expenses have to be paid out of taxed income.

The burden is a stiff one, even for upper income families.

There are, Brennan said, two legal ways to achieve tax savings to help with the expenses. They work best for those in high tax brackets but, he said, many families in more modest circumstances could achieve some savings to help with their tuition burden.

Brennan presents the hypothetical case of a husband and wife, filing joint returns, who have earned income that puts them in the 50 percent tax bracket plus $20,000 of "passive income" such as "dividends or rents which lifts them to the 70 percent level. This couple has two children in college, each at a cost of $10,000 a year.

The federal tax bite on the $20,000 of passive income — the tuition payments, in effect — is $14,000, ignoring the insignificant dependency deductions allowed.

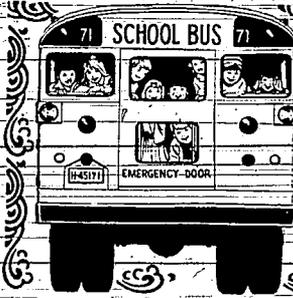

Brennan explained two legal ways to reduce this bite.

One was described by Attorney Simmons recently in a periodical called "Taxes," and digested by Brennan in his publication, "Brennan Reports."

It involves what is known as a ten-year Clifford Trust established for the children. Placing of assets yielding $20,000 a year in such a trust could cut the annual tax bite from $14,000 to as little as $2,360, he said. Over a ten-year period, the tax saving to the parents could be $117,000.

At the end of the ten years, the principal can revert to the parents. It is also legally possible for the parents to borrow money from a Clifford Trust from time to time, Brennan said. He stressed, however, that such a trust involves gift taxes and offsets against them and perhaps ultimate estate tax consequences.

Surplus of doctors is predicted

By AL ROSSITER JR., UPI Science Editor

WASHINGTON — The current shortage of doctors in the United States will change to a surplus of 70,000 physicians by 1990 due to growing medical school classes and an influx of foreign-trained doctors, a government-sponsored committee said Tuesday.

The Graduate Medical Education National Advisory Committee predicted there will be too many doctors in 15 specialized fields such as neurosurgery, cardiology, general surgery and obstetrics-gynecology.

But the panel forecast a doctor shortage in child psychiatry, emergency medicine, preventive medicine and general psychiatry. It said the need for psychiatrists for children will be particularly acute with only 4,100 in 1990 while 9,000 will be needed.

The committee said there should be just enough doctors in family and general practice, general internal medicine and pediatrics.

Dr. Alvin R. Tarlov, chairman of medicine at the University of Chicago and committee chairman, said he believes a doctor surplus would increase national health costs because studies have shown that as doctor densities rise in a particular area, physician utilization rates also increase.

However, he said some would argue that the increased competition among large numbers of doctors would tend to drive down prices, increase availability and provide better geographic distribution.

"I think this is likely to be a very controversial subject in the next year or so," he said at a news conference.

To balance supply with projected demand by 1990, the committee recommended a 17 percent cut in medical school enrollment in the United States while promoting increases in the number of minority students.

The panel also told the Department of Health and Human Services that there should be sharp restrictions on the number of students from foreign medical schools entering the United States.
