Debate details remain unsettled

WASHINGTON (UPI) — To debate or not to debate remains the question. Representatives of President Carter, Ronald Reagan and the League of Women Voters Monday negotiated face-to-face for five hours and then by telephone without agreeing on the details for a Carter-Reagan debate.

terred by telephone Monday night. But spokeswomen Vera Hinerfeld and Ruth Hinerfeld, chairman of the League of Women Voters Education Fund which sponsors the presidential debates, told reporters after Monday's discussions, "We've discussed place, we've discussed date, we discussed format and we made considerable progress. We expect that within the next 24 hours our agreement will be complete and we will have all details at that time to report to you."

Monday, President Carter and Reagan continued their long distance dialogue on foreign policy. Anderson in Chicago, independent John Pearson disputed national polls which have locked him out of the presidential debate. He said his figures show he is a power to be reckoned with.

Idaho farmers may benefit from U.S.-China grain deal

WASHINGTON — The Chinese need wheat, and Idaho farmers may benefit. The Peoples Republic of China is likely to put wheat at the top of its imports list as part of an agreement being finalized with the United States according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

final negotiation in Peking on Oct. 17, entails from 6 to 9 million metric tons of U.S. grain to be sold to China annually over a four-year period — one of the largest grain deals in history and one to rival the five-year contract between the U.S. and the Soviet Union for 8 million tons of grain per year.

wheat harvest, is in vast surplus this year due to good weather and cutoffs in shipments to Iran and Pakistan, according to the Idaho Wheat Commission. White wheat is typically used for noodles and pastries, while higher protein red wheat — which makes up about 25 percent of Idaho's production — is used in breads.

Firebird takes wing. Portraying the flight of the Firebird, Elizabeth Diaz of the American Festival Ballet dances solo to Igor Stravinsky's music during a matinee at the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium Monday for local students. In this Russian fairytale, the Firebird is captured by a wandering prince who tries her in return for a magic feather. Idaho's only professional ballet troupe also performed "A Midsummer Night's Dream" Monday evening.

Democrats optimistic about gaining Idaho Senate control

BOISE — Idaho Democrats are betting they'll be smiling in November. The odds are good, they insist, that Democrats will capture control of the state Senate.

two decades, Republicans point out — and add that the GOP winning streak isn't about to be broken now. Which party's assessment of the future will be revealed Nov. 4, but one thing is clear: the battleground for control of the Idaho Legislature is the state Senate.

Republicans now have a 50-20 edge in the 70-member House of Representatives, the largest margin the state has ever had in any body of any state's legislature.

however, Republicans hold just 19 seats, against 16 seats occupied by Democrats. That means a shift of just two seats would give the Democrats a one-vote majority.

Democrats have complained for 10 years that the 1971 Legislature, where the GOP controlled both the House and the Senate, "gerrymandered" districts to favor Republicans. GOP leaders deny these charges.

Both Democrats and Republicans have put most of their efforts this year into Senate races. Both parties have sought candidates for open seats and raised funds for those candidates. Less effort has been spent in recruiting and financing House candidates.

Andrus lauds Carter's record as conservationist

TWIN FALLS — Jimmy Carter's record establishes him as the greatest conservationist-president in American history, Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus said Monday.

The Alaska Lands bill is one example of why Carter has won that title, Andrus said. "But even without that Alaska bill, there would have been more acres put into wilderness during his first term of office than had been wilderness before," he added.

Cecil Andrus or the Carter Administration of being environmentally oriented, which we are, we have a better record for leasing than any other administration." In contrast, Andrus said, Ronald Reagan's environmental record was "dismal."

"We have a five year program that will give four times the amount of acreage per year than has been leased in the past for oil and gas exploration. Regardless of what they say about mining operations in America."

"We now have a coal program where we can lease additional coal in an environmentally safe manner, and it's already survived the litmus test of the courts," Andrus said. "The other administrations couldn't do that."

Abadan fight rumbles on amid more peace feelers

BASRA, Iraq (UPI) — Iraq claimed Monday it had surrounded Abadan with an "air-tight" ring and appealed to residents to get out of the way of the fighting.

Iran admitted that the city, site of the largest oil refinery in the world, had been cut off from the Persian Gulf. A Baghdad Radio broadcast on the 29th day of the Persian Gulf war said Iraqi forces were "clearing pockets of resistance and limping up the air-tight siege of Abadan" and Iraq broadcast its appeal to the people of Abadan.

The fighting, cause despite Id al-Adha, the Muslim Feast of the Sacrifice, a four-day holiday that begins Sunday. The Koran, the Muslim holy book, prohibits bloodshed during the holiday, which commemorates Abraham's willingness to sacrifice his son at the command of God, and God's decision to provide a lamb to be sacrificed instead.

Battle reports indicated Iranian defenders were holding out in Abadan, while Iraq pounded the city with artillery and mortar.

Continued hand-to-hand street fighting was still reported in Khurranshahr, 14 miles upstream on the Shatt-al-Arab waterway, which Iran has renamed the "City of Blood."

Other battlefield action seemed minor and intermittent.

Diplomatic efforts to end the Iran-Iraq war made a sudden reappearance Monday.

In Tehran, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and the Parliament speaker, Abolhasan Rafsanjani, held separate meetings with Habib Chahidi, representing the Iranian Islamic Conference.

Chahidi told Khomeini the heads-of-state mission from Islamic countries could arrange a cease-fire and set peace talks started.

In other developments:

• A seven-man Iranian commission, considering the issue of the 52 Americans held captive since last Nov. 4, may recommend to Iran's parliament this week its proposed solution to the hostage issue.

• Iran's Prime Minister Rajai, after a visit to the United Nations in New York, began talks in Tripoli with Libyan leaders who have openly supported Iran in its war with Iraq.

• An special representative of Iraqi President Hussein said in Tokyo his country would welcome mediation by any country to end Iraq's war against Iran. He denied Iraq has been receiving Soviet arms through Jordan.

This has been a bitter race. There have been charges and counter-charges. The people should just disregard that and look at the two men and decide who they want to represent them. If Frank has done a bum job then they ought to throw him out.

"But you have to take a look at Frank Church's record from 1956 until today. Have you ever heard of Frank Church being accused of feathering his own nest, or playing the commodity futures market? No. Frank has clean hands all the way through. But has he delivered? You bet he has."

Speaking to an evening dinner of 125 persons, Andrus also renewed his criticism of Republican Sen. Jim McClure. Andrus said McClure "overstepped the lines of propriety" in helping to plant a question at a north Idaho rally which accused Sen. Church of being responsible for the death of agents working for the Central Intelligence Agency.

Church's committee, which investigated the CIA included Minority Leader Howard Baker and Sen. Barry Goldwater, Andrus noted. Names of CIA agents which were released to the public came not from the Church committee, but from books published by disgruntled former agents. "If there was a leak, it didn't come out of that committee."

"You can't put it around Frank Church's neck the way they tried to do by planting a question in Grangeville. And that comes down to a question of integrity. McClure had facts available to him showing that wasn't true. Frankly I am disappointed in Jim McClure."

"There's an understanding among those of us in politics of what you can do and what you don't do. You play the game, but either you're honest or you're not. Either you have integrity or you don't. And I saw Jim McClure step over that line. And he wasn't pushed over that line; he was a volunteer."

Andrus said he hadn't ruled out challenging McClure in 1984, when the Republican Senator's seat is up. McClure's role in the planted question incident is just one of several actions that suggest McClure "left" representing the best interests of Idahoans, Andrus said.

Andrus added, however, that his main priority for the next four years "was returning to Idaho. I'm tired of Washington."

He has been nominated as a board member of the newly formed Synthetic Fuels Corporation, that post will be a part-time job, Andrus said. A part-time position will give him more time to spend with his family.

Andrus also said his confirmation to that board is conditional on the reelection of President Carter. "If he isn't re-elected? Then I'll do something else."

General talks Greece back to NATO

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secret negotiations by a top U.S. general succeeded Monday in bringing Greece back into NATO's southern flank after an absence of six years. U.S. officials said.

Gen. Bernard Rogers, commander in chief of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization military forces, worked out final details of the arrangement with Greece and Turkey during the past two weeks.

The talks apparently drew impetus from the protracted Persian Gulf crisis and the replacement of a weak civilian government in Turkey by a regime of the country's top military officers.

Legislature

tion comes from Republican Party Chairman Dennis Olsen.

An examination of legislative races this year reveals neither of those predictions is that unusual. Several factors present which make upsets a possibility.

Eight of the incumbents seeking re-election — five Democrats and three Republicans — won their seats in 1978 by the narrow margin of 55 percent of the vote or less.

In most elections, a margin of five percentage points or less is considered "striking distance" or a margin of 10% or under the proper circumstances it can be overcome.

In addition, nine incumbent senators — five Democrats and four Republicans are not seeking re-election. One of those incumbents, retiring Senate Minority Leader Cy Chase, D-S, Maries, acknowledged an "open" seat is often easier for a challenger to win than a seat held by a long-time incumbent.

While Chase said he expects a Democrat to win his seat this year, he acknowledged that neither party is around the state, the races could be close.

Two other factors of uncertainty have clouded the legislative races this year.

Both parties have popular candidates near the top of their tickets. Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan and senatorial candidate Steve Symms comparing to the polls. Republicans who otherwise might not vote. That could produce a "coastal" effect, with those voters also casting ballots for other Republican candidates.

The Democrats, with Sen. Frank Church atop their ticket, might also benefit from the same effect. Church has shown a knack for getting out the Democratic vote.

At this point, several Senate races seem to be close. Most often mentioned by Democrats and Republicans as "hotly-contested battles" are those in:

District 14 (Ada County), District 15 (Ada County), District 16 (Ada County), District 18 (Ada County), District 21 (Blaine, most of Minidoka and part of Lincoln counties), District 22 (Elmore, Camas and the western half of Gooding County), District 25 (eastern quarter of Twin Falls County), District 26 (Cassia and part of Minidoka County), District 27 (most of Bingham and part of Power County), District 31 (most of Bonneville and Teton County), District 32 (Caribou, Bear Lake and Franklin counties), District 33 (most of Bannock and Oneida County.)

Volcanic shocks continue

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Molten rock rising from the earth's fiery interior Monday sent volcanic rumbles through the 11 1/2-mile-wide crater floor of Mount St. Helens.

The underground pulsations accompanied the growth of a dome of lava welling up at a circular hole at the center of the 3,600-foot-deep crater, the U.S. Geological Survey said.

Extortion attempt probed

STATELINE, Nev. (UPI) — Authorities sought a California man for questioning Monday in a reported attempt to extort $10 million from a Lake Tahoe casino by threatening to poison its water supplies.

Patty's defense suspect

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A federal appeals court ruled Monday that Patricia Hearst may have been properly defended in a federal bank robbery trial because her lawyer, F. Lee Bailey, was planning to write a book about the case.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ordered the trial court to hold a hearing on the matter. It also suggested that Bailey and his associate, Albert Johnson, may have violated legal ethics.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than 80 Cuban refugees undergoing psychiatric evaluation Monday armed themselves with pipes, bottles and broken light bulbs and took over a building at a Washington mental hospital for seven hours.

Immigration and Naturalization Service officers had threatened to use tear gas to disperse the refugees from the building — hit for the second consecutive day with violence — but the takeover ended peacefully when the Cubans walked out about 3 p.m. MDT.

Along the campaign trail

Anderson keeps up his whistling

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (UPI) — John Anderson said Monday millions of Americans will elect his presidential opponent by abandoning their weak allegiances to the traditional parties when they reach the voting booth Nov. 4.

The independent presidential candidate, addressing the annual Freedom Forum meeting, said "millions of Americans have concluded that politicians are either knaves, fools or charlatans — and that you can only vote when you hold your nose."

Declaring "I can win" on Election Day, Anderson said again he will press his apparently hopeless challenge through Nov. 4. He said voters will break their long established party loyalties at the very last moment, on Election Day, in the privacy of the voting booth.

He called President Carter's support "faltering" and said there is "rising hysteria" in the president's campaign.

"The truth is that Mr. Carter cannot win," Anderson said.

Carter makes pitch for urban vote

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Carter told a cheering black audience Monday he is launching a major effort to stop drug traffic, help the addicted and arrest pushers in five Eastern cities.

Backed by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., former heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali and several New York political leaders, Carter said in the Bedford-Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn, "We must do something about the drug program in this community."

He gave no details other than to say the program will be centered on five cities — New York, Newark, N.J., Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.

Using funds already available, he said, the program will concentrate on treatment of addicts, will attempt to stop the flow of drugs and will seek "prosecution of those distributing drugs in the first place."

As usual, Carter attacked Ronald Reagan for his stands on the economy and on help to cities.

Reagan brandishes peace plank

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Ronald Reagan pledged Monday to negotiate a new strategic arms limitation treaty with the Soviet Union, and charged that President Carter's policies — not his — are more likely to lead to war.

Campaigning as the candidate of peace, Reagan said there is a greater threat of nuclear war under President Carter's "weak and vacillating" foreign policy than under his proposal to build up America's military strength.

"I think peace is one of the main issues if not the major issue of this campaign," Reagan said at a rally before several thousand people on the Louisville waterfront.

Earlier in Cincinnati, Reagan quipped, "The president of the United States seems determined to make me start a nuclear war and I'm just as determined I'm not going to."

The network used a split screen to show both Carter and Reagan answering the same questions on the subject of defense in separate interviews.

Brown, Muskie defend SALT against Reagan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In an obvious answer to Ronald Reagan, Defense Secretary Harold Brown said Monday failure to ratify the SALT II treaty would be a "major tragedy" which would cost the United States $100 billion to match a massive Moscow arms build-up.

President Carter also assailed Reagan's Sunday statement he would bypass the unratified SALT II and open negotiations with the Soviets on a SALT III treaty for a "balanced and equitable" reduction in nuclear arms.

Carter said in Washington Reagan's plan "would be a devastating and perhaps fatal blow to the long-term process of nuclear arms control. It is extraordinarily naive to expect that the Soviet Union would meekly accept what we would immediately and totally reject."

Secretary of State Edmund Muskie pursued the more generalized administration criticism that Reagan seeks to use U.S. power recklessly.

"I cannot warn strongly enough against one-dimensional approaches to this (the Persian Gulf crisis) or any other area of international tension," said Muskie in a speech prepared for delivery to a group of Chicago organizers.

Speaking to the Overseas Writers Club, Brown said the chances of the Senate ratifying SALT II "are good" but warned ratification should occur before spring 1981 or the pact would unravel.

Brown refused to name Reagan directly on grounds he did not want to "personalize" or "politicize" his remarks.

"Neither tough talk and easy promises for the future, nor the nostalgic dreams of the past, can substitute for hard-fought, tangible and significant progress now," Brown said.

Pro-Church committee attacks foe

BOISE (UPI) — The Nobody But Church Committee Monday attacked its counterpart at the other end of the spectrum in Idaho's Senate race, saying the Anyone But Church group should reassess its alliance with Sen. Frank Church "gave away" the Panama Canal.

In a prepared statement, NBC — a newly formed group designed to counter accusations leveled by the ABC project — said the incumbent Democrat "did not give away the canal because it was not America's to give away."

"In the early part of the century, the United States tried to acquire the property for the canal, but Columbia refused to part with it," the group said. "The United States assisted in setting up the civil war that enabled Panama to break away from Columbia, but the Panamanians would not sign the treaty either, and so the United States signed a treaty with a Frenchman... purporting to give the United States control over the canal, but leaving sovereignty over the territory in Panama's hands."

The 1978 agreement between the U.S. and Panama "remedies an injustice," NBC said, "and Church's support of it is the act of an honorable man."

"As working men, we can't afford Senator Church any longer..."

The members of Boise Division Local 1055 of the Amalgamated Transit Workers, AFL-CIO, announce that we have voted to support Steve Symms over Frank Church. And we have done it because we agree with what Mr. Symms has been saying and the way he has been voting in Washington, D.C.

We all know that our International and the AFL-CIO leadership is supporting Senator Church; as working men, we can't afford Senator Church any longer. And we're angry that the union leaders in Washington won't admit that. Therefore we urge other members of organized labor to join us for prosperity by voting for Steve Symms and the free enterprise system.

Frank Church and his Democratic colleagues are no longer "friends" of the working people, only "friends" of the people who won't work. And working men like us simply can't, and we won't, carry the load for those who won't work.

On issue after issue, Steve Symms has voted to protect our paychecks and defend our jobs. He has voted against ever-increasing inflation. He knows, like we do, that the government prints money, but business and labor build wealth.

Congressman Symms has voted to cut our taxes and let us keep more of what we earn. He's working to protect the Social Security system and voted against the last Social Security tax increases. He has worked to limit the excessive and wasteful government programs that we have to pay for.

A lot of rank and file union members are going to vote for Steve Symms this fall because he's talking about the things that we care about. We trust Steve Symms and believe his kind of thinking can turn America around and get it headed in the right direction.

Board raps endorsement

DETROIT (UPI) — Officials at the church where Rev. Ralph Abernathy endorsed Ronald Reagan last week expressed dismay Monday with Abernathy's choice and with the publicity that followed it.

J.A.U. Carter, president of the church's Trustee Board, issued a statement saying the church "clearly and emphatically" does not endorse Reagan and did not know Abernathy planned to use the church's his forum.

Abernathy, once head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and close associate of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., shocked many black leaders with his endorsement last week at a meeting between Reagan and black ministers.

In his statement, Carter referred to Abernathy only as "a former black activist leader," and said:

"The political meeting was not called with knowledge of the officers, members or church conference, which is the sovereign body of this church. The implications that these politicians have the support and empathy of the board of officers and Church Conference are incorrect."

Time for fundamental change

When Idaho voters go to the polls to vote for their next U.S. Senator Nov. 4, they must ask themselves a basic question:

Have they been satisfied with the philosophy of government of the United States for the past six years, or do they believe it is time for a philosophical change.

If they agree with the status quo and want more of the same, they will vote for incumbent Democrat Frank Church.

If they want to have a hand in creating a fundamental change they will vote for Republican Steve Symms.

We believe the time for that change is overdue and that Symms can serve as a catalyst to start the momentum back toward responsive and responsible government.

Church unquestionably has done a great deal for Idaho. If he is defeated, the state would lose a man who wields a great deal of clout on Capitol Hill and the Senate Foreign Relations committee.

Longevity has aided Church's rise in power, but not without the sincere humanitarianism and integrity that has won him devotion at home and in Washington.

Ironically, Church's legislative prowess that has so effectively promoted his good intentions has largely translated into federal duplicity. Years of liberal legislation has founded layer upon layer of agencies, few with the direction and wherewithal to produce the visionary ideal of Federalism, rather than the panacea, has fed the malnancy.

After these many years of dedicated service, we doubt Church has the spirit or the fortitude to address dismantling the magnitude of perpetual bureaucratic waste.

Steve Symms, in contrast, appears ripe for such an inglorious task. Wielding the ax while barring the door to the federal coffers leaves few plums to parade before home state folks. But more and more folks are becoming skeptical of empty promises and short-changed pay checks.

The country needs elected officials who will vote for less government, not more, and who will vow to reduce the government's regulatory role in the private sector.

The country needs men in Congress who will shore up the nation's sagging defense posture, particularly in military readiness.

The country needs Congressmen who will demand a foreign policy that is consistent, not one that vacillates.

Symms' philosophy embraces this kind of government.

In a campaign appearance recently in the Magic Valley, he said, "...for eight years I have voted and worked for controls on spending, a balanced budget, a stronger economy and national defense, a balanced approach to preserving our environment and other goals I believe the people of Idaho want our nation to achieve."

Until the nation sends more conservative representatives to the U.S. Congress, its citizens simply will not see a bona fide effort to halt the trend of "big is better." It will not see an end to liberal spending and catch-all legislation until there are enough votes to say "no."

Many issues have been injected into this campaign, some that are emotional, irrational and blind. They have served only to intensify the smokescreen surrounding the fundamental question we describe here. Do not be deceived by those who want to hang either candidate with a one-sided, out-of-context perception.

We have not agreed with some of the campaign tactics employed by the Symms camp in this election and have called him to task for them. Likewise, we believe Symms should have taken a more decisive position early on to rebuke the efforts of those outside groups seeking to influence this election.

But we believe the needs of the country transcend an imperfect campaign. We must look at what a man believes and determine if his deeds measure up to those beliefs.

We find the state of the nation clearly demands a fundamental change. That is why we ask you to elect Steve Symms to the U.S. Senate.

The Bendix affair

The Boston Globe Newspaper Co. Washington Post Writers Group

BOSTON — If you could harness the energy devoted to office gossip in any workplace you could probably solve the oil crisis.

The Bendix Corporation is no exception. But the story of Mary Cunningham and William Agee has made the ordinary office viciousness look positively benign.

In a matter of days in corporate headquarters, 29-year-old Mary Cunningham was promoted to vice president and then humiliated out of the business. All because of rumors that she and Agee were having an affair.

Needless to say, this story would have bubbled around any water cooler for quite a while. But it also landed on page one of almost every newspaper in America, and for the past week it has been a catalyst for debates between men and women, bosses and employees.

The Cunningham-Agee story is an updated version of the favorite male fantasy about women who sleep their way to the top. It is absolutely ripe with hostility toward uppity women, especially young uppity women, especially pretty young uppity women.

On the surface, the argument is whether Mary Cunningham was her promotion because of "favoritism." But once you get two sentences into the debate you can hear the old subconscious fear and anger rumbling around: "The feeling that men really have is 'unfair advantage' over men in the business world: The belief that they take that unfair advantage.

I would like to dismiss this notion as the bitter raving of a rejected male executive overdoing on martinis and testosterone. But it's too widespread and too destructive to simply write off.

Just think about all the "unfair advantages." As far as I can see, every promotion to the executive suite is based in part on a personal relationship. Bosses promote the people they like and know.

It's no news bulletin that the ambitious will jockey for casual friendship in the steam room, the golf course, the private club. These are precisely the places often closed to women. Men don't consider that an "unfair advantage."

The other informal path to success is to stop for an after-work drink, or sign on for the out-of-town trip. This is the way a man convinces his leader that he is charming, intelligent, and a good business hustler. This is also the easiest way for a woman to convince her boss that she is another sort of hustler.

The after-work drink and the road trip work for men, but not for women. Men do not consider this an "unfair advantage."

When you come down to it, a woman who wants to diffuse the sex issues had better be plain, happily married and talk about her husband incessantly. At that point, of course, she will probably be passed over for promotion because she doesn't need the pay raise. Women do not have a set separate-but-equal unfair advantages: It is plain old hostility that assumes that a woman can only get to the top on her back instead of her merit. It is plain old fantasy to envision middle young business-school graduates cutting through the competition with a little pillow talk.

If women can sleep their way to the top, how come they aren't there? Only six percent of all the working women in the country have squeaked into management. Only 600 of the 15,000 people on boards of directorships are female. There must be an epidemic of insomnia out there.

I'm not naive. The workplace is not a convent; people meet and fall in love over stranger things than blueprints. But nobody calls the reporters in when yet another boss sleeps with his secretary. If you look at the sexual harassment statistics, it's women at the bottom who are considered fair game.

The sex issue in work is loaded against women — precisely because there are so few in any kind of power. Each one is the exception, not the rule, assumed to have some mysterious power to cloud men's minds.

Did they or didn't they? Are they or aren't they? Does it matter? All I know is that Mary Cunningham is out and William Agee is still president. There's an old proverb: Whether the rock hits the pitcher or the pitcher hits the rock, it's going to be bad for the pitcher.

Well, no matter what happens, or why, in this sort of collision it's the less powerful person who gets shattered. In corporate America, Mary Cunningham was just another pitcher.

Right on canal

Editor, Times-News:

What kind of farmer would it be who would plant a crop when he knew in advance that less than 10% of the seed was going to germinate and produce the crop he wanted? What rational, intelligent merchant is going to stock his shelves with a product which he knows will not attract his customers and over 90% of his inventory will remain unsold? Farmers and merchants are smarter than that. Nobody is going to deal in something when the guarantee of success is less than 10%.

Let's look at the case of the Panama Canal. In the year 2000 only 7% of the world's shipping will be able to traverse the canal. Already the oil super tankers, our aircraft carriers and Trident submarines are too large to make the passage. The canal is becoming an obsolete project.

The Canal Zone has never been an American Territory. We have been paying rent for the Zone in order to operate the canal. Now, with the canal in a short 20 years becoming obsolete, why are there complaints that we are "giving it away"?

Look at the transfer as a business investment. We are buying good will in Central America. We are paving the way for negotiating a route across Panama for a future canal. Presidents Johnson, Republican Richard Nixon, Republican Gerald Ford, all thought that the Panama Canal Treaty was a necessary, rational, smart thing to do. Senator Frank Church knew it was the right thing to do. Even John Wayne was in favor of the treaty.

It just sounds like good business sense to me.

Explanation due

Editor, Times-News:

For several months, we have been hearing about Steve Symms and his connections with the Hunt-Brothers that infamous duo from Texas who brought the U.S. financial community to its knees when they tried to corner the world silver market.

Now, with less than three weeks to go before the election, Symms has yet to sufficiently address these matters. Serious questions remain about Mr. Symms' integrity and his apparent willingness to be the errand boy for the oil companies and other millionaires from outside this state.

I feel that Symms owes the state of Idaho explanations to these questions:

Why is it that Nelson and Herbert Hunt came to Idaho to get a Congressional seat to do their work for them in Washington rather than going to one or more of Texas' 26 representatives in the House and Senate?

Why did Symms introduce legislation in the House and Senate that would have exempted them from Western Sugar Company, at the expense of Idaho sugar producers?

Why did Symms introduce special legislation on behalf of the Hunts that would have exempted them, if enacted, from being prosecuted for violating federal commodity futures trading regulations? This question was raised after Hunt had been accused of rigging the soybean market. Nelson Bunker Hunt sits on Symms National Finance Committee and has contributed to Symms' campaigns. Why has Symms refused to disassociate himself from these Texans in light of the devious, scheming manipulations that the Hunt-Brothers have over the years at the expense of thousands of Americans?

The list of questions goes on and on stemming from the Symms/Hunt relationship. Idahoans deserve answers to these questions and Symms has no right to expect us to vote for him until he comes clean and clears himself of these dispersions.

Symms salvation

Editor, Times-News:

Attention Senior Citizens! It seems to me that many of the senior citizens know that inflation is our greatest enemy and we know what we are going to do about it. For those who do not know how to fight the inflationary trend, let me suggest that you do so by naming your vote for Steve Symms. He is our greatest salvation.

Senator Church seems to feel that because he holds Christmas parties around the state, he has the senior citizen vote in his hand and can depend on it. But has been of any great benefit to you? Let's remember that inflation is caused by excess government spending. Let's remember that Senator Church is the one who goes back to Washington and votes for the big spending bills that cause the "inflation tax" that hurts us senior citizens the most.

Reagan has a history of making asinine ad-libs

© Chicago Sun-Times

Ronald Reagan's nervous keepers took a chance this week and let him out on his own long enough to give a TV interview.

They don't like doing that because they never know what might pop out of his mouth when he doesn't have a prepared speech.

So Reagan used part of the interview with Barbara Walters to try to feed tall guys for his long-standing habit of swallowing his own fool.

That's a favorite excuse of politicians who don't always exit from the same paragraph or thought that they entered. It was summed up best by Carl Bush, press aide to the late Mayor Richard Daley of Chicago, who uttered the memorable command to reporters:

"Don't print what he says; print what he means."

Reagan's ad-libs have some validity when he is talking about the results of his ad-lib comments.

That's when he's most dangerous to himself — when he tries to think and talk at the same time. It was while ad-libbing that he placed President Carter in a small Southern town that Reagan said was the birthplace of the Ku Klux Klan. It turned out that the remark — besides being pointless — was also wrong, since the Klan had been born in another place.

And throughout his career, Reagan's ad-libs have produced stunning results. When he was California's governor, he tossed off the rather ungracious remark: "He hoped that poor people, getting free food as a result of the Chucky Hearst kidnapping, would suffer food poisoning."

While campaigning for president in an earlier race, he tried to scare some rustics by telling them that crime was so rampant that six cops had been killed in Chicago the previous week — a complete falsehood.

About conservationists, who were concerned about threats to California's forests, he once said: "15,000 acres of trees in the state park system is a lot to look at. How long can you look?"

And during the Vietnam War, he sneered at members of the peace movement by saying: "They talk with the fear of a child going into the dark, about dying. It may come as a surprise to them, but the fact is, we all die." (Of course, the odds of dying in a war were sharply reduced for Capt. Reagan, who got himself assigned during World War II to an Army filmmaking unit in Hollywood.)

When he makes one of his memorable blunders, he petulantly blames others, for misunderstanding him. But in doing so, he often compounds his gaffe by making excuses that sound even stranger than his original blunder — such as earlier this year, when he told a crude ethnic joke, then tried to convince everyone that he had told the joke as an example of the kind of crude, ethnic jokes he disapproves of. That's something like spilling-in someone's eye, then saying you did it to demonstrate that spilling in someone's eye is a rude thing to do.

It's because his campaign manipulators can't trust him to talk and think at the same time that they have kept him on such a tight leash in recent weeks. They seldom let him say anything that hasn't been written in advance.

But even that isn't enough to prevent some of his bizarre opinions from leaking out. Apparently, his speechwriters use some of Reagan's great thoughts as part of the prepared speeches. And that's almost as dangerous as his ad-libs. Maybe even worse so, since it is hard to complain that somebody misunderstands you when your words are printed in a prepared text.

That's what happened recently when Reagan talked during a speech about the environment and said, in effect, that oil spills on the ocean could be good for the environment, but that some gases given off by trees could be bad.

As far as anybody knows, he is the first candidate for any office, except for that of chairman of the board of an oil company, to have anything good to say about oil spills. And he is also the first major candidate to sound the alarm about the threat to the environment posed by trees.

When his people were asked where these giddy facts came from, they said that they were part of Reagan's private "storehouse" of information. What else is in his private information bank — that the singing of birds is bad for the eardrums?

A debate is dangerous to Reagan. By now, everyone knows what Carter's faults are. He can't do himself much harm by taking advantage of a forum that will let him talk about his accomplishments.

But a debate could finally bring out Reagan's most serious flaw as a presidential candidate. Not that he flubs about his achievements as governor of California, or that he flubs when he says he isn't scuttling his old extreme positions in favor of more moderate-sounding — vote-grabbing positions.

A debate is dangerous to Reagan because if he starts tossing out some of his weird facts, people will find out that he isn't very smart. What else is in his private information bank — that the singing of birds is bad for the eardrums? Even a boyish grin can't overcome all that.

Canal decision was a travesty

Editor, Times-News:
The recent decision of the Idaho Supreme Court to allow Canyon View Irrigation Co. the right to condemn the Twin Falls Canal Co. system is a travesty on justice, fair play, and the basic right of private ownership of property.

An unbelievable and far-reaching decision against what has been a simple and basic right since the beginning of civilization, that what you have paid for and owned, is yours and yours alone.

Just because whatever you own would benefit someone else or be useful to them, has no basis in fact that they should be allowed to share it with you. This holds true of the Twin Falls Canal Co. which is owned by its stockholders.

The decision by the Idaho Supreme Court was apparently based on an early day canal company having an excess capacity and extra water. Denying the use of both to outside landholders has no relevance to the Twin Falls Canal Co. and Canyon View case. There isn't any extra capacity to deliver more water and there isn't extra water to deliver.

I have no quarrel with anyone farming on places other than the Magic Valley area served by the private canal systems. Many people applied for desert lands with the intention of getting water to these lands through our canal system. People owning land now farmed and watered by wells or by pumping from the Snake River, Salmon Falls Creek, etc., also seek to obtain water through our system.

After developing their land and using these means of water delivery, they sought to find ways to cut their expenses. Since there are set prices for fertilizer, seed, labor, etc., they came up with a scheme of getting their water delivered cheaper. These are the steps taken to accomplish this:

1. Hire a lawyer to try to force their way into the Twin Falls Canal Co. system and using it for their benefit, regardless of it being a privately owned company.
2. Use the Department of Water Resources, its director and board to aid them by advising them to be included in a water delivery system which eventually discovered - surprise - surprise - that the Twin Falls Canal system could be used to deliver water to the Brunson Plateau and other lands more inexpensively than the present means of irrigating them.
3. Pressure the BLM to release lands being withheld presently for feasibility studies and filed on years ago with no possibility of obtaining water by means of wells due to a moratorium on well drilling in those areas.

4. Lobby and pressure the Legislature to see the great benefits for Idaho in gaining this additional land for taxes, etc., but not mentioning the advantages to be gained by developers of these lands.

5. Get the state government to pitch in by studying the project and with financial aid along with U.S. government aid also.

Then comes the Idaho Supreme Court decision. You can see the results of the efforts of a few determined and influential people. They have succeeded in accomplishing quite a bit.

So you see, seemingly impossible things, sometimes unfair things, happen when people sit idly by and do nothing to try to stop them from happening.

In Czechoslovakia and other European countries years ago, people probably said their countries could never be taken over and the people made virtually prisoners of the state who no longer owned anything privately. The state would own every thing and parcel it out at will. Socialism, communism, call it whatever you want.

Isn't this decision by the Idaho Supreme Court a step in the same direction? Destroy or take away the rights of the stockholders of the Twin Falls Canal Co. for the benefit of Canyon View, then other projects, and on and on to no end.

In reference to the editorial on this decision, the editorial was very one-sided and not based upon an understanding of the true facts.

I think the publisher's yard, privately owned and maintained, I'm sure, should be opened up for a pathway for bikes and children coming from the door of his house to Sawtooth School.

Perhaps a road through there would cut down on the heavy traffic going south at Locust and East to the south end of Falls Avenue. It could be of great benefit! So what if it's privately owned? As the editorial said to the canal company members, sit down and work it out nicely with your neighbors.

There's no different if it's your property, paid for and owned and maintained by you. Just as our canal company is owned by us and your paper's editorial suggested working together, you can do the same. It's sure different when the shoe's on the other foot, isn't it?

During the Supreme Court hearing in Twin Falls about the canal company vs. Canyon View, one of the Supreme Court justices asked Canyon View's lawyer what Canyon View proposed to do about damages resulting from the enlargement of our canal system. The question was never answered. They should be made liable for any and all damages resulting from the enlargement of our canals. We are the unwilling accessories to the forced entry into our canal system.

Soviet boy's parents sue to reverse order

CHICAGO (UPI) — The parents of Walter Polovchak, the 13-year-old Soviet boy granted political asylum last summer, Monday sued the Immigration and Naturalization Service seeking to have the order reversed.

The federal court suit filed on behalf of Michael and Anna Polovchak by the American Civil Liberties Union also asked for $200,000 in damages.

The boy, 15, ran away from home and fled an application for asylum July 17, about seven months after he emigrated from the Soviet Ukraine with his parents and sister, Natalya, 17.

The younger said he did not want to return to the Soviet Union with his parents, who had decided to return to their homeland.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service granted him political asylum and Cook County Juvenile Court Judge Joseph C. Mooney placed Walter with foster parents pending final disposition of his case. The judge will decide Nov. 5 who will take custody of the teen-ager, who visits his parents weekly.

As proof that he was fit again, Dali said he recently completed two new paintings and a series of pencil sketches.

Dali displayed one of the paintings, which measures more than 3 feet square, and said he already had sent the other to his museum in Figueras.

Painter Dali rarin' to go

PORT LLIGAR, Spain (UPI) — Salvador Dali, the alling surrealist painter, has emerged from six months of virtual seclusion promising to create a new huge work of art that may be the largest in the world.

Dali, 76 and flamboyant as ever, said he was preparing to begin work on a 22-mile long project in Romania, with the help of a team of American scientists.

The artist, who was believed to have been suffering from psychological and physical problems since April, summoned seven reporters to an impromptu 3-hour news conference Sunday.

The Spanish news agency EFE reported that Dali looked well although he was suffering from a sporadic trembling of his right hand and had to be helped up the stairs of his home.

As proof that he was fit again, Dali said he recently completed two new paintings and a series of pencil sketches.

Dali displayed one of the paintings, which measures more than 3 feet square, and said he already had sent the other to his museum in Figueras.

Carson fall not so funny

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Johnny Carson tore some cartilage in his ribcage but did not break any ribs when he fell while rehearsing a sketch for a "Tonight Show" telecast last week, it was taken Monday revealed.

"It isn't right, I don't breathe, talk or cough," Carson, 54, said after his check-up at an undisclosed hospital.

Doctors said the tests revealed that Carson suffered "no displacement or fractures" when he tumbled and fell on his side instead of his back Friday, while preparing a scene for a "Mighty Carson Art-Players" sketch at the NBC Studios.

The comedian, in the best tradition of "the show must go on," did his show and tried to hide his pain from the audience for about 30 minutes.

Carson spent the weekend resting at home. He previously was scheduled to take a vacation this week.

Carson said it was the first time in 18 years that he had injured himself taking part in the physical high jinks of his show.

High court refuses child custody case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An Illinois woman Monday narrowly lost her bid for Supreme Court review of a decision denying her custody of her children because she lives with a man who is not her husband.

Three justices, on short of the needed number, said they wanted to hear Jacqueline Jarrett's appeal from an Illinois ruling that her living arrangement threatens the upbringing of her three children.

Justice William Brennan, writing for the dissenters, said the case raises an important social issue. He cited 1978 Census Bureau statistics showing there were 1.1 million households headed by an unmarried man and woman.

More than 25 percent of these homes include at least one child, he said.

The court also rejected claims a person's privacy right includes choice of medical treatment.

In other actions, the court:

- Held unconstitutional a Louisiana statute requiring registration of workers coming into an area.
- Agreed to consider whether private individuals may sue under federal environmental law for pollution and other damages to wildlife. Citizens already may seek to enforce such laws through class action suits.

• Refused a request by former CIA agent Philip Agee to hear arguments soon on his passport revocation case.

• Agreed to consider a California dispute over whether military retirement pay is property that may be divided in a divorce settlement.

The custody case has attracted widespread public interest since the Illinois Supreme Court held Mrs. Jarrett, by violating the state's fornication statute, showed a "disregard for existing standards of conduct" that instructs her children, by example, that they, too, may ignore them ... and could well encourage the children to engage in similar activity in the future.

Dissenting from the high court's refusal to review that holding, Brennan and Justice Thurgood Marshall wrote:

"Nothing in the record or in logic supports a conclusion that divorced parents who fornicate, for that reason alone, are unfit or adversely affect the well-being and development of their children in any degree over and above whatever adverse effect separation and divorce may already have had on the children."

Tampon warning drawn up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration Monday proposed all tampon products be labeled to warn women not to use them if they want to eliminate the risk of a rare but sometimes fatal disease.

The illness — toxic shock syndrome — has been linked to 30 deaths in recent years, although it is believed to occur in only about three of every 100,000 menstruating women each year.

risk by using tampons on and off during your period.

• If you have a fever of 102 degrees or more, and vomit or get diarrhea during your period, remove the tampon at once and see a doctor right away.

The FDA said major tampon manufacturers have already agreed voluntarily to start providing warning information on or in their packages pending the outcome of the FDA proposal, which will be published for 30 days of public comment.

'Pill' risks slight, study concludes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The final report on a 10-year study involving more than 16,000 women concludes the risks from taking birth control pills appear to be negligible, at least for the young, white, middle class Americans studied.

The report said the study provides "additional assurance" that users of oral contraceptives do not have an increased risk for cancers of the breast, uterus or ovary.

And it said: "Oral contraceptive users have no increased risk of death from all causes combined."

But the report said the final word on oral contraceptives is not yet in. It said questions remain, particularly concerning the association between pill use, some conditions and personal lifestyle habits.

The proposed warning label would say:

WARNING: Tampons have been associated with toxic shock syndrome, a rare disease that can be fatal.

You can almost entirely avoid the risk of getting this disease by not using tampons. You can reduce the “Natural gas does the cooking, heating and water heating at the Rock Creek Restaurant. I wouldn't have it any other way.”

“We use a lot of energy in the restaurant business. Natural gas is faster, more responsive and less costly than any other form of energy available. That's why you see the use of natural gas in so many fine restaurants across the country. And it works just the same way at home.”

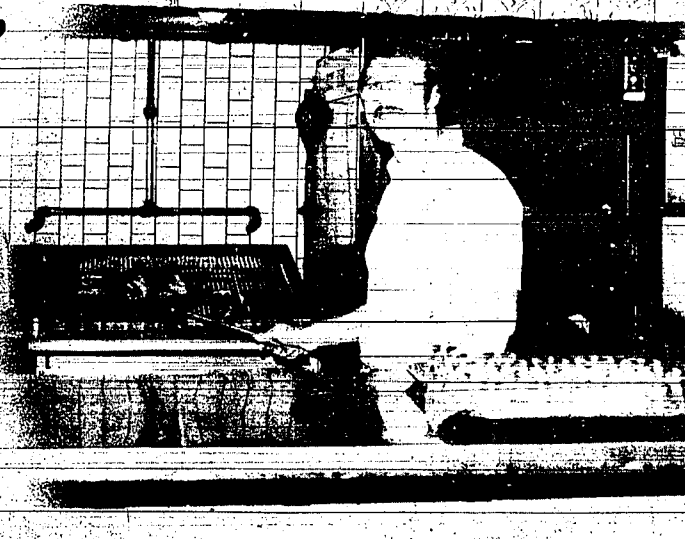

Stan Thomas

In the long run, balanced use of energy is the only choice we have.

Every home that uses gas instead of electricity for heating and water heating frees up enough power to serve five or six additional homes with electricity for all those other jobs that only electricity can do — lights, television, radio and appliances. That's the best use of energy . . . and it's our only choice.

Dear Abby

She's trying to improve

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is a long story, but I need some advice and don't know where else to get it.

Jack (not his real name) and I started going steady when we were both 15. The longer we went the closer we got, so what happened just had to happen. Well, it happened one Sunday afternoon in a room over Jack's garage, which was sort of our hideaway. We pretended to break up and kept seeing each other in the sneak for a while, then he started seeing other girls and I went with other guys. We sort of drifted apart.

Meanwhile because of Jack, my mother made me go on the pill—just in case. I told a few of my closest girlfriends, they blabbed it around, and pretty soon the whole school knew it. I guess my reputation wasn't so hot because I had guys hanging around who only wanted me for one thing.

I am trying to turn over a new leaf, Abby. Tell me, how does a girl clear her name after it has been dragged in the mud?

BAD-MOUTHED—A girl clears her name the same way she messes it up by—the way she behaves. Don't expect to clear your name overnight. It will take time, but it can be done with a continuing record of good behavior. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: If a person slips an ashtray into his pocket while dining at a restaurant, would this be considered stealing? I started taking ashtrays from famous places as souvenirs and have a fine collection from all over the world.

—COLLECTOR

DEAR COLLECTOR—"Collecting" anything without permission is stealing. The kind of advertising you suggest costs the restaurateurs of the world millions.

—If you want a souvenir, offer to BUY it, and it will probably be given to you.

DEAR ABBY: You recently had a letter from a woman who chastised you for failing to acknowledge female ministers. She stated that this is a result of discrimination and deep-rooted prejudices.

May I submit to you and your readers that, for many like myself, being opposed to the ordination of women into positions of leadership in the church, such as the eldership, the deaconship and the ministry, is neither a matter of discrimination or prejudice, and certainly not mere preference. It is a matter of scripture-based conviction.

If Christ is to be the head of the church, then we must allow him to be the head, and to rule the church as Lord through his Word.

1 Timothy 2:12 states, "But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence."

1 Corinthians 14:34-35 says, "Let your women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law. And if they will learn any thing, let them ask their husbands at home: for it is a shame for women to speak in the church."

God's Word is truth and is eternal; therefore it cannot be outdated. (Matthew 24:35.)

I rest my case.

Radiologist charges ACS surgery-prone

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

NEW YORK — A high-ranking cancer doctor says the American Cancer Society is too surgery-oriented and does not adequately inform women of less drastic options than mastectomy for the treatment of breast cancer in its early stages.

Dr. Luther W. Brady Jr., a radiologist on the ACS board until 1979, spoke out Wednesday at a Medical X-Ray Forum sponsored by the American College of Radiology.

"At least 50 percent of women with breast cancer that hasn't spread can be treated successfully with radiotherapy — which spares the breast," he said.

"The American Cancer Society is surgery-oriented, and I raised hell about that."

Some 108,000 new cases of breast cancer will be diagnosed within the next 12 months and Brady said about 65,000 could be treated successfully with radiotherapy.

He said the same approach is demonstrating a very high percentage of success in preserving a cancerous prostate gland in male patients.

"Radiotherapy is less drastic in many ways, including human suffering," he said.

Brady complained that women and men "aren't hearing much about this treatment alternative to surgery from the American Cancer Society."

"The American Cancer Society is surgically oriented when it comes to advising women on treatment for breast cancer. But the society is not a group of surgeons and it should give a balanced view of treatment options when women inquire."

Brady, who was on the ACS board from the mid-1970s until 1979, is a former president of the Pennsylvania Division of the ACS. He is an ACS professor of clinical oncology and chairman, Department of Radiation Therapy and Nuclear Medicine, Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital, Philadelphia.

He said women need to be told about changing concepts in the treatment of early breast malignancy that offer hope of saving a breast via radiotherapy.

Persian Gulf war leaves oil cartel temporary 'dead duck'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — In the view of leading oil analysts, the Iran-Iraq war has put the OPEC oil cartel temporarily "out of business."

"OPEC is a dead duck," said Dr. Marwan Iskandar, publisher of the oil and economic weekly, Al-Nahar Arab Report and Memo. "It is out of business until the Iran-Iraq war ends, and even then its ability to raise prices will be hampered for two or three years."

"The war has frozen everything," commented Prof. Robert Mabro, Oxford University oil economist.

The Persian Gulf war could not have come at a worse time for the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. The fighting between two of its founding members broke out only weeks before the cartel's 20th anniversary summit which was to rally a long-term pricing program to guide OPEC through the 1980s.

Analysis

The program called for steady but gradual increases in the real price of oil based on a formula combining Western economic growth rates, inflation and currency fluctuations.

The long-term strategy — which the analysts said would now likely have to wait until 1982 or 1983 — was designed to provide some much-needed "predictability" to the world oil market, while at the same time ensuring a steady rise in the real value of OPEC crude up to the cost of alternative energy resources.

"The long-term strategy cannot be applied," Iskandar said, "unless OPEC can control its production and keep the market in a rough equilibrium to maintain its price."

He added even when the war ends, the two sides will have to increase production. "To pay for the fighting and the billions of dollars of reconstruction."

Iskandar estimated that Iran will have to export a minimum of 3 million barrels per day — three times its pre-war exports — while Iraq will try to hike its output by between 500,000 and 1 million barrels per day.

As the war drags on, both countries are expected to make deals for raising the capital they will pay off in crude oil when the fighting ends.

The best case scenario, said Iskandar, is that relations between Iran and Iraq will be patched up and OPEC will eventually be able to function as before.

The worst case scenario is that the bitterness between Iran and Iraq will continue indefinitely, thus hampering the ability of OPEC to respond as a cartel to market conditions and encouraging Baghdad and Tehran to recoup their market shares and raise capital by shaving their oil prices.

For the time being, OPEC has canceled all of its scheduled meetings, save for one set for Dec. 15 in Bali, Indonesia, and has ceased to function in any effective manner.

The Gulf war has not only estranged Iran — from Iraq — it has estranged Iraq's friends in OPEC — the Arab Gulf states — from Iran's friends, the north African producers.

What is operating now is a "mini-OPEC" made up of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates. These four Gulf states control more than half of the output of the cartel. They are coordinating their production to control the market as they see fit. This has involved pumping extra crude to keep prices down and the West interested in their security.

These four states can be expected to continue setting autonomous prices, the wounds of the Gulf war are healed and a wider OPEC consensus can be achieved.

Banker, Fed official differ in views of American trade

NEW YORK (UPI) — Banker David Rockefeller and Fed official Anthony M. Solomon Monday presented dissimilar views of the U.S. foreign trade picture.

However, both men called for greater international economic and financial cooperation.

Rockefeller, chairman of Chase Manhattan Bank, in a keynote speech at the 1980 National Foreign Trade Convention, said the U.S. share of world exports "divided" from 21 percent in 1957 to 12 percent last year and the decline continues."

Solomon, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, said in a speech following Rockefeller's address, U.S. exports have increased 40 percent in volume since the end of 1977.

Solomon said the U.S. share of industrial country exports of manufactured products "has risen to about 17 1/2 percent in the first quarter of this year, up from the low point of around a 16 percent share two years earlier."

But Rockefeller, calling for the government to reorient its attitudes and policies toward the reality of world trade, said U.S. trade policy is "weak and hampered by restrictive taxes."

"Once-mighty steel and automobile industries are floundering, and we hear more than a few calls to batten down the hatches against imports and to protect our workers from foreign competition and our industry from foreign innovation," he said.

Rockefeller said the "apparent unwillingness" of some of our trading partners to open up their markets has led this protectionist sentiment.

He said underlining of the Export-Import Bank, environmental and safety restrictions on U.S. manufacturers and other self-imposed export impediments cost the United States between $5 billion and $10 billion a year.

Rockefeller said protectionism is not the answer.

Solomon told — the trade council, however, that "economic nationalism has already diminished and is continuing to diminish."

"I agree with many of the suggestions others have made for removing governmental disincentives to exporting and encouraging projects abroad that tend to use competitive U.S. goods," he said.

But Solomon said "we should not lose sight of the concrete progress that has already been made by U.S. exporters and the competitive improvement that underlies much of that effort."

First Billy, now J.R.

DALLAS (UPI) — J.R. Ewing's infamy on the television series "Dallas" has spawned a host of products bearing his name, and the latest is his own private brand of beer.

Pearl Brewing Co. and several investors this week are introducing "J.R. Ewing's Private Stock," a premium beer — imported from Texas, "the label says.

Investors are paying an undisclosed amount in royalty fees to Lorimar Productions, which produces the television series, to use the Ewing name. More than 200,000 cases have been ordered.

"It's a helluva idea for a beer," said Pearl Vice President Frank Spinoso, who already has shipped cases of it to the "Dallas" cast.

The beer will come in "six-shooter six-packs," each can decorated with a Texas-style bell and the initials J.R.

Posters promoting the brew feature a J.R. can with a smoldering bullet hole in the middle, reminding consumers of the "Who Shot J.R.?" controversy.

Truss maker reports loss

BOISE (UPI) — Truss Joist Corp. of Boise reported that sales for the third quarter fell 25 percent compared with the same quarter last year while net income declined 11 percent.

Harold L. E. Thomas, company chairman, said sales for the third quarter were $21,857,000 compared with $29,184,000 for the third quarter of 1979. Net income fell to $2,380,000 from the $2,650,000 recorded a year earlier. Net income per share slumped 14 percent to 63 cents a share from 73 cents a share in 1979.

Weyerhaeuser profit halved

TACOMA (UPI) — The building industries slump cut third quarter profit of Weyerhaeuser Co. in half to 52 cents a share from $1.03 a year ago on a drop in sales to $1.112 billion from $1.173 billion.

Net income fell to $32.83 million from $131.6 million. The actual net nine-month profit fell to $341.36 million or $2.14 a share on sales of $4.228 billion from $4.027 billion or $3.17 a share a year earlier on sales of $3.366 billion.

The per share earnings do not reflect an extraordinary charge of 29 cents stemming from losses and anticipated losses from eruptions of Mount St. Helens. As to the profits, the charge amounted to $36 million for both the third quarter and nine months figures.

President George Weyerhaeuser said, pulp and paper business was good but falling European sales and weak exports of wood to Japan aggravated the problems by the domestic residential building slump.

EDUCATION . . .

Conservatives ought to be advocates of good education. If we provide strong public education, citizens are prepared to assume the responsibilities and risks of a society which minimizes the role of government.

Late rally in wobbly market produces mixed stock close

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stock prices staged a late-day rally to close mixed Monday.

The day's market was without real direction, nudged by uncertainty over the current economic recovery.

Trading was moderate.

The Dow Jones industrial average, fluctuating narrowly on the minus side most of the day, ended at 701.92. The sensitive blue chip indicator gained 5.46 points last week despite a 16-point dive Thursday and Friday. It was behind more than 4 points earlier in the day.

The New York Stock Exchange index rose 0.52 to 78.44 and the price of an average share increased 25 cents. However, declines topped advances, 806 to 711, among the 1,919 issues traded at 4 p.m. EDT.

Analysts said the market lacked a real sense of direction. But they said traders were encouraged by the fact that the bond market is holding up well despite the latest increase in the national money supply.

However, uncertainty about the prospects for economic recovery from the current business recession, as well as nervousness about the recent spate of speculative trading, continued to dampen the market.

Some market experts feel the speculative buying signals a market slump in the near future. If not immediately, the market should eventually stimulate profit taking, they said.

NYSE volume totaled 40,910,000 shares compared to 43,920,000 traded Friday.

Composite volume of NYSE-listed issues on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. totaled 44,508,408 compared to 49,136,280 traded Friday.

The American Stock Exchange index rose 5.31 to 382.96 and the price of a share increased 30 cents. The National Association of Securities Dealers' NASDAQ OTC index fell 0.09 to 197.15.

Xerox was the most active NYSE-listed issue, down 1 to 64-1/2 in trading that included a block of 700,000 at 64.

Texaco was the second most active issue, up 1/4 to 40-1/2. The company announced it applied, along with Pacific Gas & Electric Company, for a $7.1 million grant from the Department of Energy to do a feasibility study on a coal-gasification cooperation project.

On the Amex, advances topped declines 313-289 among the 816 issues traded at 4 p.m. EDT. Composite volume totaled 6,945,445 shares compared with 6,945,445 traded Friday.

Health-Chem Corp. was the most active Amex issue, up 2 to 16-1/2. Houston Oil and Minerals was second, up 2/4 to 45-1/2, followed by MCO Holdings, up 2/4 to 10-1/2.

Guil Oil of Canada jumped to 27-1/2. Ranger Oil 1/4 to 47-1/2, DWG Corp. 1/2 to 5-1/2, Bow Valley 7/8 to 21-1/2, and Husky Oil 3/4 to 18.

Airport project may get Sun Valley's help

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sun Valley city officials are considering contributing roughly $60,000 to pay for extending the Twin Falls airport runway. Mayor Hank Woodall announced Monday.

If Sun Valley officials agree to provide the funds, the runway project could be completed by next year, reducing in half the time Twin Falls officials figured the project would take.

In exchange, Sun Valley would receive one vote on the airport advisory board. The current five-member board recommends airport policies to the Twin Falls City Council and County Commission. The name of the airport would also be changed to the Twin Falls-Sun Valley airport under the plan.

Woodall made the announcement prior to the City Council's regular meeting. Since the Federal Aviation Administration will pay up to 90 percent of the $4 million project and the Idaho Department of Transportation will provide up to 5 percent, city-county officials are required to come up with the remaining 5 percent of the estimated costs, roughly $200,000.

But Twin Falls city and county have only $124,000 on hand for the project.

In order to come up with the total amount, Twin Falls officials had planned to complete the runway extension project in various stages over three to four years.

The additional funds from Sun Valley would provide enough local funds to complete the project by November 1981, Woodall said. A delegation of Twin Falls city and county officials met with Sun Valley officials last week concerning the proposal. Sun Valley City Council members were scheduled to discuss the proposal Monday, but no decision was expected until the council's November meeting, Woodall said. The project will extend the runway from its present length of 7,000 feet to 8,550 feet. The extension is necessary in order to enable the airport to more adequately serve DC-9 jets. The present runway length requires the jets to operate only 80 percent full at certain times of the year, particularly in summer.

The longer runway could serve as an incentive to Republic Airlines to increase service to Sun Valley during the peak tourist and ski seasons, Woodall said. Republic, a Minneapolis-based firm, acquired Hughes Aircraft last month and is the only major carrier serving Twin Falls.

In other matters, the council approved a tentative proposal for spending $1.5 million in federal funds to improve local housing for low and moderate income residents. The proposal now goes before a Nov. 3 public hearing and then to the Department of Housing and Urban Development for approval.

The proposal provides $650,000 for water and sewer development for the industrial site to provide immediate construction jobs and incentives for future industrial development, $240,000 for installation of storm sewers, $100,000 for housing rehabilitation, and about $180,000 for administrative costs and contingencies.

Cut from the proposal was a request that $50,000 be used for a geo-thermal well to heat a planned 60-unit housing development for low-income senior citizens. The development, to be financed with HUD funds, is being sponsored by Christian Church Homes of Idaho, Inc.

Although council members indicated they would probably not approve the request at a work session earlier in the day, that opinion was confirmed by Rep. T. W. Silvers, R-Twin Falls. Silvers called the housing project unnecessary in light of high vacancy rates in the private housing sector. He said he planned to enter an objection with HUD, saying such subsidized housing was destroying the market for private landlords in the area. (See related story, page B2).

Individual learning, class size impress Japanese visitors

Tour Twin Falls' junior high schools

By LARRY SWISHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Japanese educators visiting Twin Falls' junior high schools Monday were struck by the emphasis on individual learning and by the relatively small classes.

The educational study team of teachers and administrators of "lower secondary schools" from the island nation selected Twin Falls as its American stop on a four-nation tour.

The 28 members of the team, divided into separate groups, spent Monday visiting classrooms, facilities and questioning staff at Robert Stuart and Vera C. O'Leary junior high schools.

The groups will swap schools today before hearing an overall presentation from district administrators and taking a tour of Twin Falls High School Wednesday.

The Times-News interviewed the Japanese team's leader, Hiroshi Noda, and vice-leader Shigeru Murata with the help of Hiroshi Kurabe, interpreter and member of the team, and Takao Inamura, tour coordinator and interpreter.

Murata said the group was impressed by the stress on individual as opposed to group learning and that the teachers have to devote to each student.

"In Japan of course we also have individual instruction, but in comparison, your teachers are giving more emphasis. I don't say it's a difference," Murata said.

He said the group's impression was that each student was studying individually and not the class as a whole.

The Twin Falls' classes they saw had no more than 30 students,

There were some new faces at O'Leary Junior High School Monday as Eiichi Tamura and other Japanese teachers took a look-around.

compared to 40 to 45 in Japanese schools, Murata said.

"I'm not saying the system in Japan is bad. It's good, but we found your students have enough time to be instructed because there are fewer. Your students might be happy to have that."

But Twin Falls and the team will fly to England after Twin Falls and then Spain to conduct similar studies and will also make a short visit to Paris, France.

Noda said the group will return home having studied the educational affairs in other countries and will report to the Ministry of Education. He said good points from each country's schools will be noted.

The second goal of the trip is "to improve mutual understanding and relations between your country and the others and ours. Most of all, we're trying to be good friends," Noda said.

While in the schools Monday, members of the team proved their friendliness by presenting gifts of Japanese paper-art and coins and snapping pictures.

Most members of the team, including Noda and Murata, are making their first visit to the United States.

Noda said Twin Falls was chosen by the team because "we wanted to visit places unique or in a sense local. We thought we could find something good in the educational affairs in local places, not only in big cities.

He said previous teams from Japan visited other districts in other states.

Monday the team leaders said they were happy with their decision and that Twin Falls has a "very good system" and "good instruction."

Comments on IHA rule changes, housing needs sought at hearing

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Housing Agency will hold a hearing in Twin Falls this week to gather comments on rule changes.

The agency is also asking for general comments about the housing needs of Idaho and how the agency can best serve them.

IHA was established by the state to help increase the housing available to low-income people. The agency provides low-interest mortgage loans and home improvement loans and also finances the building of apartment complexes for low-income families and senior citizens. IHA has provided about $250 million in loans and financing for such projects.

The hearing in Twin Falls, which begins at 9 a.m. Thursday in the Holiday Inn, will be one of six hearings held throughout Idaho in the next two weeks.

Campaign officials report pledges of $24,139 through Friday. The campaign goal is $140,000.

In individual divisions, special gifts has compiled 49 percent of its goal to lead all others. Small commercial is at 23 percent; large commercial, 22 percent; and rural, 20 percent.

Jack Muldoon, chairman for campaign report meetings, is asking all United Way volunteers to make their calls prior to the Oct. 31 meeting.

purchase with an IHA loan. The current limit is $4,000. Reich said IHA has not proposed raising the ceiling. She said, "We want to find out if that ceiling is appropriate in today's economy."

The other possible rule change involves a trickier question, Reich said. The purpose of IHA single-family mortgages is to help low-income families get started in the housing market, she said. The question is: what should IHA's policy be concerning people whose incomes increase substantially in the years after the loan is made?

One possibility, Reich said, is for IHA to retain the right to raise the interest rate on the loan in such cases. Another possibility is for the agency to get a share of the profits from such a person when they sell their home, she said.

At the hearing, IHA wants to find out what the public thinks an appropriate policy would be, she said.

"In the second part of the hearing, we want to find out about the housing needs in Idaho," Reich said. Whether a person is buying, selling or building a house, inflation and high interest rates are causing problems, she said. The agency wants to find out what the public thinks it should be doing to help the situation.

Each hearing will be attended by Dave Hegg, executive director of the agency, Reich, and a member of the IHA Board of Directors.

Hansen schools toss coin to pick new board member HANSEN — Kimberly High School football coach Gordon Hogan won the flip of the coin Monday night to become the new Hansen school board member.

Making Monday night the fourth sitting member of the board led to a secret ballot over the appointment of a new board member to replace Deanna Peak.

Hogan and Martin Larsen each received two votes. Board chairman Robert Pettigrove then tossed a coin to break the tie and Hogan won. A resident of Hansen, Hogan is a Kimberly High School teacher and coach who previously taught for eight years in the Hansen school.

His appointment was first suggested by board member Richard Youree. Hogan previously said if appointed he would stand for election next spring when the position will be filled by voters.

His appointment expires July 1, 1981.

Two trucks collide injuring drivers

HOLLISTER — A potato truck and a semi-truck carrying two trailers collided near Hollister Monday, injuring both drivers.

Idaho State Police said the drivers were taken to Magic Valley Memorial Hospital where one remained at press time.

State Police said the collision occurred at 6:50 p.m., on U.S. Highway 93, six miles south of Hollister.

The incident happened when a northbound semi-truck, driven by David R. Sullivan, age unknown and reportedly from Salt Lake City, crashed into the rear of a northbound potato truck, driven by Jose Martinez, 41, of Twin Falls. State Police Corporal Jerry West said Martinez had allowed to make a left turn onto a farm road at the time of the collision.

His appointment was first suggested by board member Richard Youree. Hogan previously said if appointed he would stand for election next spring when the position will be filled by voters.

A Magic Valley Memorial Hospital spokesman said Martinez was treated and released. Sullivan's condition was unknown, the spokesman said.

Atherton said the northbound lane of the highway was blocked for three hours until crews were able to remove the semi-truck wreckage.

Detective Lynn Smith received a fractured nose and Officer Michael Hale received head cuts, torn muscles in the right leg, and an injured right ankle.

According to Detective David Tracy, a disagreement in the lounge at the Ponderosa led to a fight between several groups of people who left the bar and went into the parking lot. Smith and Hale were injured while attempting to make arrests.

and charged with disturbing the peace. All four men were released on their own recognizances.

Hatch cancels fundraiser

TWIN FALLS — A previously announced fundraiser dinner for Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, which was to have been Thursday in Twin Falls, has been cancelled.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who was to be the guest speaker at the Hansen banquet, will be involved in congressional hearings and left for Washington, D.C., Sunday, Hansen campaign officials said.

Hansen campaign workers said they will contact all persons who purchased tickets for the event. Campaign officials said they will now attempt to merge the cancelled Twin Falls banquet with a barbecue rally and fundraiser scheduled in Burley on Oct. 30. Sen. William Roth, R-Del., is scheduled to speak at the event to take place at Burley Junior High School. Roth is co-sponsor of the proposed Kemp-Roth tax bill.

Children's film shown

REPURT — A slide show for children on how to avoid vulnerable situations will be shown at 7 p.m. Wednesday at Memorial Elementary School.

The show called "What Would You Say," was put together by the Rape Crisis Center, now named Women's Line, with the cooperation of Gene Snapp, Memorial School Principal, and Doyle Lowder, summer school principal.

The show discusses how children should handle answering the phone and door when home alone and how they should refuse rides with strangers.

The show will be available for schools and community groups.

Families and their children are especially invited to the Wednesday show.

Region 4 president named

TWIN FALLS — Region 4 of the Idaho Education Association announces its president for the 1980-81 school year is Shoshone Elementary School teacher Susan Halfter.

The regional association also reports membership has grown by more than eight percent over last year's, from 998 to 1,080.

Halfter was chosen by the members of the IEA in the Magic Valley to act as their leader and spokesperson after serving as president-elect last year.

She replaces Dick Chilcote of Twin Falls and will be followed in office by Minidoka County teacher Peggy Richards, who is this year's president-elect.

The Regional IEA's monthly newsletter, the Advocate, reports 15 local associations in the eight counties of south-central Idaho have more members than last year, while three associations have lost members.

CSI offers income tax class

TWIN FALLS — A class in income tax preparation geared for farmers and ranchers begins Wednesday at the College of Southern Idaho.

The eight-week course will cost $27 and be held Wednesday nights from 7 to 10.

In the last class, students will prepare their own income tax returns and be given the opportunity to have them checked by instructor Robert Wenner, who is an Internal Revenue Service employee.

Anyone interested in taking the class should register by calling 733-9554, extension 244 before the first class.

Stivers to fight HUD project; claims rental market 'destroyed'

TWIN FALLS—State Rep. Tom Stivers, R-Twin Falls, wants to fight a proposed housing development in Twin Falls by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The HUD project would be a 60-unit apartment complex for senior citizens and the poor. The use of public funds for the construction of subsidized housing has "destroyed" the rental market for private owners in Twin Falls, Stivers said, according to evidence given to him by developers, rental property owners, real estate salespeople and private citizens.

Over 300 units of subsidized housing have been built or proposed for Twin Falls in the past few years, he said, while vacancies in existing houses are up 30 percent or more. "As long as unnecessary funding for subsidized housing continues," Stivers said, there is no relief in sight.

Stivers said it would be better to provide funds to rehabilitate existing housing instead of providing low interest financing for new construction and rental subsidies.

Stivers said he called the HUD regional office in Portland and was told "that if there is sufficient evidence produced locally that indicates that this project should not go forward, that HUD would cancel the project."

He asked anyone with such evidence to get in touch with him.

The 60-unit HUD project would require a loan of nearly $1.7 million and a rental subsidy of nearly $27,000 annually, he said.

Hagerman discussion centers on police

HAGERMAN—The Hagerman City Council will hold a public meeting tonight on proposed police protection in Hagerman.

The town has been without a police officer for five months and a contract has been proposed with the Gooding County Sheriff's department to provide 24-hour protection.

"We do need lots of public comment on this," Hagerman Mayor William Stienmeiers said Monday.

Stienmeiers said the council may make a decision tonight to fund or reject the proposal. The discussion may take place Monday.

If the council accepts the proposal, it will cost Hagerman residents about $15,000 a year. The plan calls for Gooding County to hire a sheriff's deputy to live and work in the Hagerman area.

Housefire does $10,000 damage

TWIN FALLS—Twin Falls Police are investigating the possibility of arson in a house fire which occurred early Monday.

No injuries were reported, but the house, located at 322 Washington St. N., was gutted by the fire which was first reported just after midnight. Fire Marshall Clare Harkins said.

Harkins said the tenant, Carl Connor, was not at home at the time of the fire. The building was owned by Ken Webb of Twin Falls.

Harkins said the fire was first noticed by a jack driver, Gary Britton, who was heading north on Washington Street North when the structure's front window blew out. Britton stopped his truck, told a passing motorist to call the fire department and ran to the house.

Harkins said he kicked the front door open to check for anyone who might have still been in the house.

Harkins said two fire trucks and six firefighters responded to the call. By the time they arrived at the scene, the entire house was engulfed in flames.

Firefighters extinguished the bulk of the fire within 15 minutes, although hot fires in the house still kept them at the scene for about two hours, Harkins said.

Harkins said Connor's personal possessions were destroyed in the fire. The value of those items was undetermined, he said. Damage to the structure was estimated at $8,000 to $10,000, he said.

In such cases, the fire department investigates the cause of the fire, while the police department investigates possible suspects, Harkins said.

Police Chief Jim Qualls said the fire apparently started in the living room, or the northwest corner of the building.

Qualls said the police department investigates the possibility of arson in most fires, but would not elaborate further on the case.

Stabbing investigation continues

RUPERT—Minidoka County Sheriff Ray Jarvis reported an investigation is continuing into a stabbing in Heyburn Sunday morning.

The victim, Jamie Garcia, 19, of Burley, was treated and released from Minidoka Memorial Hospital in Rupert.

The stabbing occurred at 1931 18th St. in Heyburn, Jarvis said, but he declined to release other details about the incident.

Breakfast program to be reviewed

CASTLEFORD—A decision on whether to continue a breakfast program in the Castleford Schools will be made by the school board next month.

Superintendent Ed Schenk said board members last week reviewed the trial program but two members were absent.

He said some board members expressed reluctance about continuing, although the schools are now serving breakfast to about 55 students.

"There is a feeling the responsibility should belong to the parent," Schenk said. "But some probably aren't going to get breakfast at home, so who suffers? The student I guess. Maybe we'll have to take over some of that obligation."

Earlier this year the board agreed to a nine-week trial, which ended this month. Breakfasts will continue until the board makes a decision at its next meeting Nov. 11, Schenk said.

The board last Tuesday decided to begin a new program for about eight Spanish-speaking students who speak English poorly or not at all, Schenk said.

Pete Rose is hung in effigy by some Kansas City fans before Game 5 of the World Series

Royals know Rose a key despite lackluster stats

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

PHILADELPHIA — Statistically speaking, Pete Rose isn't having much of a World Series. His 158 batting average, lowest among all the Philadelphia regulars adds up to his poorest personal showing of all five World Series in which he has played.

Yet, the man with the Kansas City Royals who probably knows him best... points to the Phillies' 89-year-old first baseman as the key to why they are leading the Series, three games to two.

"It's the little things he does, the things we players see, that motivate the Phillies and make them go," says Hal McRae, the Royals designated hitter who was Rose's teammate with the Cincinnati Reds for four seasons and still is inspired merely by watching him play.

From the right hand side of the plate, Rose has yet to get a hit in six trips. Batting left-handed, he's 3-for-13, or .231, which works out to .158 overall, but here are some of those "little things" Rose has done the McRae is talking about.

In the Series opener, won by the Phillies 7-6, Rose kept their big five-run third-inning rally going by getting hit with one of Dennis Leonard's pitches when it was fairly obvious to 65,791 fans in Veterans Stadium he could have gotten out of the way.

The Phillies also took the second game, 6-4, with four runs in the eighth, and although Rose went hitless in that contest, he did precisely what he had to do during that rally by advancing Del Unser, who had opened the inning with a pinch double, to third base on his hot smash to first baseman Willie Aikens.

Rose was 0-for-10 when he came up in the eighth inning of the third game with two on and two out and it was his single to right that drove in the tying run and chased reliever Rennie Martin before the Royals went on to win 4-3 in the 10th.

Again, in the eighth inning of the fourth game, Rose led off with a double to finish Leonard, then after moving up an infield out, he really turned it on sprinting home from third on Mike Schmidt's fair but short sacrifice fly to right although the Phillies lost that one also, 5-3.

In Sunday's contest at Kansas City, Rose was hitless in four trips but he swung the ball hard in three of them and made some dandy plays around first base to help Philadelphia to a 4-3 victory. "Nobody has any more drive than he does," says McTae. "He picks up a ball club not by what he says, but by the way he plays. He inspires you just by watching him, the way he never gives in to the pitcher, the way he slams the ball down on the ground after he makes an out, the way he does everything out there on the field. Day in and day out, I don't think anyone consistently gives as much of himself as Pete does."

Of all the five World Series he has been in, Rose made his best showing in the 1975 confrontation between the Reds and Red Sox when he went 10-for-27 and batted .370 to emerge the MVP of that Series.

McRae, appearing in his third World Series, ranks with the best Series hitters of all time — purely off his batting record. He was 5-for-11 and hit .455 in the 1970 Series between the Reds and Baltimore Orioles and went 4-for-9 to hit .444 in the 1972 Series between the Reds and Oakland A's.

Presently, against the Phillies, he's hitting .450 with 9-for-20.

"This World Series means a lot more to me than those other two," McRae says. "I didn't get to play very much in the other ones. In this one, I'm playing every day."

Frey on the hot seat as Royals fight odds

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Jim Frey, a rookie manager who has come under fire for some questionable strategy in the World Series, is on the hot seat again for his decision to pitch right-hander Rich Gale for the Kansas City Royals in tonight's sixth game against the Philadelphia Phillies.

Gale, bothered by tendinitis earlier in the season, started the third game of the Series and was hit hard, surrendering seven hits and two runs in 1-3 innings. He blamed his mediocre performance on the fact that he hadn't pitched since Oct. 5 and insists he'll pitch better this time.

"The game's not on my back," Gale said. "I've got 24 other guys to help out there, too. There's no question I'm going to be pumped up, but if I lose I think the sun will come up on Wednesday."

Despite Gale's optimism, there are many baseball people who feel that Frey is making a mistake throwing the lanky right-hander in such an important game. One more loss and the Royals are out of it and many feel that left-hander Paul Splittorff, a forgotten man in the Series, would be a better choice.

For some reason Frey has been afraid to use Splittorff in the Series, preferring to stick with right-handers in hopes of neutralizing the Phillies' right-handed power. However, left-hander Larry Gura pitched well in two starts. So, why not try Splittorff?

"I prefer right-handers against their lineup," says Frey. "I think Gale can do the job. If I didn't, I wouldn't pitch him."

Frey has opened himself to the second guess quite a bit in the Series so far. In Sunday's 4-3 loss, armchair managers had themselves a field day in questioning a number of Frey's moves.

For example, in the third inning singles by Darrell Porter and U.L. Washington put runners on first and second with none out. But instead of having the speedy Willie Wilson bunt, he had him swing away and rookie Marty Bystrom retired Wilson, Frank White and George Brett in order to end the inning.

Frey's defense — "I don't often bunt with Wilson because he doesn't figure to hit into a double play. He's the fastest runner in the American League and we were looking for the big inning."

Another incident occurred in the seventh inning when Frey pulled starter Larry Gura, even though he had allowed only three hits. Gura said he was not tired and reliever Dan Quisenberry lost the game in the ninth, just as he had in relief of Gura in Game Two.

Frey's defense — "I look him out for the same reason I've taken others out all year. We have Quisenberry down there and he's done the job all year. He did that in the seventh and eighth innings tonight."

Frey's most controversial decision came in the ninth when he let Jose Cardenal bat against Tug McGraw with two out, the bases loaded and the Royals trailing by one run. Cardenal was hitless in the series and John Wathan, a .315 hitter, was available to pinch hit, Cardenal struck out.

Frey's defense — "I felt like Cardenal could hit McGraw better. Watan was in the game and I thought the other night and I just thought Jose would know him better."

Phillies were 49-32 on their own artificial surface field and, including the two victories in the Series, have won three of four at home during the post-season competition," said John Wathan, a .315 hitter, was available to pinch hit, Cardenal struck out.

Frey's defense — "I felt like Cardenal could hit McGraw better. Watan was in the game and I thought the other night and I just thought Jose would know him better."

Philadelphia bracing for what may be a riot

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Attack dogs have been rented, security forces have been increased and auto insurance premiums paid up in anticipation of the biggest celebration in this city since Ben Franklin and his buddies hoisted a few following the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Philadelphia Phillies, long the epitome of the city's reputation as a cradle of losers, can nail down their first World Series championship in history tonight when they host the Kansas City Royals in the sixth game.

Holding a 3-2 edge in the best-of-seven series, the Phillies will send their ace, left-hander Steve Carlton, to the mound against Royals' right-hander Rich Gale.

Carlton, the winning pitcher in Game 2, has had his normal four days of rest and is expected to be more effective than he was last Wednesday night when he struck out 10 and gave up four runs in eight innings.

"Even when Steve isn't sharp, he usually gets the job done," said Phillies' catcher, Bob Boone. "Let's just say I'd be happy to watch him going for us in a game that could give us the World Series."

For the Royals the task appears to be awesome. It has come down to beating "the best pitcher in the National League (24 victories) just to stay alive."

"I said before we're going to have to beat Steve Carlton to win this thing," said Gale. "Now we're at that point. You either beat Carlton or we lose it in six."

Gale, a 13-game winner during the regular season despite suffering from tendinitis in his right shoulder, started the third game of the Series last Friday night and was tagged for seven hits and two runs in 4-1-3 innings. However, the lanky right-hander blamed the fact that he had pitched since Oct. 5 for his mediocre performance.

"I was a little too strong my last start because of the long layoff," said Gale.

Phillies' third baseman Mike Schmidt felt it would be very difficult for the Royals to win two games at Veterans Stadium. The Phillies beat the Royals there in the first two games. The Vet then lost two of three at Kansas City.

"I felt if we went back to Philadelphia with an advantage, it would be a good position," said Schmidt. "Now they have their backs against the wall. They have to win two in our place and it's not going to be easy."

During the regular season the Phillies were 49-32 on their own artificial surface field and, including the two victories in the Series, have won three of four at home during the post-season competition," said John Wathan, a .315 hitter, was available to pinch hit, Cardenal struck out.

Frey's defense — "I felt like Cardenal could hit McGraw better. Watan was in the game and I thought the other night and I just thought Jose would know him better."

"A lot of people think we have some magical powers because we're always winning in the eighth, ninth and tenth innings," said Boone. "There's nothing mysterious about us, though. We just play good baseball and I hope people are finally realizing it."

If the Phillies win the Series, the city is expected to turn into one gigantic New Year's Eve party. Fans who have suffered through the years of Phillies' frustration will be eager to have a second consolation game and they came from behind to win the last two games of the National League playoffs against Houston.

However, Phillies' shortstop Larry Bowa's defense of the team is getting its proper respect.

"A lot of people think we have some magical powers because we're always winning in the eighth, ninth and tenth innings," said Boone. "There's nothing mysterious about us, though. We just play good baseball and I hope people are finally realizing it."

In anticipation of the celebration, security will be beefed up at Veteran's Stadium in hopes of reducing the vandalism caused by souvenir seekers.

Series players having troubles You know you're going bad when:

By THOMAS BOSWELL
1980, The Washington Post

PHILADELPHIA — You know you're going bad when you wake takes you aside before the fourth game of the World Series and tries to change your batting stance. And you take her advice.

The Royals' City's Willie Wilson, who is hitting .182 in the fall classic, and doesn't know where to turn. "I don't know exactly where I am," he said. "My wife says I should stand up straight at the plate, so I'm trying it. anybody wanna buy me a hit."

You know you're going bad when an usher calls you in to the box seat railing before the fifth game of the World Series, hands you a bat and says, "You gave this to me as a gift back on June 2 when you were hitting .333. Now, I'm giving it back. You need it more than I do." And you immediately use the bat in the game.

Ask the Royals' Darrell Porter, who was out for five past games and got two hits with his old bat Sunday. You hit .305 for the season but, with the bases loaded and a Series game on the line, your manager sends you a 36-year-old has-been to pinch-hit instead. And then the manager says, "Should I have used John? In that situation, he never crossed my mind."

Ask K.C.'s John Wathan, who is zero for 19 for his postseason career and is so deep in the doupouse that when he has to put his Alto at the back door. "All I can say," said Wathan, "is that I'm still here."

You know you're going bad when you finally get enough Series at-bats so that your average on the scoreboard can drop below .100.

Ask Frank White of the Royals, the man who hit .545 against the New York Yankees and won the American League Championship Series MVP, but now has a series average of .055.

You know you're going bad when strangers leave boxes of All-Bran in your locker. Ask George Brett, he of the hemorrhoid problems, who has gone one for nine since saying, "My problems are all behind me."

Yes, resin-bag breath, the World Series is a tough time for people with sensitive feelings and thin skins. It's a bad time to go into a slump or tell your manager that you think he should change decorand pads.

Passing Plunkett gives Raiders 'old time' win over Steelers

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — It was just like old times for the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Oakland Raiders Monday night.

In the 1970s, when they were two of the league's top powers and annual playoff opponents, the Steelers and Raiders went at each other with a vengeance.

And apparently, bad feelings and rivalries die hard. Although the Raiders are considered a rebuilding team, they came away with a 45-34 upset, one of the two-time defending Super Bowl champions.

"We knew coming in here Pittsburgh was going to be fired up," said Oakland coach Tom Flores, an assistant coach in the old days, after substitute quarterback Jim Plunkett passed for 247 yards and threw three touchdowns to hand the Steelers their second straight upset.

"When you play the Super Bowl champs, you have to be ready for a tough hard physical game, and that's what we worked on all week."

"It was a great victory," said Flores. "I drove me crazy. It seemed like whoever had the ball last would win."

It was the first time the two-time defending Super Bowl champion Steelers, who were coming off an upset loss to Cincinnati, lost two consecutive home games since their pre-playoff years in 1971. The loss dropped the 4-3 Steelers into a three-way tie with Cleveland and Houston in the four-team AFC Central.

The 45 points was the most scored against the Steelers at Three Rivers Stadium and the most against Pittsburgh since the Cleveland Browns won 42-13 in 1969.

Oakland, which improved its record to 4-3, extended its personal winning streak over rival Pittsburgh to four games, whom they battled five straight years in the AFC playoffs 1972-76. The Raiders last played and defeated the Steelers during the 1977 regular season.

Turnovers were the difference in the ballgame. The Steelers turned the ball over three times, and the Raiders converted each one into a touchdown. Oakland turned the ball over twice, but the Steelers just managed field goals after each one.

Plunkett connected on scoring passes of 45 yards to Morris Bradshaw in the second quarter, 56 yards to Cliff Branch in the third and 34 yards to Branch in the final quarter. Kenny King scored on a 27-yard run and Mark van Eeghen or a 7-yard plunge, and linebacker Rod Martin scampered 34 yards with a fumble for the other TD. Chris Bahr added a 32-yard field goal to cap the scoring for Oakland and was good on all six extra points.

Terry Bradshaw, who passed for 299 yards despite two injuries that sent him out of the game three times, completed scoring passes of 19 and 13 yards to Jim Smith and 36 yards to Theo Bell. Greg Hawthorne scored a 1-yard TD and Matt Bahr, Chris' younger brother, added field goals of 18 and 32 yards as well as four extra points.

The 79 total points was the most scored in a Monday night NFL football game.

The Raiders wasted no time building on a 28-24 halftime lead. On their first possession of the third quarter, they moved 75 yards in five plays to take a 35-24 lead on the 56-yard Plunkett-to-Branch TD pass.

The Steelers came back with their own 68-yard TD drive, capped by Bradshaw's scoring strike to Bell, and then turned a lost fumble by van Eeghen into Bahr's 32-yard field goal to pull within 35-34 in 19 second left in the third period.

But the Raiders went 82 yards in eight plays on the next series — capped by Plunkett's 36-yard scoring pass to Branch. After the Steelers were forced to punt, the Raiders set a conservative ground attack to drive for their final field goal.

Thanks to three Pittsburgh turnovers, the first half was an offensive circus, during which Oakland came back from a 17-7 deficit.

Linebacker Ted Hendricks was the Raiders' key player of the first two quarters, intercepting two passes that led to Oakland touchdowns.

Hendricks' first interception of a Bradshaw pass, gave Oakland possession on the Pittsburgh 39. Seven plays later, including a 34-yard Plunkett to Chandler pass, the Raiders closed to within 17-14 on van Eeghen's 1-yard plunge.

On the next series, Bradshaw fumbled after a sack by Cedric Hardman that briefly sent the quarterback out of the game. The Steelers recovered the fumble and returned it 7 yards to George Brett, who ran 34 yards for a TD and a 21-17 Oakland lead.

Bradshaw's backup, Cliff Stoudt, was intercepted by Hendricks on his third pass of the game, and two plays later, Plunkett connected with Bradshaw on a 45-yard TD pass for a 28-17 lead.

Stoudt remained cool and held onto the ball when Pittsburgh gained possession with 1:22 left in the half. He took the Steelers 79 yards in seven plays, capping the drive with a 13-yard TD pass to Smith.

Oakland turned the ball over only once in the first half, and that too led to a score. King fumbled on Oakland's first offensive play of the game, and Donnie Shell recovered and returned it 7 yards to give Pittsburgh possession on the Oakland 19. Five plays later, Matt Bahr kicked an 18-yard field goal that briefly gave Pittsburgh a 10-17 lead.

Receiver McCullum paying off with more than catches

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sam McCullum is providing extra dividends for the Seattle Seahawks.

The versatile wide receiver, who had 107 yards on 29 receptions after seven games, has taken up a position on the punt return team and provided the spark that ignited Seattle to a 27-17 victory over the New York Jets Sunday by blocking a punt which resulted in a touchdown.

"You get enough of a beating playing one way but this is fun," said McCullum, who took over the special end of last season by blocking a punt out there on the special teams because of my speed. Last week I was close to blocking a punt but I dove underneath the ball. This was my first blocked punt and it turned everything around."

Seattle, which has won four road games while losing three at home, trailed 14-3 midway through the third period before forcing the Jets merely at their own 48. Chuck Ramsey, the AFC's leading punter who has not had a punt blocked in his four seasons with the Jets, took a high snap from center and McCullum rushed up in middle untouched for a perfect block.

The ball rolled around and Jessie Green fell on it at the New York 32. Realizing no one had touched him, Green got up and dashed into the end zone.

"That Seattle should block a punt should come as no surprise since the Seahawks have blocked at least one punt per season since entering the NFL in 1976. In fact, they blocked three punts in Seattle's first season.

The play Sunday was designed after watching films of the Jets' game against Atlanta last week.

"It was a special play set up specifically for the Jets," said McCullum, who also caught five passes for 107 yards including a 58-yarder from Jim Zorn to set up a fourth-quarter field goal. "We started working on it last Thursday, Atlanta almost blocked three of the Jets' punts and we knew we could do it this week." It started from the outside and moved into a stack in the middle. We knew our movement would confuse them.

"Our coaches just wanted me to beat the center and it was wide open for me. The Jets protection on the punt is man for man. I was in four different spots before the ball was snapped. Not a sole touched me... it was so sweet."

Following the blocked punt, Seattle added a field goal and scored two touchdowns on its final three possessions to secure its fourth victory in four games against the Jets.

"There was a total breakdown up front," said Ramsey. "They've always had our number on special teams. It was the fastest kick I ever got off and they still blocked it."

McCullum, a 6-foot-2, 190-pounder, came to the Seahawks from the Minnesota Vikings in the 1976 veteran player allocation draft. The Montana State graduate, in his seventh pro season, enjoyed his best year in 1979. He had 46 receptions for 733 yards and set a club record for receiving in a single game when he caught eight passes for 173 yards against Oakland in a 29-24 victory.

"(Steve) Largent is still our big gun," explained Zorn, "but McCullum is catching more passes because Largent is always double teamed." Maybe somebody should double team McCullum on special teams.

Pearson doesn't blame refs for lack of interference call

DALLAS (UPI) — Dallas Cowboys flanker Drew Pearson, said Monday that yes, there was interference in the end zone against Tony Hill on Sunday, but, no, he didn't blame the official for not calling it.

And in another development the Cowboys announced that running back Tony Dorsett did not have a cracked rib as originally reported. Dorsett, instead, has badly bruised ribs which make him questionable for next Sunday night's meeting with the San Diego Chargers.

Dallas fell to the Philadelphia Eagles Sunday in a battle for the NFC East lead. 17-10 in the game came down to a critical fourth down at the Eagles' 10-yard line.

Quarterback Danny White tried to hit Hill with a 100-pass-in-the-left-corner-of-the-end-zone-just-as-Hill-reached-for-the-ball. It appeared that Philadelphia cornerback Roynell Young grabbed Hill's left arm.

"From the vantage point I had on the field," said Pearson, "I didn't look like interference. But when we got home and I saw the replays on television in slow motion, it was definitely pass interference."

"I call that play in that stadium would take a heck of a man, though. And it should not have come down to that. We're not going to use that play as an excuse because we should have won it without it going down to the wire."

Dorsett was knocked out of the Eagles game in the first half Sunday and at first it was reported he merely had the wind knocked out of him. He re-entered the game, but was in such pain he took himself out of the contest a short time later.

After x-rays were taken in the dressing room a report was issued that there was no fracture, but soon afterwards Cowboys' officials said that Dorsett had, indeed, fractured a rib.

"Then, on Monday, team physician Dr. Marvin Knight took a fresh series of x-rays and he said there was no fracture. Knight said that what was believed to be a fracture on the original x-rays was apparently an old injury."

Dorsett may be able to work out late in the week and if he does manage to play against the Chargers he will do so wearing a flak jacket.

Lions were motivation for Bears

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (UPI) — The Chicago Bears have had their ups and downs this season, but fullback Roland Harper said Monday they had little trouble getting up for Detroit because the Lions were the "big hot dogs."

The Bears stayed alive in the NFC Central Division race by winning their 24-7 Sunday, closing to within two games of first place Detroit.

Harper, speaking at the Bears' weekly press luncheon, said the offense had an extra incentive to play well against Detroit's defense.

"We played with a lot of enthusiasm. It was no trouble getting up for Detroit because there are a lot of hot dogs on that team," said Harper, who scored one of the Bears' three touchdowns. "They always want to be standing over you and shouting obscenities at you."

Harper, making a comeback after a knee injury sidelined him for the entire 1979 season, said the Lions had been leading the Bears since Detroit shut out Chicago 20-0 last Thanksgiving.

"I guess it began after that game. When you shut a team out it gives the defense something more to talk about," Harper said. "They feel like they were hot shots."

Defensive end Dan Hampton said he didn't think the Detroit offensive players were "hot dogs."

"It was just to get up for them because they were the first place team," Hampton said. "In fact, their quarterback (Gary) Danielson is not a loudmouth like a lot of the other quarterbacks we've faced. I respect him more than any other quarterback in the league because you don't see him running up and down screaming at the officials."

Harper returned to the Bears' starting lineup three weeks ago after being on the injured reserve list for the first four games of the season. He said he has been improving each game and is playing at 110 percent efficiency.

"I think I am back to where I was before the injury," said Harper who gained 54 yards against the Lions. "As the season goes on, I think I'm getting better."

Chicago will take a 3-4 record Sunday to Philadelphia, which has won six of seven games, including a 17-10 victory over Dallas on Sunday.

Coach Bill Walsh stated that the Bears lost to the Eagles in the NFC playoffs last December, said he was glad the Eagles were able to beat the Cowboys.

"I know we were ready to play Detroit. I just hope we don't come down as much as Philadelphia does," Armstrong said. "The crowd will help them emotionally." Armstrong also promised Chicago would throw more against the Eagles than the eight times against Detroit.

"We want to throw the ball more, in fact, we had planned to throw more than we did against the Lions," he said. "I think Bruce Evans did a good job and felt more comfortable as the game went on. I expect that he will be able to throw more against the Eagles."

Church gives support to hospital proposal

MOSCOW (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church's endorsing hospital funding was announced Monday by State Sen. Norma Dobler, D-Moscow.

Church favors the proposal to change the Idaho Constitution to enable non-profit, religious-sponsored hospitals to borrow Idaho Health Facilities Authority funds.

The proposed constitutional revision is one of two being presented to the electorate on the November general election ballot.

Church wrote Mrs. Dobler that he endorsed the health proposal and would be happy to make that support known whenever the occasion arises.

Five Idaho hospitals and seven extended care facilities presently are restricted from tax-exempt financing available to all 39 other eligible non-profit hospitals throughout Idaho.

"The health services provided by the religiously affiliated hospitals in our state are essential to the welfare of Idahoans in nearly every area," Church wrote.

Church said it seemed granting "equal status" in applying for loan assistance from the Idaho Health Facilities Authority "is long overdue."

Mrs. Dobler and State Sen. Leon Swenson, R-Nampa, co-chair the Twelve for Twelve Committee, composed of 12 leading Idahoans concerned with equitable hospital funding, that is pushing the proposed change.

Church said Monday Church talks "a good game" and "to hear him tell it, you'd think he's the taxpayer's best friend when it comes to cutting bloated foreign aid budgets."

But Symms said Church fails to explain why he has voted over 30 times against cuts in foreign aid programs since he said in 1974 he favored "total elimination of foreign aid in all but special cases."

Symms criticizes Church for foreign aid policies

BOISE (UPI) — While Sen. Frank Church claims he is cutting foreign aid, Rep. Steve Symms, Church's political opponent for the U.S. Senate, says the senator's record is "one of consistent opposition to cuts in foreign aid programs."

Symms said Monday Church talks "a good game" and "to hear him tell it, you'd think he's the taxpayer's best friend when it comes to cutting bloated foreign aid budgets."

But Symms said Church fails to explain why he has voted over 30 times against cuts in foreign aid programs since he said in 1974 he favored "total elimination of foreign aid in all but special cases."

Symms said Church voted against amendments to prohibit aid to North Vietnam, as well as amendments to restrict aid to Zambia, Uganda, Laos and Cambodia and as recently as this January voted to give $75 million in aid to communist-ruled Nicaragua.

"In addition, I have been a consistent and vocal critic of our foreign aid policy," Symms said. "This year alone, I supported legislation which passed the House that cut $26 million from foreign aid bills."

"Idaho voters have a clear choice in 1980 — Senator Church's attempt to divert attention from his record of opposing cuts in foreign aid won't wash with Idaho voters who are closely examining the important issues."

Clark plans Boise visit

BOISE (UPI) — Libertarian presidential candidate Ed Clark will pay a second visit to Idaho during the current election campaign that ends in two weeks.

Clark has scheduled visits to Boise and Nampa Saturday. Earlier in the campaign, Clark was in eastern Idaho.

During his latest visit, a public meeting is planned in Boise to give the voters of southwestern Idaho an opportunity to meet and question Clark.

Clark arrives Saturday morning from Portland and will depart Sunday for campaign stops in Bozeman and Missoula, Mont., and Spokane.

Education

State board meets

POCATELLO — Proposed fee and tuition increases for the four higher education institutions will be discussed at Pocatello Thursday and Friday by the state Board of Education.

If the board decides to proceed further with the proposal, a public hearing will be scheduled at the board's December 3-4 meeting in Boise.

In addition to proposed fee and tuition discussions at Pocatello, the board will hear reports on the role and mission of the state's college and three universities.

Board members also plan a public hearing on amendments to the rules for the Idaho Scholarship program, which provides awards of $1,500 each year to 26 outstanding Idaho high school graduates planning to pursue post-secondary academic or vocational studies within the state.

The sessions, open to the public, are scheduled for 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Thursday, and from 10:30 a.m. on Friday in Room 406 of the ISTU Student Union Building.

Students fight fees

MOSCOW (UPI) — The emerging Associated Students of Idaho said Monday it will meet Wednesday prior to the state Board of Education session in Pocatello to discuss whether to file a lawsuit against the board over proposed student fee increases.

The board will discuss proposed tuition increases as well as a $50 hike for the state's four higher education institutions when it meets Thursday and Friday.

Scott Federebacher, University of Idaho student body president, said while the new student group will not be officially formed until the Thursday meeting of the board, the students will meet Wednesday to determine if a suit against the proposed $50 fee increase should be filed.

He said "in the past 10 years the students and the state Board of Education have never really had a definition as to what constitutes fees and tuition. We're at a point now where the question of what the differences are between student fees and tuition have to be answered."

He said it was unconstitutional for universities to charge tuition and there was a question for what purposes fees charged students could be used.

Ore-Ida fined

BOISE (UPI) — Ore-Ida Foods Inc. on Monday was fined $2,800 after pleading guilty to 28 counts of violating the Interstate Motor Carriers Act in Idaho U.S. District Court.

Idaho U.S. District Senior Judge Fred Taylor imposed the minimum penalty on Ore-Ida, which had been charged by the U.S. Transportation Department with requiring or "aiding" its truck drivers to "drive" in excess of the 10-hour maximum set under the Motor Carriers Act.
